"For anyone who wants a collection of jokes satisfactorily classified and arranged this is the book."

+ Springfield Republican p7a S 21 '22 150w

JONES, EMILY BEATRIX COURSOLES (MRS F. L. LUCAS). Singing captives. 212p $2 Boni & Liveright

22-19475

This quiet character study, written in so level a tone as barely to escape monotony, is in the main a defense of the critical temperament. The characters, members of a well-to-do English family, are seen through the sharply critical eyes of Caroline, the elder daughter. They are the "singing captives" or "canaries" as Caroline calls them in bitter analysis of their futility. A series of shocks—the marriage of the eldest son to a typist, the father's loss of fortune, jar the family from their "swinging perches and gilt bars" and startle Caroline into a more kindly estimate of the qualities of her relatives. One feels that Caroline's own pleasure and part in life will continue to be that of an acutely analytical onlooker. "That's life to me," she says, "just as much as the use of my five senses is. To be critical is as inevitable as to see and hear."

Booklist 19:54 N '22

"A thing of great delicacy and beauty. In 'The Singing Captives' she amazes us by the amount of detail which has been worked on to this small canvas and by the extraordinary clarity of the result. The means by which she accomplishes this result is by a never-failing attention to her subject, a determination to see clearly and to reveal what she sees with the smallest possible allowance through our different medium." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 16 '22 1000w

Cleveland p84 N '22

"It is a keenly analytical piece of fiction, competent, restrained and honest." L. B.

+ Freeman 6:406 Ja 3 '23 150w

"The style is fluent and vivid, although occasionally a trifle forced; the characters are presented graphically and with searching insight; their motives and desires are analyzed with wisdom and discrimination. One is even tempted to suggest that, if more novels of the type of 'The Singing Captives' were forthcoming, contemporary literature might act less as a phonographic record of life and more as a direct interpretation." S. A. Coblentz

+ Lit R p43 S 23 '22 780w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 115:416 O 18 '22 650w

"This new heroine of Miss Jones's has all the intense fastidiousness of her predecessor Claire, in Quiet Interior, with none of Claire's spiritual fineness, and so is of course a prig. The book as a whole reveals an improvement in the technique of an artist whose first novel made her election reasonably sure." F. H.

+ New Repub 32:257 N 1 '22 200w

"Carefully written novel. Its distinction of style proves to be no small part of its value."

+ N Y Times p26 S 17 '22 300w

JONES, SIR HENRY. Faith that enquires. 278p $2 (188) Macmillan

239 Religion. Faith

22-4842

The Gifford lectures for 1920 and 1921 were delivered by the professor of moral philosophy in the University of Glasgow, whose avowed purpose thruout the course was to awaken the spirit of research in questions of religious faith. His attempt is to show that the severest intellectual inquiry supports those beliefs upon which religion rests, that a man who seeks God by way of pure reason will find Him. In the first part of the series he deals with the obstacles in the way of inquiry into the validity of our religious creeds by the frank and severe methods of science. Then he shows the antagonism between the religious and the secular life, the opposition of morality and religion. Finally, he studies God in relation to man, and identifies the God of religion with the Absolute of philosophy.

Cleveland p73 S '22

"It is a careful and painstaking piece of work, clear in style and boldly unprejudiced in its religious conclusions. But it is doubtful if it adds materially to what has already been said by Edward Caird with greater fulness and eloquence, and by others, such as T. H. Green and his followers."

+ Lit R p85 O 7 '22 1200w

"The Lectures are, of course, too involved with philosophical language for them to be popular with the average reader."

New Statesman 18:740 Ap 1 '22 370w

Reviewed by Lyman Abbott

Outlook 131:464 Je 12 '22 750w

St Louis 20:294 D '22

"To have read the 'Faith that Enquires' is to be immune from the suggestions of the Faith which assumes. The appearance of the book is opportune."

+ Spec 128:627 My 20 '22 390w

"The book will be accounted worth having by any who wish a frank discussion of an age-long problem."

+ Springfield Republican p10 S 8 '22 600w

"It is fortunately true of these lectures, as of many other essays in philosophic construction, that their value is not entirely dependent on the acceptability of their conclusions. The conviction that metaphysics should not be divorced from life, the resolute faith in the vindication of spiritual claims, the exaltation, even if one-sided, of the ideal of duty over lesser goods, combine to give this book an inspiring quality. If Sir Henry Jones was not a great builder of systems, he was an admirable stimulator of mental zeal."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 16 '22 1600w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Later periods of Quakerism. 2v 1020p $8 (30s) Macmillan 239.6 Friends, Society of A21-2073

"Professor Rufus Jones has brought to a conclusion the important series of volumes in which he and Mr. W. C. Braithwaite have studied the origin and development of Quakerism, beginning with the mystics of the Reformation era and concluding with the humanitarian movement of our own time. The last two volumes, now published, deal with the period from 1725 to the present day, and show in some detail how the Quakers—or most of them—ceased to be mystics and became very practical philanthropists."—Spec

"Professor Jones is to be congratulated upon the completion of an undertaking happily conceived and admirably executed." W. W. Fenn

+ Am Hist R 28:309 Ja '23 1100w

Booklist 19:6 O '22

Reviewed by W. H. Freere

Eng Hist R 37:596 O '22 800w

"Naturally, the history is of particular interest to Friends, who will dwell upon details which other readers will pass over pretty lightly, yet proportions are well maintained and those who are interested in the principles which underlie religious experiences as well as all students of Christian history will find the volumes of the series richly rewarding." W. W. Fenn

+ Nation 114:625 My 24 '22 1050w

Reviewed by J. W. Jeffries

N Y Times p14 Je 4 '22 2300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:327 Jl '22

Spec 127:864 D 24 '21 1400w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Spring'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 440w
(Reprinted from Lond Mercury)

The Times [London] Lit Sup p647 O
6 '21 80w

"Professor Rufus Jones has a remarkable power of making modern religious history—too often in presentation, if not in reality, a drab, unromantic thing—as vivid and as dramatic as medieval. The mystic element in him helps him to tell his story brightly, convincingly, and with spiritual as well as intellectual appreciation."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O
13 '21 1550w

JOPE-SLADE, CHRISTINE. Cuckoo's nest.
292p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Nisbet]

The "Cuckoo's nest" is the London house of the old Marchesa de Schundo which, at the time of the story, she has lent to Poppy Whistler and her lovely daughter, Zuriel. In the garden is a little studio, also lent, where are staying Bim Redgold and his sister Stella. Stella teaches rhythmic dancing and Bim designs clothes which their friend Ann makes in her shabby little shop. The only return the Marchesa asks of her guests is that they shall write her often of their doings and the people they meet. Artists frequent the "Cuckoo's nest." They fall in love with the decorative Zuriel and all are willing slaves to her caprices. Bim can think of nothing but designing clothes to set off her loveliness, but Zuriel finds more profitable prey in the heir of Sir Terence Timothy, of Tiny Tea-Tables, Limited. Among all this youth and light-heartedness moves the practical Poppy and writes amusingly of it to the old Marchesa.

"The thing which makes the book is the character work. If she is careful to abstain from sensationalism the author will go far."
I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '22 720w

"Light in plot, averagely interesting."

+ — Lit R p163 O 28 '22 350w

"There are many interesting characters in the book, but none more delightful than Poppy Whistler, who belongs quite frankly to the much-despised shopkeeping class, and makes no pretense of being other than what she really is."

N Y Times p12 O 22 '22 280w

"Miss Jope-Slade is subtle: but her method is unsure, and she squanders her indubitable gifts of wit, insight and charm on a plot which was apparently designed merely to carry the exposition of those gifts, and has no inherent sense or structure of its own. But no matter. 'The Cuckoo's Nest' is a book which everyone with a delicate sense of humour should read."
Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 134:417 S 16 '22 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p570 S 7
'22 140w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Blue circle.
355p il $1.90 Century

22-9193

Suffering from the result of a nervous disorder which obsesses him with the idea that he cannot support himself, Renshaw decides to comply with the advice of his physician and act for a year as a private secretary with the guarantee of maintenance for that time. Very queer things happen at Tawno Ker. David Campbell's old house, soon after Renshaw arrives. The mysterious blue light, the hand and dagger that come thru the transom and the disappearance of the black bag, are facts cleverly unravelled in the closing chapters and even the identity of Renshaw comes as a surprise.

Booklist 18:367 Jl '22

"Her style is clear and her touch sophisticated. Her method is driving, forceful exposition, with hints of adventures to come; and her character drawing makes her work easily equal to Oppenheim's earliest (and best)."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '22 280w

Cleveland p85 N '22

Lit R p674 My 20 '22 230w

N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 90w

"Altogether, this must be rated decidedly a mystery-plus story."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 27 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:156 Je '22

JOURDAIN, ELEANOR FRANCES. Dramatic theory and practice in France, 1690-1808. 240p $4.25 (12s 6d) Longmans

842 French drama

21-20686

"Dr. Jourdain has undertaken 'to trace the development of comédie, tragédie and drame in France in the eighteenth century, and thus to define the relation between the dramatic art of the seventeenth and that of the nineteenth century.' She has observed that most readers of French literature neglect plays of this period, though they are certainly not lacking in interest either to the student of literature or to the student of political and social ideas. She calls attention to many plays and authors that are often overlooked, classifies them conscientiously, and, while finding in them much that is praiseworthy, brings out clearly the reason for the deterioration of the older dramatic types and the development of the drame and the play that is full of political and moral theories."—
Lit R

"She has sought apparently to write for persons of general culture rather than for specialists, and judged from this standpoint the book has a certain value. It is unfortunate that she has not followed scholarly methods sufficiently to show the reader where to go for further information about subjects in which she may have interested him. . . . To the scholar the book brings little that is new." H. C. Lancaster

+ — Lit R p596 Ap 22 '22 520w

"The author of this volume resists the temptation to wander too far in the general field, and contents herself with a scholarly study of the chief exponents of comedy, tragedy, and 'drame,' many of whom are no longer played or even widely read."

+ New Statesman 18:712 Mr 25 '22 480w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

N Y Times p2 F 26 '22 1000w

K

KAWAKAMI, KIYOSHI KARL. Japan's Pacific policy; especially in relation to China, the Far East and the Washington conference. 380p $5 Dutton

327.52 Japan—Foreign relations. China—Foreign relations. Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22. Eastern question (Far East) 22-11798

"Mr. Kawakami represents the anti-militaristic section of Japanese public opinion. This volume, made up of chapters originally written at Washington during the progress of the Conference for newspaper publication, presents the author's analysis of the part taken by Japan in the Conference and of the Pacific problems, which she has to face because of her geographical situation and what she regards as her political necessities."—R of Rs. Contents: Naval armament; The Pacific treaty; The riddle of China; The new open door; The Shantung dispute; Japan's Siberian venture. The treaties and resolutions adopted by and official statements submitted to the Washington conference are given in the appendices and there is an index.

Am Pol Sci R 16:521 Ag '22 100w

KAWAKAMI, KIYOSHI KARL—Continued

"Useful and informing book. There is little sentiment in it. There is hardly a rhetorical flourish. The author gets right down to business. Every page flashes light upon the realities of the situation." C. A. Beard

+ Freeman 5:574 Ag 23 '22 490w

"Of all the good things that have come from the pen of Mr. Kawakami this is clearly the best, representing as it does the anti-militaristic section of public opinion." Collier Cobb

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ag 20 '22 600w

"Mr. Kawakami not only shows a decent respect for the opinions of mankind, but shows a genuine liberal sympathy for China's aspirations. He does not attempt a partisan defence of the secret agreements or the twenty-one demands. While, of course, finding reasons for painting them a lighter shade of gray, he is more inclined to emphasize the futility of harping on past errors, now to be in some measure atoned for, and the importance of considering the practical problems arising from a reversal of policy. His account of the internal disorders of China is not exaggerated and he even combats the often-aired pessimism of J. O. P. Bland regarding Chinese conditions, but he trenchantly 'puts it up' to China to prove her capacity to 'make good' in the new game about to be played." H. C. Emery

+ Lit R p263 D 2 '22 720w

"Mr. Kawakami's cleverness is really amazing. His book has an external air of such fairness and sweet reasonableness that many innocent readers will never discover the fact that it is simply propaganda." L. S. W.

— New Statesman 19:666 S 23 '22 550w

"Mr. Kawakami's book is one which the student of history will note and annotate and keep on his reference shelf because it contains a remarkably compact statement on the many issues discussed if not resolved at the recent Washington conference. . . The publishers have done their share in the production of a book whose worth, however great intrinsically, cannot fail to be enhanced by an agreeable exterior." Poultney Bigelow

+ N Y Times p7 J1 30 '22 1500w

"To a certain extent the book serves a useful purpose in defending Japanese policy against unjust and exaggerated aspersions. However, like most nationalist advocates, Mr. Kawakami is a trifle inclined to overdo his case. The author's style is clear and pleasing and his arrangement of facts is orderly and logical."

+ N Y Tribune p4 J1 16 '22 320w

Pratt p10 winter '23

R of Rs 66:109 J1 '22 60w

"In connectedness they lose from their day-to-day journalistic style, but this is more than compensated for by the immediacy of their touch with the progress of solution. There is an air of ingenious straightforwardness about their content which perhaps simplifies the problems too much and leads one to leave the customary grain of salt out of the diplomatic palaver which is the mainstay of any conference menu."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 27 '22 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 10 '22 450w

Wis Lib Bul 18:253 N '22

Reviewed by F. W. Williams

Yale R n s 12:203 O '22 250w

KAWAKAMI, KIYOSHI KARL. Real Japanese question. 269p il $2 (10s) Macmillan
325.7 Japanese in the United States

21-20525

A vigorous statement of the case for the Japanese in the United States, by a Japanese-American. He surveys the various forces of anti-Japanese agitation and the exploitation of the question by politicians and newspapers, giving many statistics to confute the arguments of the terrorists. The course of anti-Japanese legislation in California and Washington is reviewed and separate chapters are given to Japanese language schools, dual citizenship, and Japanese associations in America. The author is in favor of continued restriction of Japanese immigration and outlines a basis on which Japanese and Americans might meet for further restriction.

Booklist 18:215 Ap '22

"The author, who favors continued restriction of Japanese immigration, presents his arguments in a manner which commands respect. The book is well worth perusal."

+ Bookm 55:203 Ap '22 70w

"This book is misnamed. One expects profundity, or at least clarity, the revelation of something fundamental or definitive; one finds confusion, superficial complexities, a disorderly plurality of questions." J. A. B. Scherer

— Lit R p773 J1 1 '22 700w

Reviewed by T. Q. Beesley

N Y Times p11 Ap 30 '22 1450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:332 J1 '22

St Louis 20:120 Je '22

Spring'd Republican p13a Mr 26 '22 180w

Survey 47:770 F 11 '22 40w

Wis Lib Bul 18:131 My '22

KAWAKAMI, KIYOSHI KARL, ed. What Japan thinks. 237p $2 (10s 6d) Macmillan
327.52 Japan—Foreign relations 21-17108
For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Reviewed by J. F. Steiner

Am J Soc 28:344 N '22 200w

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

Freeman 4:452 Ja 18 '22 140w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:111 Mr '22

Sat R 133:153 F 11 '22 190w

"The special value of this book is that the articles collected in it were written by Japanese writers for Japanese readers. The opportunity is given to English readers of catching Japanese thought, as it were, in undress; the Japanese writers had put on no disguises to impress themselves upon foreigners, or diplomatically to explain or exculpate themselves."

+ Spec 128:272 Mr 4 '22 1250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p63 Ja 20 '22 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 23 '22 720w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA. Joanna Godden. 353p $2 Dutton [8s 6d Cassell]

22-2738

The theme of the story is the development of a woman, intensely vital and human, faulty but lovable, and built on generous lines. We meet her at the age of twenty-three as she is coming into the inheritance of her father's prosperous farm on the Sussex marshes and the guardianship of a younger sister, her only near relative. We leave her at thirty-eight, still unmarried, but about to become a mother, "on the threshold of an entirely new life—her lover, her sister, her farm, her home, her good name, all lost. But the past and the future still were hers." The past had been rich and full. Of the future she is not afraid.

Booklist 18:239 Ap '22

"Miss Kaye-Smith's finest performance to date. The story has power and intensity; it reveals pity and understanding." Burton Rascoe

+ Bookm 55:199 Ap '22 120w

"The strength of the soil is in this novel, as in all Miss Kaye-Smith's other novels. Its realism is not mingled with the romantic, and at every step in Joanna Godden's career we see her confronting and mastering her fate. As in practically everything she has written, Miss Kaye-Smith takes a wide view of things and an extensive outlook upon character. The years count with her as they counted with Joanna Godden, and she can tell a tale more effectively when she follows her hero or her heroine through the implacable march of the years." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p6 F 4 '22 1500w

Freeman 5:94 Ap 5 '22 310w

Lit D p75 Ap 15 '22 550w

"Miss Kaye-Smith's writing is always good, often stirring and sometimes shot with real humor. She unfolds this tale as steadily, as unhesitatingly as day succeeds night. She always keeps it in hand. She contrives as much revelation as D. H. Lawrence without any of those crises which consign Mr Lawrence's volumes to the back shelf." Montgomery Belion
+ Lit R p427 F 18 '22 900w

"Sheila Kaye-Smith has in her book reached full maturity as a novelist and has both the sympathy to understand and the detachment to see clearly. The primitive simplicity of her characters enables her to strip the soul pretty bare, yet though she is far from any pastoral sentimentalism she has succeeded in creating in Joanna Godden an intensely real character of simple but heroic proportions." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 114:292 Mr 8 '22 800w

"Joanna Godden is a convincing and human portrayal of the tragedy that lurks in the shadow of so many desperately hurrying natures. Miss Smith has a firm grip on her material; she surveys life calmly, dispassionately, and the book has the breadth and depth of that calm." F. W. L.
+ New Repub 32:51 S 6 '22 300w

"One of the most noticeable things about the book is its evenness of excellence—an evenness which is the result of a carefully, conscientiously cultivated talent. The reader remembers it rather as a whole than for any outstanding scene or flash of insight. It is an admirable novel, balanced, interesting, artistic, in many ways a notable addition to the many noteworthy tales of rural life in England." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p14 F 5 '22 1000w

"In phrasing and incident it is certainly startlingly frank, but the intent is not to excite sensuality but to work out a personality truly, let cause and effect lead where they may." R. D. Townsend

Outlook 130:350 Mr 1 '22 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:150 Ap '22

"Her proper subject is her chief character, and all the rich movement and setting of the book are subordinate to that. And so triumphantly has she succeeded that she leaves Joanna warmly and perfectly alive. When the book is laid down, we do not look back upon her as a character in fiction, nor think of her in the past tense."

+ Sat R 132:300 S 3 '21 450w

"The attraction and charm with which the whole novel is invested do not seem to depend entirely either on the fact that it is excellently written or yet on the singleness of aim with which the author pursues her theme to its destined end. Whatever the reason, both book and heroine have the quality of greatness—unmistakable yet indefinable."

+ Spec 127:469 O 8 '21 1350w

Springf'd Republican p3a F 26 '22 350w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA. Tramping Methodist. 278p $2 Dutton

22-21486

The author's first book, published in England in 1908, and now republished for American readers. The hero, Humphrey Lyte, was the son of a clergyman of the English church who between Sundays lived the life of a roistering, fox-hunting squire. Driven from home by the cruelty of his father and brothers, Humphrey joined the Methodists, became a preacher and carried the gospel thru Sussex. His impulsiveness and hot temper involved him in violent adventures and finally landed him in jail, falsely accused of murder. He declined to clear himself because disclosure of the chain of circumstances leading to the murder would bring shame and suffering to the girl he loved. By the timely discovery of the true facts of the case, he was saved from the gallows, to take up again the life of a tramping Methodist, this time with a wife to share it. The story pictures early nineteenth century conditions in England, the deadness and degradation of the Established church, inhuman prisons and a savage state of justice.

"Miss Kaye-Smith's quality is spiritual and stylistic. She has that peculiarly English quality of transfusing a country (in this case Sussex) into words until you breathe and live it. She has somehow, somewhere, caught the lyrical element in religious conversion and sung that through the prose of a familiar story. I can see faults in this first novel, too great hurry sometimes, a lack of psychology in some of her character studies, and a touch now and then, as with the Brontës, of melodrama, yet 'The Tramping Methodist' deserves fame and should presage more future than Miss Kaye-Smith has yet garnered." H: S. Canby
+ Lit R p239 N 25 '22 550w

"The whole book was undoubtedly a remarkable feat for a young girl; and if it was not recognized as such on its first appearance that was probably because no one knew anything about the author and the circumstances. They know now; for, whether or not the promise was recognized, it has been redeemed in full." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p8 N 19 '22 620w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 14 '23 430w

KEABLE, ROBERT. Mother of all living. 359p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Constable]

22-3495

Against a South African background is developed a study of feminine psychology and sexual impulse. Cecil Eldred and Pamela Urfurd stand for two contrasted types of the eternal feminine—Eve, the mother of all living, and Lilith, the enchantress. Cecil, fresh from school in England, comes back to her home in South Africa. She meets Hugh Sinclair, a typical colonial Englishman, and marries him. Three years too late comes her meeting with Pamela's cousin, Chris Ashurst. Chris and Cecil develop a passion for each other and are only deterred from running away together by the death of Cecil's little son. Then Lilith in the person of Pamela intervenes. To save Cecil, her friend, she sets herself deliberately to seduce Chris. With difficulty he withstands her wiles, but Pamela kindles a flame in herself which will not be subdued. In the end Cecil decides to stay with her husband, and Chris, having lost his Eve, turns not inconsolably to Lilith.

"Mr. Keable has power we knew before, but it has grown with use. He is a bigger man than when he wrote 'Simon Called Peter' and he has staged a vaster scene. The 'Mother of All Living' is a book with a meaning and it possesses potent appeal." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ag 16 '22 1150w

"It is well written, certainly; the author has already demonstrated his possession of an artistic touch, the power of vivid imagery, and forceful presentation. Scarcely anyone would question that. But there the merit of the book ends. It gives the impression of having been written to portray passion rather than life, its plot seems entirely subordinated to that purpose, and it reeks throughout with the 'flavor of garlic,' that may be realism but is nevertheless closely akin to the obscene."

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 S 24 '22 800w

"He is serious, earnest even, in intention and in method. He can build up the framework of his story with skill. He is fluent, and writes with easy directness of manner. But only at his moments of tension does he let his characters move freely and unimpeded. Between whiles they are too often forced to bear millstones of sermonizing about their necks." Hamish Miles

+ Lit R p43 S 23 '22 1150w

KEABLE, ROBERT—Continued

"Interesting in its background but somewhat superheated in its portrayal of the amorous emotions."

Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 20w

"Mr. Keable very cleverly gives his reader the slice of life required; he makes him live dangerously without any danger, and brings the curtain down upon the restored equilibrium of social virtue. Here is the secret of circulation."

+ Nation and Ath 30:563 Ja 7 '22 300w

"Though the plot of the story is old as human nature itself, a plot which all races, all countries and all periods have more or less in common, there is a directness as well as a freshness and sincerity in Mr. Keable's treatment which prevents it from seeming in the least stereotyped." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 13 '22 1450w

"The chief interest of this volume is not Mr. Keable's exposition of feminine psychology; but his descriptions of South African scenery."

+ Spec 127:900 D 31 '21 210w

Spring'd Republican p7a S 10 '22 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p843 D 15 '21 780w

KEHLER, HENNING. Red garden; tr. from the Danish by Frithjof Toksvig. 204p $2 Knopf 914.7 Bolshevism—Russia. Russia—Description and travel 22-15684

The author, as an official in the Danish embassy had occasion to travel in Russia during 1917-18. The book consists of a series of sketches of Russian life as he has seen it under Soviet rule. He has no love for the Bolsheviks and the picture he paints is one of tragedy and chaos. Contents: Kerensky's summer in Petrograd; At the railway station of Vitebsk; Russian court martial; The Bolshevik in the province; Village bolshevism; Russian cavalry; Galician Jews; Cederblom; Dr Diamond; Hapsburg officers; The red garden; Russian bourgeoisie; Alexander and Ivan; The flight through Siberia.

"Despite prejudice against things as they are, Mr. Kehler has snatched some startling sketches from the new Russia—startling not because of their excitement but because of their air of realness and truth. Anyone interested in Russia can find something worth while in the book as translated by Frithjof Toksvig."

Bookm 56:227 O '22 80w

"The translation admirably preserves the touch of the author and in no way conventionalizes his work. The author wrote this book when there was little left to say about Russia, but he has not failed to show us things of real interest and to interpret the mind as well as to describe the outward semblance of the Russian calamity."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 12 '22 520w

N Y Times p17 N 12 '22 950w

"The sketches are brilliantly written. Sometimes the brilliancy is carried to a point of brittleness. Coming from an organized, peaceful country, the Dane has a contempt for the conditions he finds, which sometimes adds spice to his portraiture, but sometimes annoys the reader very much. But for the most part the book is delightful reading."

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 450w

"The whole thing is a kaleidoscopic nightmare—in short, a vivid and accurate picture of life in the Russia of to-day."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p562 S 7 '22 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p825 D 7 '22 20w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Catty Atkins, seaman. 230p il $1.60 Harper

22-9933

When Mr Browning invited Catty Atkins and his friend Wee-Wee Moore to go for a cruise on his yacht, the Albatross, the boys decided that they were mighty lucky. On board the yacht they found besides themselves and Mr Browning, only one other passenger, Mr Topper. They had not gone far when Mr Topper discovered a black yacht, which seemed to be following them, and he began to look worried. At once Catty's inventive imagination pictured pirates and hidden treasure. Just to help matters along, he and Wee-Wee charted a map of the coast and for good measure marked a location on Nantucket Island. This they managed to get to the men in the black yacht. When the black yacht disappeared the next day their joy was complete. Then they discovered that the Albatross, too, was heading for Nantucket! Excitement follows, and captures and digging for treasure, which last turns out to be quite different from what the boys imagined.

"A fascinating story of the sea, of old Nantucket and of adventures that are dear to the hearts of natural, fun-loving boys who enjoy excitement and able story telling."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 20 '22 60w

N Y Times p25 My 21 '22 90w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Conflict. 330p $2 Harper

22-5896

Dorcas Remalie was an heiress, accustomed to a life of luxury and self-indulgence. When she was nineteen her father died and she became the ward of a hard, miserly, hypocritically religious uncle who forced her to live in a backwoods lumbering town, deprived of all the amenities of her former existence, and in an atmosphere of sinister mystery. The conflict described is one in which all the virtues, human kindnesses and goodness valiantly battle against all the hardness, badness and vice that human nature is said to be capable of. In the process Dorcas developed her extraordinary latent possibilities and became worthy of the love of an extraordinary man.

Booklist 18:367 J1 '22

"Mr. Kelland can take satisfaction in having written a direct, unswerving, colorful and vigorous example of melodramatic novel writing. We march along with the story compelled by its verve and movement, to become absorbed in all its developments. Not a piece of character analysis is to be found in 'Conflict,' but a story worth telling and which sometimes makes us hold our breath."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 5 '22 190w

"A clever and absorbing story."

+ Lit R p609 Ap 22 '22 220w

"There is enough red blood in it for any Western yarn. It isn't really a Western yarn, of course, but it is a story that holds up to the end."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 9 '22 200w

"Entertaining, though rather characteristic, tale."

+ Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 2 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

KELLER, HELEN REX, ed. Reader's digest of books. new ed 941p $4 Macmillan

808.8 Literature—Dictionaries. Books and reading 22-26487

Descriptive summaries of some four hundred of the world's best known books, both fiction and non-fiction, arranged alphabetically by title with an author index. The book was originally published as part of the Warner library of the world's best literature, in which work it is still included, and is now for the first time published separately.

Booklist 18:375 J1 '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:231 My '22

Pratt p6 autumn '22

St Louis 20:219 S '22

KELSO, ROBERT WILSON. History of public poor relief in Massachusetts, 1620-1920. 200p $2.50 Houghton

361 Poor. Charities—Massachusetts. Children—Charities, protection, etc. 22-5695

"A study of the English origins, American beginnings and the development of the system of public charities in Massachusetts from the days of the Plymouth Colony to the present time. Considerable attention is given to the evolution of the law of settlement, and to the work of the state department of public welfare, including the so-called Massachusetts system of child-guardianship. Mr. Kelso believes that so far as possible the detailed administration of public poor relief should be left to the local units of government, reserving to the state chiefly the determination of general policies, in other words a plan of centralized policy and decentralized administration." (Am Pol Sci R) Contents: The English background; Social foundations of New England; Inhabitaney and the genesis of the settlement law; The modern law of legal settlement in Massachusetts; The town's poor; Absorption of relief functions by the state; The department of public welfare; Child care and the child placing system in Massachusetts; Contains bibliographical footnotes.

"An excellent piece of work. It is based on a careful study of original sources, chiefly town records, which are extensively quoted throughout the text. The author, who is secretary of the Boston Council of Social Agencies, adds to his knowledge of the economic and legal history of his subject the qualifications of a trained and experienced social worker." Amy Hewes

+ Am Hist R 27:332 J1 '22 500w

"On the whole, Mr. Kelso has assembled an immensely valuable collection of material. To attempt to cover this history in a volume of two hundred pages is to leave much unsaid. But Mr. Kelso has broken much new ground and written a useful and interesting book even if there remains room for a later and more elaborate treatment of the subject." Edith Abbott

+ Am J Soc 28:364 N '22 800w

Am Pol Sci R 16:531 Ag '22 130w

"An important addition to the somewhat meagre literature on the history of philanthropy."

Cleveland p73 S '22

"A concise and interesting account."

+ Nation 114:603 My 17 '22 30w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:472 N '22

"This terse volume is well organized and replete with convenient figures and with pertinent information. It gathers into one intelligent review a vast amount of scattered material." M. R. Coolidge

+ Survey 48:731 S 15 '22 400w

KEMP, HARRY HIBBARD. Tramping on life. 438p $3 Boni & Liveright

22-18920

"Harry Kemp's 'Tramping on Life' was once announced as a novel to be called 'John Gregory,' after the name the protagonist bears, but it can never have been intended to be anything less than the 'autobiographical narrative' which the subtitle admits it is. Though some of the names of persons and places are moderately disguised, the record is very candid: a record of an Ohio childhood, a fling at sea and various excursions on the smoky trail, a wild, free period of study at the University of Kansas; an eager curiosity about love culminating in a lyric episode of which other aspects are presented in 'The Brass Check'; and a passionate immersion in poetry, with 'Leaves of Grass' for a bible and Shelley for a pillar of fire and Keats for diurnal manna, ending only with the end of this book and the appearance of Harry Kemp's first published volume."—Nation

"He sets down in detail how he broke each and every commandment, when and where he showed a cowardly streak, and even the word lashings he received from others and which his maturer wisdom agrees with. That takes no small amount of courage and humility. But his breathless eagerness to tell every last thing about himself also leads to some unnecessary grossness and a good deal of vanity." Edith Leighton

+ Bookm 56:497 D '22 420w

"Mr. Kemp's is a curious, original, and interesting book." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:167 S 30 '22 110w

"[The hero] could never see beyond himself. He posset no vision. Indeed, this attitude is perceptible throughout the book, and, of course, such an attitude is all right if oneself is sufficiently interesting. One doubts this at times, tho, while reading 'Tramping on Life.' There is also evident a lack of a sense of humor, which would have ordered the hero's life far otherwise if he had posset it. . . This book is interesting, even absorbing at times, but its value is nil as a picture of American manners, because the protagonist in it never quite rises to his environment."

+ Int Bk R p56 Ja '23 1050w

"What is really precious and beautiful in the volume—and there is much—is the strictly concrete and personal, adventure without comment, vision without implication. His story is rich in life and experience and makes even the better type of novel seem pale and thin. Such is the supreme value of reality." Ludwig Lewisohn

+ Lit R p321 D 16 '22 700w

"I read 'Tramping on Life' with the mounting pleasure with which I read Brand Whitlock's 'Forty Years of It' and Hamlin Garland's 'Son of the Middle Border.' Without being greatly touched by the poetry or specially convinced by the philosophy in the story, I was arrested and detained by the sense of vividness of life which it communicates. It is one of the richest of tramp books; it is a solid document on the rebellions and dissents of a generation." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 115:sup377 O 11 '22 200w

"This is real autobiography. It avoids the pretense of accuracy which characterizes the journals of mediocrity, but it gives the breath of life to the figure it portrays. Few novels have the natural charm and poetic beauty of this personal narrative." H. I. Young

+ Nation 115:693 D 20 '22 650w

"It is not as though Mr. Kemp imagined himself a distinguished citizen and sounded a blare of trumpets to announce his long-postponed arrival. Prompted, no doubt, by the contemporary passion for self-analysis, he has traced his progress through life as an average man whose sole distinction seems to be his independence. In a colloquial style which never burns with the fire of a poet and which sometimes is not even adequate to catch the reader in the illusion of turgid emotions, Mr. Kemp drains his memories of people, of places and of himself. The book's simplicity is its chief virtue."

+ N Y Times p2 D 31 '22 650w

"Its audacities, its naivete, its vivid, forceful presentation, above all its grip on several of the most important phases of modern American life, are great." Allen Updegraff

+ N Y Tribune p10 O 29 '22 2350w

"People who can stomach the profanity and the sex stuff of this book will find it decidedly interesting in its discursive and conversational revelations of an unconventional personality."

+ Outlook 132:390 N 1 '22 50w

R of Rs 67:109 Ja '23 50w

"Assuming the work to be autobiography, it is remarkable in its frankness, in its substance, in its particularity, in its egotistic detachment, in its naïf assumption that a plain tale of a rebellious life plainly told can make all well in the world's understanding, in its lack of a saving sense of humor, in its assumption that its author's personal story will matter to the world—that it's the author is significant enough in the world's affairs to make his story matter. And it is remarkable in its unconscious revelation of the reactions of the ill-adjusted poetic spirit in its relations with the world's harsh environment."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 5 '22 1000w

KEMPTON, KENNETH PAYSON. Phantom gold. 224p il $1.75 Century

The British freighter "Arrowdale" leaves earlier than expected and one of its petty officers, Rick Hartley, a young English lad, finds himself stranded in an American port without a penny or a friend. He is taken for a dock thief but evades capture by a splendid swimming feat, and finally succeeds in shipping aboard the schooner "Laughing Lass," which is supposed to be bound for the Grand Banks. Rick finds but one friend among the desperate men who make up the crew of this schooner and he cleverly frustrates their plan to capture some of the "Glendale's" cargo of five million dollars in gold bullion. Exciting events happen quickly and Rick is rewarded by finding himself once again aboard his own ship the "Arrowdale" in company with his friend from the "Laughing Lass."

"A wholesomely thrilling sea-story of the kind manly young Americans particularly like."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 13 '22 360w
Cleveland p82 N '22

KENDREW, WILFRID GEORGE. Climates of the continents. 387p $7 Oxford [21s Milford] 551.5 Climate 22-23353

"The general science of climatology has been well set forth in many books on that subject, chiefly of German origin. We have also had numerous treatises on meteorology. But there has been no adequate attempt to show the actual climates of the countries of the earth, treated regionally, and it is this gap which the author fills with the aid, though in supplement, of the mass of existing literature on the subject. Without aiming at anything like a unified treatment, he confines himself to presenting the main climatic features of each region surveyed, and to correlating them with their larger aspects, the framework thus supplied being left for completion to the meteorologist, the botanist, the zoologist and the geographer. There is an introductory section on climate statistics, pressure and wind systems. Then follow in succession chapters dealing with Africa, Asia, Europe, North America, South and Central America, Mexico and the West Indies, Australia and New Zealand."—Boston Transcript

"This new contribution to our knowledge of climate and weather was greatly needed and will be widely appreciated."

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 23 '22 520w

"It is just the sort of book that ought to be on hand in every school and in every library. . . The main value of Mr. Kendrew's book lies in the fact that it is systematic and contains a large number of reliable and easily accessible facts. It does not pretend to be original, for it is avowedly a compilation chiefly from official meteorological reports and books on the climate of different parts of the world. It is freely illustrated with black and white diagrams, which add a great deal to the vividness of the text. It is to be regretted, however, that the sources of much of the author's information are not more clearly given." Ellsworth Huntington

+ — Lit R p48 O 23 '22 880w

"Mr. Kendrew strikes new ground by giving a description of the actual climates of the regions of the world. There is no explanation of the omission of polar climates, north and south. Quite enough is now known of these climates to enable useful accounts to be included in a book of this sort. The oversight mars the usefulness of the volume. . . All students of geography will be grateful for this well-arranged and lucidly written volume."

+ — Nature 110:630 N 11 '22 170w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:48 O '22

"Mr. Kendrew has collected a great deal of information, hitherto scattered through different volumes (his bibliography mentions thirty-seven of them), into a convenient book of reference from which we can readily gather the main features of the climate in any part of the world, though, of course, much detail is necessarily omitted in so vast a survey. . . But Mr. Kendrew is by no means content with mere description; he assigns reasons for the climates he describes, and these are naturally more interesting than the descriptions themselves."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p517 Ag 10 '22 2100w

KENNAN, GEORGE. E. H. Harriman: a biography. 2v 421:421p il $7.50 Houghton

B or 92 Harriman, Edward Henry. Railroads—United States 22-9508

Besides the outstanding facts of Mr Harriman's personal life the biography gives with considerable fullness the details of such transactions as the Chicago and Alton reorganization, the contest for control of the Burlington, the Equitable life assurance society case, the Interstate commerce investigation, and the Harriman-Roosevelt controversy. The volumes are illustrated and volume two contains a closing chapter of recollections, estimates and appreciations from Mr Harriman's friends and business associates, a chronology of his life and an index.

Am Econ R 12:492 S '22 80w

Reviewed by F. L. Paxson

Am Hist R 28:166 O '22 600w

Ann Am Acad 105:185 Ja '23 1200w

Booklist 19:17 O '22

Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '22 720w

Cleveland p88 N '22

"Unfortunately Mr. Kennan leaves us in doubt as to the essential motivations of Harriman. In his story the hero is virtually an inarticulate figure. There is no indication that the broader economic and social implications of his dashing imperialist designs ever entered his head. There is no indication that he considered the general well-being save as an adjunct to profits and power. The narrative does not bear out the author's assumption of an underlying altruism." Harold Kellock

— Freeman 5:570 Ag 23 '22 2350w

Reviewed by T. F. Woodlock

Ind 110:26 Ja 6 '23 1100w

"Mr. Kennan's work is a noteworthy and valuable contribution to biographical literature. It is well written, well arranged, and an extremely interesting account of the life of the man who, with James J. Hill, will stand out in American history as preeminent in transportation and empire building. . . Unfortunately, however, Mr. Kennan appears to be unwilling to admit that Mr. Harriman ever made mistakes." W. J. Cunningham

+ — Lit R p805 J 15 '22 1600w

"George Kennan has told interestingly and competently the story of Harriman's work. Since Strachey set a new standard of biographical excellence, readers have come to require of a voluminous Life a real insight into character, motives of action, philosophy of life. This requirement is not met by Mr. Kennan. Harriman's actions are faithfully recorded, and his guiding moral principles are made sufficiently clear. But he remains an official figure." Alvin Johnson

+ — New Repub 31:23 My 31 '22 1300w

"Mr. Kennan has written a readable book. He has succeeded in giving a vital picture not only of a remarkable career, but of a personality which was in some respects more unusual even than its achievements. It is good biography."

+ N Y Times p4 My 21 '22 2550w

Reviewed by F. M. Davenport

Outlook 131:608 Ag 9 '22 2700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:366 J1 '22

R of Rs 65:672 Je '22 200w

"Mr Kennan's biography does not afford a final estimate of Harriman's career because Mr Kennan at all times has felt it desirable to speak as an advocate in behalf of his subject. This partisanship, objectionable in itself, throws the work out of proportion. Nevertheless, the large amount of material here assembled makes the work an important history and contributes to a final judgment of Harriman's career. Not the least valuable part of the book is the large number of opinions of Harriman's railroad associates hitherto unpublished."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 1100w

KERR, SOPHIE (MRS SOPHIE [KERR] UNDERWOOD). One thing is certain. 336p $1.90 Doran

22-19172

"Louellen West is the daughter of Amos West, a devout Methodist. He is a good man, but hard and stern. Louellen is in love with Mart Bladen, a prosperous and industrious young farmer, but unfortunately given in his leisure hours to drinking, and card playing. Amos looks upon Mart as a lost soul and has picked out John Henry Hyde as a suitable husband for his daughter. Hyde, from the very beginning has identified himself with the Methodists and, though still a young man, is already looked upon as one of the pillars of the Church. His conspicuous piety blinds Amos West to other and less admirable traits of his character, but Louellen dislikes him instinctively. In a fit of pique at Mart's failure to keep a promise, Louellen yields to her father's wishes and marries Hyde. Too late she discovers that her aversion to him is well grounded. He is mean, avaricious, cruel and lustful. Part I. of the story deals with her hideously unhappy life with him. In Part II. it is Louellen's youngest daughter Judith who is in danger of being forced into a loveless marriage."—N Y Times

"A drama as quaint and beautiful and exciting as anything I have read in a long time. She is clever enough to realize that, with such people, she must have a new and colorful background. Her negroes ring true—they talk as they should; and her description of a revival meeting is as perfect as anything could be." C: H. Towne

+ Bookm 56:224 O '22 540w

"Not a pleasant story. There is too much of raw life here, bleeding beneath the ominous quiet. It is a troubling book, filling us with an intolerable irritation at the narrowness of men's beliefs in all times. It is far and away a bigger book than Sophie Kerr has ever done before, yet with its added power it has those other qualities which we have considered markedly hers—her sense of values, her appreciation of beauty, glints of her quick humor, and always that sense of abounding vitality she imparts to her work."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 13 '22 1150w

"It has power, stark and rude, if you will, but power nevertheless. It takes hold of the reader at the first meeting with a perfectly relentless grasp and never turns him loose until the startling, unexpected, and almost impossible denouement brings the story to an end."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 14 '23 250w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:168 S 30 '22 520w

"It is a strong though rather sordid piece of realism, except that the character of Bladen is so painted that he is lovable in spite of his faults. And the local color and characters of the eastern shore are reproduced with both fidelity and charm."

+ — Lit R p52 S 23 '22 360w

"Avoiding the sentimental and the improbable with a conscious valance she misses at once the sting of sophistication and the all-satisfying flavor of the soil that could compensate for it." E. H.

+ — New Repub 33:50 D 6 '22 90w

N Y Times p8 S 3 '22 480w

"A brave book and an outspoken one; one not to be recommended to people who demand even the slightest coating of sugar on their pills. Miss Kerr calls things by their right names, not bothering with euphemisms or evasions." Marian Spitzer

N Y Tribune p6 S 10 '22 620w

Springf'd Republican p6a D 3 '22 600w

KEY, PIERRE VAN RENSSELAER, and ZIRATO, BRUNO. Enrico Caruso; a biography. 455p il $5 Little

B or 92 Caruso, Enrico

22-19689

"To secure and detail facts, and to permit the individuality of the man to reveal itself as it was, have been the aim of author and collaborator. Neither time nor effort was spared to obtain from every authoritative source possible information which it was felt should have representation in this volume. Members of the Caruso family, intimate friends, persons associated with the singer in his professional activities have assisted to make the work as complete as possible." (Preface) Among the illustrations are facsimile letters and some of Caruso's sketches and caricatures. Index.

Booklist 19:113 Ja '23

"Pierre Key knew him well and Bruno Zirato was his devoted friend and companion; their book has proved them an ideal combination. This volume will be the standard authority on the greatest singer of his time. Mr. Key has presented his material with admirable clarity, and has gone for it to the persons most capable of reporting events truthfully. Of special interest is Mr. Key's analysis of Caruso as a singer, an analysis which shows unusual insight into the voice and its meaning." Orville Harrold

+ Bookm 56:637 Ja '23 360w

"Taking the Key-Zirato biography of Caruso as a book of reference, the student will gather accurate information as to the parts Caruso sang and the periods of his life in which he sang them. There are, further, scattered through the book invaluable lights on the singer's own attitude toward his art." Pitts Sanborn

+ Nation 116:126 Ja 31 '23 1500w

"The first adequate record of his extraordinary life." W: B. Chase

+ N Y Times p8 O 15 '22 1450w

Pratt p33 winter '23

Wis Lib Bul 18:274 D '22

KEYNES, JOHN MAYNARD. Revision of the treaty; being a sequel to The economic consequences of the peace. 242p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d Macmillan]

330.94 Europe—Economic conditions. Peace treaty, 1919

22-2755

The book represents a sequel to the author's earlier volume in that it leaves the fundamental issues of the first unaltered but reviews the events since December 1919, states present facts and, most important of all, makes proposals of what ought to be done now. The second ultimatum of London, the reparation bill, the claim for pensions, the financial and commercial situation and the revision of the treaty are discussed and there is an appendix of documents and an index.

Reviewed by F: A. Ogg

Am Pol Sci R 16:507 Ag '22 180w

"The present volume is an excellent performance, more judicial in tone than the Economic Consequences of the Peace and more closely confined to the economic issues involved—though to some readers, who recall particularly the racy characterizations of the 'Big Four' in the earlier book, these very merits may make the present work seem tame by comparison. To the student, the disappointing feature of an otherwise illuminating and suggestive book will be the author's very patent complacency with his earlier work." J: H. Williams

+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '22 550w

Booklist 18:215 Ap '22

"Mr. Keynes is very clever. He can make figures interesting and he argues convincingly. Moreover, this book is not affected—as was his first—by the desire to attract public attention

KEYNES, JOHN MAYNARD—Continued
through personal characterizations which were more brilliant than accurate." C: Seymour

+ Bookm 55:229 My '22 540w

Boston, Transcript p6 My 20 '22 950w

Cleveland p95 D '22

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

Freeman 5:333 Je 14 '22 360w

Int J Ethics 32:338 Ap '22 90w

Reviewed by J: A. Hobson

Nation 114:sup434 Ap 12 '22 660w

"Mr. Keynes will antagonize a considerable fraction of his readers, as he did in his 'Economic Consequences of the Peace.' But whether the reader is antagonized or not by this book, he will have to take account of it, as he did of the earlier book. The facts are too salient to be forgotten, the arguments too forcible to ignore. If then the reader is afraid of the truth as one of the most competent and candid of living economists sees it, he had better let this book alone." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 30:24 Mr 1 '22 850w

"The sequel is, like its predecessor, a pleasure to read, lucid and concise in its economic arguments, dashing in its political satires and its judgment of persons. . . The book is bound, of course, to be a rather mild draught after the strong beer of 'Economic Consequences of the Peace.' Mr. Keynes admits that he has nothing very new to say on the fundamental issues. There are none of the revelations with which he startled the reader in 1919. But it contains matter that is of real importance."

+ New Statesman 18:422 Ja 14 '22 1000w

"Mr. Keynes's book is less ambitious than one would suppose from its title. . . He makes some interesting although not wholly novel proposals. . . The readers of this later book of Mr. Keynes's will welcome his return to earth after his flight in the clouds, but they will remember, with regret, that such views as his of two years ago were a great factor in hindering and in delaying the economic and pacific co-operation of the world." D: H. Miller

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 5 '22 2400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:155 Ap '22

Pratt p33 summer '22

St Louis 20:88 My '22

"Mr. Keynes's book would be easier to read and possibly more valuable as a contribution to an immensely difficult subject if it were couched less in the first person and were less concerned with vindicating the author's predictions. There is just a suspicion that what interests Mr. Keynes is not so much peace as Keynes on peace."

+ Sat R 133:94 Ja 28 '22 500w

Survey 47:801 F 18 '22 30w

"He has put together an extremely useful record of the bewildering and perplexing efforts of the statesmen of Europe to extricate themselves from the morass in which they have allowed themselves to be entangled."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 19 '22 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 18:131 My '22

"It is written from intimate knowledge, backed by authoritative statistics. The simplifying clarity, scientific soundness, and delightful common sense of his well-studied analyses will be of great value in enlightening public opinion. The chapter on 'Reparation, Inter-Ally Debt, and International Trade' is sufficient in itself to warrant the book." C. R. Naves

+ Yale R n s 11:864 Jl '22 450w

KEYSER, ARTHUR LOUIS. People and places: a life in five continents. 337p il $6 Dutton [16s Murray]

910 Voyages and travels (Eng ed 22-20290)

These rambling reminiscences of a debonair Englishman begin with his youth in England and his recollections of country gentry and social life in London. Then come voyages in an official capacity with sojourns of various duration in Australia, China, Africa, North and South America. The descriptions of localities and people are liberally interspersed with anecdotes and adventures. Map, illustrations, index.

"His sense of humor never fails him. It flashes through the records of adventures. The story of his long service to King and country, filled with anecdote gratefully free from innuendo and censoriousness, and often traversing delightfully in memory thousands of miles and many years within the confines of a single page, amuses as well as informs. Through the magic of this author's memory and friendliness, lands seldom visited by travellers and people beyond our ken are visualized for us." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p10 O 14 '22 1000w

Spring'd Republican p12 Ja 2 '23 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p355 Je 1 '22 1050w

KEYSER, CASSIUS JACKSON. Mathematical philosophy; a study of fate and freedom. 466p $4.70 Dutton

510.1 Mathematics

22-5430

These "lectures for educated laymen" propose to disclose the fundamental connections between mathematics and philosophy. They deal with concepts which the author designates as pillar-concepts in the edifice of mathematics, such as function, propositional function, postulate system, finitude, infinity, transformation, invariance, etc. The significance of these concepts and their use in outlying fields of thought are disclosed as well as the relation of mathematics to other great forms of intellectual activity, especially its bearings upon the universal interests of the human spirit. Index.

Bookm 55:650 Ag '22 130w

Boston Transcript p9 My 20 '22 650w

"Discusses fully and in an attractive way the fundamental connections between mathematics and philosophy."

+ N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:21 Ap '22

Pratt p14 summer '22

KIDD, BENJAMIN. Philosopher with nature. 211p $2 Doran [6s Methuen]

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior

(Eng ed 22-8377)

Benjamin Kidd was always a keen observer of nature and thruout his life carried out systematic observations and experiments on the habits and intelligence of animals. From time to time he wrote articles of general interest on subjects of natural history. A selection of these articles has for the first time been brought together in the present volume. The first two in the volume have not before been published. The remainder appeared in the author's lifetime, over a period of some twenty years, in periodical literature. They are written more for the author's and reader's recreation than for scientific purpose. Contents: Wild bird life in the Severn estuary (two chapters); Wild bees; Bels; Hares; A midsummer night; The haunts of coot and heron; Concerning the cuckoo; The habits and intelligence of bees; The habits of frogs; Sea trout; The instinct of animals; The birds of London; The plague of birds; What do young animals know? The mind of a dog; Intelligence of squirrels.

"This book has an unfortunate beginning. The two opening chapters upon 'Wild Bird Life in Severn Estuary' are so thronged with wild bird life, flapping and shrieking and skittering from beneath one's feet, that the reader is impelled to wrap his coat about his head and flee. . . His style is wholly charming; at his best, he suggests W. H. Hudson." Brooks Shepard

+ Lit R p681 My 27 '22 500w

"All [the essays] are illuminating and all are delightful."

+ Nature 110:836 D 23 '22 1000w

"Deficiencies of personal observation are frequent; but in spite of such things, there is value in the cumulative argument of the book; and at intervals real charm in the expression."

+ Sat R 132:350 S 21 '21 420w

"They are for the lover of nature rather than for the naturalist proper. Usually, studies of this type depend for effect upon humanizing the habits and instincts of animals; this Mr. Kidd happily avoids."

+ Spec 127:338 S 10 '21 2100w

"The essays are uneven. Nevertheless, there is no essay that does not give stimulus to thought; and many add new and valuable facts to the philosophy of intelligence in nature."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p525 Ag 18 '21 900w

KILBOURNE, FANNY. Corner in William. 268p $1.75 Dodd

22-17945

Romantic episodes in the life of Dorothy Aldrich, from the time she was fifteen, until she made the momentous discovery that after all it was Will Horton, 'the boy next door,' with whom she was in love. Contents: We learn from Cleopatra; Cinderella dyes them black; William learns all about women; Sincerely by request; Four cupids for Dulcie; Elaine and the professor; A corner in William; What love will do.

"What Booth Tarkington does in the way of understanding and humorous portrayal for the high school boy, Fannie Kilbourne has begun to do for the high school girl. Paul and Rhoda was a very good story, but 'A Corner in William' is a much better story."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '22 450w

"Fannie Kilbourne has a light touch and a quick eye for her butterfly subject; her books could equally well afford an hour's amusement to a mother or a self-conscious and salutary laugh to a high school girl."

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 24 '22 120w

KIMBALL, EVERETT. State and municipal government in the United States. 581p $3 (7s 6d) Ginn

352 State government. Municipal government 22-3103

The book, written by the professor of government in Smith college and intended for use as a textbook, covers both state and municipal government, treating the two as a single manifestation of local government. Part one discusses the federal system and the state constitutions as the basis of local government. Part two deals with the political system—the electorate in theory and action. Part three deals with state government, part four with county and town government, part five with municipal government. Index.

"It will be a useful work in any introduction to local government in this country. In a work which has so many merits one wishes there were more evidences of independent research and the quality of freshness which it alone can impart to a textbook." R. M. Story

+ — Am Pol Sci R 16:335 My '22 650w

Boston Transcript p6 F 11 '22 420w

Pratt p12 autumn '22

St Louis 20:265 N '22

"Prof Kimball's knowledge is presented compactly and clearly."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ag 27 '22 220w

"Dr. Kimball's book may certainly be commended as a useful addition to the reference shelves of one's library."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p516 Ag 10 '22 420w

KIMMEL, STANLEY PRESTON. Leaves on the water. 56p $1.50 Seitzer

818

22-23387

These sketches and tales of the Orient, some of them in free verse, some in prose, are an attempt to capture and put into words something of the mood and atmosphere of the Far East.

"Mr. Kimmel looks upon the foibles of the Orient with the necessary calm for impartial judgment and with the poet's vision for beauty. The reader will find a gentle irony, perhaps a vague melancholy, in Mr. Kimmel's work, but he writes of the East unhampered by prejudice." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 9 '22 400w

"'Leaves on the Water' is pallid, it lacks a spice and warmth, which seem absolute requisites for Oriental poetry. Kimmel is sincere enough. Sometimes he actually captures a metaphor that holds water. But his Chinese epigrams are feeble. The book convinces the reader of one thing: the Chinese should write their own poetry." Milton Raison

— + N Y Tribune p19 Ja 7 '23 200w

KING, BASIL. Dust flower. 350p il $2 Harper 22-20345

After a more than customarily violent quarrel with Barbara Walbrook, his fiancée, Rashleigh Allerton hurried away from her in a state of reckless despair, swearing to marry the first woman he met who would have him. Chance threw in his pathway poor little Letty Gravely who had just been put out of her home, without a penny, by her bullying stepfather. Letty accepted Rashleigh, but without enthusiasm, and went thru the legal process of marrying him. He took her to his luxurious home and woke up in the morning to repent his rashness and plead with his faithful old butler-valet to get him out of his scrape. The admirable Steptoe is endowed with more than human wisdom and insight. He takes in hand Letty's education as a lady and pulls the strings which bring about the easily foreseen dénouement.

Booklist 19:159 F '23

"Though Rashleigh and Letty couldn't seem to come to a bad end, it is evident that a greater than they has done so." I. W. L.

— Boston Transcript p8 N 15 '22 900w

Cleveland p91 D '22

"The volume fulfils its purpose for those who will find in the rise of Letty Gravely a vicarious satisfaction of their own desires to marry a prince, even such a temperamental prince as Allerton."

Lit R p228 N 18 '22 360w

"It is a story as sugary as it is improbable, which reads more like a 'movie' scenario than anything else, and a 'movie' scenario based on a firm conviction that audiences are for the most part made up of persons of deficient mentality."

— N Y Times p22 O 29 '22 350w

"An appealing, interesting story, though a very improbable one."

+ — Springfield Republican p7a D 24 '22 420w

KINROSS, ALBERT. Truth about Vignolles. 375p il $1.90 Century

22-9195

In each of these six rather long short stories the central figure is the same, a man who has lived a full life and seen many lands and adventures. In the title tale Vignolles takes his part, disguised as a camel driver, in the Mesopotamian campaign. In two of the episodes he is a young and romantic figure having his adventure of love, now with a lady of the harem, now with an English society girl. In the last tale he appears as an involuntary war profiteer taking a place near London, advertising for a widow and children to live with him and fill his house, and trying out different sets of applicants. Interesting and happy results follow his finding of the right ones. Contents: The truth about Vignolles; Forbidden fruit; An honest living; Eve Damer; Behind the lines; The profiteer.

Booklist 18:331 Je '22

"We advise you to read about Vignolles. It is much the best set of short stories that has been published for many a year. The author has touched Egypt and the West Indies with a glamor which is unique and appealing. There is more beef, iron and wine in his style than in most of the "Short Stories of 1922." D. F. G.

KINROSS, ALBERT—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 20 '22 400w
Cleveland p86 N '22

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 108:588 J1 8 '22 500w

"Those narratives mark the author as a craftsman of more than ordinary ability." J. R. Gousha

+ Lit R p30 S 16 '22 600w

"Here is a book written by a man who loves to write, and who knows how to write. By a man who is deeply interested in his fellow-men, and anxious to get them and the various interests and emotions clear before you. By a man who has the sense of adventure, the flair for romance, who enjoys the unusual, and who has experienced it." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p2 My 7 '22 680w

Outlook 131:428 J1 5 '22 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 14 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 14 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 J1 '22

KITCHIN, FREDERICK HARCOURT (BEN-NET COPPLESTONE, pseud.). Treasure of Golden Cap; a romance of West Dorset. 310p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Murray]

While spending their holidays in Dorsetshire, Dickie and his sister Betty befriend an old sea tramp who leaves them a sea-chest said to have belonged to his pirate ancestors. Beneath a fake bottom they discover some manuscripts which prove to be the logs of a certain Richard Nutt who had been the captain of the "Wild Swan" of Abbotbury in the seventeenth century. The doings of this old sea dog and his Breton wife Marie form an entertaining and exciting second part of the book. In his log Nutt tells of hidden treasure under a house in Golden Cap and the closing chapters of the story relate how Dickie and Betty set out to find the buried treasure and the adventures that befall them.

"There is a fresh air of sea blowing through the book and a style direct, yet vivacious."

+ Lit R p355 D 30 '22 400w

"The tale is unique among stories of buried treasure, for it is original in theme and in the manner of its telling, while in its dénouement it provides a climax that is unsuspected and awesome and surely quite new as an outcome of treasure quests."

+ N Y Times p17 D 10 '22 150w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p21 D 31 '22 300w

Outlook 133:101 Ja 10 '23 110w

Sat R 134:556 O 14 '22 60w

"The whole book has the tonic effect of salt water and Mr. Copplestone has a very happy way of linking up old and new romance."

+ Spec 129:771 N 25 '22 80w

"So vigorous and refreshingly original are the characters of Richard Nutt, the seventeenth-century sea rover, and his Breton wife that we could have done with a good deal more about them and with less of the people who discovered their history three hundred years later."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p650 O 12 '22 210w

KLINKMANN, FLORA (MRS E. HENDERSON-SMITH). Trail of the ragged robin. 312p $2.50 Stokes [7s Religious tract soc.]

828

(Eng ed 22-21212)

The author of the "Flower-patch among the hills" (Book Review Digest, 1917) writes again of her "Flower-patch" in the valley of the Wye and of a spring holiday which she spent there. Like her earlier book the story is a mingling of amusing human experiences, appreciation of nature, and gossip about her neighbors.

"There is much delightful and somewhat irrelevant anecdote. A stimulant to the nature lover, and even to the nature hater a suggestion, fraught with warning, that the joys which he despises may be worth while after all."

+ Lit R p166 O 28 '22 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:590 D '22

"Her humour seems a little forced, and her characterization not a little exaggerated. But the fact remains that she amuses us, and if she lacks the penetrating wit of another literary lady, noted for rejoicing less in hospitality than in gardening activities, she is superior in that good-humoured tolerance which human nature imperatively demands as its daily food. The sporadic passages dedicated to religion are, we suppose, a seemingly tribute to the auspices under which the book appears."

— + Sat R 132:720 D 24 '21 150w

KNIGHT, C. W. R. Wild life in the tree tops. 141p il $5 Doran [21s T. Butterworth]

598.2 Birds—Habits and behavior. Photography of birds (Eng ed 22-11608)

By dint of extraordinary caution and patience the author was able to make these studies of the habits of some of the shyest of birds and a few mammals who inhabit the upper branches of the trees and to obtain some remarkable photographs. He writes of rooks, buzzards, owls, herons, hawks, woodpeckers, kestrels, crows and sparrow hawks as intimately as if their nests were easily accessible. There is a chapter on the behavior of birds whose nests were under artillery fire during the war. Observations showed that birds along the firing line continued to build their nests and rear their broods as long as there were trees to build in.

"Many persons will not admire the author's penchant for the hawk tribe, but it is undoubtedly true that no others of the large variety of birds offer more absorbing details of study at high altitudes, even though the trouble of securing good photographs is exasperating." E. P. H.

Boston Transcript p4 J1 15 '22 700w

"The value of the photographs is great; the writer of the text is a born naturalist. A most delightful book for young or old."

+ New Statesman 20:supviii D 2 '22 40w

"As might be expected from so indefatigable a worker, the notes which accompany these photographs abound in valuable and interesting details concerning the lives and habits of these dwellers in the tree tops."

+ N Y Times p15 J1 2 '22 420w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:491 N '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p817 D 8 '21 500w

Wis Lib Bul 19:22 Ja '23

KNIGHT, EDGAR WALLACE. Public education in the South. 482p $2 Ginn

379.75 Education—United States—South 22-10623

"The first general survey yet published in a single volume of the growth of public educational organization and practices in those eleven States which formed the Confederacy. The study seeks to trace the development of the democratic principles of education in the South, to explain their apparently slow application or practical acceptance, and to point out from the past certain valuable lessons for the educational problems of the present. The book has been prepared for the purpose of assisting the teacher, the educational administrator, and the public to a more intelligent understanding of the present educational situation in the Southern States. Another purpose has been to make accessible to the student and the teacher certain valuable but scattered and more or less inaccessible materials on the educational history of the Southern States."—Preface

"A striking and able presentation of the trend of educational movement in the South today. Professor Knight is a vigorous crusader for progressive advance in education; but in the writing of this book he has not permitted his critical vision to be warped either by a sense of loyalty to his native section or by a Babbittic desire to put the best foot foremost. . . . The book is valuable for the new sources of information which the author has tapped." Archibald Henderson
+ N Y Times p19 D 24 '22 600w

KNIPE, EMILIE (BENSON) (MRS ALDEN ARTHUR KNIPE), and KNIPE, ALDEN ARTHUR. Flower of fortune. 354p $1.75 Century
22-17942

A story for older boys and girls, with New York city just after it had been taken from the Dutch for a background. Judith Van Taarl, at the age of sixteen, is left an orphan, and at her father's dying request, takes charge of his large import business. In disposing of some stocks she finds a friend in Salvador Dacosta, a Portuguese Jew, who tells her how to get word to him if she ever needs him. Every one in New York thinks Judith is immensely wealthy, but she knows that only strict economy and the sale of a precious tulip of a strange variety will enable her to meet her obligations. Word of the tulip's value gets noised about and it is stolen. After many mishaps and with the aid of her friend Dacosta, the tulip is found safe, and Judith's happiness assured.

Lit R p207 N 11 '22 120w

Reviewed by M. H. B. Mussey
Nation 115:sup619 D 6 '22 60w

KNOX, SIR ALFRED WILLIAM FORTESCUE. With the Russian army, 1914-1917. 2v 368; 373-760p il $15 Dutton [36s Hutchinson]

940.41 European war—Russia. European war—Campaigns and battles—Eastern front (Eng ed 22-1222)

The author, a British officer, served previous to the war as military attaché to the British embassy at Petrograd and during the war as liaison officer at the front. His narrative covers the period from Tannenberg to the Bolshevik coup d'état in 1917, and forms a history of the Russian military operations. It is one of the few books to deal with the war on its eastern front. The text consists of a diary, supplemented by further explanatory matter obtained from Russian sources or from other British officers and by afternotes at the end of many of the chapters. There are numerous illustrations, sketch maps on which operations can be easily followed, and an index.

"Much in these volumes is of great technical interest to the trained military man. Operations are described by a sound military technician and much of the matter therein contained must be read with the intelligent scrutiny of the mind schooled to think along those lines. Yet although the structure of the book is technical it has so much of genuine interest to the ordinary reader that it cannot be set down as a book merely for military perusal. These volumes are of immediate interest. Certainly they are of permanent value." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p8 My 6 '22 840w

Reviewed by J. B. Walker

+ Lit R p65 S 30 '22 940w

"General Knox makes the impression of a thoroughly unimaginative military specialist. While able to put his finger on the many weak points in Russian military organization, to analyze the reasons for the disastrous defeats of the Russian armies on the eastern front, a development like a social revolution, which is not discussed in military staff colleges, leaves him floundering in perplexity and futile rage." W. H. Chamberlin

— New Repub 31:56 Je 7 '22 110w

"A book which, to all students of Russia in the Great War and the early days of her revolution, must prove of permanent interest. The reason for this is that General Knox has had no axe to grind and no personal failure to justify. A highly educated soldier, and an acute observer with a keen sense of humour, he has produced a record of events in which is unrolled before us the picture of the most stupendous tragedy in modern history."

+ New Statesman 18:599 F 25 '22 900w

Outlook 131:41 My 3 '22 100w

St Louis 20:128 Je '22

"By far the best book on the war from the Russian side. Though not a complete history of the Russian campaigns, is a first-hand authority for salient and typical episodes."

+ Spec 127:709 N 26 '21 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p759 N 24 '21 1950w

KOLNAI, AUREL. Psychoanalysis and sociology; tr. by Eden and Cedar Paul. 185p $2.25 Harcourt [7s 6d Allen & U.]

301 Social psychology. Psychoanalysis. Communism 22-12769

The author holds that, altho the primary aim and methods of psychoanalysis must always remain those of individual psychology and cannot aspire to a dominant role in sociology, psychoanalysis can yet render valuable and almost indispensable service. He asks and tentatively answers the questions: What is the nature of the parallelism between the individual and society, and within what limits does that parallelism exist? In what social movements is it most conspicuous? What is the value of analogies between individual psychoses and social psychosis? Can we from these analogies draw conclusions which would be useful for therapeutic purposes? The social complex involved in anarchist communism is given a lengthy consideration from a psychoanalytic point of view. The book is in two parts: Sociological results of psychoanalysis; Sociological tasks of psychoanalysis. A glossary of terms is added.

Int J Ethics 32:340 Ap '22 70w

St Louis 20:87 My '22

"Is valuable, even if only because it may initiate investigation. Unfortunately, although the book shows a very extensive knowledge of the writers on psycho-analysis, those on social theory, except Durkheim, are hardly mentioned. In consequence, the conceptions of social structure and custom it contains seem to be too crude and too few."

+ Sat R 132:120 Jl 23 '21 500w

Survey 48:86 Ap 15 '22 150w

KORFF, SERGIEI ALEKSANDROVICH, baron. Russia's foreign relations during the last half century. (Institute of politics publications, Williams college, Williamstown, Mass.) 227p $2.25 (10s 6d) Macmillan

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics and government 22-2896

The book is based on a course of lectures delivered at Williams college, Williamstown, Massachusetts, under the auspices of the Institute of politics. It is thruout an arraignment of secret diplomacy which makes foreign affairs dependent on the personalities at the head of states rather than on democracies and public opinion. The modern tangle of European affairs, the author holds, can be little understood if one does not know or consider Russia's foreign relations. Beginning with the Berlin congress of 1876 he describes these relations with France, England, China, Japan, Austria-Hungary, the Balkan states, Germany and Sweden. Index.

"The book is written with serene impartiality, moderation, and freedom from patriotic rancor or prejudice. On the other hand, a fair number of errors have crept into the volume." R. H. L.

+ Am Hist R 28:120 O '22 760w

KORFF, S. A.—Continued

"The treatment is very clear and direct. Little is mentioned that can be considered new, but the point of view gives freshness of interest." A. H. Lybber

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:695 N '22 680w
Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '22 620w
Freeman 5:406 J1 5 '22 270w

"We do not think the reader can find a more lucid, authoritative, and impartial description of Russia's foreign relations summarized in so short a space than that given in Baron Korff's valuable work. In a few striking words he portrays the characters of many leading Russian statesmen." Alexander Nazaroff

+ Lit R p885 Ag 19 '22 700w

"An excellently informed account of Russia's relations with her European and Asiatic neighbors during the past generation throws a flood of light upon the causation of the war. It is, however, strange that he should shirk, as he does, the heavy responsibility which history will certainly place upon Russia for the critical act of mobilization which was the known and pre-concerted signal for the conflagration." J. A. Hobson

+ — Nation 115:sup380 O 11 '22 250w

"Baron Korff occasionally almost touches the fringe of reality. He even mentions the 'brilliant' work of Kautsky and Professor Fay, but he ignores more important materials that were available when he gave his lectures, materials which make his story of questionable value, where it is not merely ancient history or homily. When Baron Korff becomes oracular, he is frequently quite inadequate." C. A. Beard

— New Repub 30:144 Mr 29 '22 300w

"For those who are unacquainted with modern diplomatic history, it should be, within limits, a serviceable handbook. He shows neither knowledge nor recognition of what revolutionary Russia has accomplished, and has no broad notion of basic reform. Still, the measure of liberalism in his tentative suggestions is quite useful."

+ — New Statesman 19:276 Je 10 '22 360w
R of Rs 65:670 Je '22 100w
St Louis 20:120 Je '22

"These lectures are by no means uninteresting, but the well-informed reader will see that they are written not always in a judicial or impartial spirit, and that some of their conclusions can be accepted only with reserve or not accepted at all."

+ — Sat R 134:219 Ag 5 '22 180w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 11 '22 70w

KOZMINSKY, ISIDORE. Magic and science of jewels and stones. 434p il $4.50 (22s 6d) Putnam

553.8 Gems. Precious stones. Charms 22-3636

The author attempts to show that there is a true bond between modern science and the ancient and occult philosophy of the precious, semi-precious and common stones of the earth; that some of the old superstitions are but cunningly concealed truths and that the heavenly bodies may indeed influence and enter into relation with terrestrial substances. He attributes the belief in the talismanic magic of jewels to the fact that color is vibration and that the life of the stone communicates itself thru vibratory action. We are shown the importance of precious stones in ancient ritual and sacerdotal garments, the part they played in astrology, the old legends and mythologies, and some of the historic gems are enumerated and described. The book contains many color plates and other illustrations.

"The book is a genuine mine of information on everything in regard to ancient and modern precious stones."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 29 '22 220w

"With the knowledge of a scholar and the enthusiasm of an amateur the author has compiled a book of scientific information and superstitious lore about one of the most fascinating, beautiful, and useless subjects in the world." E. L. Pearson

+ — Ind 108:201 F 25 '22 140w

"The book is a singularly interesting miscellany of legend, anecdote, Quabalistic lore, ancient and mediæval, with occasional excursions into the Australian and Maori folk magic. The author dips into the vast ocean of the occult and fishes up an extraordinary catch; which, however, can hardly be called critically arranged or comprehensive. Mr. Kozminsky's process of selection is not very evident and some of his statements need a little critical modification to be accurate, but it is all immensely entertaining."

+ — Lit R p495 Mr 11 '22 300w
N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:21 Ap '22

"Although the book offers much that may interest the general reader, there are quite a number of errors of various kinds, more especially in the chapter treating of diamonds." G. F. Kunz

+ — N Y Times p26 D 24 '22 1150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:466 N '22

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 26 '22 190w

"A concise and comprehensive compendium." + The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 8 '22 50w

KRABBE, HUGO. Modern idea of the state; auth. tr. with an introd. by George H. Sabine and Walter J. Shepard. 281p $4 (16s) Appleton 320.1 State. The. Political science 22-22685

"The work of Professor Krabbe which is here presented in translation is a notable effort both to show the insufficiencies of current political theory and to outline the new form which political relationships are assuming. His criticisms are directed at the fundamental conceptions of accepted theory and they portend a radical reconstruction of theory in the light of changes which are visibly taking place in contemporary politics. His theory makes no pretense to finality or even to completeness. In its main features it is in accord with the criticism of the state by other scholars."—Translator's introd.

"The translation is happily done and its makers deserve special praise for avoiding the atrocities often unwittingly committed by linguists who are innocent of the vocabulary or concepts of jurisprudence, politics and philosophy. The industrious translators have somewhat less happily prefixed an extended introduction to Professor Krabbe's work. In the main this is a running interpretation of the author's work, but it is difficult at times to know whether the preface is intended as a free interpretation of Krabbe or as the independent views of Sabine and Shepard." C: E. Merriam

+ — Am Pol Sci R 16:711 N '22 410w
Booklist 19:69 D '22
Cleveland p73 S '22

"I should like to draw attention to the clear and useful introduction the translators have prefixed to Professor Krabbe's work. Broadly it constitutes an excellent summary of the main currents of opinion in modern politics. It makes, I think, a shade too much of the influence of Bodin, and Rousseau needs a somewhat larger place. But the preface is a model of concise statement, and it deserves to be widely read for its own great merit." H. J. Laski

New Repub 32:203 O 18 '22 520w

KRAUSE, LOUISE BEERSTECHE. Better business libraries; talks with executives. 98p $1.30 Indexers press, 5526 S. Park Av., Chicago

026 Business libraries 22-3560

The author, who is librarian of Byllesby & Co., Chicago, addresses the talks in this little book to business executives. She explains the value of business libraries and their function in the organization they serve; gives advice about the selection of librarian and books; lists and describes the various indexes, financial and trade services and government publications useful in business libraries; and considers the arrangement of material for effective use.

Booklist 18:259 My '22

Pratt p6 autumn '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:178 J1 '22

KYNE, PETER BERNARD. Cappy Ricks retires; but that doesn't keep him from coming back stronger than ever. 442p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

22-17149

It is the same Cappy Ricks that has figured in previous books by the author as president of the Blue Star navigation company. The present volume is a succession of tales of his wonderful doings—after each retirement. There is still no limit to his daring. He still outwits his friends without a qualm and makes it up to them afterward. He always profits by his own mistakes. He makes matches with foxy glee. He is a queer mixture of penuriousness and lavish generosity. So far is he from retiring that he finally plans and personally takes part in a submarine expedition against a German submarine and carries it off successfully.

Booklist 19:54 N '22

"Mr. Kyne's characters in his 'Cappy Ricks' series may not be drawn with depth, but he does know how to tell good stories, alike exciting and amusing, and in 'Cappy Ricks Retires' comes up to his standard."

Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '22 290w

Cleveland p92 D '22

"'Cappy Ricks Retires' contains some of the best of the Cappy Ricks stories; which is saying a great deal for it."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 S 24 '22 260w

Lit R p33 S 16 '22 420w

"In Cappy Ricks, Mr. Kyne has given us a character who may or may not rank among the immortals in literature, but who has certainly won a host of friends and is destined to win a great many more. May his final retirement be long delayed."

+ N Y Times p5 S 3 '22 450w

"The first part of this book is one of the liveliest sea tales of the war ever written."

+ Outlook 132:674 D 13 '22 30w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:461 N '22

Pratt p36 autumn '22

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 330w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p618 S 28 '22 100w

L

LAGERLOF, SELMA OTTILIANA LOVISA. Outcast; tr. from the Swedish by W. Worster. 297p $1.90 Doubleday [8s 6d Gyldendal]

22-5456

Sven Elversson had been a member of an arctic exploring party which, driven to extremities of hunger, had tasted human flesh. He comes back to Sweden with this shame resting upon him, tho in reality he is innocent of the charge. One woman only beside his mother, the lovely Sigrun, wife of the pastor of Applum, puts her faith in him. For the contempt Sven suffers he shows in return a Christlike patience and charity, and moves among the people of the 'hard little self-righteous community, helping the poor and sick and sinning. Even the jealous, overbearing pastor is won over by Sven's humility and gentleness. The climax is reached in the last chapter when the pastor preaches over the graves of the poor seamen whom the fishermen had found enmeshed in their nets or swept ashore after the great fight in the North sea. His words sum up the gospel of the story, which is the sacredness of human life, the high service of ministering to it and of keeping it a good and noble thing. By inference the story is a preachment against war and a plea that the taking of life should be held even more abhorrent than the desecration of the dead.

"Only a large simplicity such as Selma Lagerlöf possesses, could give reality to a theme like that of 'The Outcast.' It needs moreover a simple people such as the Swedish folk she pictures, a people still concerned with primary sensations like the difference between right and wrong, between the forgivable and the unforgivable sins, and with the force and singleness of aim to carry out their convictions. Strong emotions, undoubtedly sweep away complexities, and it is only with strong primitive emotions that the book concerns itself. It is unquestionably the most powerful of all Selma Lagerlöf's novels." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '22 1050w

"It is a novel with height, breadth, and depth, but it lacks magic—a quality one can demand only of the greatest. The Outcast is a book with a mission; it is art with a moral, in other words diluted."

+ Dial 73:112 J1 '22 70w

"There are passages in it which recall the homely strength and simplicity of the old Icelandic sagas. There is an unfortunate strain here; too much is made of our instincts. Nor was it necessary to disprove the charge, so far as the hero was concerned, at a sentimental last moment."

+ Dial 73:354 S '22 180w

"By implication a scathing arraignment of the artificiality of modern social and Christian conventions, the book never by direction, stoops to preachment. Rather, it insinuates its doctrines into your consciousness. Whatever thesis it presents is an inherent part of a well-told narrative, interesting of itself, and distinctly worth the telling." C. A. Hibbard

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 S 3 '22 260w

"It is an event not because of the date of its action but by reason of the ingenuity displayed in telling the tale. The war could have been left out of it entirely and the loss would have been slight indeed. Selma Lagerlöf has motivated a climax in the last three chapters as grand as any the writer knows." A. W. Porterfield

+ Lit R p560 Ap 8 '22 680w

"The opening chapters are powerfully dramatic, too much so, one feels, for the level to be able to be kept up. Throughout the first part of the book she grips us with as strong a hold as in the best of her work. The style, even in translation, is clean and virile, the characters live and breathe without undue description. Thereafter, though, the tempo changes, and events are harnessed into sequence with too little regard for their probability to be convincing." B. U. Burke

+ Nation 113:734 D 21 '21 740w

"She has swamped her theme in propaganda; but even if she had not, is it manageable? And as for the treatment, Miss Lagerlöf's is kaleidoscopic." Edith Rickert

+ New Repub 31:194 J1 12 '22 250w

"It is not often that we are given a novel into whose making has gone a high imagination; neither a novel nor any other piece of art. It is imagination that Miss Lagerlöf possesses, and we feel it as we read her, even as we feel the rare quality of mountain air when we are high in the great mountains. It is exhilarating, exciting. Like the mountains, her books give us to see far. To miss reading her is to miss not only a great book, but a great experience." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 12 '22 1150w

"A tale original almost to the point of eccentricity, racial almost to excess in its coloring and its emotional tone, simple almost to the verge of childishness in its 'plot' and in its choice of incidents, which binds together materials the most rich and diverse, implications the most varied and profound, making of them one convincing and satisfying whole."

LAGERLOF, S. O. L.—Continued

+ No Am 215:711 My '22 1950w

"Has a theme that is horrible, yet is treated so tenderly as not to seem ghoulsh." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 131:74 My 10 '22 480w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:461 N '22

"Although a didactic tale, it is written with real art and rare emotional sincerity." E. G.

+ — Spring'd Republican p9a Je 26 '21 450w
 (Reprinted from the Manchester Guardian)

"The present volume is, if possible, an improvement on her earlier novels, and that is saying a good deal. . . Miss Lagerlof has written a story of simple lives hedged round with dramatic circumstance; of a right, royal soul willing to be anathema, but yearning to be helpful to other troubled souls; of prejudice conquered by goodness; and of jealousy, selfishness incarnate, routed by love. It does not need the name of its talented author to boost it to a pedestal among the books of the year."

+ Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 16 '22 620w

"Selma Lagerlöf has not the courage of her own conception. All through the book the reader suspects what is revealed at the very end—namely, that Sven Elverson did not taste human flesh after all. We are afraid that the gentle soul of Selma Lagerlöf is constituted too tenderly to deal with the problem of cannibalism. . . It seems to us that a writer of undoubted genius has mistaken the range of her powers."

—The Times [London] Lit Sup p875 D 23 '20 950w

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

LAING, BERTRAM M. Study in moral prob-
 2 lems. 279p $3.25 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen & U.]
 171 Ethics

"Mr. Laing regards religious and moral ideas as products of civilization and not as its sources, or causes. Moral values emerge when their conditions are fulfilled. What is wanted, Mr. Laing tells us, is not values but explanations; what we must rely on, if we are to save society, is not aspirations and good will, but control of conditions; not because man is deceitful and desperately wicked, but because he is human, in process of evolution, struggling for existence, with needs which take precedence of all moral categorical imperatives. Natural processes are the means by which moral ends are to be achieved, and it is natural processes which will prevent their achievement if they are not achieved. What has to be attained, therefore, is human control of natural processes."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p2 N 29 '22 650w

"Within its limitations, the book has many merits. Against the views which it rejects it gives, as a rule, good grounds; and the views which it advocates are, on almost all points, enlightened and rational." Bertrand Russell

+ — Dial 73:677 D '22 1450w

Int J Ethics 33:224 Ja '23 250w

"Mr. Laing's book is one of the right kind; indeed, in many ways it is quite excellent. His two most valuable qualities as an ethicist are a determination to dig down to first causes and a close adherence to practical issues. . . His book is in our opinion one of quite unusual value. He has succeeded in confining the problem of morality strictly to the real and practical, so that with him morality is always a science in the real sense and not, as it so often is, an uncomfortable and shaky edifice of personal moralizing and vague metaphysics."

+ Spec 129:556 O 21 '22 1300w

"The book is very ably written. The author expounds his own view with steady purpose and without ever turning aside to criticize in detail the moral theories with which he disagrees. His aim is to define the necessary conditions of a science of ethics, and he turns down all high-sounding but vague generalizations, and he will allow no mystic value to attach to reason."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p625 O 5 '22 1350w

LAING, JANET. Wintergreen; a tale of the reconstruction. 303p $1.75 Century [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-16603

"A good servant is a distinct treasure, and one is rarely privileged in these days to meet a cook of such general excellence as 'Wintergreen,' the worthy Scotch spinster who, impelled by a diminished income and an importunate admirer, leaves home to become house-keeper for a young married couple whose affairs, with the help of assiduous gossip, have become sadly tangled, while another pair of lovers seem hopelessly at odds. How she, as the 'angel in the house,' finally solves the ingeniously prolonged misunderstandings and restores the loving couples, properly assorted, to each other's arms, is the theme of Janet Laing's little comedy."—Lit R

Booklist 19:54 N '22

Cleveland p91 D '22

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:311 N 25 '22 220w

"It is not profound, but fresh and pleasant, and should give its readers several amusing hours."

+ Lit R p52 S 23 '22 120w

"The little tale is entertaining, and several of its characters are well sketched, while the accounts of the social life in the village of Cauldstanes are amusing. But the author has not succeeded in sustaining the whimsical key of her narrative. At times her touch is heavy, and the denouement, visible to the reader almost from the beginning, is too long postponed."

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 27 '22 350w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"It has a fairly fresh setting, its impending tragedies are discounted by the reader as certain not to occur; there is a generous touch of comedy, and through it all moves 'Wintergreen' serenely, resolutely intending not to get mixed up in other people's troubles, but continually being drawn into them with beneficent results."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a O 15 '22 360w

LAKE, KIRSOPP. Immortality and the modern mind. 51p $1 Harvard univ. press

237 Immortality

22-11187

"The Ingersoll Lecture of 1922, by a theologian who, practically as honest as an atheist, can find no argument for the survival of individuality but who finds human consolation in the belief that Life outlasts Living and Thought outlasts Thinking."—Nation

Cath World 115:827 S '22 1050w

"He is merely another example of a certain detached group which to-day, because of certain truly deplorable features of Western life, despises all Western culture since Athens, and longs for the excessive mysticism of Asia. When, however, he asserts that 'the modern mind,' shares his indifference to, and even distaste for, immortality of a personal sort, one has a right to be a little impatient." B. I. B.

— Freeman 6:117 O 11 '22 800w

J Religion 2:657 N '22 50w

Nation 115:22 Jl 5 '22 40w

Pratt p7 winter '23

"Prof. Lake employs his exacting scholarship to provide a setting for an austere, yet essentially humanistic idea, which is clearly and engagingly expressed."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 My 30 '22 600w

LAMPREY, LOUISE. Days of the colonists. (Great days in American history ser.) 284p il $2.50 Stokes 22-20540

The book is a collection of short stories from American colonial history, pleasantly blending fact and fancy and arranged chronologically, beginning with the Captain Smith episode and ending with the ringing of the Liberty bell. The stories cover important facts in the development of the different colonies and at the same time bring out the human side of the story, especially the life of boys and girls in colonial days.

Booklist 19:91 D '22

Cleveland p96 D '22

"The stories are well written and the book is thoroughly delightful."

+ Lit R p209 N 11 '22 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:612 D '22

"Miss Lamprey has availed herself of unhackneyed material, or has presented incidents from new material. All her stories are told so dramatically, and her descriptive settings are so vivid that the stories taken together form a good continuous narrative of colonial days."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 120w

LANDAU-ALDANOV, M. A. Lenin; auth. tr. from the French by Beatrice Sorchan. 241p $3 Dutton

B or $2 Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ulyanoff). Russia—History—Revolution, 1917. Socialism 22-5391

The book has a two-fold purpose: first, to study the career of Lenin, his personality, his writings and his philosophical ideas; second, to study the idea of a communist revolution. In working out his second purpose, which is also his principal one, the author examines the theories of Marx, Bakunin and Sorel, the fundamental ideas of Bolshevism, and the socialism of Jean Jaurès. The author is himself a socialist, but at the same time a counter-revolutionist. He believes that "no man, not even Nicholas II, has done Russia more harm" than Lenin, and sees as the final result of his policies "the lasting hatred of the Russian masses for everything socialistic."

Am Pol Sci R 16:523 Ag '22 80w

"Is Lenin a great leader or is he but another pretender? No one as yet appears to be able to assert with authority the true nature and ability of this man of the hour. M. Landau-Aldanov does not in the least clear up the question. His book does not give even the facts of his life in close and connected detail." C. K. H.

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '22 1050w
"The translator has done his work smoothly and well."

Daily News Rec p14 Je 26 '22 480w

Reviewed by J. Macy

— Freeman 5:92 Ap 5 '22 1300w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:201 F 25 '22 260w

"The study is based on carefully selected documents derived mostly from Bolshevik sources, and this makes it a valuable contribution to historical science, lifting it high above the level of political pamphlets piled up on today's book market." Alexander Nazareff

+ Lit R p524 Mr 25 '22 340w

"There is little historical or psychological merit in M. Landau-Aldanov's venomous biographical dissection of Lenin. The author is careless in his choice of material, setting down gossip anecdotes current in emigré circles, which would probably not stand any very searching tests of historical validity." W. H. Chamberlin

— New Repub 31:56 Je 7 '22 80w

"A searching analysis, both illuminating and interesting. The proofs have not been revised carefully and the book abounds in typographical errors, particularly in the Russian names." Herman Bernstein

+ — N Y Times p3 JI 9 '22 3250w

"This may be a true picture; we suspect that there is a large measure of truth in it. But no one, not even the author, would claim for it that it is unprejudiced."

— + Outlook 131:499 JI 19 '22 270w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:366 JI '22

LANE, FRANKLIN KNIGHT. Letters of Franklin K. Lane; personal and political; ed. by Anne Wintermute Lane and Louise Herrick Wall. 473p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 European war, 1914-1919—United States 22-20894

In these letters, supplemented by an introductory sketch and connecting matter, is contained the record of the life and friendships of the Secretary of the Interior during the Wilson administration. Much of the book is concerned with the inner history of that period, with Cabinet talk and war plans, and with his opinions about men and policies. Like Walter H. Page whose letters these so shortly follow Mr Lane had, as he expressed it "an old-fashioned love for writing from day to day what pops into my mind, contradicting each day what I said the day before and gathering from my friends their impressions and their spirit in the same way." They are intensely human letters. He sat down at any odd moment to write to his brother or a friend the thoughts which raced thru his mind or to express his irritation after an unsatisfactory Cabinet meeting. He wrote frankly, but never in bitterness and his letters are full of his love for and dependence upon his friends. At times he reveals his innermost thoughts and questionings about life and faith and immortality.

"They are of permanent value as a narrative of cabinet discussions at Washington during the World War. All Mr. Lane's letters are interesting and they cover a wide range. He had a constructive mind, an unusual breadth of interest and a capacity for writing as though he were merely carrying on a conversation. The reader will lay down this book with a conviction that Secretary Lane was a bigger, broader and more versatile man than the country realized during his term of office."

+ Am Pol Sci R 17:139 F '22 200w

"The historical value of these letters is undeniably great, but it is not for this reason that they will be widely read and enjoyed. The chief appeal of Mr Lane's letters is their cogency of expression, their vividness, and their high literary distinction. Therein this book is hardly surpassed by any of our war memoirs." W. B. Munro

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf D '22 550w

Booklist 19:82 D '22

Reviewed by M. F. Egan

Bookm 56:623 Ja '23 350w

"The letters constitute a human document, and the important events of which he writes are of less interest than the personality through which they are recorded."

+ Cath World 116:556 Ja '23 800w

Cleveland p95 D '22

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

Freeman 6:379 D 27 '22 1100w

"Should he read for the revelation of the man—a noble American, a politician who thought, a party man who was too humorous to be a partisan." E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:310 N 25 '22 270w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p36 D '22 50w

"It is a series of letters at the close of this book that makes it a genuine human document of far more interest than the scattered bits of history and of political gossip that can be found in its earlier pages." S. C. Chew

Nation 115:582 N 29 '22 1400w

Reviewed by Robert Herrick

+ New Repub 33:17 D 6 '22 1500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:29 Ja '23

Pratt p34 winter '23

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

LANE, FRANKLIN KNIGHT—Continued

"That the 'Letters of Franklin K. Lane' should be filled with the history of war-time administration is to be expected by all who knew Mr Lane only through reputation. It will probably be a surprise to some who did not know him personally to find with what vividness and brilliancy he often commented on subjects outside the field of politics."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 O 21 '22 300w

LANGA-LANGA, pseud. Up against it in Nigeria. 244p il $5 Dutton [18s Allen & U.] 916.7 Nigeria

These reminiscences of ten years of service in West Africa take no note of questions of administration but are intended to give "a reasonable picture of the life of the average political officer in its essential features in this country as it was, is, and, in spite of the railway and political memoranda, ever shall be." (Preface) The picture shows a life of hardship, relieved by no considerations on the part of the government, for the comforts of the officials.

"In the main Langa-Langa's jottings are sufficiently diverting, if they scarcely give that 'reasonable picture of the life of the average Political Officer' claimed for them in the preface."

+ Nation and Ath 30:833 Mr 4 '22 750w

"A lively and entertaining account. Conversational and informal to a degree, the narrative by its naïveté and humor justifies the plentiful use of the personal pronoun."

+ Outlook 132:254 O 11 '22 40w

"The author of this very readable book draws a lively and lifelike picture of the work of a political officer in Nigeria. The author seems to understand the native mind very well, and writes about it with sympathy as well as humour."

+ Sat R 133:68 Ja 21 '22 400w

Spec 128:120 Ja 28 '22 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 19 '22 1050w

LANIER, HENRY WYSHAM. Century of banking in New York, 1822-1922. 335p il $3 Doran

974.71 New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Biography. Banks and banking—New York (city)

This history of the banking and financial life of New York city begins with the year of the great yellow fever epidemic when terror-stricken New Yorkers fled the city to Greenwich, taking their banks, offices and stores with them and making of the little village a veritable boom town. The book is not exclusively financial and is full of interesting historical material including facsimiles, reproductions of old prints, biographical lists of New York's rich men of the Dutch and the English period, and of 1822. It also contains a photographic facsimile of an old pamphlet giving a list of wealthy citizens, with both the amount of their estimated wealth and biographical notes. The volume had its origin in a plan to commemorate the centenary of the Farmers' loan and trust company to the record of which the last two chapters are devoted.

"Very much more than the title suggests, is this book a history of New York City itself for the years from 1822 to 1922. It certainly contains interest for almost any kind of reader." Hilary Rogers

+ Daily News Rec p33 S 12 '22 1300w

Nation 115:444 O 25 '22 30w

"The story of banking in New York City is the material out of which the author has constructed a panoramic moving picture of the life of the city during a hundred years that is gay with its gayeties, sombre with its tragedies; that is constantly vital with the sense of human action and human emotion, and genially and amusedly tolerant with the frequent evidences of human foibles and frailties and delinquencies. The work is particularly well written."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 26 '22 1900w

R of Rs 65:447 Ap '22 230w

"The author is a son of Sidney Lanier, the poet. He brings to the task a sense of the picturesque and a gracious appreciation of the past, qualities needed to impart general interest to a work of this type. Instead of producing an economic study, he has compiled a book largely of antiquarian flavor, reinforced by excellent illustrations."

+ Spring'd Republican p13a Mr 12 '22 920w

LAPP, JOHN AUGUSTUS. Economics and the community. 366p il $1.75 Century

330 Economics. United States—Economic conditions 22-6125

"The purpose of the author has been to present in simple and direct form what the high-school student, the future citizen, should know about economics. The book is intended for use as a textbook in beginning courses, the object being not only to give instruction in economic principles but also to apply the theory to everyday affairs. The twenty-two chapters of the book are devoted to discussions of such subjects as 'Competition and Monopoly,' 'Value and Price,' 'Money,' 'Banking,' 'Insurance,' 'Savings and Investment,' and 'Taxation.' In presenting the material the author uses the following plan. Each chapter is preceded by an assignment for the preliminary gathering of local data which might be termed a community survey of the subject under consideration. Following this the author discusses each of the main topics of the subject. At the close of the chapter he gives a list of questions which the student should be able to answer and suggests further readings."—School R

Booklist 19:8 O '22

"A practical book such as this, devoid of technicalities and devoid as well of discussions of perplexing political theories, cannot fail to find a high place."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '22 390w

"The work is objective and realistic throughout. The text is simply written, without being diluted, and succeeds in giving the reader a surprisingly clear notion of economic life."

+ Lit R p355 D 30 '22 70w

"The book is written in language easily understood by students of the junior high school. The subjects discussed should interest the students if the teacher will connect them with their activities by following out the preliminary assignments." James Vaughn

+ School R 30:477 Je '22 350w

Survey 48:123 Ap 22 '22 110w

Wis Lib Bul 18:179 Jl '22

LARMINIE, MARGARET RIVERS. Search. 321p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Chatto & W.] 22-8711

The story of a young man living in a London suburb. Jim Stonehouse is handsome, has comfortable means and a decidedly idealistic temperament. He has been rather unfortunate in the choice of a wife whose beauty appeals to him, but whose cold nature is the cause of constant misunderstanding. Sophie, his wife's young sister, has been his friend and admirer ever since she was ten years old and Jim finds joy and comfort in her companionship. The birth of a little daughter, and the death of Jim's wife on the day Sophie is married to Tod Marchland, fill the closing chapters of this book with a strange confusion of joy and sorrow.

"For spiritual discernment, courageous candor, quietness of method—we have found few recent novels so satisfying." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 6 '22 850w

"Here is a first novel which offers, not merely a promise, but a finished performance."

+ Detroit News p16 My 14 '22 650w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 108:491 My 27 '22 340w

Lit D p44 Jl 15 '22 650w

"The author of 'Search' knows the sex question, and she is unafraid of her knowledge. Some parts of the book are startlingly penetrative. On the whole, she makes out a good case for Jim; he is not gross, one concludes, finally—he is just human."

— Lit R p707 Je 3 '22 460w

"In characterization, in the speech and action of the book, Miss Larmine is as modern as Miss Sinclair, and she is fresh, keen, unwearyed."

+ — New Repub 33:154 Ja 3 '23 150w

"The book is a highly analytical character study rather than a story. Its progress is purely psychological and the author recounts events, not for their intrinsic interest, but as data necessary to her chief purpose, the almost microscopic study of the characters. The book's great lack is a feeling for humor."

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 4 '22 560w

"The novel is well written and full of little touches of significant observation. Furthermore, the characters are psychologically—one might almost say, pathologically—true to type, and the narrative has in it much of truth and of beauty."

+ — Sat R 133:181 F 18 '22 430w

"The book is a first novel, and as such shows a great deal of promise. The writing is above the average, and the characters, though not particularly interesting, are, at any rate, alive."

+ — Spec 128:183 F 11 '22 270w

"The characters by which Miss Larmine illustrates her idealism are for the most part shrewdly drawn. In short, between the confused beginning and the unintentionally humorous end, there is much good reading that would have been considerably better if Miss Larmine's style were as sound as her invention, and her observation of externals as accurate as her psychology."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p107 F 16 '22 420w

LARNED, JOSEPHUS NELSON. New Larned² history for ready reference, reading and research; completely rev., enl. and brought up to date under the supervision of the publishers, by Donald E. Smith and others. 12v v 1 il per set $96-$159 Nichols, C. A.

903 History—Dictionaries 22-6840

"The first edition of this well-known work was published in 1893 in five volumes. In 1901, and in 1910, were added a sixth and then a seventh volume in order to cover the intervening events. Now, the first complete revision retains about seventy per cent of the old material but enough more is added to make the new about three fifths of the whole as it stands to-day. The new volumes differ in size and number from the old, the present format being much more handy for reading though the print is a shade finer than some people would like. The combination of alphabetical, topical, and chronological arrangement, with frequent cross-references, is explained in the beginning of this first volume. The colored maps are excellent and intelligible; those in black and white somewhat crude and less clear or accurate. Of the illustrations much the same might be said."—Am Hist R

"Much that is favorable might be said in regard to the choice of authors from whom the extracts are taken. Constantly familiar and respected names appear. The addition of matter extraneous to the historical in the narrower sense gives a flavor like that of a cyclopaedia of government and politics. All in all one feels that the solid has been somewhat sacrificed to the interesting; the popular has been put before the scholarly on various occasions." A. I. Andrews

+ — Am Hist R 28:290 Ja '23 600w

"When complete the work will undoubtedly be the most useful universal history in the English language."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:728 N '22 150w

Bookm 56:513 D '22 120w

N Y Times p1 D 17 '22 280w

Outlook 132:301 O 18 '22 130w

"The first volume gives abundant promise of a new 'Larned,' which bids fair to be even more useful to the coming generation than its predecessor has been in the past."

+ R of Rs 66:559 N '22 170w

R of Rs 66:671 D '22 110w

Springf'd Republican p10 S 1 '22 550w

Wis Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

LARSEN, HANNA ASTRUP. Knut Hamsun. 171p $1.50 Knopf

B or 92 Hamsun, Knut 22-22059

A biographical and critical study of the Norwegian novelist which shows thruout the reflection of personal experience in his novels. "the constantly recurring figure of Hamsun himself in one incarnation after another." He is studied as wanderer, as poet and as citizen. A chapter is devoted to the years he spent in America, another to the women found in his novels, and another to the love of nature which breathes thru everything he writes. He is estimated as a literary artist and his chief works are analyzed and interpreted."

Booklist 19:119 Ja '23

Bookm 56:645 Ja '23 200w

"A concise, well-written, informative and stimulating book, then, open as are all similar works to differences in the matter of critical interpretation, but as frank and clear as the man who begot it." I. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 4 '22 1150w

Lit R p370 Ja 6 '23 400w

"Miss Larsen reveals the great Norwegian with a warmth of sympathy and understanding unhampered by the obviously academic. She sets out to prove no point, no theory rides her plan of study. It is a simple, straightforward account of the life and works of the author, whom she evidently reveres, but with a sanity that does not overlook his defects. More than that, her study is in itself an excellent piece of writing." Edwin Seaver

+ Nation 115:530 N 15 '22 320w

N Y Times p6 Ja 28 '23 600w

R of Rs 66:671 D '22 100w

"It is an appreciative yet critical study of Hamsun and his work, valuable not only for the information it conveys, but for the unstrained presentation of its careful judgments, manifestly based upon a thorough knowledge of all Hamsun's work—something impossible as yet to students unable to read him in the original."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 1 '23 1100w

LA TOUR DU PIN DE GOUVERNET, HENRIETTE LUCIE (DILLON) marquise de. Recollections of the revolution and the empire; ed. and tr. by Walter Geer. 422p il $6 Brentano's [30s J. Cape]

944.04 France—History—Revolution, 1789-1799. France—History—Consulate and empire, 1799-1815 20-22841

"The writer was one of the twelve Dames du Palais at the court of Marie Antoinette, a practical farmer in New York State in Washington's administration, a friend of Josephine and member of her court, and a member of the court of Louis XVIII, when the Bourbon court was set up again. She was of the highest society under the Old Régime. . . . She lay hidden in the house of a pretended Jacobin during the Reign of Terror until the future Mme. Tallien stole her away to an American ship. Introduced by General Philip Schuyler, she became a star in Alexander Hamilton's set in New York, but most of the time preferred to work at her farm at Albany under the same conditions as any other farmer's wife. Summoned to France in the days of the Directory, she found the skies so dark that she went to England, and there remained until Napoleon's rise, when she returned to France and joined his court."—N Y Times

N Y Times p3 Ja 16 '21 1850w

Outlook 128:659 Ag 24 '21 50w

Pratt p31 winter '23

LA TOUR DU PIN DE GOUVERNET, H. L.

—Continued

"Her style is simple and direct, her observations shrewd and just, her story fascinating, thrilling, breathless."

+ Sat R 133:206 F 25 '22 880v

"We wish that the English—or American—version had been thoroughly revised before publication, as it swarms with elementary blunders and inelegancies. But even this very unscholarly translation may be commended, to those who do not read French, for the interest of its subject-matter."

+ — Spec 128:51 Ja 14 '22 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 8 '21 70w

"The book is fascinating, not so much because of the fashion in which the story is told as because of the interest of the story Mme. de la Tour has to tell. Having lived as she lived, having seen what she saw, it needed only that she should be intelligent and observant—and both she was assuredly—and that she should be able to write a good, plain narrative, to enable her to produce an authentic classic among books of reminiscence."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p855 D 22 '21 2050w

LAUCK, WILLIAM JETT, and WATTS, CLAUDE S. Industrial code. 571p $4 Funk 331 Industrial relations. Labor and laboring classes—United States 22-12743

The book is a survey of the post-war industrial situation, a review of wartime developments in industrial relations, and a proposal looking to permanent industrial peace by way of an industrial code, established thru legislative action, that should safeguard the rights and legitimate aspirations of both labor and capital and should protect the public interest. This code is to define and promulgate certain fundamental principles such as: the right of employees and employers to organize; the right to collective bargaining; the right of labor to a living wage and of capital to a fair return; the hours of labor, the rights and relations of women in industry; the right of labor to a voice in the control of industry; the contractual obligations of both employers and employees; the right of the public to be protected against economic disturbances. These principles are fully discussed in the comprehensive appendix constituting one-half of the book.

"The authors have done a real service in assembling these statements in an appendix which constitutes nearly half the book. The documents in the appendix constitute a section of industrial history since the war which every student will appreciate in such convenient form."

O. T. Mallory

+ Ann Am Acad 104:179 N '22 750w

Booklist 19:69 D '22

"Were it only possible to delete the panacea of the book, it would be a very helpful manual in industrial economics. Our defective industrial metabolism has impaired the whole social system far too seriously to cure it with a patent medicine." B: Stolberg

+ — New Repub 32:154 O 4 '22 1150w

"The recommendations made will neither satisfy conservative employers' associations or radical labor unions, but they provide a suggestive basis for such an effort as reasonable organizations of employers and workers might make to arrive at an immediately practicable program of ending the present wasteful and re-tarding methods of war between capital and labor."

Survey 48:531 Jl 15 '22 200w

LAURISTON, VICTOR. Twenty-first burr. 292p $2 Doran

22-19684

When Laura Winright reached home, recalled from Europe by an urgent letter from her father, she found him sitting dead in his chair. He had been dead only ten minutes and there was no sign of violence, no evidence of heart failure. Laura believed her father had been murdered and she resolved to find the murderer. In the subsequent developments there were various factors—a greasy finger mark on a telegram, the gradual coming to light of early family troubles and a divorced wife, a grey-bearded and grey-attired figure haunting the house, a poisoned burr—the last of a series of twenty-one. Between the private detective engaged for the case and Laura's trained nurse, an expert in palmistry, the investigation became a rival game in which palmistry scored heavily.

"Judged as a detective story pure and simple, 'The Twenty-first Burr' has several defects. It has one or two real people, at least two original ones, and three or four really appealing ones. Moreover, the heroine is not a flapper. In addition to this, there is some absolutely fresh dialogue."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '22 230w

"A commonplace performance; it is never well and often ill written; uses conventional devices to work its ends, and forces its conclusion when the moment for revealing its villain arrives. But it manages to shroud in mystery its initial situation."

+ Lit R p272 D 2 '22 250w

N Y Times sec7:6 O 1 '22 420w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p10 O 29 '22 110w

Springfield Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 120w

LAVERY, FELIX. Raphael. 161p il $4 Stokes

759.5 Raphael (Raffaello Sanzio d'Urbino)

"Mr. Lavery has intently surveyed the works of Raphael till a volume, 'Raphael,' shaped itself, after ten years of appreciation and research. There are chapters (and many black and white reproductions) upon the painter's three periods in which all the paintings attributed to him are placed chronologically, and thus arranged, are dwelt upon at length. More than half the book relates in detail the history of the long-lost 'Nativity,' which passed, among others, to priests and painters in the course of its wanderings, and was even regarded as a copy at one time."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 12 '22 260w

"The chronological chapters on Raphael add virtually nothing to our knowledge, fail to mention late discoveries as to Raphael's early activity, ignore a dozen pictures which are surely by the master—in all a superfluous contribution to an already overcrowded bibliography. On the contrary, the account of Mr. Lavery's own Raphael is very interesting."

+ Lit R p906 Ag 26 '22 380w

"Particularly important as a contribution to the already extensive literature dealing with Raphael's art is the complete history of the fortunes of many of the paintings. It is this portion of his volume which, if one of Mr. Lavery's attributions is correct, affords one of the most romantic narratives of modern times." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 27 '22 2500w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Aaron's rod. 347p $2 Seltzer

22-9200

Aaron Sisson is a miner and a lover of music—a master on the flute. He has a wife and children, but he is a lonely soul, a stranger in the world. He senses in his wife a wish to dominate him, abandons his family and goes to London where he plays the flute in an orchestra. His new life leads him among strange people, men and women seething with the modern social and sexual unrest. Among them a young writer, Rawdon Lilly—whose clear vision penetrates everything and whose passion to be himself makes him by turns a cynic and a philosopher—both attracts and repels him. Presently both men find themselves in Italy where more of the mysterious unrest troubles Aaron's somnambulant soul and even the yielding to a great passion leaves him disillusioned. He comes to feel that Lilly is the only person on whom he can rely for guidance and it is Lilly who finally demonstrates to him in a long harangue that there are only two great life-urges, love and power. A man, to be himself, must follow the greater urge. He must learn to accept the power-urge if he wants to remain in possession of his own soul, the only thing that matters.

Boston Transcript p6 Je 17 '22 960w

"Whatever skill Mr. Lawrence betrays in his analysis of the complex characters he here portrays, we still insist that his book is to be fancied for its beauty of style before all other considerations. It is shot through with beautiful passages, and some of these that touch on Italy are as near to poetry as prose may well be." G. W. Stark

— + Detroit News p8 Je 4 '22 750w

Freeman 5:478 J1 26 '22 250w

"Aaron's Rod might be very useful and usable as a text book in morbid sexology, but as fiction, despite its well written and vividly painted pages, it leaves a bad impression in one's mind." R. B. Hibbard

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ag 20 '22 660w

"Sums itself up as a piece of elaborate piffle. It matters little whether one calls Aaron's progress a questioning or a quest, whether Aaron thinks in terms of ideals and goals or of 'love-urges' and 'life-modes.' He is and remains the pathetic figure of the nosing puppy—fit symbol, if you like, of an aimless and ownerless generation." H. W. Boynton

— Ind 108:489 My 27 '22 540w

"How D. H. Lawrence can write! What a joy it is when he turns from psychology to description, for he is a poet; his style is irresistible. There is a strange mesmeric quality in Lawrence's style. Sometimes it lies in repetition of a euphonic phrase or of a voluptuous word; sometimes the trick escapes one, but the hypnotic effect remains. And then, while he is luring one on by the sheer beauty of his talk, he suddenly turns treacherous and crassly utters such horrors as 'try and do it,' 'come and see me,' 'our hero,' and so forth. One feels that this Mr. Lawrence is a wilfully perverse young man." D. S. Ogburn

— + Lit R p698 Je 3 '22 1200w

"In spite of its great vividness, power, and freshness, [it has] an almost hysterical overemphasis of certain interesting things." J. W. Krutch

— + Nation 114:696 Je 7 '22 750w

"We could riddle the book with criticism, but not one of the shafts would touch its soul. It is real; it is alive." J. M. Murry

— + Nation and Ath 31:655 Ag 12 '22 1150w

"In admitting that Aaron's Rod is a plumsilly book, one is not for one moment abating one's claim that the author is a man of genius. Silly as his metaphysical theories are, there remains inarguable the unique talent which can draw Aaron Sisson as he appears in the earlier chapters of this book. That portrait is like an Italian Primitive, very fresh in colour, very angular in pose, and as direct in its effects as spring itself." Rebecca West

— + New Statesman 19:388 J1 8 '22 1650w

"An iconoclastic book with very little plot, a good deal of unnecessary triviality, some beautiful descriptions, especially when the scene shifts to Italy, a large amount of decidedly plain speaking, and but little if any deliberate grossness. It is earnest and thoughtful, a book for men and women who are mentally as well as physically grown-up and can grasp those forces behind it of which the author himself, perhaps, is not entirely aware, since they would seem to have their origin in temperament and point of view. In its psychology, and its psychological revelations, the book is extraordinarily interesting." L. M. Field

— + N Y Times p14 Ap 30 '22 850w

"Neither in Mr. Lawrence's England nor in his Italy is there anything ordinary at all. There is nothing odd, because nothing even; nothing startling, because nothing quiet. Romance is not thus to be sought or found. It includes madness but it does not just run mad. Mr. Lawrence's demented miners, tearful cavalry officers and sinister and brooding ladies do not make a novel, nor even a novelty." Gerald Gould

— Sat R 134:109 J1 15 '22 1000w

"An extraordinarily full book with a somewhat difficult beginning and a certain technical incoherence. It is, perhaps, as a phenomenon in Mr. Lawrence's mental career that it is, first of all, interesting. Though we must pronounce Aaron's Rod a faulty book, it is unquestionably a great book. We should, by the way, warn our readers that Aaron's Rod is not an agreeable book for young adolescents of either sex."

— + Spec 129:23 J1 1 '22 1200w

Springf'd Republican p7a J1 9 '22 370w

"In form it is a little too picaresque. It has no end. Judged by the old rules, the idea-plot is too strong for the action-plot; and, looking back, we see episodes of wonderful beauty or ugliness like the curves of a river that runs into the sand."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p111 Je 22 '22 760w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. England, my England, and other stories. 273p $2 Seltzer

22-21569

The title story describes a contemporary type of man of fine physique and breeding, with an amateurish interest in literature and music, never idle—cultivating flowers or making repairs about the house, but without a profession or ambition, complacently supported by his father-in-law and adored by his wife. As his wife's sense of reality and responsibility grows with motherhood and her passion wanes, Egbert is increasingly out of it. He goes about with a grievance and his fast confused consciousness, before death claims him on the fields of Flanders, is of this all pervading futility. The other stories are: Tickets, please; The blind man; Monkey nuts; Winty peacock; You touched me; Samson and Delilah; The primrose path; The horse dealer's daughter; Fanny and Annie.

"A Lawrence story has body and depth. It is composed of things emerging from somewhere below. The analysis is like the creeping tentacles of an octopus, feeling slowly about in a glimmering, glooming submarine world. . . . None of the stories are insignificant—'The Blind Man,' 'Winty Peacock,' and 'The Horse-dealer's Daughter' might be selected as the most curiously fascinating." A. W. Colton

— + Lit R p447 F 10 '23 850w

"Indubitably a great book, great enough, probably, to be eternally damned as a classic, one from whose pages the teacher will select long passages, and hurl at the dreary youthful prisoners: 'This is how to describe. This is how to narrate. This is the perfect climax.' The book of one, a sensualist today, a mystic tomorrow; but always the artist who makes men's souls alive." E. L. Burman

— + Nation 116:73 Ja 17 '23 520w

"They are not tales for those who wish merely to be amused, to read and enjoy without using their own brains, these tales of Mr. Lawrence's. He is one of those writers who demand more than a little co-operation from their readers. But to those able and willing to give that co-operation 'England, My England' will prove a fruitful and long-enduring source of pleasure."

— + N Y Times p13 N 19 '22 1000w

Reviewed by L. Kantor

N Y Tribune p23 D 24 '22 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 14 '23 250w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Fantasia of the unconscious. 297p $2.25 Seltzer

130 Psychoanalysis. Sex 22-23375

The author calls this book a continuation of his "Psychoanalysis of the Unconscious." In it playfulness and seriousness are inextricably

LAWRENCE, D. H.—Continued
 mixed as biology, psychology, philosophy, pedagogy and cosmology. He explains human consciousness as a matter of plexuses on a lower and upper plane; pronulgates a unique cosmology in which the entire creative urge is the life of individuals and the outer universe, the cosmos, is nothing but the aggregate of the dead bodies and dead energies of bygone individuals; and he discourses on the entire cycle of human relationships, from birth to maturity, finding it a vicious circle.

Reviewed by Paul Shorey
 Ind 109:390 D 23 '22 660w

"The rather fearsome title need not bar the novice scaling the craggy mountains of the psychoanalytical. For only one-tenth is psychoanalysis, the other nine-tenths D. H. Lawrence, irrepressible and gay." B. L. Burman
 + Nation 116:74 Ja 17 '23 300w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
 N Y Tribune p19 Ja 14 '23 1500w

"Home-brew of psychoanalysis and sex ethics, with an appalling over-supply of yeast."
 — Survey 49:397 D 15 '22 10w

LAWRENCE, ROBERT MEANS. Old Park street and its vicinity. 172p il $3 Houghton 974.46 Boston—History. Boston—Streets 22-12545

Old Park street, Boston, during its nearly three hundred years' history has passed thru four periods. First it was a cowpath leading up the hill; later the site of a group of public charitable buildings; then it became a prominent residence street; and finally, it has been given over to commercial uses. It is no more than a city block in length and on the side of the common has never been built upon, but many well-known Bostonians have had their residences on its east side and its history, including the section connecting it with Beacon street, is an important part of the history of Boston. Mr. Lawrence sketches its development from its origin in 1640, and describes its buildings.

Boston Transcript p6 Je 3 '22 600w

"The author unfortunately has not the constructive sense. He can not visualize a subject as a whole, or tell a connected story. He has an omnivorous appetite for facts, but no power to digest them. He can not even stop to tell us accurately where his facts come from. But these include, tucked away in their midst, Dr. J. Collins Warren's Reminiscences of Park Street." These sixteen pages are well worth the entire cost of the book. They are written with delicious drollery, and are packed with quaint and illuminating information." S: F. Batchelder

+ Freeman 6:405 Ja 3 '23 1800w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
 Ind 108:558 Je 24 '22 170w
 Lit R p763 Je 24 '22 80w

"Dr. Lawrence has assembled here so many piquant and homely details of old Boston days and has handled them with such felicitous humor and intimacy that the narrow field of his subject spells not tediousness, but rich interest for all who love to feel back into the pockets of our national life."

+ N Y Times p21 D 24 '22 900w

Outlook 131:465 Je 12 '22 80w
 St Louis 20:274 N '22

"A notable addition to the historical books about Boston that have come out the past two or three years. The treasure that Dr Lawrence brings forward is so valuable that no precise estimate can be put upon it. It has required not only knowledge, but love of the city such as only a true Bostonian like Dr Lawrence could bring to it."

Springf'd Republican p12 Je 8 '22 600w

LEA, FREDERICK CHARLES. Elementary hydraulics for technical students. 224p $2.40 Longmans [ts 6d E. Arnold]

532.5 Hydraulics

"Fairly comprehensive in scope, but much briefer than the author's 'Hydraulics for engineers and engineering students.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:13 Ja '23

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. My discovery of England. 264p $1.50 Dodd

827 Humor. National characteristics, English 22-12645

The book is the result of the author's recent tour of England, Wales and Scotland. There are some amusing comparisons of England and America, often gently satiric tho nearly always kindly. The chapter in which Mr Leacock discusses business conditions and what is wrong with the world in general is written in a more serious tone than the others. A number of different phases of English life are touched upon and the comments, tho distinctly humorous, are keen and just. Contents: The balance of trade in impressions; I am interviewed by the press; Impressions of London; A clear view of the government and politics of England; Oxford as I see it; The British and the American press; Business in England; Is prohibition coming to England? "We have with us to-night"; Have the English any sense of humour?

Booklist 19:12 O '22

"There is enough in the book to bring that rare justification of the publisher's inevitable 'uproariously funny,' while behind the slapstick are the nuances of the greater artist. His is good humor—and that comes so seldom!"

+ Bookm 56:106 S '22 110w

"A volume glinting with friendly satire, keenly analytic upon these postwar problems England is striving to solve, and bright with the humor which bubbles irrepressibly from the writings of this Canadian 'Mark Twain.'" F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 16 '22 900w

"Funny from cover to cover."

+ Daily News Rec p8 Ag 23 '22 700w

"Has so many good passages in it, most of them humorous, that the reader regrets more than ever Mr Leacock's having become a professional humorist at times."

+ Dial 73:457 O '22 50w

"Characterized by hilarious horse sense and an occasional horse laugh. The comic stunt he set out to do is a blithe conception, but it is also a burden to him. Philosopher, pedagogue, political economist that he is, the responsibility of being unflaggingly rollicksome becomes at times almost an anxious duty." Lawton Mackall

+ Nation 115:171 Ag 16 '22 880w

Nation and Ath 31:537 Jl 15 '22 1050w

"The greater part of it is written in a satiric vein, but its satire is always general, smiling, merry. Sometimes the humor is broadly obvious and sometimes it is subtle and quiet, but none the less telling. And all the time the author is evidently enjoying it all just as much as the reader is."

+ N Y Times p15 Je 18 '22 1250w

"For the most part, the book is given over to a genial survey of English institutions, ranging in quality from gentle satire to broad burlesque, and of such general excellence that the author's inclusion of himself among the writers of America brings a flush of pride to the brow of the 100 per cent reader." R. C. Benchley

+ N Y Tribune p5 Je 25 '22 410w

"Mr. Leacock's humor has never been more enjoyable than in this book. He contrives to touch up the foibles and follies of Englishmen and Americans alike, and without giving offense in either direction. Capital reading!"

+ Outlook 132:80 S 13 '22 30w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:513 N '22

Pratt p27 autumn '22

St Louis 20:280 O '22

"In a book of this kind it must be (indeed, it evidently is) very hard to be continuously funny. But when Mr. Leacock parodies our Press or directs the shafts of his satire at our politics, he can be not only amusing but shrewd."

+ Sat R 133:658 Je 24 '22 650w

Spec 129:146 J1 29 '22 950w

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 19 '22 500w

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Je 22 '22 780w

LEAF, WALTER, tr. Little poems from the Greek. 94p $1.75 McBride [5s G. Richards]

$81.08 Greek poetry—Collections

"During the war Mr. Leaf made metrical versions of about five hundred epigrams from the Greek Anthology, and he has now published selections from them in this volume."—Freeman

"Too well I know with what long teeth the reading public approaches a work of this kind—and what it loses by its diffidence. Perhaps my feeling for Mr. Leaf's book may move some few to take, at least, a sort of venturesome interest in getting it. I hope so; they will be richly rewarded."

+ Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 130w

"Dr. Leaf's rendering is limpid, lively, easy, pointed; and it keeps to the homeliness of the Greek." Maurice Hewlett

+ Lit R p450 F 25 '22 1250w

"While not inspired, these translations are most interesting and the work will appeal to all those familiar with the Greek Anthology."

Lit R p70 S 30 '22 140w

Nation 115:22 J1 5 '22 20w

"On the whole, Dr. Leaf has done rather better than the average dabbler in the Anthology. None of his versions is excellent, but few are really bad; a dozen are quite good. Dr. Leaf is almost happy in rendering the somewhat gnomic epitaphs of Simonides and the fancies of Plato; his chief failures are Meleager, Theocritus, and Zonas."

+ Nation and Ath 30:948 Mr 25 '22 1050w

+ New Repub 31:288 Ag 2 '22 220w

"Dr. Leaf in these translations again proves himself what his friends knew him—a fine scholar and a man of great taste. I think that some of his readers may even wish that Dr. Leaf had taken greater metrical liberties than he has, for his invariable use of some regular and generally rhymed metre has often involved him in uncomfortable inversions." A. Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 128:376 Mr 25 '22 800w

"The poems in the Anthology must always be models of how such things can be done, even if we cannot now do them; and faithfully to reproduce them, as Dr. Leaf does here, is to renovate an æsthetic category the possibilities of which never ought to be lost sight of, since it belonged to some of the most natural of men and craftsmen."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p40 Ja 19 '22 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 11 '23 380w

LEE, GERALD STANLEY. Invisible exercise: seven studies in self command with practical suggestions and drills. 297p $2 Dutton

613.7 Exercise. Mental hygiene 22-12096

The author lays claim to the discovery of a new kind of setting-up exercise which he calls the coordination of mind and body and which rivals in simplicity all known systems for insuring health, self-command and poise of body and mind. It is all a matter of backbone and its position in standing, sitting and lying down.

The appendix points out the relation between the author's ideas and Christian Science.

Booklist 18:352 J1 '22

Bookm 55:646 Ag '22 90w

"Original, amusing, and well, try it, and see if there are some good suggestions in it." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:488 My '22 90w

"He writes entertainingly, often with a sprightly humor, making a readable book, and he has suggestions to offer which will doubtless be of practical value to many readers."

+ Lit R p764 Je 24 '22 160w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 20 '22 140w

Wis Lib Bul 18:251 N '22

LEE, JENNETTE BARBOUR (PERRY) (MRS GERALD STANLEY LEE). Mysterious office. 278p $1.75 Scribner [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

22-22702

The heroine of this unusual detective story is the same Millicent Newberry who figured in an earlier story of Mrs Lee's, "The green jacket." This most feminine and miraculously clever detective still has the habit of knitting as she ponders her cases and continues to exact as her condition in taking a case that she shall say what is to be done with the criminal when he is discovered and whether he shall have another chance. It is a particularly puzzling mystery which she sets herself to solve in this story—to discover who took the twenty-five thousand dollars from the desk in John Geary's private office, to which four trusted employees had access and three of whom chivalrously confessed to the theft, each to shield the other. Before she reached her solution, Miss Newberry had put an intricate pattern into the golden web of her knitting.

Booklist 19:160 F '23

Boston Transcript p4 D 13 '22 300w

"There is much in the story besides its tale of detective activities, but its other interests are chiefly included in its manner of telling. It is, after all, a romance, despite the very modern occupation of its heroine. It is also a chivalric tale, and a touch of poetic imagination brightens and beautifies it all through. And these are things one does not usually find in detective stories."

+ N Y Times p8 N 26 '22 800w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 26 '22 210w

Outlook 132:674 D 13 '22 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p633 O 5 '22 280w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

LEE, JENNETTE BARBOUR (PERRY) (MRS GERALD STANLEY LEE). Uncle Bijah's ghost. 187p $1.50 Scribner

22-6519

A New England family inherits an old farmstead which had been the family seat for a number of generations. Uncle Bijah Bowen, the last incumbent, had died somewhat mysteriously, a fact that leaked out after the new Bowens had moved in. Phoebe Bowen, eldest daughter of the family, chooses for herself a room at the top of the house which had been Uncle Bijah's den. Soon she is disturbed by strange noises, invisible presences, mysterious lights. She also finds queer literature about the place, showing that Uncle Bijah had been under the spell of some occult obsessions. But Phoebe is brave and determined and with the aid of her scholarly father comes to understand and master the powers of darkness.

Booklist 18:331 Je '22

"Miss Lee's deft touch, her sympathy and wholesome charm were never more manifest than in this unusual little story, through which runs a thread of the supernatural—and a vivid one at that. But one which leaves behind, instead of any morbid suggestion, an atmosphere like that of the old farmstead itself, tranquil, happy, redolent of orchard grass and bloom."

LEE, JENNETTE BARBOUR—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '22 270w

"Mrs. Lee's latest story is like a pale ink wash; there is no depth to it, no body color. . . All the elements of an old-fashioned ghost story are here but in the end it is the modern touch which does the trick, a judicious mixture of spring sunshine and psychoanalysis. The pity is that the story is too slight to stand the strain; the whole book seems to have been exorcised at once, and there is little, if anything, left."

— Lit R p643 My 6 '22 330w

"Notwithstanding that the subject of the book is ghosts and ghostliness, it is so brightly written that one can enjoy it in a mood that detaches one from the oppression which often is conveyed by a ghost story. If all ghost stories were as cheerfully entertaining as 'Uncle Bijah's ghost,' they would be even more popular than they now are."

N Y Times p13 My 21 '22 370w

Outlook 131:216 My 31 '22 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:262 Je '22

"The story abounds in New England humor, of which Mrs Lee has always an adequate supply in her books."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ji 16 '22 260w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

LE GALLIENNE, RICHARD. Jongleur strayed; with an introd. by Oliver Herford. 174p $2.50 Doubleday

811

22-26974

For the most part these are poems of love, which Mr Le Gallienne celebrates in the old way and in the old meters.

Booklist 19:75 D '22

"Especially in the love songs he shows his technical skill and his great lyric charm."

+ Bookm 56:639 Ja '23 120w

"There is something finely challenging about a book of verse launched into the tide of today's poetry, but making no concession to today's fashion. As with any other poet, an anthology will be needed some day to get rid of the chaff." Zona Gale

+ — Int Bk R p17 D '22 1000w

"Mr. Le Gallienne is living evidence of how fatal it is to play safe and dodge the questions which modern life puts to an artist. Everything about his verse refutes the faith that in older, more stable times there was a pure poetry, timeless and universal, which may now be recovered by sensible minds. Sanity of such a sort, and it is Mr. Le Gallienne's only virtue, is inanity." Mark Van Doren

— Nation 116:530 N 15 '22 260w

"Le Gallienne is a master of his art. He sets his words with an inerrant feeling for their worth and their loveliness, and his lines move to music." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p19 N 12 '22 750w

"Mr. Le Gallienne has all the devices of metrics at his command, but his inspiration has run dry. The deft construction is powerless to hide the barrenness of imagination, the total absence of fire." Rex Hunter

— N Y Tribune p11 O 12 '22 200w

LE GALLIENNE, RICHARD, ed. Le Gallienne book of English verse. (Modern books of verse) 561p $3 Boni & Liveright

821.08 English poetry—Collections 22-7461

The editor's aim has been to bring together as much of the best of English poetry as it is possible to include in one companionable volume—even if this best has repeatedly been included in other anthologies—on the principle that what has been oftenest read in the past will continue to be oftenest read in the future. The introduction includes a brief survey of other anthologies and an appreciation of the spirit of English poetry. The selections beginning as far back as the eleventh century 'are brought up to the present day. There is a first line and a title index.

Bookm 55:537 Ji '22 50w

"Mr. Le Gallienne has done his work almost superhumanly well."

+ Cath World 115:829 S '22 320w

"There are occasional fine things not to be found in other compilations, but these are overshadowed by the unhappy inclusion of numerous trivial pieces which may strike the ear or the fancy of the editor, but which neither per se nor by virtue of the introduction are made to shine for the reader."

— Dial 72:649 Je '22 160w

Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
 Ind 108:374 Ap 15 '22 110w

"Contains a number of strange omissions and inclusions, excerpts, and a number of howling errors in the proofreading." W: 13. Benet

+ Lit R p820 Ji 22 '22 100w

"A good, conventional anthology."

+ Nation 114:603 My 17 '22 20w

"There is no way, so far as I know, of reviewing an anthology when it is just out. The reviewer is ever so much more familiar with the old anthologies than with the new one, yet if his review is to be of any use to anybody he must do some comparing. He can't tell what he thinks of the new book until it has turned into an old book. Prolonged use is the only way to find out which anthology you like best. But if everybody acted upon this opinion there would be no reviews. As a snap-judge, though, let me say that I don't as yet see any reason for preferring the Le Gallienne or the Modern to the Oxford Book of English Verse. In the fourteen pages given to the Index of First Lines I have noticed twelve misprints. So many misprints, even in an index, are too many anywhere." P. L.

— New Repub 30:257 Ap 26 '22 980w

N Y Times p19 My 14 '22 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:292 Je '22

Pratt p26 winter '23

St Louis 20:220 S '22

"With Mr. Le Gallienne's taste one cannot quarrel. Much is to be said for his selection among the modern and present-day poets."

+ Springfield Republican p10 Je 27 '22 270w

Wis Lib Bul 18:155 Je '22

LEGG, LEOPOLD GEORGE WICKHAM. Matthew Prior: a study of his public career and correspondence. 348p il $7 Macmillan [22s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

B or 92 Prior, Matthew (Eng ed 22-2047)

"Prior started life as a waiting boy in a London tavern. He rose rapidly in the world and soon became the companion of poets, politicians, diplomats, and nobles of the first rank. Nevertheless, he is one of the most pitiful figures of the early eighteenth century, for he was never quite of the group with whom he associated. Though he performed the essential duties of an ambassador, his official position was always ambiguous. Important as he was in diplomacy, Prior is better known as a poet, for he represents in poetry better than any one else, perhaps, the transition from the seventeenth to the eighteenth century. In spite of his public and literary career no serious biography of Prior appeared until that of Bickley in 1914. This writer emphasized the poetry of Prior, but the work under review stresses his political activity."—Am Hist R

"On the period before 1711 this book is too largely a repetition of the work done by Bickley. The second half of the book, however, is a distinct contribution to the subject, both in its literary and diplomatic aspects." W. T. Morgan

+ — Am Hist R 27:552 Ap '22 800w

"This life of Matthew Prior suffers from the disadvantage of having been compiled before, but published after, Mr. Bickley's book on the same subject which appeared in 1914. As far as the principal and printed sources of information on Prior are concerned, little could be usefully added to Mr. Bickley's work. On the other hand, apart from those sources, little would have been left of Mr. Legg's. Still, with all its limitations, the volume is a storehouse of most valuable knowledge and is well worthy of the time and labour that have been expended on it." H. E. Egerton

+ — Eng Hist R 37:285 Ap '22 600w

"There is no doubt about the value of the book. No real lover of Prior can afford to ignore it, but he will, none the less, read it with disappointment and annoyance. Mr. Wickham Legg has carefully performed a task for which he is temperamentally unfitted." W. H. Durham

+ — Lit R p804 Jl 15 '22 750w

"Except for an occasional flash in the letters, his study maintains a pedestrian dullness." R. D. Jameson

+ — New Repub 32:106 S 20 '22 200w

Spring'd Republican p15a My 7 '22 1000w

LEIGH, JAMES WENTWORTH. Other days: with a preface by Owen Wister. 255p il $6 Macmillan [18s Unwin]

B or 92 Leigh, James Wentworth (Eng ed A22-391)

"A very winning apostle of muscular Christianity gives in these pages his recollections, not so much of men as of scenes and events. Dean Leigh had his full share of distinguished friends, but he says little of any of them save Gladstone. He offers instead his impressions of a wide range of foreign lands, from the Egyptian cataracts and Damascus on the east to San Francisco on the west; and an account of student life at Harrow and Cambridge, experiences as a vicar at Stratford and Leamington, mission work in London in the eighties, and his twenty-five years as dean of Hereford, where he waged a militant campaign against intemperance. The most interesting parts of the volume to American readers are Dean Leigh's reminiscences of two trips to this country, the first in 1869-70, the second and chief in 1873-6. He tarried longest in the South, marrying there the brave young woman who wrote 'Ten Years on a Georgia Plantation.'"—Lit R

Boston Transcript p7 Ja 7 '22 650w

Ind 108:359 Ap 8 '22 80w

"The charm of his book is in this open-air atmosphere and in its frank garrulousness, for he carried through all his experiences an insatiable though a somewhat superficial, curiosity. Unfortunately, Dean Leigh seems not to have been a critical student of American life, and his views of it evince no particular penetration."

+ — Lit R p419 F 11 '22 380w

"It is most remarkable that a clergyman of the Church of England should amply fulfil his obligations at home, and yet find time to pay frequent visits to the Transatlantic possession of his wife, and keep interesting records of these expeditions. Yet this feat was accomplished with apparent ease by Dr. Leigh."

+ New Statesman 18:456 Ja 21 '22 300w

N Y Times p6 Jl 16 '22 750w

Spec 127:640 N 12 '21 320w

Spring'd Republican pJl 31 '22 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 17 '21 1050w

LEIGHTON, JOSEPH ALEXANDER. Man and the cosmos: an introduction to metaphysics. 578p $4.50 (21s) Appleton

110 Metaphysics 22-20138

"The work is a systematic consideration of the fundamental problems and concepts of philosophical thought in the light of recent discussion in science and philosophy. The leading motive of the entire work is the problem of Human Personality. I have therefore given the largest amount of space to the treatment of the Self. But, since one cannot consider the place of personality in the universe without being drawn into the fundamental problem of metaphysics, namely, that of the structure of the universe as a whole, I have tried to give just consideration to the latter problem. . . My conception of the meaning of the universe is dynamic. Therefore the metaphysical standpoint of the following work might be called Dynamic Idealism, in the sense that it aims to find in the living universe a home and scope for humanistic ideals or values."—Preface

Booklist 19:144 F '23

Boston Transcript p1 N 18 '22 950w

"This is a substantial professorial American work (written in the unauthoritative style usual in such work), embracing the main problems of metaphysics."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p750 N 16 '22 100w

LEITCH, CECIL. Golf. 276p il $3 Lippincott 10s 6d T. Butterworth]

796 Golf 22-18240

"This is a book partly of instruction for lady golfers and partly of reminiscences of the authoress's many great matches. The technical disquisitions are well illustrated by photographs. They are full of energy and grace and very pleasant to look at, even if a little dangerous to imitate. As regards the more personal chapters they demand for their enjoyment a certain knowledge of the leading figures in ladies' golf."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is a delightful book for every golfer's library and for the general reader as well." F. L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 4 '22 850w

"Miss Leitch knows the game thoroughly, can instruct by the written word to a remarkable extent, and has much to say of a general character about links, experiences as a player and teacher and other matters, while the illustrations are both helpful and frequent." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p38 D '22 60w

"Miss Leitch has filled the need for such a volume well indeed. She writes clearly, concisely, directly on the principles of golf and avoids the too frequent fault of being dogmatic and narrow."

+ Lit R p342 D 23 '22 110w

St Louis 21:11 Ja '23

"She has much sound sensible advice to give in a clear, straightforward way."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p431 Ja 29 '22 250w

LEONARD, STERLING ANDRUS, comp. Poems of the war and the peace. 162p $1.35 Harcourt

821.08 European war—Poetry. English poetry—Collections 21-19079

An anthology of some ninety poems, especially intended for high school students as a picture of the war and of the spirit and ideals which animated it. There is little glorification of war in the poems chosen. Several of the best war poems have necessarily been omitted because of being beyond the appreciation of the reader for whom the collection is especially intended. The poems are grouped under four divisions: Love of country; Pictures of the war; The supreme sacrifice; The ideal of peace.

Booklist 18:181 Mr '22

"Mr. Leonard is covering ground that has been adequately covered before."

— N Y Times p11 70w

"Similar to many of the other anthologies of war poems in its first sections it differs from them in adding poems written since the armistice."

Wis Lib Bul 18:101 Ap '22

LE QUEUX, WILLIAM TUFNELL. Golden face. 245p $1.75 Macaulay [3s 6d Cassell] 22-19608

"The narrator, George Hargreave, having sought employment as a chauffeur with Rudolph Rayne, ostensibly a Yorkshire squire of high repute and unlimited income but in reality the master mind of an international clique of criminals, finds himself involved in a series of mysterious intrigues. Held by his infatuation for the daughter of his employer, he begins to play important rôles in the machinations of the jewel thieves, until he has by his crimes put himself entirely in the power of the arch conspirator. As the tool and agent of Rayne he takes part in a rapid succession of daring robberies and hazardous intrigues, which are brought to a sudden termination when the 'sign of 99' is broadcasted among the many agents of Rayne's sinister organization."—Lit R

— Boston Transcript p4 S 13 '22 520w

"This book is a failure. It is unworthy of William Le Queux, who, whatever else he does, has never before bored his readers."

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 N 19 '22 130w

"An unconvincing 'crook' story, stressing the detective element less than most of its type, a compromise with the picaresque, this book approximates a series of short stories rather than a novel in construction, and offers somewhat less where little was expected."

— Lit R p51 S 23 '22 190w

"The book is fumbled badly in the writing, and it must be set down as one of the author's few failures. Mr. Le Queux is too clever a writer not to be able to conceive two or three rather enthralling and exciting moments, and these make up for the lack of continuity in the story."

— + N Y Times p22 S 17 '22 450w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 150w

"The reader must expect all Mr. Le Queux's mannerisms and be prepared to rush about England and the Continent in his company to places known and unknown, which are all described with particularity, though any others would serve just as well. Still, it is a readable tale."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 11 '22 100w

LE QUEUX, WILLIAM TUFNELL. Secret telephone. 278p $1.75 McCann

"It is not ordinary crime with which we are served—it is crime de luxe, crime amid the most aristocratic surroundings. There are villains galore, but they are not mere thugs. They are, or at least they know how to appear to be, gentlemen of refinement, and ladies too. There are gilded dens of iniquity with secret chambers and hidden doors. There are strange perfumes and mysterious drugs which drag their addicts down to insanity and death. There are adventuresses, too, who prey on the souls of men. The hero is a young man of noble instincts, as all heroes should be, but the villain has him in his power. Were it not so, he would depart from these scenes of wickedness and depravity in the very first chapter, instead of waiting until the very last."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p9 Ag 16 '22 500w

"Mr. Le Queux has fashioned a story that comes well within the high standard of such fiction which he has established. A volume that is especially suited for those who want an exciting bit of vicarious experience, and are willing to forget it as soon as the book is tossed aside." J. D. H.

+ Detroit News p11 Ag 13 '22 330w

N Y Times p27 Jl 30 '22 550w

LE QUEUX, WILLIAM TUFNELL. Stretton street affair. 320p $1.75 Macaulay 22-4826

The widely flung activities of a band of criminals whose methods seem to defy detection and whose leader is the respected financier

Oswald De Gex, take the reader to France, Italy, Holland and Spain. The first of their dastardly acts, however, takes place in Park Lane, London. Hugh Garfield and Gabrielle Tennison, while dining at De Gex's house, are the victims of a poison which deranges their mentality and causes an utter lapse of memory. That same evening Gabrielle Engledeu, a girl who stands between De Gex and a large fortune, is murdered. Garfield recovers his memory after a month or so, and he is instrumental in baring many sinister schemes, but the financier evades arrest by poisoning himself with the very weapon he had used for so many others.

"Mr. Le Queux has written a very good detective story indeed. The tale runs very well. Its tempo is swift, the criminals have always new rascality at hand, the air of mystery is just transparent enough to allow the reader to peep through and dimly vision the solution; the love interest is charmingly incidental."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '22 200w

"This is an unusual mystery story. It is well told, in Le Queux's usual facile style, and altogether makes a good melodrama."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Ap 2 '22 160w

"What 'The Stretton Street Affair' lacks in the way of being an artistic achievement it makes up for in the way of excitement. There is, however an attempt to give the story an international twist without any real necessity for doing so."

— + Lit R p690 My 27 '22 240w

"William Le Queux assuredly knows how to put an excellent detective story together."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 9 '22 180w

"Mr. Le Queux does not handle his plot as skillfully as its possibilities permit, or, indeed, with nearly the skill he developed some of his earlier tales. But he injects a wealth of lively incident."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 14 '22 140w

LESCARBOURA, AUSTIN CELESTIN. Radio for everybody. 334p il $1.50 Scientific American pub.

654.6 Radio telephone

22-7864

Written by the managing editor of the Scientific American, this book outlines the elements of radio reception and transmission, describes radio-phone broadcasting, dot-and-dash broadcasting, receiving equipment, the operation of the receiving set, telegraph code, amplifying, etc. It also describes some unusual uses of radio on land and sea and in the air, the application of radio to everyday business and its part in the regular wire telephone system. The book is intended for the layman who wants to enjoy radio-phone concerts, for the beginner who is going to build or buy a radio set, and it will also have something of interest for the amateur who has progressed pretty far along in the art.

Aerial Age Weekly p235 My 15 '22 ½col

Booklist 18:317 Je '22

"Of the fifty-odd books on radio recently published, 'Radio for Everybody' stands out as the one book that has been built, so to speak, with the present radio novice in mind. In the first place, it is an entertaining book. From first to last the reader is given a fair training in radio by easy steps, so that he is prepared for the more advanced works which, excellent as they are, do not in all instances come down to the elementary principles." Pierre Boucheron

+ Bookm 55:637 Ag '22 520w

Cleveland p57 Ag '22

Cleveland p83 N '22

"He has the uncommon gift of elucidation, the faculty of explaining intricate electrical phenomena in an easy, interesting fashion. His book is accurate and interesting, and a diligent perusal will give the interested reader a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the subject."

+ Lit R p727 Je 10 '22 250w

Nature 110:695 N 25 '22 160w

N Y Times p27 Je 11 '22 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:352 Jl '22

Pratt p18 autumn '22

St Louis 20:123 Je '22

"The amateur who meditates rigging up an aerial will certainly be stimulated by the perusal of the book."

+ Sat R 134:595 O 21 '22 250w

"A clear account of its details and practical working."

+ Spec 129:605 O 28 '22 80w

LESLIE, SHANE. Oppidan. 365p $2.50 Scribner
[8s 6d Chatto & W.]

22-12022

The novel describes the English public school, Eton, twenty years ago, during the headship of Dr Warre. It is the story of Peter Darley, an orphan with scholarly proclivities, and recounts the actual and fictitious happenings in the classroom and dormitories, the sports and escapades of the boys from Peter's arrival at the school to the fatal fire of 1903.

"As a novel, the book is too episodic; in fact, it is less novel than a series of vivid pictures and personal recollections. Yet few are the readers who will not forgive the author for these delightful digressions."

+ Cath World 115:543 Jl '22 210w

"It is as true a picture, in black and white, of a great English institution as ever was penned." C. A. Player

+ Detroit News p7 Jl 16 '22 620w

"Of the joy of boyhood in such a school Mr. Leslie's book is compact. There is also the fragrance of English landscape and season; the richness of English character flowering in reminiscence; the play of English practical humor." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 32:21 Ag 30 '22 1350w

"Hardly could the famous school have found a happier expression to the world at large than it gets in this book. For Shane Leslie knows how to write, not only well, but remarkably. . . He has written a fine and rich book, warmed by his humor and his love, a book that should be read by all Americans who want to understand England and Englishmen better than they do, for here are the ideals, the faith, the honor and the traditions on which generations of Englishmen have been modeled." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p13 Je 13 '22 1000w

"Mr. Leslie must have written 'The Oppidan' largely for his own satisfaction: the book, if it sometimes wears the appearance of a satire, strikes one as on the whole a labor of love. There is something mysterious in the care with which the author lingers over the pettiest details and spreads a certain glamour over features admittedly mean and unpleasant. A labor of love, then, surely—else why this more or less rapt dwelling upon traditions that are at the same time more or less effectively exposed as snobbish or unreasonable? But the book seems somewhat at war with itself—there is a subdued note of satire and protest throughout the story."

No Am 215:859 Je '22 700w

Outlook 131:428 Jl 5 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:262 Je '22

"The book will undoubtedly be received with enthusiasm by Etonians, particularly by those of the author's generation. But this novel must, of course, like any other, be judged from the standpoint not of the Etonian alone but of the general reader."

+ Sat R 133:266 Mr 11 '22 450w

"It has two objects—one, it is to be supposed, to tell a school story; and two, to give a 'picture of Eton.' In the first we can say at once and without equivocation or delay that it fails completely. But his descriptions of Eton remain a real addition to the literature (none too large as it is) of what to Etonians is the 'best of schools' and to the rest of the world is surely, at any rate, one of the most remarkable."

— + Spec 128:404 Ap 1 '22 680w

"To a non-Etonian it does not, we should say, make Eton clear; to an Etonian it will appear too much of a chronicle and too little of a novel. There is too much catalogue about the whole thing. Every detail is put in, without great art, and we are bound to confess that, as a story, the book is dull in spite of one or two lively passages."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 2 '22 540w

LEVINGER, LEE J. Jewish chaplain in France; with a foreword by Cyrus Adler. 220p $1.75 (9s) Macmillan

940.478 European war—Jews. European war

—Religious and social work 21-20553

An account of the personal experiences and of the conclusions worked out thru them of a Jewish chaplain with the American army in France. He tells primarily of his work with the men of his own faith but devotes one chapter to the relations of Jew and Christian at the front, paying tribute to their spirit of cooperation and mutual tolerance. Two chapters are given to the influence of the military system and the moral gain or loss of the soldier and the book ends with a plea for justice to the Jew in the new conditions following the war.

Booklist 18:185 Mr '22

"This volume is the first particular account of this Jewish contribution to the war work. It is representative and is told with a simplicity and a restraint that add to its effect."

+ Lit R p328 D 31 '21 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:301 Je '22

Pratt p31 winter '23

"An interesting book, informed by a wise and tolerant outlook and by a broad, human sympathy."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p175 Mr 16 '22 170w

LEWIS, BENJAMIN ROLAND, ed. Contemporary one-act plays; with outline study of the one-act play and bibliographies. 410p $2 Scribner

808.2 Drama—Collections 22-12773

"The plays have been selected and the Introduction prepared to meet the need of the student or teacher who desires to acquaint himself with the one-act play as a specific dramatic form. Emphasis has been placed upon the wholesome and uplifting rather than upon the sordid and the ultra-realistic. The unduly sentimental, the strikingly melodramatic, and the play of questionable moral problems, has been consciously avoided. Comedies, tragedies, farces, and melodramas have been included; but the chief concern has been that each play should be good dramatic art." (Preface)

Contents: The twelve-pound look, by Sir James M. Barrie; Tradition, by George Middleton; The exchange, by Althea Thurston; Sam Average, by Percy Mackaye; Hyacinth Halvey, by Lady Augusta Gregory; The gazing globe, by Eugene Pillot; The poor, by Anton Tchekov; The last straw, by Bosworth Crocker; Manikin and Minikin, by Alfred Kreymborg; White dresses, by Paul Greene; Moonshine, by Arthur Hopkins; Modesty, by Paul Hervieu; The deacon's hat, by Jeannette Marks; Where but in America, by Oscar M. Wolff; A dollar, by David Pinski; The diabolical circle, by Beulah Bornstead; The far-away princess, by Hermann Sudermann; The stronger, by August Strindberg. There are four bibliographies.

Booklist 19:46 N '22

Cleveland p68 S '22

LEWIS, B. R., ed.—Continued

"The one-act play, having been relegated to a minor position for years, has evolved into an important facet of contemporary dramatic art. It has made possible a new genre, a new mode of thought, just as the short story has in fiction. In other words, it makes possible the representation of a single rounded episode. The plays which Mr. Lewis has selected fulfill this function admirably and they give the reader a clear idea of the achievements and potential opportunities of the one-act play."

+ N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 250w

Theatre Arts M 7:85 Ja '23 250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:215 O '22

LEWIS, SINCLAIR. Babbitt. 401p $2 Harcourt 22-14419

Mr Lewis finds the setting for his satire on American middle-class life in a good-sized city which he names Zenith and to symbolize this life he takes an average American citizen, George F. Babbitt. He is a successful real estate man, or realtor, as he prefers to be called, a regular fellow, booster, Rotarian, Elk, Republican, who uses all the current slang and catchwords, molds his opinions on those of the Zenith Advocate-Times, and believes in a "sound business administration at Washington." To follow Babbitt for one day is to get a hideously true view of the worst in American ways and thought and speech at this particular moment of history, to feel its vulgarity and noise and glare, its aimless rush, its motor- and movie-madness, its spiritual emptiness. Yet, and beyond Babbitt's love for his friend Paul Riesling, this is the only glimmer of hope in the whole sordid picture, Babbitt and his kind have at times a vague feeling of dissatisfaction with this travesty of living. He even confesses to his son Ted on the closing page, "I've never done a single thing I've wanted to in my whole life."

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic's Bookshelf N '22 620w

Booklist 19:21 O '22

"A better novel than 'Main Street.' Humorous, sometimes mordantly so, sometimes genially, penetratingly aware both of his background and of his characters, this novelist of American manners has written a satire of the American business man that should make every boosters' organization in the country hide its figuratively fat face behind a screen while it sniggers at itself." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:216 O '22 520w

"As a humorist, Mr. Lewis makes valiant attempts to be funny; he merely succeeds in being silly. In fact it is as yellow a novel as novel can be." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '22 950w

Cleveland p80 S '22

"It is a much better book than Main Street. Mr Lewis's way of presenting surfaces is exceedingly persuasive and his capacity for avoiding the underlying truth held out long enough. He ought to re-write Babbitt as a novel all the way through, for the root of the matter may be in him."

+ — Dial 73:456 O '22 230w

Freeman 6:142 O 18 '22 1750w

"The havoc that Sinclair Lewis wrought amongst the inhabitants of Gopher Prairie is as nothing to the fearful execution he does in Zenith. His book will be reviled from one end of this land to the other. It will be hated, spat upon, possibly burned by the common hangman. But it will be read. And it ought to be read. Not because it is brilliant, still less because it is mean, but because it attacks sham and hypocrisies and poltrooneries and dishonesties that pretty nearly every reader, if he is honest with himself, will realize that he has engaged in, directly, or indirectly at one time or another. It is a book of fearfully destructive criticism; but it destroys nothing but frauds." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 S 24 12 1400w

Lit R p21 S 16 '22 850w

"'Babbitt' is a masterpiece of language, a lexicon, a grammar, a commentary on the American tongue. Yet these things 'Main Street' was, too. The superiority of 'Babbitt' lies in its undertones, in the evidence it has of layers below layers of humanity out of sight of the ordinary satirist. Mr. Lewis, who once sat a little flippantly in the seat of the scornful, sits there still—but much less flippantly. His seat is higher and his eyes see further." Carl Van Doren

+ Lit R p23 S 16 '22 1200w

"Is 'Babbitt' as good as 'Main Street'? There need be no hesitation in answering: it is better. There is a higher concentration of substance, a more scrupulous testing of style, the rhythm of life and of the form used as symbol are felt to be identical. . . . It would be futile to attempt to inquire into the absolute aesthetic value of such a book as 'Babbitt,' nor would the inquiry be important. What is certain is that to us the book represents a deed of high cultural significance and that the future historian of American civilization will turn to it with infinite profit, with mingled amusement, astonishment, and pity." L. L.

+ Nation 115:284 S 20 '22 750w

"Mr. Sinclair Lewis, who has written a good book, not seldom in strong resentment allows his expression to go unrefined." H. M. T.

+ — Nation and Ath 32:121 O 21 '22 1050w

"Babbitt is hideously true to the worst things in America. The fact that it is not the whole truth makes it not so much a novel as a terribly damaging attack on nearly all of our worst faults, and a brilliant piece of propaganda for some future America which will be rid of them. To destroy evil it isolates evil; that is not fiction. It is rather a contribution to the prevailing mood, among intellectuals. There's a lot more to America, even that part of her next door to the Boosters' Club, than the crude and frantic gospel of the Boosters. There's a rich, easy-going humor, a genuine if not always effective kindness, intimately mixed with the Booster streak. Isn't Mr. Lewis, by contrast with a writer interested in giving us characters of such a genuine American admixture, mentally almost an exile from America?" Robert Littell

— New Repub 32:152 O 4 '22 1400w

"It has that something extra, over and above, which makes the work of art, and it is signed in every line with the unique personality of the writer. It is saturated with America's vitality which makes one obey the rhythms of its dance music. And combined with this, Mr. Lewis has an individual gift of humour, a curiously sage devotion to craftsmanship, and a poetic passion for his own, new country." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 20:78 O 21 '22 1750w

"In 'Babbitt' Mr. Sinclair Lewis triumphs precisely where in 'Main Street' he failed. By fixing attention firmly on one superb central figure he has achieved an admirable effect of unity and concentration. You are rapt, fascinated, from the moment when you find Babbitt waking in the sleeping porch of his house at Floral Heights to that final moment of sorrowful insight when he sees himself as he is. You have the complete, brilliant portrait of a man." May Sinclair

+ N Y Times S 24 '22 1800w

"One of the finest social satires in the English language." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 17 '22 1500w

"A successful, amusing, ironic, human document in our social history." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 1 '22 90w

"Professor Canby is right: this 'literature of protest' has to be written, and it would be a mistake to suppose that it has no significance. But even the younger generation, who revel in rebellion, is rather shrewder in its appreciation of life than Mr. Lewis is in his story—it is not hard to be shrewder than a man who has a thesis. And they will remorselessly check him up with their own experience which even, when it is not large, usually begets a certain clear and nontheoretical wisdom. It will be Mr. Lewis's fate to be smiled with, and also a good deal smiled at, by youth."

+ — No Am 216:716 N '22 1000w

"Babbitt's literary portrait is a piece of meticulous exactness; the technical skill with which his creator avoids the temptation of making a mere type of him is a triumph." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 132:253 O 11 '22 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:461 N '22

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"Mr. Lewis's powers of observation and analysis have developed wonderfully, and he has learned the art of satire. He has learned it to perfection. We feel now that his hate is the flame which springs up out of the fire of a deep and understanding affection. This is further vouched for by the fact that he has found his sense of humour again. The Messianic delusion has passed, and he can view the scene with equanimity. He has grown out of vituperation into real criticism. Moreover, he is now dealing more with human problems than with the difficulties of environment. Consequently, although he is still quintessentially American, his work begins to take on a more universal significance."

+ Spec 129:928 D 16 '22 1500w

"'Babbitt' is superior to 'Main Street.' As a work of fiction it will remain a manifest advance over its predecessor."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 8 '22 1550w

Reviewed by Florence Fleisher

Survey 49:sup291 N 1 '22 350w

"The story, though intensely American in its setting and the language in which it is told, is a drama of something universal—the tyranny of conventions."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p647 O 12 '22 500w

Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

LEWIS, WILMARTH. Tutors' lane. 164p $1.75 Knopf

22-19606

A very slight story, the scene of which is laid in faculty circles of a New England college. Little happens beyond the mild development of the love affair between a young English instructor and the sister of an assistant professor of economics, but there is some good characterization and an atmosphere of easy humor and good-natured irony. In the author's own words, "The story which trickles through the book starts out bravely enough. For a short time it looks as though something might come of it; but nothing really does. And those who insist upon having their love spasms will be bored to death by Tutors' Lane and should on no account be allowed to look at it."

Booklist 19:123 Ja '23

"A delightful sketch of love and manners in a small college town. Tutors' Lane is shrewd, kindly, and amusing."

+ Dial 73:681 D '22 70w

Freeman 6:430 Ja 10 '23 150w

"We have put this book up on our shelves in the firm belief that it will, several years hence, serve us as a reminder of talent early recognized. As good a gift for writing as Mr. Lewis's should not run to waste. When it comes to adorn deeper experience and wider observation it should prove more than a fleeting pleasure."

Lit R p32 S 16 '22 300w

"The outstanding quality of the slender little tale is the author's ability to maintain throughout, with never an instant's break, an air of tolerant, facetious, blasé good humor, of mild amusement."

+ — N Y Times p10 O 17 '22 310w

"A light, entertaining book, rather admirably done, and as such at least moderately precious. With humorous, but sympathetic realism he has called forth the characters of a small college town, those characters that are not absent from a large college, either. And he has utilized these for a story which does not attempt to be serious or memorable, but which does entertain." T: C. Chubb

+ — N Y Tribune p7 O 1 '22 600w

"The story is deft rather than deep and betokens the addition of a sport model to the fleet of cars in our literary garage, a high-powered, solidly built joy machine."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 11 '22 300w

Wis Lib Bul 18:254 N '22

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Drama and the stage. 245p $2 Harcourt

792 Theater. Drama

22-5326

The book, consisting of a collection of articles originally written for the Nation, forms a coherent critique of our present-day theater with a survey of theatrical conditions in France and Germany. The author considers our American theater inferior to the European, especially the German, to which he ascribes an unflinching sense of the identity of art and life. The plight of our theater he attributes less to the shortcomings of the dramatists than to their audiences. "It is the theatre of a class and an economic condition from which we must free it for the service of nobler and more human things." The essays are grouped under the headings: The new dramaturgy; The American stage; Contemporaries; Art, life and the theatre.

Booklist 18:354 Jl '22

Cleveland p37 My '22

"Cleverly written. Mr. Lewisohn is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and his comments are shrewd and pithy. His matter is always interesting, but his more conservative readers will find some of his estimates of artistic values much less sound than his knowledge of actual facts." J. R. Towse

+ — Lit R p755 Je 24 '22 700w

"Mr. Lewisohn is the most significant of our dramatic critics. Forced by his integrity to be usually in the opposition, he has nevertheless kept not only his tolerance and his humor but also a remarkable power of seizing upon and of revealing the true and the beautiful wherever it may be found. The peculiar virtue of Mr. Lewisohn's little essays—all originally published in The Nation—lies in the fact that, taken together, they form an approach to those realities which find expression in the theater." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 114:500 Ap 26 '22 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:364 Jl '22

Springf'd Republican p8 My 24 '22 400w

Theatre Arts M 6:317 O '22 190w

Wis Lib Bul 18:155 Je '22

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Up stream; an American chronicle. 248p $3 Boni & Liveright

B or 92 National characteristics. American 22-5315

The author of this autobiography was born in Berlin in 1882 and came to America when he was eight years old. His introduction to this country was a little South Carolina town where his parents went to join his uncle. His early education was received in the South and continued at Columbia university. Beginning his career as a magazine writer he has reached distinction as a critic and as dramatic editor of the Nation, with some intermediate years spent in the middle west as professor of German. He writes with the utmost frankness and sincerity of a spiritual experience which was apparently "up stream" all the way to a sensitive, idealistic temperament. There is considerable bitterness thruout the book, especially in his account of his experience as university professor during the war, and he is keenly critical of American life and character, in which he sees "no stirring, no desire to penetrate beyond fixed names to living things, no awakening from the spectral delusions amid which they pursue their aimless business and their sapless pleasures."

"To read this book is to undergo a profitable ordeal. It makes a heavy drain upon one's self-control. Though we may be haunted throughout by a sense of inconsistency in the author, or be tempted to make neutralizing allowances for an unusually sensitive nature 'reacting' to his environment, the fact remains that the author has given us a warning that cannot be ignored. And any ordinary man who can read this book without seeing that the problem exists for him just as really as for the author simply corroborates the author's assertion that the ordinary man has forgotten how to think." C: E. Park

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG—Continued

Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '22 640w

"If 'Up Stream' were a novel, I'd say that it was one of the most moving stories I'd read in years, its early chapters written with ease, vivacity, and beauty, and its close handled with such tolerant fury that it is at once masterful and pathetic. Lewisoohn has a genius for characterization. Here a picture rouses one to anger, there a description strikes a note of pathos that is finely wrought emotionally without betraying sentimentality." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:190 Ap '22 240w

"Another very tired egoist has made his confession and nailed his defiance upon the gates of smug America. And what has Lewisoohn to offer as a remedy for American mediocrity? An impotent egoism, a shabby sex psychology, a form of erotic German romanticism so hollow and so hopeless that no phrases can hide its flabby contours."

— Cath World 115:838 S '22 350w

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"The book of a book-made man in a world in which none of the values have yet translated themselves into bookish terms; the book of a sensitive, high-keyed intelligence, pawing anxiously about in the dessicating leaf stalks of last year's culture, worried by its empty, rattling sound, but totally colour blind to the particular shade of young green that is coming up between them. Nevertheless it is one of the most important books of its type, since it enables us at last to place its problem outside of social obliquity and within the dimensions of subconscious racial and experiential induration." Mary Austin

Dial 72:634 Je '22 2200w

"The worst charge a reader can make against Lewisoohn is the aggressive conceit of the man, a conceit which frankly admits that the writer is the intellectual superior of all of his colleagues and of almost all of his contemporaries! The best that can be said of the book is that nowhere else in all of the mass of material written about America can you find so many bitter, so many true, charges made against our civilization." C. A. Hibbard

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 8 '22 1200w

"The latter pages of 'Up Stream' sound a trifle rasping; there is too much special pleading. The larger part shows the cultured and generally sane critic that Mr. Lewisoohn is when he is not 'thinking internationally.'" E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 108:311 Mr 25 '22 480w

"Because the subject is an argument, because the author insists on presenting his life in terms of truth and error, this autobiography is not the work of art one might expect from so great a critic of literary craftsmanship. It lacks balance and unity; it knows no economy of effort. But if this work be not finished art, it is at any rate a most eloquent and absorbing document. Mr. Lewisoohn can invest personal experience with universal significance. His poignant emotion communicates itself undiminished to the reader, and his illuminating comment falls like a searchlight on a hundred hidden meanings." J. J. Smertenko

+ Lit R p622 Ap 29 '22 1200w

"It is of capital value as document, pure and simple; it displays its facts adroitly and it carries conviction. But it is of even greater value as—I almost said a work of imagination. It has color, charm, grace, finish, eloquence. It is the book of a man who knows how to write English." H. L. Mencken

+ Nation 114:sup434 Ap 12 '22 1400w

"In defining his own fundamental philosophy he develops a stoicism which is dignified and eloquent. But when Mr. Lewisoohn turns from his factual record and with disconcerting frankness reveals what pain, humiliation, and bitterness the experience has cost him, his instinct for self-dramatization tends to shake our faith in his critical validity." R. M. Lovett

— + New Repub 30:230 Ap 19 '22 1250w

"He has an arrogant opinion of his own value and an equally arrogant contempt for those who have not been willing to take him at his own valuation. And what makes the self-revelation of this volume so sad is that he sees himself as an intellectual, whereas, in fact, he is a stark Emotionalist, governed by his feelings and unable to adjust himself to circumstances." Brander Matthews

— N Y Times p8 Ap 9 '22 2400w

"To us newer Americans, 'Up Stream' is not merely a book. It is vision, revelation. It is our struggles, our hopes, our aspirations and our failures made articulate. It is the cry of young America to old America not to confine literature, education and thought to the formula of a small group. 'Up Stream' is a dynamic protest against the sanctification of a priesthood in education, a revolt against the existence of an Anglo-Saxon intellectual aristocracy in a country that is the gathering together of peoples from every corner of the earth." Anzia Yezierska

N Y Times p22 Ap 23 '22 1100w

"The bitterness which marks his autobiography results from the fact that the great Anglo-Saxon element, the backbone and sinew of the nation, refuses to change its point of view and remold its manner of life to conform to his Teutonic ideas." S. M. Weller

— N Y Times p24 Ap 30 '22 600w

"One can say of Mr. Lewisoohn's autobiography that it is a highly significant book without admitting that it is at all a great book. It is all protest and confession. Protest and a confession have their value as counteracting certain narrowing tendencies, but there is seldom anything constructive or really clarifying in them. In Mr. Lewisoohn's case it seems, moreover, that his intellectual intensity, the best quality of his book, is always being distorted by his emotional intensity, another excellent quality. The two do not work harmoniously together."

— + No Am 215:714 My '22 780w

Pratt p35 summer '22

R of Rs 65:557 My '22 120w

"Although Mr. Lewisoohn talks much about his sense of beauty, he seems little interested in that literature wherein imagination converts life into beauty. His own best pages are sardonic portraits or caustic analysis. Nor does he reveal much humor."

— Springfield Republican p8 Ap 24 '22 580w

"'Up Stream' is a stimulating chronicle by a temperate, judicial critic turned revolté in spite of himself. As such, it deserves wide reading. But America being what it is, it won't get it." H. L. Van Doren

+ Survey 48:90 Ap 15 '22 250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:132 My '22

LIBER, BENZION. Child and the home; essays on the rational bringing-up of children. 256p il $2.50 Rational living, 61 Hamilton pl., N.Y.

173 Children—Management and training

22-3766

"While the more advanced of modern parents will find little that is new to them in this book Dr. Liber has here brought together all the details of procedure into a convenient handbook for all parents who are anxious not to make the mistakes their parents did."—Spec

Reviewed by Ruth Hale

Bookm 55:550 Jl '22 80w

"There are a few constructive suggestions which stand out from the mass of bombast and violent assaults which fill his pages." Agnes de Lima

— + New Repub 31:168 Jl 5 '22 250w

"Dr. Liber's writing often exhibits stylistic curiosities, but his ideas and meaning are never hazy or obscure. If the book has a fault, it is an occasional burst of unnecessary ardour; and there is no index. But its practical value as a handbook remains undiminished."

+ Spec 129:730 N 18 '22 350v

"The volume is a primer of liberty and interesting to experts as well as to tyros; which cannot be said of many primers, nor indeed of many books, even of novels." Bolton Hall

+ Survey 48:730 S 15 '22 280w

LIDDELL, DONALD MACY, ed. Handbook of chemical engineering. 2v il $8 McGraw

660 Chemical engineering 22-20435

"An important work in which the important processes of chemical engineering and the design and financing of plants are ably handled by authorities in their respective fields. Includes chapters on radioactive elements, rare gases, and rare metals."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:48 O '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:569 D '22

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY. Fair Harbor. 379p $2 Appleton

22-19481

Captain Sears Kendrick, having met with financial misfortune and a railroad accident that disabled him for sea duty for an indefinite period, secludes himself in his home town and is persuaded to take over the management of Fair Harbor, a home for mariners' women. The inscription over its gate "Without, the stormy winds increase, within the harbor all is peace," was something of a delusion and the Captain finds it rough sailing, but the post gives him an opportunity to prove some of his sterling qualities for human service and to outlive a young-man in winning the love of the matron's daughter. Humor and a sea flavor pervade the story.

Booklist 19:86 D '22

"It is a marvel to me how Lincoln spins out his yarns; he makes the most threadbare material go a very long way. Truth to tell, he is not uninteresting, either. If you like Lincoln's stuff, you will like 'Fair Harbor.'" J: V. A. Weaver

+ Bookm 56:493 D '22 200w

"For sheer entertaining qualities 'Fair Harbor,' with Mr. Lincoln's other novels, is unsurpassed. It is not great fiction, but it is good fiction, and although now and then its personages speak a speech that is more bookish than real it suggests Cape Cod as it was and is." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 11 '22 850w

Cleveland p85 N '22

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p70 D '22 60w

"The plot of this story, though well built and holding the interest easily, is not its chief claim. That lies more in the living quality of the people and in the dialogue."

+ Lit R p160 O 28 '22 250w

"Another of those Cape Cod stories with which Mr. Lincoln infinitely delights so many thousands of readers. The resource, the ingenuity, the variety of him are amazing."

+ N Y Times p13 O 22 '22 800w

N Y Tribune p27 D 17 '22 1000w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 132:532 N 22 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:533 D '22

"Entertainingly written, with Mr. Lincoln's characteristic humor pervading throughout. Some of the conversations are more bookish than real, and some of the characters are exaggerated."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 5 '22 330w

Wis Lib Bul 18:254 N '22

LINCOLN, NATALIE SUMNER. Cat's paw. 304p $1.75 Appleton

22-18095

Susan Baird is found dead at her tea-table and all the evidence points to murder. She is supposed to have been penniless but when her will is found her niece Kitty inherits a fortune. Grave suspicion shifts from one person to another and the two suitors for Kitty's hand whom Washington society had watched with interest seem closely connected with the many clues which again and again prove worthless. Until the closing chapters unravel the mystery you suspect the most innocent people and the real murderer and his fiendish devices come as a shock.

Booklist 19:123 Ja '23

"The story has that characteristic sense of confusion which so many writers of this kind of story deem essential to its proper telling. However, both beginning and end make the tale stand somewhat out of the ruck of fiction of this kind."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 18 '22 230w

"An excellent story of mysterious crime and its detection, quite the best she has yet written, clever, intricate and exciting enough to hold the absorbed attention of any one who cares for detective fiction until the mystery is solved."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 1 '22 550w

"It is a bit of deft juggling; but as it pretends to be nothing more one can hardly complain." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p21 D 31 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:533 D '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 26 '22 260w

LINDEMAN, EDUARD CHRISTIAN. Community; an introduction to the study of community leadership and organization. 222p $1.75 Assn. press

301 Community life 22-293

Believing that the community is the social unit in which lies the greatest hope for permanent progress, the author analyzes the forces which must be reckoned with in influencing public opinion and community action and outlines some principles and theories of community organization. The book is designed for classes studying community organization, and each chapter is provided with a set of students' problems.

"The great contribution Professor Lindeman makes is his penetrating analysis of the steps in a community movement. It can safely be said that hereafter no community organizer who is not conversant with them can be regarded as fully equipped for his task. As a whole the book affords a practicable chart of community tendencies and organization currents; and every worker in this field, whether or not he agrees with the positions taken, will find his objectives more clearly defined and his road made easier by a perusal of its pages." C. A. Perry

+ Survey 47:965 Mr 18 '22 480w

LINDSEY, WILLIAM. Backsliders. 363p $1.90 Houghton

22-4675

When the Reverend John Gray entered upon his first charge as pastor of the Methodist church of Wesley, an out-of-the-way country town in the Adirondacks, he was twenty-five years old, steeped in classic and Bible lore, but absolutely ignorant of life. He had never been young. The story tells how, in the first few months of his ministry, he grew up to the full stature of a man and a Christian in the true spirit of Christ. The village, though small, contains a full assortment of human types from all of whom in turn he learns something new about Christianity. Above all it is a girl, not one of his flock and a so-called "infidel," who takes upon herself the rôle of teacher.

LINDSEY, WILLIAM—Continued

"His scenes, characters and situations are all good and fairly fresh. As much cannot be said of the author's style. His method of treatment is as conventional as his material is new."

— + Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '22 170w

"The uniqueness of the book lies in the fact that the author, while going to great lengths to point out the narrowness and bigotry of the members of the little Methodist church, still does not 'write down upon' his characters."

+ Lit R p587 Ap 15 '22 230w

"Though the story in its handling of small town characters is clever and delightful, it is not the type of book which should fall into the hands of the youths of this generation."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 16 '22 370w

"It is a long time since characters as life-like as these have been found in any American novel, and it is all the more natural because it treats of what may be called 'humble life.'"

+ Springfield Republican p8 Mr 16 '22 310w

"The plot is not complex and the story is told simply and directly enough to be readable without making any particular demand on one except that he pay easy attention as he reads. The result is a good bit of reading."

+ Springfield Republican p15a My 7 '22 90w

LI PO. Works of Li Po, the Chinese poet, done into English verse by Shigeyoshi Obata; with an introd. and biographical matter tr. from the Chinese. 236p $3.50 Dutton

895

22-24285

Li Po, 701?-762, is the most widely known of Chinese poets. This translation of his poems, representing about one-tenth of his works preserved in the standard Chinese edition, is by a Japanese. The book has a biographical and critical introduction by the translator, some biographical notes on Li Po by Chinese authors, and a bibliography.

Booklist 19:153 F '23

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:388 D 23 '22 110w

"A charming book of Oriental interest." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 110:61 Ja 20 '23 300w

"Mr. Obata, in spite of a too facile acceptance of obscurities, has obviously striven to tell us what Li Po felt; and his use of words (even in a language foreign to him) shows that poetry is his province." A. W.

— + New Statesman 20:486 Ja 27 '23 1200w

"The translation of poetry, at best, is likely to prove an unsatisfactory affair; for poetry depends too often upon beauty that is untranslatable, upon how a thing is said rather than upon what is said; and once the gossamer fabrics of the original have been brushed away, there is frequently little that is worth preserving. This is not to imply, however, that the translation is not interesting and valuable, nor that the translator has not done a commendable piece of work."

+ N Y Times p15 Ja 7 '23 1200w

"Mr. Shigeyoshi Obata has given us for the first time in the history of translations from the Chinese, poems in English that are essentially Mongol in spirit." Ahmed Abdullah

+ N Y Tribune p18 D 24 '22 1650w

"This is the first considerable monograph upon a Chinese poet; and despite certain blemishes it may be regarded as an acceptable book on Chinese poetry. The translations, though lacking in verbal or rhythmical beauty, show very great literary skill. Their great merit is one which is generally considered a defect. They read like translations, not like originals; so that the imagination, conscious that it is dealing with things incomplete, is incited to supply as well as may be what has been left out."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 25 '23 1100w

LIPPMANN, WALTER. Public opinion. 427p $3 Harcourt

301 Public opinion. Social psychology. Press 22-6527

The author attempts a thoro investigation of the forces which go into the making of public opinion and the obstacles to access to facts upon which public opinion should rest. Among the hindrances which he discusses are artificial censorships, limited social contacts and time to give to the printed news of the world, and the fear of facing facts which threaten the established routine of our lives. He next turns to the effect which prejudice and self interest have upon our meagre information and shows how opinions become crystallized into public opinion and how a common will or herd mind is formed. He maintains that representative government cannot be successfully worked unless there is an independent expert organization for making unseen facts intelligible, that public opinions, if they are to be sound, must be organized for the press instead of by the press.

"No other book thus far printed comes so near to providing a text for the social psychological interpretation of politics. There is much that is new, much that is striking and interesting merely from the manner in which it is stated in Mr. Lippmann's discussion of public opinion." R. E. Park

+ Am J Soc 28:232 S '22 1100w

Reviewed by A. N. Holcombe

Am Pol Sci R 16:500 Ag '22 680w

"As a criticism the book will endure and will have far-flung usefulness. That usefulness, however, will be more in the line of stimulating thought than in the way of useful conclusions. The style of the book is its finest feature. It is a great relief to find an authoritative work on government couched not in the sedentary verbiage of the average academician but in a style that allures while it instructs." C. L. King

+ Ann Am Acad 103:153 S '22 700w

"Mr. Lippmann does not claim to have solved the question of a healthy and intelligent public opinion, but he has shown the extent of the problem and devised a remedy, and he has done this in a readable and critical volume." W. C. Ford

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '22 410w

"As usual, Mr. Lippmann writes with the confidence of the Almighty but, unfortunately, he is lacking in the necessary omniscience. He is essentially a propagandist, and his work is influenced by this characteristic attitude of approach toward any subject." W. S. Myers

Bookm 55:418 Je '22 600w

"Some of his analogies from the fine arts are dubious. There are a few hardly excusable errors in grammar. Moreover, though he recognizes the psychopathological factors involved in public opinion, Mr. Lippmann does not, in my estimation, attribute enough significance to pathological fear as a cause for substituting subjective opinions for objective facts." N. A. Crawford

— Dial 73:219 Ag '22 820w

"This brilliant study is indispensable to any serious student of politics and of great value to the citizen without special interest in scholarship. It points the way toward the new politics and the new social science that are now slowly taking shape." C. E. Merriam

+ Int J Ethics 33:210 Ja '23 1000w

"Brilliantly written and readable. It draws on a wide range of material for illustrations and for ideas. If there is any criticism in this respect it is that the author tends to transfer bodily too much of the work he is quoting." H. R. Wright

+ J Pol Econ 30:717 O '22 1800w

"The reader will find Mr. Lippmann's volume stimulating and rarely dull even in its discussion of abstractions." W. B. Munro

+ Lit R p772 Jl 1 '22 1200w

"Mr. Lippmann's book is essentially the matrix from which further stimulating and thought-provoking contributions to the current analysis of society will be extracted. He is dealing with cosmic material, and his touch is less certain than in his previous books. 'Public Opinion' is a miscellany of observations, jottings, glimpses, as invaluable in their transillumination of the Great Society as are the excavated utensils and fragments of a prehistoric culture in revealing another civilization. We need more and more of Mr. Lippmann's kind of searching if mankind is to chart a course it can navigate without disaster." Ernest Gruening

+ — Nation 115:97 J1 26 '22 1250w

"Mr. Lippmann has written a book which so carries the reader that critical judgment is difficult. Style and subject-matter are fused. I know of no modern book on politics where they are so completely one. As a consequence, its brilliancy does not impress one as fine writing; rather the material dealt with shines through. To read the book is an experience in illumination; no painter manages lights and shades better or uses color more dexterously to build up solid forms. The manner of presentation is so objective and projective, that one finishes the book almost without realizing that it is perhaps the most effective indictment of democracy as currently conceived ever penned." J. Dewey
+ New Repub 30:286 My 3 '22 3200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:329 J1 '22

"As a whole, the book is marked by intellectual integrity and penetration of a high order. Except for occasional obscurity and abstractness, the language is at once keen-edged and poised."

+ Spring'd Republican p15a My 7 '22 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:153 Je '22

"This pioneer work by Mr. Lippmann ought to make its readers more critical." J. M. Lee
+ Yale R n s 12:418 Ja '23 500w

LITTLE, FRANCES, pseud. See Macaulay, F. C.

LIVINGSTONE, RICHARD WINN, ed. Legacy of Greece. 424p il $3.25 Oxford [7s 6d Milford] 938 Greece 22-10803

"A collaborative survey of our Hellenic heritage in terms of arts and sciences. Nothing of the kind exists, and nothing equally authoritative is likely to supersede this work for many years. The introductory chapter by Professor Gilbert Murray is on 'The Value of Greece to the Future of the World.' The chapters that follow are by Dean Inge on religion, Professor Burnet on philosophy, Sir Thomas Heath on mathematics and astronomy, Professor D'Arcy Thompson on natural science, Mr. Charles Singer on biology and on medicine, Mr. R. W. Livingstone (the editor of the book) on literature, Professor Toynbee on history, Professor Zimmern on political thought, Professor Percy Gardner on art, and Sir Reginald Blomfield on architecture."—Freeman

Am Pol Sci R 16:525 Ag '22 150w

Boston Transcript p11 Mr 11 '22 580w

"For a unified, superficial, and eminently popular treatment of the legacy of Greece, one must go elsewhere; the present work is not notably unified, nor is it superficial, nor is it eminently popular. It should be read only by those who are prepared for hard going, or by those for whom the going is easy because of a moderate acquaintance with the subject." Norman Foerster

+ — Freeman 5:549 Ag 16 '22 1100w

Reviewed by R. C. Nemiah
Lit R p790 J1 8 '22 850w

"This book redresses in a remarkable way the injustice done to Ancient Greece in most popular works on the subject. . . Mr. Livingstone, in planning this volume, has deliberately and rightly set himself to put the really substantive achievement of the Greeks in the realm of thought in its due place. We have here for the first time in a compendious form the main steps of the Greek Construction in mathematics, astronomy, biology, and medicine, and the book is well worth buying for this part of it alone." F. S. Marvin

+ Nature 109:169 F 9 '22 680w

"This is the first all-round view within a single volume of the achievements of ancient Greece. The survey is well written throughout and all the better for being candid."

+ New Statesman 18:738 Ap 1 '22 1300w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

N Y Times p2 J1 30 '22 2300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:600 D '22

Pratt p28 autumn '22

Sat R 133:39 Ja 14 '22 1200w

"Take the book as a whole, it is one of the most fascinating compilations of our time."

+ Spec 128:176 F 11 '22 2500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p113 F 23 '22 3800w

LOCKE, GLADYS EDSON. Red cavalier; or, The Twin Turrets mystery. 372p $1.90 Page 22-9573

"The threads of action in this complicated mystery story center about the repeated apparitions of a cavalier in the costume of the seventeenth century. These apparitions, finally culminating in the murder of an Indian prince, throw the members of a house party in a Yorkshire castle into a state of mingled perplexity and panic. The trail of the mystery has so many turnings that it is not easy to follow. The investigators stumble across all sorts of apparently unrelated clues; the theft of a jewel from a Hindu shrine, the debts of a young prodigal, the reappearance of the undesirable husband of an unhappily married woman. In the end the pieces of the puzzle are successfully fitted together, the villains are punished pretty much in conformity with their deserts and the way is cleared for a happy love affair."—N Y Tribune

"Gladys Edson Locke has given us a first class mystery story, and furthermore it is well written, and with much more attention paid to making her characters live and breathe than usually is the case in stories of this kind."

+ Daily News Rec p17 S 26 '22 390w

"This is good stuff, if you like mystery yarns. The story comes up to the standard demanded by the more fastidious readers of melodrama."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 J1 23 '22 250w

"The action of the story never drags and the solution of the puzzle comes with a genuine element of surprise." W. H. C.

+ N Y Tribune p5 J1 2 '22 190w

LOCKE, WILLIAM JOHN. Tale of Triona. 397p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Lane] 22-18470

Alexis Triona, alias John Briggs, was an adventurer and a literary genius with a natural instinct to dramatize every experience of his life until the fiction became the reality. As John Briggs he was of lowly origin, had run away to sea, had knocked about in Russia as chauffeur-mechanic to a great prince until the war and during the war had served in the English army there. Finding a diary on a murdered man, recording wonderful adventures, he writes his first book as Alexis Triona, using the diary as his own personal experiences. It brings him fame and an adorable wife, in the person of Olivia Gale, but it forces him to surround himself with a network of lies to keep up the deception. The discovery kills a happy relationship and separates husband and wife. The rest of the tale is the purging of two souls from dross, an accidental meeting after a long separation and a new beginning.

Booklist 19:86 D '22

"We miss the whimsical indulgent touch of Mr. Locke's earlier work. There is little of that fine distinction which we expect from the creator of Mr. Locke's delightful gallery, a gallery as different and yet as similarly limned as a row of portraits painted by the same artist. That is a pity. But we do find a touch of Locke in his use of words which march seldom in the fine pageant of the English language. Mr. Locke never uses an unfitting word, but, so far as fiction goes, he drags some of them in by the hair of the head." S. L. C.

LOCK, WILLIAM JOHN—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 8 '22 1050w

Cath World 116:570 Ja '23 300w

Cleveland p85 N '22

"Drama enough is in the new book, and unhappiness, both handled with the skill of long practice, but one somehow feels that Locke is happy when his characters are happy—one senses an undercurrent of joyousness in the author when high romance is at its highest. 'The Tale of Triona' deserves a place upon the bookshelf with his other charming novels." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p175 N 1 '22 610w

"If Locke has written more vivid and compelling stories than 'The Tale of Triona,' still his peculiar distinction and charm of style run through the whole narrative like flexible golden threads. As craftsman, artist and story teller, Locke holds his own." E. N. Hepburn

+ N Y Times p25 S 24 '22 650w

"Locke's easy, lucid, felicitous phrasing, his sparkling manner enlists the reader's interest on the first page and keeps it riveted till the last. He does not need to be probable. He is plausible. If he were both, of course he would be an author of genius instead of talent." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p6 O 1 '22 1050w

"The love story is exceptionally fine and pleasing and the reader suffers poignantly and sincerely with Triona in his reverses. This is one of the novels one is perfectly willing should end happily." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 132:254 O 11 '22 160w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:461 N '22

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"It is all cleverly done, of course. But Mr. Locke, at his best, is so very much more than clever! It is the old story: false sentiment is sentimentality, and sentimentality is the death of charm." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 134:513 O 7 '22 1200w

"Not in Mr. Locke's best manner. All that can be said in its praise is that it is readable throughout. None of the characters lives, but the story is well told."

+ Spec 129:504 O 14 '22 80w

"Triona is a true Locke hero, debonair, lovable and whimsical with an ideal apart from acquiring, happy in the enjoyment of the world about him. 'The Tale of Triona' is refreshing and in its dramatic moments, exhilarating."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 26 '22 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p630 O 5 '22 350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:254 N '22

LOFTING, HUGH. Voyages of Doctor Dolittle.

364p il $2.50 Stokes

The adventures of Doctor Dolittle, the animals' doctor, and Tommy Stubbins, the cobler's son, who decided to be a naturalist. On their memorable journey to Spidermonkey Island in search of the jabizri beetles, they found to the Doctor's delight Long Arrow, the greatest living naturalist. Then in the great war between the Popsipetels and the Bag-Jagderags the doctor and his friends were able to render such aid that the two tribes united in electing the doctor king of the combined tribes. For a time the doctor was content to help his newly acquired people, but his work as scientist was handicapped by his kingly duties. And when the great snail offered to take the doctor and his party back to England, safely riding in his shell, they accepted with alacrity.

Reviewed by Florence Converse

Atlantic's Bookshelf D '22 320w

Booklist 19:91 D '22

"It is grave nonsense and gentle humour and a strain of inventiveness, which does not, however, go as far as the names, only some of which are amusing. Children will like it because it keeps always one half step ahead of them, and they will fancy they are walking out with their agreeable elders."

+ Dial 73:582 N '22 70w

"The illustrations, done by the same hand that wrote the story, add a hundred per cent to the charm of the book. They are almost more full of fancy and happy abandon than the story itself."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 23 '23 250w

"No 'nature stories' for children half false and half true as they are, point the moral of consideration for all living creatures as well as does the companionship of this solemnly absurd doctor, naturalist, and explorer through chapter after chapter of authentic history. Proper morals in books for children are those that the young readers find for themselves; whether or not they ever occurred to the writer. This book is full of such morals. The pictures are from drawings by the author and they are delightfully worthy of the text." Burges Johnson

+ Lit R p239 N 25 '22 650w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Lit R p308 D 9 '22 30w

"Read the book, and then say if you know a better guardian for your child than the adorable animalinguiist, John Dolittle, M. D." M. H. B. Mussey

+ Nation 115:sup620 D 6 '22 210w

"[Children will] follow Dolittle easily and absorbedly. This is partly due to the simplicity of the diction, partly to the gentle tempo, but, above all, to the curious charm of the artist pen that writes it. Mr. Lofting has the gift. It may not be questioned; it may hardly be even analyzed. If you wish testimony try it on the small judges at your knee." J. S. M.

+ N Y Tribune p9 O 8 '22 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:36 Ja '23

"An exceedingly quaint story, told with a restrained humour, and illustrated in the same spirit. The ending is splendid, and we feel glad that the doctor is able to settle down in comfort. The drawings, of which there are quite a number, are extremely funny, in a quiet way."

+ Sat R 134:802 N 25 '22 100w

"This novelty in the way of travel books for the youthful, will find many readers among those whose hearts are still young, regardless of years. The whimsey and charm of Mr Lofting's funmaking will appeal to the adult's in-born sense of nonsense."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 5 '22 390w

Wis Lib Bul 18:276 D '22

LOMBARDI, MRS CYNTHIA. At sight of gold.
341p $2 Appleton

22-15850

"This novel is a mixture of good, old-fashioned romantic ingredients and an up-to-date scenario method. The trouble with the wicked adventuress is that she quite overshadows the noble heroine. The extremely unpleasant Geraldine of the story is much more interesting than the innocent, high-souled Clara. The hero, Antonello, is straight from the operatic stage, though he wears modern evening clothes. The rest of the outfit belongs to the chorus. Antonello, who is a simple, young, middle class Italian when the tale opens (though no one is surprised, eventually, to learn his actual identity), has found buried treasure, carelessly left behind by defunct bandits. Geraldine and her dissolute father steal the gold, Antonello swears revenge and pursues her through a very intricate plot. Meanwhile the ingénue, Clara of Rhode Island, has blossomed into a grand opera prima donna. The plotters are foiled and all join hands happily for the last chorus."—Lit R

"Throughout the entire story runs a too highly colored strain. And why, at the foot of so many pages, are translations of Italian words and phrases so simple that it would seem they could be understood by every reader of ordinary intelligence or breadth of reading!"

— Boston Transcript p6 S 6 '22 520w

"It is good screen material, but it manages, also, to be a little more than that in spite of the wild extravagance of its plot. But it is nicely staged and holds attention pretty well."

+ — Lit R p922 S 2 '22 220w

"It is not a very cohesive or a very convincing story, but it has some ingenious complications, while its sentimental interest and the final happiness secured by several of its characters will doubtless be pleasing to many readers."

— N Y Times p11 Ag 27 '22 420w

"The plot is delightfully far-fetched; the style a bit amateurish; but no matter, 'she do move.' To be seventeen, and read this book, would spell entire felicity for at least half a day." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p8 S 3 '22 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p633 O 5 '22 250w

LONG, CONSTANCE ELLEN. Collected papers on the psychology of phantasy. 216p $3 Moffat [10s 6d Baillière, Tindall & C.]

130 Psychoanalysis. Subconsciousness
21-26892

"This book is a collection of papers some of which have been previously published, while others are lectures or addresses. In a work of the kind there is bound to be some repetition and want of cohesion of the whole, but, on the other hand, each chapter is complete in itself and may be read and understood without reference to the remainder of the text. Some of the subjects dealt with are: Mental conflicts in children, evidences of unconscious mind in the child, unconscious factors affecting discipline, the censor and unconscious symbolism in dreams, sex as a basis of character, unconscious factors in sex education, the significance of phantasy in the production of the psychoneuroses, etc. Dr. Long is a member of the Jung school of analytical psychology and she clearly formulates their technique of dream interpretation and their conception of the unconscious."—Lit R

Booklist 18:37 N '21

Boston Transcript p1 O 1 '21 650w

"The title of Dr. Long's book is misleading, as there is but little attention given to phantasy formation, and its contents are more comprehensive, presenting clearly the analytical psychology of Jung. Difficult, technical terms are little used, which makes the work easily understood by the general reader." H. S. Howe

+ Lit R p398 F 4 '22 1750w

Nature 108:526 D 22 '21 750w

Reviewed by Katharine Anthony

New Repub 30:84 Mr 15 '22 1300w

"I am not sure that it is not the best introduction to psychoanalysis, or 'analytic psychology,' that we have. The earnestness and tactfulness with which the author presents her subject, and her wise comments on educational and social questions, excite favorable criticism." G. E. Partridge

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 22 '22 650w

"Most of the book is as wise as it is readable."

+ Spec 126:559 Ap 30 '21 180w

LONGFELLOW, ERNEST WADSWORTH. Random memories. 263p il $4 Houghton

B or 92 Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth
22-14126

This volume of reminiscences by a son of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow abounds in anecdotes of the poet and his friends, among whom were Charles Sumner, Louis Agassiz, James Russell Lowell, Charles Eliot Norton and James T. Fields. To the reminiscences are added an account of the author's experiences as an art student in the early sixties, and some art criticisms, including a chapter on Thomas Couture, under whom he studied. Some travel notes in Italy and Egypt are also included. In his art criticisms Mr Longfellow is a devoted admirer of classic art and finds little to like in most of the moderns.

Booklist 19:17 O '22

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p6 J1 1 '22 1500w

Cleveland p88 N '22

"He has shredded his material too fine, becoming petty rather than personal, prosy instead of pungent, and patronizing rather than hospitable towards the finenesses of the period."

— Dial 73:159 O '22 100w

"Though not important in substance, contrives to justify itself because of its brevity and its lightness of touch." Norman Foerster

+ — Freeman 6:93 O 4 '22 980w

"More sprightly and amusing than many a book written by men whose memories do not go beyond the Administration of McKinley." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:22 J1 22 '22 350w

"It is unexpectedly amusing, and free from hackneyed opinions about a number of great personages." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:78 Ag 19 '22 40w

Lit R p858 Ag 5 '22 330w

Nation 115:418 O 18 '22 20w

New Repub 32:341 N 22 '22 110w

N Y Times p24 J1 9 '22 820w

"There is nothing very remarkable in the book, nothing commonplace. It satisfies one continually because it all seems to be so natural and adequate an expression of personality. The style is almost the prose style of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, lacking a certain formality."

+ No Am 216:424 S '22 800w

"Taken for what they purport to be, 'random memories,' they are wholly delightful, and to readers who cherish fond recollections of the celebrities of the past century they will be of absorbing interest."

+ Outlook 131:534 J1 26 '22 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:515 N '22

Pratt p34 winter '23

"His recollections are vivid and tinged with a delightful humor, which tends to make even the most austere figures of that rather sombre time attractive to the reader of to-day."

+ R of Rs 66:222 Ag '22 100w

St Louis 20:251 O '22

"Is likely to prove one of the most popular books of its class this year. It is long since any autobiography has come from the press with so wide an appeal to readers of cultivation—not merely to Cambridge and Boston readers to whom the names of many persons mentioned in it are familiar, but to a wider circle interested in art and the methods of artists, and to the many who have traveled abroad."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 J1 6 '22 950w

"Those who knew Ernest Longfellow, and those who will come to know him through this book will bear testimony to his ability to stand on his own pedestal as an artist and now as a writer with facile touch. The book will possibly interest artists to a higher degree than Philistines, but as a travel volume it is quite worth while, especially when men rather than things are in the foreground."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 21 '22 450w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Laurentians; the hills of the habitant. 459p il $3.50 Century

917.14 Canada—Description and travel
Quebec—Description and travel. Laurentian mountains
22-11516

A narrative of travel in a little known part of Canada, mostly in the province of Quebec. The Laurentians are the hills of the habitants, and the author lived for many months with these French-Canadians on their remote farms.

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS—Continued
It is the country of Bliss Carman and Charles G. D. Roberts and here Louis Hémon laid the scene of his novel "Maria Chapdelaine." Mr Longstreth visited the original of Hémon's heroine in her home. While the author himself had unusual opportunities and guides, he gives practical information about possibilities of all sorts for travellers who may follow him. The illustrations include three maps and there is a bibliography.

Booklist 18:360 J1 '22

"Many can write enjoyably about nature. But few can recreate it as vividly as does Mr. Longstreth. The volume is really one of those 'glorified guide books' for which prospective tourists long—and usually vainly. And fascinating as are Mr. Longstreth's descriptions of land and people, not the least of the book's attractions is the sense of camaraderie it creates between author and reader. When the end of the story is regretfully reached, no one who loves nature and humankind but will reflect gratefully, 'I will also have been in Arcady.'" F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '22 850w

"It is no insult to call the book 'a sort of glorified guide book.' Though there are a number of good illustrations, a camera or sketch book in the hands of the writer would have improved the book." R. Flenley

+ Canadian Hist R 3:382 D '22 250w

Cleveland p4 D '22

"Well written and at the same time practical."

+ Dial 73:115 J1 '22 70w

"As charming and spontaneous a piece of writing as his other books. A book that can be used as a painless Baedeker by visitors to the region, or read with keen pleasure by arm-chair travellers who must have their vicarious adventures related imaginatively in well-written English." E. T. B.

+ Freeman 5:598 Ag 30 '22 300w

Lit R p764 Je 24 '22 260w

Nation 115:77 J1 19 '22 50w

"[A] book of charm and atmosphere and well worth reading."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 25 '22 320w

Outlook 131:534 J1 26 '22 100w

Pratt p29 autumn '22

R of Rs 66:112 J1 '22 170w

St Louis 20:250 O '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:184 J1 '22

LOOMIS, ALFRED F. Cruise of the Hippocampus. 252p il $2 Century

797 Voyages and travels. Sailing 22-17056

This is the humorous account of a cruise from New York to Balboa, by a crew of three, in a twenty-eight-foot auxiliary yawl—the smallest vessel that ever passed thru the Panama Canal. In fair weather and foul the keenness of the crew's enjoyment never abates and the reader learns much of weather conditions in the Caribbean.

"No one who is devoted to sailing can fail to love it."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 23 '22 780w

"One of the most enjoyable, light-hearted stories of an actual cruise which has been written in a long time." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:240 O 28 '22 150w

"Something of the thrill and pleasure of the undertaking is conveyed to the reader in the written account of the cruise, wherein we have a sprightly and amusing record of very incident from the time when the voyage was but an improbable future event until the moment when the voyagers alight triumphantly at Balboa."

+ N Y Tribune p9 N 5 '22 200w

Pratt p29 winter '23

Springf'd Republican p6 J1 29 '22 120w

"The book is carefree, vigorous and joyous. It was written while en route and it is freighted with the full enthusiasms of the moment. It is fresh and buoyant, but it is not cheap; it puts happy-go-lucky youth into readable English, but it does not strain. It is full of the cheerful abandon that sailed the yawl through a veteran mariner's share of rough weather."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 17 '22 180w

LOOMS, GEORGE. Stubble. 296p $1.75 Doubleday

22-18472

A quiet story of the experiences of two young people in adjusting themselves to after-war conditions and in learning that they were destined for each other. Joe Hooper and Mary Louise McCallum were friends before the war in a sleepy little Kentucky town. They came back, Joe from a southern training camp, Mary Louise from her Red cross work, to restless discontent with the old life. Joe's clerical work was distasteful and monotonous and Mary Louise's ambitious experiment of starting a tea-room on her own account in Louisville proved a different matter from her Red cross success. Joe tried other jobs. The two saw each other from time to time but success in their friendship, as in their work, eluded them. The new fields they were trying to till were filled with stubble. In the end they decided to go back to the little home town and see what they could make out of it.

"The story, simply the chronicle of those essays in 'progress' through which Joe and Mary Louise formed themselves and each other is uncommonly well conceived and written. Its lifelikeness intrigues from the first page, and its quiet charm abides."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '22 360w

"Stubble makes no great attack upon the complexities of temperament and personality. It is more effective in its panorama and scene study than in its dramatic effort; less an action than the materials of an action; its author's eye at present is chiefly for the pictorial."

+ Dial 74:210 F '23 40w

"Its merit lies not in its conscious expression of an idea or enforcement of a moral so much as in its uncommon excellences of style and characterization. There is no display of cleverness in either. The style achieves a quiet adequacy. And the persons, without being extraordinary in type, are extraordinary in their individuality, their effortless projection." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:241 O 28 '22 350w

"If it were the author's intention to bore his readers with the dull and meaningless lives of several insipid people, then Mr. Looms has written a very successful first novel. Otherwise it is difficult to understand just why this book was written. There is no orientation for the reader, no unity, no sense of proportion. There is only a meaningless jumble of meaningless events leaving the reader ultimately with a feeling of disappointment and exasperation."

— Lit R p52 S 23 '22 160w

"The little story is well written. There are a great many descriptions of scenery, most of them drawn with a good deal of grace. But the characters do not live, and the novel is one which depends for its interest upon its characters. This is a pity, for it has been carefully and conscientiously written, and is entirely without the slipshod quality which mars so many novels."

+ N Y Times p24 S 10 '22 330w

"We refuse to believe that human beings can live the existence which George Looms depicts in his 'Stubble.' A reader is bored and exasperated before the book is finished." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p12 N 5 '22 120w

"There are touches of insight in the book and the Kentucky local color is captivating, but one regrets the ineffectiveness of the principal characters."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 330w

LORD, CHESTER SANDERS. Young man and journalism. 221p $2 Macmillan
070 Journalism 22-22794

The author writes this volume in the Vocational series from thirty-three years' experience as managing editor of the New York Sun. Its purpose is to tell the young man who is thinking of entering the newspaper business what conditions and rewards he may expect there. All phases of the subject are discussed—reporting, collection and preparation of news, the art of newspaper and editorial writing, the problem of interesting and informing the reader, the place of the village and small city newspaper in American journalism, the extent of the newspaper's influence and its opportunities for service. The last chapter is a brief sketch of newspaper history.

"The beginner in newspaper work will find in the volume many valuable suggestions for the routine tasks of the day, the desk hardened editor will be reminded of several pivotal points in the art of newspaper making which possibly in the rush of office detail he may have forgotten, the lay reader will get from its perusal a valuable course in how to read a newspaper, and the academic and pedantic newspaper critic will learn from its pages that several charges against the press are without foundation. On the topic of journalism, Mr. Lord speaks not as a scribe but as one having authority."

+ Lit R p305 D 9 '22 400w

N Y Times p5 Ja 7 '23 500w

"The gloomiest book about a branch of work I have ever read. It is discouraging without meaning to be so. The whole tone of the book is that of a grandfather admonishing his grandson as to the perils of life." Milton Ralston

— N Y Tribune p28 D 17 '22 1000w

"Mr Lord writes with humor and in a manner far from magisterial. Perhaps Mr Lord is a bit cynical. And one must quarrel with the partial tolerance he shows toward exaggeration."

+ — Springfd Republican p5a D 10 '22 480w

LORD, ISABEL ELY. Getting your money's worth. 210p $1.50 Harcourt

647 Domestic finance. Home economics 22-4992

The author's qualifications for writing the book are her experiences in the School of household science and arts of Pratt institute. Its main object is to demonstrate that the value of a family budget lies in the fact that it forces the individual or the family to make clear, since a choice has to be made, their own ideals and to decide how far those ideals are to be regarded in daily living. Besides the money income such assets as time, energy, experience and ability are considered as coming within the province of the budget. Advice is also given on the use of banks and on savings and investments. Index.

"It is a model book for those who will follow its suggestion."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 3 '22 90w
Cleveland p60 Ag '22

"While this is a book that the reviewer thinks it would be well for any harassed man to present to his wife or daughter who 'just can't imagine' where all her money went, it will not be only women who can profit by it."

+ Daily News Rec p14 Ag 23 '22 480w

"A book which the housekeeper wants and needs and it will do much both to take the mystery out of budget making and to clarify people's thoughts in regard to their questions of personal finance. Miss Lord has added to home economics literature a book which will be useful in the classroom but which will be especially valuable to both men and women in adjusting their personal financial problems" S. J. MacLeod

+ J Home Econ 14:289 Je '22 450w

"Miss Lord, in discussing the apportionment of the domestic income, makes not only sane and wise suggestions for the division of the money at the disposal of the family, but accompanies them with a singularly well-balanced exposition of the reasons that have governed her disposition of it. Her book is a cogent portrayal of the advantages of a well-planned budget, and one that is notable for its general common sense."

+ Lit R p659 My 13 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:283 Je '22

Pratt p18 Ap '22

St Louis 21:8 Ja '23

Wis Lib Bul 18:154 Je '22

LORD, KATHARINE. Plays for school and camp. 224p $1.50 Little

812 Children's plays. School plays 22-11463

These plays were prepared by the author to meet some definite demand and were adapted to suit the time, occasion and place. There are some helpful notes on settings and costumes and an introduction. "The raven man," the first play in the book is suitable for a girl's camp; "Buried treasure," where pirates and gold feature, would delight boys; "Goldilocks and the three bears," is taken from that well known story but given a different ending; "Kris Kringle makes a flight," is a Christmas play; "The pied piper," is based on Browning's poem, and "The honorable Miss," is a play of childhood in Japan.

Booklist 19:23 O '22

"The dialogue in all is well turned, the settings and costumes are simple and there is no sentimentality or rhetoric. The development of each theme is not very original, perhaps, but Katharine Lord knows how to do what she does—which is just what is lacking in most of the many present-day collections of children's plays."

+ — Lit R p165 O 28 '22 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:512 N '22

Pratt p25 winter '23

"This book should be a valuable addition to any school library. Teachers will find it refreshingly usable without being threadbare."

+ Springfd Republican p8 O 17 '22 300w

Wis Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

LOREE, LEONOR FRESNEL. Railroad freight transportation. 771p il $5 (21s) Appleton

656 Freight and freightage. Railroads—Management 22-20366

The author, who is president of the Delaware and Hudson company, discusses all the factors that enter into railroad freight transportation: maintenance of way; shops and equipment; organization and staff; forms, accounts and statistics; movement of cars; movement of engines and trains; employees and their duties; employment relations; railroad labor organizations and strikes. Many statistical charts are included. Index.

"Mr. Loree's subject is narrow and technical, but the treatment is broad, interesting, and simple. The work is discursive, yet well planned and highly instructive. The topics are numerous and of specialized substance, but are made effective and generally readable by anecdotal and historical digressions and disquisitions." A. M. Sakolski

+ Administration 5:227 F '23 1500w

"The book will undoubtedly take its place as a standard work upon the subject of which it treats."

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 9 '22 520w

"For the lay reader almost as much as for the railroad official a reading of this book will prove a most profitable experience. Those who know Mr. Loree know that he is a man of a many-sided and most stimulating personality—full of the savor which permeates this book and gives to what would otherwise be merely technical discussions a flavor and attraction which make them fascinating."

+ Ind 109:354 D 9 '22 1300w

LOREE, LEONOR FRESNEL.—Continued

"The parts of this book which present argumentatively the writer's economic position disclose the greatest facility and force of writing, and show that Mr Loree is not only a man of ideas, but a man who knows how to present his ideas."

+ Springfield Republican p6 N 13 '22 1100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p766 N 23 '22 100w

LORING, F. H. Atomic theories. 218p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Methuen]

541.2 Atomic theory (Eng ed 22-6153)

"The object of this book is to give the leading facts and theories which relate to the Atom, particularly those which have not yet been treated at any length in text-books owing to their newness. . . . The atomic subjects treated cover a wide range and include the Quantum Theory and Sir J. J. Thomson's recent views of Mass, Matter and Radiation. The Bohr Theory is given at some length, and the Sommerfeld extension of Bohr's work is briefly noted. Prominence is accorded to the recent investigations of Sir E. Rutherford; to the Octet Theory and to Isotopes. The Brownian Movement, including Professor J. Perrin's work, is dealt with in one short chapter, as Perrin's book fully covers the subject. Ionisation Potentials and Solar Phenomena are discussed." (Preface) There are many illustrative figures, appendices, a name and a subject index.

Booklist 18:317 Je '22

"It is deeply to be regretted that so timely a book should have been so poorly contrived. In unity, emphasis, and coherence, Mr. Loring's work is unfortunately deficient." J: Mills

— Lit R p546 Ap 1 '22 680w

"In the case of chemical students, a non-mathematical treatment is, so far as is possible, desired. Mr. Loring's book, which is attractively printed on good paper, will be found of great interest and value in this connection. In some cases, notably Chapter IX, on the Quantum Theory, the treatment is too condensed to be clear. The style in many respects is often at fault; the author shows a tendency to wander in sentences, which leaves one with a confused idea of what he is trying to say."

+ — Nature 109:372 Mr 23 '22 170w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:8 Mr '22

"A simple, but rather disconnected, account of some recent theories and researches on the constitution of the atom which have not yet found their way into the ordinary text-books. The book is not a popular exposition in the sense that a reader with no previous knowledge of physics would be able to read it; a fair acquaintance with scientific terminology is assumed, and in view of that fact we think that a rather more technical treatment would have been an advantage. As it is, Mr. Loring's account of so important a theory as Quantum Theory and the Bohr atom, for instance, is somewhat obscure, because not sufficiently technical."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p847 D 15 '21 130w

LOTI, PIERRE, pseud. (LOUIS MARIE JULIEN VIAUD). Sahara; tr. from the French by Marjorie Laurie. 215p $3.50 Brentano's [10s 6d T. W. Laurie]

(Eng ed 22-5178)

"Pierre Loti uses the reciprocal love between a sensuous native girl of Africa and a French soldier stationed in the Senegal, to symbolize the hold with which Africa grasps this unwary itinerant. Tragedy follows the inability of the man to tear away the fetters with which this daughter of the Sahara has bound him."—Bookm

Bookm 54:590 F '22 110w
Cleveland p90 D '22

"The translation of The Sahara does not excel. Nobody could do in English what Loti does in French, and get away with it." F: O'Brien

+ — N Y Times p15 Ja 22 '22 1350w

LOW, DAVID HALBURTON, tr. Ballads of Marko Kraljević. 196p il $5 Macmillan [15s Cambridge univ. press]

891.82

22-17309

"These lively ballads form a cycle relating the tremendous deeds of the Serbian hero, Marko Kraljević. They are of traditional origin, and were written down little more than a hundred years ago. Marko stands out as a more natural character than the usual figure of heroic ballads, and even shows a certain economy in his heroism at times. Probably this is because the ballads are comparatively recent, having arisen during the Turkish domination in the fifteenth century, when the events related might have been in living memory. The line-for-line prose translation is a great improvement on the free metrical rendering which makes tedious so many adaptations of folk-poetry."—Spec

"The ballads are savagely beautiful and full of wild humor. It is something to have translated them with mathematical exactness. It would have been more to have caught some of their passion and flavor. From this Mr. Low has almost scrupulously refrained. Truth he has given us, but where is the poetry?" Leonard Bacon

+ — Lit R p44 S 23 '22 500w

"The book has an excellent preface. In every way it is the work of an appreciative scholar." M. L. C.

+ New Repub 32:315 N 15 '22 350w

"For the scholar, Mr. Low has given an admirable sketch of the growth of European interest in Serbian poetry; for the humanist his translation of the Marko ballads provides an authentic interpretation of a stage of society which elsewhere in Europe has long disappeared or developed out of recognition; for the general reader a series of poems which, in their present confident and sympathetic translation, contain much of the movement, the freshness, the naïveté and the humor of their originals."

+ Sat R 133:469 My 6 '22 950w

Spec 128:727 Je 10 '22 220w

"On the whole, Mr. Low has achieved a diction the archaic flavour of which may be regarded as an appropriate replica of the original. In this, however, he has not always shown sufficient discrimination."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 4 '22 1100w

LOWNDES, MRS MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC). What Timmy did. 312p $1.75 Doran [8s 6d Hutchinson]

22-14578

"When the beautiful Mrs. Crofton became weary of her second husband, an elderly colonel, and his hobby of breeding terriers, she eased the situation by adding a generous dose of strychnine to the tonic which he took daily. After a coroner's jury had tactfully brought in a verdict of suicide, the undiscouraged widow settled down in a Surrey village, with the intention of securing as her third mate a rich and desirable acquaintance called Godfrey Radmore. The success of her scheme was marred by the fact that she was constantly accompanied, unknown to herself, by the ghost of her late husband's favourite dog. This spectral attendant was visible not only to living dogs and cats but also to Timmy Tosswill, a twelve-year old clairvoyant. [He] paid a private visit to the alluring murderess; and, after scaring her with a few vaguely expressed accusations, gave her twenty-four hours to get out of the country, which she did, taking with her another sultor whom she had kept on hand in case of need."—The Times [London] Lit Sup D 31 '21

"An entertaining story, well planned, well told, charmingly envionred, in which the reader's sympathy, from the first, is with the irrepressible Timmy, even when his methods of procedure are most reprehensible."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '22 700w

"Like all Mrs. Lowndes' books the interest is well kept up and, as a picture of post-war conditions in England, it is excellent, clear, but not hopelessly harrowing."

+ Lit D p51 Jl 15 '22 880w

"Achieves only a disturbing dissonance of thwarted art. The author evolves a plot interesting enough to retard the weary eyelids on their downward droop, but never inspired enough to freeze the soul with terror or gladden the heart with mysterious beauty."

+ Lit R p779 Jl 1 '22 450w

"The plot seems to ring a bit hollow, there really isn't any mystery to speak of, and the entire concoction appears to have been thrown together in a hurry. Somehow the story as a whole does not stir one perceptibly."

— N Y Times p5 Je 11 '22 300w

"The supernatural parts of the story are unimpressive, besides recalling a previous book by the same author; there are indications of haste and carelessness in more than one place; and, as a whole, it is rather a flabby and insipid dish. Probably Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's large output has temporarily outrun her powers of invention. She can do much better than this."

— Sat R 132:719 D 24 '21 340w

Spec 127:791 D 10 '21 40w

"Timmy is not a likable child. There is something haggard about him. He has his good qualities and his touching moments of small-boydom; but Mrs. Lowndes is too wise to endow him with the attractions of childhood as well as with occult power. But there are plenty of other people in the story to like."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p787 D 1 '21 360w

Wis Lib Bul 18:274 D '22

LOWRY, THOMAS MARTIN. Inorganic chemistry. 943p il $9 (28s) Macmillan

546 Chemistry, Inorganic 22-17753

"Includes an adaptation of the author's 'Historical introduction to chemistry.' The systematic part is quite comprehensive and industrial processes are described briefly."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:37 Jl '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:556 D '22

LUBBOCK, PERCY. Craft of fiction. 277p $3 Scribner [9s Cape] 808.3 Fiction (Eng ed 22-26156)

"Purpose [Mr. Lubbock maintains] is the key to right art and right criticism. We are not able to judge of any form of human endeavor, or even to define it, until we have discovered its purpose. After applying this criterion of subject, or purpose, to one or two well-chosen masterpieces, the author goes on to the consideration of the various methods by which the novelist makes his form fit the theme he has undertaken. . . . This book about the novelist's craft is neither purely professional nor purely academic in attitude. It is as far from being over-literary as it is from being 'popular' in style."—No Am

"Mr. Lubbock's study of his authors is serious and profound. Not all readers will find all his comments just. But whether one agrees or disagrees with Mr. Lubbock in some of his principal arguments one cannot fail to be enlightened by his book. If it does not enable the novelist who reads it to write a better novel than before, it should certainly make the layman who reads it a more intelligent and discerning reader of novels than he was before."—A. S. Pier

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Mr '22 540w

Booklist 18:182 Mr '22

Cleveland p70 S '22

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Dial 72:318 Mr '22 1600w

"Mr. Lubbock's careful pages are full of instruction for the amateur of the novel—and full of disquietude for such readers as have been paying too studied deference to the princes of fiction. Yet his inquiry is limited in scope, and it produces limited results." H: B. Fuller

+ Freeman 5:189 My 3 '22 1100w

"Mr. Lubbock's book, in which he takes to pieces and puts together again so many famous and familiar novels, is a masterly exposition of the art of what Emerson called 'creative readings.' It is a book so new, so in a class by itself (for nothing of the kind has ever before been written) that it is impossible in a short review to convey any adequate impression of its charm and originality and interest. Its anatomy and logical structure may be abstracted and described, but in the book itself these dry bones are clothed with life—with the beautiful and abundant life of the great novels which he presents to us, as it were, afresh, seen in a clearer illumination and freed from that tarnish of time and familiarity which so often blurs for our acquainted eyes the great masterpieces of all the arts." L. P. Smith

+ Lit R p468 Mr 4 '22 3550w

"Good as Mr. Percy Lubbock is when you take him sentence by sentence, he is better page by page, better still chapter by chapter, and at his best in The Craft of Fiction as a whole. . . . Mr. Lubbock would be about the best man in the world, I should think, to give a course on novels in some college or other. His methods have a value quite independent of one's agreement with him in here-and-there opinions. He could teach our youngest novelists what questions to ask themselves before setting to work." Philip Littell

+ New Repub 30:sup1 Ap 12 '22 1050w

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 23 '22 3000w

"Though the considerations which Mr. Lubbock brings forward at the beginning of his discourse seem rather fine-spun and though they are of a sort rather likely to discourage the plain truth-seeker or the single-minded literary aspirant, the author's success in getting to the root of difficult practical matters with a minimum of delay and a maximum of clearness is little short of a triumph. . . . If one is a bit surprised to find a discussion of the art of novel-writing confined so closely to the question of the point of view in narration, still one can hardly question the supreme importance of this phase of the subject as the author develops it."

+ No Am 215:283 F '22 650w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:234 My '22

St Louis 20:247 O '22

"The book is interesting to intelligent readers of fiction and if studied by the critics may help them to write more or less reasoned reviews. But we cannot think its usefulness goes very far."

+ Sat R 132:sup6 O 22 '21 750w

"Mr. Percy Lubbock's treatise is an example of the best qualities of the analytical method of criticism. Mr. Lubbock has really carried the analysis of fiction another stage. It is a book which no writer of fiction can afford to leave unread, and it is one which will also very much enhance the pleasure of every intelligent novel-reader."

+ Spec 128:18 Ja 7 '22 1350w

"It would be a dull or omniscient novelist or critic that came out of Mr. Lubbock's book unenlightened and incurious."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p705 N 3 '21 4600w

"With all his sophistication, his subtle pondering of nice adjustments, he never penetrates to the secret of creation, never puts his hand on those elements which give the sensation of life to this tale and deny it to that other—without which all the skill and forethought in presentation possible leave the fable cold, dead. . . . This does not imply, of course that such subtle explorations into methods of presentation as Mr. Lubbock has undertaken are not highly valuable, particularly for the specialist and for the prentice. But their very special and restricted value should also be recognized." Robert Herrick

LUBBOCK, PERCY—Continued

+ — Yale R n s 12:181 O '22 2700w

LUBBOCK, PERCY. Earham. 254p $3 Scribner [10s 6d J. Cape]
920 Gurney family

"At Earham Hall, a Norfolk home of his maternal kin, the Gurneys, Mr. Percy Lubbock used to spend his summer holidays when he was a little boy. He has written a book about Earham and those summer holidays. . . He takes us all over the house, over the garden, on the river, on the Broads, to Norwich. He peoples his Earham with men and women. So we go up the generations, through the grandmother and step-grandfather, to dead and gone Gurneys—cheery Samuel in his great coach; old Joseph John showing George Borrow where to catch fish; and six bright-eyed Gurney girls watching through the bushes their sister Betsy (the world knows her as the great Elizabeth Fry), who is playing she will and she won't before the gold watch and chain which Mr. Fry has laid upon the garden seat as his silent offer of marriage. Mr. Lubbock, lingering, loving, gently presses out the precious drops of the beauty of his Earham. He gives us the people in it, their personalities and the religious and social place of these earnest, sweet old Friends and Evangelicals. He gives us a certain person, his grandmother, who is one of the most beautiful gifts that modern literature has to show."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:156 F '23

"So deftly are these happy memories interwoven, so sensitively do they touch experiences of childhood relatively common to us all, that Mr. Lubbock's reminiscences and interpretations reawaken ours. And the life lived in many an English and American 'Earham' of a half-century ago will come back out of a tranquil past to bless a present sorely in need of blessing." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 16 '22 900w

New Statesman 20:308 D 9 '22 500w

"These memories Mr. Lubbock has embodied in a style exquisitely attuned to the golden paths of its distance. It is a fine-drawn and long-extended tonepoem of childhood at its most, fleshless moments of first fine careful rapture." A. D. Douglas

+ N Y Tribune p19 D 31 '22 520w

"An absorbing and beautiful book."

+ Spec 130:61 Ja 13 '23 1100w

"To remember what a small boy knew and felt; to see those memories clearly through the eyes of maturity, yet never to confuse the boy with the man—that is much. It is much more to have so caught and translated these shy, evanescent bubbles of old being that they speak the wider sympathy and give us our own selves in fuller measure than we could command. . . Every sentence, and not only those distinguished by some happy stroke of slyness, or vividness, or grace is a joy to the reader who is not in a hurry; and the book is a book, a single, shapely, various whole. This quiet beauty, always lively, but never smart, intimate, yet choicely reserved, moving and never sentimental, is hard to attain."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p723 N 9 '22 950w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Giving and receiving; essays and fantasies. 216p $2 Doran [6s Methuen]

824

22-26975

Light and entertaining essays in the author's accustomed manner and covering a wide range of interests. There are travel sketches, genial moralizing, bits of pure fantasy, and some pieces so slight as to be hardly more than expanded anecdotes. Reflections on Christmas presents form the first essay. In another Mr Lucas discourses on that quality which is so peculiarly his own—whimsicality.

Booklist 19:75 D '22

Bookman 56:512 D '22 80w

"The current of his activity never flows very deep and never profound; but he does succeed in perpetuating the Lamb tradition of the essay with a pleasant and refreshing adequacy."

+ Lit R p203 N 11 '22 300w

"While you are reading Mr. Lucas his touch is so light that he seems to be merely brushing the surface of his subject, but at the end of one of these little essays you discover that his theme is finished. He has besides humour and neatness the essayist's essential gift—of establishing with his reader a relation which is intimate without being importunate, easy without being flat."

+ New Statesman 20:supxiv D 2 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:25 Ja '23

"Mr. Lucas has an inexhaustible vein of genial essay-writing, and this volume is as good as his others. His range of subject is wide; but everything he touches takes upon it the same suavity and ease."

+ Spec 130:108 Ja 20 '23 80w

"There is no better living writer of the personal essay than E. V. Lucas, no one who can invent an incident or describe a scene or follow a train of thought from an odd or significant aspect of contemporary life with a more satisfying blend of the reflective and the whimsical. Even in his most capricious moments, except when he is producing a sketch for purposes of light entertainment, he manages to escape the trivial as well as the trite. A sound, earnest observer of life is disclosed in his random reflections, whatever their guise."

+ Springfield Republican p7a N 10 '22 900w

"Mr. Lucas is well into the forties with his published books, but he is here as fresh and as various as ever."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p651 O 12 '22 110w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Vermeer of Delft; with an introd. by Sir Charles J. Holmes. 48p il $3 Doran [10s 6d Methuen]
759.9 Vermeer, Jan (Eng ed 22-13543)

In this appreciation of the seventeenth century Dutch painter, Jan Vermeer, the artist is described as unequalled in technical skill by any of the other great painters without exception. His work "contains such a mastery of the problems of illumination and shadow—apart altogether from sheer drawing—as must make many an artist go home and burn his brushes." (Page 37) "White magic," the phrase applied by the author to Vermeer's art, is explained by Sir Charles J. Holmes in his introduction to the book which also contains thirteen reproductions.

Booklist 19:43 N '22

"We have really to do with gallery notes, exclamation points of delight before the pictures. Much of Vermeer eludes this treatment. . . However, Mr. Lucas's frank and fine enthusiasm will win many readers whom a more analytical criticism would repel."

+ — Lit R p906 Ag 26 '22 140w

"Vermeer has come handsomely into his own. This latest tribute to his charm is in substance a republished magazine article, illustrated with a dozen collotypes and a not very successful photogravure frontispiece, which only covers eight and forty pages by the help of large print and handsome margins. But admirers of Mr. Lucas's other works will find a full share of enjoyment here, for he writes with unaffected gusto of the masterpieces he has seen and the hospitable butlers who have led him before them."

+ New Statesman 19:130 My 6 '22 880w

"The sincere worshipper cannot but communicate his ecstasy to the reader; and this is what E. V. Lucas does. Vermeer may not be as great as he affirms but he must be of heroic proportions to arouse such laudation in a man who is so obviously a fine writer and intellectual. And the reader will be pleased enough to follow Mr. Lucas in his pilgrimage from canvas to canvas and absorb the vivid descriptions of their enthusiastic guide."

+ N Y Times p14 J1 2 '22 1700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:502 N '22

Spec 129:501 O 14 '22 900w

"Being the product of real delight, it is always interesting. We have one little quarrel with Mr. Lucas; and that is, strangely enough, for a wrong he does to Vermeer. He calls him, instead of Andrea, the perfect painter, because, he says, Andrea, with all his weakness, was greater than that. That is our quarrel with Mr. Lucas. But for the rest, we have enjoyed the book very much."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 23 '22 1350w

LUCAS, MRS F. L. See Jones, E. B. C.

LUCCHI, LORNA DE, comp. and tr. Anthology of Italian poems, 13th-19th century. 359p $3.50 Knopf [10s 6d Heinemann]

$51.08 Italian poetry—collections

(Eng ed 22-16524)

"Madame Lorna de' Lucchi's anthology traverses the lyrics of Italian poetry from San Francisco d'Assisi, through Dante, Ariosto and Boccaccio, to Leopardi and Carducci. Bravely she places the text of the original on the left-hand pages, confronting them and the reader with her own translations on the right."—Freeman

Booklist 19:75 D '22

"This would not be an anthology if it did not leave out some one's favourite, and if it did not, in more instances than one, show a loss of flavour in the sea-changes through which the verse has gone. On the other hand, it is replete with happy touches, with compact, exact recreations of the Italian poem, with felicities of transference that stamp Madame de' Lucchi herself as a poet." I. G.

+ — Freeman 6:406 Ja 3 '23 300w

"Quite apart from the translations, this anthology of Italian lyrics is of value for its own sake. Within the limits of its space it is, as a whole, really representative, though, of course, it is easy to find omissions in a literature so rich as the Italian. The translations vary greatly in merit, as is only to be expected, considering the variety of subjects and metrical forms, but they will always be helpful to those not very familiar with Italian."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:544 J1 15 '22 150w

+ — Spec 128:758 Je 17 '22 150w

"Signora de Lucchi, we regret to say, has been too ambitious for her poetic capabilities. She is usually correct, though we have noticed one or two misrepresentations of sense, but she has not the poet's ear for sound or for the order of words. The merit of this book is mainly in its choice of originals."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Je 29 '22 1100w

LUCE, ROBERT. Legislative procedure; parliamentary practices and the course of business in the framing of statutes. 4v v 1 628p $5 Houghton

328 Parliamentary practice. Legislative bodies 22-18603

The first volume of a projected four volumes to treat the whole subject of the legislative branch of government. In this volume the author, who has served in Congress, in the Massachusetts legislature, and as chairman of the committee of rules and procedure of the Massachusetts constitutional convention, 1917-

1919, provides a comprehensive treatise on legislative procedure, both in theory and in practice.

"For the student of political science and the legislator the book is of absorbing interest and great importance. Especially valuable is the critical analysis of the methods employed and the rules observed in legislative bodies, and suggestions as to what the practice should be. The suggestions are fully supported by argument and the opposing views fairly stated. Mr. Luce writes clearly, vividly, and entertainingly, and enlivens with a vein of humor many pages that in less skillful hands might well be tedious." Middleton Beaman

+ Am Hist R 28:368 Ja '23 550w

"It is seldom that we have a book which indicates such meticulous study and such intellectual grasp." F. H. Gillett

+ Am Pol Sci R 17:126 F '23 550w

Freeman 6:430 Ja 10 '23 180w

"The book is not a systematic treatise, but it is so packed with pertinent information and illuminating discussion as to be a most useful work of reference and interesting upon every page."

+ — Lit R p275 D 2 '22 130w

R of Rs 66:448 O '22 80w

"By a happy mixture of reminiscence, anecdote, specific illustration and suggestive if sometimes ingenuous obiter dicta, we are enabled to enjoy as well as profit by a discussion of the major problems of methods of doing business in legislative bodies. Mr Luce has been catholic in his selection of material, and draws upon the experience of American and foreign Legislatures to illustrate the principles of legislative action." J. M. Gaus

+ Springfield Republican p7a O 29 '22 700w

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Book of the sky. 236p il $3.50 Dutton

551.5 Clouds. Meteorology. Aeronautics

22-18133

"This little volume grew out of experiences in flying which have greatly augmented the author's interest in the aerial world. Broadly, the aim of the volume is to aid the general reader in becoming more interested in cloudland. In aiming to present the discussions in a readable manner, tedious technical data have been reduced to a minimum. Such material has been grouped largely in a few chapters, although technical facts have been interspersed throughout the chapters with the hope that they would be more palatable to the general reader in this manner of presentation. By intermingling the two viewpoints namely, that of the earthly observer and that of the aerial traveler, it is believed the wonders of cloudland become more easily visualized, recognized, and understood."—Foreword

Booklist 19:41 N '22

"A bewildering volume. It evidently could not make up its mind whether to be scientific, appreciative, or merely rhapsodic. So it decided to take turns at all three."

+ Bookm 56:513 D '22 80w

"There is no doubt that the book must serve as an incentive toward flying, because the author has so much that is entertaining to write of his own experience among the clouds and what a different seeming world we live in when it is viewed from these heights. He has one chapter upon the supremacy of air travel which makes most interesting reading."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 23 '22 260w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:136 S 16 '22 100w

"An attractive literary quality is skillfully combined with accurate knowledge"

+ Outlook 132:251 O 11 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:17 Ja '23

Pratt p16 winter '23

St Louis 21:7 Ja '23

LUCY, SIR HENRY WILLIAM (TOBY, M. P., pseud.). Lords and commoners. 256p il $6 Dutton [18s Unwin]

328.42 Great Britain—Parliament. Statesmen, British (Eng ed 21-21588)

More sketches of English parliamentary procedure and personalities by the veteran political journalist who was for so many years known to the pages of Punch under the name Toby, M. P. He begins with a sketch of his own start in life and this is followed by sketches of Disraeli, of Gladstone and his Midlothian campaigns, of Lord Randolph Churchill and Winston Churchill. There are also chapters on parliamentary oratory, on the House of lords and a new house for the Commons and an amusing chapter on "bulls" or verbal lapses of which he has taken note during his many years' experience in Parliament. Some papers on subjects outside of Parliament are added. Illustrated with original drawings by Alma Tadema, Orchardson, Boughton, Herkomer, Phil May, Tenniel and E. T. Reed.

Am Pol Sci R 16:721 N '22 70w
Booklist 19:18 O '22

"All told there is an easy charm about this book which will endear it to all who care for recollections, generally gay and always indulgent, of political life. The pictures, not particularly illuminative of the text but souvenirs obtained by the author from Alma Tadema, Abbey, Tenniel and others add greatly to the delight of a volume which will not only be thoroughly perused by many happy readers but put by to be recurrently nibbled when one only wishes to kill time." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 15 '22 840w

Reviewed by R. J. Davis
Lit R p837 J1 29 '22 680w

"Written in a style that is best described as chatty, his reminiscences and impressions supply a pleasant garnish to the more solid fare served up by professional historians." Austin Hay

+ N Y Times p16 Je 25 '22 2150w

"Sir Henry rightly appraises those of whom he writes, and his allusions convey a true atmosphere. Wit and tact and reminiscent zest are in this book, giving a flavor even to its duller facts and its more random reflections"

+ — No Am 216:280 Ag '22 410w

LUNN, ARNOLD. Alpine ski-ing at all heights and seasons. 116p il $2 Dutton [5s Methuen]

796 Mountaineering. Skis and ski-running

This sequel to "Cross-country ski-ing" assumes a knowledge of technique and confines itself to snowcraft in all altitudes and during all the four seasons. Altho the book deals with the Swiss Alps, the information applies equally to all snow-covered mountainous regions and sets forth the advantages of ski-ing over mountain climbing on foot. The illustrations are from photographs and the appendices describe the lifted stemming turn and the use and abuse of the stick.

Spec 127:714 N 26 '21 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p739 N 10 '21 290w

LUNT, EDWARD CLARK. Surety bonds: nature, functions, underwriting requirements. 370p $2.50 Ronald

347.7 Suretyship and guaranty. Bonds 22-15504

The author, who is head of the bonding department of the Fidelity and casualty company of New York, considers all the classes of bonds that are frequently called for—fidelity, public-official, judicial, contract, depository, etc., and some others which, tho not common, present special points of interest or difficulty. He shows for each class treated what purpose the bond serves, and what principles control its underwriting. The tabular index provides a convenient table of references to various passages in the book containing the information which a fieldman needs in order to handle efficiently all recognized types of bonds.

"The book is a valuable addition to the series of which it is the most recent unit."

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 9 '22 160w

"Underwriters and their agents will place Mr. Lunt's work among their desk handbooks, and it will instruct many bankers, lawyers, and business men whose knowledge of surety bonds has heretofore been confined largely to classes figuring in their own dealings."

+ Lit R p354 D 30 '22 280w

Spring'd Republican p10 O 28 '22 150w

LYMAN, THEODORE. Meade's headquarters, 1863-1865; letters of Colonel Theodore Lyman from the Wilderness to Appomattox; ed. by George R. Agassiz. 371p il $4 Atlantic monthly 973.7 United States—History—Civil war—Personal narratives 22-24233

From September, 1863, until the end of the Civil war Colonel Lyman was attached to the staff of General Meade, commanding the Army of the Potomac, and the present volume is a selection of his letters written from headquarters to his wife in Brookline. He wrote almost daily, and always lively and conversational letters, full of human and even humorous touches, which show the life and action at the front.

Am Hist R 28:372 Ja '23 480w

Booklist 19:120 Ja '23

"They are not only gay, they are vividly descriptive, and when a touch of pathos comes it comes as naturally and artlessly as can be wished. Colonel Lyman had no literary ambitions and no self consciousness, but he had a clear style and a great subject, so unconsciously he wrote far better letters than those constructed for the purpose of talking to posterity through the persons addressed." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '22 1450w

"The book, as a book, has the unmistakable air of a gentleman, and will have a welcome from books of fine spirit as it goes onto the shelves with them." Morris Schaff

+ Lit R p290 D 9 '22 850w

"The chief value of Colonel Lyman's letters, to a biographer or a historian, will be found in the light they throw upon Meade's character. This book is wise and kindly, serious and playful, it gives us anecdotes and snapshots, it is always aware of the great issues that are deciding, it is acutely observant of the different textures of the days. So skilfully has Mr. Agassiz done his editing that these wide-glancing and extremely readable letters have the additional interest of an almost unbroken narrative." P. L.

+ New Repub 32:337 N 22 '22 1500w

St Louis 21:17 Ja '23

LYNCH, BOHUN. Max Beerbohm in perspective. 185p il $3.50 Knopf [10s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 Beerbohm, Max

The book is a critical study of Mr Beerbohm's work from the time of his appearance in the first number of the Yellow Book to the present day. The two parts into which it is divided deal with his writings and with his caricatures. Among the illustrations are ten reproductions of his caricatures which have not before been published. In a characteristic letter to the author, quoted in the preface, Mr Beerbohm says: "My gifts are small. I've used them very well and discreetly, never straining them; and the result is I've made a charming little reputation. But that reputation is a frail plant. Don't over-attend to it, gardener Lynch! Don't drench and deluge it! The contents of a quite small watering-can will be quite enough!" The book bears out the truth of Mr Beerbohm's statement of the excellent use he has made of the gifts which he so modestly rates.

Booklist 18:357 J1 '22

"From this book we have not Max Beerbohm in clearer perspective but a tremendous variety of impressions which somehow fail to fuse."
D. L. M.

— + Boston Transcript p4 Je 3 '22 920w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
Dial 72:522 My '22 940w

"At the beginning he is rather tryingly 'flip'; towards the end he attains a welcome sobriety."
H. B. F.

— Freeman 5:501 Ag 2 '22 270w

"The insatiable Beerbohmianiac will complain that the book is not sufficiently biographical. He will assert that admirers of Max, by the mere fact of their admiration, stand in no need of the crutch of critical estimate. However, as a compilation of data it is complete and accurate, and Mr. Lynch not only appreciates Max's writing, but, himself a draughtsman, understands the value of Max's caricatures."
Randolph Bartlett

Lit R p597 Ap 22 '22 1050w

Nation 114:626 My 24 '22 40w

St Louis 20:275 N '22

"Mr. Lynch writes of him with the affection of a friend and the ardour of a disciple. All through these pages we are in intimate contact with Max himself and in the company of one who appreciates every touch and shade of him."

Sat R 132:691 D 17 '21 640w

Spec 128:25 Ja 7 '22 80w

"Mr. Lynch is a much more satisfying guide to Mr. Beerbohm the caricaturist than he is to Mr. Beerbohm the writer. His book is one which no critic of Mr. Beerbohm's art can wisely ignore, however much he dissents from it."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p766 N 24 '21 600w

LYND, ROBERT. Pleasures of ignorance. 259p $2.25 Scribner [7s 6d G. Richards]

824 (Eng ed 22-26032)

"This handy little book of essays makes a companion volume to the author's previous collection, less happily entitled 'The Passion of Labour.' Such essays must be readable and so they dare not venture too far away from the current pre-occupations of the reader who turns over the page after having duly digested the editorial articles. Mr Lynd's secret is his skill in finding in some passing topic of the hour an excuse for a gently diverting dissertation. Even when his daily round is unpleasantly interrupted by the stern call to jury duty this hardened and wise journalist refuses to be disturbed. Instead of calling it a day lost, he writes an amusing essay called 'A Juror in Waiting.'"
—Lit R

Booklist 18:148 F '22

"A mixture of keen observations, sprightly humor, and an occasional burst into sheer didacticism. Food for both entertainment and thought."

+ Bookm 55:79 Mr '22 90w

"Robert Lynd is a past master in the art of writing those 'middles' which are one of the best features of the English weekly reviews, as they are usually the weakest feature of similar American periodicals. The real test of this sort of writing is republication in book form. Mr. Lynd emerges from that test with the successful few among his innumerable colleagues in the art."

+ Lit R p306 D 24 '21 170w

Nation and Ath 30:658 Ja 28 '22 700w

"Mr. Lynd is a beguiling writer; whether he writes shrewd sense or shrewd nonsense, the reader is soothed and tickled into a complacency which is of all moods the most enjoyable. He is humorous, but not high-spirited; he smiles good-naturedly, but he never laughs aloud, and in us he provokes not laughter but the slim feasting smile."

+ New Statesman 19:22 Ap 8 '22 850w

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne

N Y Times p9 Je 18 '22 2000w

"Mr. Lynd's essays are among the few truly playful writings of the day. Despite a certain obviousness in the choice of themes—a trait that is inherent in the playful mood—they are thoroughly captivating. . . . The triter the theme, the oftener other people have written upon it, the better Mr. Lynd appears to write upon it. Obviousness seems to excite his subtlety."

+ No Am 215:425 Mr '22 300w

Outlook 131:534 J1 26 '22 150w

Sat R 132:716 D 24 '21 230w

"Like many books—perhaps most books—this book is much longer than it ought to have been. Read in a weekly periodical, where all but one of them first appeared, each of the essays would be very agreeable. Read in succession, through 260 pages, they lose their freshness. Having faithfully read every word of Mr. Lynd's book, we feel that we have been robbed of a pleasure—the pleasure of reading one essay at a time, over tea at the club or after dinner at home."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p9 Ja 5 '22 450w

LYND, ROBERT. Sporting life and other trifles. 251p $2.25 Scribner [7s 6d G. Richards]

796 Sports 22-26892

"This is a collection of forty-four little papers that read like reprints of newspaper articles. Most of them deal with sport of various kinds."

—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:46 N '22

Bookm 56:515 D '22 200w

"The collection is gay, observant happily expressed—in the truest sense the reflection of a keen intelligence."

+ Dial 73:581 N '22 70w

Ind 109:284 N 11 '22 20w

Lit R p92 O 7 '22 280w

"He writes about horses and boxing and cricket with all the fervor and knowledge of one who has acquired his proficiency in the long hours of an ill-spent youth; and he writes about books with the taste and enthusiasm of a man who has never been kept from a good book by anything less exciting than life."

+ Nation and Ath 32:160 O 28 '22 1100w

"Trifles most of them are; and how grateful we should be to Mr. Lynd who is content to serve his trifle as trifle and not make a five-course meal of it as do some authors with larger circulations. They are models of light writing, these sketches." E. R.

+ New Statesman 20:18 O 14 '22 720w

"Mr. Lynd is a keen and humorous observer of life—at least of the superficialities of life, and these he makes interesting and amusing and whimsical."

+ Outlook 133:322 F 14 '23 200w

"We think it a mistake for essayists of distinction to dish up their less considerable work without any kind of revision. Mr. Lynd has not even tidied up. Yet ever and again we get the fresh and unspoiled thing which is the saving grace of the writer in a hurry."

— + Sat R 131:415 S 16 '22 700w

Spec 129:468 O 7 '22 180w

"Mr. Lynd writes about sport neither as expert performer nor as expert spectator, but as one of the crowd to whom technique is a mystery; and he maintains throughout the freshness and simplicity of vision that goes with that point of view."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p546 Ag 24 '22 210w

LYNDE, FRANCIS. Pirates' hope. 299p $1.75 Scribner

22-9489

Bonteck Van Dyck, a young millionaire doubting the sincerity of his friends and fearing that his money is over the attraction, plans a novel experiment. He takes a party of his friends, among them the girl he loves, for a yachting trip, with the idea of shipwrecking them and making them believe they are marooned on an island in the Caribbean. Very unexpected events happen and hardship and danger enable Van Dyck to see the true character of his friends. Buried treasure and real pirates add color to the tale.

LYNDE, FRANCIS—Continued

Booklist 18:367 JI '22

"The story is rather dull at first, but evidently the author became interested in his own schemes and worked them out better and better as he went along. It is coherent, logical, not overdone, and makes an interesting tale of a rather different cast from the majority of buried-treasure and yachting cruise stories."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 31 '22 500w
Cleveland p50 Ag '22

"A cracking good story from beginning to end."

+ N Y Times p15 My 14 '22 70w
Outlook 131:387 Je 28 '22 50w
Wis Lib Bul 18:186 JI '22

LYON, LAURENCE. Pomp of power. 291p $3
Doran [18s Hutchinson]

340.3 European war. France—Politics and government. Great Britain—Politics and government. Versailles, Treaty of, 1919
22-23383

"Another anonymous book upon the conduct and consequences of the War, the making of the Versailles Treaty, and the great figures of the time: Joffre, Asquith, Caillaux, Lloyd-George, Wilson, Northcliffe, and others. The author is evidently an Englishman; his understanding of American politics and politicians is, in the main, correct. The book considers the international European situation before the War, and devotes three chapters to military strategy. Some parts of the book have become especially timely by reason of events of this summer: the pages devoted to Sir Henry Wilson, the chapter on M. Caillaux, and the one on Lord Northcliffe."—Ind

Am Pol Sci R 17:141 F '23 70w

Reviewed by V. S. Clarke
Atlantic's Bookshelf N '22 600w
Booklist 19:47 N '22

"It strikes a high level in its union of complete candor and decorum."

+ Bookm 56:229 O '22 220w
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 26 '22 1100w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 109:106 S 2 '22 140w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
New Repub 32:283 N 8 '22 780w

"A book which, with all its power of style and keen insight, tends toward the fostering of distrust and hopelessness." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 6 '22 2450w

Reviewed by Lester Markel
N Y Tribune p8 S 3 '22 1750w

Pratt p31 winter '23

St Louis 20:276 N '22

Sat R 134:107 JI 15 '22 360w

"This is a very amusing, cleverly written book, with a great air of actuality about it. It is not, however, in any sense a serious contribution to history. Owing to it being anonymous, none of the statements is capable of verification."

+ Spec 123:210 Ag 12 '22 1750w

"As an unverified account of some of the political intrigues that went on during and since the war, the book is sufficiently readable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p479 JI 20 '22 650w

LYON, LEVERETT SAMUEL. Education for business. 618p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press
650.7 Business education 22-18537

The first part of the book, by a professor in the School of commerce and administration of Chicago university, deals with the growth of business education during the last twenty-five years, with its objectives and what business demands of education. The second and longest part examines the modern agencies of education for business; business colleges, private collegiate schools and correspondence schools, corporation schools, collegiate schools of business, high schools of commerce, continuation schools in business education, cooperative business courses, evening school commercial courses, postgraduate and teacher-training courses. The last section is concerned with the high-school commercial curriculum. Index.

"Public school officials, as well as officers of administration and heads of departments of colleges or schools of commerce, will find this book a mine of information and a source of helpful suggestion. Here for the first time has been put into a single volume a history of commercial education in the United States and a careful analysis of the various types of schools, organizations, curricula, methods, and purposes." E. W. Lord

+ Administration 5:103 Ja '23 600w

Booklist 19:112 Ja '23

Boston Transcript p6 D 2 '22 130w

Reviewed by A. G. Belding
School R 31:67 Ja '23 1300w

LYONS, ALBERT MICHAEL NEIL. Market bundle. 318p $2 Dodd [7s T. Butterworth]

(Eng ed 22-10172)

Short sketches, mainly of after-the-war rural England. Humorous, sometimes as in "Practical brewing," hilarious, but for the most part gently satirical. A few of the stories, "Stuck to the wire" and "The man in the grey hat," for example, are bitter with a consciousness of the tragic consequences of war.

"Apparently reprinted from some journal but having the distinction, unusual among such pieces, of being worth it."

+ Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 30w

"His touch is sure and the words, which seem to flow so swiftly, never jangle out of tune. Valuing them so much he is sparing in their use. No effect is achieved with two words where one will suffice. The result is a clarity of style that no American writer on Professor Pence's selected list has ever attained." H. I. Young

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 24 '22 700w

"Cockney fun and genuine feeling make these tales dramatic life-studies."

+ Outlook 132:344 O 25 '22 30w

"To the American reader tired of the native brand of war stories, 'The Market Bundle' will be a relief. 'The Postman-Postman,' an epic poem, will be a joy for anyone."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 250w

M

MCALISTER, FRANK A., pseud. of MCALISTER COLEMAN and FRANK DAVIS HALSEY. Last mile. 355p $1.75 Doubleday

22-20279

Ralph Broadhurst's disillusionment with the war and the ideals that had carried him into it begins on his return trip from France. He can no longer fit himself into the world as he finds it and begins to grope about for a basis of readjustment. He keeps on groping thruout the story. He falls in with a liberal group who are trying to form a third party and drifts into radicalism, getting more and more out of touch with his old associates and losing his old interests even to the extent of throwing up his bread-winning job. His relations with the other sex undergo a similar change. As he advances his steps become firmer and, altho he realizes the mistakes made by his liberal friends, the inadequacy of their demands and the futility of a new political party, his confidence in the necessity of a change grows and we leave him with his vision set towards still more radical measures. The incidents of the story are built upon a background of actuality.

"Realistic in details, the novel holds excellent-ly to its theme. It is fairly typical of many dis-illusioned now, even though life was not actually an illusion at any time. Without rancor, but with exasperation, the reactions of the man are natural and cannot be dismissed as those be- longing to a discontent."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '22 290w

"As a record of the post-war years, and as a mildly interesting picture of the life of a young unattached male in New York, the book may have slight value. It is without distinction of any sort, however."

— + Lit R p73 S 30 '22 230w

"There is the germ of a worth-while novel in this book, but as it stands it is a very inept performance. It is formless, humorous and dry-ly written." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p6 S 17 '22 400w

MACAULAY, MRS FANNIE (CALDWELL)
(FRANCES LITTLE, pseud.). Jack and I in Lotus Land. 261p $1.40 Harper

22-20281

Like the author's earlier book, "The lady of the decoration," the story is told in a series of letters written from Japan. With descriptions of scenery and customs is interwoven the love story of an American girl brought up in China and a young Y. M. C. A. worker.

Booklist 19:160 F '23

"Why could she not have kept her style so delicate, so fascinating, so amusing, free from attempts to talk down to the multitude? Other- wise the book is pleasant reading."

— + Boston Transcript p5 N 4 '22 190w

"The author has a pleasing, mild humor and an eye for the picturesque or the absurd. There is also a thread of story, of pathos, and of even tragic adventure running through the nar- rative strong enough to hold the attention."

+ Lit R p185 N 4 '22 110w

"There is no reason why 'Jack and I in Lotus Land' should not repeat the success of the 'Lady of the decoration,' unless it be that the taste of the reading public has changed in the meantime. The letters are bright, chatty, rather slangy at times, but too gushy to suit the masculine taste. It is just possible that they will suit the present-day feminine taste no better."

+ — N Y Times p18 O 29 '22 310w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p729 N 9 '22 280w

MCBAIN, HOWARD LEE, and ROGERS, LIND-
SAY. New constitutions of Europe. 612p $3 Doubleday

342.4 Constitutions. Europe—Politics and government 22-22684

The new governments of Europe whose con- stitutions are here brought together are Ger- many, Prussia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Jugo- slavia, Russia, Poland, the Free city of Danzig, Esthonia and Finland. The texts of their consti- tutions are given in English translation, with some introductory chapters on certain principles of politics and public law. Appendices give the revised constitutions of Belgium, France and Italy and a report of the conference on a re- formed Second chamber and the best mode of adjusting differences between the two houses of Parliament.

"Such a book as this will add much to the material for the use of classes in history and government where such material has been par- ticularly lacking." A. I. Andrews

Am Pol Sci R 17:125 F '23 520w

"Professors Howard Lee McBain and Lindsay Rogers have handled their subject interestingly. Any student of current European history will find the volume useful."

+ Bookm 56:775 F '23 160w

"Each constitution is prefaced by a historical introduction, which is brief, reliable, and suc- cinct. But that is not all. The first part of the book is devoted to an essay, 164 pages long, on constitutional government and its problems which is hrimful of knowledge and ideas, obviously the result of considerable study and re- flection. . . . In writing this book the authors have rendered a distinct public service. They have made available in convenient form and in good English the constitutions of the new nations, some of them not accessible in English and others very difficult to obtain." J. S. Scha- piro

+ New Repub 33:152 Ja 3 '23 2200w

R of Rs 66:671 D '22 140w

"This book is valuable alike for its informa- tion and its interpretation."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 4 '23 360w

MCCABE, JOSEPH. Evolution of civilization. 138p $1.50 Putnam [3s 6d Watts & O.]

901 Civilization 22-4337

The book is a continuation of the author's "A B C of evolution" and in a way tends to counteract the present pessimism due to our reactions from the war. The author holds that we are only now beginning to be civilized and have only just stumbled on the threshold of the adult life of humanity. A million years of human childhood have preceded a civiliza- tion that is no more than eight thousand years old—a thin film of idealism developed on top of a million years of savagery. He follows up this evolution of civilization to the down- fall of Rome which marks a complete collapse—a result of war. The gradual rise of our modern civilization he attributes to industrial and scientific development and ends with an optimistic prognostication for the twentieth century.

"Written in a simple and popular manner. Although the author brings nothing new to our information he synthesizes lucidly considering the space at his disposal, and will possibly create a thirst in the mind of the uncultured that only stronger waters will assuage."

+ Bookm 55:313 My '22 80w

"According to Mr. McCabe the whole course of the human adventure is as clear as day the moment you consent to adopt his attitude and become 'scientific.' But what is the 'sci- ence' of the author? Certainly not the science of modern research, but rather it is the as- sertion of a truth already discovered of which he has the secure possession. Here lies the explanation of the extraordinary but deceptive simplicity of this sketch of the human move- ment." Ferdinand Schevill

— J Pol Econ 30:859 D '22 600w

"Mr. McCabe is a safer guide when describing established facts. Then he is always lucid and interesting, if dogmatic; and if this outline of history can excite the young to the study of larger works it will perform a highly commend- able service."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:232 My 13 '22 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:299 Je '22

MCCALL, WILLIAM ANDERSON. How to measure in education. 416p il $3.25 Mac- millan

371 Educational measurements. Mental tests 22-2465

"A book on that phase of modern psychology concerned with intelligence tests, the construc- tion and standardization of tests and their use and value. It has a number of diagrams and tables and is very comprehensive in describing the field of mental measurement. The author is assistant professor of education at Columbia University."—Survey

"Although the book contains a number of statements with which other specialists in the fields surveyed might wish to take issue, it is a worthy attempt on the part of the writer to collect and make available in a readable form material not previously organized for presenta- tion to a non-technical worker in the field of mental measurement. Professor McCall's able treatment of scaling methods is certain to attract wide attention." E. B. Sullivan

+ — Educ R 64:357 N '22 580w

MCCALL, WILLIAM ADERSON—Continued

"The book is an excellent piece of work, being without question the outstanding treatment of measurement in education. It will serve, not only as a text for advanced normal-school and college classes in education, but also as a source of guidance for the more intelligent teachers and administrators who are interested in the thorough application of a genuine program of measurements." G. T. B.

+ El School J 23:228 N '22 480w

Nature 110:601 N 4 '22 310w

St Louis 20:266 N '22

"The treatment is simple and clear, which will recommend it to those troubled by the more advanced texts." K. J. Holzinger

+ School R 30:307 Ap '22 360w

"The volume is full of tests of all sorts, and there are copious and lucid directions for constructing and evaluating them. It is pre-eminently a book for the technician, but Dr. McCall has a trenchant style and an enthusiasm for his work which make it not unpalatable to the general reader. It is exceptional to find a book of this sort written with gusto and real humour."

+ Spec 129:730 N 18 '22 150w

"Can be recommended to the student or educator as a valuable book on a comparatively new subject. The author apparently possesses a sense of humor and, although the book is primarily serious and scientific, he nevertheless enlivens a page now and then. For reference work, or for serious study, the book is a solid addition to the student's library."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 .Ap 25 '22 450w

Survey 48:280 My 20 '22 60w

MCCARTER, MARGARET (HILL) (MRS WILLIAM MCCARTER). Homeland; a present-day love story. 434p $1.90 Harper

22-9665

This love story of many strands presents throught a plea for the time-honored home and family ideals. Two tried friends, Jack Lorton and Bryce Carroday, on their return from France, are both disappointed in their love expectations. Jack finds his beloved cousin, Leslie Jannison, cold and apparently absorbed in welfare work and the neglected children of the poor. Bryce's fiancée, believing him dead, has married another man and is the mother of twins. In Jack's case a designing, unscrupulous woman, who is seeking to throw her net about both Jack and Bryce at once, is making all the trouble. But the loyal and discerning friendship, that surrounds the two, eventually frustrates the wiles of the woman, and after much ado, legal and illegal, clears up the misunderstanding between Jack and Leslie and brings a deeper love to Bryce in the person of Jack's other cousin, Cid Jannison.

"We might overlook the frequent quotations from hymns and psalms, even the long soliloquies and the careful pointing of morals, but the one fault that in this day and generation we cannot forgive is the blatant sentimentality of the thing. The author takes beauty and religion, love and patriotism, and makes cheap phrases about them."

— Lit R p670 My 27 '22 330w

"This story might be described as betwixt and between. It is not quite literature and it is too good to be dubbed summer fiction."

— N Y Times p15 My 14 '22 70w

Wis Lib Bul 18:186 Jl '22

MACCARTHY, FRANCIS HAMILTON. Healthy child from two to seven. 235p $1.50 Macmillan
649 Children—Care and hygiene. Children—Management and training. Children—Nutrition 22-7014

"A handbook for parents, nurses, and workers for child welfare, containing the fundamental principles of nutrition and physical care, including sections on child nature, training and education, and safeguarding the nervous system during the preschool years." (Subtitle) Dr

MaccCarthy is assistant professor of diseases of children at Boston University.

Booklist 18:317 Je '22

"Presents, from the medical point of view, a body of valuable information concerning physical welfare. Its simple style makes it readable for the average elementary-school teacher. It will be a useful handbook for teachers, nurses, and child-welfare workers."

+ El School J 23:159 O '22 250w

"A practical, non-technical guide, and contains the kind of information now being made widely available through the excellent publications on infant care of the federal Children's Bureau." Agnes de Lima

+ New Repub 31:168 Jl 5 '22 100w

St Louis 20:212 S '22

"Full of common sense in the matter of physical care and full of platitudes in the matter of education."

+ Survey 48:250 My 13 '22 70w

MCCAULEY, H. S. Getting your name in print. 2 114p $1.25 Funk

22-17372

070 Journalism
Specifically with an eye to the interests of doctors, lawyers, ministers, public officials, candidates, teachers and persons in society "this booklet is addressed to all who seek a better knowledge of the needs and purposes of the daily press, in order that they may cooperate with editors in having published information about themselves and their business." (Preface) It gives information about the kind of news the papers want; about newspaper ethics; the manner of approach; the difference between sensationalism and news; what is and what is not a misquotation; how to meet opposition and keep matter out of print; how to word your communications; what constitutes a libel, etc.

Booklist 19:142 F '23

"The book is written in a bright, amusing style and gives a very clear idea of general newspaper practices."

+ Bookm 56:516 D '22 80w

"There can be but one opinion concerning the value of the advice given in this little volume. If one is bound to make the attempt to get into the newspapers, here is excellent, as well as exact, guidance on what to do and—more valuable still—what not to do."

+ Cath World 116:573 Ja '23 80w

Ind 109:214 O 14 '22 80w

"Mr. McCauley's advice is keen and practical."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 D 18 '22 150w

MCCLLENAHAN, BESSIE AVERNA. Organizing the community; ed. by George B. Mangold. (Century social science ser.) 260p $1.75 Century

630.1 Country life. Community life 22-11261

"Designed as a help for students of the subject and for all those actively engaged in organizing communities. The promise of the title is not entirely fulfilled; for the book is not devoted to principles of organization except in small part. The bulk of the chapters deal with social service in the small town and the county, with some reference to rural districts. As a description in those fields of the status of recreation, health, family case work, civics, and leisure-time activities in general, and a picture of the recent developments in legislation and form of organization for these activities in certain states, the book is useful."—Survey

"Considerable first-hand information has been included, and a few 'cases' which greatly increase the value of the book. It is difficult to discover any thoroughgoing social philosophy underlying the discussion, and there is little indication of the unstable basis in social research upon which present-day policies and procedures in this field rest. Significant recent scientific research in community organization, such as that of C. J. Galpin, has not been related by the author to the practical programs discussed.

There is real need for a comprehensive treatment of the problems in this field for both students in training and executives." E. F. Young
+ — Am J Soc 28:504 Ja '23 170w

"Will be equally valuable for college classes and for general readers interested in the problem."

+ Lit R p859 Ag 5 '22 110w

"The book would be useful to those not thoroughly familiar with social work who are attempting some service in a small town. Its usefulness for others is limited because of its elementary nature and the fact that it covers a large field and consequently does not deal intensively with any subject." L. E. Bowman

+ — Survey 49:117 O 15 '22 600w

Wis Lib Bul 18:214 O '22

MCCLUNG, MRS NELLIE LETITIA (MOONEY). Purple Springs. 335p $1.90 Houghton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

22-13321

A story of love and politics in the Canadian northwest, which older girls will probably find to their liking. The heroine is a beautiful and clever daughter of the people whom the popular young village doctor had hoped, when she came of age, to tell of his love, but whose romance appears to be blighted when he is threatened with tuberculosis and for reasons which seem to him sufficient withholds the truth from her. Taking her disappointment bravely Pearl, in addition to teaching the school at Purple Springs, enters politics and develops into a successful electioneer whose skill is dreaded by the opposition and is largely instrumental in its defeat. The apparently blighted romance is renewed and all ends happily. While the love interest of the story is highly sentimental its local setting and political scenes give it color and freshness.

"Its wholesome, fresh vitality, its dramatic quality, and the extremely charming heroine make this novel, in spite of its excess of sentimentality, in the first chapters, a very readable and admirable tale of modern Canada, a story that all intelligent Canadians will be proud to claim, as representative of their Northwestern life." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 18 '22 400w

"The plot of the novel, though not unusual, is well constructed and its characters are well drawn. Pearl is one of the most delightful women we have met in fiction for some time. As for the general settings and descriptions of the story, they are good. All in all, there is a wholesomeness pervading the volume that makes it delightful reading."

+ Lit R p494 Mr 11 '22 160w

"This is one of those saccharine books that adolescent girls read with vast enjoyment, and every one else wonders why. There is nothing of particular interest in the plot or setting, the characters are not real people, and the incidents all hinge in exactly the right way in favor of the good and lovely heroine."

— N Y Times p16 Mr 5 '22 180w

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 23 '22 100w

"Miss McClung is an author widely appreciated by an unsophisticated Canadian public, who love a sweet heroine, and demand that virtue should be rewarded."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 16 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

MACCONNELL, SARAH WARDER. One. 280p $1.75 Macmillan

22-1452

Holding high ideals of marriage, scorning jealousy, and knowing well that she could hold her husband "only by looking to her fences every day she lived," Alethea Mowbray married Frederick Haviland. Her brilliant husband satisfied her completely. He loved and admired his wife, but he was interested in many women, protesting that thru other women he would learn to know her. For long the struggle was carried on beneath the apparently smooth surface of their married life, Alethea hurt by his philandering, her husband piqued and baffled by her cool reticence and pride. In the end, with some of the reserves broken down, the union she had willed seemed won, but even then they did not know what they were going to do with each other. "We've just got to go on and see."

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 4 '22 850w

Cath World 115:839 S '22 300w

"Spicily ironic and full of crisp feminine dialog and a keen comprehension of women's problems."

+ Detroit News p17 My 14 '22 370w

"Miss MacConnell's irony is a delight; it runs through the story, a quiet, scarcely perceptible undercurrent. It has its complement, too, of sympathy, with a foundation of logic and understanding. She plays very whimsically with her characters, moving them about to scenes and gestures—all the while perfectly conscious of their utility."

+ Lit R p474 Mr 4 '22 360w

"The novel is, of a truth, a woman's book, by a woman, about a woman, for women. Miss MacConnell shows much skill in the portrayal of character. All her people who take parts of any consequence in the action have color and vitality."

+ N Y Times p18 F 19 '22 350w

Outlook 130:434 Mr 15 '22 150w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 21 '22 200w

MCCORMAC, EUGENE IRVING. James K. Polk; a political biography. 746p $6 Univ. of Cal.

B or 92 Polk, James Knox. United States —History, 1815-1861 A22-821

James K. Polk, 1795-1849, came into political prominence thru his conduct, in the House of representatives, of President Jackson's bank war. As speaker of the House he was one of the chief supporters of Jackson and of his successor, Martin Van Buren. In 1839 he became governor of Tennessee and five years later president of the United States. His administration saw the annexation of Texas, the settlement of the Oregon boundary dispute and the outbreak of the war with Mexico. Mr McCormac's purpose is not to write a personal biography of Polk but to confine himself to his political career and the part played by the President in formulating the policy of the nation.

"This is a careful, exhaustive, and scholarly undertaking of enduring value." J. S. Reeves

+ Am Hist R 28:332 Ja '23 1300w

Reviewed by E. E. Curtis

Am Pol Sci R 17:132 F '23 450w

"This is a biography worth writing. It depicts not only the little considered career of an important public figure, but also relates some very interesting chapters of political history and gives some vivid pictures of local conditions in Tennessee." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '22 1150w

"Painstaking, scholarly volume." A. W.

Vernon

+ New Repub 31:227 Jl 19 '22 1950w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:515 N '22

Pratt p35 winter '23

St Louis 20:224 S '22

Spec 128:754 Je 17 '22 1000w

"The book is crushing in its detail and documentation, and so far as the book was needed it could not have been better done."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p283 My 4 '22 900w

MCCULLAGH, FRANCIS. Prisoner of the Reds; the story of a British officer captured in Siberia. 346p il $5 Dutton [18s Murray]

917 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917- (Eng ed 21-6686)

The author was a member of the British military mission at Omsk during the Kolchak

MCCULLAGH, FRANCIS—Continued

régime and an eye-witness of its collapse. He fled from the Red army, was made a prisoner at Krasnoyarsk, escaped and lived for a time as a journalist in Moscow where he was again imprisoned by the Extraordinary commission and, after serving a term, released. He claims to be the only foreigner who has circulated freely in Red Siberia and Red Russia without a "guide" and that he has recorded his experiences with perfect impartiality. He is no friend of the Bolsheviks and deplores the fact that their cause has been strengthened both by intervention and by anti-Bolshevik propaganda. Included in the book is a full account of the murder of the imperial family and the subsequent disposal of their bodies. The appendix consists of thirty pages of miscellaneous notes written by the author in shorthand while a prisoner in Siberia and Russia, which he had no time to decipher till the foregoing pages were in the hands of the printer. Index.

"Captain McCullagh writes with great sincerity and with greater vigor and his book must in the future be regarded as the distinctive authority upon the topic it discusses. Of more interest, perhaps, than all else, was his interview with Yurovsky, the murderer of the Tsar. Never before has the story of the murder of the Tsar and his wife and family been told in such minute detail as in a chapter of this book."

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '22 420w

"He is decided but not bitter in his criticism of the Bolsheviks, and he is extremely interesting in his description of Siberia." E. L. Pearson
+ Ind 108:374 Ap 15 '22 80w

N Y Times p15 Ap 9 '22 120w

N Y Times p25 Je 25 '22 210w

"An impartial account of Russia under Bolshevik rule."

Sat R 132:267 Ag 27 '21 850w

"Intensely interesting and obviously truthful book. Captain McCullagh is probably the only Englishman who has seen the government of Lenin and Trotsky at close quarters without his trip being stage-managed—and who has returned to tell the tale. The fortunate accident that he is also an experienced, observant, and honest journalist, who knew Russia intimately for many years before the Revolution, gives his narrative an evidential value which it would hardly be possible to exaggerate."

+ Spec 126:816 Je 25 '21 620w

"It is more instructive than most of the books which have yet appeared on the subject treated, and it is more interesting than any of them. The author writes with a knowledge which Mr. Wells, Mr. Bertrand Russell, Mr. Arthur Ransome, and Mrs. Snowden had no opportunity of acquiring."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p169 Mr 17 '21 850w

MCCUTCHEON, GEORGE BARR. Viola Gwyn. 378p $2 Dodd

"This is a romance of the Indiana settlement of the early '30's. To the promising town of Lafayette comes riding Kenneth Gwynne, the knightly, his law books in his saddlebags. He comes with hate in his heart, inbred and undying, to claim the inheritance left by the father who long years ago deserted his family, and to punish the woman who had stolen him away. This woman he finds, Rachel Carter, the cold, the unyielding, respected as the widow of Robert Gwyn and the owner of half his broad acres. But also he finds Viola, her daughter, proud yet adorable, distressingly charming, apparently his half-sister. Follows a conflict of love and hate, enlivened by the intrigues of the dandiacal villain, Barry Lapelle, lover of Viola. The discovery that Viola is not his half-sister, but his childhood playmate, daughter of Rachel Carter's first husband, finds Kenneth madly in love with her. Rachel and Kenneth vie in nobility, the love of each for Viola greater than their mutual hatred. The final confession and sacrifice of the mother unites the lovers."—JLT R

"A charming and innocuous book with which to while away a drowsy afternoon."

+ — Lit R p14 S 9 '22 360w

"An entertaining and romantic, if rather improbable, story."

+ — N Y Times p22 S 10 '22 600w

"An excellent novel of its kind, probably the best he has ever written. The whole book is racy of the soil, vigorously written, and well constructed. It will fill the bill for any reader for pleasure, and affords a genuine glimpse of the past as well." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p9 O 8 '22 900w

"Very ingeniously our author makes his villains play at last into the hands of true lovers. So far as we can see, Mr. McCutcheon has risen successfully again to the expectations of those who have come to regard him as the masculine good fairy of romanticism." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e O 22 '22 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p766 N 23 '22 300w

MCCUTCHEON, GEORGE BARR. Yollop. 112p $1 Dodd

22-4206

"The experiences in private, in jail and in court of a thoroughly worthless burglar. The reader makes his acquaintance in the first few lines in the bachelor apartment of Mr. Crittenden Yollop, which he has entered solely for purposes of business. But Mr. Yollop, a middle-aged, partially deaf gentleman in the millinery business, has surprised him, knocked him down and captured his revolver and then compels him to call up the Police Department on the phone and summon an officer for his own arrest. Later on, at Smilk's trial, there is some amusing burlesque treatment of the methods of the prisoner's counsel, while the account of the deliberations of the jury is particularly good. The inevitable two or three members who hold up the verdict and are stubbornly for acquittal are subjected to an ironic travesty of argument and opinion that is not likely to increase public confidence in the jury system."—N Y Times

"The more ridiculous the tale becomes, the more amusing it is. The conversations between Mr. Yollop and Mr. Smilk are delicious, the behavior of the burglar's many wives in court is ludicrous, the whole burlesque one of the most amusing short stories in some time."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 18 '22 140w

Lit D p67 My 13 '22 1050w

"This [is a] thin, weak volume of pseudo-satire and disgruntled drivel with its sad pretence to humor. One suspects that Mr. McCutcheon did jury duty in a case so stupid that it left him determined to get even with the public."

— Lit R p513 Mr 18 '22 120w

"Sometimes Mr. McCutcheon's funmaking is rather far fetched and elaborate and his method suggestive of an elephant dancing, while he is frequently much too verbose for the best results. But his novelette as a whole is entertaining, it has frequent flashes of wit, and its hits at the faults and foibles of our system of penology are well aimed and cleverly made. One reads the book with many a chuckle."

+ — N Y Times p19 Mr 5 '22 350w

"A more amusing bit of burlesque writing has not appeared for a long time."

+ Outlook 131:40 My 3 '22 50w

Springfd Republican p13a Ap 16 '22 180w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM. Reconstruction in France. 349p $2.50 Macmillan

944 Reconstruction (European war)—France. France—Economic conditions 21-13153

A comprehensive survey of the work France has undertaken in the restoration of its devastated area. After some introductory chapters on the extent of the invaded zone and of the destruction wrought there the book takes up the general organization of the work of reconstruction and then, in separate chapters, the restoration of transport, industry, mines, and agriculture. The problem of finance is considered, the treatment of monuments and public buildings, the international aspects of reconstruction, the restoration of normal social conditions and community interests, and foreign contributions toward the work. The appendices give the text of the town planning law, of the law of damages, and the law of the cooperative reconstruction societies. Index.

"A comprehensive and readable account."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:719 N '22 40w

Booklist 19:47 N '22

Boston Transcript p7 S 23 '22 880w

"Dr. MacDonald's account of the successive steps in reconstruction is carefully organized and documented, and should prove useful to students, as well as to general readers who are willing to take pains to find out what modern war does to a country. Incidentally one may acquire a new respect for certain qualities of industry, resourcefulness and self-reliance which may be found in the French people." R. L. D.

+ Freeman 6:335 D 13 '22 330w

"Professor MacDonald has produced a book the value of which to France in the United States can hardly be overestimated. His study, very adequately garnished with clear maps, covers the whole range of what has been done to restore the devastated portions of France. It is no light reading. It is a wholly adequate answer to the catch phrase that France is militaristic—a phrase which has obscured the fact that a vast deal of French energy has been spent in bringing back to 'normalcy' an area which is somewhat larger than Holland, 'larger by nearly fifteen hundred square miles than that of Belgium and a trifle greater than the combined areas of Massachusetts and Connecticut.'" T: S. Bosworth

+ Lit R p349 D 30 '22 360w

N Y Times p15 Ag 6 '22 700w

"He has done his work with all of the thoroughness of the scholar and all of the passion for accuracy of a Frenchman. Nothing seems to have been omitted." T: L. Masson

+ N Y Times p6 O 29 '22 200w

"For the first time we have a definite, concrete account of just what the French Government has done in the restoration of the invaded regions."

+ R of Rs 66:335 S '22 200w

Survey 48:629 Ag 15 '22 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p603 S 21 '22 40w

"He writes very coolly, without enthusiasm or indignation. But underlying the book and as its final message is the belief that the work undertaken by the French nation to dress the terrible wounds of France has been worthy of it and worthy of the admiration of the world."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p606 S 28 '22 700w

MACELWEE, ROY SAMUEL, and TAYLOR THOMAS ROTHWELL. Wharf management, stevedoring and storage. (Shipping ser.) 350p il $5 (25s) Appleton

656 Shipping. Wharves. Stowage. Long-shoremen

This is volume five of the Shipping series edited by Emory R. Johnson and Roy S. MacElwee. So far as is known it is the first book to deal comprehensively with wharf administration, the loading and unloading of cargoes, the handling and storage of outgoing and incoming freight. The authors show how large economies can be brought about by the more expeditious and economical handling of freight at terminals and by the consequent quicker turn-about of vessels. Among the subjects treated are types of carriers and cargoes, wharf office organization, accounting, cargo transfer, types of cranes and derricks, stowage, delivery of merchandise from the wharf, and storage warehousing.

Cleveland p77 S '22

"This is the first book on the subjects discussed and the authors, who appreciate that the treatment is suggestive and not exhaustive, in it blaze the way for future study of the problems which are numerous and complicated." C. H. Peabody

+ Marine Engineering 27:138 F '22 1550w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:352 J1 '22

Pratt p24 summer '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 19 '22 40w

Wis Lib Bul 18:71 Mr '22

MCREE, MRS INEZ NELLIE (CANFIELD).

Secrets of the stars. 273p il $1.60 Crowell

523 Stars

22-18632

The book tells young people what they can learn about the stars with no other apparatus than clear eyes and an inquiring mind. Beginning with a general description of the vastness of stellar space, the author tells in succession about the sun, the earth and other planets, the moon, comets, nebulae, shooting stars, colored and double stars, the milky way and the constellations of the zodiac. There is a list of the principal stars and planets, a glossary, index and charts.

Booklist 19:128 Ja '23

"The illustrations are rather poorly selected and few in number, whereas nothing will so fire the imagination as the remarkable photographs which have recently been obtained. The best part of the book is the description of the constellations and stars, which is very interesting. The glossary of star names and astronomic terms at the end of the book is an excellent idea. The language, too, seems well suited to the ages to which the book is intended to appeal and we can therefore only regret that the astronomical attainments of the author are insufficient." C. S. Brainin

+ Lit R p202 N 11 '22 390w

Pratt p15 winter '23

St Louis 21:7 Ja '23

MCREE, WILLIAM. Command. 337p $1.90 Doubleday

22-26977

Reginald Spokesly, "a gentleman of indifferent calibre," by profession a seaman, for all his shipmaster's certificate had never advanced beyond the rank of second officer in the merchant marine or achieved the command he coveted. Behind his pretentious egotism there was neither force of character nor definiteness of purpose. Without positive virtues he was also without positive vices and of such ingrained British respectability as to shrink from wickedness after weakly coquetting with it. As a result of this combination of qualities he was a nonentity. During the war, while mate on an English freighter about Saloniki, he had adventures which thrust both responsibility and romance upon him from both of which he emerged a disillusioned but more worth-while man, with some inches of spiritual growth to the good.

Booklist 19:86 D '22

"The atmosphere of realism pervades Mr. McFee's book. His characters are more than names and portraits; they are biographies saliently told. They have more than their immediate and outward appearance; they have histories and families and background. Their lives have three dimensions. As the book goes on they become more colorful, more real, more interesting. The same comment applies to the book itself. In the beginning it promises to be dull. It requires application from the reader. Given that application, it repays it." W: A. McDonald

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 15 '22 1150w

McFEE, WILLIAM—Continued

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne
Int Bk R p70 D '22 30w

"Out of more difficult materials than what he has dealt with heretofore, McFee has here created a living interpretation of life, or of human nature, and therewith achieved a soundness of structure and style such as he has never more than approached in his earlier work." H. W. Boynton

+ Lit R p219 N 18 '22 900w

"Mr. McFee has imitated Conrad closely and, on the whole, successfully, producing a book intellectually deeper than any of his previous works. 'Command' is, though consistently interesting, not quite satisfying. The story of colorful adventure in the war-time East upon which the psychological content is draped is brought to a satisfactory solution but the spiritual conflicts are not resolved." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 116:46 Ja 10 '23 55w

"Mr. McFee has achieved an indifference, a nonchalance, an aplomb which are quite the perfect manner of the novelist. But it would be naive not to suspect behind this ingenuousness a theme of which the story of ships and commanders is a simple statement; and to which the background of a world heaving and yawning like a gigantic derelict, is a choric response." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 33:125 D 27 '22 950w

"He sees things brightly and intelligently, but not very intensely or wisely, so that the manner of his reporting always seems a little portentous for what he has to report." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 20:206 N 18 '22 980w

"Mr. McFee is himself an engineer in the merchant service, and, though many of the shore scenes are vivid, the most interesting parts of the book are those whose action occurs at sea. It has many well-written passages, some excellently done descriptions. Its dialogue is natural though the monologues in which certain of its characters indulge are somewhat too numerous and too long."

+ N Y Times p9 O 22 '22 980w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p20 D 10 '22 1100w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend
Outlook 133:186 Ja 24 '23 160w

Spec 130:24 Ja 6 '23 520w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 500w

Wis Lib Bul 19:24 Ja '23

MAGGARR, LLEWELLYN. Rural community. 239p $1.80 (8s) Macmillan

630.1 Country life. United States—Social conditions 22-5799

"The volume, written with the close advice of Henry C. Taylor, chief of the Farm Management Bureau at Washington is thoroughly practical in its discussion of how to survey a farm community, how to improve the schools, how to make farming more efficient, and how to energize the social life by clubs, libraries, and recreational centers." (Lit R) "There are useful chapters on the characteristics of rural communities, their contrast with urban districts, and the survey and its adaptation to the rural community." (Am Pol Sci R)

"A remarkably good piece of work." J. M. Gillette

+ Am J Soc 28:502 Ja '23 250w

"A very practical book. Should prove a useful guide to those interested in country life improvement."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:532 Ag '22 80w

"Its high points are first, the adaptation to the needs of local workers in the terms which the public school teacher can understand, and second, the exceptional judgment shown by Miss MacGarr in valuing the elements of life in the country. No other writer has so sane a head. With all, the book is sanguine. Its treatment is optimistic. Her defect is her lack of interest in motive or spiritual condition. There is no other book, however, which so perfectly supplements at the present time the work of other writers, and prepares for the use of the rural high school teacher the very material he needs." W. H. Wilson

+ Educ R 61:454 D '22 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Warner

El School J 22:798 Je '22 650w

Lit R p859 Ag 5 '22 120w

"Its chief merit is its extreme simplicity."

Nature 110:412 S 23 '22 30w

St Louis 20:213 S '22

"A straightforward, sympathetic, accurate description of the country-life problem and is so organized as to provide a suitable basis for discussion in rural teachers' meetings and community gatherings in the interests of public welfare." O. A. Tinglestad

+ School R 30:474 Je '22 400w

Wis Lib Bul 18:214 O '22

MCGOVERN, WILLIAM MONTGOMERY. Introduction to Mahāyāna Buddhism; with especial reference to Chinese and Japanese phases. 233p $3 Dutton [7s 6d K. Paul]

294 Buddhism 22-13146

The book is intended to serve as a guide to the general reader of average education and to lead up to a more detailed study of the subject. In the introduction, describing the doctrinal evolution of Buddhism, the author points out the difference between Mahāyāna and Hīnayāna Buddhism and in the conclusion gives a short history of Buddhism and the principal Buddhist sects. A survey of the sacred literature of the Buddhists is given in the appendix.

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '22 420w

J Religion 2:328 My '22 30w

"We learn little from it as to the higher life of the Mohammedan community in India, religious, cultural, or political, but it will furnish abundant material to the anthropologist." Edwin Bevan

Nation and Ath 31:158 Ap 29 '22 350w

"Dr. McGovern's book is a masterpiece of lucidity and compression. This book is intended to serve as a preface to a 'longer, more serious, and more ambitious book on Buddhism,' which Dr. McGovern now has in hand. Readers of the present slender volume will await with impatience the appearance of its amplified successor. There are a few misprints, and the marking of quantities is not consistent."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 19 '22 720w

MACGOWAN, ALICE, and NEWBERRY, PERRY. Million-dollar suitcase. 326p $1.75 Stokes

22-5370

The Van Ness Avenue bank is in consternation over the shortage of a million dollars, and suspicion falls on Edward Clayte, one of the paying tellers. San Francisco is the scene of the story and the villain who has taken six years to make his crime discovery-proof finds himself bound to commit another even more dangerous crime. He is an elusive creature, but by the help of a clever woman the mysteries of the bank robbery and the murder of Thomas Gilbert are brought to a dramatic dénouement.

Booklist 18:331 Je '22

"With rather more than ordinary ingenuity as to plot, and with rather more than ordinary human appeal is this story."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 1 '22 370w

"It is all smoothly written, and the authors display ingenuity in providing suspense and an occasional strongly dramatic climax. While not a remarkable achievement, the book will hold its own with the average detective novel and provide sound entertainment for those who enjoy racing with the author in the hope of reaching before he does the solution of his own puzzle."

+ N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 190w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:198 My '22

"A detective story of that machine-made species which apparently finds perennial favour in America."

— Sat R 134:216 Ag 5 '22 150w

Spring'd Republican p15a Ap 28 '22
200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:134 My '22

MACGOWAN, KENNETH. Theatre of tomorrow. 302p il $5 Boni & Liveright

792 Theater 22-1084

It is the purpose of this volume to set forth the ideas behind the new stagecraft, the reforms in the playhouse and the changes in contemporary plays which point toward a new drama. The author, who is dramatic editor of Vogue and of the New York Globe, and one of the leading forces in the Theatre guild and the Drama league describes the artists and theories of the new movement and then proceeds to study the breakdown of realism and the development of a new type of play and playwright.

"Whatever its detractors may say of Mr. Macgowan's book, they cannot by any stretch of the imagination call it perfunctory. It is the work of an enthusiast, of one devoted heart and soul to the study and furthering of his art. Its pages are full of color and animation, vigorous in their insistence upon the author's ideals, and staunch in their belief that the ultimate goal will some day be reached." J. W. D. Seymour

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf My '22 640w
Booklist 18:227 Ap '22

"Nothing is likely soon to take its place on reference shelves for resumé and appraisal of the past. Anyone who desires sound and not too technical analysis of the present will be compelled to turn to it. It would be a more valuable, vivid, and incontrovertible work in its present and future tenses if its author had had opportunity to check up on his European observations of a decade ago and his reading of contemporary signs from afar by personal contact with those signs." O. M. Saylor

+ Bookm 55:70 Mr '22 950w
Cleveland p37 My '22

"The book is deficient in one important respect: the author makes scant mention of the economic bondage of the theatre, especially in America, and shows no way of escape from this bondage. Without this escape, certainly, the experiment vital to the growth of such a future theatre as he dreams of is next to impossible. But it is a full, informing and provocative book, none the less, and will help many people to understand better these new forces in our theatre; to realize, at least, that they are on their way." W. P. Eaton

+ Freeman 5:213 My 10 '22 1750w

"It is not because this interpreter devotes less space to the consideration of the dramatist than to the 'new stagecraft' that he exposes the weakness of his vision. It is his perfunctory, superficial, and provincial conception of drama and the function of the dramatist that invalidates his thesis. In brief, he mistakes the effect for the cause." R. A. Parker

— Ind 108:149 F 11 '22 1250w

"Such a book was needed, particularly as former books on this subject had little to record, at the time of their publication, of American achievement. Mr. MacGowan is now able to show that the American stage is playing an important part in the development of scenic decoration. But like all enthusiasts, Mr. MacGowan often implies that the new art of the stage is actually capable of greater things than a sound theory of play production warrants. It is true that he guards himself more than once against such an inference from his book; nevertheless the implication that here is a royal road to perfection is made more often than it is denied." Jack Crawford

— + Lit R p596 Ap 22 '22 750w

"Mr Macgowan's work on the teatro-technical side is authoritative and complete; its theoretical extravagances are easily forgiven in view of its zest, freshness, and liberality of temper and outlook." Ludwig Lewisoohn

+ Nation 114:180 F 8 '22 1000w

"Nobody could read 'The Theatre of Tomorrow' without at the very least a flood of provocative and suggestive reactions. And in the light of Monsieur Voltaire's remark that all literature is good literature except the tedious it has to be said that 'The Theatre of Tomorrow' is always entertaining, sometimes exciting. It is an open-minded, shrewd and generous book, facile and keen, provocatively partisan; the most important book on the theatre that we have had in English for two or three years." Stark Young

+ New Repub 30:173 Ap 5 '22 1650w

"Every statement here is made so simply and so earnestly that the successive chapters have a tremendous cumulative effect. The book stimulates, provokes, irritates; questions, comments, suggestions spring from every paragraph. The book is an admirably clear, straightforward and authoritative summing up of our present-day attitude toward the theatre and its outward expression." R. E. Jones

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 29 '22 2500w

"Clear and trenchant analysis of the changing stage of today. Though one may not wholly agree with Mr MacGowan as a prophet, he has performed a service to the public as well as to the theatre."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Jl 17 '22 420w

Reviewed by A. R. Brenner
Survey 48:56 Ap 8 '22 280w

MACGOWAN, KENNETH, and JONES, ROBERT EDMOND. Continental stagecraft. 233p il $5 Harcourt

792 Theater 22-23151

A record of impressions gained from a ten weeks' tour of the theaters of France, Sweden, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria in 1922. The Moscow Art Theater is included in the record since the authors were able to see that company on tour in Stockholm. The larger part of the time was spent in Germany and many of the illustrations come from productions seen there, especially at the Grosses Schauspielhaus in Berlin. Among the other productions observed are those of the Redoutensaal in Vienna, and the Théâtre du Vieux-Colombier and the Cirque Medrano in Paris. In text and pictures a view is given of the new movement in the theatre as it has developed during the last ten years. The text is a collaboration of ideas, tho written by Mr Macgowan. The illustrations by Robert Edmond Jones are drawings worked out from notes made during the progress of the plays.

Booklist 19:151 F '23

"Kenneth Macgowan is always readable, and in this case he is more than that. He manages to tell the story of a play in Germany, or a theatre in Vienna, with such insistence on its importance to him, to the theatre, and to the reader, that his narrative carries with it something of the movement and flair of fiction. . . Jones, with the same unflinching and unflagging genius that animates his stage sets, has illustrated this volume and the publishers have given him adequate reproductions. This is a book of youth and enthusiasm." J. P.

+ Bookm 56:622 Ja '23 320w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
Dial 74:204 F '23 1100w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 110:25 Ja 6 '23 20w

"Mr. Macgowan has seen not only his vision, but everything else in the European theatre worth recording. This book contains all the facts and all the news. . . Jones's drawings are in themselves an invaluable record, invariably true to the total impression of the scenes." Lee Simonson

+ Lit R p336 D 23 '22 2700w

MACGOWAN, K., AND JONES, R. E.—Cont.

"Mr. Macgowan writes with a bright and youthful and cheery enthusiasm which is very agreeable and Mr. Jones's reproductions of what he saw stand in no need of praise." Ludwig Lewisohn

+ Nation 115:697 D 20 '22 450w
N Y Times p4 D 31 '22 750w

"An excellent interpretation, from the American standpoint, of the new theatrical movement as developed in Europe during the past ten years."

+ R of Rs 67:111 Ja '23 80w

"Though it is full of life, it is a concise book—as it must be to include illuminating mention of scores of plays, playwrights, directors and stage-artists of both the continent and America. This quality will make it valuable as a source-book of theatrical history; but on the use that is made of the material in developing a theory and a vision will depend its greatest value."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 29 '22 600w

MACGRATH, HAROLD. Ragged edge. 313p $1.75 Doubleday

22-3190

A motherless girl, born on a South Sea island and daughter of a hard missionary father, meets in Canton a young man with a morbid New England conscience and an imagined grievance that had made him a thief and a fugitive from justice. Out of sheer loneliness they marry—both too young to know what love is. Under the kindly protection of a physician and a planter, they are removed to a lonely island where they begin a struggle for and against their growing love. Again it is the man's conscience that stands in the way of happiness. When the crisis comes, with the imminent breaking down of all barriers, Howard's old aunt appears upon the scene with healing forgiveness and the lifting of the ban of exile.

Boston Transcript p6 My 6 '22 170w

"The inevitable happy ending is engineered rather mechanically. There are excellent scenes and much good work in the book, but the reader will feel that Mr. MacGrath is not wholly at ease in this type of story."

— + Lit R p420 F 11 '22 250w

"The story is so good, and so very entertaining, without the aid of heroics, that it is a pity Mr. MacGrath resorts to melodrama at the close. One's intelligence and credulity feel somewhat cheated and insulted at the final chapter. But it is typical of Mr. MacGrath, so his faithful admirers will suffer none of this injured feeling. But as the tale is rather better than most of its predecessors by the same author, one wishes he had avoided the cheap glamour that tinges the last score of pages."

+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 29 '22 320w

"The story is skilfully told and never permits the reader's attention to relax."

+ Springf'd Republican p15a Ap 23 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p522 Ag 10 '22 160w

MACHARG, WILLIAM BRIGGS. Peewee. 276p $1.50 Reilly & Lee

22-6025

"A story of a little street waif of Chicago, a self-sufficient, incommunicative, wily little floating atom, by the name of Peewee. Peewee is eight, looks six, and is a master of the art of avoiding the authorities of charity. He is a bit too keen witted and self-disciplined to be actually credible, but he is real enough to rouse one's paternal or maternal instinct gently. The description of him silently, persistently urging his newspapers on well-dressed ladies, looking up at them watchfully out of beautiful long lashed blue eyes, has its appeal. The plot is improbable on a large and generous scale. One has a comforting certainty at the very start that Peewee will end up in a stately home surrounded by a woman's loving care and every luxury. And he does. Coincidence and his own gentlemanly instincts work constantly for Peewee, but he deserves it."—Lit R

"The plot is ingenious throughout, and the denouement is logical, unexpected, satisfactory and worked out with ability altogether too rare in stories of this nature. Mr. Macharg does not leave a loose end anywhere."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 18 '22 130w

"Without a touch of extraneous sentiment, without a falter in his interpretation of the childish mind, Macharg has presented to American literature an appealing portrait of such a tiny derelict as may be found in the gutter of every city." L. Y. Erskine

+ Detroit News p7 Jl 16 '22 470w

Lit R p515 Mr 18 '22 190w

"The idea of this story is excellent, but throughout it is very cheaply and trashily handled. The only commendable feature of the book is its consistent keeping to Peewee's point of view, its faithful sticking to his angle, and his angle only."

— + N Y Times p25 Ap 23 '22 250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:186 Jl '22

MACHEN, ARTHUR. Far-off things. 159p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Secker]

B or 92

"A modestly self-repressive yet truly revealing autobiography. In 159 pages you obtain a full-size mental photograph of the man, though few concrete facts about his life and literary work. The scenes and incidents, mostly taken from his youth, are selected adroitly to make up this photograph."—Springf'd Republican

"The prose is finely distinguished, simple, supple, and stamped with the writer's personality, and the incidents, places, and people described are far from uninteresting in themselves." Carl Van Vechten

+ Int Bk R p36 F '23 2250w

"A narrative varied with philosophic, social and æsthetic comment. Mr. Machen rarely defends himself or his theses in his book. He is content to fling his preferences at the reader, and let him explain them if he wishes to take the trouble. If you find decisive intolerance merely tiresome or eccentric, Mr. Machen is not for you. I confess that to me his extreme definiteness of opinion, his radical attitude to esteemed reputations, and his resolute determination to judge for himself are refreshing, coming as they do from a mind which is well stored with great literature, and from a man whose enthusiasms are as extravagant as are his prejudices. Most of Far Off Things can be enjoyed by readers who have no particular interest in æsthetic criticism." E. R.

New Statesman 20:240 N 25 '22 1300w

"It is a gallant fight that he has made, and 'Far Off Things' is less an account of events than a taking of the responsibility for that fight on his shoulders. The ideas which have previously been expressed by the characters in his books are here re-expressed as his own, and that, I suppose, is a higher sort of autobiography." Robert Hillyer

+ N Y Times p6 N 5 '22 1600w

"Arthur Machen did not tap out 'Far Off Things' on a typewriter, any more than De Quincey produced his 'Confessions' in that way. One does not write a book of the heart to the clatter of keys and the shifting of gears; it is written somewhere in private, with a pen, in the midst of a terrible stillness. The result in the present instance, I can only say with a simplicity I would gladly adorn, is a credit to the heart of Arthur Machen and to English literature." Vincent Starrett

+ N Y Tribune p26 D 3 '22 900w

"Forth from this gracious collection of remembrances and reflections comes a veiled delineation of a shy, meditative person whose intellectual curiosity is partly about the sights and scenes of this world but even more about the realm of the abstract and the mystical that lies behind phenomena. Mr. Machen is careful not to force himself or his ideas upon you. If there is such a thing as spiritual good manners, assuredly he possesses it. But despite his humility, and partly because of it, you become acquainted with a personality that seems to stand for a definite and valuable sensibility and ideas."

+ Spring'd Republican p5a D 10 '22 1000w

"His literary style, in the narrower sense of that word, suffers from inequalities. This is no serious indictment. Style consists, after all, not in the absence of verbal infelicities, but in a positive quality, individuality; and this quality in 'Far-off Things' suffices to make it an excellent and companionable book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p581 S 14 '22 1100w

MACHEN, ARTHUR. House of souls. 286p $2.50 Knopf

22-15673

Four tales of the supernatural, of spirits both beautiful and evil, which surround and influence us. At least two of the stories are tales of terror. Contents: A fragment of life; The white people; The great god Pan; The inmost light.

Cleveland p86 N '22

Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 70w

"His style and his imagination are indeed rich and beautiful. He is extremely susceptible to impressions of beauty, especially the beauty of nature, and he reproduces those impressions in a truly poetic prose. After a number of pages of this rather arbitrary uniformity, Mr. Machen's prose, excellent as it is, becomes gelatinous, and a general air of fictitiousness and improbability begins to affect the reader. The sum of it is that one closes Mr. Machen's book with regret that his instinct in the choice of literary form is not more sure."

— + Freeman 5:502 Ag 2 '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:558 Je 24 '22 880w

"Mr. Machen with all the art at his command is not always successful. He is never disgusting, but sometimes he sets the machinery in motion and the boggy fails to appear. In his book, out of three essays in horror, he is only completely successful once. That is a high percentage. The tales of genuine horror might almost be counted on the fingers." Hulbert Footner

+ — Lit R p736 Je 17 '22 980w

"They are making something of a mystery out of his failure to win popularity, but actually there is no mystery at all, for by no possibility could the peculiar temperament which not merely underlies but is the very texture of his work win any wide acceptance. He belongs to the always small company of genuine mystics, and though his creed is superficially similar to that of Chesterton and Belloc he uses his position not primarily as a vantage point from which to shoot paradoxes but as a world into which to retire. He has only one theme, the Mystic Vision, and only one plot, the Rending of the Veil." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 115:258 S 13 '22 420w

N Y Times p21 My 23 '22 150w

MACINTIRE, HORACE JAMES. Principles of mechanical refrigeration; a study course for operating engineers. 252p il $2.50 McGraw

621.5 Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery 22-7281

"For practical steam and refrigerating engineers. Based on material published in 'Power' during 1920."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:22 Ap '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:350 J1 '22

MACKAIL, DENIS GEORGE. Bill the bachelor. 351p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann]

23-26029

"Bill the Bachelor, whose name is really Alexander Fraser, is a delightfully frank, blundering, happy and love-lorn youth, who as a partner in a once flourishing but not important hosiery business, inherited of course, finds himself a pawn in a battle of commercial interests, and—which he finds even more stimulating—becomes the possessor of a reawakened devotion for a childhood's companion, now, as he fears, far beyond his reach. Of course in the final developments, his business is not squeezed out and the Hon. Leslie, desirable, desired and desirous, becomes his."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 19:160 F '23

"This is not a book for the solemn searcher after truth, who is convinced that truth is always devastating and we warn such readers everlastingly to eschew it. Yes, Mr. Mackail has written a 'popular' novel. No matter! He is a literary artist all the same." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p8 O 14 '22 1000w

"This story is less exuberant than its clever predecessors, but it has his deft whimsicality in full measure. It is comedy of a fine quality, sometimes running a bit near to farce, but always kept just within bounds."

+ Lit R p132 O 21 '22 190w

"Bill is a stupid, uninteresting man; but the things that happen to him are a pure joy." C. A. W.

+ — New Statesman 19:494 Ag 5 '22 100w

"A confessedly light novel of a sparkling sort, and, while most of it is extremely frothy, it is always persuasive of laughter."

+ — N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 100w

"Cheery and unambitious. It is, within its exceedingly narrow limits, perfectly successful. Mr. Mackail's humour never falls—nor his good humour; and he is not afraid of sentiment. One is both charmed and excited."

+ — Sat R 134:68 J1 8 '22 150w

"Mr. Mackail has a light touch, and he is able without undue lavishness in the matter of straw to make bricks with considerable effect."

+ Spec 129:278 Ag 26 '22 80w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p443 J1 6 '22 560w

MCKAY, CLAUDE. Harlem shadows. 95p $1.75 Harcourt

811

22-8610

In his introduction to this collection of poetry, Max Eastman gives the leading facts of the poet's life. A pure blooded Negro, he was born on the island of Jamaica and wrote his first poems in the dialect of the island, receiving the medal of the Institute of arts and sciences in recognition of his work. He came to the United States ten years ago and after two years at college, cast in his lot with the working-class Negroes of the North. None of the poems in this collection are in dialect. Some of them are love lyrics. In some he protests against the wrongs suffered by his people, but seldom with bitterness.

Booklist 18:357 J1 '22

"He has surety of expression, depth of feeling, the truth lyric gift, and handles amazingly well subtle gradations of thought and of feeling. Mr. McKay is not a great negro poet—he is a great poet!" W. F. White

+ Bookm 55:531 J1 '22 220w

"In the reviews that have appeared from coast to coast of 'Harlem Shadows,' there has been such an emphasis on the interesting fact that McKay is a full-blooded Jamaican Negro that the poems themselves as the expression of a life have suffered a slight neglect. McKay's poems belong to art entirely aside from the color of his skin being brown. His poetry is really very beautiful and honest poetry." Stirling Rowen

+ Detroit News p7 J1 16 '22 560w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Ind 109:54 Ag 5 '22 200w

Reviewed by Clement Wood

Lit R p127 O 21 '22 750w

McKAY, CLAUDE—Continued

"His work proves him to be a craftsman with keen perception of emotions, a lover of the colorful and dramatic, strongly sensuous yet never sensual, and an adept in the handling of his phrases to give the subtle variations of thought he seeks. He has mastered the forms of the lyric and the sonnet—in fact, there is in this volume perhaps too much sameness of form. Yet one can have no quarrel with a man who works in that medium in which he is most at home, and I do not quarrel with Mr. McKay for sticking to these modes of expression." W. F. White

+ Nation 114:694 Je 7 '22 500w

"I feel that a hospitality to echoes of poetry he has read has time and again obscured a direct sense of life, and made rarer those lines of singular intensity which express, as Mr. Eastman aptly says, 'the naked force of character.' I am sorry he so often uses indoor and inbred poetic phrases. If Mr. McKay and the other poets don't stir us unusually when they travel over poetic roads so many others have travelled before them, they make us sit up and take notice when they write about their race and ours. They strike hard, and pierce deep." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 31:196 Jl 12 '22 650w

"In the past we have judged the negro in poetry by Paul Lawrence Dunbar and other writers who kept more or less closely to the dialect medium. Mr. McKay does not employ dialect at all. He strives to portray the spirit of the modern negro in a high and lofty manner. Most of the time he succeeds, though it must be admitted that certain portions of his book unravel into mere sentiment."

+ N Y Times p17 My 14 '22 230w

"Usually, as in the sonnet 'America,' he is brave and defiant. Occasionally, as in the title poem, he becomes bitter. At his best he produces the sort of instinctive lyricism that is found in folk-songs. At his worst—and the worst poem in the book is probably 'When Dawn Comes to the City'—he comes perilously close to doggerel." Rex Hunter

+ N Y Tribune p8 My 7 '22 340w

Pratt p27 winter '23

St Louis 20:272 N '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:182 Jl '22

MACKAY, CONSTANCE D'ARCY. Franklin; a play in four acts. 197p $1.75 Holt

812 Franklin, Benjamin—Drama 22-12257

The author's aim has been to draw a picture of Franklin as true as possible to historical data. All the characters save one, had their counterparts in Franklin's life. Beginning with Franklin's entrance into a Philadelphia print shop, as a ragged youth, the first two acts depict his life as a printer up to the time of his discoveries in electricity. Act three, twenty years later, shows Dr Franklin in his house, as member of the Philadelphia assembly during the events just preceding his election as ambassador to France. The scenes of act four are laid in France and end with the signing of the treaty between America and France.

"The play falls short of exhibiting the character of a hero who would have been famous had he done nothing but write the Autobiography. Miss Mackay has encountered the difficulties that inevitably attend the writing of historical biographies in dramatic form: the passage of time and the constant change of scene. She has not overcome these difficulties with any very striking success. Her best work is in the incidental dialogue."

+ Lit R p795 Jl 8 '22 140w

"A decidedly engrossing drama. She attempts nothing psychological and her play is a purely historical drama, depending wholly upon its situations. The play moves swiftly, it shows care and detail in characterization, and it presents a series of vivid pictures always animated by the true dramatic virtue of action and suspense."

+ N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 180w

"An ingenuously constructed piece of work, probably a little too evident for our professional stage, but intensely instructive for the amateur, should it be given. Somewhere Miss Mackay has failed in her constructive interest; her plotting is too much a desire to get in everything which should be given for a correct portrait of Ben. But it reads well, and should have a welcome among a large class of players." M. J. Moses

+ Outlook 132:620 D 6 '22 150w

Spring'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 250w

"May be called a good play for amateurs. That Miss Mackay has not made the most either of her material nor of her pattern is obvious. She has taken Franklin at his pretty moments rather than at his great ones. She has taken drama itself at its formal rather than at its art value."

+ Theatre Arts M 6:319 O '22 130w

McKEE, HENRY S. A B C's of business. 135p $1 Macmillan

330 Business. Economics 22-18414

America is a nation of economic illiterates, in the author's opinion, with a very imperfect understanding of the governing principles of business and of how we live and are industrially organized. The book makes no pretense to any scientifically instructive contribution toward such education but gives a suggestive survey of the field where enlightenment is most needed. Contents: The complex character of our business organization; The misunderstanding of money; Wages and wealth; The elements of banking; Business consequences of the war; The abuse of our railways; Speculators and markets; Good and bad times; Internationalism; Education.

"Straight economic theory is what Mr. McKee presents in 'The A B C's of Business,' but so well presented, leaving no suggestion of using words of three syllables or less because he has written an elementary book, that none need balk at the subject. Mr. McKee aims to capture attention, does so, and keeps it."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 18 '22 330w

"The volume is small, a mere primer, sketchy to be sure, but so freshly written that it compels attention." J. A. C.

+ N Y Tribune p8 N 19 '22 150w

McKENNA, STEPHEN. Confessions of a well-meaning woman. 288p $2 Doran

22-23566

The construction of the book is unusual, the whole story being told in a series of monologues addressed by Lady Ann Spenworth to a "friend of proved discretion." Tho her confidences are apparently made in defense of herself, out of her own mouth she is revealed as a snobbish, selfish, sordid, dishonorable, intriguing old woman. Having married the younger son of a rich English family her income has never been equal, in her own eyes, to her dignity and importance. Holding her own and her husband's relatives responsible for her financial state, she looks upon them as her lawful prey and stoops to anything to advance her own interests and those of her insufferable son. She usually fails in her schemes, but she succeeds in making mischief wherever she turns.

Booklist 19:21 O '22

Cleveland p90 D '22

"Keyed in a mood deftly satirical, with ample insight and urbanity of temper. Thus, though its psychology is keen and uncompromising, enough detachment has gone into the writing to relieve the narrative of any tincture of the unchivalrous sneer."

Dial 73:681 D '22 80w

"Probably only Mr. McKenna could have carried it off technically and prevented the monologue from becoming like one end of an interminable telephone conversation. He has done it, and given us perhaps the best of his shorter books." Hamish Miles

+ Lit R p915 S 2 '22 500w

"The brightness and vivacity of the prose will carry the reader along for a time, but before he has reached the end of the volume he will wonder what has become of the Stephen McKenna of the Sonia stories. It is to be suspected that Mr. McKenna regards his effort as a satire on certain English types, but it is a bit too fat-footed to be good satire."

— + N Y Times p11 Ag 27 '22 370w

"It is skillful, but the picture is too disagreeable throughout for entirely good reading. It has a kind of ill-nature in it. And the repetition of Lady Ann's clichés becomes tedious." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p5 Ag 6 '22 350w

"Perhaps before we turn the last page we have had rather a surfeit of the machinations and perverted views of so base-minded a hag; or perhaps we should have enjoyed the book more if we had read it off and on, instead of at a sitting. This is not one of the author's ambitious efforts, but it is clever and amusing in its cynical way."

— + Sat R 133:423 Ap 22 '22 370w

"The way in which this lady is made to write herself down as a mean, intriguing worlding is extremely clever."

+ Spec 128:533 Ap 20 '22 90w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Secret victory. 307p $1.75 Doran [8s 6d Hutchinson]

22-10776

The story is the third in the trilogy the "Sensationalists." We meet here the same group of people whose chief aim in life is to find new sensations, "always playing a part and pulling up their psychology by the roots to see how it was growing." Eric Lane, after a long exile, has returned to London, with health restored and a sufficient grip on himself, after his blighted romance with Lady Barbara Neave, to become interested in Ivy Maitland. She has been betrayed by the conscienceless egotist John Gaymer, and Eric is about to marry her, to save her from the world, when Gaymer again obtrudes himself upon her to win her away from Eric just as the latter has begun to love her. Eric's secret victory is over himself in giving the girl every opportunity to make her own choice, and Gaymer a chance to retrieve himself. And, thanks to the blind saint, David O'Kane, Eric makes this sacrifice not as one going to his own funeral but as one walking into his "next job."

"It is amusing and even, at times, interesting; but it is immature, badly organized. The 'secret victory' is a satisfaction which only Mr. McKenna and his hero are aware of. Mr. McKenna should let his readers in on the secret." Burton Rascoe

— + Bookm 55:199 Ap '22 120w

"Mr. McKenna really writes too well for any more of this sensational stuff. It no longer rings true. Let him write about red blooded people for a while." I. W. L.

— Boston Transcript p5 Mr 25 '22 500w

Cleveland p27 Ap '22

"A singularly depressing piece of business."

— Dial 72:648 Je '22 60w

"He has formerly shown qualities which need no further justification than themselves provided their promise is fulfilled; but, frankly, we find neither beauty nor wisdom nor any relation to literature in this kind of writing."

— Sat R 132:491 O 22 '21 370w

Spec 127:675 N 19 '21 50w

"His characters fall a prey to the exaggeration to which they are addicted. They are driven, it is true, by something outside themselves, but that something is not the necessity for filling in a framework devised by the author in advance; it is something that they themselves have created out of their own normal human qualities. They exaggerate, but the exaggeration does not suggest the unreal and so excite impatience; given the factors, it is the inevitable hypertrophy of emotions they share with all the world. To represent this culmination is the province of this third book, in which, as in the fifth set of a lawn tennis match, the same players play much the same strokes as before, but with their previous exertions telling on them."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 6 '21 650w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Tex: a chapter in the life of Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. 189p $2.50 Dodd [10s 6d T. Butterworth]

B or 92 Teixeira de Mattos, Alexander Louis 22-21197

"During the past fifty years no linguist has occupied the unique and honorable position of translator so well as Alexander Teixeira de Mattos, the Dutch-Englishman who has made Maeterlinck, Fabre, and Couperus accessible to English readers. He lived his own life as happy and individual as any other gentleman. His public life is recorded in the unwearied patience and skill wherewith he strove always to clothe the style of Fabre or of Couperus in a garment hardly distinguishable in nuance and rhythm from the original body. This indefatigable and gifted worker Stephen McKenna has sought to portray to the public by means of letters, conversations, and a brief biography."— Lit R

Booklist 19:156 F '23

"One of the few books of which it can be truthfully said: delightful!"

+ Bookm 56:773 F '23 210w

"Mr. McKenna claims for the book no large place. He was intimately acquainted with Teixeira through six or seven exceedingly busy years in a friendship which grew precious to both men. His fragment can only be a chapter, but it is an illuminating chapter." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 25 '22 950w

"In themselves the letters are never unusual or in any way much different from the letters of any gentleman; and Mr. McKenna himself is rather oppressively present. The book, however, serves to remind the English and American public of its deep debt to one who displayed the fascinating insect world of Fabre and the dim enchantment of Maeterlinck to a world of Anglo-Saxons."

+ Lit R p226 N 18 '22 230w

"It is its unreserve and intensely personal quality which give the book its indubitable interest. Mr. McKenna's introductory sketch of his friend is an admirable piece of work."

+ Sat R 134:447 S 23 '22 360w

"Mr. McKenna's account of his six years' friendship arouses our appetite for a full-length portrait from one who knew him, not better, but with the fullness of long association."

+ Spec 129:405 S 23 '22 380w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Altar steps. 374p $2 Doran [7s 6d Cassell]

22-20054

"The Altar Steps' is only the prelude to another volume, to be called 'The Parson's Progress.' It is a 'specialist' novel. It takes a small strip of life upon which only a very small part of the public has ever set foot. . . . It begins somewhere about 1880 and ends just after the Boer War; and its field is the history of Anglo-Catholicism in those years. The hero, son of a very 'High Church' missionary in Nottingham Dale, is himself a born priest; and the story takes him from infancy to ordination. Almost all Mark Kidderdale's experience is religious experience. A breath of human passion blows across it, but at one point only, and so swiftly that, in this volume, at any rate, it seems rather like a concession to the 'average reader' than an intrinsic part of the tale. His experience is ecclesiastical, and in shaping it for him Mr. Mackenzie shows a moderate power of revealing his character, a neat humour, and a large amount of knowledge of the ecclesiastical history and biography of the period."— The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:86 D '22

MACKENZIE, COMPTON—Continued

"On the whole it is a fair delineation, probably correct, but so without any literary enthusiasm in any direction that it may well be a mere clearing the way for the real book which shall describe Mark in orders and his reactions, reactions which it would be alike futile and impertinent to speculate upon." S. L. Cook

+ — Boston Transcript p3 N 18 '22 1400w

"There are many touches of humor in the book. The book has much of the quiet and wholesome romance of every-day living, which pleases the reader, because he feels that it is true to facts. Such work goes far to prove that it is not necessary to make a book noisome in order to make it entertaining."

+ Cath World 116:423 D '22 300w

Cleveland p91 D '22

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright

— Freeman 5:621 S 6 '22 650w

"In 'The Altar Steps' Compton Mackenzie is at his best. He has a lightness of touch, a command of almost evanescent humour which makes every page of his a delight to the discriminating." M. F. Egan

+ Freeman 6:379 D 27 '22 600w

"The author really has something to say; he has a story; and he has the rare art of making long, discursive paragraphs not only readable, but alive and amusing." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:106 S 2 '22 160w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 110:62 Ja 20 '23 650w

Lit D p61 N 4 '22 550w

"One regrets that the author has found it necessary to introduce so much of the material of religious controversy, material that to the average reader is sterile and devoid of interest; one regrets even more keenly that Mr Mackenzie's sharp blades of humor, which occasionally dart forth like unexpected sunlight through gray clouds, are employed with something of frugality. Towards the end of the book one is forced to admit there are many dull and prolix passages that do not fulfill the promise of the beginning; yet these drabber chapters merely limit, but do not neutralize, the merits of the book, which remains a keen and farsighted, as well as interesting, study of a character who has little more in common with the hero of the average novel than the corner groceryman has in common with Achilles." S. A. Coblentz

+ — Lit R p124 O 21 '22 800w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 32:339 N 22 '22 600w

"It is a book that only Mr. Compton Mackenzie could have written—an able book, almost a fine one."

+ — New Statesman 19:494 Ag 5 '22 520w

"The humor which made 'Poor Relations' and its companion volume so entertaining is quite strikingly absent from the new book. The glimpses of Mark's childhood have a good deal of charm. Many of the pen pictures of scenery are gracefully drawn." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p17 S 3 '22 1050w

Reviewed by Frances Newman

N Y Tribune p7 S 17 '22 1150w

"So much the most interesting study of certain aspects of religious experience that has been written either in fiction or otherwise within recent years, that one hesitates to lay stress upon its somewhat obvious shortcomings as a story."

+ — No Am 216:861 D '22 450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:462 N '22

"In 'The Altar Steps' Mr. Compton Mackenzie has not quite found himself; but he is looking for himself with more seriousness, and with more success, than in any other of his recent books. . . . It is a fine attempt to build a work on the grand scale." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 134:21 Jl 1 '22 880w

Spec 129:53 Jl 8 '22 340w

Spring'd Republican p7a N 26 '22 640w

"It may well form a good base for a very rare and very attractive kind of work—a good study of religious experience. Mr. Mackenzie's prose is still sometimes deplorable and seldom other than commonplace; and his power of selection is still in its infancy. But he has embarked bravely on a big and difficult task."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p379 Je 8 '22 680w

Wis Lib Bul 18:274 D '22

MCKINNEY, JAMES, and SIMONS, ALGIE
2 MARTIN. Success through vocational guidance; occupation analysis. 276p $2 Am. technical soc.

374.1 Profession, Choice of. Vocational guidance 22-4518

Analyses, with many statistical tables, of the principal trades and professions open to young men, the opportunities and requirements of each, the qualifications necessary, and the average remuneration.

Booklist 19:37 N '22

Pratt p14 winter '23

"A clearly written, simple, sensible book upon the problem of selecting a vocation. The book can be read with profit by any one interested in the problem of vocational guidance. It is clear in statement, simple in style and conservative in treatment of subject."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 Ag 8 '22 250w
Survey 48:280 My 20 '22 60w

MCKINSEY, JAMES OSCAR. Budgetary control. 2 474p $4.25 Ronald

657 Budget. Accounting 22-15901

This study of the individual business budget opens with an explanation of the meaning and procedure of budgetary control and of its need in business administration. The rest of the book is given to a description of the installation and operation of a budget and its application to the various departments of the business.

Booklist 19:71 D '22

"In the author, the practical is well joined to the theoretical, so that the reader and user of the volume has the advantage of the experience of one who has operated in a double field of activity."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 18 '22 320w

MACKINTOSH, ALEXANDER. From Gladstone to Lloyd George; Parliament in peace and war. 333p $4 Doran [15s Hodder & S.]

328.42 Great Britain—Parliament. Great Britain—Politics and government. Statesmen, British

The author has watched Parliament from the press gallery since 1881. He here sketches the more prominent ministers and members of Parliament whom he has met or observed and describes the gradual changes that have come about in the temper of the House. He is not of the "gentlemen with the duster" order and does not attempt in his characterizations to probe the recesses of the heart and discover the base motive there. The sketches are simply the honest and apparently unprejudiced estimates of an observer of long experience and excellent opportunities. Among the men characterized are Gladstone, Lord Salisbury, Lord Rosebery, Lord Randolph Churchill, Joseph Chamberlain, Sir William Harcourt, Balfour, Campbell-Bannerman, Asquith, Lloyd George and Earl Grey.

Bookm 55:650 Ag '22 170w

"A carefully considered series of memoirs which especially in the latter portions, almost approach the dignity of a parliamentary history. If not history, at least it will be consulted seriously by historians of the future. The author is uniformly careful and sober in his judgments and he never seeks to elevate the picturesque above the vital." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ag 16 '22 700w

"The occasional obscurities that some persons may find in his pages by no means spoil the story that he sets out to tell, a story ever changing yet ever the same. Mr. Mackintosh does not eschew anecdotes, but he is more closely concerned with characteristic remarks or methods than with humor for its own sake. Neither so piquant as Sir Henry Lucy nor so incisive as Mr. Bailey, he has whatever advantage there is in dealing with recent occurrences." R. J. Davis

Lit R p337 J1 29 '22 250w

"The history of the day before yesterday is so difficult to recover that Mr. Mackintosh is to be congratulated on a timely piece of work. He is sometimes rather tame, as in his treatment of the fall of Parnell, but he can describe a fateful division with animation."

+ — New Statesman 18:428 Ja 14 '22 200w

Reviewed by M. F. Egan
N Y Times p3 J1 30 '22 2550w

Reviewed by F. D. Perkins
N Y Tribune p23 D 10 '22 90w
Pratt p9 autumn '22

"There is nothing sensational in the author's character studies: they contain no 'revelations' and no scandal. They are simply honest, sober and dispassionate estimates by an observer who has seen more of the political game than most men. Mr. Mackintosh drops a hint now and then to show that he is no mere eulogist, but he does not conceive it to be his business to criticize."

+ Spec 127:673 N 19 '21 270w

"He knows his subject and he writes with ease, clearness, and fluency. But the standard of such books is a high one; and Mr. Mackintosh's hardly reaches it. There is nothing specially noteworthy in his style or specially original in his matter."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p719 N 3 '21 110w

MACKLIN, ALYS EYRE, comp. and tr. Twenty-nine tales from the French; with an introductory essay on the French conte by Robert Herrick. 309p $2 Harcourt

22-5324

This volume brings together a collection of typical examples of the peculiarly French art of the conte. It is a short tale, here averaging not more than eight pages in length, hardly more than an anecdote, the narrator of which seems always to be conscious of the presence of the hearer. Robert Herrick in his preface describes these contes as "jottings of the artist, sauntering pencil and note-book in hand down the boulevards of life—sketches of character, notes of paradoxical situations, atmospheres, physical and spiritual." The writers, who are all living Frenchmen, include Tristan Bernard, Frédéric Bouteil, Max and Alex Fischer, Henri Duvernois, Claude Farrère, Gyp Hermant, Maurice Level, Paul and Victor Marguerite, Marcel Prévost and Marcelle Tinayre. Each tale is prefaced by a brief biographical note of the author.

Booklist 18:331 Je '22

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"A faithful and spirited translation of a number of current French short stories. Such merit as they have is chiefly structural."

+ — Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 60w

"The quality of irony pervades most of the stories in this collection, and to that extent it may be argued that they are superior to similar collections culled from contemporary American magazines."

+ Lit R p569 Ap 8 '22 180w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 114:779 Je 28 '22 320w

"This is a book that should be read by everybody, for it offers a series of episodes beautifully presented and handled only as the French writer can handle the conte. This type of writing is peculiarly French."

+ N Y Times p18 My 14 '22 220w

"Remarkable for their liberal choice of material and the technical accomplishment which they show."

+ Springfield Republican p8 Ag 18 '22 520w
Wis Lib Bul 18:187 J1 '22

MACLEAN, ANNIE MARION. Our neighbors. 2 288p $1.75 Macmillan

331.8 Poor. Labor and laboring classes—United States 22-20052

"Vivid moving-pictures of life among the poor in our great cities and a plea for greater justice and understanding from the privileged classes towards their less fortunate neighbors, particularly those of foreign birth. Pathos, humor and tragedy are in these pages, in which the author effaces her own personality and lets Kate Flynn, Zaida Ladau and Otto Volker tell their own stories in their own words."—Booklist

Booklist 19:146 F '23

"The book is a moving plea for more attention to the needs of this submerged tenth in its periods of work, unemployment or sickness."

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 25 '22 520w

"In spite of its kaleidoscopic style, there is a unity to the work as a whole, due to its excellent chapter divisions. There is one quality about the book which delights us above all else. That is its leniency."

+ Cath World 116:716 F '23 250w

"When she draws quick, sympathetic pictures of them, she is interesting and convincing. Her persons and her scenes are real. When, however, she attempts either an economic or a social interpretation of her 'data,' she gets beyond her depth. Miss MacLean could omit with benefit the platitudinous, emotionally-reasoned and entirely trite chapters of application in which she frames the human sketches and portrayals."

— + Springfield Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 180w

"Miss MacLean's fund of actual experience, her graphic gift and sympathetic grasp of character, have made a book in which the foreigner among us really lives, not as an abstract problem but as Our Neighbor."

+ Survey 49:405 D 15 '22 150w

MACNAGHTEN, HUGH VIBART. Emile Coué; the man and his work. 52p $1 Dodd [2s Methuen]

615.851 Mental healing 23-3207

A little book by the vice-provost of Eton college in which he tells how his skepticism yielded and he became a grateful patient of M. Coué after attending his clinic at Nancy. He also describes the visit of M. Coué to England and gives a personal impression of the man.

Ind 110:64 Ja 20 '23 650w

"The writer gives a very charming impression of Coué as a man. The book is not, however, nor does it purport to be, a scientific treatise on Coué's theories of suggestion."

+ — Nature 110:376 S 16 '22 50w

"The atmosphere of the 'pilgrimage' attaches to the cult, and in the narrative of Mr. MacNaghten attains the feeble heights of cloying worship, not usually associated with such dignified positions as vice-provost of Eton College, or Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge." Joseph Jastrow

— New Repub 33:292 F 7 '23 1000w

"It is somewhat nebulous and idealistic in parts of its text. Briefly it is a schoolman's essay on a fascinating subject." Van Buren Thorne

N Y Times p11 Ja 14 '23 300w

MCNEAL, THOMAS ALLEN. When Kansas was young. 287p $1.50 Macmillan

978.1 Kansas—History 22-18814

The book brings together incidents of pioneer life in Kansas, chiefly in the seventies and eighties, and sketches of some striking personalities. There are accounts of frontier courts and crimes, of the last Indian raid in Kansas, of some interesting sessions of the legislature, of campaigning on the frontier, of early day editors, etc.

Boston Transcript p3 N 4 '22 320w

"The author of this book of revelations is well qualified for his task. It is evident throughout that he has a knack of graphic and dramatic presentation: he offers a model of the best reporting style, which is just what the material demands. He does not profess to be writing a history of Kansas, but a series of brief sketches—high lights by which the course of history may be glimpsed." Isabel Paterson

McNEAL, THOMAS ALLEN—Continued

+ N Y Tribune p10 O 29 '22 900w

"These are not 'short stories' in the accepted definition of that term as denoting a brief tale of fictional character; but many of the sketches have the vivid interest that a good short story awakens."

+ Outlook 132:390 N 1 '22 60w

MCNEILL, RONALD. Ulster's stand for union. 310p $5 Dutton [12s Murray]

941.5 Ireland—Politics and government.
Ulster, Ireland (Eng ed 22-12338)

The author, who is a strong partisan of unionism and who served as a member of the Ulster unionist council, tells the story of the Ulster movement so-called, or the struggle in Ireland against home rule. After a brief introductory outline of the historical background of the movement he traces the measures taken to organize an effective opposition to interference with the established constitution of Ireland from the time Sir Edward Carson became the leader, in 1910, of the Irish unionist party in the House of commons to the opening of the Ulster parliament in June, 1921. Mr McNeill is extreme in his praise of Carson's character and services.

"It is a vigorous, interesting book, always on the defensive, but setting forth with clarity and preciseness the events and intellectual point of view which have set her feet on the path which she has chosen." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 7 '22 900w

"This book is simply a partisan record of a political squabble. It is an attack upon the Liberal party and upon democratic tendencies; not, as its title would suggest, a work on the justice of unionism, the benefits to be derived from it, and the heroic struggle for it." J. L. Tynan

+ Freeman 6:334 D 13 '22 1350w

"Both in matter and method it is one of the most valuable books on this particular phase of the Irish question that have appeared in two decades." G. L. Fox

+ Lit R p86 O 7 '22 700w

New Statesman 19:218 My 27 '22 1050w
Pratt p31 winter '23

"Everybody who wants to get to the bottom of the Irish question should read it. Mr. McNeill has had many facts put at his disposal which were not previously available and his account is the fullest and most coherent which has appeared."

+ Spec 128:593 My 13 '22 2000w

"Few Ulstermen are as well qualified to tell the story of the great struggle against Home Rule as Mr. Ronald McNeill. He is a conscientious writer, while the sincerity of his own convictions is apparent on every page."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 1 '22 750w

MACSHERIDAN, CARROLL, comp. Stag cook² book; written for men by men; with an introd. by Robert H. Davis. 197p il $1.50 Doran 641 Cookery 22-21919

"Thanks to Mr. MacSheridan we know what our Caesars like to eat. He has trailed personages in every walk of life—statesmen and educators, cartoonists and cinema stars. He has quizzed them on the secret arts that went into the preparing of their anointed favorites. And he has gathered the receipts into a veritable encyclopedia of delicacies."—N Y Times

"A book for men, but the women will grasp at it." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p38 D '22 130w

"Mr. MacSheridan's book is a good thing to have about the house. Even if the kitchen already boasts a standard volume that the cook swears by, this new compendium must contain a few delicacies that are new to her. And if the cook spurns it utterly, still it contains much valuable information concerning our own particular heroes."

+ N Y Times p7 D 3 '22 1700w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p27 D 10 '22 880w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 13 '22 260w

MACY, JOHN ALBERT. Critical game. 335p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

804 Literature. Literary criticism 22-19021

Mr Macy, the new literary editor of the Nation, writes of criticism as simply one form of the game of writing. He believes that it is as important as anything that man can put on paper and that its function is the function of all literature, "to be wise, witty, eloquent, instructive, humorous, original, graceful, beautiful, provocative, irritating, persuasive." The essays by which he illustrates his belief and exhibits his own critical method are on a wide variety of authors, including Dante, Tolstoy, Shakespeare, Maeterlinck, Conrad, Strindberg, Rémy de Gourmont, William James, George E. Woodberry, Abraham Cahan, George Borrow, Wells, Masfield, George Moore and D. H. Lawrence.

Booklist 19:115 Ja '23

"He puts his readers at their ease. He has nothing of the pedant and much, very much of the real lover of literature in his makeup. He does not pretend to omniscience and infallibility; he is frankly a man of sympathies and antipathies. He plays the critical game squarely and proficiently and with the grace of an artist." Burton Rascoe

+ Bookm 56:223 O '22 250w

"There is certainly much shrewd judgment displayed in this book. But, at the same time, what is one to think of a critic who, for example, can devote thirteen pages of scorn to the Variorum Edition of Shakespeare, without once considering that it might be useful as a work of reference?"

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 2 '22 230w

Reviewed by Newton Arvin

Freeman 6:427 Ja 10 '23 900w

"A book of pungent, interesting, critical essays, occasionally interspersed, when Mr. Macy touches upon politics, with some bits of poisonous nonsense." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:240 O 28 '22 220w

"For the most part leaning toward conservative and rational evaluations, the critic will be discovered to be essentially modern in his intimations. He is always open-minded and his attempts at criticism are mainly animated by a desire to get within the skin of the writer discust and to concentrate the spirit of that writer so that the reader may comprehend his nature." H. S. Gorman

+ Int Bk R p50 F '23 420w

"He is both informed and intelligent, but not self-critical enough. It would be difficult to put more appalling wrongheadedness in fewer words, with better emphasis and concision. And yet good sense is a prevailing quality of Mr. Macy's work, along with a gruff and sturdy independence." Arthur Colton

+ Lit R p261 D 2 '22 900w

"His range is wide, his information sound, his gusto generous. He does not go beyond his depth, because he knows what his depth is. . . . Consorting with masterpieces he picks out the aspects of them which rouse his thought, stir his emotions, please his senses, studies these aspects till he understands just how they have struck him, and then puts his feelings about them into words which are as accurate and direct as he can make them. He is one of the most intelligent and most intelligible of recent critics." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 115:669 D 13 '22 750w

"Mr. Macy permits his critical powers to be stalled by amiability; he is properly an essayist, not a critic, a contriver of ingenious biographical theories, not an aesthete." G. B. Munson
— New Repub 32:313 N 15 '22 980w

"Mr. Macy has his convictions and he makes no attempt to hide them. They are sensitive and perceptive, and, on the whole, they are reasonable, and clearly the product of careful reading and study. Nothing is passed on at second hand. He does not attempt to find fault because his subject does not look through the same ethical eyes. He grants the author's premise, and then judges him as an artist and as a creative power."

+ N Y Times p18 D 24 '22 160w

"He has the ingratiating manner of a cultured and amiable conversationalist who tells of his literary enthusiasms and dislikes with the evident enjoyment of a delightful and experienced yarn-spinner." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 8 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 19:23 Ja '23

MAETERLINCK, MAURICE. Great secret; tr. by Bernard Miall. 268p $2 Century

290 Occult sciences. Mysteries, Religious. God 22-11673

The "great secret" is the eternal mystery of the unknowable First Cause, the essential nature of God. Maeterlinck explores the ancient religions of India, Egypt, Persia, Chaldea and Greece for what their sacred writings have to say of the "unknowable nature of the causeless cause of all causes," and he goes also to the gnostics, the Kabbalah, the alchemists and the modern occultists. He brings together a clear summary of his findings in these little frequented regions, and tries to brush away some of the hindrances to the understanding of difficult systems which have been still further confused and corrupted by time.

Booklist 18:346 J1 '22

Bookm 55:648 Ag '22 110w

"He tells more clearly and in more popular fashion than most writers have done of the linking of all religions and of the way in which the secret knowledge of the Middle Ages, of ancient Greece, of the Essenes and the Neoplatonists may be traced to bits of these ancient books of India which had drifted to the West from time to time. Through the Egyptian bondage, the Babylonian captivity and the conquest of Cyrus they reached the Bible." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 19 '22 1150w
Cleveland p72 S '22

"A book of absorbing interest."

+ Lit R p16 S 9 '22 410w

"A little irony and this might be a beguiling book; as it is, M. Maeterlinck almost gives the impression that he believes in all the fumbings with the unknowable which he records."

— + Nation 115:77 J1 9 '22 50w

"One closes this book with a renewed respect for M. Maeterlinck. A profoundly religious man, in the best sense of that term, he has read and studied most of what has been written about occultism, and he remains sane. Religion is not for him the soothing syrup that it is for so many of his fellows. He follows truth, according to his lights, wherever she leads him. He resists in this book not only the seductions of pretty sentimental fancies: he resists the more powerful seductions of materialistic fancies." G. B.
New Statesman 20:182 N 11 '22 1600w

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne

N Y Times p3 Ag 6 '22 2900w

St Louis 20:204 S '22

Spec 129:732 N 18 '22 600w

MAIN, JOHN, pseud. See Parsons, E. W.

MALET, LUCAS, pseud. See Harrison, M. St L.

MALINOWSKI, BRONISLAW. Argonauts of the western Pacific, with a preface by Sir James George Frazer. (Studies in economics and political science.) 527p il $8 Dutton [21s Routledge]

919.5 New Guinea. Trobriand islands

22-16057

A highly specialized study, limited in geographical area to the archipelagoes of the Trobriand Islands lying off the eastern end of New Guinea, and to one phase of savage life only, the Kula, or trading system, a very extensive and highly complex system of exchange which the islanders maintain among themselves and with the inhabitants of the neighboring islands. Tho the main theme of the monograph is economic, dealing with commercial enterprise, exchange and trade, reference is made thruout to social organization, to mythology and folklore, and especially to the important part which magic plays in the institution of the Kula.

Booklist 19:80 D '22

Boston Transcript p5 O 28 '22 850w

"Dr. Malinowski has produced a cheap, admirably illustrated, and well-documented book, which may safely be described as reaching the high-water mark of ethnographical investigation and interpretation; we therefore eagerly await the publication of his other observations in this region." A. C. Haddon

+ Nation and Ath 31:686 Ag 19 '22 940w

"An outstanding merit of this book is that it is a well-considered study in ethnographical method; indeed the author's remarks on field-work will prove of great value for the guidance of future workers." A. C. Haddon

+ Nature 110:472 O 7 '22 1000w

"Dr. Malinowski has done his work thoroughly and conscientiously, confining himself to a record of what he has seen and done and heard, and refraining, so far as is humanly possible, from drawing inferences or propounding theories. His book is a valuable contribution to the science of ethnology." I. Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 O 29 '22 650w

"For once we have a writer who does not lean upon cannibalism for effect."

+ N Y World p7e O 22 '22 120w

"Dr. Malinowski is evidently well equipped for this work, alike by temperament and education, and his writings will take a deservedly high place amongst the best interpretations of primitive life. It is not only of high scientific value, but extremely good reading."

+ Sat R 134:353 S 2 '22 880w

"The book is of remarkable interest for students of symbolism, especially of poetic symbolism. For Dr. Malinowski's infinitely careful, scientific method makes the material which he has collected so completely trustworthy that it is possible to use it for all sorts of purposes for which it was not directly intended."

+ Spec 129:371 S 16 '22 2050w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p452 J1 13 '22 1950w

MANDER, JANE. Strange attraction. 376p $1.90 Dodd

22-19910

Valerie Carr, a New Zealand girl, had a passion for independence. Belonging to one of the best families of Auckland, she had seen much of the conventions of social life, fathomed its hypocrisies and suffered from them. Determined to make her own living and have a career, she took an editorial position on a paper in a small town. There she met Dane Barrington, a journalist of some distinction, who had also run amuck of the conventions and become a sort of social outcast. A rare and beautiful love relationship sprang up between them. Valerie would have held to her almost fanatical convictions and lived with him in a free union but for his persuading her into a legal marriage. The arguments employed by both sides and what they reveal of formal society are the book's distinctive feature.

MANDER, JANE—Continued

"The first half of the story does not move beyond type pictures. Then we are suddenly done with melodrama, done with cheapness, flung into the real drama of the life of a delicate man and a beautiful woman. Here the author hints at what she can some day do. It may be far-fetched. It is morbid. The end challenges acceptance. But here, at the last, we have something real, and from that no man may turn away in scorn."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '22 390w

"Miss Mander has proved in this novel that she is a skilled literary artist—in dialog, plot construction, style, characterization. Every character is alive, every page contributes to the dramatic action. The author has chosen, however, to depict a group of rather unlovely people, and to do it with a hard realism that shrinks not at the oaths of the men or the mannish traits of the heroine. The result rather chills the admiration which the book might otherwise inspire."

+ — Int Bk R p59 Ja '23 650w

"Many of the descriptions in the book one could do happily without. But the vivid bits of local color in countryside or river life, drawn with power and colored by warmth of phrase and beauty of imagery, are full of charm. This is Miss Mander's third book. It is her best book in almost every way, showing gain in conciseness, in organization, in movement, and emotional power."

+ — Lit R p325 D 16 '22 380w

"I am unable to find any illuminating pictures of New Zealand. They are all concerned with the amorous flounderings of an emotional lady and these flounderings might just as well have taken place in South Africa or New York. There is no blending in of the background. It is like a photograph stuck in behind the pages." Rex Hunter

— Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 350w

"The author has the instinct for good story telling and she offers in this book a story rather better and decidedly better told than she gave in her previous books. She is making good with the promise held out in her earlier work."

+ N Y Times p12 O 29 '22 720w

"If the story had a less artificial plot, and if the theme were not rubbed in so heavily, it might have been a neat, almost Shavian, bit of satire. As it is, it runs to melodrama and a two-pence colored, hothouse romanticism." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p8 O 22 '22 540w

MANLY, JOHN MATTHEWS, and RICKERT, EDITH. Contemporary American literature; bibliographies and study outlines. 188p $1.50 Harcourt

016.81 American literature—Bibliography
22-17791

A companion volume to "Contemporary British literature." (Book Review Digest, 1921) As in the former volume, authors are listed alphabetically with a brief biographical note and suggestions for reading, followed by a bibliography and a list of studies and reviews. The word contemporary in the title is interpreted arbitrarily to mean since the beginning of the war, excluding writers who died before August, 1914, and living writers who have produced no work since then. Classified indexes are added arranging the authors according to form of writing, birthplace, and subject matter.

Booklist 19:46 N '22

"An excellent new reference volume."

+ Lit R p50 S 23 '22 160w

"Probably painful sleuthing could uncover a number of slips; but a variety of checkings has led me to a respectful confidence in the accuracy of the book. And I have not only examined it; I am referring to it all the time." P. H. Boynton

+ New Repub 33:155 Ja 3 '23 650w

Reviewed by T: Boyd

N Y Tribune p18 Ja 28 '23 520w

Pratt p26 winter '23

R of Rs 67:111 Ja '23 80w

"The many overlapping classifications are one of the outstanding features of this interesting book. One deplores that many good writers have been omitted from the author's lists, however."

+ — Spring'd Republican p8 O 17 '22 170w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p785 N 30 '22 100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:252 N '22

MANN, HEINRICH. Patrioteer (Der untertan); tr. by Ernest Boyd. (European lib.) 388p $2 Harcourt

22-21695

"The story of the career of Diederich, a dirty, overbearing little poltroon running amuck through the main street of a small German town back in those eventful '90s' of the last century. It follows his course through his boyhood, during which he betrays his schoolboy comrades and snivels his way into favor with his masters, and through his young manhood, during which he betrays a foolish, submissive girl and uses black-jack brutality on her outraged father, drinks in oceans of beer and perverted philosophy in the company of the absurd society of wassailing 'Neo-Teutons.' The flowering of this delectable hero's career shows him completely demolishing every effort of his few unselfish and intelligent townsfolk to stem the tide of privileged greed and overbearing."—Lit R

Booklist 18:367 J1 '22

"He has exposed Imperialistic Germany as neatly as Sinclair Lewis exposed Main Street—he is an artist of distinction, a negligent artist, perhaps, like the later Tolstoy. The characters are handled with easy competence, the plot moves convincingly."

+ Dial 72:324 Mr '22 100w

"It is a hint of the Gilbertian touch in Mann's satire that redeems the book from the threatening blight of unrelieved bitterness and makes absorbing reading of the unsentimental account of its repulsive Don Quixote. Much of it is heavy voyaging, it is true." Ernest Brennecke

— + Lit R p395 F 4 '22 950w

MANSFIELD, KATHERINE. Garden party, and other stories. 255p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Constable

22-11444

Stories re-creating scenes from life with a delicacy and reality which bring their characters very close to the reader. The incidents are slight, often commonplace, but painted with such clearness and color that the image stands out with the utmost distinctness. Contents: At the bay; The garden party; The daughters of the late colonel; Mr. and Mrs. Dove; The young girl; Life of Ma Parker; Marriage à la mode; The voyage; Miss Brill; Her first ball; The singing lesson; The stranger; Bank holiday; An ideal family; The lady's-maid.

Reviewed by A. L. Grant

Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '22 500w

Booklist 19:21 O '22

"More than in her earlier volume of stories are we impressed with the essential sanity of her outlook. These portraits have been rounded till the impression is clearer and more inevitable than in the earlier book." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 '22 '22 850w

Cleveland p86 N '22

"One of the most striking features of her genius is her refreshing originality—both in point of view and literary style. Her style is all her own—and it is superb. It is at once the delight and the despair of the craftsman." D. K. Laub

+ Detroit News p7 J1 16 '22 1100w

"There is no doubt that the stories of Katharine Mansfield are literature. They are literature because they produce effects which can be easily attained by no other art. Her characters reduce to half a dozen types; when she deserts these she flounders awkwardly, and especially when she describes the Poorer Classes. Lacking a broad scope, she could find salvation in technical variety, but in her second volume she seems to strive for that no longer." Malcolm Cowley

+ — Dial 73:230 Ag '22 1200w

"If one makes the reservation that 'Prelude' in her earlier book is the best thing she has written, then one can say that the second volume is just as good as the first. But the limitations are here again, and now seem more striking. The delight that many of these stories afford on the first reading is intense; it wanes a little on the second, and we notice the cleverness—fatal sign! And on the third reading—but is there a third? One can not dine on the iridescent." Conrad Aiken

+ — Freeman 5:357 Je 21 '22 1750w

"Behind the effortless charm of 'The Garden Party' lies work as unselfish as a surgeon's as solid as a bricklayer's. Katharine Mansfield knows the materials of feeling. She squeezes the fat tube of her memory and out come bright, beautiful perceptions." Elizabeth Houghton

Lit R p737 Je 17 '22 960w

"She can be as scornful as Chekhov of unusual incident and all the artificial heightenings which constitute the ordinary technique of fiction and yet be important because she has achieved a method of expression so perfect that it can reproduce upon paper some outwardly undistinguished incident with all the richness which gives it its poignancy in actual life." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 115:100 Jl 26 '22 260w

"Miss Mansfield has learnt a great deal from the Russians as all intelligent writers should, and far too few do. Her work is satisfying to us, however, as no Russian work can be, owing to the fact that she writes of the people who have more or less the same physical conditions as ourselves. . . In none of her stories are we left with the feeling that the subject has been picked up, examined, and set down completely known like an ornament on a mantelpiece. We have the impression rather of being for a few moments privileged spectators of lives that were going on before we observed them, and that will continue when our attention has been drawn elsewhere."

+ Nation and Ath 30:949 Mr 25 '22 1200w

"She has an extraordinary ability to give you in a story a total effect of beauty without using phrases any one of which stands out, and without letting you know how she has done it. She is a connoisseur of the ripples that mean so much more than waves, a collector of little emotions caught on the wing, never pinned or bottled in her pages, but kept alive there in all their fragile iridescent colors." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 31:166 Jl 5 '22 900w

"Abandonment to the leisurely rhythm of her own imagination, and refusal to conform to the common custom and finish her book in a year's session, has enabled her to bring her inventions right over the threshold of art. They are extraordinarily solid; they have lived so long in her mind that she knows all about them and can ransack them for the difficult, rare, essential points. One of the results of Miss Mansfield's poetic temperament is that beauty is the general condition of her story. Most of her tales are laid in the glowing setting of the sub-tropics. The mind takes pleasure in merely moving in such an atmosphere, apart from the meanings it may find there." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 18:678 Mr 18 '22 1150w

"Practically all of them are vivid slices of life animated by a clever and meticulous characterization that lifts them far from the usual run of short stories. She handles the ordinary incidents of life with a revealing touch that gives them an entirely new aspect."

+ N Y Times p19 Je 4 '22 260w

"Many of the sketches in this collection are of the slightest, telling no definite story, making no direct appeal to the reader's sympathy; yet they are nearly all touched, in a greater or less degree, with the genuine magic. The author is not at her best in the purely idyllic, and makes no attempt here at the tragedy of passion and terror; but she displays nearly all the other gifts—pathos, humour, picturesqueness, subtlety, delicate suggestion. The style is perfectly easy, often colloquial; yet everything seems to be said exactly right, and she gets her effects, scenic, or emotional, without any apparent effort."

+ Sat R 133:266 Mr 11 '22 420w

"Miss Mansfield has an exquisite touch."

+ Spec 128:342 Mr 18 '22 1000w

"Miss Mansfield writes with a sure and skilful touch and a keen eye for the dramatic. Her stories are warm with real life, and they abound in effective detail and color."

+ Spring'd Republican p3 N 7 '22 300w

"Miss Katharine Mansfield's remarkable first book of stories left one expecting very much of her, and wondering, at the same time, if the next would be as good as 'Bliss.' There are ways of being as good and there is a way of being even better. . . The situations or impressions strike deeper, and leave a longer echo behind. Miss Mansfield's sensitiveness to beauty has grown more persuasive, both in words and in the perception of a mood or scene."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 2 '22 2000w

Wis Lib Bul 18:219 O '22

MANTHEY-ZORN, OTTO. Germany in travail. (Amherst books) 139p $2 Jones, Marshall

914.3 Reconstruction (European war)—Germany. Germany—Intellectual life. German drama 22-14374

The volume contains the author's observations of the spiritual and intellectual life of Germany in the summer and fall of 1920. He describes the still prevailing sad confusion in all the phases of life in which even university men and other intellectual and moral leaders are badly mired. He finds much promise, however, in the impetus among the common people to seek and find new spiritual standards thru liberal education and the cultivation of the arts, especially the drama. Manifestations of this spirit are the Workmen's educational association, the revolt of youth against a too repressive school system as seen in the Wandervogel movement, and the many drama leagues in the chief German cities and in Austria. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 16:719 N '22 70w

"A particularly clear and comprehensive book."

+ Bookm 56:360 N '22 180w

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 29 '22 780w

"His book is a sincere and well-written piece of academic journalism."

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 380w

R of Rs 66:335 S '22 100w

"A new book on Germany which is fair, frank and thoughtful, and contains neither prejudice nor propaganda. Moreover, there is no little satisfaction in a discussion of the problems of Central Europe which has the courage to look almost wholly at things spiritual, in the larger sense of that word. A distinct contribution towards such an understanding differing in matter and method from any other book on Germany which has appeared since the war."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 O 6 '22 940w

"The tone of this whole record of the latter-day German theatre is—as well as being highly useful and informative and on that account necessary to any student of the European theatre—profoundly moving in its revelation of German seriousness in the theatre and of the German conception of the drama as the highest form of literary expression and therefore the most important at such a crisis as exists in the Europe of today."

+ Theatre Arts M 6:349 O '22 200w

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1920-1921, and the yearbook of the drama in America. 471p $2 Small

822 Drama—Collections (Eng ed 20-21432)

"Playgoers and those interested in the development of the American stage will find in this book by the dramatic critic of the New York Evening Mail, a complete history of the year's theatrical record. Ten plays have been selected for condensation as representative of the best dramatic fare offered the American public during the season: 'Deburau,' 'The First Year,' 'Enter Madame,' 'The Green Goddess,' 'Liliom,' 'Mary Rose,' 'Nice People,' 'The Bad Man,' 'The Emperor Jones,' and 'The Skin Game.' — Springf'd Republican

Booklist 19:74 D '22

Reviewed by M. L. Mason
Freeman 6:285 N 29 '22 170w

"The slips are few, the labor of compilation very considerable, and the results both interesting and in varying degrees useful."

+ Lit R p355 D 30 '22 220w

"The ten abstracts have been prepared with surprising deftness and dexterity, the editor's passages of narrative leading up adroitly to the long stretches of dialogue which the several authors have generously allowed the editor to quote." Brander Matthews

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 22 '22 430w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 9 '22 270w

Theatre Arts M 6:81 Ja '22 50w

Wis Lib Bul 18:252 N '22

MARAFIOTI, PASQUAL MARIO. Caruso's method of voice production; the scientific culture of the voice. 308p il $3.50 Appleton

784.9 Singing and voice culture. Caruso, Enrico 22-3552

That Caruso's marvelous singing was due less to the perfection of his vocal organs than to his qualifications for the natural placement of his voice is the author's contention and point of departure. Another contention is that the art of good singing is at present fast deteriorating. The aim of the book is, accordingly, to lay down the new scientific principles of the mechanism of voice production with suggestions for a thoro reconstruction of voice culture. The author is himself an experienced laryngologist and was Caruso's medical as well as vocal adviser. Among the illustrations are many anatomical plates both in color and in black and white and X-ray photographs showing the position of the organs in vowel production, also facsimile letters, by Caruso and others, endorsing the author's methods. A set of vocal exercises is given for use in conjunction with "The scientific culture of the voice."

Booklist 19:43 N '22

Pratt p23 autumn '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:272 D '22

MARAN, RENE. Batouala; [tr. from the French by Adele Szold Seltzer]. 207p $1.75 Seltzer

22-19479

The scene of this starkly realistic novel, written by a French negro and recently awarded the Goncourt prize, is laid in the French Congo. The author calls it a series of etchings. It is almost without plot, the character of Batouala the mokoundji, chief of many villages, serving to bind together these pictures of savage Africa. With extraordinary vividness the surroundings and physical conditions of the native's life are sketched, his customs and habits, his superstitions, his sloth and sensuality. A wild native dance is described, a hunt, the funeral of an old man. Underneath all is felt, the unexpressed except in the preface, the native's hatred and distrust of the white man.

Booklist 19:160 F '23

"As a work of art 'Batouala' will not do. There is neither rhyme nor reason in the plan of the book. But there is a worse fault than the triviality of the plot and the monotonous phallicism of the actors. Precisely where one might reasonably expect M. Maran to shine with unapproachable splendour, he fails in the most lamentable fashion. His dialogue, his speeches, are not merely bad; they are beneath all criticism." R. H. Lowie

— Freeman 6:284 N 29 '22 1050w

"It is the workmanship of the piece that lifts it from the class of simply offensive books and makes it a work of literary art. The author felt intensely, and possessed also a rare and delicate perception of the quality of words. It says much for the translator, by the way, that the distinct flavor of Maran's style has been carried through to the English."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 8 '22 240w

"It is noteworthy because it is the literary product, very creditable as mere literature, of a descendant of some hundreds of years of Martinique negroes. In time, in education, perhaps in evolved race, except for undying sympathies, he is not simply a negro writing of other negroes. He is a merciless critic of European Colonial officials (of whom he is himself really one), but equally of the Darkest African native." Stoddard Dewey

Ind 108:119 F 4 '22 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:106 S 2 '22 180w

"Maran takes the reader and makes him feel, in truth, one of the actors in this primitive, yet universal, drama of love and hate, and revenge. Can I pay higher tribute to M. Maran's genius as a writer than that? I think not." Walter White

+ Lit R p3 S 9 '22 660w

"A great novel? Not quite, because it is feeble and fragmentary. But it has some of the marks of greatness upon it: energy, intensity, vitality." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 115:282 S 20 '22 610w

"One can only imagine that the Goncourt Academy was in search of a sensation, and that it went to a negro novel as other people nowadays go to negro music. Perhaps its members were impressed by the fact that M. René Maran had spent six years over it; perhaps they merely wanted to be original; perhaps they were just bored; perhaps they were hypnotized, as white men are said to be, by the low moaning of an African drum, of which, we suppose, this kind of thing is the literary equivalent." J. M. Murry

— Nation and Ath 31:476 J1 1 '22 450w

"Here [in the French Congo] for six years the author used his ears, his eyes, his nose, and transcribed what he heard, saw, smelled. The accuracy of his impression is beyond doubt; its poignancy is to be appreciated only at first hand."

+ New Repub 32:76 S 13 '22 250w

"The pictures are unforgettable. Savage Africa is brought before our very eyes, and before our ears and noses as well. The author has seen all these things. He has lived, as an official of the French Government, in that part of the Congo where the scene is laid, and one can hardly doubt that he describes things as they are." I: Anderson

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 20 '22 680w

"'Batouala' itself is superb. A strange, exotic work, with many points of excellence, it will live on, I think, by the simple powerful story that it tells." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 6 '22 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Jc 8 '22 400w

MARGUTTI, ALBERT ALEXANDER VIN-ZENZ, freiherr von. Emperor Francis Joseph and his times. 379p il $6 Doran [24s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Francis Joseph I, emperor of Austria. Austria-Hungary—History (Eng ed 22-277)

Francis Joseph, 1830-1916, sat on the throne and directed the destinies of the Hapsburg empire for sixty-eight years, a period filled with political dissensions in Austria-Hungary and elsewhere. The author was one of Francis Joseph's aides-de-camp during the last sixteen years of his life, consequently his recollections are of the emperor as an old man. They are chiefly personal and do not pierce below the surface of things. Separate chapters are given to the empress Elizabeth, crown prince Rudolph, archduke Francis Ferdinand, archduke Charles, the court, foreign relations, and the emperor's part in the World war. Illustrated with portraits. Index.

"A very readable and valuable book."

+ Bookm 55:430 Je '22 130w

"These are not like American reminiscences. They are written by an aide of the imperial household, who but once in sixteen years was permitted to touch the hand of his august master. From such relations intimate personal glimpses must necessarily be few. The reader who would find human pathos here must read sometimes between the lines; ther. it can be found. Altogether we have a faithful picture of the personality and environment of an old man who said on one occasion, with gloomy foreboding, 'It seems I am to be spared nothing on this earth.' S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '22 1150w

"Von Margutti was a keen observer, intelligently alive to the nature of the drama at which he was assisting, and with a taste for gossip; and he proves an entertaining and illuminating guide to the last days of the Hapsburgs." H: L. Stuart

+ Freeman 6:498 Ja 31 '23 2500w

"The book is valuable, first because of the picture of the inside working of a great bureaucratic state. In this respect it is of real historical value. Second, for its intimate account of the Austrian court at the time of the war. There are no revelations, but much that will interest a historian. Third, as a biography of a remarkable man."

+ Lit R p744 Je 17 '22 130w

"It is, of its kind, a masterpiece. With absolute un-self-consciousness, with the crudest technique, with touches of a child-like naïveté and a streak of old-maidish sentimentalism showing through here and there, this thoroughly unliterary elderly general has, by dint of sheer truthfulness and sincerity, and the observant power of a shrewd if unsophisticated mind, evolved a series of historic portraits of which at least two will endure. They are those of the old Emperor Francis Joseph and of the murdered heir to the crown, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand." E. S. Bagger

+ New Repub 32:23 Ag 30 '22 1200w

"A trustworthy sketch of the character of the Emperor Francis Joseph." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p3 My 14 '22 1300w

"Naturally the book abounds in the author's personal reminiscences, but in the main it consists of a series of character studies, elaborated with much care and expressed with not a little candour, of Francis Joseph himself, the Empress Elizabeth, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, and the Archduke, afterwards the Emperor Charles. Of the portraits thus presented that of the old Emperor is by far the most complete and impressive, and no student of European politics can afford to neglect it. Nor can this picture of a man, exalted yet intensely human, loving, hating, hoping, fearing, reeling under the heavy blows of fate, yet holding invincibly to the duty that lay nearest his hands, fail to interest all those who care little for politics but much for life, in its other manifestations."

+ Sat R 132:738 D 31 '21 540w

MARIE LOUISE, empress consort of Napoleon I. Private diaries; with introd. and commentary by Frédéric Masson. 245p il $3 Appleton [10s 6d Murray]

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French (Eng ed 22-12917)

These diaries, published for the first time in English, record three imperial journeys of the wife of Napoleon I, from 1810 to 1813. Being written for herself alone, the diaries are a frank and simple commentary on the happenings of her journeys, the persons she met, the places she visited. On one of the Journeys a series of intimate letters to the Emperor serve instead of a diary. In these thoughts set down by the Empress, Napoleon is shown from a new angle, the man as seen by his wife.

Bookm 56:232 O '22 130w

"The reader finds very much of interest to the close of the story, fragmentary as it is, desultory as it would be but for the frequent interjection of M. Masson's lucid remarks and narratives." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 24 '22 190w

"Has humour and discloses a strong feminine personality."

New Statesman 19:276 Je 10 '22 350w

Reviewed by I: Anderson

N Y Times p19 Je 25 '22 500w

Reviewed by Esther Murphy

N Y Tribune p31 D 10 '22 1750w

St Louis 20:251 O '22

MARKS, JEANNETTE AUGUSTUS. Sun chaser; a play in four acts. 119p $1.75 Stewart Kidd

812

22-18922

The scene of this play is a little frontier town and its central figure is the village lamp-lighter, a drink-crazed visionary who is always chasing the sun as the symbol of the happiness which has eluded him. He has brought nothing but misery to his wife and child but they still cling to him. The tragedy moves to its climax in the death of his little daughter as she is trying to carry food to her father in the lock-up. The idea is pointedly brought out that the seller of liquor sins as much as the drinker.

"There is some clumsiness in the handling of characters, and the technique of the drama as a drama may be open to question, but it fulfills its purpose as an interesting and poetic bit of reading matter."

+ N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 70w

"To the handling of her theme and in the consistent development and portrayal of character, Miss Marks brings her sure sense of delicate values and her ability to suggest, briefly and in short scenes, the tragedy of life's wasted possibilities."

+ Springfield Republican p7a N 26 '22 700w

Wis Lib Bul 18:272 D '22

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. Unspeakable gentleman. 265p $1.75 Scribner

22-10170

This tale of romance takes place in an American seaport town where a party of French royalist plotters against Napoleon Bonaparte have taken refuge. There are duels fought, midnight escapes by sea and horse; in fact the book is typical of the times when swords were brandished often and wine drunk freely. The hero, Captain Shelton, is so enmeshed in intrigue and mystery that all thoughts of him are permissible until almost the last chapter where his very unspeakableness is justified. The love of Mademoiselle for Henry Shelton the hero's son and the distinctive personality of Brutus, the Jamaican, once saved from the gallows by the captain, add colorful bits of interest.

Booklist 18:367 Jl '22

"His writing has the fluent readableness of really natural style and a complete freedom from stylistic mannerism. He has even dared to revert to the Stevenson tradition, and with remarkable success." Sidney Howard

+ Bookm 55:525 Jl '22 220w

"A good yarn. It may not be probable, but no one asks probability when he is being rushed from adventure to adventure with lightning rapidity and when he may have as a hero as fascinating a scapegrace as Captain

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS—Continued
Shelton. It is certainly one of the most entertaining of first novels, and shows no little originality on its author's part." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '22 960w
Cleveland p51 Ag '22

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 108:558 J1 8 '22 440w

"Mr. Marquand seeks to withhold the explanation of his hero's actions which would reveal that Capt. Shelton is a much-wronged man of honor. He does not succeed. Still, the author achieves an amusing story, told in a light and lucid style, which will provide interesting reading for an idle hour."

— + Lit R p747 Je 17 '22 240w

"Is this, as is suggested, one of the heralds of the threatening revival of historical romance?
Very likely. But if so, it seems to hint that the new romance will be as given to artifice, posture, eloquence, and swank as ever the old was."

— Nation 114:626 My 24 '22 100w

"Will undoubtedly find an audience. It is well written, and gives promise of better things from its young author."

+ N Y Times p27 Je 4 '22 90w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"The story itself, though vivid enough and very much in the manner of its time—1895—has no particular depth or subtlety. Its chief claim to be read lies in the author's admirable economy in the matter of emotion and word."

— + Spec 129:771 N 25 '22 80w

"A stirring story. Let Mr Marquand romance again."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 3 '22 110w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O
19 '22 360w

Wis Lib Bul 18:186 J1 '22

MARQUIS, DON. Poems and portraits. 134p
$1.50 Doubleday

811

22-4099

This collection of poems is in two parts:
Poems, and Savage portraits. In the first the poet reveals his moods and sentiments and deeper reactions to life—tender, fanciful and mystic. In the second human frailties are somewhat cynically portrayed in pen-pictures of men and women.

Booklist 18:230 Ap '22

"It is not only verse but poetry, and sounds a light lyrical note with grace and skill. It is uneven in quality, like most good things, and the simplest of his songs are generally the finest."

+ Bookm 55:313 My '22 100w

"The poems which make the first part of the book exhibit a nobility of vision which lifts his utterances above the petty and fastidious word-carving of mere aestheticism. In these poems Don Marquis is moved by impulses which enlarge upon the broad horizons of human experience. The 'Savage Portraits,' which make up the latter half of this collection are the rendering of personal characters, whose shams and hypocrisies and mental vices are exhibited. In these portraits Don Marquis has done something in type which I believe to be only surpassed by the type of thing that Masters has done in his 'Spoon River Anthology.'" W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 25 '22 1200w

Cleveland p69 S '22

"Jazz music and the songs of Schubert would not form a stranger combination than do the 'Poems' and the 'Portraits' of Don Marquis.
The latter are blades of satiric verse, often witty, but frequently undistinguished and cheap in tone; the former are poems well worthy of the name, poems marked by a music, an imaginative range, and a reflective quality that compare favourably with the best that America is producing in the field."

+ — Dial 72:538 My '22 120w

Freeman 6:263 N 22 '22 150w.

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:201 F 25 '22 200w

"The gift of style, the wide aptitude for words, finds a strange variety of application in this little volume. . . We must accept the 'Savage Portraits' that close the volume. Savage they certainly are: too savage, in my opinion, for veracity, at least as suggesting a summing up of human nature at large. They serve perhaps better than anything else to illustrate Mr. Mar-quis's admirable verbal mastery. No more hideous aggregation of loathsome attributes and detestable epithets has been piled up since the satires of Donne." Gamaliel Bradford

+ — Lit R p448 F 25 '22 850w

"His poetic genius is not of the highest order, but it is authentic, and there is no small degree of felicity in the manner in which he handles some modest themes."

+ — Outlook 132:344 O 25 '22 210w

Wis Lib Bul 18:182 J1 '22

MARQUIS, DON. Revolt of the oyster. 299p
$1.50 Doubleday

22-23143

The title story describes one of those psychological moments in the history of evolution when oysters and men were still equals in intelligence, when it depended on the results of a moral combat between Probably Arboreal and a giant oyster, whether the highest type of life on this planet some hundred thousand years hence should be marine and bivalve or terrestrial and biped. The decision, as usual, came from woman, for had not Parrot Feathers at this crucial moment realized her love for Probably and had she not given him the necessary encouragement for the final struggle, everything would have turned out differently. The other stories are: "If we could only see"; How Hank signed the pledge; Accursed hat! Rooney's touchdown; Too American; The saddest man;
Dogs and boys; The kidnapping of Bill Patterson; Blood will tell; Being a public character;
Written in blood.

Booklist 19:160 F '23

"For utter individuality 'The Saddest Man' is probably the best story in the book. It is little short of masterly. . . The other stories are good enough. 'The Revolt of the Oyster' is perhaps the best; but 'If We Could Only See,' 'Accursed Hat!' 'Rooney's Touchdown,' and 'Too American' could have been bettered in the telling by half a dozen humorous writers of the day. The book is uneven, but for its best things we can afford to skim over its comparative failings."

+ — Lit R p315 D 16 '22 1150w

"There are one or two tales in 'The Revolt of the Oyster' that are of that high excellency associated with his best work, but for the most part the stories are just interesting, good to read and easy to forget. Perhaps Mr. Marquis is trying to do too much."

+ — N Y Times p2 Ja 14 '23 200w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 133:187 Ja 24 '23 110w

"A joyous volume."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 60w

MARQUIS, DON. Sonnets to a red-haired lady (by a gentleman with a blue beard); and famous love affairs. 138p il $1.75 Doubleday

811

22-11466

In the sonnets a Blue beard celebrates the memory of his thirty red-haired wives. In 'Famous love affairs,' Paris and Helen, Tristram and Isolt, Antony and Cleopatra, Adam and Eve, Lancelot and Guinevere and other famous lovers are played with in rhyme.

Booklist 19:12 O '22

"Possibly the most amusing he has yet published. It is all sheer nonsense, but such happy, giggling nonsense! His manipulation of adjectives is—well, it is Don Marquis at his cachinnating best."

+ Bookm 55:648 Ag '22 70w

"Don Marquis has written some very amusing, whimsical poems, but he has done far more. In almost every one of them he has showed what beautiful poetry he can write. In almost every one there are exquisite lines and then presto change! the imp of the perverse, with a touch of ridiculous slang, or a twist, has given a comic ending."

+ Daily News Rec p8 Ag 23 '22 300w

"They are simply delightful."

+ Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 50w

"It has ease, leisureliness, abundant natural humour—and under the dismaying prevalence of artificial humour, of pert galvanic smartness, how thankful one may be for that! It has playfulness and elegance; Mr. Marquis's literary taste guides him safely over bogs of slang and colloquialism that would swamp an unsound taste at the second step."

+ Freeman 5:430 Jl 12 '22 2050w

"In neither series is he at his best. At times the verses seem vulgar without being funny." E. L. Pearson

— Ind 108:523 Je 10 '22 280w

"The book displays the versatility and solid proportions as a humorist of the conductor of 'The Sundial.' He is a strange blend of poet, philosopher, and vaudeville artist. There remains a richer literary treasure in his mind, we believe, than in that of any other American humorist."

+ Lit R p687 My 27 '22 700w

"There is something savagely efficient about his poetry, something terribly complete that the English would not like. He sails into his subject with both fists, and he wears no gloves. He undoubtedly says too much about the red-haired lady, and he searches too far in history for romances to ridicule by parody. But the best of Don Marquis is the best American satirical verse today."

+ — Nation 115:22 Jl 5 '22 90w

"Don Marquis is an authentic poet, and because this is so the reader will find in his light verse a feeling for poetic values that would wholly escape the absolutely uninspired light verse writer who is technically funny but who has no depths to his spirit. The series of sonnets with which the book opens are funny for a time, but after that they begin to pall on the reader and this is due not so much to a falling off in comedy merit as to a plethora of the same subject. Turning to the second section of the book, the reader will discover a series of famous love affairs, each one of them a scream from start to finish."

— + N Y Times p9 Je 11 '22 980w

St Louis 21:13 Ja '23

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 16 '22 680w

"At times, the humor is overdone. But Don Marquis is more than a humorist, he is a poet." E. B. Reed

+ — Yale R n s 12:220 O '22 350w

MARRIOTT, JOHN ARTHUR RANSOME. Europe and beyond. 335p $3 Dutton

940.2 World politics. Europe—History (Eng ed 21-21958)

This book, which the sub-title describes as "a preliminary survey of world politics in the last half century (1870-1920)" is intended as a sequel to the author's earlier volume "The remaking of modern Europe (1789-1871)." In its contents he has drawn freely on some of his previously published books and articles in English reviews. Contents: The new era; The new Germany and the New France; The eastern question; The ascendancy of Germany; The Egyptian problem; The expansion of Russia; The Franco-Russian alliance; The United States of America as a world-power; The English in South Africa; West and East; The diplomatic revolution; The problem of the Near East; The Balkan league and the Balkan wars; The world-war; The world settlement; Index.

Am Pol Sci R 17:141 F '23 30w

"A volume written with remarkable insight into causes and effects and written in immaculate English and in a sympathetic manner." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 7 '22 1350w

Reviewed by A. L. P. Dennis

Lit R p242 N 25 '22 900w

"Would be more valuable if the index was not planned so parsimoniously. Its maps are good, and if Mr. Marriott's generalizations, necessary in a book which is a running commentary, seem superficial because they are not amplified, they are never puerile. The book is an honest book, written by an observer of the historical panorama who uses no superfluous words in his comments and interpretations. He is an Englishman to the backbone; but he is seldom insular or prejudiced." M. F. Egan

+ — N Y Times p4 S 17 '22 2400w

R of Rs 66:447 O '22 100w

MARSH, GEORGE. Whelps of the wolf. 303p $1.75 Penn

22-10016

"Jean Marcel, the young trapper, sets out for the Esquimaux villages on the edge of the Arctic to buy a husky dog team, passing through the unpeopled barrens, where no Indians nor half-breeds will go because they fear the evil spirit, the Windigo, which haunts those solitudes. Jean fears neither man nor ghost; he wins through, and by saving the life of an Esquimaux boy secures a single husky pup, the pick of a notable litter. This dog, Fleur, accompanies him throughout the rest of his adventures—such adventures as were commonplace to him. When she was stolen he followed hundreds of miles to recapture her; when he in turn was in danger she saved his life; in the end she and her pups won him a bride by a 300-mile run through a terrific blizzard to fetch a physician, when the pretty Julie was dying for lack of medical aid." —N Y Tribune

Booklist 19:54 N '22

Cleveland p91 D '22

"Certainly there is a good deal of authentic atmosphere, if no originality of theme or plot, in this story. The author has a way of creeping up to an adventure and then pouncing upon it that makes the narrative rather fine. In fact, there is a real gift for narrative here, which is a better thing than the book."

+ — Lit R p205 N 11 '22 170w

"Mr. Marsh writes as one who is familiar with the country he describes. He knows dogs, too, and loves them, that is very evident. And he knows how to tell a story."

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 27 '22 420w

"This book has a fresh and genuine quality; it is written from first hand knowledge and love of the country and its people, and the author has a natural gift of good, straightforward English. One need hardly look for purple patches and flowery prose in such a story; they would be out of place. But it is clear and graphic and unaffected, and the people depicted are all alive, individual." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 10 '22 360w

MARSH, JAMES REID. Charm of the Middle kingdom. 245p il $3 Little 915.1 China—Description and travel

22-19245

The author went to China as a young man, young enough to feel a keen delight in the strangeness of the life there and in the romance of the Orient. Altho he was in the consular service, there is nothing of politics or the more serious economic life of the people or of state affairs in the book. Having learned the Chinese language the author made intimate social contacts and, approaching the people with an open-minded tolerance, he gives his readers an inside view of their customs, habits and mental reactions. Illustrations from photographs.

Booklist 19:80 D '22

MARSH, JAMES REID—Continued
 Boston Transcript p4 O 28 '22 650w
 Cleveland p94 D '22

Reviewed by I: Anderson
 Int Bk R p53 Ja '23 70w

Reviewed by Achmed Abdullah
 N Y Tribune p9 O 15 '22 350w
 Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:32 Ja '23

"In recounting his experiences he has achieved the kind of informality which adds so much to the attractiveness of travel books. One would never be reminded, in reading his pages, that the author had any official relation to the Chinese Government—much less to the prosaic duties of a customs officer!"

R of Rs 66:560 N '22 90w

"James Reid Marsh succeeds in putting China before us as a land possessed of personality. . . The net result is the reader's feeling of a real China, neither romance nor commonplace, but true to both."

+ Springf'd Republican p16 F 9 '23 250w
 Wis Lib Bul 19:23 Ja '23

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD. Big Peter. 288p
 $2 Dodd

22-5603

Frankly melodramatic is this story of an amiable young giant bred in the Australian bush to whom comes the startling news that he is the rightful heir to a great title and estate in England. Much is to happen before he establishes his claim. He becomes the victim of a mysterious set of circumstances, including accusation of murder, but in the end he secures not only his title, but something more desirable—the girl whose picture on a magazine cover had long haunted his dreams.

"The plot of the story is well worked out, and although the development of character is unimportant, its basis and its incidents are plausible. It is useless to say, however, that Mr. Marshall is at his best in it, and many who admire his work will wonder why he has taken the trouble to write a story of the type of 'Big Peter' when he can do so much better with an entirely different type of novel."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Mr 25 '22 620w

"'Big Peter' is undoubtedly Mr. Marshall on a holiday, but a decorous one, and is written with the smooth nicety that characterizes his work generally." N. P. Dawson

+ Lit R p619 Ap 29 '22 880w

"Graceful, leisurely dignified, the story moves over the pages with pleasurable ease and utmost candor. It never hurries, neither does it mark time. Its style is soft as thistle-down, so obvious that a child could foretell what will appear on the next page. Yet with the spirit of a child we affectionately follow."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 9 '22 550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:262 Je '22

"It is an entertaining story, with a degree of excitement and a diverting mystery."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 23 '22 320w

"Mr. Marshall handles this rather crude material with a skilled lightness of touch which differs in kind as well as in degree from the skill of the regular purveyors of sensation."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p491 Jl 27 '22 520w

Wis Lib Bul 18:186 Jl '22

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD. Pippin. 376p $2
 Dodd

22-21206

Pippin is an English country youth who longs to see the world before settling down to his own little corner of it. His wise father, understanding the curiosity of youth, encourages him to go away for a year, giving him a little money, but not enough to keep him, and advising him to work for his living in any way that pleases him. So, with his pack on his back, Pippin takes the road. He travels thru the countryside, with the city as his goal, making friends with all sorts of people, and learning much about life from them. He hobbles with shepherds and tramps and pedlars, joins a circus, acquires a faithful friend in a dog, and finally reaches the great city. Everywhere his smile and his freckled face have made him friends. With the beginning of spring he takes the homeward road. A happier, wiser, more contented youth he reaches his journey's end. He has found no place like home and no woman so beautiful as his sweet cousin Alison whom without knowing it, he has always loved.

Booklist 19:86 D '22

"It is an ingeniously diversified story, plausible yet with fantastic touches here and there, diverse in scene and incident and singularly unpretentious in the portrayal of a young man's character." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '22 950w

"It is a beautifully conceived and executed parable of quest, of youth afield, seeking knowledge of life, and coming clean home, secure that its own place is best." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 110:62 Ja 20 '23 600w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p76 D '22 40w

"A leisurely book this, one to be read slowly, that nothing of its exquisite charm may be missed. There is no temptation to gallop through in order to see how it is going to turn out. It is much pleasanter to saunter along and enjoy each moment as it passes."

+ N Y Times p18 O 29 '22 580w

"Three years ago 'Pippin' would have seemed a very delightful book indeed, but unfortunately it is not two or three years ago, and I must say that if there is in the book one speech remotely resembling the language of real people, or one incident that does not flavor strongly of other incidents dimly remembered from other books, not remembered at all by name, then that speech and that incident must have been recorded in one of the many places I skipped." Hunter Staggs

— + N Y Tribune p8 N 5 '22 750w

"In 'Pippin' Mr. Marshall strikes an entirely new vein; and a delightful one it is for those who care for delicacy of writing and the quiet depiction of human nature. In its own genre 'Pippin' is a little masterpiece." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 132:532 N 22 '22 230w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:5 Ja '23

Reviewed by G: B. Dutton

Springf'd Republican p7a D 24 '22 330w

Wis Lib Bul 18:274 D '22

MARSHALL, EDISON. Heart of little Shikara; and other stories. 295p $1.90 Little

22-20051

Stories of hunting adventures in forest and jungle. The title-story and one other, "The elephant remembers," have their scene of action in the jungles of India, most of the others in the Oregon forests. The first is the tale of a little native Indian boy who comes to the rescue of a hard-pressed English hunter and himself fires the shot which kills the tiger and saves his hero. Contents: The heart of little Shikara; Never kill a porcupine; Jungle justice; Shag of the packs; The son of the wild things; Furs; Little death; The elephant remembers; The serpent city; Brother Bill the elk.

Booklist 19:87 D '22

"Little masterpieces if ever stories were, of condensation yet completeness, color yet harmony, restraint yet poignancy of description." F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 11 '22 680w

"The title story of this collection is a good, average story of its kind: Kipling and water. Its manner is mincing, adjectival. A more serious defect, more apparent in the other animal stories of the volume, is that Mr. Marshall's animals are not animals at all; neither are they quite human beings in animal shape, but something indeterminate—and non-existent. . . The mechanics of the tales, however, are good; they move, and have their tense, dramatic moments. That, no doubt, is the reason for their popularity."

— + Lit R p160 O 28 '22 170w

"He describes the sights and sounds of the forest in its ever changing moods in such vivid detail that we seem to hear the wind in the tree tops and the stealthy footfalls of wild things in search of their prey or trying to avoid becoming the prey of others. But these descriptions, excellent as they are in themselves, are merely the background, the stage setting for red-blooded stories of adventure."

+ N Y Times p22 N 12 '22 430w

Wis Lib Bul 19:26 Ja '23

MARSHALL, EDISON. Shepherds of the wild. 300p $1.75 Little

22-4084

"This is a tale of Idaho in the wild and mountainous regions of canyons and deep, dark forests, of coyotes and elk and Indian guides, of sheep herding along the ranges and the remaking of Hugh Gaylord. Chiefly of the remaking of Hugh Gaylord. He comes from the land of country clubs and cocktails, choruses and too many cigarettes, a weak, soft-muscled young man looking too old for his years, into the land of high ranges and big game. He has never really worked. He has never really thought. Here he must shift for himself, think quickly, and work, work actually with his hands. Out in the open tending flocks, living by camp fires and underneath the stars he finds himself. He loses his false sophistication and acquires faith, he gains a quiet, healthy happiness and for the first time in his life knows contentment."—N Y Times

"The dog is really very well done; as to whether the other creatures are correctly presented no one but a super-animal psychologist could say. One shrinks from guessing what Col. Roosevelt might have said about it."

— + Lit R p513 Mr 18 '22 180w

"Atmosphere is the story's strong point. One truly feels and understands the bigness and cleanness of the great open places. The plot is slight, but enough to keep the tale tidily hung together."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 16 '22 250w

"The story is not credible, nor is it particularly interesting, and the personification of animals is trite. Yet though his characters remain puppets, there is a simplicity about the book which makes it less annoying than most books of its class."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p522 Ag 10 '22 140w

MARSHALL, EDISON. Sky line of spruce. 322p $1.75 Little

22-16148

"Ezra Melville finds his old friend Ben Darby under a five-year sentence for burglary. Darby does not remember Melville, does not even remember his own name. His whole life, previous to the moment of his arrest, is a blank to him. Melville succeeds in convincing the authorities that Darby should not be held responsible for a crime committed when suffering from amnesia, and obtains his release on parole. A famous alienist who has examined Darby recommends that he be taken back to scenes that have been familiar to him, in the hope that these will act as stimuli to restore his memory, and Melville agrees to do this. In order to provide the proper 'stimuli,' Melville takes Ben with him on a prospecting expedition, and then the real story begins. There is no lack of thrilling episodes. A wild canoe ride down the rapids of the Yuga River, a titanic battle with a huge grizzly and other fights with even more savage human enemies, these together with the remarkable exploits of Fenris, the wolf, cannot fail to make the reader's pulse beat faster. The lady in the case is a true daughter of the forest and Ben meets her under circumstances which provide abundant complications."—N Y Times

Booklist 19:123 Ja '23

"That it has power is undeniable, that the author succeeded with common material is also undeniable. There is a real understanding and knowledge of nature, and sufficient of human nature." R. D. W.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 9 '22 520w

"Written well. This book is excellent reading for the lover of adventure, and for once even the fondest lover ought to be content."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 F 4 '23 150w

Lit R p922 S 2 '22 240w

"Mr. Marshall has the knack of telling a story and a genuine feeling for the beauties of nature in her sublimer moods. His characters, however, are not complex enough to be quite human. The bad ones have no virtues, and the good ones have no weaknesses."

+ N Y Times p28 Ag 27 '22 400w

"The story is sure-fire stuff. Any one who likes life and fiction in the raw will eat this alive."

W: Harris

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ag 27 '22 330w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:218 O '22

MARSHALL, LEON CARROLL. Business administration. (Materials for the study of business) 919p $4 Univ. of Chicago press [24s Cambridge univ. press]

658 Business management. Employment management 22-216

The material in this book, which is designed for use in an introductory course of business administration, consists largely of excerpts from books, pamphlets and periodical articles and of adaptations from these sources. The book is an attempt to see the problems of business administration as an interrelated whole and to indicate the lines of study which may help in their solution. Chapter 1 presents a brief view of the field of study. Chapter 2 examines a sample business problem—that of plant location. Chapters 3 to 9 discuss the functions of the business administrator—personnel administration, marketing, finance, production, risk-bearing, the form of the business unit and basic features of administration. Chapter 10 presents a "business case for the student to analyze. References for further study are given at the end of each chapter, and there is an index.

Booklist 18:223 Ap '22

"Well conceived and well executed, it lends strength to the advocates of the problem method of instruction. Granting the educational worth of such a survey course and admitting the desirability of the problem method of instruction, this volume immediately stands out as by all odds the best teaching medium in its field now available."

+ Lit R p492 Mr 11 '22 360w

MARTIN, ABSALOM. Kastle Kraggs. 267p $1.75 Duffield

22-18783

"Sunken treasure in a lagoon and a tragic house party in a big mansion on its shore are the foci of the story. The buried treasure is to be located by the intelligent solution of a cryptogram, and it seems that several people have almost simultaneously learned to read it. Their conflicting ambitions lead to a series of tragic deaths and mysterious disappearances. The sea monster that guards the treasure chest is carefully made to roar behind the curtain for some time before its revelation to the reader. The explanation will surely cause surprise, and the uncanny setting will create shivers for some readers."—Springf'd Republican

"Plot well handled."

+ Booklist 19:54 N '22

Cleveland p31 D '22

"In spite of one or two things which were obviously put in to make the puzzle harder to solve, 'Kastle Kraggs' is a thoroughly satisfactory mystery story."

+ N Y Times p14 O 1 '22 280w

MARTIN, ABSALOM—Continued

"Those who think of Florida in terms of sun and flowers should read the first chapter of this tale, which is a really admirable bit of descriptive writing, conveying a picture of the sinister and somber charm of that shadowed interior country where tourists seldom penetrate." Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p8 O 1 '22 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 180w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

MARTIN, FRANKLIN H. South America from a surgeon's point of view. 325p 1l $3 Revell
G10.98 Medicine—South America. South America—Description and travel 22-13630

"Dr. Martin, who is Director-General of the American College of Surgeons, has had the collaboration of three eminent physicians in the preparation of this work—William J. Mayo, Thomas J. Watkins, and Francis P. Corrigan. The book may be described as a surgeon's Baedeker of South America. It contains a thread of narrative which interlaces accounts of three different voyages around South America. Its raison d'être is a discussion of South American medical practice, hospital facilities, hygienic measures, and its appendix, nearly one-half the size of the rest of the volume, contains a 'Summary of Facts,' a Spanish-English and Portuguese-English 'vocabulary and phrases,' and a full index."—Cath World

"The book is distracting in its make-up. This fact may deter placid souls from its reading. Nevertheless, it is a very welcome addition to our South Americana, and should be in the hands of every apologist of our much-maligned cousins of the South. We welcome it as an antidote to such works as Franck's Vagabonding Down the Andes."

+ Cath World 216:256 N '22 750w

"The book is by no means intended for the medical reader alone; it is a revelation concerning the warm-hearted hospitality of the people, the beauty and stateliness of the cities, and the splendid scenery of the countries visited. In fact, it is a book that no one who has not already visited South America but who contemplates doing so can afford to leave unread." Van Buren Thorne

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 30 '22:2000w

R of Rs 65:556 My '22 100w

MARTIN, STUART. Mystery of Mormonism. 318p 1l $7.50 Dutton [21s Odhams]

298 Mormons and Mormonism

(Eng ed 21-1753)

A secular history of Mormonism from its advent to the present time, based upon research among a vast accumulation of records and unusual opportunities for learning from the lips of the leaders themselves what the Church of latter-day saints claims to represent. The author, approaching the subject without bias, examines the church and its leaders; while admitting the sincerity of some of its adherents, he condemns their religion as fraudulent and believes that its doom is near.

"An impartial and careful study of this strange and powerful sect."

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 22 '22 360w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:374 Ap 15 '22 80w

MARVIN, FRANCIS SYDNEY, ed. Western races and the world. (Unity ser.) 264p $4.20 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]

901 Civilization. Race problems 22-22415

"In the initial essay the editor of the series has considered the problem of education. This is followed by 'Language as a Link,' by Professor J. A. Smith; 'Greeks and Barbarians,' or the relation of the Hellenic civilization to that of the outside world, by Edwyn Bevan; 'Roman Empire' as reflecting in its political construction much of the Greek idea, by H. Stuart Jones; upon the influence of Christianity upon Western Civilization, by Dr. A. J. Carlyle; upon the 'Humanitarianism of the 18th Century and its results,' by S. H. Swinney; upon the relations of Mohammedism to European civilization, by Sir T. W. Arnold; upon the Indian problem, on the interaction of India and the Western world, by Charles Roberts; upon the relations of the Western races and far East, by W. E. Soothill. Two essays follow on topics suggested by the relations of the Western races to the Tropics, by J. H. Harris and Sir Sydney Oliver. In a final paper Sir Sydney discusses the subject of the mandates arranged under the League of Nations."—Boston Transcript

"Mr. Marvin has done a distinct service to civilization itself and to the sum of human knowledge and sympathy in his work of collecting, arranging and thus preserving, through the medium of the great Oxford Press, this most valuable series of lecture-essays."

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 25 '22 450w

"Mr. Marvin has embodied 'unity' in a most practical and personal way; and all students of history owe him gratitude, whether they agree with his philosophy or not, for his disinterested labours in promoting this highest form of historical research."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p537 Ag
24 '22 3950w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Esther and Berenice. 205p 1l $2 Macmillan
822 22-2336

Of these two plays 'Esther' is an adaptation and 'Berenice' a translation from Racine, made for the use of a company of amateur players. The object was to obtain plays in verse that could hold an audience; that could be done with few properties and no scenery and with a small cast of from six to nine persons.

Booklist 18:230 Ap '22

Cleveland p68 S '22

"In spite of an occasional carelessness of workmanship, there are flashes of genuine poetry and scenes of real dramatic intensity in these adaptations from Racine. John Masefield is perhaps not so effective in the rôle of translator as in that of originator, yet he has succeeded in investing these two plays with the savour and the strength of Elizabethan drama without marring them by grandiloquence or circumlocution of method."

+ Dial 72:649 Je '22 70w

"Most of the book jogs along in placid semi-prose, and occasionally drowns off into prose simple. The volume adds nothing to our knowledge of Masefield unless it be to remind us forcibly of the careless good nature of his artistic conscience. Nor does it introduce Racine to English readers." E. S.

— Freeman 5:526 Ag 9 '22 300w

"Two great plays. How much of them is Racine, how much Masefield does not really matter. In pronouncing these great plays, as they indisputably are, it is not meant that they are specially adapted for representation upon the modern stage. It is on the literary side that they are preëminently valuable." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p464 Mr 4 '22 1350w

"Whenever Mr. Masefield has changed Racine he has done so in the direction of melodrama: when he has taken him as he is he has reduced him to a boyish simplicity. The rhythm is rousing, of course, and there is a pleasant energy of sound; but the man Racine is not here."

+ Nation 114:402 Ap 5 '22 100w

"Extraordinarily interesting simply as a peep behind the scenes, a revelation of the poetic mind in its workshop. It plods diligently and faithfully in the task appointed, when suddenly it jumps, knocks the toolbox over, and starts making something out of the dust on the floor."

+ Nation and Ath 31:60 Ap 8 '22 1000w

"Mr. Masefield was one of the worst people in the world to do Racine: thoroughly English both in the 'careless rapture' of his emotional expression and in the vivid close-packed vigor of his style, he is especially unfitted for the psychological logic and the colorless eloquence of French tragedy. The result of his attempting to render it is a strange and depressing anomaly." Edmund Wilson, Jr.

— New Repub 30:291 My 3 '22 660w

New Statesman 18:533 F 11 '22 3000w

Reviewed by L. R. Morris

N Y Times p11 S 24 '22 80w

"Two plays that would seem to be admirable additions to amateur drama, particularly to high school and small club endeavors."

Outlook 131:610 Ag 9 '22 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:237 My '22

Reviewed by T. W. Ellis

Spec 128:598 My 13 '22 600w

"'Esther' and 'Berenice' in their newest English dress have all the grace and finish of their adaptor's art, they serve as an admirable introduction to a French classic dramatist who is probably read scarcely at all, they read with amazing ease, and their possibilities as acting pieces for small community companies are evident in the reading."

+ Springfield Republican p8 My 1 '22 300w

Wis Lib Bul 18:131 My '22

"Mr. Masefield as translator is inadequate: as adapter he outshines the original." O. W. Firkins

— + Yale R n s 12:192 O '22 350w

MASON, ARTHUR. Ocean echoes. 287p $1.75
Holt

B or 92

22-17057

In his introduction to this autobiography William McFee writes: "Here is a man who may be described as a true romantic. At the end of a life devoted to wanderings which took him nowhere and adventures which have gotten him neither fame nor wealth, he sits down to write, convinced that nothing like this had ever happened to a man before." Born in Ireland, he loved the sea from his boyhood and at eighteen ran away from home and took up the life of a sailor. For ten years he followed the sea, making many voyages to many lands. He left the sea in 1903 and went to mining in Goldfield, Nevada. But he never stayed long in one place and after a succession of adventures on land he would set off to ramble the oceans again. His latest adventure was literature. In 1920 he wrote his first book "The Flying Bo'sun," which was so kindly received by the critics that he was encouraged to write this, his second book.

Booklist 19:51 N '22

"You will find it entertaining and even thrilling. Stimulating and original, it is a fitting successor to the earlier book." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:340 N '22 80w

Boston Transcript p6 S 30 '22 450w

"In incident and in picturesqueness, 'Ocean Echoes' leaves nothing to be desired; it is the poetry of life that one chiefly misses—and that comes only with the self-forgetfulness of the true story-teller." L. B.

+ Freeman 6:454 Ja 17 '23 350w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p37 D '22 50w

"The author's words have the fresh tang of wild fruit. There is a good, bracing stride in every sentence and no lagging of anecdotes. The author never weakens his easy mastery of style by overreaching himself. He is much too wise to blow out his fuses with an overcharge, and so he leaves the reader with a satisfying sense of reserve power."

+ Int Bk R p63 Ja '23 420w

"Extraordinary narrative. It is the work of a true romantic, oblivious of the tremendous issues of civilization and race." W. McFee

+ N Y Tribune p7 S 24 '22 1000w (Reprinted from Introd.)

Wis Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

MASSINGHAM, HAROLD JOHN. Some birds of the countryside; the art of nature. 208p $5 Dutton

598.2 Birds—Habits and behavior

(Eng ed 21-20741)

In these studies of bird life the reader is taken not only to the English and Welsh countryside but to the author's own southwest suburb of London near the river. Bird behavior is observed and interpreted with sympathy and wide knowledge. There is a chapter on Gilbert White of Selborne and on Charles Waterton, the enthusiastic naturalist of Walton Hall.

Booklist 19:71 D '22

"With singular literary skill Mr. Massingham presents his pictures, whether of landscape or of his favourite birds, so vividly that scene, incident, and character live in the reader's mental vision. No writer of our acquaintance has better succeeded in seeing into and interpreting the behaviour of birds, and that without undue anthropomorphism."

+ Nature 108:142 S 29 '21 240w

"Mr. Massingham's book is mainly creative. His observations are based upon the feelings, and it is to the feelings of his readers that he appeals. He is a genuine naturalist; his knowledge of birds is wide and reliable."

+ New Statesman 17:448 J1 23 '21 750w

"Mr. Massingham seems to us to have evolved a very interesting philosophy about birds and indeed about all kinds of beasts. He does not state his philosophy in so many words; it is only implied. He writes about birds and beasts very much as he would write about the political or intellectual ambitions of his fellows. We must not be misunderstood. He does not attribute to animals and beasts an intellectual faculty; he does not confuse instinct with reason; he does not indulge in that silly kind of anthropomorphism which is charming in fables but is pestilential in any work pretending to scientific value. Nevertheless, he does somehow think of animals—and to us it is very attractive—not merely as having embryonic faculties which may be expanded to one knows not what extent in the course of the aeons, but as already having such a place in the arrangement of life that they have an absolute right to the humane consideration of all men."

+ Spec 126:716 Je 4 '21 1350w

"Miscellaneous fruits of the imagination are strewn over these pages with capricious irrelevance. Though the author is evidently a competent and eager naturalist, his arbitrary literary habit tends to make him careless about facts. In spite of its capricious vagueness, there is much in this book which lovers of birds will read with pleasure. The author observes acutely, and can describe vividly; and there is a satisfactory balance between studies of specially favoured regions, and those of ordinary country districts."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p320 My 19 '21 750w

MASSON, THOMAS LANSING. Our American humorists. 448p $2.50 Moffat

817 Humorists, American

22-24291

"The book is inclusive. Mr. Masson went right through 'Who's Who,' the daily press, the back numbers of Life and all the magazines in his search for humorists. Thirty-two major humorists popped up as deserving especial chapters. Six more chapters were needed to bunch the columnists, the comic poets, the comic artists, the younger set, the writers of humorous stories and U. S. Anonymous. [The] book lists more than a hundred names in the chapter devoted to press humorists alone. Mr. Masson wrote to each one of [the humorists] and requested an outline of his or her life; in all cases the outline was furnished. So all that Mr. Masson had to do was to erect a slim scaffolding of comment, and fit in the various letters as they arrived, the result proving to be a thoroughly amusing volume of some four hundred pages."—N Y Times

MASSON, THOMAS LANSING—Continued.

"The book makes very entertaining reading and holds much useful biographical information."

+ Lit R p370 Ja 6 '23 220w

"Mr. Masson's book presents all facets of our modern humorists. It is intensely amusing in parts and always informative. It possesses examples of typical laughter-provoking matter in the self-portraits of the humorists and in copious quotations from their work."

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 14 '23 960w

"It is a capital book to take up and read a bit at a time."

+ Outlook 133:101 Ja 10 '23 100w

MASTERMAN, CHARLES FREDERICK GURNEY. How England is governed. 293p il $3 Knopf [8s 6d Selwyn & E.]

342.42 England—Politics and government
22-4517

"Mr. Masterman has had more than ordinary experience of the problems of administration. He has served in the old Local Government Board, the Home Office, and the Treasury, and while thus acquainted with the 'machine' from inside he has often appeared as its critic from outside, either as a private member of the House of Commons or as a representative of local municipal authorities. In this little volume he describes in a free and untechnical style (without any expression of political predilections) the local and central government of England, the administration of law and justice, and the 'making of the citizen' from childhood to the day when he is empowered to 'choose his rulers.'"—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland p54 Ag '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:262 Mr 11 '22 150w

"It is neither a comprehensive treatise on English government that he gives us nor, on the other hand, such a bald summary as is to be found in English school textbooks of civics. Like Bagehot and Sidney Low he undertakes to describe, in its salient characteristics, the English political system as it works in practice. If he falls short of these predecessors in philosophical grasp of his subject, he is not inferior to them in intimacy of acquaintance with it; if his book is not quite of the stuff of which classics are made, it will remain a vivid sketch of the English constitution in the Lloyd Georgian era." R. L. Schuyler

+ — Nation 115:668 D 13 '22 1450w

"Mr. Masterman writes in a simple and eminently readable style, and has undoubtedly succeeded in his purpose of producing a book which strikes the happy mean between the lengthy works of the authorities on British constitutional history and law and the bald summaries which give little or no idea of the spirit animating British political institutions. The book can be unhesitatingly recommended both as an interesting sketch for the general reader and a useful introduction to the student."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 13 '22 3000w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:10 Ja '23

"This is a readable and on the whole an impartial account of English institutions. The author enlivens his book with anecdotes from his own experience at Westminster and in Whitehall, and makes a commendable effort to avoid any partisanship."

+ Spec 126:562 Ap 30 '21 70w

"An illuminating and interesting discussion as well as a brief but lucid exposition."

+ Springfield Republican p6 Mr 20 '22 350w

"Mr. Masterman has not lost the easy charm and picturesqueness of writing which carry his reader forward so smoothly and contentedly in his other books; and he contrives to make what might have been a dry summary of facts a really romantic tale by his keen sense of historical associations and of the human side of politics."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 28 '21 140w

Wis Lib Bul 18:213 O '22

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. Children of the market place. 469p $2 Macmillan

22-4211

An historical novel in the form of a fictitious autobiography of an Englishman who, as a youth of eighteen, came to America where his father had preceded him and, dying, had left him an estate in Illinois. He landed in the New York of 1833 and travelled by canal, lake and stage to Illinois, finally taking up his residence in Chicago. His life develops with the growth of this pioneer region and, thru his early meeting with young Stephen Douglas and life-long friendship with him, becomes a panorama of the history and politics of the country in the stormy period which led up to the Civil war. The canvas is so broad that a full cross-section of history is shown. The story of Douglas rather overshadows the hero's own. Lincoln, too, is shown, appearing out of obscurity, encountering the "little giant," coming into the presidency. And then the war! A brief epilogue brings the book to the beginning of this century, with a rapid summing-up of America's new problems, social and political.

Booklist 18:332 Je '22

"With all its defects, the story as a whole and in many of its details has an appeal of no little intensity. The spirit of America, of its controversial spirit, of its sectional disputes, fills its pages. If it were a better novel, however, it would be better history. If it were better history, it would be a better novel." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 29 '22 760w
Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"The novel that elbows its way through Mr Masters' historical lumber is curiously devoid of human interest. The characters are as placidly dead as those found in any rural album of family photographs, and a number of them are the excuse for a bit of harmless philosophizing to boot. The deadness of the book is in contrast to its galvanic and not always grammatical style."

— Dial 73:457 O '22 180w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 108:457 My 13 '22 320w

"It would be historically significant in any case for its picture of Douglas. The little giant breathes and is credible, impressive, even pathetic, in this story. He is made to take his place in the philosophy of history. As fiction the book is less successful. In spite of its staccato style, [it] is readable, interesting, and informative without ever departing from the reality of experience into the abstractions of crystallized history. It will fill a gap on library shelves and induct many a reader into a vivid historical period which this generation knows only by chronicle and abstract." H: S. Canby

+ — Lit R p651 My 13 '22 720w

"Of the book as a book there can be no hesitation in saying that 'Children of the Market Place' is one of the most delightful and yet thoughtful contributions to the storehouse of contemporary American literature. The vignettes of life in the various parts of the country during the period he describes are little gems of writing, while the style throughout has a most agreeable quality of flowing ease and crystalline clearness and an entire absence of literary pretentiousness." Austin Hay

+ N Y Times p21 Jl 9 '22 1100w

Outlook 131:172 My 24 '22 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:262 Je '22

"Without at all rising to literary greatness. Mr. Masters's story is an interesting and suggestive study of the quality and character of the Middle West and of its influence as the dominating power in American civilization. Not all its implications may be true, but they are well worth consideration; for probably none of them will be found to lack at least a portion of the truth."

+ — Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 2 '22 720w

"In revivifying a past of which we are the uncomprehending heirs, Mr. Masters has done an admirable piece of work. The story itself is of little consequence." Florence Fleisher

+ — Survey 49:sup192 N 1 '22 750w
Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

MATHESON, DARLEY. Terriers. 213p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Lane]

636.7 Terriers (Eng ed 22-18879)

A book for the dog-owner, fancier and breeder, giving full information, including history, description and points, about all the principal terrier breeds. Closing chapters give directions for the care, feeding and breeding of terriers and for the treatment of their ailments and accidents. There are thirty-one illustrations of typical dogs.

Lit R p135 O 21 '22 250w

New Statesman 19:336 Je 24 '22 200w

N Y Times p27 Ja 14 '23 170w

Sat R 133:422 Ap 22 '22 420w

"This should appeal to a fairly large public, but it does not really fill a gap in dog literature. The book is well printed, on good paper, and illustrated with a number of photographs which might well have been increased. It has no index, which is a disadvantage, although the manner in which the book is put together makes an index less necessary than usual in a book of reference."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Ap 20 '22 180w

MATHEWS, JOHN MABRY. Conduct of American foreign relations. (Century political science ser.) 353p $3 Century

327.73 United States—Foreign relations 22-1205

"The purpose of the work is to consider the foreign relations of the United States from the standpoint of political science. The important chapters outline the governmental organization for the conduct of foreign affairs, set forth the problems of diplomatic intercourse, and consider from the standpoint of constitutional law as well as political practice the various phases of the treaty-making power. Diplomatic events furnish illustrations of the principles under discussion."—Am Pol Sci R

"A great number of topics have been arranged with sound judgment and discussed in an interesting manner. . . . The volume is well documented and shows painstaking investigation. It will not only be helpful to the reader who desires to find the specific principles which determine the course of governmental action in the conduct of foreign affairs, but will prove of value in connection with college courses in diplomacy and international relations." W: S. Carpenter

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:501 Ag '22 560w

"The author promises that his treatment will be from the standpoint of 'political science.' If he has fulfilled his purpose, political science is indeed barren. . . . He is concerned with rules rather than realities. . . . He is interested only in matters that involve the Constitution or laws; and yet in the day-by-day business of the State Department, it is in the protection of American interests abroad that one finds the real 'stakes of diplomacy.'" Lindsay Rogers

— Freeman 5:212 My 10 '22 1350w

"It is well done. It is systematic, documented, and accurate. Professor Mathews has done admirably what he has set out to do. It is no fault of his if no American citizen can learn anything vital about diplomacy from his pages." C: A. Beard

+ New Repub 30:144 Mr 29 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:153 Je '22

MATTHEWS, BRANDER. Toessin of revolt; and other essays. 295p $2 Scribner 22-18663

Fifteen essays on social and literary topics, the title-essay being a discussion of the conflict between youth and age, the tendency of youth toward sensationalism and individualism. Contents: The toessin of revolt; The duty of the intellectuals; The dwelling of a day-dream; What is American literature: The centenary of a question; American aphorisms; A plea for the platitude; On the length of Cleopatra's nose; Concerning conversation: The gentle art of repartee; Cosmopolitan cookery; On working too much and working too fast; The modernity of Molière; Theodore Roosevelt as a man of letters; Memories of Mark Twain.

Booklist 19:46 N '22

"When he is not writing like a provincial editorial writer engrossed in another 'Whither Are We Drifting?' lamentation, Professor Matthews is not so bad. He has vigor and spirit and erudition. His mind is crabbed but it is not confined." Burton Rascoe

+ Bookm 56:222 O '22 680w

"He is a keen critic of contemporary life in all its phases, but he attacks it philosophically. This is what makes his work easy reading. He has moreover the fortunate faculty of saying something which will be remembered." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 20 '23 1200w

"A worthy example of the American essay at its best."

+ Cath World 116:416 D '22 250w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:204 O 14 '22 100w

"In many of Mr. Matthews's essays he shows not only a sympathy with wit and humor in others, but a good deal of those qualities of his own. Such papers as those on 'The Gentle Art of Repartee,' 'Cosmopolitan Cooking,' and 'Concerning Conversation' are readable and delightful to a degree." C: L. Moore

+ Lit R p125 O 21 '22 900w

Nation 115:553 N 22 '22 850w

"Professor Matthews achieves an admirable evenness of execution, and he draws skillfully upon a full quiver of allusion."

+ New Statesman 20:342 D 16 '22 200w

Reviewed by S. P. Sherman

N Y Times p8 O 29 '22 2150w

"Dr. Matthews's title essay is but the grumbings of a crusty old chap about nothing in particular, but just to be grumbling." Burton Rascoe

— N Y Tribune p8 O 8 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:590 D '22

St Louis 21:12 Ja '23

Spec 130:25 Ja 6 '23 150w

Spring'd Republican p7a O 29 '22 540w

MATZ, BERTRAM WALDROM. Dickensian inns and taverns. 280p il $3 Scribner [10s 6d C. Palmer]

914.2 England—Description and travel. Hotels, taverns, etc.—England. Dickens, Charles

"The Editor of The Dickensian here continues, through the other novels and writings of Dickens, the work which he began in 'The Inns and Taverns of Pickwick.' The long novels are taken in something approaching chronological order and are followed by the shorter stories and sketches. Where an inn is mentioned in more than one book Mr. Matz has dealt with it in the chapter devoted to the story in which reference is first made to it. Inns associated with Dickens's own life are not mentioned unless they also appear in his books. This

MATZ, BERTRAM WALDROM—Continued
The volume is copiously illustrated, many of the reproductions being taken from Mr. T. W. Tyrrell's collection of topographical photographs and from Mr. C. G. Harper's well-known drawings."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Matz is an indefatigable collector and compiler of literary odds and ends, and he is able to put together an interesting and valuable reference book. His English style, however, is not impeccable." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 16 '22 1400w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 110:25 Ja 6 '23 360w

"The best parts of this book are the felicitous quotations from Dickens's own writings—descriptions as accurate for this day and age, barring discrepancies of costume, as they were ninety years ago."

+ Lit R p420 Ja 27 '23 400w

"Mr. Matz is cheery and enthusiastic, but not so careful about his writing as Dickens was."

+ — New Statesman 20:312 D 9 '22 130w

N Y Times p4 Ja 14 '23 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p786 N
30 '22 140w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. On a Chinese screen. 237p $2 Doran [10s 6d Heinemann]

915.1 China—Description and travel 22-19940

Fifty-eight sketches of Chinese life and character, written with complete detachment and a fine sense of irony. Many of them are concerned with the lives of foreigners who have come to China as missionaries or as representatives of governments or of business houses. The indifference of most of these aliens to the novel and interesting aspects of the life which surrounds them is the note of one sketch after another. The clerk in Mirage lives a life of danger and incident and yet is bored and turns for romance to magazine stories; again there is a description of a missionary who has not troubled to learn Chinese or to study the religions of the people he has come to convert. Some of the sketches like The inn, Dawn, The road, Arabesque, The song of the river, Night-fall, are etchings of the Chinese scene, done with great economy of detail; others, like The Mongol chief, The cabinet minister, The consul, are brief, vivid characterizations of individuals.

Booklist 19:74 D '22

Bookm 56:515 D '22 130w

Cleveland p94 D '22

Int Bk R p62 Ja '23 500w

Nation 116:19 Ja 3 '23 650w

"Although Mr. Maugham's touch is light, as solid a picture is put before us as any traveller could bring back. He is not without his good-humour, too, and if there is cynicism in some of his sketches, in others there is pathos." E. R.

+ New Statesman 20:274 D 2 '22 980w

"It is a fascinating volume, vivid, thoughtful, full of color, picturesque, stimulating to the imagination. By means of it one feels that one is coming into contact with an unusually interesting mind, keenly intelligent, sensitive and sympathetic, quick to perceive and to understand. There is so much in it upon which one would like to comment choice is all but impossible." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p11 F 4 '23 1150w

"It is a truthful book; a book of charm and distinction and keen observation. This book is recommended to the average reader as three solid hours of exquisite beauty and stark truth." Achmed Abdullah

+ N Y Tribune p9 O 15 '22 600w

"Each [sketch] is a finished piece of art, painting with the delicate, sure touch of the perfect craftsman a picture with all the atmosphere and feeling which its subject demands."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 3 '23 550w

"As a matter of fact, it is not a Chinese screen at all, but a very pretty piece of Maugham ware, a bibelot in which the dainty marionettes of his lively imagination, delicate irony, pathos, and whimsical humour play their parts."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p756 N 23
'22 900w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. General Bramble; tr. from the French by Jules Castier and Ronald Boswell. 182p $1.50 Dodd [16s Lane]

22-8046

More mess-room sketches following the "Silence of Colonel Bramble" (Book Review Digest, 1920) in which the author acts not only as interpreter for the Scotch division in France to which he was attached during the war, but also as the kindly and understanding interpreter of British character and the working of the British mind. The group is the same, with its strongly individualized types,—the Irish Doctor O'Grady, the caustic Col. Parker, the R. C. padre, the French interpreter, Aurelle, and Gen. Bramble in the background. The narrative is carried on by means of their conversations.

"Humor that never limps and a taste that never errs are characteristics of true wit. This book has it."

+ Detroit News p7 J1 16 '22 80w

"There is plenty of material provocative of hearty laughter in this new 'General Bramble.' The book is made up of scraps of every-day existence in camps, the scraps being so well chosen that they continually exemplify the good will and camaraderie which existed among the various units of the allied armies, particularly between the English and French."

+ N Y Times p13 My 21 '22 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:322 J1 '22

MAXWELL, DONALD. Unknown Kent; being a series of unmethodical explorations of the country. 210p il $4.50 Putnam [12s 6d Lane]

914.2 Kent, England (Eng ed 22-8270)

The book describes "unmethodical explorations" of Kent from Maidstone to Dover, from Borsal to Romney Marsh, and of the Medway in a motor boat. Some of the most picturesque material for description the author, who is also an artist, found among the cement works of the Medway country. The illustrations are drawings in color and line.

Booklist 18:360 J1 '22

Lit R p764 Je 24 '22 70w

"The facile, holiday prose in which Mr. Maxwell expresses his walks abroad and adventures in a motor-boat on the Medway, is well adapted to his drawings. It does not exalt or depress; it maintains a gentle fluency and comfortable appeal. The drawings are numerous, and often, in their quiet way, very good indeed."

+ Nation and Ath 30:564 Ja 7 '22 270w

"Compact with charm. It is written in a delightfully discursive style, and its chapters dealing with the idle wanderings of the author through the many pleasant byways of Kent are most engrossing."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 25 '22 220w

"It is pleasantly written, though the author's literary style lacks the individuality shown in the strong line and pure colour of his delightful drawings."

+ — Sat R 132:718 D 24 '21 200w

"Altogether this is an interesting and amusing book."

+ Spec 127:754 D 3 '21 190w

"The letterpress, written with pleasant humour in gossipy style, and beautifully printed, will not tax the eyesight or overstrain the brain of any man. But it suggests very vividly an artist's point of view when he sets forth upon a sketching tour in search of bridges, windmills, oast-houses, woods and hills, high-pitched roofs and half-timbered houses. . . Mr. Maxwell has the eye to see and the art to reproduce the beauty in things misnamed ugly and common."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p803 D 8
21 950w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM BABINGTON. Little more. 393p $2 Dodd [8s 6d Hutchinson]

22-260i

The Welbys, when the story opens, are a comfortable, unpretentious suburban family. Mr Welby is happy in the prospect of soon retiring on a modest competence, but the children are ambitious for "a little more." This is unexpectedly provided by the inheritance of the fortune of a rich uncle. The family moves into a palatial flat, but they are unsatisfied parvenus. Soon follow bankruptcy and the extreme of poverty, even starvation, from which they are rescued by a former servant. To round out this succession of happenings, enough is finally recovered from the wreck of their fortune to restore the family to its original modest position. The author calls his novel a "morality" and the moral is obvious.

Booklist 18:239 Ap '22

"I found this elaborate modern version of the Midas fable a little boring, for all the neatness of Mr. Maxwell's technique. The characters are carefully (if conventionally) drawn; but I wondered why they were drawn at all. The novel may be useful as a reassurance to some in their indigence and a warning to some who are in the way to acquire wealth; but that it is more than that I am inclined to doubt." Burton Rascoe

— Bookm 55:197 Ap '22 450w

"It is more or less of an unpretentious fairy tale, with by no means the realistic vigor of 'In Cotton Wool,' 'Mrs. Thompson,' or 'The Devil's Garden,' and with a note of extravagance in it now and then that gives it a distinct note of fantastic melodrama." E. F. Edgett

— + Boston Transcript p4 F 1 '22 1250w

Cleveland p28 Ap '22

"It is a story of an almost astonishing simplicity, like some fairy tale related at twilight. But it has magic, it is full of real human beings, it is changeable and colorful and moving, a charming variation on an old theme."

+ N Y Times p16 F 5 '22 1400w

"This might be mushy, childish, and sentimental. But it isn't. The jollity is real, the trouble is actual, the characters are individual. Mr. Maxwell knows how to 'do things with a pen,' as Kipling once wrote of himself. The book can be read with pleasure, and the more perceptive the reader is the more he will find beneath the surface." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 130:350 Mr 1 '22 300w

"Morally, this 'morality' is above reproach; from any literary point of view, it is indescribable."

— Sat R 132:409 O 1 '21 700w

"When the family chiefly concerned leave the suburbs and become first preposterously rich and then really indigent, the book ceases to be convincing, for the lights and shadows are too abruptly contrasted."

— Spec 127:638 N 12 '21 80w

"Mr Maxwell recites his narrative without effort at dramatic effect, yet it moves with a rapidity and tenseness that grips the reader's attention. The characters are human and well if somewhat broadly portrayed."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 480w

"The author's aim was worthy, but the result is not what he intended. He has chosen his events and their development without any regard to their probable effects on character. The book is a sheer extravagance which can only be enjoyed as a farce."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 22 '21 350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 J1 '22

MAXWELL, WILLIAM BABINGTON. Spinster of this parish. 397p $2 Dodd [7s 6d T. Butterworth]

22-16759

The novel tells the story of a great love. Emmeline Verinder, daughter of staid Victorian parents, and Anthony Dyke, traveler and explorer, know the moment they meet that they belong to each other, tho Dyke, with an insane wife in an asylum, is not free to marry. But Emmeline, who had never inclined to romance or revolted against her environment, braves all the conventions and the wrath of her outraged parents, and smuggling herself on Dyke's ship goes with him on an exploring trip to the highest Andes where they encounter unheard-of perils. After this fling of romance Emmeline comes back to London, quietly takes up her apparently conventional life and gradually overcomes the social distrust of her. She squanders her income to finance Dyke's expeditions, edits his books and lives for the brief days he spends with her between trips, in her Kensington flat. The story ends on the same note of glorious adventure when, twenty-five years after their first meeting, Anthony Dyke, widower, and Emmeline Verinder, spinster, stand up like boy and girl lovers to hear their banns read out in church.

Booklist 19:54 N '22

"It puts the stamp of expert novelist again upon W. B. Maxwell." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 12 '22 880w

Cleveland p84 N '22

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p70 D '22 40w

"An interesting and well-written story."

+ Lit D p58 N 4 '22 880w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Lit R p259 D 2 '22 300w

"He is a very unequal writer, but in this simple and touching story he has found his feet. It is genuine stuff. 'Spinster of this Parish' is one of those books we enjoy without asking ourselves too closely why."

+ Nation and Ath 31:573 J1 22 '22 170w

"A story of absorbing interest." I. Anderson

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 27 '22 700w

"The whole book is very pleasant and easy reading." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 27 '22 640w

"It is strong in its appeal to one's sympathy, but not given to sentimentalism. In absorbing story interest it is, in my opinion, far away ahead of most recent novels." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 132:119 S 20 '22 250w

"Whatever Mr. W. B. Maxwell attempts in his delightful new novel, he carries it with both insight and virtuosity."

+ Sat R 133:613 Je 10 '22 500w

"The chapters which describe the journey of the hero and the heroine in the Andes are extremely exciting, and the whole book will be found excellent reading by those who like a story with a real plot."

+ Spec 129:24 J1 1 '22 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 24 '22 700w

"He is a story-teller born and made; any idea seems to fructify in his mind into recognizable detail of itself, and he has the art to make his effects cumulative."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 25 '22 750w

Wis Lib Bul 18:254 N '22

MAYERS, LEWIS. Federal service; a study of the system of personnel administration of the United States government. 607p $5 Appleton 351.1 Civil service—United States. United States—Officials and employees. Employment management 22-3769

The book comes under the Studies in administration series published under the auspices of the Institute for government research. It is the first attempt at a study of the problem of how a technically competent and loyal personnel can be secured and retained for the conduct of governmental operations. The study involves every detail in securing, compensating, directing, and controlling such a personnel as will assure the efficiency of public administration. Contents: The elimination of politics from the executive civil service; The problem of federal personnel administration. There is an appendix of statistical tables and an index.

MAYERS, LEWIS—Continued

"It is the best presentation of the problem of entrance, promotion and traditions of the service that has been published. Mr. Mayers has made a contribution which could only be made after painstaking and penetrating research by a person having unusual experience and clear insight into governmental operations." M. B. Lambie

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:517 Ag '22 540w

"Another one of the splendid studies in administration put out under the auspices of the Institute for Government Research. It is the work of a careful student."

+ Ann Am Acad 103:149 S '22 200w

Booklist 18:311 Je '22

"Accounts of the civil service abound, but we have hitherto had no work, small or large, devoted entirely to the system employed in securing, compensating and controlling the personnel by which the operations of the Federal Government are carried on. The need is here supplied by Dr. Mayers with a book of more than 600 pages which, alike as information, criticism and constructive suggestion, comes near exhausting the subject and is not soon likely to be superseded." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '22 960w

"Unfortunately, few readers will have the time and patience to go through the 600 pages of details, written in a style at times somewhat too precise and labored. It is hoped that the institute will cater to the needs of the interested citizen, and, having supplied this thoroughgoing handbook, will prepare a forty or fifty page book giving the gist of what we all want to know about our Federal personnel system." H. S. Dennison

+ Lit R p853 Ag 5 '22 2450w

"Thorough, well-balanced, constructive."

+ Nation 115:443 O 25 '22 40w

Pratt p12 autumn '22

Reviewed by J. M. Gaus

Spring'd Republican p7a S 17 '22 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 18:179 Jl '22

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Our best poets, English and American. 233p $2 Holt

821 English poetry—History and criticism.
American poetry—History and criticism.

22-24848

This English critic, himself a poet, has the temerity not only to make a list of the twelve leading contemporary English poets, but to arrange these poets in the order of their merit, as follows: G. K. Chesterton, Alice Meynell, Charles Williams, Walter de la Mare, Ralph Hodgson, W. B. Yeats, Hilaire Belloc, J. C. Squire, W. H. Davies, Lascelles Abercrombie, Laurence Binyon, John Masefield. He does not argue the order of their precedence, being content to express his opinions without claiming authority for them. His method is to search out and make clear the central idea in each poet's work using quotations generously. American poets Mr Maynard deals with in a separate section. They are Edwin Arlington Robinson, Robert Frost, Vachel Lindsay, Amy Lowell, Carl Sandburg, Edgar Lee Masters, William Rose Benét and Stephen Benét, Sara Teasdale, Edna St Vincent Millay and Ridgely Torrence.

"Mr. Maynard's book is one of intensely personal opinions in which preference has more to do with his opinions than precedent or tradition. As such it is both interesting and informative." W. S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '22 1550w

"His judgments certainly are 'idiosyncratic'. . . He is dull most of the time and so prejudiced an observer of the field of modern verse that there does not seem to be any particular reason even faintly to take his book with seriousness.

He is an admirable example of the creative writer who is not a critic at all and yet who insists upon attempting criticism." H. S. Gorman

— Int Bk R p50 F '23 420w

"Maynard challenges sharp replies—but he revels in challenges, the title being of itself an invitation. All this lends zest to the reading. 'Our Best Poets' will help to clarify modern poetic criticism."

+ N Y Times p6 D 31 '22 2800w

MAYO, KATHERINE. Mounted justice. 238p $2 Houghton

353.9 Police. Pennsylvania—Police 22-8970

The nine narratives of this collection are authentic cases in which the Pennsylvania state police have traced crimes and brought the criminals to justice. The object is to demonstrate the importance of the organization as protectors of life, peace, and property among country folk.

Booklist 18:349 Jl '22

"No fiction could be more enthralling. Here is suspense and excitement for the most avid reader of 'detective stuff' with the appeal to serious readers who think it worth while to follow modern development and get inspiration from courageous competency in circumstances that must be met by the brains and muscle of men rather than by the ingenuity and imagination of writers."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '22 150w

"It is in many respects the best of her three books dealing with that famous body of men and the stories she tells have all the charm of fiction with the added interest of being actual happenings."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 20 '22 210w

"There is no falling-off in the quality of the stories contained in this the third book that Miss Mayo has written about the Pennsylvania Mounted Police."

+ No Am 216:282 Ag '22 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:322 Jl '22

Pratt p12 autumn '22

St Louis 20:236 D '22

MAYO, LAWRENCE SHAW. John Wentworth, governor of New Hampshire, 1767-1775. 208p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Milford]

B or 92 Wentworth, John, 1737-1820. New Hampshire—History 21-15842

"This biography of the last Royal Governor of New Hampshire is an important contribution to the history of the American colonies before the War of Independence. And, since Mr. Mayo has completed his biography of Wentworth by describing his subsequent history as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, his book is also a contribution towards the history of Canada. Hitherto, a short article in the Dictionary of National Biography has contained all that has been known of Sir John Wentworth. Mr. Mayo's method of writing this biography has been as far as possible to let his hero tell his own story in his own words."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is a pleasure to read a biography which so felicitously reproduces the best qualities of its subject and glosses nothing over. Worth doing and well done, it is a real contribution not only to the history of New Hampshire but to the understanding of colonial life and the two sides of the Revolution." H. D. Foster

+ Am Hist R 27:326 Ja '22 750w

"It is delightfully printed and bound, and delightfully written." W. L. Grant

+ Canadian Hist R 2:373 D '21 300w

"Mr. Mayo has approached his biographical study with gusto, and the combination of his enthusiasm with the attractiveness of Wentworth's personality has given us a very readable monograph. It is accurate, thorough, and based in large part on unpublished sources, though the familiar New Hampshire Province Papers and State Papers are the principal basis of the chapters dealing with Wentworth's Governorship. The style, though careful, is here and there plainly that of a beginner in authorship."

+ — Lit R p370 Ja 21 '22 400w

Spec 128:182 F 11 '22 560w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 5 '22 850w

MAZZINI, GIUSEPPE. Mazzini's letters to an English family: ed. and with an introd. by E. F. Richards. 3v v 2-3 293;324p il ea $5 Dodd [16s Lane]

B or 92

Mazzini's correspondence with his English friends, the Ashursts, is completed in these volumes which cover the years 1855 to 1872. The first volume of the letters, covering the years 1844-54, (Book Review Digest, 1920) was chiefly remarkable for its revelations of Mazzini's character. The letters in these later volumes strengthen that view of his spirit and personality but they have a greater historical interest. They show Mazzini at work, giving the whole weight of his influence to the revolutionary movement in Italy, and his attitude toward Victor Emmanuel, Cavour and Garibaldi. Written almost every day during some periods to his friends in England, the letters are usually hurried, but full of the spirit of the man. The editor supplies unifying material and explanatory notes. Maps. Index.

Booklist 19:51 N '22

Boston Transcript p6 O 28 '22 800w

"As letters they leave something to be desired in the way of warm and revealing intimacy; and for a unified portrait of this insurgent era of Cavour and Garibaldi one will search sedulously, among many trivial pages which were, for many illuminating pages which were never, written."

+ — Dial 74:212 F '23 200w

"They are even more interesting than was the first volume. The charm of his personality remains undimmed through this vast mass of letters and short notes."

+ Nation and Ath 31:856 S 30 '22 800w

"Mazzini's innate honesty and abounding charity charm us throughout these interesting volumes."

+ Spec 109:152 J1 29 '22 260w

"The second and third volumes of Mazzini's letters to the Ashurst family continue the interest of the first. Whether or not they throw much additional light upon the extraordinarily intricate politics of Italy during the years 1855 to 1872, they are of first-rate importance for the appreciation of Mazzini's character and ideals."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Je 29 '22 2050w

MEEKER, JAMES EDWARD. Work of the stock exchange. 633p il $5 Ronald

332.6 Stock exchange 22-5475

The book is intended to serve as an introduction to an extremely complex, extensive and little understood subject. Tho the treatment is not exhaustive the subject is covered with some thoroughness and in a clear and readable manner. Statistical, technical and corollary material has been relegated to the appendices. There is a full bibliography.

"It is an exceptionally readable book on a highly technical subject." W. E. Lagerquist

+ Am Econ R 12:500 S '22 550w

Booklist 18:349 J1 '22

"Mr. Meeker is the economist to the stock exchange, and has made an extensive study of his subject."

Daily News Rec p10 Je 20 '22 610w

Nation 115:444 O 25 '22 40w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:271 Je '22

St Louis 20:121 Je '22

MEIGS, CORNELIA. Helga and the white peacock. 81p il $1 Macmillan

$12

22-18289

A fairy play written for children and acted very successfully at the Poughkeepsie community theater, with the permission of the author. Helga, a little girl of fourteen, has been stolen by the trolls and in her place has been left a weak little troll baby. Helga is employed all day by the trolls in a dark hut surrounded by spells and guarded by the cruel old Spider Woman. But Olaf, Helga's twin brother determines to rescue his sister, and thru many hardships led on by the grey goose and the peacock, he finally succeeds. Suggestions for staging the play are given in an appendix.

"Good plot, artistically and practically worked out."

+ Booklist 19:92 D '22

"Fanciful and delightful, and the moral it points is one that any child can understand."

+ Cath World 116:429 D '22 30w

Cleveland p84 N '22

"A pure delight to read. It should be a delight to act, because it is conceived with bright delicacy and woven around characters that can be represented easily and naturally by young children."

+ Lit R p213 N 11 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:37 Ja '23

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. In defense of women. (Free lance books) new ed 210p $2 Knopf

396 Woman—Social and moral questions

22-5476

The first edition of this book was published in 1918. It is now reissued in the Free lance series with a completely revised and greatly extended text and the addition of a long introduction. Contents: The feminine mind; The war between the sexes; Marriage; Woman suffrage; The new age.

"He raises certain issues which some women,—not many, however, in this Freudian age—never realized existed for their sex; and he is intellectually far more honest, and less nasty-minded in dealing with them than any writer of his time. His chapter on 'The New Age' is less brilliant but more informing than any of the other chapters of the book. What he says may appear infamous to the sentimental minded, but intellectually it is sound wisdom." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 29 '22 500w

"The best thing that the reviewer can say is to those who like Mencken, this is the sort of thing that they like; and to others, in the name of the Prophet: Lay off!" G. W. J. Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 Je 11 '22 1050w

"Mr. Mencken has written a lively, impudent, diverting essay; let him who has the wit to enjoy it never seek to demolish it by clumsily insisting that it is totally and monstrously untrue." Freda Kirchwey

+ Nation 114:690 Je 7 '22 1000w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:150 Ap '22

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Prejudices; third series. 328p $2.50 Knopf

$14

22-19628

In his third series of prejudices Mr Mencken turns his challenging criticism on America and American ideas, on capitalism, the novel, the drama, criticism, the art of poetry, the "forward-looker," education, and the science of economics. One chapter is a memory of James Huneker, and another is given to sketches of five men chosen at random—Abraham Lincoln, Paul Elmer More, Madison Cawein, Frank Harris and Havelock Ellis.

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS—Continued

Booklist 19:76 D '22

Bookm 56:488 D '22 200w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 13 '23 1200w

"What every salient literary critic has had, and what Mr. Mencken does not have, is a certain direct and disciplined ardour in his feeling for literature, a certain aristocratic avoidance of mere ill-nature. Mr. Lippmann was right when he pointed out that Mr. Mencken could never praise anybody without synchronously berating somebody else. It goes even deeper than that; it goes down to a temperamental incapacity for cool and disinterested judgment, to a temperamental distrust of composure, sobriety, and poise. . . . What he really is, is a social critic, and besides that, a humorist of a very high order. All that is vulgar and cheap and craven in American life has had its due from him; and is certainly less secure than it would have been without him." Newton Arvin

— + Freeman 6:381 D 27 '22 1300w

"It is amusing, often vigorous, for a page or two, but the custom of hitting every head in sight can not be kept up year after year. Mr. Mencken is over forty; he cannot fight off the natural kindness which creeps over the most determined scoffer at that age, no matter how many cups of hot blood he quaffs or how often he refreshes himself with wormwood and gall."

— + Ind 109:248 O 28 '22 80w

"There isn't a dull page nor is there a particularly striking one. Nevertheless, there is enough to hold his admirers to their allegiance." Leonard Bacon

— + Lit R p261 D 2 '22 1000w

"On every page he stirs you up, irritates you by some good or bad thinking to do some good or bad thinking for yourself. A delightfully capricious fellow! At his worst, downright stupid, like the rest of us. At his best, as the rest of us would wish to be, a shrewd thinker, in command of sound, energetic English prose, as solid as old oak; it vibrates but does not break when he dances on it." J. M.

— + Nation 115:441 O 25 '22 1250w

"In general, Mr. Mencken's prose sounds like large stones being thrown into a dump-cart. He has more gusto than humor, more weight than edge, more appetite than taste, and a great deal more ink than intellect. He records truly and vividly what he sees in the mirror he has chosen to hold up to the world, but what a mirror!" Robert Littell

— + New Repub 33:sup9 N 29 '22 1500w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

N Y Times p7 D 31 '22 1500w

MENZIES, AMY CHARLOTTE (BEWICKE) (MRS STUART MENZIES) (WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE, pseud.). Recollections and reflections. 288p $4 Doran

920

(Eng ed 21-21306)

Gossipy and rambling and sometimes of a startlingly intimate nature are these recollections and reflections. The former take in reminiscences of many public personages from the days of Queen Victoria to the present, and the latter touch human life from every angle, the author's own experiences, social and private life serving as background.

"Throughout, her 'recollections' confess a woman of sympathy, as well as of keen insight and an abiding grace of humor, the reading of whose book is like sitting in a comfortable chair, by an open fire, listening to the rambling conversation—piquant but not unkindly—of some agreeable woman of the world." F. B.

— + Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '22 460w

"After the genuine 'revelations' of well-known personages who have scorned the modesty of a pseudonym this chatter will disappoint those who may be misled by the descriptive wrapper. The outlook is commonplace and the reflections and anecdotes are those of a better class ladies' maid."

— Lit R p612 Mr 18 '22 270w

MERREL, CONCORDIA. Love—and Diana. 318p $1.75 Seltzer [7s 6d Selwyn & B.] 22-9572

Diana Fawcett, brought up in the lap of luxury, the spoilt darling of the house, believing real love a myth, engages herself to Lord Peregrine. Jim Landor saves Diana one day from drowning. She is deeply attracted by this man of humble parentage and decides to break her engagement with Lord Peregrine. This disgusts Landor, who thinks Diana a heartless flirt, and their friendship is decidedly cooled. Mr Fawcett is anxious about the welfare of a mine in South Africa, so he asks Landor if he will go out with him to see how matters stand. Landor decides to go and Diana accompanies them. Landor finds the mine in the hands of rogues who are trying to cheat Fawcett out of the gold it yields. Diana and Landor renew their friendship and later the fashionable, capricious Diana has a "scrubby little wedding" in the wilds of South Africa.

Boston Transcript p5 My 27 '22 190w

"Its 'passion' is of the old-fashioned melodrama, and its long, amazing dialogues, with their utter impossibility as human talk, might have been modelled upon the Dell standard. It is smoothly enough told, for its audience."

— + Lit R p707 Je 3 '22 300w

"All through the story Miss Merrel manages to give the reader the sensation of watching a stirring motion-picture show. Furnishes a good entertainment, though it can hardly be called good literature."

— + N Y Times p13 My 28 '22 350w

"Rather commonplace love story."

— Spec 127:791 D 10 '21 40w

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p790 D 1 '21 120w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. American party system: an introduction to the study of political parties in the United States. 439p $3 Macmillan

329 United States—Politics and government. Political parties 22-10249

"Designed as a textbook it will be of interest to anyone who desires an introduction to the study of the American party system. Discusses party composition, party organization, the spoils system, the party boss, principles and policies, selection of official personnel, nominating systems, elections and election machinery."—Booklist

"Professor Merriam's book is the usual account of party organization and activity in the United States, but told extremely well and with an unusually firm grip on the realities of our form of government. The foot-notes are excellent guides for further reading." C. R. L.

— + Am Hist R 28:370 Ja '23 550w

"Contains an excellent summary of the elementary facts of the American party system. The volume is compact with information, not 'as lively as fiction,' but interesting and valuable to the inquiring student and the alert citizen. It would be hard to think of an essential feature of our politics and parties on which information may not be found in this volume, all of it put forward in logical order and clarity of expression." J. A. Woodburn

— + Am Pol Sci R 16:702 N '22 850w

"An admirable analysis, clear and fair-minded."

— + Booklist 19:8 O '22

"An admirable introduction to the study of this system. He is temperate, forceful, honest. It will be a pity if so admirable and comprehensive a work should be confined to use as a textbook. It should be of interest to every man who follows public affairs with intelligence and seriousness."

— + Boston Transcript p6 Jl 1 '22 320w

"He begins rather awkwardly by looking closely at the parties in order to see of what elements they are composed. This has the effect of plunging the reader among the trees before he has had a chance to obtain a view of the forest. Nor is this effect relieved by Professor Merriam's tendency to fall into the jargon of sociology and to call for such things as investigation into 'the psycho-biological qualities of leaders.'" R. J. Davis

Lit R p853 Ag 5 '22 660w

"It is a thoroughly sophisticated book. As I read the book I kept wondering why Mr. Merriam never allowed himself a touch of irony. He keeps a perfectly straight face from beginning to end, yet his facts as to how parties are constructed and how politicians are financed and how principles are selected seemed in themselves ironical. I wondered why this prosaic volume with its perfectly traditional textbook binding and manner should seem so pungent and so amusing. Partly this was due, I suppose, to the fact that Mr. Merriam's conformity to the textbook tradition in style, arrangement and format gave to his departure from the substance of the textbooks the pleasure of the unexpected. And partly it was due, I imagine, to the relief which we experience, when after wandering in a fog, we make a sharp turn to the right and see again the sharp outlines of actual things." Walter Lippmann

New Repub 32:sup17 O 25 '22 860w

Pratt p10 winter '23

R of Rs 66:448 O '22 90w

"Not since Ostrogorski mirrored the political scene in America have the dry bones of party organization and discipline been so infused with the pulsing life of reality."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 Ag 23 '22 880w

MERRICK, LEONARD. To tell you the truth. 311p $1.90 Dutton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-22701

Various notes are struck in these fourteen short stories—humor, farce, irony, pathos, but never sentimentality. Paris is the scene of eleven of the stories, England of the other three. Mademoiselle ma mère is the tale of a poor but talented music teacher who under great provocation commits a crime, and whose atonement is finally crowned with happiness. A portrait of a coward tells of a young widow who counterfeited grief over the death of an unloved, middle-aged husband until she became unable to give up her pretense and take the happiness which offered itself. In the year of Our Lord 1918 is an ironic trifle which takes the form of a letter from a crippled soldier to a former love. Contents: Mademoiselle ma mère; Aribaud's two wives; That villain her father; The statue; The celebrity at home; Picq plays the hero; A flat to spare; A portrait of a coward; The boom; Pilar naranjo; The girl who was tired of love; In the year of Our Lord 1918; A pot of pansies; Floromond and Frisonnette.

"They are, as a rule, as light and airy as gossip, and there is not one of them that is not pleasantly diverting. They represent Mr. Merrick in his most characteristic mood and his most alluring manner." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 2 '22 1050w

"Twice in the book Mr. Merrick seems to us to have achieved a really unusual success; once in a tale of bravery, and immediately after it in a contrasting study of cowardice. There are several poor or mediocre titles in the collection." Allan Nevins

+ Lit R p379 Ja 13 '23 480w

"Varied, whimsical, now grave, now gay, always interesting, and always exquisitely written, are the short stories gathered together in this new book." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p3 N 26 '22 1100w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p22 Ja 14 '23 680w

Spec 129:1014 D 30 '22 40w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p630 O 5 '22 380w

MERWIN, SAMUEL. Goldie Green. 341p $2 Bobbs

22-6605

"When we first meet Goldie Green she is a slangy, self-possessed, sharp-tongued girl of 19, ticket seller at the Parthenon, a moving-picture theatre. . . She dressed as scantily as possible, plucked her eyebrows into a thin line, arranged her hair in immense puffs over her ears, rouged her cheeks and lips and was entirely capable of dealing effectively with any man. . . The suburb of Chicago, where Goldie lived with her silly, extravagant, self-pitying mother, her conscientious, pin-brained elder brother, her two younger sisters and brother, and the patient, silent, plodding father, from whose weary and inadequate shoulders she was presently to remove the crushing weight of the insatiable family is clearly pictured. . . Goldie represents an entire class, the crude, aggressive, pushing class, too profoundly ignorant to be even dimly aware of its ignorance, yet vivid, quick to see opportunity, determined to 'get ahead' and with driving power enough to carry out its determination. . . Goldie rose, indomitable, to cope courageously and triumphantly with every crisis, most resolute and most determined when things seemed most difficult."—N Y Times

Booklist 18:332 Je '22

"The exasperating part of it is that Mr. Merwin has such a lot of surplus energy, such a good stock of decent human nature running riot in his volumes, that he could do something first class with them if he would. At least he can do better than this comic-section flapper stuff."

— Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '22 330w

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"He has written not only a good story, but a story that will bear thinking about, and has drawn an original portrait of a type that has sprung up almost over night."

+ Lit D p57 Je 10 '22 960w

"Another of the glorified-business type of fiction. In large measure it is just this type of book, trivial and smart, with a girl, in deference to the flapper movement in literature, in place of the usual bright young man. In small and surprising measure it is the antithesis of this type. Mr. Merwin shows himself aware of the falseness of the formula he knows so well how to use, and, with a sort of savage delight, denounces in a flash of sincerity the ideals he upholds on the next page. The story is workmanlike as to plot and bright as to patter." Marian O'Connor

+ Lit R p635 My 6 '22 820w

"Goldie represents a type; but she has her individual virtues of generosity, affection, a sense of responsibility, a kind of clean hardness. She is herself so well done, and so often interesting, that we can only wish the story whose machinery is used to place her before us were more convincing and less conventional." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 16 '22 720w

Spring'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

MESICK, JANE LOUISE. English traveller in America, 1785-1835. (Studies in English and comparative literature) 370p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

917.3 United States—Description and travel. United States—Social life and customs

22-16243

The English attitude toward America during the fifty-year period after the Revolutionary war is shown in this study of conditions here as seen thru the eyes of a succession of English travellers. After analyzing the motives which brought the travellers here, the book describes the conditions of travel which they met, the manners and customs which they most frequently remarked upon, and their views on slavery, the state of industry, religion, education and literature. A chapter is given to some of the most famous controversies which their criticisms aroused. There is a bibliography of English travels in America, and an index.

MESICK, JANE LOUISE—Continued

"The style is clear and pleasant and the opinions of the visitors are stated with fairness and are plainly compared with each other. The chief criticism to be made upon the book is that the author accepts the statement of the traveler in several cases as accurate, without further confirmation. . . The summarizing of the impressions of the English travellers is useful to every student of American history and the book is also one which may well be recommended for pleasant reading." B. C. Steiner

+ Am Hist R 28:369 Ja '23 420w

"An excellent monograph."

+ Nation 115:419 O 18 '22 40w

"An exceptionally thorough piece of work in a novel field."

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 21 '23 600w

METTERNICH-WINNEBURG, PAULINE CLEMENTINE MARIE WALBURGA (SANDOR VON SZLAVNICZA) fürstin von. Days that are no more; some reminiscences. 192p li $5 Dutton [10s 6d E. Nash & G.]

B or 92 Courts and courtiers

(Eng ed 22-9410)

In a long preface to this volume, Edward Legge sketches the court of the Second empire and the rôle the Princess Pauline Metternich played in it as the closest friend of the Empress Eugénie. He also describes the many eccentricities of the unconventional princess. In the reminiscences she gives her personal recollections of her famous grandfather, the Chancellor Prince Metternich, of her father, Count Moritz Sandor, known to fame for his strength and prowess with horses as "The Sandor", and of other famous people she has known. Contents: Grandpapa; "The Sandor"; Our first diplomatic post; Richard Wagner (1859-61); Franz Liszt; Maître Lachaud; Count Taaffe; Daniel Dunglas Home, the spiritualist.

Bookm 55:537 Jl '22 160w

Boston Transcript p6 My 31 '22 500w

Cleveland p95 D '22

"She has given us a series of sketches of interesting people, as unpremeditated and fascinating as one can find." A. W. Vernon

+ New Repub 32:78 S 13 '22 780w

N Y Times p20 My 21 '22 110w

"Her gossip about great events is not of that high order that sometimes—notably in France—has attained to genius. But the circumstances of her life afforded her extraordinary opportunities for observation, of which she has by no means failed to take advantage." Esther Murphy

+ N Y Tribune p4 Je 25 '22 1100w

"The book is not important historically or politically, but it has some lively bits of reminiscence."

Outlook 131:499 Jl 19 '22 130w

Pratt p33 autumn '22

St Louis 20:224 S '22

Sat R 132:693 D 17 '21 340w

"Set out in formal chapters her reminiscences, at least those contained in this first volume, are not particularly distinguished. Their characteristic, in fact, is the last that would have been expected in any work of hers—it is naïveté. It is less by reading her sentences than by reading between them things of which she seems but slightly conscious that we get so diverting a picture of the Vienna of her youth, the Vienna of the forties."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p693 O 27 '21 1150w

MEYNELL, ALICE CHRISTIANA (THOMPSON) (MRS WILFRID MEYNELL). Second person singular, and other essays. 140p $2.70 Oxford [6s Milford]

824

22-8858

"At the instance of the Oxford University Press Mrs. Meynell consented that this selection be made from such of her literary essays as have not hitherto appeared in book form; for the actual selection she is not herself responsible. The studies chosen differ from one another in length, though none is long, and in depth, though none is shallow. These essays are attempts to affix their proper value to various, generally neglected works of art. For the most part the soul of this critic adventures among the petits maitres, not because of incapacity to appraise greater things but with the desire, like Lamb's, to do justice to hidden merit."—Nation

"This little book, which has come from the press so quietly in a year of much literary sarcasm and sensationalism, will be one of that very little flock which every lover of the best will want to lay hold upon and keep. It is, to use the old and perfect phrase: 'Infinite riches in a little room.'"

+ Cath World 115:250 My '22 310w
Cleveland p70 S '22

"These essays are the essence of criticism astringently strained from a rarified intelligence. They move sedately, leaning upon the arm of a decorous style. They are the kind of writing one rarely finds in America, faint fragrance exhaling as from a cedar chest of fine garments delicately laid away."

+ Lit R p298 D 9 '22 380w

"There is no blare of denunciation or of praise. There is no cant about 'critical theory.' But the thinking is compact, the expression confidently expert, the writing (as Meredith said long ago of another volume of her essays) 'lucid in its depths.' The voice is small and softly-modulated, but it speaks with authority to those who, turning from the babble and the roar, pause to listen." S: C. Chew

+ Nation 113:762 D 28 '21 480w

"Never has Mrs. Meynell written better than in some of these essays. Her pure style has solidity, something of the beauty of sculpture; the perfection she achieves has been hewn out of stubborn material."

+ Nation and Ath 30:658 Ja 28 '22 700w

N Y Times p24 Ja 29 '22 220w

"Mrs. Meynell remains a shepherdess of sheep. In the new volume of her essays she is seen walking upon the uplands of language, shepherding her charges into her fastidious fold, carefully excluding those beasts whose lineage is not pure, whose features, like Leigh Hunt's, are snubbed and flattened by a too intimate commerce with the herds of the foothills and the fat, unparticular plains. Her devotion to her shepherdry is not attended by the meek piping associated with that art. She utters, in sonorous and immaculate language, condemnation of her rejected and praises of her elect."

— Sat R 133:95 Ja 28 '22 550w

"The delicacy and charm which we always associate with Mrs. Meynell's pen are not lacking in this new volume of essays."

+ Spec 128:22 Ja 7 '22 290w

"To enjoy Mrs. Meynell's writing to the full is one of the rewards of scholarship. For she presupposes a knowledge among her readers not only of the main thoroughfares of literature, but of the bypaths and an appreciation of nature which, if not as subtle as her own, is at least minutely curious and finely focussed. Her style is clear, but it is not simple, candid, but complex. She is erudite without a tinge of conceit, but with authority, a purist but not a pedant. If we lose in these essays an illusion of spontaneity, we gain a more subtle and searching criticism of life and an even higher sense of values."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p38 Ja 19 '22 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 18:181 Jl '22

MIDDLETON, ARTHUR SARSFIELD. See Rohmer, S., pseud.

MIKKELSEN, EJNAR. Frozen justice: tr. from the Danish by A. G. Jayne. 230p $1.75 Knopf [7s 6d Gyldeendal]

22-19485

"This opens with a picture of primitive life among the Eskimos north of the Behring Strait; of their winter want and dullness, of rejoicing and repletion when a seal or a whale is killed, and of orgies when the white man's whaling fleet arrives in summer from the south to barter civilized stores for their accumulations of whale-bone. Against this background is drawn the tragic little story of the chief Sakhawachiak and his woman Igluruk, whose simple existence is complicated by the intrusion of the subtler white man. Sakhawachiak is debauched by whisky, and brought down to servitude by the cunning of the white men. He is robbed of everything, including his woman; and in his long pursuit of Black Jack and Igluruk he is foiled at every turn by a treachery and skill which he cannot fathom."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:160 F '23

"A good yarn and contains enough atmosphere of the northern coasts of Alaska to make the book worth while for the pictures it creates, even if it told no story at all."

+ — Lit R p228 N 18 '22 220w

"The pictures of Eskimo life are fresh, vivid, and bold. It is not a pretty story, nor is any attempt made to soften its ferocity." Forrest Reid

+ — Nation and Ath 31:689 Ag 19 '22 120w

"Mr. Mikkelsen is an Arctic explorer and knows his world. His episodes are crammed with realistic detail. . . But the story and the characterization are not so successful." Edith Rickert

+ — New Repub 33:206 Ja 17 '23 380w

"One is tempted to think that the author has taken a story told him by the Eskimos and tried to give it a happy ending. Be that as it may, the chase alone is enough to make the book well worth reading. And the author's description of the coming of the white men to Nuwuk, bringing drunkenness and disease with them, is not calculated to enhance the reader's regard for the so-called blessings of civilization."

+ — N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 430w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 380w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 8 '22 130w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

MILIUKOV, PAVEL NIKOLAEVICH. Russia today and tomorrow. 392p $2.25 Macmillan 947 Russia—Politics and government. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917— 22-12843

The first eight chapters are professor Milukov's Lowell Institute lectures, 1921. He is interested, not in the surface change of governments, but in the larger aspect of the Russian revolution—the continuous process of revolutionary transformation which is going on in Russia. He explains the inevitability of the revolution, how the Bolsheviks got the upper hand, and their chief aim, which is world revolution; he describes the anti-Bolshevik forces and activities, and the famine of 1921 as a demonstration of Russia's exhaustion under Bolshevik rule. The issue which is now being fought out is not between Bolshevism and reaction, he says, but between Bolshevism and democracy. The last chapter is a summary of Russia's contribution in literature and art to the world's civilization.

"The English style is not equal to that of his former work. Nevertheless the book of Milukov will unquestionably retain its historical interest for a very long while." S. A. Korff

+ — Am Hist R 28:126 O '22 800w

"Out of his country's long chaos he has brought a calm sanity of perspective, and a cool balancing of the Bolshevik, Reactionary, and Liberalist elements which have seared their way into Russian history."

+ Bookm 56:101 S '22 110w

"A welcome volume to the many admirers of the author in this country."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 19 '22 380w

"M. Milukov's book betrays throughout the very quality that brought about the failure of himself and his associates in Russia, the unwillingness or inability to face reality. Politically, he has become a disembodied spirit; and his messages, in their vague and fugitive character, are reminiscent of the mystery-patter of the table-rapping mediums." Harold Kellock

— Freeman 6:355 D 20 '22 2200w

"A book so excellent that it can be considered epoch making in the literature on Russia." Alexander Nizaroff

+ Lit R p886 Ag 19 '22 700w

Nation 115:312 S 27 '22 40w

"In spite of his partisanship, he does not give the impression of being swayed by passion. He seems rather to have studied the situation carefully from all sides, reasoning from cause to effect and drawing the only possible conclusions from what he has observed."

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 6 '22 1100w

R of Rs 66:223 Ag '22 100w

Spec 129:1008 D 30 '22 1050w

"As foreign minister under the Kerensky government, he had a first-hand experience with contemporary politics. But for 20 years before 1917 he had been an active partisan of the progressive movement in his native country and had not only fought the battles of liberalism at home, but had tried to interpret the new spirit of Russia to the world through his writings and personal visits to this and other countries. No Russian is entitled to speak with greater authority than he."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Ag 11 '22 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p638 O 12 '22 900w

"It is one of the best presentations of the case of Russia as it stands to-day. I could not name a book in which a finer and fairer analysis of Bolshevism in Russia is to be found." M. Rostovtzeff

+ Yale R n s 12:425 Ja '23 1600w

MILLER, HUGH CRICHTON. New psychology and the teacher. 225p $1.60 Seltzer [6s Jarrolds]

150 Psychology, Educational. Psychoanalysis 22-23341

The object of the book is to present the main tenets of analytical psychology in such a way as to enable teachers and parents, thru a better understanding of their own mentality, to give the child the spiritual freedom required for his normal adjustment to reality, authority and the herd, and in his sex education. The author attempts to show that, altho self-realization is the preventive of neurosis, it cannot be taught but can only be attained thru achievement. Attention is called in the text to the effect of authority on the child's suggestibility; to his tendency to correct reality by phantasy; to the emotional development of the boy and the girl. Successive chapters are devoted to such psycho-analytic discoveries as the unconscious motive; the mental mechanisms: repression and suppression, complex formation, sublimation etc.; dream symbolism; the herd instinct.

"There is much of dreams and their interpretation; a warning as well for him who is ever willing to interpret them. Dr. Miller sets less store by Drs. Freud and Jung with their dream symbolisms and deductions. He treats within confines a subject popularly, too often made uncomfortable, unwholesomely popular by the aforesaid doctors and their attendant schools of writers."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ja 27 '23 200w

MILLER, HUGH CRICHTON—Continued

"Entirely wholesome and refreshing. It will do all readers good, and no reader any harm. It is quite elementary; but that is all the better, for it admits the student through ways that are not befuddled. A book that is as engaging and delightful as it is sound and serious. A better introduction to the new psychology could scarcely be found, and teachers, parents and general readers alike will enjoy it." G: Sampson

+ Nation and Ath 32:19 O 7 '22 1450w

"The matter is rather thin, and, if the intelligence of the audience is to be judged by the illustrative diagrams, presented to the very simple-minded. Yet the lectures are interesting enough to awaken some curious reflections."

— + Sat R 133:267 F 25 '22 260w

Spec 128:181 F 11 '22 200w

"The book is to be strongly recommended to parents. It is clear, healthy and full of valuable information on the subject of child-psychology, which cannot fail to be of great practical use."

+ Spec 130:64 Ja 13 '23 120w

MILLER, KENNETH DEXTER. Czecho-Slovaks in America. 192p $1 Doran

325.7 Czechoslovaks in the United States
22-14730

The book is one of the New American series of racial studies published under the auspices of the Interchurch world movement, with an introduction by Charles Hatch Sears. The author has lived in Czechoslovakia, with special opportunities for knowing the people, and has had direct experience with Czechoslovaks in America in his connection with the Presbyterian board of home missions. After giving the European and historical background of the two peoples, now merged into one, and pointing out their racial differences, the book deals with the immigrant in America, his economic and social, and especially his religious condition, with the problem he presents and recommendations for his future. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Park

Am J Soc 28:485 Ja '23 90w

Booklist 19:108 Ja '23

"For the purposes of the lay student the little handbook represents a brief but zealous survey, with only a shade of condescension toward other Americanizing agencies outside the church."

+ Bookm 56:644 Ja '23 50w

"The book is a valuable source of information for all those dealing with this group of immigrants. Its text-book form with new topics indicated by heavy type is convenient for the special student, but makes it less attractive for the general reader." I. M. C.

+ Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser p3
O 28 '22 170w

J Religion 2:660 N '22 30w

Survey 48:413 Je 15 '22 90w

MILLS, ENOS ABIJAH. Watched by wild animals. 243p il $2.50 Doubleday

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior
22-4371

In these stories of adventures in the open, the author shows us that while we are watching animals we are also watched by them and that wild animals show great curiosity in a human intruder. His keen observations of the habits of such animals as the mountain-goat and sheep, beaver, antelope, skunk, prairie-dog and grizzly bear are those of a painstaking observer. Partial contents: The persistent beaver; The black bear—comedian; On wild life trails; The wary wolf; Dog-town diggings.

Booklist 18:223 Ap '22

"With subjects like these Mr. Mills's name alone is a sufficiently happy augury of the truth as well as of the 'adventure' of the experiences he records, and of the delightfully friendly and anecdotal style of their narration. There is one chapter in particular, 'On Wild Life Trails,' unsurpassed of its kind, in the unforgettable glimpses it gives of the animal life to be 'met up with unexpectedly.'"

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 20 '22 260w
Cleveland p64 Ag '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:146 F 11 '22 210w

"It was well to write a book of this kind and Mr. Mills was the very man to write it. His short, almost staccato, sentences, many of them, however, conveying much of the real beauty of nature in her best moods, seemingly are often transliterations of his field notes. But to criticise his literary style were like straining at gnats and altogether missing the camel." S: Scoville

+ Lit R p720 Je 10 '22 780w

New Statesman 20:supxvi D 2 '22 20w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:215 My '22

Pratt p16 autumn '22

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 27 '22 160w

Wis Lib Bul 18:180 Jl '22

MILLS, JOHN. Letters of a radio-engineer to his son. 265p il $2 Harcourt

654.6 Radio telephone 22-17996

A practising radio-engineer explains as simply as possible in a series of letters to a real boy the building and operation of his own radio set and the operation of the large commercial sets to which he may listen. The letters are written as the instructor would talk and are illustrated with little sketches drawn as he goes along. One letter tells how to experiment with radio apparatus.

"The author has the gift of making theory as interesting as the application; hence he manages to do considerably more than satisfy superficial curiosity in an invention."

+ Bookm 56:517 D '22 110w

"The book has three merits which deserve particular mention. First, the style of the writing is fitted to the maturity of the intended reader. From the choice of similes and the vocabulary throughout, it is evident that the author knows boys. A second merit consists in the manner in which the reader is led to fundamental explanations. The book is not a rule-of-thumb manual for setting up a radio outfit. Rather, it carries the reader through a series of simple scientific explanations in a manner which is very satisfying from an educational standpoint. The third deserving element consists of a series of 136 carefully drawn figures which make the text material easier to follow."

+ El School J 23:234 N '22 290w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:49 O '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:21 Ja '23

Pratt p18 winter '23

MILLS, JOHN. Within the atom. 215p il $2 Van Nostrand

530.1 Matter. Electrons. Quantum theory
21-18265

"This is a scientific book bearing the subtitle 'A Popular View of Electrons and Quanta,' written by a physicist both competent and able, and it sets forth the attitude of many physicists about the structure of the atom."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p5 O 1 '21 550w

"Mr. Mills has undertaken a difficult task and has written a book that is colloquial and easy to read by the real amateur of science. The work contains a vast amount of information and it is well worth reading and having convenient in the library." Ellwood Hendrick

+ Lit R p318 D 31 '21 1400w

"Mr. Mills, who has quite a competent knowledge of his subject, sets out to initiate those who have no knowledge of physics and chemistry (and apparently no intention of acquiring it) into the mysteries of modern atomic theory. Of course the task is utterly impossible. However, from the sale of similar works we imagine that there are some who will appreciate the mixed fare set before them."

— + Nature 110:246 Ag 19 '22 220w

"He who wants to become acquainted with the work that has revolutionized physics and chemistry can do no better than read this volume. However, a word of warning is necessary. The book is not easy reading; the very nature of the subject makes simple treatment well-nigh impossible; but, if he be patient and persistent, the layman can master the book and become much the wiser for it." B: Harrow

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 15 '22 1850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:340 Jl '22

"A very interesting and well-informed account of the latest theories as to the nature of matter and electricity. The book is not exactly easy reading, but it assumes no previous knowledge of electricity, mechanics or chemistry, and avoids any mathematical demonstrations. Any reader of good education and average intelligence should be able to understand the theories which are here set forward, and to obtain some idea of the manner in which these researches into the infinitely little have been carried out."

+ Sat R 134:289 Ag 19 '22 600w

"The scientific facts are sound, the arrangement is good, and the language clear and readable."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 12 '22 80w

MILLS, JOHN SAXON. Genoa conference. 436p il $8 Dutton [24s Hutchinson]

341.1 Genoa conference, 1922

(Eng ed 22-17765

The Genoa conference had its origin in the sessions of the Supreme council at Cannes in January, 1922, where it was decided to summon an economic and financial conference to which all the powers of Europe, including Germany and Russia, should be invited to send representatives and to meet not as conquerors and conquered but on equal terms. The objects of this conference, which met in April 1922, were to consider the resumption of international trade thruout Europe, the provision of substantial credits for the weaker countries and the cooperation of all nations in the restoration of normal prosperity. In his record of the proceedings of the conference, the author speaks for the British delegation and especially for Mr Lloyd George's part in the gathering.

Booklist 19:109 Ja '23

"It was impossible perhaps to expect that a book written so soon after the events described should display qualities of real historical perspective, but it is fair to demand that the author provide more of synthesis in his account of the proceedings." C: Seymour

— Bookm 56:634 Ja '23 450w

"The book is valuable; it is a history of Genoa so far as one not a member of the little circle of men who actually conducted the negotiations can write the history of the conference, and its documents are authentic and apparently accurate." F. L. B.

Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '22 1600w

Reviewed by W. P. Cresson

Lit R p365 Ja 6 '23 720w

"Mr. Mills's account is trustworthy, so far as it goes, and carefully written."

+ Spec 129:249 Ag 19 '22 230w

"So rapt is Mr. Mills with the beauty of his vision of British Liberalism contra mundum and of its champion that he can regard light-heartedly whatever disagreeable incidents occurred. To have given us a story of the Genoa Conference which is practically a song of thanks and praise is no mean achievement."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 17 '22 750w

MILLS, JOHN SAXON. Sir Edward Cook; a biography. 304p $6 Dutton [16s Constable]

B or 92 Cook, Sir Edward Tyas

(Eng ed 22-1980)

Sir Edward Cook, 1857-1919, was distinguished in English journalism and as editor and biographer of Ruskin. Beginning his journalistic career as a contributor to the Pall Mall Gazette, he later became its editor and went on from its editorship to that of the Westminster Gazette and the Daily News, where he remained till 1901. From that time until his death, he wrote leaders for various newspapers and devoted himself to more distinctly literary work. During the war he shared in the direction of the press censorship bureau. This appreciative biography is written by an editorial associate of Cook's on the Daily News.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p6 S 9 '22 2050w

"A biography of permanent value. There is in it perhaps too little given of the private, intimate side of Cook's personality, but his professional life and the character of his talents—which constitute the greater part of a man who devotes himself to journalism—are unfolded with meticulous care in an expository style at once facile and gracefully clear."

+ Lit R p154 O 28 '22 380w

"An excellent piece of biographical writing, of which the only real fault is that, in conformity with Sir Edward Cook's own uncompromising standards for biography, it treats its subject with rather too much reserve and with rather too strict a regard for the principle of unity."

+ — No Am 216:858 D '22 800w

MILLS, WILLIAM HASLAM. Manchester Guardian; a century of history; with a special introd. for the American edition by Charles Prestwich Scott. 147p il $2.50 Holt [6s Chatto & W.]

072 Manchester Guardian. Newspapers

(Eng ed 22-5562)

This great Liberal newspaper which has made itself better known beyond the bounds of Great Britain than any other English newspaper, with the possible exception of the Times, has thru its long history kept its conscience, its sensitiveness to high ideals and its devotion to great causes and leaders. It has repeatedly suffered temporary loss for the courage of its ideals, the practice of "giving up the Guardian" having been at various times a highly patriotic exercise among some Englishmen, but thruout its long career the paper has been respected even by its opponents. The editorship of Charles Prestwich Scott, since 1872, is one of the "illustrious things in journalism."

Booklist 19:5 O '22

Cleveland p38 My '22

"Told succinctly and interestingly. American journalists may learn from it the inspiring lesson that, in the case at least of the high-minded Englishmen who founded and have conducted the 'Guardian,' exalted ideals and consistent devotion to them have resulted in a steadily widening success for their newspaper."

+ Outlook 131:500 Jl 19 '22 100w

MILN, LOUISE (JORDAN) (MRS GEORGE CRICHTON MILN). Green goddess. 330p $1.90 Stokes

22-17390

The story of this novel is based upon the melodrama of the same name. "Major Crespin is an English officer stationed in India. When the war comes he longs to see active service at the front, but is obliged to remain where he is. Chafing at his enforced inaction, he begins to drink heavily. His wife, Lucilla, endures his drunkenness and his infidelities in silence, finding consolation in the love of her children and the friendship of Dr. Traherne. The latter loves Lucilla, but is too honorable to attempt to win her away from his friend, the Major. An airplane accident forces these three to make a landing in the courtyard of the temple of the Green Goddess and places them in the power of the Rajah of Rukh, an Oriental despot. His people demand that these visitors be sacrificed to the Green Goddess. The Rajah offers to spare Lucilla's life on the condition that she shall enter his harem. Major Crespin

MILN, LOUISE—Continued
atones for his past misdeeds by gallantly sacrificing his life to save the other two." (N Y Times)

"Mrs. Miln is an exceedingly good story teller, even though we do place her understanding of the East and her ability to paint it for us above all her other characteristics. The excitement of the story grows very intense, as in the play, and the ending is as thrilling as the most romantic reader could desire. Very few novelized plays appeal to us, but Mrs. Miln has done her work well, and we forget entirely that she did not originate the story." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '22 700w

"Mrs Miln's talents and George Arliss' are not the same, as is made lamentably clear by this book."

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 D 17 '22 250w

"We had thought that the time was passed when even the most naive of readers could take this type of book in all seriousness, but evidently we were mistaken. Or perhaps Mrs Miln knows well that if she but set her traps skillfully enough even the wariest of poor fish can be caught. But still we feel in duty bound to thank the author for giving us a very entertaining, if unconsciously amusing, afternoon's reading."

— + Lit R p73 S 30 '22 160w

"Louise Jordan Miln has succeeded admirably with 'The Green Goddess.' There is a certain amount of padding, of course, but it is very skillfully done, and there is not much more of it than is necessary when we consider that the novelist must tell in words what the dramatist has so many other ways of expressing."

+ N Y Times p27 S 24 '22 350w

"An extremely efficient specimen of the machine-made, assembled thriller." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p8 S 24 '22 240w

Spring'd Republican p7a D 17 '22 130w

"Fairly good reading, but falls short of the interest of the play because the character and personality of the rajah are less impressive in the book."

— + Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Mr Pim. 315p $1.75 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-7756

"In the story the author retells his comedy, 'Mr. Pim passes by,' in novel form. With delicious humor the chief characters of the play are elaborated into types. The reader is admitted to an inside view of George Marden's struggle between a typical Englishman's inordinate respect for law and conventional morality and his natural human impulses. The various psychic phases that lead to his wife Olivia's inspired diplomacy are also revealed, showing her as the superior woman in whom affection, worldly wisdom and humor are combined."

Booklist 18:332 Je '22

Cleveland p34 My '22

N Y Times p16 Ap 30 '22 860w

Wis Lib Bul 18:219 O '22

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Once on a time. 358p il $2 Putnam

22-18784

"Mr. Milne has approached his task of chronicling the deeds and misdeeds of the aristocracy and the proletariat of the two neighboring kingdoms of Barodia and Euralia, during their famous war, with the scientific yet twinkling eye of the merry historian. . . The great war between Barodia and Euralia is caused by a morning flight by the King of Barodia in his seven-league boots over the neighboring kingdom. He has the bad taste to sail over the ramparts of the castle where the King of Euralia and his daughter, Hyacinth, are at breakfast. Naturally, they are annoyed by this unceremonious flight and several stiff notes are exchanged between the two monarchs. Then comes war—a rollicking war in which magic sword clashes impotently against magic sword and each army sits up nights repeating spells backward and forward."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 19:87 D '22

Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '22 400w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p70 D '22 30w

Lit R p402 Ja 20 '23 250w

"A fairy tale for grown-ups. It might be called a burlesque fairy tale, did not that expression carry a suggestion of slapstick methods which are entirely foreign to Mr. Milne. His humor is delicate and whimsical, reminiscent of Barrie at his best. You really must read the book. You will never regret it."

+ N Y Times p23 N 5 '22 480w

"In his delightful narration fairyland appears in a new and sparkling splendor. Realistic treatment seems to add to its radiance. Not only for telling the gay truth about Fairyland is Mr. Milne to be praised. In 'Once on a Time' he has given us a whimsical tale behind which no stern purpose lurks. The author wrote his book to amuse and to entertain, and it does both in charming fashion. Read it, you people of age and dignity, but don't let your children carry it off if you cherish your ease and comfort." H. I. Young

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 5 '22 950w

Spring'd Republican p7a F 4 '23 360w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Red House mystery. 277p $2 Dutton [6s Methuen]

22-7879

Mark Ablett, the host of a party at the Red House, suddenly disappears, and a supposed wastrel brother from Australia is found dead in the library. The ferreting out of the mystery by a chance caller in a true Sherlock Holmes style, the discovery of the secret passage and the final letter from Mark's cousin, confidant and secretary, stating the facts, make a really exciting story.

Booklist 18:332 Je '22

"In all its details, the story is a masterpiece of its kind, second in logic and entertaining qualities only to one recent detective story, Eden Philpotts's 'The Grey Room.'" E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 8 '22 800w

"A very satisfactory detective or mystery story."

+ Daily News Rec p8 Ag 23 '22 360w

"This is the best detective story that this reviewer has read this year. In fact, it is not only the best detective story of the year, but it ranks high in the genre of mystery tales." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 N 12 '22 480w

"The narrative moves with smoothness and the dialogue with liveliness. We should say that Mr. Milne had as good a time writing his story as those for whom it is intended will have reading it."

+ Lit R p569 Ap 8 '22 190w

"An excellent detective story, which uses all the tricks of that trade and yet makes good fun of them. The style is charming, the manner civilized."

+ Nation 115:286 S 20 '22 40w

"Apart from this kernel of mystery we have a vastly entertaining travesty of the detective method with a running vein of humor, which spices without impairing the current of sensational thrills. An excellent performance."

+ Nation and Ath 131:415 Je 24 '22 190w

N Y Times p16 Ap 16 '22 300w

Outlook 131:428 Jl 5 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:322 Jl '22

Sat R 133:499 My 13 '22 550w

"We can guarantee that it is written with great lightness of touch and that the plot is exceedingly ingenious."

+ Spec 128:629 My 20 '22 60w

"He has found us a sleuth with a new gift—a gift, moreover, which we are at liberty to associate with that sub-conscious self which, at whatever violence to its natural bent, is asserting itself everywhere at the moment. . . Everything which he saw and heard impressed itself automatically on the film of his mind, often without his being conscious of it; later on, if necessary, he would examine the film; and would be off nose-down on the trail."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p259 Ap 20 '22 500w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Second plays. 2 266p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

822 (Eng ed 21-12889)

Of the five plays here brought together, the first, "Make-Believe," is a children's play; two, "The Camberley Triangle" and "The Stepmother" are one-act plays; and two, "Mr. Pim Passes By" and "The Romantic Age" have been successfully produced in America as well as in England.

Booklist 19:76 D '22

N Y Times p8 Ja 7 '23 950w

"All the plays in this new book have stood the test of performance. They are all delightful to read, because Mr. Milne knows how to write."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p321 My 19 '21 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:272 D '22

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Sunny side. 325p 2 $2 Dutton [6s Methuen]

827 22-20942

"A. A. Milne has collected under this title some of his earlier contributions to literature, first published in 'Punch' while he was an associate editor."—Bookm

"In reviewing a book of this sort it seems inescapable to note that some of the things in it are better than others. Any man writing a wheezy whimsy a week is bound to have his off weeks. It is high praise (and fair praise), therefore, to record that Milne maintains an unusually high level throughout his sketchy volume."

+ Bookm 56:643 Ja '23 150w

"Done with the delicacy and deftness that characterize all Milne's work. It is full of gaiety, of wit, and of irony that is sometimes ruthless. It mocks you, it taunts you, it goads you, and diverts you enormously. It is the cream of nine years' work done for Punch, the ablest humorous weekly in the world." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 28 '23 650w

"It has many of his best sketches in prose and verse, including his contributions to Punch during the War." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 107:264 D 10 '21 150w

"If you are in a mood to paddle along lazily and read what Mr. Milne said to Celia and what Celia said in reply to Mr. Milne, with nothing in particular resulting from the conversation, you will soon experience a gradual, warming glow of delight, which seems as impossible to obtain in this country as a view of Stonehenge at dusk." R. C. Benchley

+ Lit R p223 N 18 '22 180w

"The mocking humour of the whole collection, which is not without the 'subacid tinkle' that the parodist is prone to affect, makes it a fitting companion to the gentler genius of 'The Sunny Side.'"

+ Sat R 132:541 N 5 '21 150w

"A collection of extremely amiable articles from Punch. Though they do not provoke loud laughter, these sketches stimulate a reasonable number of smiles."

+ Spec 127:678 N 19 '21 130w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Three plays: The Dover road, The truth about Blaysds, The great Broxopp. 295p $2 Putnam

822 22-14297

All three plays are comedies. In "The Dover road" a very rich man has made it his business to intercept runaway lovers, keep them in his house for a week and by contriving to let them see each other at a disadvantage, cure them of their infatuation. In "The truth about Blaysds" a man who has lived to the ripe old age of ninety years as a great poet confesses on his deathbed, to the daughter who had given up her whole life to him in devotion, that his reputation is built on a lie and that the poems published under his name are the work of a friend dead long ago. The efforts of the family to give the lie to the truth constitute the comedy. In "The great Broxopp" a flamboyant gentleman, with a devoted, plucky wife, wins a fortune by alliterative advertising—"Broxopp's beans for babies." When the fortune is lost they are happy, in beginning all over again with "Chillingham's cheese for chickens."

Booklist 19:13 O '22

Cleveland p67 S '22

Freeman 6:526 F 7 '23 450w

"These three plays must be counted among the most important contributions to the English-speaking theatre in recent years. Mr. Milne's plays are distinguished by freshness of idea and method, a genuine naturalism with complete avoidance of the abnormal, characterization at once acute and consistent, moral cleanliness, an individual brand of genial and satiric humor, sound and unpretentious dialogue, and an underlying motive both definite and wholesome. The literary quality in them makes them almost as interesting in the library as upon the stage." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p900 Ag 26 '22 1250w

"On the whole Mr. Milne's plays are quite good, but I do not believe they are 'reading' so much as they are 'acting' plays. They need the fattening of a stage presentation." L. Kantor

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 3 '22 900w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:594 D '22

"For defects of structural strength he compensates by being lightly and gaily and well-manneredly entertaining. But he does not quite redeem his pieces from the marginal realm of the trivial."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 29 '22 450w

Wis Lib Bul 18:252 N '22

MINNEY, R. J. Maki. 279p $1.75 (7s 6d) Lane

"The story follows the fortunes, or rather, misfortunes, of a young Indian girl, Maki, the daughter of a rich Calcutta merchant, whose marriage is delayed until she is sixteen—an abnormal proceeding that keeps her from growing up after the fashion of most Indian women. She is kept absolutely isolated and almost incredibly ignorant of life outside the zenana. Then she marries a petty Rajah's son. But she is considered insane by his family, and, after she has tried to kill herself by jumping from a fifth floor window, she is returned to her father. She runs away and passes through a gaudy series of adventures and misfortunes, all due to her great beauty, but is finally rescued by a young man whom she deeply loves. When he tires of her she leaves him, and puts out her own eyes, to finish her days as a beggar."

—Lit R

"The very simplicity of Mr. Minney's style makes the action more compelling. Descriptive paragraphs are few, yet when given are always telling. The characters stand out against a background of India itself, subtly suggested rather than painted in detail. This India of strange custom in passion and crime is one to make the heart beat and the brain wonder. And such is Mr. Minney's skill that never for an instant is the truth of it doubted. His restraint deepens his effects." C. K. H.

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 8 '22 380w

MINNEY, R. J.—Continued

"It is an unusual novel, anomalous both in conception and in treatment; a mixture of subtle psychological analysis with the action of a five-reel movie thriller. Yet, especially in the latter half of the story, in spite of its sensational plot, it manages to remain dignified, and the conclusion is real tragedy."

+ — Lit R p533 Mr 25 '22 400w

"The strength of the book lies in the graphic picturing of native manners and customs, the way in which caste controls the actions of men and women, and takes no heed of passions, emotions or inclinations, and the often unhappy relation of women to men. The marriage customs are set forth without comment, but they are none the less impressive to a Caucasian reader on that account."

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 30 '22 490w

"Mr. Minney's novel has a number of unintentional virtues which make this record of an Indian girl's evolution not unworth an hour's attention."

+ — Sat R 132:621 N 26 '21 240w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 S 22 '21 430w

MINNIGERODE, MEADE. Oh, Susanna! 401p $1.90 (7s 6d) Putnam

22-3496

The story is described in its sub-title, "a romance of the old American merchant marine." The hero, Matthew Parsons, was born to the sea, his two grandfathers being ship owners and builders and his father a master mariner. Matthew's ambition from boyhood was to be "dandy mate of a Black Ball packet." He early attained his ambition and he fell in love with a golden haired girl in the steerage, whom he lost in the confusion of landing. He sailed to Japan and when the California gold fever came, he built his clipper ship Golden Fleece to carry the gold seekers. But Matthew himself sought another kind of gold, and his quest was rewarded. The plot of the rambling and discursive story is all bound up with a blue porcelain elephant that is guaranteed to bring good luck if kept until the propitious moment and then thrown away.

"There is a great deal of the poet in Meade Minnigerode's make-up. It very clearly colors his treatment of this theme. It gives a distinct individuality to whatever he touches." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 29 '22 980w

Cleveland p28 Ap '22

"This is a moderately interesting novel of adventure. The plot is a discursive, rambling affair. We do indeed get a genuine taste of life in the old American merchant marine; but for the most part one finds oneself surrounded by the melodramatic and the unbelievable."

— + Lit R p494 Mr 11 '22

"Mr. Minnigerode writes with a charming whimsicality of style, and his story is a never-faltering delight from its first page to its last. It is a sweet-smelling story, notwithstanding the bloody fracas into which he plunges us every now and then, with the clean sea airs blowing through its pages and the fragrance of the cargoes of tea and spices and silk stealing up from below decks, and most of its people, both at sea and on shore, appealing to sane human understanding. It is the kind of book one reads with a smile and remembers with pleasure."

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 19 '22 560w

"Has a flavor, an Old World charm; an odor as of spices and sandalwood. It is a cargo of precious stuffs, not the least of which are the rollicking songs of the sea that stud the text. If you like a book that will take you out of your rut, here it is." C. H. Towne

+ N Y Tribune p9 Ap 16 '22 470w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"The book is clean and crisp, and its style differentiates it from others of a kindred type."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Jl 23 '22 290w

"It is by no means a brisk tale of naval adventure; for the author approaches his romance with an immense deal of posturing and preliminary matter about the old ships and the old sailors. But he is a popular American writer, and those who have leisure and are sympathetic to the artificial blandishments of his literary manner may enjoy the book."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 8 '22 100w

MITCHELL, RUTH COMFORT (MRS WILLIAM SANBORN YOUNG). Jane journeys on. 296p $1.75 Appleton

22-4210

Jane Vail, who has a certain gift for writing, leaves her Vermont village home and arrives in New York. She has many lively adventures and is encouraged by the fact that one of her sketches is actually staged. Her wanderings are far and wide and she sends humorous letters home. She returns to New York from her trip to Mexico and California and there marries Michael Daragh, who had befriended her when she first started out on her journeyings.

Booklist 18:332 Je '22

"Some novelists seem predestined to achieve popularity. Ruth Comfort Mitchell belongs emphatically to this class. Hers are the type of stories which leave a pleasant atmosphere behind them, and the ideals she fosters are indubitably those which appear to the majority of readers to be praiseworthy. The charm of her way of writing lies in its naturalness and the colloquial idiom which she translates into story use." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '22 650w

"Even fairy tales are sometimes pleasant reading, and this little book is distinctly that. [The reader feels], on putting this book down, a warm sense of gratitude to an author who has held attention through even a short hour on things a bit more pleasant and wholesome than real." M. T. Hamilton

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 S 3 '22 360w

"One must come to the conclusion that this type of novel is intended for the young in mind and age. It is absolutely pure, and contains no deleterious ingredients whatsoever. But it is as pernicious, none the less, as the various forms of soothing syrups that flourished before the passage of the Food and Drugs act."

— N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 160w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

MITCHELL, THOMAS WALKER. Psychology of medicine. 187p $2 McBride [6s Methuen]

130 Psychoanalysis (Eng ed SG22-68)

"This book is intended primarily for those who, without being students of medicine or psychology, wish to keep themselves abreast of modern thought in these subjects. The earlier chapters are devoted to a discussion of the various psychological theories, commencing with Janet's theory of dissociation and its connexion with hysteria and the hypnotic state, and then passing on to Freud's theory of repression. The rest of the book deals with the conception of the unconscious, with psycho-analysis, and with the classification, treatment, and prevention of neuroses."—Nature

"The book is too uninterestingly written to attract the lay public and it treats on nothing that would be new to anyone versed in the subject."

— Bookm 56:519 D '22 40w

"The clearness and impartiality with which Dr. Mitchell has considered conflicting views will be appreciated by the reader who requires only a general outline of modern psychology."

+ Nature 110:412 S 23 '22 130w

MITTELL, BRENCHELEY ERNEST G. Continuous wave wireless telegraphy. (Pitman's technical primer ser.) 114p il 85c Pitman

654.1 Radio telegraph

22-26317

"The aim of this primer is to give a picture of wireless telegraphy from the engineer's standpoint, without recourse either to mathematics or theory, and this in 110 pages, considerable portions of which are diagrams. Part of one chapter is devoted to a consideration of the various wireless towers in use, particularly to the wooden lattice tower, which has undeniable advantages over those constructed of steel. Another chapter is devoted to the Poulsen arc, which has made possible the transmission of messages over long distances."—Lit R

Cleveland p77 S '22

"The reader should be able to carry away from this book, if not a complete picture, at least an outline picture of radio telegraphy."

Lit R p571 Ap 8 '22 140w

MITZAKIS, MARCEL. Oil encyclopedia; a reference book for petroleum technologists, oil companies, engineers, financiers and investors. 551p $6 Wiley [21s Chapman & H.]

665.5 Petroleum (Eng ed 22-14826)

"Alphabetical arrangement of terms, methods, places, and persons connected with the oil and gas industries, giving brief information regarding each."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Engineering p499 Ap 21 '22 1½col

Geological Magazine p233 My '22 ½p

J Royal Soc Arts p392 Ap 14 '22 ½col

Mining Magazine p285 My '22 2col

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:22 Ap '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:569 D '22

MONAHAN, MICHAEL. Attic dreamer. 333p $2.50 Kennerley

814

23-3066

The book is the literary residuum of a small periodical, The Papyrus, personally conducted by the author from 1903-1912. The author points out that his book is an adventure of the romantic spirit. It contains literary studies and sketches on various subjects pertaining to life and love, concluding with epigrams and aphorisms. Among the subjects of the literary essays are Poe, Ingersoll, Richard Wagner, Oscar Wilde, Beardsley, Lafcadio Hearn and others.

"The essays are all done with a charm and a skill of presentation which give the reader an intimate glimpse of a man, himself an idealist, who has seen much of life and has found it good."

+ Lit R p297 D 9 '22 200w

"In the prose of our existence it is good to find a man for whom dreams are better than riches and who, by showing us what stuff his are made of, can teach us to fashion some for ourselves."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 7 '23 540w

"A series of short essays on a great variety of subjects, expressed with considerable force and originality in somewhat of the romantic vein."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p766 N 23 '22 40w

MONCKTON, CHARLES ARTHUR WHITMORE. Last days in New Guinea. 287p il $5 Dodd [18s Lane]

919.5 New Guinea

22-17990

The book is a continuation of the author's "Some experiences of a New Guinea resident magistrate." The present narrative is an interesting account of the author's amicable relations with the natives in his official capacity and of his hazardous expedition across New Guinea, including an ascent of Mount Albert Edward. The unnecessary hardships encountered on the journey are charged to the inefficiency of the British bureaucracy which finally led to Captain Monckton's resignation from the service. The book contains a description of the natural history specimens presented by the author to the British Museum. Maps, index.

Booklist 19:81 D '22

"For one to whom the names of Sergeant Barigi, the old chief Giwi, and the Reverend Percy Money have some meaning, these anecdotes must hold a thrill. For the rest of us they are mildly entertaining yarns told in the traditional patois of the stage Britisher, and interlarded with many scraps of geographical knowledge."

+ Bookm 56:518 D '22 150w

"Hardly rivals his first in interest, but it is a thoroughly readable book for all that."

+ — Ind 109:215 O 14 '22 130w

"He is a compound of Captain John Smith and Richard Burton, and his experience is an interesting chapter on the white man's burden. His book is well illustrated and has the best map of New Guinea which has yet been published." J. F. Gould

+ Nation 116:20 Ja 3 '23 350w

"Racy, readable and reckless reminiscence."

+ Nation and Ath 31:286 My 20 '22 1150w

"He writes with a gusto as rare as it is welcome in a branch of literature given over for the most part to the mere book-makers."

+ New Statesman 18:654 Mr 11 '22 950w

Outlook 132:344 O 25 '22 40w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:520 N '22

R of Rs 66:448 O '22 70w

"He is a very bright and breezy writer. Whether he describes the sterling qualities of his native police, the ineptitudes of his superior authorities, the wonders and difficulties of the virgin bush, or the vicissitudes of the miners or 'diggers' in their precarious search for gold, he is always interesting."

+ Sat R 133:67 Ja 21 '22 300w

"His books show a wonderful insight into the Papuan mind and give also a most vivid account of the rugged and beautiful scenery."

+ Spec 128:79 Ja 21 '22 1600w

"The book is a decidedly interesting account, and it is written with a frankness and vigor not always found in books of travel."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 O 24 '22 110w

"A cheerful and hearty record of stirring adventure of all kinds."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p48 Ja 19 '22 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p53 Ja 26 '22 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

MONRO, HAROLD. Real property. 63p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Poetry Bookshop]

821

The poems are in two groups of which the first, "Real property," is a sequence of related poems which might bear the title, Poems of the unconscious. The second group contains fugitive poems on natural subjects.

"'Real Property' is worth cherishing."

+ Bookm 56:642 Ja '23 130w

"Even when he treats the same themes as Squire or Drinkwater (and he does it often) his poems have more than a signature to distinguish them; they are his real property; they do not belong entirely to a school."

+ Dial 74:211 F '23 80w

Reviewed by L: Untermeyer

Lit R p379 Ja 13 '23 1100w

"Formlessness and pedestrianism might well be urged against Mr. Monro's volume; but the presence of three or four poems in his best style leaves a considerable balance in his favor."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:540 Jl 15 '22 120w

"Despite numerous fancies of the sort that invite rather than compel our imagination and a few keen evocations of the mood of communion with the subliminal, the boundaries of Real Property enclose so little that is universal that Mr. Monro did well to abandon the business before he got hopelessly committed, not to metaphysics, but to that very different thing, Metaphysical Poetry. Mr. Monro is minor in kind because his muse is particularist; in degree, because his temperament cannot realize the synthesis his thought can envisage. It is not a matter of talent as opposed to genius, but of different kinds of genius expressing themselves with varying degrees of talent."

MONRO, HAROLD—Continued

+ — New Repub 32:281 N 8 '22 560w

"Mr. Monro has good things. There is plenty of life, for instance, in 'Gold Fish' and 'The Garden,' better still is 'Real Property,' the joy for ever of a remembered harvest-field; and best of all, 'Unknown Country,' the countryside with its people strangers for ever to the 'city soiled.'" F. L. L.

+ — New Statesman 19:98 Ap 29 '22 680w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne
N Y Times p16 N 5 '22 250w

"The poems in Mr. Monro's new volume are singularly uneven. Some are cold with the chilliness of five-finger exercises, some in their effortful sincerity contain lines and phrases of complete bathos, and only here and there do we get the fusion of ingredients which make a poem. When we do get it, it is worth having."

A. Williams-Ellis

+ — Spec 128:630 My 20 '22 900w

MONTAGUE, CHARLES EDWARD. Disenchantment. 280p $2 Brentano's [7s Chatto & W.]

940.342 European war, 1914-1919—Great Britain (Eng ed 22-9404)

"When the war broke out C. E. Montague was—he had been for a good many years—the chief leader writer on the Manchester Guardian. He enlisted in 1914. He served in France, Belgium and Germany from 1915 to 1919. In Captain Montague's pages we begin by sharing the high hopes which drove the earliest volunteers into the army, by inhaling the upland air which blew tonic and keen across England in the first days of the war; we look on, while Captain Montague is adding incident to telltale incident, at the slow growth of disenchantment in the hearts of British privates and N. C. O.s, we see those hopes that were so high in the act of dwindling from less and less to almost nothing, we take our part in the process of many a generous faith's disaster."—New Repub

Bookm 56:644 Ja '23 300w

"Here is a golden book; the kind of document about the war for which we have long been waiting, written by a fine and cultured gentleman with a faith in the decency of the ordinary human being. 'Disenchantment' is, moreover, a very considerable contribution to literature. Mr. Montague is the master of a style, vivid, apt and individual, which will bear comparison with the best Victorian prose, and may be an even more important matter than its subject matter in assuring the endurance of his book." J. F. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 25 '22 390w

"It seems a pity that Mr. Montague was so inadequately disenchanting. His manner is engaging; his sincerity is as marked as his humour. His literary style is a source of delight. It is the reader's misfortune that in this instance the author hitched his wagon to sentiment rather than intelligence." Harold Kellock

+ — Freeman 6:379 D 27 '22 550w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:274 N 11 '22 110w

"I would be inclined to place 'Disenchantment' with 'Le Feu' and 'Mensch im Kreis' as one of a triad that none anxious to know the inwardness of war can afford to disregard. It is a book every British or American reader should learn, mark and inwardly digest. It is a book to be taken as though with prayer, anyhow with a momentary detachment from intrusive and whispering racial gods. There are few flights of rhetoric. Its words have oftener stings than wings. Best of all, 'Disenchantment' dwindles into no colophon of shallow optimism at the end. Mr. Montague's last two chapters are the most vital of all." H. L. Stuart

+ Lit R p240 N 25 '22 1750w

"When it comes right down to the consideration of humanity as a whole, of one brotherhood of man, well, Mr. Montague is disenchanting with the war, not with the roots of war. . . 'Disenchantment' is only the awakening of a school-boy." Edwin Seaver

— Nation 115:584 N 29 '22 950w

"'Disenchantment' is to me the finest essay in English which has come out of the war. Montague is a master of our tongue, and the greatest ironist we have. This book, too, cannot be neglected by any student of the society of our own times, for 'Disenchantment' is a subtle analysis of formative things in our midst. It is, however, a work of art, because its form is deliberately designed, and is austere maintained, never deflected by very evident temptations to the purple. It is wrought in the enduring material of a classic." H. M. T.

+ Nation and Ath 30:760 F 18 '22 950w

"Captain Montague is an example of what love of fair play may grow into when it strikes root in somebody whose senses are keen and who has a searching, assaying, generous mind. In him love of fair play has become a passion for equity. There is good humor in his scorn and humor even in his chivalry. He combines a hatred of war with a decided preference, when he has only himself to think of, for the tightest places. . . Disenchantment is an indomitable book. Its energy and beauty make its indomitable spirit contagious." P. L.

+ New Repub 30:285 My 3 '22 1500w

"Mr. Montague has written one of the comments on the war that are likely to endure. His book is a book of passion that was not allowed to escape prematurely into print—of war-emotion recollected in as much tranquillity as is possible to a soldier who feels that his side 'won the fight and lost the prize.' . . Mr. Montague has certainly a great gift of loathing. But he does not vituperate with adjectives but with evidence." Robert Lynd

+ New Statesman 18:504 F 25 '22 1800w

N Y Times p6 N 19 '22 1350w

Pratt p31 autumn '22

"In your admiration for the amazing skill of Mr. Montague's expression, [you are inclined] to attach a weight to his judgment which you would be reluctant to concede if he were less skilful in his presentation of it. Cock-sureness expressed with a fitness so perfected, a dexterity so absolute must, you feel, be right, and before you realize the implications of the position into which he is leading you, you find yourself assenting to a whole series of half-truths, and even truths more fractional than that, by reason of the ability of the handiwork with which they are set out."

+ — Sat R 133:288 Mr 18 '22 1100w

"Written with balance, insight, good-temper and charm."

+ Survey 49:397 D 15 '22 60w

"Apart from the æsthetic pleasure which all readers must derive from the writings of such a master of English, we confess to being uncertain whether the digestion of these gloomy pages will be of great benefit to anybody. However, if there is little comfort in Mr. Montague's words, there is truth enough, and a finished art is lavished on the telling of it."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p106 F 16 '22 1100w

MONTIZAMBERT, E. Unnoticed. London. (Medieval town ser.) 222p il $2 Dutton [4s 6d Dent]

914.21 London—Description

(Eng ed 22-14725)

The author has not tried to tell of every interesting place in London, or even of all there is of interest in the places visited but to call attention to the overlooked and unexpected things just around the corner that await the everyday traveller up and down the streets of the city. They all can be seen so easily, but since they can be seen any day are likely never to be seen at all. Contents: Chelsea; Knights-bridge to Soho; Trafalgar Square to Fleet street; Round about the tower; Round about Cheapside; Round about Holborn; Down Chancery lane; The Charterhouse and St. Bartholomew's; A stroll in Whitehall and Westminster; Museums; Parks; Index.

Boston Transcript p8 My 6 '22 470w
Cleveland p94 D '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 103:488 My 27 '22 30w

"Bright little book about big things and small, from the British Museum to the stone commemorating Tyburn. The information supplied is generally sound and attractively put, so that the book is worth revision."

+ New Statesman 19:498 Ag 5 '22 210w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses
N Y Times p16 J1 9 '22 100w
Outlook 131:314 Je 14 '22 60w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:519 N '22

"The historic facts and dates are given faithfully and concisely. . . Bus and rail routes to the places described are carefully given, and, in short, the volume is a very useful and pleasant contribution to the literature of London."

+ Sat R 133:315 Mr 25 '22 780w

Spring'd Republican p7a J1 9 '22 90w

"The danger of assuming other people to know nothing is that one comes to think that anything will do to interest them. So with Miss Montizambert. Her book has some very pleasantly written chapters; but a great deal of it is scrappy and superficial."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Mr 23 '22 620w

MOORE, CHARLES. Daniel H. Burnham, architect; planner of cities. 2v 260;238p il $20 Houghton

B or 92 Burnham, Daniel Hudson. Architecture—United States 21-18783
For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

"It is a one-sided account of the life of a man whose career was so remarkable, and so typically American, as to deserve a more symmetrical treatment; but it is fair to say that Mr. Moore's accounts of Burnham's greater works—the Chicago Columbian Fair, the Washington Commission work, and the great city-planning enterprises which occupied the later years of his life—are exceedingly well done and with a modest relegation to the background of the author's own connection with them." A. D. F. Hamlin

+ Am Hist R 27:596 Ap '22 650w

"Here are two magnificent volumes embellished with photographs and colored reproductions and printed in big clear type running between generous margins; yet nowhere is there anything but the most superficial interpretation of the man and his epoch. This biography is as external as a death-mask." L. Mumford

Freeman 4:574 F '22 '22 1700w

"Mr. Moore is bland and cool—he contributes little color and sparkle; yet there the Biography stands, systematically ground-planned, solidly pillared, and carefully embellished with the recognized and established patterns." H. B. Fuller

+ Nation 114:166 F 8 '22 1450w

"It is to be regretted that, with so full a presentation of his later activities, Mr. Moore should have so lightly passed over the other phrases of Burnham's life and career. There is no adequate discussion of Burnham's true rank and position among American architects and no effort at any critical estimate of his ability as a designer of buildings. One cons these pages in vain for any adequate explanation of the rise of the self-made architect to a foremost rank in the profession." A. D. Hamlin

+ New Repub 30:81 Mr 15 '22 2850w

Reviewed by Austin Hay
N Y Times p4 F 19 '22 3300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:365 J1 '22

"Not for an estimate, but for the authentic glimpses essential to the forming of an estimate, will the reader look in these opulently beautiful volumes."

+ Spring'd Republican p13a F 19 '22 880w

"Mr. Moore's biography gives not only a very full account of Burnham's life, work and ideas but also presents an interesting cross section of an important phase of American life. The architect and city planners whose portraits he draws have more than any other group given expression to the quality of present-day American civilization." Bruno Lasker

+ Survey 47:932 Mr 11 '22 770w

MOORE, ELWOOD S. Coal; its properties, analysis, classification, geology, extraction, uses and distribution. 462p il $5 Wiley [25s Chapman & H.]

553.2 Coal 22-7018

"The best book available on the general subject of coal. Gives chief attention to geological matters but deals briefly with mining and with preparation of coal for fuel in various forms."

—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Coal Age p698 Ap 27 '22 ½col

Coal Industry p244 My '22 1½col

Engin News-Rec p1006 Je 15 '22 ½col

"The plan of the text is admirable and the author handles his subject with good clear English, which is free from useless repetition. This has made it possible for him to get a remarkable amount of information into a single volume. Considering its size and scope, it is certainly one of the best texts on coal that has been published." C. R. S.

+ J Geol 30:717 N '22 500w

"In the preparation of the work the author has evidently searched the literature of coal very carefully, for the information presented is of high order and represents authoritative work on coal. So many valuable and interesting data on coal have been compiled and systematically arranged that no one interested in coal can afford to be without this volume." W. A. Selvig

+ J Ind and Engin Chem 14:665 J1 '22 270w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:22 Ap '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:343 J1 '22

MOORE, GEORGE EDWARD. Philosophical studies. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 339p $4 Harcourt [15s K. Paul]

104 Philosophy (Eng ed 23-2476)

"Reprint of papers originally contributed for the most part to the proceedings of the Aristotelian Society between the years 1903 and 1921. Some idea of their range may be gathered from such titles as 'The Nature and Reality of Objects of Perception,' 'A Refutation of Idealism,' 'William James' Pragmatism,' 'The Status of Sense-Data,' 'The Conception of Reality,' 'Some Judgments of Perception,' 'External and Internal Relations' and 'The Nature of Moral Philosophy.'" —Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p9 S 9 '22 400w

"He makes no attempt to be persuasive by charm of style, or by other adventitious merits; he assumes in the reader the same clear, passionate desire for unadulterated truth which he feels himself, and the same willingness to go through a long process of dissection for the sake of the tiny nucleus of truth ultimately isolated for his intellectual microscope." Bertrand Russell

+ Nation and Ath 31:538 J1 15 '22 720w

"A most important collection of essays by a philosopher who has had a great influence on other philosophers, and may be regarded as the founder of the new realism. The book contains the most searching criticism of Pragmatism and the clearest yet published."

+ New Statesman 20:supxviii D 2 '22 40w

MOORE, GEORGE EDWARD—Continued

"Perhaps the most striking quality in Dr. Moore is his passion for accuracy, for clear definition, and many of these studies consist of little more than a scrupulous tidying-up, a gradual removal of all incrustations, a precise limitation and clarification of the words and phrases involved."

+ Spec 129:114 J1 22 '22 520w

MOORE, PHIL H. With gun and rod in Canada. 261p il $4 Houghton [12s 6d J. Cape] 799 Hunting. Fishing (Eng ed 22-20155)

A sportsman's book of hunting and shooting, chiefly in the wilds of Nova Scotia. The author writes of trout fishing and winter fly fishing, of shooting moose and grizzly bears, and of canoeing in swift water. There are chapters on the management of a small power-boat, on the preparation of moose meat, and of advice on what to take in the way of fishing tackle and clothing for a combined canoe, camping and fishing trip to Nova Scotia.

Booklist 19:73 D '22

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 30 '22 720w

"Full of 'wrinkles' for the sportsman, moose-hunting and bear-shooting. It is full of anecdote, detail, and local colour."

+ New Statesman 19:336 Je 24 '22 50w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:32 Ja '23

"The anecdotes are interesting and amusing, the style light and humorous, but neither is as excellent as his advice. We would recommend anyone wishing to enter Canada with gun or rod to read this book before he starts, and keep it with him until he returns to civilization."

+ Sat R 133:637 Je 17 '22 300w

"Mr. Moore's experiences of sport in Eastern and Western Canada have been long and varied, and are pleasantly described in this lively book."

+ Spec 128:630 My 20 '22 150w

"It is wandering, discursive—and interesting. The style is a little cramped, for Mr Moore is keenly conscious that typewriters and casting rods move on different spheres and his writing lacks some of the confidence of his canoe paddling. Now and then the humor is flat, and Mr Moore has a slightly irritating fondness for quotation marks around words of uncertain social standing. But for all that, his book is one of the most interesting and enjoyable of the season's crop of outdoors books. The author succeeds remarkably well in putting the clean odor of balsam boughs into print."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a S 17 '22 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p321 My 18 '22 1000w

MOORE, WILLIS LUTHER. New air world: the science of meteorology simplified. 326p il $3 Little

551.5 Meteorology 22-22693

"This book is planned for the reading of those who desire to know something of the wonders of the New Air World into which man is just now entering, for those who desire to become weatherwise and make forecasts for themselves, and to apply their knowledge to their business, their health, and their happiness; and for the reading of the more advanced pupils of the public schools. So far as possible technical terms are avoided." (Introd.) The author, professor of meteorology in George Washington university, was for eighteen years chief of the United States weather bureau.

"Unfortunately the author betrays every now and then a certain moral indignation over the temporal faults of men and women, an irrelevancy which he would do well to reserve for another volume dealing with the political weather in Washington."

+ — Lit R p278 D 2 '22 300w

R of Rs 67:112 Ja '23 60w

"Treats in a vivid and popular style essential facts about the weather and climate and the effects of climate upon the life of man."

+ — Spring'd Republican p6 D 25 '22 600w

Wis Lib Bul 19:22 Ja '23

MORGAN, GEORGE. Life of James Monroe. 484p il $4 Small

B or 92 Monroe, James 21-22320

"It was on Dec. 2, 1823 that President Monroe sent to Congress his seventh annual message in which was embodied what is now known the world over as the Monroe Doctrine. It is a part of the nation's creed and deserves to be studied ab ovo, that the American may fully understand its origin, history, purport and significance. In this 'centenary biography' we find these questions answered, as well as many another regarding Monroe: 'Where was he bred? Where schooled? What did he do to help win the first and second wars of independence? Why was he twice chosen President, and why, especially, did he enunciate the rule applicable to the whole Western Hemisphere associated with his name.' — N Y Times

Booklist 18:188 Mr '22

"Mr. Morgan has done an excellent piece of work. It is complete, accurate, and scholarly. It is critical and as impartial as any biography should be, a neutral one having but little value. It is pleasantly written in spite of being packed with facts, and it is exceedingly interesting. Finally, in addition to its picture of Monroe, it gives a rather striking and interesting view of the times and events through which he lived, and the places in which he moved." J. G. de R. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Mr 19 '22 650w

"He has not a genius to depict, and he does not exhaust the possibilities of rhetoric. He has given us an interesting and well written account." J. C. Rose

+ Ind 108:119 F 4 '22 600w

"Mr. Morgan has not written a critical biography, but rather a genial story that will engage the interest of those who like to while away a long evening with a judicious mixture of personalia, gossip, and history. He has read widely and seized upon many interesting episodes to enliven his pages. He goes far enough into the affairs of the family and does not overlook any significant event in Monroe's career. Professed historians will find many things to quarrel about, and masters of taste who like their biographies done in the style of Lytton Strachey will be discontented with the plain and rather colorless narrative. Still those who take life as it comes will discover pleasure and profit in Mr. Morgan's plain record of a very plain man." C. A. Beard

+ — Nation 114:499 Ap 26 '22 820w

"Under no interpretation could the present biography be regarded as more than an average performance; and the author relies rather slavishly upon others to do much of his thinking for him. The style is choppy; the piecework of the different chapters is not neatly welded together, and it contains some few inaccuracies of minor importance. But it possesses the merit of considering with comparative fulness the entire course of Monroe's life and career. Mr. Morgan has written an interesting, readable biography, well documented. He is essentially fair in his judgments, realizing fully and frankly acknowledging—at least between the lines—that he has for subject a man of uninspiring personality, heavy in mental process, if not actually dull." Archibald Henderson

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 2 '22 2200w

"Mr Morgan has overburdened his account with somewhat irrelevant data. The style is not closely knit or coherent; yet the almost garulous interludes provide interesting sidelights on people and society, to the leisurely reader. They illustrate, too, an obvious attempt to give us all the available evidence on controversial matters. A real weakness is a tendency to present this period too much in terms of persons, and not enough in terms of sections, classes and interests which create and speak through those persons." J: M. Gaus

— + Springfd Republican p7a Jl 23 '22 700w

MORGENTHAU, HENRY. All in a life-time.
454p il $4 Doubleday
B or 92 22-21188

With the collaboration of French Strother the author gives an account of his youth and early career as a business man, of his ideal aspirations as shown in his interest in the work of Felix Adler and in social service, and of his political experiences both national and international. In his Constantinople period he confines himself chiefly to the social side of the country, the diplomatic being treated in a previous book: "Ambassador Morgenthau's story." His connection with the international Red Cross, the Peace conference and his mission to Poland form part of the contents of the book, which ends with a full statement of the author's views on Zionism. The appendix consists of the report of the mission of the United States to Poland. Index.

"There is nothing vainglorious in his narrative; it is modest, simple, and direct. He has a talent for crisp and vivid characterization. The book is both entertaining and enlightening."

A. S. Pler

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf N '22 620w

Booklist 19:83 D '22

Boston Transcript p7 O 21 '22 1150w

Ind 109:114 O 14 '22 60w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p36 D '22 70w

"On the whole, Mr. Morgenthau's story is both readable and authoritative. He has a romantic tale to tell and he tells it with contagious relish." R. J. Davis

+ Lit R p263 D 2 '22 780w

Reviewed by H. I. Young

Nation 115:692 D 20 '22 250w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 32:225 O 25 '22 720w

Reviewed by M. F. Egan

N Y Times p5 O 29 '22 1750w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:598 D '22

Pratt p34 winter '23

R of Rs.66:669 D '22 300w

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

Springfd Republican p6 Ja 29 '23
1050w

Wis Lib Bul 18:253 N '22

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON.
Translations from the Chinese. 86p $1.50
Doran

811

22-16201

These little poems are dedicated to Logan Pearsall Smith and there is something in them suggestive of his "Trivia." Some disturbing comment on the ways of man shines through Mr Morley's ironic brevities.

Booklist 19:76 D '22

"Certainly this is Mr. Morley at his best. Seldom has any mandarin had a rarer and more delightful wisdom."

+ — Bookm 56:101 S '22 220w

"The cleverness of Mr. Morley is beyond beseeching. There is keen penetration into the ways and manners of contemporary life in this book, and in its excellent imitation of the free verse method the collection sparkles with wit and satire." W. S. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 8 '22 800w

"Is very far from his best work: it may be questioned if such extracts from a newspaper column—good though they are—are not, for the author's reputation, better left where they first appeared. Perhaps serious and philosophical persons will esteem the new volume. This reader, being merely frivolous and childish, must be content to finger the cover and admire its golden sheen." E. L. Pearson

— + Ind 109:22 Jl 22 '22 380w

"This is a charming book. It is Mr. Morley at his best at work upon matter congenial to his humor. From the urbane and extremely entertaining letter which dedicates the little volume to that brilliant gem-carver Logan Pearsall Smith to the conditional blessing upon purchasers on the last page the book is simply great fun." Leonard Bacon

+ Lit R p823 Jl 22 '22 550w

"In spite of the puns, it is a thoroughly enjoyable book. It is something new done in a new way."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 27 '22 750w

Pratt p25 autumn '22

St Louis 20:301 D '22

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON.
Where the blue begins. 215p $1.50 Doubleday

The story is both an allegory and a satire. All the characters are dogs. They do everything that human beings do. Glassing, the hero, is a good deal of a philosopher. He wonders about God and freedom. At last, leaving his comfortable home in Canine Estates and his three adopted puppies in the care of Mrs Spaniel, he goes forth into the world to investigate. He thinks he will go in for big business so he becomes floorwalker for Beagle and Co. But tho he raises floorwalking to a high level, he discovers that freedom does not lie that way. Neither is it to be found in the church, nor in the life of a mariner, which he tries in turn. Finally, giving up his search for an elusive freedom, he goes back home. He finds there a strange content and in the flame of his furnace fire a hint of the heavenly blue he had been seeking.

Booklist 19:87 D '22

"Strikes me as being some excellent writing wasted upon trivialities." J: V. A. Weaver

+ — Bookm 56:493 D '22 120w

"It is an absurd tale viewed in some lights, but it is a kind of fable with an undercurrent of beauty which will bring joy to very many people." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p10 D 9 '22 1000w

Cath World 116:718 F '23 300w

"It is one of those books about which there will be no half-way opinions. The book will strike you either as a marvelous play of fancy, infinitely graceful, winsome, wise and gentle, or it will strike you as gibberish. And you can argue plausibly and convincingly for either opinion." G. W. J.

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 14 '23 720w

"It wholly justifies itself. In workmanship the author has never done better; there are passages of pure beauty; prose so exquisitely fashioned that I cannot think of any one who could improve upon them. The satire is excellent." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:204 O 14 '22 200w

"I welcome Mr. Morley's book especially because it is another sign of the return of imagination and fantasy to a far too realistic world. The best book he has yet written." Hugh Walpole

+ Lit R p103 O 14 '22 650w

Nation 115:444 O 25 '22 40w

+ New Repub 33:50 D 6 '22 320w

"The best thing he has done since 'Parnassus on Wheels.' Here, for once, he has dropped many of his rather labored mannerisms and adjusted his whimsical manner to a sort of fairy tale, which may be taken as an allegory or a delightful concoction of fertile imagination, just as the reader chooses."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 240w

"The best book Morley has written; it has tenderness and humor, satire, sentiment and sense." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p8 N 5 '22 180w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Tribune p8 N 26 '22 1050w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER D.—Continued

"Where the Blue Begins" checks up the life of America fully as sharply as does 'Babbitt.' There is a difference in method and we prefer Morley's way. Fantasy seems to us a better vehicle for satire than naturalism. Certainly it is more expeditious. In a little more than 200 pages Morley has managed to deal with man's relation to business, home and God and, more than that, to round out his theme. We can remember no better work on theology, which is just about the most interesting subject in the world when treated with a dash of playfulness." Heywood Brown

+ N Y World p15 O 26 '22 450w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 132:532 N 22 '22 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:533 D '22

"Mr. Gissing's adventures are varied, but they are not gruesome, and Mr. Morley seasons a readable story with genial laughter, satire that provokes but does not bite, quaint absurdity and a charm that is delicate but not trivial. The book is quiet, interesting, and companionable."

+ Springfield Republican p7a O 29 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

MORRIS, JOSEPH, and ADAMS, ST. CLAIR, 2 comps. Songs for fishermen. 330p $2.50 Stewart Kidd

$21.08 Fishing—Poetry 23-2059

The compilers have aimed to bring together the most representative fishing poems written in the English language, and to represent practically all phases of fishing, not ignoring such by-products as delight in nature, in the calm of vast forest stretches and in the nocturnal gatherings and diversions of anglers. Beside an index of titles and of authors there is a list of streams mentioned in the poems, and a list of poetry and magazines for the angler's library is given.

"If you like angling you will doubtless enjoy this collection." Milton Raison

+ N Y Tribune p18 Ja 14 '23 140w

"The book is quite worth while."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ja 14 '23 180w

MORSE, KATHARINE. Gate of cedar. 161p $1.25 Macmillan

811 22-3504

This collection of short lyric poems is grouped under the headings: The cedar gate; Out of the past; For any lover; For anyone; Lasses love; For a child; For some I love.

"She has some good things to say and she says all of them well, and some of them with exquisite deftness."

+ Cath World 115:413 Je '22 160w

"Miss Morse's verses, while in no way unusual, are creditable and pleasant to read." Arthur Guiterman

+ Ind 108:396 Ap 22 '22 50w

"Miss Morse is not of the soap-box school of poetry. Her work is vitally modern, for almost every line reveals an insight into human nature—or into the humanity of Nature itself."

+ Lit R p692 My 27 '22 120w

"A worthy first book of verse. Miss Morse is possessed of straightforward directness, a genuine sincerity. . . She suffers from that most insidious of artistic vices—charm. Her verse is often charming. That will mean her success—and failure."

+ New Repub 30:235 Ap 19 '22 140w

"Miss Morse rhymes cleverly and she exhibits many differing moods but she echoes a great deal."

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 26 '22 100w

MOSES, MONTROSE JONAS, ed. Representative one-act plays by continental authors. 463p $3 Little

$08.2 Drama—Collections 22-22716

A collection of one-act plays for the little theater which brings together some novel dramas from unusual sources. Bibliographies of the authors are provided. Contents: Countess Mizzie, by A. Schnitzler; Death and the fool, by H. von Hofmannsthal; The blind, by M. Maeterlinck; The birthday party, by H. Bergström; The théâtre-libre.—The woman who was acquitted, by A. de Lorde; Five little dramas.—Along the quays; For ever and ever; Where shall we go? The afternoon walk; Not at home, by Henri Lavedan; François' luck, by G. de Porto-Riche; Morituri; Teias, by H. Sudermann; The court singer, by F. Wedekind; Sacred ground, by G. Giacosa; An incident, by L. Andreyev; A merry death, by N. Evreinov; By their words ye shall know them, by S. and J. Quintero; The lover, by G. Martínez Sierra; Simoom, by J. A. Strindberg; Bibliographies.

"The trouble with the plays which Mr. Moses has selected is that they are local and national and the atmosphere will not gracefully yield to translation. For the purposes of the theatre, the understanding of the original may guide the actor so that some of this difficulty is overcome, but this does not reach the reader. Most of our plays would fare the same way if placed before Continental readers." S. L. C.

— Boston Transcript p6 N 18 '22 1050w

"Artificiality of language seems to be a general characteristic of the plays, or, at any rate, the versions of the plays, included. It would be manifestly unjust to heap the entire blame for the poor average quality of the offerings upon Mr. Moses. He has protected himself against such blame by pointing out in his introduction that Continental writers of one-act plays are far inferior to their English and Irish colleagues and that the method of selection had been hampered by what was available in English translation. Similarly the rather conventional sketches of authors might be excused on the ground that they are partly intended for school and library use. The bibliographies appear to be most thorough and must represent a vast amount of labor." Rex Hunter

+ Lit R p288 D 9 '22 300w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 132:620 D 6 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 19:23 Ja '23

MOSHER, MARION DIX, comp. More toasts:

2 jokes, stories and quotations. 542p $1.80 Wilson, H. W.

$08.7 Humor. Quotations. Anecdotes 23-2685

A second book of jokes, quotations and stories supplementing the "Toasters' handbook." Like the earlier collection, the jokes are arranged by subjects, with cross-references.

"It contains up-to-date toasts to most things that can be toasted, and it is rich in anecdotes and pointed little stories which can be employed even without the toast accompaniments."

+ N Y World p7e F 11 '23 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 18 '23 20w

MOSZKOWSKI, ALEXANDER. Einstein, the searcher; tr. by Henry L. Brose. 246p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Einstein theory. Einstein, Albert 21-21782

The book, translated by Henry L. Brose, consists of social talks which the author had with Einstein. These talks reflect his thought and his personality and present the great scientist both objectively and subjectively. The author also intends to show that Einstein's genius extends much further than is generally surmised. The talks bear the headings: Phenomena in the heavens; Beyond our power; Valhalla; Education; The discoverer; Of different worlds; Problems; Highways and byways; An experimental analogy; Disconnected suggestions. There is a final paper on Einstein's life and personality and an index.

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '22 1200w
New Statesman 18:596 F 25 '22 180w
N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:9 Mr '22

Reviewed by B: Harrow
N Y Times p7 O 29 '22 1250w

"The book is most illuminating."
 + R of Rs 67:109 Ja '23 170w
St Louis 20:211 S '22

"Mr. Moszkowski has written a detailed account of the conversations he has had with [Einstein]; he dignifies them with the term dialogues, and on his side at any rate they appear to have been carefully prepared in advance. The design is to be the Boswell to a modern Johnson. The result is a superficial and gossiping account of Einstein's views on heterogeneous topics. The author sees to it that the reader shall never forget that in all this he is enjoying a privileged and intimate insight into the nature and personality of a hero."

— Sat R 132:617 N 26 '21 250w

"Out of this book, so obviously the product of minds more accustomed to express themselves in formulae than in sentences, the curious reader will find that he is gradually able to piece together some extremely interesting psychological facts. The comparison may seem fantastic, but we think those who have read to the end will agree that though it is arrived at from such a different side, there is something in the book which makes it from the psychological point of view rather like a Conrad novel."

Spec 128:752 Je 17 '22 650w

"Although, we do not think Herr Moszkowski another Boswell, those interested in Einstein will find much of value in this book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p151 Mr 9 '22 1050w

MOUNTSIEUR, ROBERT. Our eleven billion dollars: Europe's debt to the United States. 149p $1.50 Seltzer

336.4 Debts, Public. Europe — Economic conditions. European war—Finance 22-9502

The author's argument is that Europe's huge debt to the United States cannot be paid and that it would be disastrous to us if it were paid. Since the debt cannot be collected nor, under present conditions, cancelled, he believes that these billions "should stay in Europe and work for us" and that further American loans should be made. He urges the need of a world economic conference to be held in Washington and suggests the subjects which its agenda should cover. Twenty statistical tables of national debts, gold reserves, imports and exports, prices, etc. are given.

Am Pol Sci R 16:529 Ag '22 120w

Bookm 55:650 Ag '22 80w

"The first six chapters seem to be particularly valuable on account of their comprehensive compilations of financial and trade statistics for the United States and European countries. The bias and prejudice in regard to many foreign nations and leading statesmen is the most serious criticism to be made of this study."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '22 150w

"A very interesting and timely discussion of economic conditions."

+ Daily News Rec p17 S 26 '22 840w

Lit R p726 Je 10 '22 110w

"His familiarity, not only with the facts and figures contained in the official documents, but with information derived from personal sources, has enabled him to state succinctly those aspects of the subject that are of most importance to Americans at the present moment."

+ R of Rs 65:670 Je '22 70w

R of Rs 67:222 F '23 30w

Survey 48:413 Je 15 '22 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p749 N 16 '22 90w

MOWRER, EDGAR ANSEL. Immortal Italy 418p $3.50 Appleton

945 Italy—History. European war—Italy
 Italy—Social conditions 22-1025

"A book that is half a history of Italy since the formation of the United Kingdom in 1870 and half an American visitor's impressions of the Italian people. Much of the book is given to the late war and its aftermath in Fiume, labor troubles, and the fascists. The treatment, though reportorial and subjective, is fairly satisfactory for the lay reader. The author praises the personal liberty and sophisticated civilization of the Italians, but condemns their personal vanity and love of oratory. D'Annunzio is cited as a typical example of Italian energy, rhetorical display, and lack of common sense."—Springf'd Republican

"All told from a slightly radical standpoint but Mr. Mowrer's attempt to write history is not altogether a success."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:720 N '22 60w

Booklist 18:359 J1 '22

"An instructive and thoroughly readable history of Italy during the last half century, and a vivid if necessarily brief description of the Italy of today."

+ Bookm 56:229 O '22 160w

"While nowhere particularly profound (he does not pretend to be) Mr. Mowrer, as an observer, is discriminating and sympathetic. Above all, he is never dull, and never provincial. Mr. Mowrer not only knows Italy—he also feels Italy and the Italian spirit with a clearness and intensity that only intelligent love can bestow. E. S. Bagger

+ New Repub 33:102 D 20 '22 450w

"A concise and readable history. It is but natural that readers should desire to know the state of Italy today, and here is a book that in no long-winded manner clearly presents the make-up and mental outlook of Victor Emmanuel's country. The book is not precisely a Summer book, although it assuredly will no bore any intelligent Summer reader."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 25 '22 100w

"On the whole, Mr. Mowrer's volume is very readable and useful contribution to the understanding of the Italy that is in the making. It is a sympathetic and competent interpretation of the social and political life of a great state which is perhaps less understood than any of the modern members of the family of nations, and which merits much more ample recognition than it has yet been accorded. C. E. Merriam

+ Pol Sci Q 37:693 D '22 750w

R of Rs 66:110 J1 '22 100w

St Louis 20:215 N '22

"In the author's account of the history and character of the Italians, he follows the ordinary course of foreign visitors who attempt to sum up a nationality or a civilization in rapid-fire interpretation of his own experience and of sources readily available."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 240w

"This sort of thing recoils upon the head of the writer. It warns the judicious not to take too seriously an author who makes no attempt to write colourless history, but has lively powers of description and of expressing his own views."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p404 J 22 '22 1050w

MOXON, REGINALD STEWART. Doctrine of sin: a critical and historical investigation into views of the concept of sin held in early Christian, mediæval and modern times. 251p $3 Doran [10s 6d Allen & U.]

233.2 Sin

(Eng ed A22-1852)

"The author undertakes a full critical examination of the positions of Augustine and Pelagius. Pelagius, he believes, had often the better of Augustine. In the last chapter he outlines a constructive theory of sin based upon the new knowledge of psychology; and avows

MOXON, REGINALD STEWART—Continued
his belief that a reformation is now needed in Church teaching as deep and searching as that of the sixteenth century."—The Times [London] Lit Sup Ja 26 '22

"What will be appreciated most is the clear, concise and accurate sketch of the historical development of the doctrine of sin from New Testament times to the present. This volume is a valuable and timely contribution to the reconstruction of the Christian doctrine of sin." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 7 '22 1350w
Spec 128:245 F 25 '22 450w

The Times [London] Lit sup p63 Ja 26 '22 140w

"A fresh and attractive work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p134 Mr 2 '22 1050w

MOZANS, J. J. pseud. See Zahm, J. A.

MUFTY-ZADE K. ZIA, bey. See Zia, M.-Z. K.

MUIRHEAD, FINDLAY, and MONMARCHE, MARCEL, eds. Paris and its environs. 470p $4 (12s) Macmillan

914.436 Paris—Description 22-4197

"With the tide of European travel in full flow again, and with Baedeker still eliminated from the field so far as France is concerned, this new volume in the Blue guides series should find itself holding almost undisputed claim to the traveller's attention. The work represents the painstaking adaptation by Mr. Muirhead of the excellent material collected in the French Guide Bleu for 'Paris et ses Environs' to the uses of English-speaking travellers. The book contains a large number of maps and plans, and is of the standard guide-book size. The traveller looking up routes from London to Paris will be struck by the inclusion of the air services, a new development since the last edition of Baedeker's 'Paris' was issued. The volume covers the battle regions in the vicinity of Paris."—Lit R

Lit R p516 Mr 18 '22 160w

"It is nine years since the last Baedeker on Paris was issued and a comprehensive new guide is welcome. The editors have done their work well, but the maps do not quite reach the Baedeker standard of clarity and perfection."

+ Nation 114:698 Je 7 '22 140w

"If I were to essay the collection of guide-books, I should give an honorable place to this new series of Blue Guides." Brander Matthews

+ N Y Times p2 Je 11 '22 2050w

Spec 128:311 Mr 11 '22 90w

"As a whole, the work is excellently and carefully done. The best feature, perhaps, is the collection of maps. These are sixty in number, and of French manufacture. A glance at them will convince any American that in his own country map-making—apart from government cartography—is an undeveloped art."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 F 14 '22 130w

"The new 'Muirhead' is much better in many respects than was 'Baedeker.' It is more readable and better arranged, more portable and comprehensive, and at least as accurate. It misses perfection in certain respects, some of which can easily be altered in the next edition."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 5 '22 680w

MUMBY, FRANK ARTHUR. Fall of Mary Stuart; a narrative in contemporary letters. 368p ll $5 Houghton [18s Constable]

B or 92 Mary Stuart, queen of Scots, 1542-1587. Great Britain—History—Tudors, 1485-1603 (Eng ed 22-8825)

Mr Mumby continues the story of Mary Stuart begun in his "Queen Elizabeth and Mary Stuart." (Book Review Digest, 1914) The method is the same. By the selection of telling passages from contemporary letters which he links together with no more narrative than is needed to make a continuous story, he shows the tragic period of less than three years in Mary's life, from her marriage with Darnley to her fatal flight into England. She is thus shown as revealed in the private correspondence of her own contemporaries, men and women who were leading actors in the events of her times.

Bookm 55:312 My '22 50w

"Mr. Mumby has performed with unflinching skill and tact the difficult task to which he addressed himself. He has shown discrimination and fairness in the selection of the documents and letters to be presented, and the reader, whatever his personal judgment may be regarding the character of Mary, is given an impressive and unforgettable picture of one of the most tragic figures of Scottish history."

+ Cath World 115:826 S '22 370w

Cleveland p88 N '22

Eng Hist R 37:300 Ap '22 300w

"It is an ideal book for intelligent readers who want plain facts supported by reasonably authentic testimony. Besides, Mr. Mumby is not a partisan, and by the use of the pith of letters, he shows us some things, generally slurred, in a clear light." M. F. Egan

+ Freeman 5:618 S 6 '22 1600w

Reviewed by J. Drinkwater

Lit R p882 Ag 19 '22 1050w

New Statesman 18:456 Ja 21 '22 450w

"We here gain a more vivid view of Mary Stuart than has been possible from any formal biography."

+ Outlook 131:352 Je 21 '22 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:366 Jl '22

Pratt p34 winter '23

R of Rs 65:557 My '22 80w

"We have nothing but praise for a quite successful piece of work which we commend to every one interested in one of the most romantic figures in our history."

+ Sat R 132:744 D 31 '21 270w

"We owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Mumby for giving us his story in contemporary letters. These cannot fail to hold our interest, both as a curious study in psychology and as the record of a woman who, gravely suspected of treachery, murder and immorality, yet continues through the mere force of her beauty and charm to find hosts of valiant defenders, absolutely convinced that she was a maligned and injured victim of slanderous tongues."

+ Spec 127:825 D 17 '21 1950w

"Mr. Mumby is to be congratulated upon the skill with which he has used his opportunity. He has made the dramatic and tortuous story easily intelligible, supplementing his extracts by admirably constructed connecting paragraphs. Apart from its intrinsic interest, the book supplies an excellent illustration of the way in which a historical narrative can be built up from the raw materials on which it depends."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p763 N 24 '21 1000w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Story or utopias. 315p 2 $3 Boni & Liveright

321.07 Utopias 22-23191

Utopias, says the author, are men's reactions on their environment, their attempts to make reality over after a human pattern, and a forecast of what will some day be realized. There are utopias of escape and utopias of reconstruction. The book concerns itself with both, describing the classic examples of the former from Plato to H. G. Wells and dividing the latter into social myths—arising from idealized conceptions of the present order—and the partial utopias of social theorists. The last chapter gives a critical survey of our present day science and art, with suggestions for the humanization of both and for the foundations upon which a new utopia, or now rather entopia (the good place) may be built. The book has an illustrated introduction by Hendrik Willem Van Loon and a bibliography.

"A scholarly and thorough piece of work. Mr. Mumford makes the book surprisingly concrete for so abstract a subject, and the scope of his material gives it a social as well as literary significance."

+ Bookm 56:769 F '23 130w

Boston Transcript p4 F 7 '23 330w

"Mr. Mumford treats his subject not merely descriptively but critically, so that what might seem, from a brief catalogue of its contents, a mere summary or compilation of other men's work turns out to be a work of real reflection and originality." Alfred Zimmern

+ Lit R p397 Ja 20 '23 1250w

"These utopias which rise above the sea of man's discontent like lighthouses, from Plato to Walter Rathenau, are the greatest documents of history. They deserve a story of their own, and in Mr. Mumford they have found a chronicler with ideal qualifications, intelligent, sympathetic, highminded. . . . It is by his skillful writing that his readers are lured on, from what begins as a simple exposition which children would delight in, to sociological analysis of a searching character. The transition is so naturally made, the lucidity of style is so steadily sustained, that even untrained readers will persist to the end. Of no recent book is such earnest reading more heartily to be desired." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 33:73 D 13 '22 1650w

Reviewed by A. E. Palmer
N Y Times p11 D 24 '22 2300w

Reviewed by L. Galantière
N Y Tribune p25 Ja 28 '23 620w

Reviewed by J. M. Gaus
Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 28 '23 1200w

MUNBY, ALAN EDWARD. Laboratories; their planning and fittings: with an historical introd. by Sir Arthur E. Shipley. 239p il $6 Van Nostrand

542.1 Laboratories 22-5586

"Concerned only with pure science laboratories for general educational purposes. Deals specifically with the requirements of chemistry, physics, biology, and geology, considers general features of buildings and service, and includes many actual designs."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"The author has added a well worth while volume to this too little discussed subject. The reviewer wishes to express his appreciation of the sane, clear, and valuable discussions of many problems of laboratory design and equipment and to urge all those having the planning of laboratories to read the volume with care." R. H. McKee

+ J Ind and Engin Chem 14:345 Ap '22 160w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:276 Je '22

MUNSTERBERG, MARGARETE ANNA ADEL-HEID. Hugo Münsterberg: his life and work. 448p il $2.50 (18s) Appleton

B or 92 Münsterberg, Hugo 22-9499

"The book sets forth Münsterberg's salient achievements in psychology, capped by his occasional incursions into the field of philosophical thought: for the reader unversed in the science of mind, but alive to personality, it portrays the individual characteristics which give to all biographies a large part of their charm. And the story of Münsterberg's career, tragical as was to be its close, comes out in this recital of it, pervaded by something like romance. Beginning with a picture of his youth in Dantzic, it tells of one who, called to Cambridge from Germany at the age of thirty, had to master English after setting foot on American soil. . . . At Harvard, as scholar and teacher, his success was assured. It finds record in the account of his association and correspondence with men like James, Royce and

Palmer; it was further attested by the esteem of his immediate colleagues and by the attitude of his students."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 19:51 N '22

"Harvard's distinguished professor is here vividly delineated, alike as a man and as a contributor to the science which absorbed the larger part of his working life." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '22 1400w

Cleveland p88 N '22

"Those who esteemed Professor Münsterberg to the end will thank the writer for her work. Others, and there are so many of them, will declare it all out of perspective, giving no idea whatever of Münsterberg's real relation both to Harvard and to America in the latter part of his life. There is, of course, much information about Münsterberg's life and writings." W. T. Bush

+ J Philos 19:642 N 9 '22 220w

"This book is less the story of a great philosopher's problems and work than the documentation of his recognition and triumphs. It is enriched, however, by the fact that the recognition came from some of the greatest men of our generation, whose letters, sympathetic, encouraging, and admiring, show both the extent of Professor Münsterberg's influence on his contemporaries and their frank generosity."

+ Lit R p778 J1 1 '22 250w

"Margaret Münsterberg's already attested skill as a writer, her familiarity with the problems of philosophy and psychology nurtured through close intellectual comradeship with her father, and, more than all, the inspiration of devoted dedication to her father's memory, have combined to produce Münsterberg's definitive biography." R: M. Elliott

+ Nation 115:551 N 22 '22 1300w

"Margarete Münsterberg's book shows an intimate knowledge of her father's daily life, a sympathetic understanding of his nature, and a wide reading of his works. Münsterberg's contemporaries, however, will not allow to pass unchallenged her estimate of her father's scientific attainments and position in American psychology." J: E. Watson

+ New Repub 32:51 S 6 '22 1400w

"His daughter has written a worthy biography, setting forth his career without exaggeration, and depicting his character with affectionate devotion." N. H. Dole

+ N Y Times p7 Je 11 '22 1700w

Pratt p33 autumn '22

Springf'd Republican p6 D 25 '22 420w

"Of the inner life of Hugo Münsterberg it tells us practically nothing. The self-revealing letters to intimate friends, which in some biographies show us so much of the living man, are here wholly wanting. There are, indeed, a few self-revealing letters included in the volume, but they are not letters written by Hugo Münsterberg; they are letters written to Münsterberg by William James. They are, perhaps, the most interesting, and certainly the most charming, thing in the book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 15 '22 1900w

MURRAY, GILBERT. Tradition and progress (Eng title, Essays and addresses). 221p $3 Houghton [10s 6d Allen & U.]

824

22-26327

The first paper is the author's confession of faith, the attempt of a Greek scholar to interpret the true business of the man of letters, or "grammaticus." The next three essays deal more or less directly with Greek subjects, or rather with the light thrown by particular phases of Greek experience upon modern problems of society and conduct and literature. After these essays the connection with Greece becomes slighter till by the end of the book the author is dealing directly with modern questions. Most of the papers are recent and were given originally as lectures or addresses. Contents: Religio grammatici: the religion of a "man of letters"; Aristophanes and the war party; The Bacchae of Euripides; The Stoic philosophy; Poesis and mimesis; Literature as revelation; The soul as it is and how to deal with it; National ideals; conscious and unconscious; Orbis terrestris; Satanism and the world order.

MURRAY, GILBERT—Continued

Cath World 116:564 Ja '23 600w

Dial 73:355 S '22 190w

Reviewed by Temple Scott

Freeman 5:476 Jl 26 '22 1550w

"The title of Professor Murray's last book is too broadly inclusive to quite justify its table of contents. But on every page there is an observation or a passage of interpretative comparison between Greek thoughts and our own deductions about life and conduct which shows us how supremely wise were the Greeks in their choice of what was good and what was evil." T: S. Bosworth

Lit R p582 Ap 15 '22 800w

New Statesman 18:454 Ja 21 '22 750w

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne

N Y Times p3 F 26 '22 2900w

"No one with more acute discrimination, or with livelier appreciation of life as well as of letters, has described the working of literature through its twin processes of mimesis and poesis—its creative, reality-producing function. None has more successfully increased our wisdom and sympathy by showing the essential likeness between our sense of life and that of the ancient Greeks, between the Peloponnesian War and the World War. And finally there is hardly another in our time who has maintained with so much firmness and moderation, and with so little dogmatism, the worth and potency of the individual human soul in its lonely stand against apparent wrong and injustice."

+ No Am 215:716 My '22 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:26 Ja '23

Pratt p27 autumn '22

"Thanks to his freshness, his happy gift of illustration, and his style, he is a master of persuasive prose."

+ — Sat R 132:714 D 24 '21 800w

Spec 128:146 F 4 '22 800w

Survey 48:24 Ap 1 '22 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p785 D 1 '21 2100w

MURRAY, MARGARET ALICE. Witch-cult in western Europe; a study in anthropology. 304p $5.65 Oxford [16s Milford]

133.4 Witchcraft A22-394

"An informing scientific survey of witch-cult in Great Britain. Chapters are devoted to God, admission ceremonies, assemblies, rites, organization, and witch transformation. Five appendices contain considerable source material. One bears on Joan of Arc. There is an extensive bibliography and a good index."—J Religion

"The careful general histories by modern scholars are as unknown to her. A few of the earlier skeptics she names, but in phrases that suggest a scant acquaintance. . . Even in the works which she has used she has 'omitted the opinions of the authors' and has 'examined only the recorded evidence.' If this were to insure an unbiased impression and to test by her own criticism before listening to others, it might well be commended; but in her book criticism is as absent as the knowledge of any. To her every confession is true, all the accused guilty, and whether convicted or acquitted." G: L. Burr

— Am Hist R 27:780 Jl '22 1700w

"The treatise is possibly a pioneer in its re-exploration of a much studied subject. Many phases of it may suggest further consideration and question. It may interest the general reader, but the general reader will find it mighty hard reading."

+ — Boston Transcript p 8 F 11 '22 1050w

"Her book is a monument of compressed information, sound scholarship, and solid learning. It is more than this. She never loses herself in details, nor forgets in following out its ramifications the main object of her work. There is nothing of the kind, so far as we know, in English on the study of the ideas of the distant past; and the work has been so thoroughly carried out that it is not likely to be superseded. It is, indeed, pleasant to meet with a piece of work so comprehensive in scope, and so rich and varied in its treatment." R. H. Murray

+ Eng Hist R 37:276 Ap '22 1000w

J Religion 2:220 Mr '22 40w

"Her book is written with such charm that it almost sweeps the reader into acceptance of its position, but it is probable that few students of the same subject will be found to agree with her. Some of her most daring suggestions are perfectly unconvincing." Preserved Smith

+ — Nation 114:194 F 15 '22 720w

Nature 109:572 My 6 '22 780w

"Miss Murray is to be congratulated on having produced a fascinating guide to the practices of witchcraft. Her book should be invaluable to romantic novelists." Robert Lynd

+ New Statesman 19:611 S 9 '22 1850w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

N Y Times p13 Mr 5 '22 1950w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:536 D '22

St Louis 21:3 Ja '23

The Times [London] Lit Sup p762 N 24 '21 1600w

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON. Problem of style. 148p $2.20 (6s 6d) Oxford

808 Style, Literary 22-17044

"The book professes to be about 'Style,' but it is really an exposition of the process of literary creation. 'Style' is a name given to a certain aspect of the product, and a definition he gives on page 15 is that 'a true style is a completely adequate expression in language of a writer's mode of feeling.' Most of the rest of the book is concerned to give this definition a meaning. It is in his examples that Mr. Murry illuminates his theory and convinces his reader. The theory isolated from the facts it was invented to explain, is perhaps difficultly intelligible. That is because his ultimate terms are not logical constructions, but facts of perception."—Nation and Ath

"The discussion of style as Mr. Murry spreads it over the pages of this volume has and will arouse much criticism, especially in these days when the question of style is regarded by so many writers as of little importance. Yet Mr. Murry goes very deep into the fundamental elements of expression which make the forms through which literature embodies the infinite variety and complexities of human experience." W. S. B.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '22 850w

"Mr. Murry's book is one of the most illuminating critical discussions of literature that have been written since Matthew Arnold. It is fully comparable, for the present reviewer, at any rate, with Arnold's 'Essays in Criticism' in its helpfulness; that is, in its power to subtilize the reader's perceptions, to refine his sensibility. . . Demands are made upon the reader. He must be able to see the things Mr. Murry is pointing at; and if he can see them he will find that Mr. Murry helps him to see them better, that is, gives him a keener sight of the objects in themselves, and a much better idea of their relations to one another." J. W. N. S.

+ Nation and Ath 31:92 Ap 15 '22 1200w

"You often forget, happily, that he is writing on style at all. He can be hearty, and semi-humorous. He splits particles quite gallantly, and he will favor you, now and again, with a dislocatory parenthesis. But he is straight after his matter, and you will follow eagerly the details of a book that is well thought out and well-built." H: B. Fuller

+ New Repub 31:221 Jl 19 '22 1400w

"These six lectures (they were given at Oxford a year ago) make a delightful and highly readable book." S. P. W.

+ New Statesman 19:213 My 27 '22 1300w

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p5 N 12 '22 2800w

Pratt p25 autumn '22

"Mr. Middleton Murry has written a little book in which a great many things are said, some of them just, others not so sound, about the structure of literary expression, but which, at the end, leaves us very much where we stood before. Mr. Murry has enjoyed talking about literary form, in which he takes a great interest, and has made a number of quotations, some of them apposite, in illustration of what his own tastes happen to be, but he has provided us with no new key to what he calls the problem of style."

+ Sat R 133:342 Ap 1 '22 840w

"The conclusion that he finally reaches about style is a new and an interesting one. A 'good style' really springs from refined and tenacious sense perceptions. He illustrates this view by quotations from both ancient and modern writers—from Shakespeare to Miss Katherine Mansfield." A. Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 128:471 Ap 15 '22 1000w

"This little book is alive with clear thinking and fine insight and does not leave the matter where it was. Mr. Murry is a poet and novelist as well as a critic. He is thus equipped for sharing the craft and vision of the artist. A critical grasp has maintained his sense of values, and he clears up the equivocal meanings of his subject with more tenacity than critics often show but perhaps the chief contribution of the book is its singularly consistent effort to see the problem as the artist does."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p265 Ap 27 '22 3950w

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON. Still life. 464p $2.50 Dutton

"'Introspection' would be a good title, and so would 'Indecision.' Both are dominant traits in Maurice Temple's character. He is forever examining himself and trying to make up his mind what to do with his life. He wants to write, but he can never decide what to write about. He carries letters about for weeks without opening them, because he fears that the contents will be disagreeable. He thinks he loves Anne Cradock, and then he thinks he doesn't. He wants to do the decent thing by Madeleine, his first love, but cannot bring himself to make the necessary sacrifice. He follows his impulses just far enough to make himself and others unhappy, but not far enough to bring about a permanent readjustment which might lead to comparative peace of mind for all concerned."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke

Dial 73:671 D '22 1100w

"As a piece of fiction, it is several degrees more serious than successful, for with all Mr. Murry's probing he does not get close enough to the human heart to interpret it with the clarity which the art of fiction demands. There is something a little strained, even in his most intimate scenes; and his people do not come to life under his pen except in an unnatural fashion." L. B.

+ Freeman 6:478 Ja 24 '23 220w

"As a study in the unconscious, a study of half-hidden motives, a study of groping souls, 'Still Life' deserves attention; as a novel in which countless component parts are exquisite bits of writing it is highly commendable. But subjection of whole to the part—a basis of excellence in decadent art—presupposes at least some excellence in the whole as such; in this Mr. Murry has failed." Kenneth Fuessle

+ Lit R p292 D 9 '22 720w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 32:254 N 1 '22 700w

"It is difficult to understand just why 'Still Life' should have been chosen as the title. It would have been so easy to find a better one. 'Miserable Sinners' would have been aptly descriptive of the leading characters in the book, for an unhappier lot of mortals has probably never been gathered together outside the pages of a Russian novel. They fairly revel in wretchedness, and it is all of their own making. They think and talk so much about themselves, their emotions and their beliefs, that they never make up their minds about anything. They just let things happen and then vaguely wish they hadn't."

+ N Y Times p24 S 17 '22 350w

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON. Things we are. 320p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Constable]

(Eng ed 22-14821)

A highly imaginative story, all thought and emotion and subtle analysis, of a sensitive, thwarted young man afflicted with a strong mother-complex. His mother's death has the effect of withdrawing Boston more and more within himself till he becomes unable to establish any connection with the life and people around him. By some miracle of sympathy and understanding a kindly young journalist, Bettington, is able to make a contact with Boston and with the help of his friend Felicia to set free his imprisoned spirit. They are unconsciously aided in the good work by a kindly and human landlord and his wife on whose inn Boston happens by chance, and where he is later joined by Bettington and Felicia. The situation involves Bettington's unselfish renunciation of Felicia to his friend, and this is inevitable since the two seem from the beginning to belong to each other.

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke

Dial 73:671 D '22 1100w

"Admirably written the book is, in point of style, and whether or not you care about its people and its action, you have to grant it the merit of being 'something different.'" H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:312 N 25 '22 460w

Reviewed by E. T. Booth

Lit R p292 D 9 '22 1150w

"The atmosphere is highly original, and the subtlety of the analysis is backed at every point by skilful concrete touches. The novel is a worthy successor to the author's little-known 'Still Life.'"

+ Nation and Ath 31:198 My 6 '22 600w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 32:254 N 1 '22 700w

"It has an interesting theme with some moments of beauty. . . It has its quality, its occasional triumphs of observation and feeling and humour. But the substance of the book is without resemblance to the substance of Mr. Murry's criticisms. It is certainly not lucid." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 19:326 Je 24 '22 900w

"Mr. Murry's voice as he tells his story is clear and cool. He speaks sometimes like a philosopher, sometimes like a poet, and always with a mixture of admiring pleasure and gentle cynicism for his characters, whose resemblance to each other is cause rather for gratitude than complaint, because they reflect Mr. Murry's own charms—his delicate curiosity, his inspection of motives, his picturesque sense of humor." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 5 '22 1050w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"Mr. Middleton Murry, already a serious force as a critic and not without his points as a poet, has with this book definitely established his reputation as a novelist. We have not the slightest hesitation in commending it to the attention of everyone interested in the novel, both on account of its excellence of technique and of its interest as a study of character."

+ Sat R 133:397 Ap 15 '22 420w

"The book is not without faults. There are one or two curious lapses from its high level of delicate perception. Then the pitch of the book has not been quite maintained; we feel that the novel was begun with the intention of writing a comparatively slight study, but that suddenly in the middle the theme had gripped the author and he had poured his heart into it. In effect this a little tends to break the book in half. But in spite of these small blemishes the book remains a remarkable, ambitious, and distinguished piece of work."

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON—Continued

+ Spec 128:564 My 6 '22 1050w

"Would 'Things We are,' by a Herman Humphrey, be distinguishable from some of the other pallid English novels now being produced? It isn't that Mr Murry's novel does not spring from his own reflection on life, but that his philosophy has in it so little that is different that the work is blood kin, if so vivid a word can be applied, to its spasmodic, pale contemporaries."

— Spring'd Republican p5a D 10 '22 700w

MYERS, ARTHUR WALLIS. Twenty years of lawn tennis; some personal memories. 180p $3.50 Doran [10s 6d Methuen]

796 Tennis (Eng ed 21-15272)

The purpose of the book is to give the author's impressions of tennis clubs, courts, tournaments and players, in England and abroad, that have come within his ken during his connection with the sport. The first three chapters are devoted to Wimbledon and other British courts and the other chapters are: Places and players on the continent; Riviera recollections; Through South Africa; America and American invaders; Davis Cup matches; Under cover; The lesson of Mlle Lenglen; Index.

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce

Lit R p703 Je 3 '22 660w

New Statesman 17:364 J1 2 '21 600w

Spec 127:472 O 8 '21 20w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p368 Je 9 '21 200w

MYERS, HARRIET WILLIAMS. Western birds. 2 391 il $4 Macmillan

598.2 Birds 22-21243

The work deals with the song birds of the states bordering the western coast and, to a lesser degree, the interior western states. The author supplements her first-hand knowledge, gained by careful observation of bird life, with gleanings from the best authorities both east and west. Index.

"As a working handbook, this book has much to recommend it in the matter of style and clarity."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '22 160w

N

N. N., pseud. See Pennell, E.

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Critic and the drama. 152p $1.75 Knopf

792 Drama. Theater. Dramatic criticism 22-2060

The author, dramatic critic and editor (with H. L. Mencken) of the Smart Set, considers in these six essays the various theories and standards of criticism, the place of the theater and of acting in relation to drama, drama as an art, and American dramatic criticism.

Booklist 18:182 Mr '22

"The Critic and the Drama' seems to me a far poorer study of criticism than Mr. Nathan is himself a critic. It is, nevertheless, a book that interest in the theatre prompts one to read, and to read thoroughly." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:64 Mr '22 500w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 3 '22 850w

Cleveland p37 My '22

St Louis 20:272 N '22

Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 9 '22 290w

"The book is about as flashy, as assured, and as inconsequential as it well could be, a series of negations, inconsistencies, epigrammatic falsehoods or half-truths."

— Theatre Arts M 6:348 O '22 320w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Youth grows old. 54p $1.50 McBride

811 22-7771

The wistful note of the title is heard throughout this collection of short, strictly subjective lyrics. They are a running commentary on the passing of the years.

"The tiny verses suffer from their very quietness of tone; they are pitched in too low a key to attain any particular lyric heights." L. Untermeyer

+ Bookm 55:635 Ag '22 400w

"The beauty of Mr. Nathan's book is indisputable." W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 10 '22 1100w

Dial 74:105 Ja '23 70w

"These are fragile, delicate poems, true as poetry is true. There is in them quiet sadness, the unrelieved grief of life which has no touch of irony or thought." L. T. Nicholl

+ Lit R p668 My 20 '22 240w

"'Youth Grows Old' is a volume to which the adjective delightful is advisedly applicable. Never was sorrow paraded so seductively. In verse, Mr. Nathan is a sweet singer, a conscientious craftsman who knows how to weave words into fair patterns, an economist as he is in prose. Because 'Youth Grows Old' is not a great book, because it is gentle, fragile, and graceful, it is a book to cherish." B. R. Redman

+ Nation 114:624 My 24 '22 660w

"Evanescence is his theme and he treats it sweetly, for there is an easy grace to his verse which lends it a real charm. The book is charming, but with the blurred melody of an echo, not the clearness of a new song." R. S.

+ New Repub 32:226 O 25 '22 200w

"Mr. Nathan, who will be remembered as the author of that delicately conceived novel, 'Autumn,' plays on minor keys for the most part. His book is one of impalpable charm throughout, however, and reading it gives one the impression of sitting in a twilight-colored room and listening rather sadly to the plaintive notes of a spinet."

+ N Y Times p19 My 14 '22 270w

"Should not disappoint those who have already become attached to this delightful author through the pages of his novel 'Autumn.' The present volume possesses like qualities of delicacy and restraint; its speech is quiet and almost casual; it blows no trumpets—least of all its own—but in a moment when poets are thumping kettle-drums or splashing signboards or dissecting corpses it is refreshing to find one who is veritably engaged in writing poetry." Elinor Wylie

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 10 '22 720w

Pratt p27 winter '23

NATIONAL BUREAU OF ECONOMIC RESEARCH, INC. Income in the United States; its amount and distribution, 1909-1919; v 1. Summary, by Wesley Clair Mitchell and others. 152p $1.25 Harcourt

336.73 Finance—United States. Wealth. Distribution of. Income

The book is a brief popular summary of an exhaustive statistical analysis of the income of the United States for each year from 1909 to 1919 inclusive, made under the auspices of the National bureau of economic research. The questions answered are: What is the aggregate income of the American people? How much does that income vary from year to year? What part of the changes is due to fluctuations in prices and in production? How is the aggregate income divided among individuals?

What proportion goes to wage-earners and salaried employees? How does the per capita income in the United States compare with that in other countries? There are thirty-one charts and twenty-nine tables.

NATIONAL CHILD LABOR COMMITTEE.
Rural child welfare. 355p il $3 (14s) Macmillan

362.7 Child welfare. Country life. West Virginia—Social conditions 22-5434

The book is the result of an inquiry by the National child labor committee, based upon conditions in West Virginia and under the direction of Edward N. Clopper, with photographs by Lewis W. Hine. In his introductory chapter Mr. Clopper points out that the rural child is not getting a square deal, is often suffering from poor housing conditions, a lack of the simplest sanitary devices and precautions, an excess of labor and an absence of play. The object of the book is to point out the needs of rural children and to indicate the findings of the investigators. Contents: The rural home, by Charles E. Gibbons; Child labor on farms, by Walter W. Armentrout; Rural school attendance, by Gertrude H. Folks; Rural recreation, by Raymond G. Fuller; Rural child dependency, neglect and delinquency, by Sara A. Brown; Taxation and the child, by Hettie L. Hazlett; The child and the state, by W. H. Swift; Appendix; Index.

"The book is filled with much useful illustrative material and makes excellent summaries as well as recommendations for constructive work. The survey should be valuable not only to West Virginia, but to other American states as well, in that conditions presented in the book are without doubt very similar to those that may be found in other parts of the country." G: B. Mangold

+ Am Econ R 12:526 S '22 290w

Reviewed by G: B. Mangold

Am J Soc 28:362 N '22 250w

"To scientific students, the study stands out as a model in its combination of painstaking inquiry, of exact thoroughness, of manifest fairness and of deep sympathy. To well-intentioned people who are anxious to promote child welfare, but who are ignorant of the facts and of their proper determination, it is a revelation." J. H. S. Bossard

Ann Am Acad 104:177 N '22 640w

Cleveland p73 S '22

Lit R p854 Ag 5 '22 140w

"The scientific spirit of exact thoroughness which animates the book will be a tonic revelation to hazy-minded people of good intentions, who cannot fail to profit by such an example of how to investigate a situation intelligently before attempting to cope with it, of how to state your problem clearly, coherently and completely before trying to solve it. . . . No chapter of this very useful book will be more useful than the one on Rural Recreation. The country-dwelling citizens and local and state officials who, it is to be hoped, will read this report, will find perhaps more new food for thought in that chapter and in the suggestions about play, than in any other part of this reasonable, practical, intelligent and humane volume." D. C. Fisher

+ New Repub 31:116 Je 21 '22 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:329 Jl '22

"The governing principles by which childhood is to be bettered and its opportunities enriched are clearly stated and abundantly illustrated."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 9 '22 200w

"The National Child Labor Committee has done a bit of long needed investigation in the cause of children on the farms. Seven men and women have made this scientific study of the relations of the rural child to his home, school, community and state, and provided excellent and reliable material for practical purposes; presenting it, at the same time, in such form that a sympathetic picture is readily created by the reader." Ruth Metzger

+ Survey 48:83 Ap 15 '22 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Jl 6 '22 170w

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES. LIBRARY DEPARTMENT. Graded list of books for children; prepared by the elementary school library committee. 235p $1.25 A.L.A.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography

22-15918

A general list of some 850 children's books for home reading. The list is in three sections. Section A, picture books and easy reading books for children in grades one, two and three; Section B, books for grades four to six; Section C, books for grades seven to nine. Publisher, price and descriptive note are given for each title, and, in order to place each book more accurately, all the grades in which it may be used are designated after the individual entry. A list of sixty reference books is added, as well as an out of print list and a directory of publishers. Title index and subject index are also provided.

Booklist 19:5 O '22

Cleveland p96 D '22

El School J 23:237 N '22 450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:535 D '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:213 O '22

NEILL, ALEXANDER SUTHERLAND. Domine in doubt. 256p $1.75 McBride

371 Education of children 23-201

In the present volume the author of "A domine's log" gives the impression of having advanced his views on child-training under the guidance of analytical psychology. The book consists of nonchalant talks with teachers and others on school discipline and the treatment of children; of talks with children for the purpose of discovering their complexes, and of reflections on psychoanalysis and infantile outcroppings of repressed emotions.

"Some of the ideas it embodies are to be found elsewhere, but even when lacking in originality they are valuable for the succinctness and definiteness of their presentation. The book will not only make entertaining reading but will provide much useful information to one seeking a foothold in the elements of psychology."

+ Bookm 56:103 S '22 110w

"His ideas of education are marvellously and humorously set forth and they seem good. Possibly pedagogues and the like will rail at Mr. Neill; he has knocked their idols about with a careless hand, he has made faces at their most cherished beliefs, chipped the noses off dignified and age-old prejudices, defied church, State and the devil, and done it well. His very brilliance disarms criticism."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 31 '22 420w

"Like its predecessors, it is a readable mixture of anecdote and autobiography, theories of education and comments on current affairs, all very fresh-spirited and outspoken, the fire-side talk of a man who is not afraid to make mistakes or to own to them."

+ Lit R p724 Je 10 '22 170w

NEVINS, ALLAN. Evening post; a century of journalism. 590p il $5 Boni & Liveright

071 Evening post, New York 22-22717

"Despite the limited circulation imposed by its quality, the 'Evening Post' has for more than a century of our National history been an influential factor in making that history; and the story of its career and influence is here told in a way that is highly interesting. Alexander Hamilton, William Cullen Bryant, John Bigelow and E. L.

NEVINS, ALLAN—Continued

Godkin, as chiefs of the 'Post' made it one of the world's great newspapers and set standards that are loyally followed by its present editors."
—Outlook

"His book sheds significant light upon national history in general and New York history in particular." J. M. Lee

+ Bookm 56:631 Ja '23 360w

"Mr. Nevins has grappled well with this task and, considering the limitations of space, has produced an excellent book so far as the period from 1801 to 1901 is concerned. He would be, of course, the first to disclaim any idea that his book is altogether inclusive. It necessarily omits some extremely interesting incidents in the paper's history or is compelled to condense them severely. But he has not only painted some excellent portraits of the Evening Post's worthies; he has added much to the history of what has been a great American institution, which means to the history of this country." O. G. Villard

+ — Lit R p241 N 25 '22 2300w

"Mr. Nevins has made his treatment selective. It is a mingling of history and biography and contemporary opinion which serves to set off and explain the long and honorable tradition of The New York Evening Post."

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 14 '23 420w

"The book is by no means merely a friendly eulogium of a newspaper by one of its editorial staff; it is an independent, virile study and review. Every newspaper man, every thoughtful newspaper reader, would be the better and wiser for becoming familiar with the contents of this book."

+ Outlook 132:674 D 13 '22 190w

St Louis 21:3 Ja '23

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

Spec 130:101 Ja '23 1700w

"Mr. Nevins writes with a fair eye for what is picturesque in the personalities prominent in the paper's existence and for what is significant in the events and developments of nation and city which inevitably form the background of a newspaper's history. Moreover while the work is not deeply analytical, he reveals the fundamental understanding of journalistic principles essential to the proper appraisal of a paper like the Evening Post which has exerted its influence on the public more through intellectual authority than as a medium of miscellaneous news and 'features.' The book is reasonably popular in tone, discerning and balanced."

+ Springfield Republican p7a D 3 '22 1250w

"So careful and full is his narrative that it amounts to more than the story of a Century of Journalism: it is a commentary, full of interesting sidelights, on American life during that long period."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p796 D 7 '22 1350w

NEW Decameron; third volume. 231p $2 Brentano's [7s 6d Blackwell]

This is the third volume in a collection of temperamental tales by English writers. The stories are by Compton Mackenzie, J. D. Beresford, Desmond Coke, Michael Sadleir, Norman Davey, Storm Jameson, Robert Keable, V. Sackville-West and Bill Nobbs.

"The stories are better individually than the scheme by which they are combined, but not of the first class." Glenway Westcott

+ — Lit R p431 F 3 '23 600w

Reviewed by Rebecca West

New Statesman 19:326 Je 21 '22 420w

"The tales are of great variety, stark tragedy, cynical comedy, mocking irony, audacious whimsy, all entering into the theme of one or another. . . They are, for the most part, sketches rather than stories, and one guesses that into the book went some of the discards that several of the authors had not been able to dispose of elsewhere."

+ — N Y Times p8 D 3 '22 600w

"They are both better and worse than the average short story turned out in America; better at best and a good deal worse at their worst. Every one has a freshness and zest too often lacking in our short fiction; not one attains to the average American level in point of sheer construction, of form." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p25 D 10 '22 780w

"The collaboration of so many accomplished writers should have had better results than this."

+ — Sat R 133:660 Je 21 '22 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p379 Je 8 '22 900w

NEWBIGIN, MARION ISABEL. Frequented ways. 321p il $3.50 Houghton [15s Constable]

914 Physical geography—Europe. Europe—Description and travel 22-26889

A general survey of the land forms, climates and vegetation of western Europe, considered in their relation to the life of man, including a detailed study of some typical regions. The method is to consider generally the structure of Europe, with special reference to those features which influence the great travel routes, and which can thus be most easily observed by the tourist. The chief types of climate found are summarized and the plants of western Europe described in detail, especially as reflections of the local soil and climate. The question of the relation of cultivated plants to interesting human problems is studied. Finally a few type regions are considered and to these the new methods of geographical investigation are applied. The book is intended not for the geographer in a technical sense but for all who are interested in their surroundings. The references are not limited to books in the English language. Index.

Booklist 19:41 N '22

"A remarkably interesting book."

+ Bookm 56:514 D '22 60w

Reviewed by E. Yeomans

Lit R p291 D 9 '22 780w

Reviewed by G. A. J. Cole

Nature 110:399 N 4 '22 900w

"A chatty and intelligible book of physical science, which will explain many of the conventional touring routes and give the traveller some notion of the supernational scheme of the varied Continent of Europe."

+ New Statesman 19:644 S 16 '22 210w

Reviewed by I. Anderson

N Y Times p10 O 29 '22 300w

Pratt p29 winter '23

"The sureness in arranging this huge mass of material, the gathering of which is alone a noble life's work, has resulted in a picture before which the most frivolous of mortals would pause. Certainly Dr. Newbigin has added another corner-stone to modern philosophy, the philosophy that purposes to show man in true perspective with the rest of life's infinite adaptations of form."

+ Spec 129:213 Ag 12 '22 750w

"Let us first be rid of our grumbles. They concern the author's superiority and style—the unwelcome flavourings of an excellent dish. When we add that this pomposity is sometimes diversified by a distressing archness, it will be readily understood that it is a conquest of matter over mind that has enabled us to read and emphatically to praise Dr. Newbigin's book. The subject is delightful, and Dr. Newbigin's knowledge is abounding."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p485 J1 27 '22 1350w

NEWBOLT, SIR HENRY JOHN. Book of the Grenvilles. 263p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans (Eng ed 21-17580)

True tales of famous Grenvilles and Grenfells related in a continuous narrative and showing how family character is a genuine permanent force which goes on operating in the same manner thru one generation after another. We meet Sir Richard Grenville of the Revenge, Sir Theobald who quarreled with the bishop of Exeter, two famous Grenvilles of the time of Charles I. and the four Grenfells—Francis, Riversdale, Julian and William—who served and fell in the Great war.

"The book is as good as we have a right to expect from the author of 'Admirals All' and should please all boys, old and young."

+ Lit R p265 D 10 '21 240w

"The author has devised an ingenious framework for these stories. Two schoolboys and their undergraduate brother are set by their host 'upon a certain trail of thought' and silently encouraged to have 'a dip into the past' on the theory that the past and its people are to be seen outside Space and Time if one can only get there. Sir Henry Newbolt contrives to make this psychical setting plausible without distracting attention from the stories, which in themselves are excellent."

Spec 127:676 N 19 '21 220w

"The book is unusually well written for a boys' book—which is not to be wondered at. It perhaps is not so full of quick-moving adventure as many to which we are accustomed, but has more bottom."

+ Springfield Republican p13a Ja 15 '22 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p700 O 27 '21 20w

"These are no haphazard journeys outside time. In each the traveller finds himself with some Grenville of the past. It is at once a book of adventures in time and a historical study of a great English family."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p823 D 8 '21 600w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Preaching in London. 140p $1.50 Doran [6s Allen & U.]

B or 92 London—Social conditions 22-8151

"Dr. Newton, who is now minister at the Church of the Divine Fraternity, New York, gives in this book a diary which he kept while minister at the City Temple in London during the three years and a half which ended in November, 1919. The City Temple ministry was not intended to be permanent, but was undertaken as a kind of unofficial ambassadorship of good will from the churches of America to the churches of Britain, and as an adventure in Anglo-American friendship. Its chief value, however, lies in its marvellous revelation of the British spirit and in its pen sketches of noted personages in current British history, that of Lloyd George being especially pertinent and discriminating."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 19:18 O '22

"Some parts of the book read like a beautiful prose poem, and nearly all of it is entertaining in a high degree."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '22 160w

"Dr. Newton's writing is the writing of a facile modern preacher drawing upon the obvious literary sources, the trick of which leads him at times into the most shocking sort of bathos."

— Nation and Ath 31:76 Ag 26 '22 580w

Spec 109:150 JI 29 '22 410w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p479 JI 20 '22 100w

NEWTON, WILFRID DOUGLAS. Double crossed. 294p il $1.75 (7s 6d) Appleton

22-5459

Heloise Reys, a pretty young heiress, is determined to go to Canada to marry the ne'er-do-well Henry Gunning in answer to his supposed call and thru memory of girlish love for him. Clement Seadon, sailing by the same boat, is astonished by the breathless entreaties of a little man who rushes into his cabin and implores him to watch over Heloise, who, he feels sure, is the victim of a gang of villains which is planning to use her for their own ends when once she is in the Canadian wilds. Seadon learns that the excited little man is the girl's lawyer, so he decides to do all he can to protect her. Very suspicious things happen even on the journey, and when they reach Canada events are indeed exciting. Heloise's traveling companion, Méduse Smith, is one of the chief conspirators but Seadon manages to save Heloise from the snares laid for her, and the story closes with their marriage.

"It is written carefully and directly, it makes no weary halts, but keeps moving at galloping pace throughout, until the reader readily forgets the impossibility of the whole thing and mentally joins in ardent chase of the notorious Mr. Neuburg and his pals and playmates."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 12 '22 170w

"A rapid-fire story with interest early excited and well sustained."

+ Lit R p609 Ap 22 '22 70w

"An excellently written and handled tale of adventure. Mr. Newton is one of those writers who know their recipes well."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 30 '22 80w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p294 My 4 '22 80w

NEXO, MARTIN ANDERSEN. Ditte: towards the stars; tr. by Asta and Rowland Kenney. 268p $2 Holt [7s 6d Heinemann]

22-20733

The third of the Ditte trilogy. Ditte is now all alone and penniless, about to become a mother, and with two orphan children, that have been foisted upon her, to care for. The story is a long account of excessive privation and toil beyond human strength, during which, however, Ditte's kindness towards others never flags. She takes to her heart the most abandoned wretch, and sacrifices herself for her foster children as for her own baby. Little Peter, the oldest of the children, wise beyond his years in sympathetic insight, in turn sacrifices himself for Mother Ditte. When he is killed while picking up coal on the railroad track, Ditte's exhausted constitution breaks and she dies. Exquisite touches of human tenderness relieve the horror of the tale.

Booklist 19:87 D '22

"A sense of wonder is seldom absent when we are reading these three books of Ditte's life. There is no strangeness in beauty being begotten from beauty. We expect like to beget like. But that loveliness should come from unloveliness makes us marvel. Yet there is almost nothing of beauty or softness or kindness in all the surroundings of Ditte's life from childhood on." D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p7 N 29 '22 1000w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:389 D 23 '22 550w

"Nexo is no stylist. But in the course of time, while producing one big piece of work after another, he has developed an instrument that serves his purposes with the exactness of a highly perfected scientific mechanism. And out of the colloquial language of the streets and the slums he has wrought a style that in its good-humored incisiveness ranks with the musical modulation of a Jacobsen or the architectural impressiveness of a Pontoppidan. This style, unfortunately, is lost in the translation which, I fear, must be put down as outright bad, although free at least from dishonesty." Edwin Bjorkman

+ — Lit R p287 D 9 '22 1000w

"Sociology runs only as an undercurrent, and it is the magnificent humanity of Ditte which gives dignity to the work. Around this central figure Nexo makes revolve the whole drama of humble life, and his work is magnificently real and balanced because he has succeeded in picturing human depravity without relenting and human goodness without sentimentality. The trilogy constitutes, if you like, an attack upon the social system based upon privilege and the arguments presented are powerful, but it is not so much this fact which constitutes the work's greatness as it is the dignity which the characters assume and the full-blooded reality of the whole." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 115:sup626 D 6 '22 520w

NEXO, MARTIN ANDERSEN—Continued

"Nexo is a realist in his presentation of life and boggles at no detail, no matter how offensive to nice senses it may be, if it is necessary to his picture. But he does not make that always fatal mistake of spreading offensive things before the reader because he prefers them that way. He uses them only because they are necessary to make the picture true, and he mitigates them always with his clear vision of the best that is in the human heart."

+ N Y Times p27 N 19 '22 600w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p18 D 24 '22 950w

NIBLACK, ALBERT PARKER. Why wars come; or, Forms of government and foreign policies in relation to the causes of war. 165p $1.50 Stratford

172.4 War

A rear-admiral of the United States navy analyzes the causes of wars, and the form of government and foreign policies of the principal countries of the world in relation to these causes. In a concluding chapter he outlines some changes in the United States constitution which he believes are needed, to meet modern conditions.

"In the main portion of the book he analyzes with keen insight and just discrimination the main character of the various Governments in the world to-day. His thought is so correct and phrased in such direct and accurate language that the lack of an index is unfortunate, for this is a book to which one may often wish to refer for concise and sound judgments or definitions on innumerable problems of Government and policy."

+ Lit R p206 N 11 '22 190w

"The book is characterized by the directness and terseness of style which many naval officers exemplify."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 7 '23 1450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p749 N 16 '22 140w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. Patchwork. 356p $1.75 Holt [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

22-4979

Raymond Sheldon, the chief figure of this story of post-war Oxford, is an eager, sensitive, clever youth who goes up to the university after two years in the army and finds it sordid, commercial, practical, very different from the Oxford of his dreams. The idea comes to him—why should he not re-create the Oxford that had been the city of youth, enthusiasm and laughter? He goes to work in earnest, launches a new university paper, starts a liberal club, gathers a coterie about him and tries to infuse them with his ideals. He almost succeeds. Then he suddenly realizes that the old, soft, charming times have no place in the new order and he begins to feel a hatred of the pre-war attitude. On the last page he is in New York, and gives his reasons for being there: "because it's straight and uncompromising, and because it's here for a purpose. I love them [the warehouses and skyscrapers] because they're steel and not rotten old stone, and because they're straight and not crooked, and because they're mechanical—and because I've been turned into a machine."

Booklist 18:368 J1 '22

Cleveland p34 My '22

"As a naïve and self-complacent exhibition of college snobbery and affectation all this may have its charms, though the discriminating reader will take the New Oxford with a large grain of salt. Whether the bulk of American readers will be intensely interested by a work which presupposes an all-consuming interest in and first-hand acquaintance with Oxford seems doubtful."

— Lit R p534 Mr 25 '22 150w

"In spite of all its immaturities 'Patchwork' is quite preposterously diverting. When Mr. Nichols grows up he may legitimately point with pride to some pages in which he has caught the self-consciousness of youth, but he will realize that in others he has been not a little—but perhaps quite pardonably—silly. Meanwhile his picture is all the more revealing and diverting on account of his participation in the immaturities which he describes." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 114:sup436 Ap 12 '22 350w

"The book is young and full of life."

+ N Y Times p20 Je 18 '22 600w

"The story is engaging, humorous, and delightfully youthful."

+ Outlook 130:473 Mr 22 '22 160w

"A novel delightful wholly, which at once takes a distinguished place in the gallery of University fiction."

+ Sat R 132:490 O 22 '21 470w

"Its only indisputable merit is that it is readable. It contains numerous portraits of real people, all just like enough to give pain. It has some pleasant epigrams, of which the following description of laborious dullards seemed to us the best: 'One feels he knows the time every train leaves for anywhere, and none of the reasons for taking them.' But on the whole judgment upon 'Patchwork' must be adverse."

+ Spec 127:638 N 12 '21 450w

NICHOLS, ROBERT MALISE BOWYER. Guilty souls; a drama in four acts. 181p $1.75 Harcourt [7s Chatto & W.]

822

22-17170

"The subject of the play is the reconciliation of the soul with God. . . Oswald Bentley, a solicitor, under severe provocation, embezzled funds entrusted to him. The loss is discovered. But he has in his office a junior partner, Paul Vyson, whose origin and habits are strange. Circumstances make it very easy to settle the guilt on Vyson, who is sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. Seven years elapse. Vyson, disguised as a man-servant, enters Bentley's house. He desires revenge, but Bentley's sufferings are already greater than any revenge could inflict. His guilt has brought him within sight of God and he is terrified and agonized. Vyson adds to his torment and so himself becomes guilty: his object is petty and personal, he is not impelled towards reconciliation with God. From this point the action of the play is purely psychological. In the end, Vyson shoots himself and Bentley gives himself up to the police."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:76 D '22

"The plot is grimly moving, and as uncomfortable as one might wish—along with Mr. Nichols. It reads well; would act well at matinees in playhouses where managers could risk the expense and gain prestige from those who ever must shun crass evening entertainment. Then for the thoughtful and the serious young the play must make its appeal."

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 14 '22 150w

"Though there are occasional scintillating passages, the play tends to be sluggish of movement and is too poorly motivated to be dramatically effective."

— Dial 73:581 N '22 80w

"The style is quiet, but moulded by thought and sympathy into considerable richness and subtlety. The unique theme, at first sight so unpromising, is handled as it should be, unconventionally, by little scenes straight out of the personalities of their actors. Mr. Nichols will, I hope, write better plays than this; but he may never write one which will be so direct a challenge to those of us who are to-day attempting to avoid the question which he insistently puts. Is the prevalent ironic attitude, the pursuit of la bagatelle, a pose, a reality, or an evasion? Upon the answer depends much more than the fate of Mr. Nichols's play." W. H. Durham

+ Lit R p1 S 9 '22 750w

"The play, in spite of obvious faults and crudities, is a noble, passionate piece of writing, full of ardor, generosity, and beauty; the preface is violent and vehement, but it seems ill-tempered and petty. The play is a poet's play; although the surroundings are commonplace and the people ordinary, Mr. Nichols writes with an exaltation which takes his drama out of the range of the ordinary realistic theatre."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:626 Ag 5 '22 650w

"The characters are well drawn and the dialogue moves in a rapidly well-fashioned manner. It is not a big play in any sense of the word and its dramatic technique is somewhat doubtful, but it is interesting to read, and that, it is to be feared, will be its only function."

+ — N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 250w

"The play moves, because of the simplicity of its main motive, with tremendous speed. There is a rapture about it which gives it wings. Mr. Nichols has it before him to achieve his salvation as an artist just as Oswald Bentley found it as a man. He must persist in the creation of a drama more and more austere and objective. He has the seed of big things in him."

+ Sat R 134:20 J1 1 '22 750w

Spec 128:785 Je 24 '22 1150w

"It is a mad play, barren of humor, horrible in the culmination of its final catastrophe. At times, the reader is utterly bewildered; at others revolted. Yet, to those who revel in scenes of cumulative horror, the play should bear some melodramatic appeal. In its effect it is heathen rather than Christian, and in its exaggeration defeats its own object."

— Springf'd Republican p8 S 26 '22 200w

"The preface contains noble passages, proving that, if only in short snatches, Mr. Nichols can write English prose like a master, and many passages which are as laughable and delightful as a healthy, comely child 'showing-off' before strange grown-ups. It would be worse than cruel, it would be foolish, to sneer at these passages. They indicate the qualities by virtue of which Mr. Nichols may find his way to greatness. Guilty Souls is far from being a perfect or even a good play; but its weaknesses are not in essentials, and its virtues are."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 1 '22 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:252 N '22

NICHOLSON, MEREDITH. Best laid schemes. 217p $1.50 Scribner

22-8591

Several stories all very different in type. There are some business tales, some almost detective stories, the fanciful "Arabella's house party" and "The Susiness of Susan," a sprightly tale of a young librarian who by clever dissembling to which she afterwards confesses, wins the friendship of Brown Pendleton, explorer and archeologist, the guest of honor at a dinner-party where Miss Susan Parker revels in being "Susie" again. Contents: The Susiness of Susan; The girl with the red feather; The Campbells are coming; Arabella's house party; The third man; Wrong number.

Booklist 18:368 J1 '22

Boston Transcript p1 My 10 '22 180w

"Can it be that such nice girls, pretty and coquettish, and bold, at most, after the fashion of the 'Dolly Dialogues,' still exist somewhere for the consolation of old-fashioned males of all ages; and that romancers like Messrs. Nicholson and Tarkington are clever enough to see that they still live and deserve to live?" H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 108:526 Je 10 '22 270w

"Mr. Nicholson's gay humor, light touch, and neat turn for the ingenious combine to make of these half dozen stories a consistently entertaining collection."

+ Lit R p674 My 20 '22 240w

"It is on the whole a fairly entertaining collection of short stories of various popular magazine types, and will be found to fulfill its evident mission—the whiling away of an idle hour or two." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p16 My 14 '22 640w

Outlook 131:387 Je 28 '22 30w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 10 '22 130w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

NICHOLSON, MEREDITH. Broken barriers. 402p $2 Scribner

22-18786

The young people in this middle west story, with many of the old barriers and conventions broken down, are confused by their new freedom and uncertain how to use it. Grace Durland comes back from college to her financially straitened home in Indianapolis and makes her first stroke for freedom by becoming a saleswoman in Shipley's department store. Under the tutelage of a very modern young woman she is introduced to a new kind of life which involves being much in the society of two older married men. Ward Trenton is unhappy in his marriage to a woman of the emancipated type, novelist and lecturer. Husband and wife have long gone their separate ways, Trenton is lonely and Grace attracts him strongly. The two love each other but cannot quite bring themselves to take advantage of the broken barriers of convention and so delay taking their happiness till the opportune death of Trenton's wife leaves the way clear for them.

"None of these things are impossible but they are so unusual that they cannot convince if set out in a commonplace way. It needs infinite art to give them convincing elements and art of delicacy and subtlety. These are qualities of which Mr. Nicholson, in this book at least, exhibits neither jot nor tittle." S. L. C.

— Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '22 900w

Dial 74:103 Ja '23 160w

"An incorrigible romanticist is making an ineffectual essay in the realm of pseudo-realism and has woefully mixed his materials." S. S. A.

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 28 '23 600w

"The technique of the book shows Mr. Nicholson at the height of his power. It is an admirably planned and steadily executed plot, orderly, logical, and—with the exception of its use of accident as a solution of the central problem—genuinely dramatic." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p103 O 14 '22 600w

"There is nothing of itself important in drink and sex, except what the artist can lend them of human interest and significance. Mr. Nicholson lends them nothing, not even the covering of a good style." R. H.

— New Repub 32:257 N 1 '22 220w

"While there is no denying that in real life things might turn out as fortunately as he makes them for some of his characters, there also is no denying that in all probability they would not, and therefore, while the ending is doubtless pleasing to the sentimental reader, others will feel that he has flinched from the task he had set himself. But there is some vivid portraiture of character that makes much of the book a delight."

+ — N Y Times p6 O 8 '22 300w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p10 O 8 '22 780w

"As in all the stories, Mr. Nicholson's diction is smooth, his sense of proportion admirable and his reasoning logical. His dramatic episodes are well related and not over-emphasized."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 660w

NICOLSON, HAROLD GEORGE. Sweet waters. 278p $1.75 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

(Eng ed 22-26239)

Constantinople and its neighborhood at the time of the first Balkan war is the scene of this story, which has for its elements international intrigues and a tangled diplomacy, the life of great foreign embassies and the society of a strange polyglot community. The principal characters are a Lebanese widow and her half-English daughter, between whom there is a constant conflict of temperaments, and two men of the British diplomatic service, a young clerk and his masterful and competent chief.

NICOLSON, HAROLD GEORGE—Continued

Booklist 18:239 Ap '22

"The book is that rare thing, a brilliantly written study in adventure, by a discriminating author who deserves an appreciative public." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p9 F 25 '22 360w

"Is not a 'convincing' piece of fiction. The story has an odd way of oscillating between the old international romance of the Marion Crawford type and the realism of the Younger Generation, and it does not quite succeed in either direction."

— Lit R p533 Mr 23 '22 540w

"If one disregards the peculiarities the book becomes much more interesting. It is well written and there are excellent pictures of Constantinople, Pera, and thereabouts. Some of the descriptions are truly poetic. It is a very curious book. But it is well done."

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 5 '22 400w

"International transactions of various kinds, set against a picturesque background, make interesting reading. But we find the psychic (or psychoanalytic?) element rather difficult of comprehension."

+ Sat R 132:721 D 24 '21 150w

"'Sweet Waters' is a most interesting book, full of things to discuss and argue about."

+ Spec 128:83 Ja 21 '22 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 8 '21 300w

NICOLSON, VICTORIA MARY (SACKVILLE-WEST) (MRS HAROLD NICOLSON). Dragon in shallow waters. 288p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Collins]

22-2219

A grim and powerful tale of two brothers, Silas and Gregory Dene, the one blind, the other a deaf-mute. Their affliction rests upon them as a sinister hereditary taint which expresses itself in a suspicious hatred of all human kind and an active malevolence which makes of them veritable monsters. Silas is a coward as well, and the interplay of his cowardice and his cruelty make him a powerful psychological study. The scene is laid in an English factory town, where the brothers by sheer physical force have established a sort of domination over their fellows. Beginning with a murder and closing with a terrific fight between the two brothers, the only relief the story offers is in the gentle figure of Gregory's young wife Ann and the awakening of her love for the only other normal person in the book.

"Despite a real literary quality and some brilliantly vivid description, this is not a book that one can be said to enjoy."

— Bookm 55:203 Ap 22 80w

"It is a terrible story, lightened here and there by patches of beauty, and clearly the work of a writer of unusual ability. The evidence of its success is that with the crowding emotions it rouses there is never a feeling of being sorry for the Denes." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 19 '22 800w

"The story is both ingenious and original. It is written with descriptive power and in a colorful and effective style, and while it is scarcely to be commended for the unnatural atmosphere it creates or for its all pervasive spirit of melodrama, yet it stands forth in favorable contrast to much of the journalistically realistic literature of the day."

+ Lit R p455 F 25 '22 260w

"Miss Sackville-West writes with that almost forgotten quality—gusto. Her tale hurries her along so fast that when she cannot safely tread an incident she jumps it. She is curiously adept in the parts of her story which most interest her, and strangely inexpert in the parts which do not. . . [She] has conceived her book in the spirit of poetry, and it is in the spirit of poetry that it must be read."

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 26 '22 2300w

"Somewhat crudely, perhaps somewhat self-consciously, remarkable. The representation of the mind of this maimed Titan of a man [Silas Dene] was a subject exactly suited to the author of 'Heritage.' It has given her scope for that odd gift which she obviously possesses to the full, but which all her critics have found so difficult to define, that curious characteristic of her books by which all her characters seem to stand out in the highest relief from their back-grounds."

+ Spec 127:115 Jl 23 '21 500w

"Those who do not demand the novel of exciting incident, and to whom a psychological angle in the view of character is not discouraging, will find this portrayal of the 'dragon' in shoal waters worth the time to take to read. It is not the conventional sort of dragon, sensational though he would become in the movie, and the presentation of him rather catches one's interest."

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 30 '22 380w

"A tale showing no small creative talent."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Je 9 '21 40w

"One must testify to the author's sense of style and power of description. It is not a mere knack of fine writing; its virtue lies in its essential sobriety, relying not so much on verbal opulence and high-flown imagery as in the power to select, and, in selecting to bestow thereby distinction and significance on the object selected. It is rare to possess such a power; not to be possessed by it is rarer still."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Je 16 '21 650w

NIETZSCHE, FRIEDRICH WILHELM. Selected letters; ed. with a preface, by Oscar Levy; auth. tr. by Anthony M. Ludovici. 364p $3.50 Doubleday [15s Heinemann]

B or 92 Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm 21-20537

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Bookm 55:79 Mr '22 190w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Dial 72:211 F '22 450w

Reviewed by J. Macy

Freeman 4:474 Ja 25 '22 900w

"The present selection is sufficiently catholic to give the reader a considerable insight into his philosophy and psychology."

+ Nation and Ath 30:833 Mr 4 '22 850w

"We find in Nietzsche's letters little of the intimacy that we expect in good letters. It is as though he were suffering from an obsession about his career. Many of his letters are merely manifestoes about himself." Robert Lynd

— New Statesman 18:397 Ja 7 '22 1700w

Spec 127:897 D 31 '21 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 27 '22 750w

"This selection is taken from the voluminous German edition: It is a compact, well chosen book, and Mr. Ludovici is a convincing translator; but it would have been easier for the reader if a few lines had been put in here and there to note the stages of Nietzsche's life. The book is frankly meant to rehabilitate Nietzsche. And though Nietzsche was not quite the unrivalled spirit he believed himself, nor so admirable as Dr. Levy believes, the claim is made good on the whole."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 5 '22 1750w

NIETZSCHE, FRIEDRICH WILHELM, and WAGNER, RICHARD. Nietzsche-Wagner correspondence; ed. by Elizabeth Foerster-Nietzsche; tr. by Caroline V. Kerr; with an introd. by H. L. Mencken. (Intimate letters ser.) 312p $4 Boni & Liveright

B or 92 Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm. Wagner, Richard 22-2499

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Bookm 55:78 Mr '22 70w

Reviewed by N. H. Dole

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 8 '22 1050w

"The book marks a notable accession to Nietzsche literature, as many of his letters, which had been lost or destroyed, are here recovered through her solicitous research from his unpublished notebooks."

+ Cath World 115:260 My '22 160w

Cleveland p86 N '22

"I cannot see how these letters can possibly persuade any one to read his works, and I cannot see how, without his works, these letters can fail to undermine Nietzsche's position as a critic and even as a creator of contemporary civilization. It is the effect of these letters to make thinking about Nietzsche almost impossible, the accumulations of trivialities is so great." Gilbert Seldes

— Dial 72:211 F '22 450w

"The interest to us of the correspondence is literary, not controversial. . . Neither man seems to have had much influence on the other's thought. That is why they parted company. And precisely because they were independent, singular minds, they left a correspondence which can be read with great pleasure, even though the story ends sadly." J. Macy

+ Nation 114:167 F 8 '22 1300w

Reviewed by W. J. Turner

New Statesman 20:357 D 23, 30 '22 6700w

"For nearly eight years the musician and the thinker were friends, and then they parted company. How they became friends, what made the intimacy notable, and why at the end Nietzsche turned his back on Wagner—these are the matters which make this story by Nietzsche's sister an illuminating contribution to the history of our present-day culture."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 16 '22 1100w

Springf'd Republican p13a F 12 '22 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p613 S 28 '22 1850w

NISSI, FRANCESCO SAVERIO. Wreck of Europe (Eng title Peaceless Europe). 304p $2.50 Bobbs [12s Cassell]

940.314 European war, 1914-1919—Treaties. European war, 1914-1919—Reparations

22-22181

"Signor Nitti shows that Europe is decaying more owing to the peace treaties, 'begotten in rancor and applied with violence,' than as a result of the war. . . On the whole, he castigates all the belligerents fairly impartially, and might be considered exempt from national bias were it not for the fact that he never specifically mentions Tyrol. . . Signor Nitti calls for a thorough revision of the treaties, preferably by a reorganized League of Nations, with reduction of the indemnities to figures within the bounds of reason; the abolition of the war-provocative Reparation Commission; withdrawal of Allied troops from German territories; and the cancellation for mutual benefit of all inter-Allied war debts."—Nation

Booklist 19:78 D '22

"His insistence upon alleviation of the burdens imposed upon Germany is doubtless sound from the economic point of view; but his failure to take into account the sentimental factors aroused by the war, and his distortion of political factors during the making of the treaties, are so flagrant as to weaken materially an argument which is intrinsically strong." C. Seymour

— + Bookm 56:635 Ja '23 500w

"Nitti shows a first-hand acquaintance with political events and discussions since the close of the war."

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 25 '22 680w
Cleveland p95 D '22

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne
Int Bk R p36 D '22 70w

"The present translation is less awkward and uncertain than that used in England. But though the form is somewhat improved, the substance remains the same, with most of the same errors of fact and all the same errors of judgment."

— + Lit R p206 N 11 '22 290w

"[Though] valuable his book suffers considerably from lack of form and repetition, and the English is in places obscure. . . For all his frankness, sincerity, and wide sympathies, Signor Nitti has the limitations of a statesman's mind, with its naive belief in the efficacy of political action and its instinctive pandering to the doctrine of expediency. These tendencies sometimes shorten his vision and make him curiously contradictory." E. U. Burke

+ — Nation 114:650 My 31 '22 1650w

Nation 116:198 F 14 '23 80w

"Another resounding blow has been struck at the Treaty of Versailles. Signor Nitti, who deals it, is a man of great authority. His is the conclusion of an economist no less than a statesman, and a shrewd and tolerant observer of politics." H. W. M.

+ Nation and Ath 30:727 F 11 '22 1400w

"Powerfully argued—and, we regret to say, atrociously translated."

+ — New Statesman 18:566 F 18 '22 850w

No Am 216:856 D '22 1300w

Pratt p31 autumn '22

R of Rs 66:559 N '22 120w

St Louis 20:254 O '22

St Louis 20:304 D '22

"Signor Nitti's is an eloquent and forcible statement of a European situation which has been too aridly stated by Mr. Keynes and too emotionally by Mr. Wells, but in this book appears to be described in a manner satisfactorily between these two extremes."

+ — Sat R 133:234 Mr 4 '22 360w

Spec 128:305 Mr 11 '22 540w

"This book is an interesting essay of interpretation, but adds little to our knowledge or understanding of world affairs." E. J. Woodhouse

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a F 4 '23 1750w

NOCK, ALBERT JAY. Myth of a guilty nation. 114p $1 Huebsch

940.32 European war—Causes. European war—Germany. European war—Diplomatic history 22-14207

The book is made up of articles originally published in the Freeman over the signature "Historicus." It is a compilation and transcription of documentary material made for the purpose of showing that the "German government was not solely guilty of bringing on the war;" that her share of guilt was extremely small; that "the most dangerous conspiracy. . . against the liberty of nations" was not plotted by her government but by England, Russia and France; that the Versailles treaty postulates her sole responsibility; that the damage present and prospective, wrought by the treaty is much greater and more far reaching than the damage wrought by the war and has brought the world to the verge of economic collapse.

Am Pol Sci R 16:719 N '22 110w

"Mr. Nock has a good cause—for Germany was certainly not solely responsible—but he has not made the most convincing statement of it. We fear his method—and tone—will scarcely convince a majority of those who stand most in need of getting his point of view. . . He does not appear himself to have taken any pains to analyze the wealth of documentary material now available to students from the archives of Berlin, Vienna, and Petrograd. Mr. Nock incautiously fills nearly a quarter of his volume with excerpts from the so-called Belgian documents, which were carefully hand-picked by the Junker group from the mass of diplomatic papers in the Brussels archives and published to serve as German propaganda and to prove the iniquities of the Entente." S. B. Fay

NOCK, ALBERT JAY—Continued

— New Repub 31:195 J1 12 '22 430w

"If counsel for a party charged with a breach of the peace should avoid the question whether his client or the adversary started the fight, if he should endeavor only to show that for several years the attitude of the adversary had been at least as provocative as that of his client, and on this ground should claim that no fine should be imposed, his tactics would be substantially similar to those adopted by Mr. Nock in this brief for Germany. His version of the diplomatic history of Europe from 1904 to 1914 is substantially that formulated by the German Imperial Government during the first months of the war." Munroe Smith

— N Y Times p14 J1 16 '22 2500w

"To defy successfully a well-entrenched prejudice, a writer should be well armed with evidence and should be able to present it in a cool, dispassionate manner. The author of this work does not meet either of these tests. The unrestrained partisanship exhibited by him antagonizes the reader and the evidence offered is not sufficient to overcome this antagonism. His range of sources is narrow." O. P. Chitwood

— Pol Sci Q 37:691 D '22 800w

St Louis 21:19 Ja '23

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 25 '22 150w

Springf'd Republican p6 My 22 '22 230w

NOGUCHI, YONE. Korin. ltd ed 32p il $7.50 Orientalia

759.9 Korin, Ogata

"In this handsome little brochure, printed in Japan and bound in the Japanese manner, Yone Noguchi, the Japanese poet who chooses to write in English, narrates his soul's adventure, among the masterpieces of Korin. Nearly half of the little book is devoted to illustrations, which include two wood blocks in colors, four in black and white, ten colotypes, and several small cuts interspersed in the text."—Lit R

"All over Japan fortunate persons treasure not only Korin's work, but reproductions thereof. Here, between the ivory-clasped pages of this book, with its fragrant rice paper, we have very lovely reproductions also. More, we have a glimpse for a moment into true Japan, in a Japanese poet's song of praise." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 2 '22 1050w

"His English is somewhat quaint and not always completely intelligible, but it is evident enough that he has a poet's eye for natural beauty and a keen appreciation of the essentials of Korin's finely selective art." G. W. Harris

+ Lit R p85 O 7 '22 720w

"A beautiful monograph upon a great Japanese artist who is here discussed with a quaintness and grace worthy of him."

+ Nation 115:312 S 27 '22 20w

"Noguchi's 'Korin' cannot be considered a monograph on the subject, for it is little more than a sketch of the impression Korin's art has made on the mind of the poet-author; nevertheless we can thank him heartily for reminding us of Korin's achievements, of introducing him to those who are not familiar with Korin's name or fame." Gardner Teall

N Y Times p2 O 22 '22 1700w

NOGUCHI, YONE. Through the Torii. 208p $3.50 Four seas [15s Mathews]

895

"Mr. Noguchi, in what an English reviewer terms 'bent' prose, catches the atmosphere of a moss-green and grey Japanese city or of a red-lacquered and gold temple flaring against a hillside; regrets the upheaval of Japanese culture through the invasion of western commercialism, visits an old poet, compares the oriental and occidental theories of poetry, and gives a Japanese's appraisal of Whistler, Rossetti, Yeats, and Oscar Wilde, with a bias that is due to individuality and not to theory, without propaganda or dogmatism, with the surety of one who has mastered the secrets of a self that is as delicately atmospheric as a Japanese landscape."—Bookm

"Appealing essays that reveal a personality æsthetically melancholy, mystically wistful, intellectually perceptive, and apparently unconsciously and incidentally poetic."

+ Bookm 55:314 My '22 190w

"As we read we seem to come into a room, bare and clean, that has a branch of blossoms, perhaps, or some clear picture, and we listen to the talk of one who is a friend, a sage, and a child." Padraic Colum

+ Freeman 5:44 Mr 22 '22 330w

"The idea of his 'Japanese mind in love with irregularity' is cool, delightful, but still these little writings seem too slight, too slenderly connected, too little rounded, incomplete. They are complete, but their roundness is made of other kinds of curves than ours; it is a different kind of curve and of completion." L. T. Nicholl

— + New Repub 31:26 My 31 '22 500w

"It is little views, simple accounts, when we can overlook the awkwardness of the style, which make part of 'Through the Torii' pleasant reading. That none of his essays go very deep is due, perhaps, to the self-distrust of the author who can write, 'Art and Life are quite different things in Japan,' and 'Truth is, we Japanese lack in curiosity; therefore we are not inventive, creative, but merely imitative.'"

+ — New Statesman 19:73 Ap 22 '22 520w

NOLAND, STEPHEN C. Sam Blick's diary. 301p $1.90 Harper

22-21948

After the manner of Pepys the diary records every day's happenings for 365 days in the year. It tells the reader how Sam Blick does his duty as a man should who has a family and a good job to live up to. Without stinting his wife, Polly, and his daughter, Ellen, he keeps firm control of his income and makes sure how he stands whenever pay-day comes around. He marries off his daughter satisfactorily and starts his family cares all over again by taking two small children of his wife's sister to bring up. He lets us in on his dealings with his neighbors and business associates and on the little strategies he employs to keep his beloved dog Pep from being given away to the ash man.

"This book is full of dry humor and amusing situations which Sam himself does not seem fully to appreciate. A very human chronicle."

+ Lit R p273 D 2 '22 50w

"It is a truthful, cheerful, amusing book, one of the best pictures of the average American citizen at his daily task of living that any fictionist has made."

+ N Y Times p14 N 26 '22 330w

"Mr. Noland's book, his first, is extraordinary in many ways. In particular it is sound. Mr. Noland has his feet on solid earth and it is to be hoped he will keep them there while he writes his next one. This is a book for those of us who liked 'Peck's Bad Boy,' Plumpy Shute and Mr. Lardner's Friend Al. It is a book for those of us who have furnaces to tend and snow to shovel." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 12 '22 1050w

"There are no high lights in the 'Diary,' but on the other hand there are no black despairs."

Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 250w

NONSENSEORSHIP; by Heywood Broun, George S. Chappell and others; ed. by G. P. P.; sundry observations concerning prohibitions, inhibitions and illegalities. 181p il $2.50 Putnam

817

22-18206

In this collection of essays and verse "a group of not-too-serious thinkers" have "set down their views regarding nonsenseorships in general and any pet prohibitions in particular." Needless to say prohibitionists and censors are not represented. It is a group of protestors fighting with the weapons of wit and humor and each contributor is appropriately introduced by an illustration by Ralph Barton.

Booklist 19:115 Ja '23

Bookm 56:516 D '22 180w

"Tho there is considerable evidence that light humor has been striven after, very little has been achieved." G: MacAdam

— Int Bk R p28 D '22 2450w

Lit R p370 Ja 6 '23 500w

"They are serious, oh! so serious, but they are not particularly coherent in bringing to the fore any panacea for the reform-erupting epidermis of modern life." H. S. Gorman

— + N Y Times p9 S 10 '22 1800w

St Louis 21:13 Ja '23

NORDMANN, CHARLES. Einstein and the universe; a popular exposition of the famous theory; tr. by Joseph McCabe. 240p $2.50 Holt [10s 6d Unwin]

530.1 Einstein theory 22-16543

The book, translated from the French, has a preface by Viscount Haldane who says of it: "I know no book better adapted than the one now translated to give the average English reader some understanding of a principle, still in its infancy, but destined, as I believe, to transform opinion in more regions of knowledge than those merely of mathematical physics." It attempts to make the reader understand accurately, yet without the aid of mathematics, the revolution brought about by Einstein and to state precisely what we can really know about the external world thru science.

"The book is certainly readable. The language is not only clear, but also picturesque." E. Cunningham

+ Nature 109:770 Je 17 '22 950w

"Employs no mathematical symbols whatever, and manages to impart a surprising amount of information. However, even here passages are found that remind one of Byron's opinion of Coleridge's metaphysics: 'I wish he would explain his explanations.'" B: Harrow

+ — N Y Times p7 O 29 '22 130w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p10 O 15 '22 100w

St Louis 20:297 D '22

"Presents the Einstein Theory with a clarity and simplicity which no other writer, save possibly Slickman, so far has approached. M. Nordmann has achieved an astonishing feat. He has practically eliminated mathematics from his book and yet has succeeded in presenting a lucid and profound statement of the Einstein theory."

+ Spec 128:751 Je 17 '22 900w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Certain people of Importance. 468p $2 Doubleday

22-16601

The book is the history of the Crabtree family. From its dim New England origin it follows one of its members, Reuben Crabtree and his family, to the middle west and later to California, where a new generation of Reuben Crabtrees live and flourish, marry, have children and die. Very real characters are described in detail with their human failings and kindnesses, their good and their bad, their ups and their downs in worldly fortunes.

Booklist 19:55 N '22

"Mrs. Norris has written with absolutely equal parts of dulness and sincerity. Sincerity should shine only in the most brilliant and useful of causes. Here is Mrs. Norris squandering it on a lifeless and interminable tale. . . It is shocking that with such qualities in her heart, those in her head should have been so impoverished." Ruth Hale

— Bookm 56:98 S '22 280w

"With 'Certain People of Importance' Mrs. Norris has taken a long stride forward. It is far and away her best novel since 'The Story of Julia Page,' and superior to that because of the size of its canvas and the wider range of its characters. . . Few people of imagination can read this story without a feeling that this family of her creation has been and actually is alive." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 30 '22 780w

"This is the best of all Mrs. Norris' productions, a serious work, with strong, distinctive features. Its literary merit is great. For the most part, the author stands aside, as it were, while her people speak, revealing, themselves most convincingly real and human."

+ Cath World 116:259 N '22 380w

Cleveland p84 N '22

"The wish to play the hostess to too many generations has transformed a finely conceived work into a sort of buffet tea, where—although there is food in profusion—one has to elbow one's way towards it. Certain figures stand out with all the author's power of delineation; the rest suffer from a Malthusian impatience."

— + Dial 73:580 N '22 100w

"That 'Certain People of Importance' is to be listed among the big novels of the year admits of no doubt. There are plenty of reasons for so listing it—it is artistic, and yet astoundingly true to life; it is filled with real people, people whom one recognizes in every village and city in the land; some of its sketches are marvels of fidelity and cleverness; and it is rounded out into a fairly harmonious and dignified whole." G. W. J.

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 O 22 '22 580w

"[The characters] gain your sympathy, your understanding, and you will not willingly leave their story until you know all of it. Mrs. Norris has done something worth the doing in this book of hers."

+ Lit D p60 S 23 '22 1050w

"'Certain People of Importance' is a great American novel, written with such consummate skill that the skill is concealed and the strokes of the brush are not evident. It is like purely American tapestry. All American weave, it is all American dye, if you please, and thanks to no other nation, friend or foe, for a turn of pattern, a tint, or hint as to composition." M. E. W. Freeman

+ Lit R p883 Ag 19 '22 1200w

"She treats her characters with the impartiality of life itself. She has her favorites but she does not play them. It is this quality which remains as the remembered feature of the book, a certain largeness of temperament contrasted with the sometimes oppressive refinement of the art. The book is true to life in more than one respect." E. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 32:177 O 11 '22 1050w

"Without doubt, really an American novel; of the soil, of the people, and with a strict fidelity to truth of character which makes it entirely admirable. . . There is no melodrama; no attempt to force an incident for the purpose of magazine serial production." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 20 '22 3150w

"Mrs. Norris has written a praiseworthy book. It is honest. It is true. It is filled with excellent developed incident and with fine characterization. . . Unfortunately, in spite of generous plot details, in spite of the living qualities of her people themselves, she has written a dull book. In a determined effort to be honest and non-sentimental, she has forgotten how to use the sweep of creative power that we know of old was hers." J: Farrar

+ — N Y Tribune p4 Ag 27 '22 1000w

"'Meticulous' is a word that we book critics itch to use. This is the first real opportunity we have had in our comparatively brief professional acquaintance with literature to employ

NORRIS, KATHLEEN—Continued.
it. We think Mrs. Norris's book is meticulous. It sounds at times like the list the warehouse people sent us the year we stored the furniture." F. F. Van de Water

— N Y Tribune p19 Ja 14 '23 1400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:462 N '22

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"Though careful and minute, is always interesting: her five hundred pages are a measure of her generosity. Despite its genuine documentary value, the book is eminently readable. Mrs. Norris never loses sight of her characters."

+ Spec 129:sup664 N 11 '22 560w

"The author's true touch and sense of humor have enabled the reader to enjoy situations while sympathizing with those involved. Action is unimpeded by descriptions, though beauty is not sacrificed. One feels that in 'Certain People of Importance' Mrs. Norris has set for herself a new standard for she sincerely refrains from extremes—there are neither halos nor stripes awarded—and keeps within the range of probability."

+ Springfd Republican p7a S 17 '22 720w
Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Lucretia Lombard. 316p il $1.75 Doubleday

22-7877

The story is about a quite inevitable triangle in love and its solution. Mimi Warren, a young heiress, had always loved Stephen Winship who had been a sort of big brother to her from childhood and was joint guardian of her estate. It was easy to love Mimi, everybody did, and in time she and Stephen became engaged. But Stephen met Lucretia Lombard just as the latter had become widowed and it was a case of manifest destiny that they should love. The story turns on the struggles of the three to do the right thing and it was Lucretia's nobility of soul and strength of character that found the way and a forest fire that decided their fates.

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

"Anyone who opens the pages of 'Lucretia Lombard' with hopes of Mrs. Norris's eventual emergence is doomed to disappointment. Anyone who opens them in the faith that the expected Kathleen Norris is there will be fully satisfied. It is a typical Kathleen Norris story with a typical plot and typical characters. It pursues its course in a typical manner, fluently and alluringly, but with not the slightest sign of originality. It is conventional from beginning to end. The plot is as old as the oldest fiction, and nothing new is added to it to make it worth the retelling." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p6 Ap 1 '22 880w

"The book is essentially right-minded, but it is also remarkably dull."

— Cath World 115:697 Ag '22 150w

"Her tale runs along with the abandon of an author who is happy in her writing and who thoroughly enjoys what she is doing, and this spirit of light happiness is the greatest value the book has."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 S 3 '22 300w

"Mrs. Norris's ease, her wit, her always human, never acrid, reactions to the simpleness and weakness of our mortal nature—why doesn't she use them as vehicles for her thoughts about real life? . . . It almost seems as if it would be very hard for her to keep all her philosophy, experience, and convictions out of her books. 'Lucretia Lombard' was written (presumably) in a year of famine, typhus, and economic distraction abroad, of unemployment at home. It was written in a country sick unto death with race complacency and prejudice. How can the shades be drawn so low, the teacups tinkle so loudly, as to keep out all the sights and noises of the world?" S. N. Cleghorn

+ — Lit R p619 Ap 29 '22 720w

"The best thing in the book is the description of Mimi's happiness at the time when her engagement is announced. Her sweetness and gayety and young gladness are not only charming, but thoroughly natural and thoroughly real, their naturalness and reality being the more striking because of their contrast with the generally 'fictiony' character of the rest of the book. It is, of course, smoothly written, and will no doubt interest Kathleen Norris's many admirers."

+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 26 '22 860w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:322 Jl '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

NORTON, THOMAS JAMES. Constitution of the United States; its sources and its application. 238p $2 Little

312.73 United States—Constitution. United States—Constitutional history 22-13134

The plan of the book is to explain, clause by clause, the origin and meaning of the leading provisions of the constitution and its amendments, and then to point their application in the great cases which have arisen during our constitutional life. These decisions of the courts are brought down to the present day. The book is thus not only a commentary on the constitution but a constitutional history of the United States as well. The text of the constitution is printed in large type and the explanations in smaller type. There is a general index and an index of the leading cases expounding the constitution.

Am Pol Sci R 16:718 N '22 180w

Booklist 19:38 N '22

Bookm 56:357 N '22 120w

"This is one of the clearest and simplest expositions of the American constitution that we have ever seen. Its scope is ample and its scheme lucid. Any American who desires to see the Constitution an open book to all who live or, at the very least, vote under it, cannot but be enthusiastic in his praises of what Mr. Norton has conceived and what he has accomplished. Should this admirable little book run into another edition—and it ought to run into many—there are one or two little references which Mr. Norton might revise for the sake of clarity." S. L. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Jl 12 '22 780w

"A volume on the Constitution as a living force in American development that anybody except a specialist can read with profit. He is commendably non-technical, but occasionally he should be keener in his comment."

+ — Lit R p924 S 2 '22 220w

Reviewed by T. R. Powell

New Repub 33:297 F 7 '23 850w

St Louis 20:207 S '22

"The volume reveals evidences of painstaking and thorough work. As a whole, the book is a creditable and worthy production. It will prove valuable to students of government as a reference work in which to find material not readily accessible elsewhere." H. C. Hill

+ — School R 30:789 D '22 550w

"It is doubtful whether a more useful work in popular education could be suggested than that which Mr. Norton has here begun with a praiseworthy degree of success."

+ Springfd Republican p7a S 10 '22 720w

NOTION-COUNTER; a farrago of foibles, being notes about nothing by Nobody, illustrated by Somebody, dedicated to Everybody. 108p il $1 Atlantic monthly

817

22-14145

Bits of humor, some of which first appeared in the "Contributor's Club" of the Atlantic—"Little odds and ends that don't deserve to be called opinions." Among the themes they lightly touch are the discouraging attitude of dyers, shoe-store intimacies, millinery madness, the passing of the old lady, balancing my wife's checkbook, etc.

"Clever satire of humorous failings and foibles with which we are all familiar."

+ Bookm 55:537 J1 '22 150w

"Delightfully intimate and inconsequential bits."

+ Cleveland p70 S '22

"Its odd humors, its geniality, its ingeniousness, and the excellence of its literary style make very charming reading matter of the book; need we then complain merely because it lacks depth and because a certain aristocratic sense of superiority or snobbery at times ruffles uncharitably its usual glassy calm?"

+ Lit R p762 Je 24 '22 170w

St Louis 20:273 N '22

"The raison d'être of the 'Notion Counter' probably is wittily, keenly and pleasantly to criticize the artificiality of modern life and its conventions."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 18 '22 300w

NOYES, ALFRED. Watchers of the sky (Eng title, Torch bearers). 231p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Blackwood]

821

22-10538

The poem, tho complete in itself, is the first of a trilogy built up about an idea of epic scope and unity—the conception that the great scientists and discoverers are the torch-bearers of the world, passing from hand to hand thru the centuries the light of imagination and faith as well as that of knowledge. The "Watchers of the sky" are the astronomers—Copernicus, Tycho Brahe, Kepler, Galileo, Newton, William Herschel, and Sir John Herschel—and the poem narrates the gradual development of modern astronomy.

Booklist 18:357 J1 '22

"At times his narratives disintegrate into bombast; at other times a treacly sentimentalism spoils them; still again his blank verse is but fair prose chopped into lines. Yet through all these inequalities runs a golden thread of the poetic urge." H. S. Gorman

+ Bookm 56:96 S '22 400w

"By no means can it be declared that Mr. Noyes has been very successful with this new volume of verse. . . . If Mr. Noyes has done no more than to poetize the facts of astronomical science, and given us as life-like features of the great astronomers, in this group of narrative verses, he has at least performed a commendable thing. Younger minds will find this book appealing and in the appeal informative to the point of wonder and curiosity." W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 3 '22 1100w

"Though the theme is a magnificent one and well worth the efforts of any poet, Mr. Noyes' prevalent mood is a prosy one, and his blank verse, while illumined here and there by a patch of light and colour, unfortunately indicates that the author has not selected with care."

+ Dial 73:236 Ag '22 60w

"Like most long narratives in verse, it is not always inspired poetry; unlike many of them, it is always of absorbing interest." E. L. P.

+ Ind 109:48 Ag 5 '22 180w

"Some readers will balk at the length of the work and probably few will find the interest unflagging; but there is much of true beauty and fine enthusiasm and touches of grandeur in this sequence of poetic tales or personal sketches. All in all, the book is worth attention and no astronomer's home should be without it." Arthur Guiterman

+ Ind 109:54 Ag 5 '22 110w

"He makes his straightforward account colorful. But he intrudes his own view of the universe, on occasion, with his usual dogmatic, emotional obstinacy. The tone of the writing becomes the tone of the preacher or school-master, not of the poet. It is an ill thing to superimpose sermons upon verse that would otherwise be recognized as vivid. . . . One feels in the final analysis that this is more a primer of astronomical history versified than what can rightly be called poetry." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p700 Je 3 '22 780w

"The world of science and of poetry both owe Mr. Noyes a great debt of gratitude for his attempt—the first of the kind—to bring them together; and, apart altogether from the high scope which he announces, every reader who submits himself fairly to the influence of his verse will be carried away by the charm of the language, the human, sometimes humorous, touches of character, and the triumphs, mixed with pathos, of the story." F. S. Marvin

+ Nature 109:638 My 20 '22 900w

"Mr. Noyes seems to retain the old-fashioned idea that to make a great poem you have only to take a great subject and pour over it a kind of poetic sauce. He seems to possess an inexhaustible supply of such poetic sauce." R: Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p9 My 28 '22 2700w

"It is a noble thing to have done—to have recorded in ringing measures the achievements of those brave pioneers; and Mr. Noyes himself may be accounted another torch-bearer, having brought us such happy tidings of these vanished lords of dream and accomplishment." C: H. Towne

+ N Y Tribune p7 My 21 '22 850w

"The real failure is the absence of anything like epic effect. Apparently the abundant opportunities for atmosphere, for description, and for incident, have led the poet unduly to sentimentalize his theme. In consideration of Mr. Noyes's real gift, it is somewhat painful to have to conclude that the whole work is of the nature of household poetry, pleasantly thrilling, mildly instructive and elevating, but far from great."

+ No Am 216:287 Ag '22 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:363 J1 '22

Pratt p27 winter '23

St Louis 20:220 S '22

"Its general conception is spacious and its detail beautifully executed. It is eminently readable, so that those to whom the readability of a poem is a phenomenon gravely to be suspected, will betake themselves in all haste to the incoherent utterances of more dynamic writers. If Mr. Noyes never attains a formidable height of poetry, it is impossible not to admire his ease and ingenuity."

+ Sat R 133:420 Ap 22 '22 700w

"Though we cannot help admiring Mr. Noyes for having thus boldly 'hitched his wagon to a star,' his most partial friends will have to admit that he has chosen a theme which shows up his particular weaknesses. The sensitive reader feels at once that here is a subject that demands the most stripped austerity of language. The notion which he conveys to the reader of the exquisite exactitudes of the science of astronomy will tune the reader's mind in such a way that sloppiness or verbosity in the poet will jar upon him. Mr. Noyes is always flowing, he rarely distorts his grammar and never his sense, but he is sadly apt to descend to the pedestrian." A. Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 128:405 Ap 1 '22 800w

"Mr. Noyes may have done a service by his effort to recover for us some lost regions of the old wide, almost universal, kingdom of poetry. Even a poet who cannot keep continuously on the heights may by his verse give something of science which prose cannot give."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 23 '22 850w

NUTTING, WILLIAM WASHBURN. Track of the "Typhoon." 270p il $2 Motor boat pub. co. 239 W. 39th st., N.Y.

797 Yachts and yachting. Typhoon (yacht) 22-129

"The account of the trans-Atlantic trip of a small motor-yacht, which sailed from Newfoundland to England and returned to New York touching at France, Spain and the Azores. The author is the editor of Motor Boat and a description of the construction of the boat at

NUTTING, WILLIAM WASHBURN—Continued the laboratory of Dr. Graham Bell in Newfoundland will interest all amateur yachtsmen. A delightful, personal account, with many illustrations from photographs.—Booklist

Booklist 18:178 Mr '22

"The voyage was made for fun, the story is told for fun—and here lies the secret of its freshness of style and narrative. But there is a basis of solid information, with full statistics given, too, as to practicable small-yacht building, and a deeper basis of philosophy as to hardiness in yachting as a national sport."

+ Lit R p420 F 11 '22 130w

St Louis 20:272 N '22

"A first-rate narrative of adventure."

+ Spec 128:625 My 20 '22 1300w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1921. 312p $1.90 Doubleday
Short stories—Collections

The sixteen stories here published with an introduction by Blanche Colton Williams have been chosen by the Society of arts and sciences and awarded the O. Henry memorial prize for 1921. Contents: The heart of little Shikara, by Edison Marshall; The man who cursed the lilies, by Charles Tenny Jackson; The urge, by Maryland Allan; Mummery, by Thomas Beer; The victim of his vision, by Gerald Chittenden; Martin Gerrity gets even, by Courtney Ryley Cooper and Leo F. Creagan; Stranger things, by Mildred Cram; Comet, by Samuel A. Derieux; Fifty-two weeks for Florette, by Elizabeth Alexander Heermann; Wild earth, by Sophie Kerr; The tribute, by Harry Anable Kniffin; The get-away, by O. F. Lewis; 'Aurora,' by Ethel Watts Munford; Mr. Downey sits down, by L. H. Robbins; The marriage in Kairwan, by Wilbur Daniel Steele; Grit, by Tristram Tupper.

Booklist 18:334 Je '22

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"An examination of the Committee's selection is one of the few entirely hopeless experiences of a reviewer's life. The members of it seem to have discovered a 'story value' which is apart from the story, and indications are that by this they mean plot or narrative or action. It is, I trust, no longer heretical to remark that much of O. Henry was shoddy and smart. It may be advisable to remind the members of the Committee that they are supposed to recall the best of O. Henry and not the worst, that after all O. Henry and not Sam Slick is the man whose memory they are attempting to honour." Gilbert Seides

— Dial 72:427 Ap '22 620w

"This third of the series seems distinctly weaker than the other two. Be that as it may, the volume under review points an index finger at what five presumably intelligent judges consider to be the best that the 1921 fiction market offered. If they keep a weather eye out for 'what the public wants,' they are hardly to be blamed even though one might wish that once in a time they would print something which they knew to be good even at the risk of a lesser popularity." C. A. Hilbard

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 Jl 23 '22 350w

"Nearly all good stories, as stories, but the characters are mainly utility characters." Arthur Colton

+ — Lit R p635 My 6 '22 1300w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 114:779 Je 28 '22 320w

"They might have been written in the pre-war period, quite as easily as to-day; no new note is struck and many of them are thoroughly conventional. But they are, taken as a collection, interesting, well constructed and well written, and the volume is for many reasons exceptionally worth while."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 16 '22 680w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:463 N '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:134 My '22

OBERHOLTZER, ELLIS PAXSON. History of the United States since the Civil war. 5v v 2, 1868-1872 649p $4 Macmillan

973.8 United States—History—1865-

The second volume covers a period of four years only, from 1868 to 1872, the period of reconstruction in the South, the impeachment and trial of Andrew Johnson, the Grant-Seymour campaign, Grant's presidency, the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, the Alabama claims, the extension of western railway building, and the "end of the orgy."

"For the most part the book is a version of political history. We find here an author who never sees more than one side of a controversy, who asperses the motives of all on the other side, and does not refrain from vituperative epithets. Throughout the book, it is fair to say, the citation of authorities is abundant, and, it is to be presumed, accurate. The only just criticism is that they are exclusively such as support the views of the author as to the events, the men, and the political and social conditions he has undertaken to present to his readers." E. Stanwood

— Am Hist R 28:337 Ja '23 880w

"Covering as it does a field which has been exhaustively explored by only one other historian, James Ford Rhodes, Professor Oberholtzer's book should be read with interest by students and teachers of history. The vivid but sometimes biting characterization of individuals adds much to the interest of the book."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:726 N '22 130w

Booklist 19:16 O '22

"A remarkably fine and accomplished piece of historical writing." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 1 '22 1350w

"He has done notable work, a work of amplification with the illumination of many obscurities. His second is, to my way of thinking, an improvement over his first volume." W. W. P., Jr.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 28 '23 1250w

Reviewed by W. A. Robinson

Lit R p290 D 9 '22 1100w

"It may seem a rather severe judgment to pass upon a good work to say that its omissions, although in harmony with the omissions of most other writers, are its chief if not only condemnation. But we must not fail to thank Mr. Oberholtzer for his great industry in bringing together so many important facts, for the apparent good faith shown on every page." W. E. Dodd

+ — Nation 115:sup378 O 11 '22 2100w

"All in all, this is a book which will not only be helpful to scholars but exceedingly interesting to the intelligent public. From the two volumes which have thus far been published the latter may obtain the most vivid and illuminating account of the stirring years just following the Civil War which has yet appeared, and may be relieved of a number of misleading myths about this period which still linger in our Northern and bourgeois consciousness." H. E. Barnes

+ New Repub 32:77 S 13 '22 1600w

"In spite of the author's array of authorities to support the statements in his text—no one could be more painstaking to be accurate—the narrative never flags in interest."

+ N Y Times p11 F 4 '23 2000w

R of Rs 66:222 Ag '22 60w

OBERHOLTZER, ELLIS PAXSON. Morals of the movie. 251p $1.25 Penn

778 Moving pictures

22-14842

"Mr. Oberholtzer is Secretary of the Board that sits in judgment on the movies in Pennsylvania. But he is not a born censor like Mr. Sumner and the Reverend Dr. Straton. He is an ordinary author who became a censor accidentally. [His book] starts with a survey of that large school of moving picture manufacturers whose creed is to arouse a prurient curiosity on the part of the weak-minded. For a sensation-jaded public they work feverishly to produce 'something unusual,' 'something different.' It is a contest in noise, and each new film must outshout its predecessor. . . Mr. Oberholtzer himself believes that the movie's one-night stand, plus the inadequacy of local methods of police inspection, make censorship before exhibition 'the only practical plan of dealing with the subject.'—New Repub

"This is no fanatical or prudish survey—the language is tempered and plain, the presentation absorbing and decidedly to the point. 'The Morals of the Movie' is the best book we have yet seen upon the industry, of what it has done, is doing and can do."—Boston Transcript p4 Ja 6 '23 320w

"Mr. Oberholtzer is evidently honest, earnest, and sincere. His mental attitude is representative of that of the censor at its best and by no means at its worst. Yet he reveals himself, on nearly every page of this confession of faith, as an enemy and not a friend of the motion picture industry; he regards the motion picture primarily as an engine of evil, instead of regarding it potentially as an influence for good; and in every chapter, he shows an utter inability to understand the very meaning of morality as applied to the critical appraisal of a work of art." Clayton Hamilton

— Lit R p345 D 30 '22 3600w

"It is an argument presented from the layman's point of view, and in certain places it is well documented. And yet, from a partisan so reasonable and a crusader so in earnest as Mr. Oberholtzer, I find myself expecting a good deal more on several points. Nowhere in this book is there a real attempt to answer the fundamental counter-argument against the whole theory of a censorship: the argument that censorship costs more in surrendered intellectual freedom than it can possibly save in any theoretic check upon 'temptation.'" C: Merz

— + New Repub 33:179 Ja 10 '23 1350w

Spring'd Republican p10 Ja 26 '23 400w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON (ARTHUR MIDDLETON, pseud.), ed. Best short stories of 1921; and the yearbook of the American short story. 506p $2 Small

Short stories—Collections

The period covered in the present volume is from October 1920 to September 1921. The editor designates that substance in fiction as "organic" in which the pulse of life is beating and has selected from the stories published in American magazines those that have rendered life imaginatively in organic substance and artistic form. Only such stories as have been honored by three asterisks in the yearbook index have been chosen. The yearbook contains a list of addresses of American and English magazines publishing short stories; a critical summary of the best books of short stories; a biographical roll of honor of both American and foreign short stories in American magazines and various indexes.

Booklist 18:191 Mr '22

Cleveland p86 N '22

"I find in [most of the] stories very little of the prevailing, the almost characteristic 'smartness' of the American short story; a good deal of the emptiness of the American story of adventure; much fake in the American story of superior or exotic beings; a few examples of fairly solid workmanship joined to fairly close observation of common details; an occasional flash of imagination; a very rare touch of skill in writing; and just the average technique which makes a story moderately readable. Many of these stories are very dull." Gilbert Selles

— Dial 72:427 Ap '22 620w

Nation 114:779 Je 28 '22 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:148 Ap '22

"As much credit is owed Mr O'Brien as ever for his self-confidence. It was that which enabled him to conceive and carry through the somewhat audacious idea of determining the comparative worth of the year's output of short fiction, three-starring, two-starring, one-starring and no-starring each story according to its deserts, and providing the public a ready-made selection that skimmed the cream of the cream and called for no effort further than might be necessary to accept the editor's standards of excellence."

+ — Spring'd Republican p6 F 22 '22 500w

"A work of great interest to students and clubs."

Wis Lib Bul 18:105 Ap '22

O'BRIEN, FREDERICK. Atolls of the sun. 508p il $5 Century

919.6 South Sea islands. Paumotu Islands 22-26880

In Mr O'Brien's third book on the South Sea islands he writes chiefly of the atolls of the Paumotu archipelago. These coral reefs, also called the Dangerous Islands, are eighty in number, half of them uninhabited and all the others scantily peopled. As in his other books, the author enters intimately into the life of the islands and tells the stories of interesting characters, native and half-caste, whom he met: Mapuhi, the native chief; Nohea, the pearl diver; the Peyrals, father and daughter; the tragic Mlle Narbonne. He also tells two longer tales at second-hand, Christian's story of the mutineers of the "Bounty" on Pitcairn's Island and Llewellyn's Easter Island tale. Throughout the book there is much about the religious life of the islands, where Mormons and Roman Catholics are equally zealous. A chapter on Paul Gauguin is included.

Bookm 56:639 Ja '23 160w

Cleveland p94 D '22

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p35 D '22 60w

"'Atolls of the Sun' will possibly be Mr. O'Brien's least important book, altho it should be directly stated that as a travel book it is delightful from beginning to end. It is only in comparison with Mr. O'Brien's two previous volumes that the importance of this third book diminishes."

+ — Int Bk R p38 Ja '23 1600w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Lit R p380 Ja 13 '23 720w

"There can be but small doubt that it will be widely read, and it may as well be stated here that the book is certainly worth reading. It is not as good a book as either of the two that preceded it, but perhaps this is due to the fact that Mr. O'Brien has already touched the high spots of his South Sea Islands and was working with material left over." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y Times p4 O 15 '22 2800w

"The mood of the book is contagious and its author is one of those delightful raconteurs whose stories never tire. Coupled with a keen perception and interest in detail, he has the journalist's sense of a good story and these two, in turn, he combines with a rather pleasant, lazy manner of telling which seems almost to take its mood from the temper of the South Seas." S. T. Beach

+ N Y Tribune p9 N 5 '22 850w

"Of Mr. O'Brien's three works, the reader will find this one in hand the best in the matter of good writing and sustained interest. He is a worthy successor of Melville." D. C. S.

+ N Y World p6 O 22 '22 400w

"Described by the author with characteristic vividness and charm of style."

+ Outlook 132:391 N 1 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:32 Ja '23

Pratt p30 winter '23

R of Rs 66:672 D '22 90w

O'BRIEN, FREDERICK—Continued

"It is the usual thing, or perhaps a little more so than usual."

— Springf'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 210w
 Wis Lib Bul 18:253 N '22

O'BRIEN, GEORGE AUGUSTINE THOMAS.
 Economic history of Ireland from the Union to the famine. 589p $7.50 (21s) Longmans

330.9415 Ireland—History. Ireland—Economic conditions 21-17356

"[The author's] purpose is historical, detached altogether from propagandist aims. He sets out to answer the question: Why did Ireland become so discontented with the Union of 1800 and demand so insistently to have it repealed? Dr. O'Brien is well aware of the so-called 'political' reasons, and he does not minimize their importance. But his concern in the present book is with the economic reasons, and he finds these more than sufficient by themselves. He sets them forth in three divisions, showing how Ireland suffered in respect of (1) her agricultural resources; (2) her non-agricultural resources—including mines, fisheries, and manufacturing industry; (3) the public finance and taxation under which she was brought. The indictment of the British alliance is very powerful indeed, and it is free from those faults which are traditionally associated with Irish controversial methods."—Ind

"This book is a piece of historical study under the form of a process of reasoning. It proves its point with a conclusiveness that at first invites suspicion: the demonstration fits the dogma with the exact inevitableness of scholastic forethought. Closer acquaintance, however, brings confidence in a bit of scholarship admirably done, though without quite dispelling a sense of strangeness at finding a chapter of nineteenth-century history conceived in the spirit of a schoolman's disquisition." C. E. Fryer

+ Am Hist R 27:555 Ap '22 390w

"Dr. O'Brien has written as an historian, and because he has, he has produced a document much more potent than any piece of propaganda, more final than the findings of the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland."

+ Cath World 114:536 Ja '22 310w

"There is no rhetoric in these pages, and there is no declamation; just a marshalling of facts and a citing of documents and a chain of cogent though not always conclusive reasoning, in a style that is strictly and even severely restrained. . . . The book is a perfect storehouse of minute and detailed information about many branches of Irish industry." H. L. Stewart

+ Ind 108:202 F 25 '22 1400w

Reviewed by Preserved Smith
Nation 114:570 My 10 '22 400w

O'CONOR, NORREYS JEPHSON. Battles and enchantments. 168p $2 Houghton

398.2 Folklore, Irish 22-20157

These myths and legends of Ireland retold from early Gaelic literature belong to that part of the myth history of early Ireland which deals especially with the fairies. The author has retained as much of the original phrase and imagery as is consistent with a readable narrative.

Booklist 19:129 Ja '23

"The message of the bards of old is not warped by this present interpreter. Not a word of partisanship or of criticism will you find here; no innuendo or gibe or modern instance. Here is a dignified, loyal chronicle of traditional glories which the present would do well to bear in mind, and on which the future must build." A. F. Brown

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 14 '22 1100w

"Mr. O'Conor's translation gives access for the layman to a valuable addition to Irish legend." Hugh Lofting

+ Lit R p363 Ja 6 '23 780w

N Y Times p10 N 19 '22 30w

Reviewed by Vivian Radcliffe

N Y World p6e O 22 '22 50w

"This new volume of prose while arranged with a view to interesting younger readers, will please their elders who find a charm in the melancholy and romantic beauty of tales that Mr. O'Connor retells in the spirit of their creator centuries ago."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 O 13 '22 120w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 3 '22 110w

O'DEA, MARK. Red Bud women; four dramatic episodes. 123p $2 Stewart Kidd

22-12923

An illuminating foreword by Pierre Loving precedes this collection of one-act plays, in which he compares the American farmer with the European peasant, to the detriment of the former, and describes the women of the farms as the victims of the spiritual decay of rural communities. The plays, he says, stand for the stark emptiness of the lives of American farm women and also for their dimly awakening consciousness of this fact. In "The song of Solomon" the aging wife of a prosperous farmer loses her reason as the result of a life-time of drudgery and her husband's complete disregard of all her needs and comforts. In "Shivaree" a bride on her wedding night rebels against being classed with Holstein cattle, farm lands and implements and makes a rush for freedom. The other two plays are: Miss Myrtle says "Yes," and Not in the lessons.

"Mark O'Dea in his complete effacement of all psychological reaction, his adherence to the principle of spiritual destitution, has stripped his work of any literary or aesthetic value. He adds no new thought, but presents painfully true situations with a lack of stimulating conviction and artistic feeling."

— Lit R p891 Ag 19 '22 170w

"On the whole, Mr. O'Dea seems to be trying to build a large car out of Ford parts. The vehicle wheezes, rumbles, groans." E. W. L.

— New Repub 32:228 O 25 '22 210w

— Springf'd Republican p10 S 6 '22 390w

"The fourth play, Not in the Lessons, wabbles between farce and something of a harsher mood. Shivaree is the best of these plays, it has something about it that is audacious and powerful both in its situation and in its brutality of approach; and it has a pattern that is clear and poignant."

+ — Theatre Arts M 6:350 O '22 200w

O'DONNELL, CHARLES LEO. Cloister and other poems. 74p $1 Macmillan

811

22-20673

"Seven or eight years have passed since Father O'Donnell's book, 'The Dead Musician and other poems' was published. Considering the slimmness of the present volume, which takes over a poem or two from the earlier collection, the fact is evident that the poet is not a voluminous writer. Father O'Donnell's cloister is the world, and in it his meditations and visions bring forth a closeness with the mystery of beauty as it fills both the divine and secular impulses. . . . Though the poems have for the most part a religious background and substance they carry the full texture of a human quality." —Boston Transcript

Reviewed by D. Morton

Bookm 56:766 F '23 60w

"On Father O'Donnell, I should say, has fallen the mantle of Father Tabb as the most gifted and distinctive poet-priest in contemporary American verse." W. S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 2 '22 1500w

"A book sufficiently vital at its best almost to claim a place on the shelf with that slumbering old worthy and Solon, Father Tabb. Yet, on the other hand, too many of the fires here seem to burn but palely. They are of inconsistent luminosity."

+ — Lit R p342 D 23 '22 400w

"This slim volume, in part a reprint of his 'The Dead Musician' of six years ago, contains at least half a dozen lyrics which are part of Time's golden pack. Lacking Francis Thompson's sweep, Father O'Donnell is finer in small: we prefer his chiseled gems of song to the best of Father Tabbs's." Clement Wood

+ Nation 115:sup624 D 6 '22 480w

O'DONOVAN, GERALD. Vocations. 334p $2
Bonl & Liveright

22-7437

Winnie and Kitty Curtin are the daughters of a prosperous provincial shopkeeper in Ireland who have been educated in a convent boarding-school and dedicated by their mother to the conventual life. They are shown at the beginning of the book, at home, languishing in the boredom of their gentility, their thoughts running to marriage and no husbands in sight. Winnie has already dedicated herself to Mercy Convent, nuns and priests are praying for Kitty, and a net of intrigue is being drawn about both to get them into the convent on account of the dowry they would bring to it. They take the veil. The sentimental Winnie, influenced by her girlish passion for one of the priests, fits naturally into the convent life. Kitty is made of different stuff. She revolts more and more against the life, until in her resentment against the advances of a sensual priest she determines to break her vows. The interest of the story is in its description of the life of the convent. It is not painted wholly in black. Not all the priests are sensual and worldly, or all the nuns foolish and sentimental. There is a truly devoted mother superior and a wise old parish priest who is guide and friend to his parishioners.

"The whole matter of life in the convent is an amazing revelation. The telling quality of his statements lies in their absence of passion. He never rants and he gives the impression that he is quite ready to stake his honor on the truth of his presentation of facts. One cannot doubt the honesty of Mr. O'Donovan's convictions." D. L. M.

Boston Transcript p5 My 27 '22 1000w

"It seems a pity that a book so superbly well written should be so miserably proof-read. The typographical errors in this edition are inexcusably abundant. However, they will probably be done away with in later editions and if the book gets half the reading it deserves there will be many of these." D. K. Laub

+ — Detroit News p14 My 2 '22 1950w

Dial 73:354 S '22 130w

"Mr. O'Donovan's scornful prejudice and his adherence to a thesis are as locks on his mind: he tries to be serious, scandalous, and satirical in one breath; and he fails all around. One clear merit, however, Mr. O'Donovan's book has: the novelty of its setting in an Irish small town. The Irish small town has hardly yet made its debut in literature, and therefore one reads the opening of 'Vocations' with genuine interest and pleasure." M. M. Colum

+ — Freeman 5:497 Ag 2 '22 1750w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:395 Ap 22 '22 140w

"It must not be supposed that 'Vocations' is an argumentative book. We are not told things in it; we learn them inevitably from the life that is shown. The picture of that life has breadth as well as precision. Its truth is sober, ripe, and of the utmost convincingness. If 'Vocations' is a first novel, it is the work of an extraordinarily mature art." L. L.

+ Nation 114:540 My 3 '22 580w

"Mr. O'Donovan can write. He chooses a definite situation, states it admirably, presents his characters with extraordinary vividness, and follows his compact plot to a logical conclusion. His description is swift and good, his dialogue natural and idiomatic, his narration lively, his choice of salient incident convincing. . . . The book is not a masterpiece, but it makes it clear that Mr. O'Donovan should go on writing." Martin Sampson

+ New Repub 31:234 JI 19 '22 520w

"The Reverend Mother, vague and well-bred and pure in heart, and for that reason all the more bewildered in the midst of the hopelessly unspiritual institution which she has to organize for spiritual ends, and inclined to drift out into the garden and forget these hard problems in trimming the rose bushes, is an exquisite invention. It is perhaps the strangest thing about a book which is quite unlike anybody else's that, though it is the product of derisive anger and austere spirituality, it has the quality of charm." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 17:650 S 17 '21 1000w

"'Vocations' is very distinctly an unusual novel; unusual in its plot, as well as in its dramatic quality, its admirable portrayal of character, and the good taste shown in the handling of an exceptionally ugly situation. The author's understanding of human nature, and his talent for characterization, give 'Vocations' a much wider appeal than its theme would indicate." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p14 My 7 '22 1350w

"The book is sensational, but the sensationalism is not cheap. Mr. O'Donovan handles passions boldly, vigorously, but with fine artistic restraint. And his treatment of religious issues seems to me free from animus, free from the sort of propaganda and argument which ruin a work of art. . . . Mr. O'Donovan is an artist." J: Macy

+ N Y Tribune p7 My 21 '22 1350w

"Mr. O'Donovan spares his reader nothing, and draws a really terrible picture of the follies, intrigues and vices which are hidden behind those discreet [convent] walls. But a remarkable sense, either of artistic balance or of justice, prevents this picture from ever degenerating into melodrama. It is long since we read so forcible and so moving a story. Whatever his fortune as a propagandist, we congratulate him on his achievement as an artist."

+ Spec 128:55 Ja 14 '22 400w

"While Mr O'Donovan's subject matter can hardly fail to make a painful impression on many readers, he has a graceful, sincere and attractive style, and his portrayal of the speech and style of conversation of the true Irish people is meticulously correct."

+ Springfield Republican p7a O S '22 420w

"Mr. O'Donovan does not fail in psychology. If, then, his tale is unconvincing, it is because the action and environment are unreal. The author has not drawn from observation, as in his first book. He has placed his vocationless nun in an invented milieu, which all his racy humour, dry satire, and brilliance of style cannot render credible."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S
22 '21 290w

"You may say that 'Vocations' is a problem novel and that the conclusion to be drawn from it is that the problems of life, of sex, and of faith cannot be solved by becoming a nun. But, even if that is so, the author is more concerned with his story than with any conclusions to be drawn from it. He, like every human being, has his own opinion of the institutions and characters about which he writes, but he does not write to express those opinions; he has the impartiality of the artist, and proves it by the interest of his story."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p750 N
17 '21 530w

OECHSLI, WILHELM. History of Switzerland; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. (Cambridge historical ser.) 450p il $6.50 Macmillan [20s Cambridge univ. press]

949.4 Switzerland—History (Eng ed 22-18610)

"The late Professor Oechsl of Zurich, who died in 1919, was unquestionably the greatest authority on Swiss history in our time, and his simple and picturesque style distinguished him from most modern writers who use German. His History of Switzerland, 1499-1914, which has been skilfully translated, is an exceptionally valuable addition to the Cambridge Historical Series."—Spec

O'DONOVAN, GERALD—Continued

"Professor Oechsli tells the story of Switzerland with great lucidity, with complete mastery of his rich material, and with a skill for moulding it into episodes that makes much of the charm of the narrative." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 21 '22 850w

Eng Hist R 38:153 Ja '23 350w

Lit R p302 D 9 '22 250w

"Oechsli's history, though admirably translated, is not particularly enthralling. It is a sound and dull political narrative, in which people who want the facts will find them." J. M. Murry

+ — Nation and Ath 32:58 O 14 '22 1500w

"An excellent guide-book to what cannot be made a very exciting tract of country. The translators are to be congratulated on an admirable piece of work." F. B.

+ New Statesman 19:642 S 16 '22 850w

Spec 129:310 S 2 '22 300w

"It is written throughout with a fullness of knowledge, and, resulting from this, a sense of proportion, a sure and definite grasp of detail, which would have been very difficult for anyone not a native of the country whose whole life has not been spent, as was that of Dr. Oechsli, in the study of its history."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p527 Ag 17 '22 1950w

OEMLER, MRS MARIE (CONWAY). Two shall be born. 411p $1.90 Century 22-18851

From a dilapidated castle in Poland, the ancestral seat of the last of the Counts Zuleski, the scene of the story shifts to New York. The dying count had sent there his only daughter, the Countess Marya Jadwiga, entrusted with important secret documents, the result of a lifetime of conspiracy for the freedom of Poland. She at once becomes the target of the Russian, German and Japanese secret service commissions and in the course of their attentions is showered with gifts by the Japanese, harassed by the Germans, kidnapped and put thru the third degree by the Russians. Before this she had been rescued from another peril by the handsome traffic policeman, Brian Kelly, placed in a friendly retreat and secretly married to him. He, with the aid of his millionaire father and of Baron Rittenhaus, of the German secret service, now delivers her from the clutches of the Russians and the Baron sees American democracy in a new light.

Booklist 19:87 D '22

"An exciting romance, full of humor, amusing situations and dramatic intensity."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 11 '22 200w

"Mrs. Oemler possesses a knack of sustaining the reader's interest at a high pitch, and the book should prove to be one of the most popular of the season's light novels."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 170w

"The evident ability of Mrs. Oemler almost raises the book above its type, and leads one to believe that she could write a real novel, if only she could shake off the cinema formula." C. R. S.

+ — N Y Tribune p9 O 15 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 13:255 N '22

OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING. Social change² with respect to culture and original nature. 365p $2 Huebsch

301 Sociology. Social problems 22-27481

"Our interest is not primarily with specific programmes but rather with the more general and perhaps more fundamental aspects of social change. The treatment deals with inquiries concerning the nature of these changes, why social changes occur, why certain conditions apparently resist change, how culture grows, how civilization has come to be what it is. These questions involve considerations of the nature and frequency of inventions, and of the part will power and human nature play in producing these processes."—Preface

Booklist 19:109 Ja '23

"Professor Ogburn deals with material and his problems in a thoroughly scientific manner, a manner marked by truly scientific conservatism. He does not explain anything in terms of only one aspect or one factor, and he does not propose complete and specific solutions for insoluble problems." R. G. Fuller

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 7 '23 1500w

"It is indeed a pity that such scholars as Dr. Ogburn cannot spread on the printed page the results of their years of study and research in terms more intelligible to the public. His arguments would possess much significance if only told in words and thoughts which the layman could grasp. An ideal combination for a book such as this would be Dr. Ogburn's erudition plus H. G. Wells's ability to write simply and clearly."

+ — N Y Tribune p29 Ja 28 '23 550w

"A useful introduction to the study of society and its problems. It is not easy reading for the 'general reader,' and some of the discussion verges upon the jargon of the 'social psychologist.' But, in general, the author is calm and objective. The book is an analysis rather than a description of the approach to social theory. It is frankly and honestly tentative and the more valuable for that."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 19 '23 250w

OGDEN, HARRIET VERONA CADWALADER. Then came Molly. 318p $1.75 Penn 22-10018

"The story of a girl who ventures from the seclusion of a Southern plantation into the tumult of life in New York and the delicious excitement of study in an art school. Being gifted with a genius for painting, she rapidly outstrips all her competitors and is rewarded by becoming the target of their jealousy. But she perseveres until in the end she is in sight of the success that her talent merits; and, incidentally, and after various difficulties and misunderstandings, she succeeds in an entirely different field—and is well on the road to having her engagement announced."—Lit R

Booklist 18:368 J1 '22

"Miss Ogden has a fluent manner of writing, with an insistence on trite figures of speech and technical art terms which betrays the connoisseur. She has written a mildly exhilarating story that will appeal to the younger generation because of its romantic and rather adventurous spirit, and it is neither too technical nor too well written to bore the casual reader of light fiction."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '22 270w

"One more nice love story with a happy ending."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 21 '23 270w

"The slight and somewhat commonplace plot is redeemed in large part by the skill of the character delineations and by the artistry with which the author has portrayed the South Carolina background. Miss Ogden displays a genuine narrative ability which might be more fittingly employed on a canvas of wider proportions."

+ — Lit R p674 My 20 '22 110w

N Y Times p15 My 14 '22 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 130w

OGG, FREDERIC AUSTIN, and RAY, PERLEY ORMAN. Introduction to American government. (Century political science ser.) 841p $3.75 Century

342.73 United States—Politics and government 22-10617

"Beginning with a short survey of the nature and problems of government, the authors trace briefly the origin of our system and then proceed to a detailed exposition of our national, State, and local arrangements. This exposition is made the more useful, as well as the more interesting, by being critical and not merely formal. The size of the book is such as to allow more space than is often afforded for presentation of individual matters. Thus five pages are devoted to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The discussion includes events as recent as the inauguration of a budget system at Washington. It hardly need be stated that the influence of parties receives careful and extended consideration, both historical and analytical."—Lit R

"Taking the book as a whole its conspicuous features are its accuracy, comprehensiveness, incisiveness in the presentation of facts and conclusions, and the clear and readable style in which it is written. The chief shortcoming is the fact that the authors have attempted to cover so much ground that there has been little opportunity for the development of important ideas." A. C. Hanford

+ — Am Pol Sci R 16:509 Ag '22 1000w
Booklist 19:70 D '22

"The routine of our governmental structure is amply given, and, for a book that claims only to be an introduction, remarkably full. There are few statements to provoke controversy from intelligent men."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 26 '22 600w

"The authors are well known authorities in the field of political science, and they have produced a book excellently adapted for college use or for the general reader."

+ Lit R p94 O 7 '22 190w

N Y Tribune p9 N 12 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:541 D '22

"This book offers a critical survey of our national, State and local governments. It is unusual to find all three topics so fully developed in a single volume."

+ R of Rs 67:221 F '23 140w

St Louis 20:265 N '22

"It is a well-proportioned and reasonably complete, though introductory survey. Its practical educational value extends beyond the requirements of the student, for whom it is intended; all who desire to be instructed regarding our national, state and local institutions, their successes and limitations, will find the material authoritative and clearly and engagingly presented."

+ Springfield Republican p10 S 19 '22 900w

Wis Lib Bul 18:251 N '22

O'HIGGINS, HARVEY JERROLD. Some distinguished Americans, imaginary portraits (Eng title From the life). 336p $2 Harper 22-19436

The method of psychoanalysis is used in these seven imaginary portraits or character studies. In this manner the author explains the art and life of Henri Anthon, a great architect, the career of Dan Reilly, political boss, and the mind of Mrs Murchison, who murdered her husband. And thus is accounted for the psychology of the prison reformer, Warden Jupp, and the millionaire, Peter Quale, Dr Adrian Hale Hall-muth, surgeon, and Vance Cope, moving picture director.

Booklist 19:124 Ja '23

Reviewed by E. H. Reede

Bookm 56:756 F '23 2000w

"The book abounds in the strange, in fiction, and in truth, welded together by the magic of the discoveries made in the spiritual nature of man. Americans will enjoy and may profit by these studies in the form of character sketches; for in them they will see themselves." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 6 '23 900w

"Mr. O'Higgins invariably shows his character in action, and then, like a good analyst, reaches back into his character's past for the explanation of action. It is an interesting method, but it has been employed too frequently, and with too little variation, within the compass of a single volume."

+ — Dial 74:209 F '23 70w

"Interesting and rather novel work."

+ Ind 109:284 N 11 '22 30w

Int Bk R p59 F '23 550w

"This venture into the subconscious is a welcome departure from the custom of the Sunday school writers of fiction of dealing only with conscious, obvious motives; at its best, and in the hands of sincere, capable men like Mr. O'Higgins, it results in illuminating portraits of human character." Parkhurst Whitney

+ Lit R p146 O 28 '22 960w

"Well executed and carrying an air of actuality."

+ Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 20w

"These imagined portraits have substance and conviction."

"His satire is laid down with rather heavy strokes. For plot interest Mr. O'Higgins is to be congratulated."

+ — N Y Times p20 O 29 '22 750w

"Despite his very real gifts as an author, Mr. O'Higgins falls short of complete success in the task that he has set himself." E. R. Redman

+ — N Y Tribune p8 N 5 '22 1250w

"Practically every tale in Harvey O'Higgins's 'Some Distinguished Americans' is a short novel. Nothing is left out in the stories. Each portrait is full and complete." Heywood Brown

N Y World p11 D 2 '22 230w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 132:533 N 22 '22 120w

Sat R 133:x Ap 29 '22 60w

"The author of these seven 'Imaginary Portraits' has evidently succeeded better than he hoped in realizing his subjects. Had he been fully aware how vital were the powers of imagination at his command in all probability he would have dispensed with the mechanical device by means of which he tries to cozen the reader into accepting his make-believe celebrities as real. But so marked is the vital quality of Mr. O'Higgins's vision that this artificially manufactured aid to the reader's imaginative credulity appears more in the nature of an intrusion."

+ Spec 128:629 My 20 '22 380w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

O'LEARY, DE LACY EVANS. Arabic thought and its place in history. 320p $5 Dutton [10s 6d K. Paul]

181 Philosophy, Arabic (Eng ed 22-14142)

The book proposes to trace "the most romantic history of culture drift which is known to us in detail." It shows how Hellenistic-Roman culture passed thru the Syrian church to the Zoroastrians of Persia, the pagans of Harran to the Islamic community and from thence to the western Muslim community in Spain, where, as a much altered but essentially the same body of thought it influenced Christians and Jews, attained its final evolution in north-east Italy, and as an anti-ecclesiastical influence, prepared the way for the Renaissance. Contents: The Syriac version of Hellenism; The Arab period; The coming of the 'Abbasids; The translators; The Mu'tazilites; The eastern philosophers; Sufism; Orthodox scholasticism; The western philosophy; The Jewish transmitters; Influence of the Arabic philosophers on Latin scholasticism. The book contains a chronological table of leading events from the death of the Prophet Muhammad to the fall of the Muwahhid dynasty in Spain.

"The author's treatment of this rather vast subject is very clear and his method of exposition is to be commended. His knowledge of it, if not always strictly accurate, is, on the whole, well balanced, and Mr. O'Leary has the saving grace of always giving his sources and naming the available texts of these sources, which is one of the most valuable features of the book."

+ Am Hist R 23:90 O '22 700w

Boston Transcript p7 My 6 '22 450w

Reviewed by E. F. Humphrey

Nation 115:75 Jl 19 '22 150w

O'LEARY, DE LACY EVANS—Continued
 New Statesman 18:540 F 11 '22 500w
 No Am 216:139 J1 '22 410w
 Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:6 Ja '23
 St Louis 20:203 S '22

"A most interesting book. Dr. O'Leary's book might be improved by a careful revision and by the addition of an index, but his account of the strange experiences of the Aristotelian philosophy in the East while Europe was painfully struggling through the Dark Ages of barbarism and reconstruction is well worth reading."

+ — Spec 128:243 F 25 '22 800w
 "It is a little book, closely packed, of high value."
 + The Times [London] Lit Sup p151 Mr 9 '22 360w

OLLIVANT, ALFRED. One woman; being the second part of a romance of Sussex. 300p $1.75 Doubleday [8s 6d Allen & U.]

22-4209

A continuation of the theme developed by Mr Ollivant in "Two men." (Book Review Digest, 1919) The background is Sussex, and the outstanding figure of the tale, a sturdy example of the English peasant type. Ruth Boan married to the shiftless though likable Ernie Caspar, falls really to love him and is constantly aware of his failure to provide for her family. The unscrupulous hunch-back brother, who earns as easily as Ernie loses is determined to possess his sister-in-law and flaunts his monetary success as the chief enticement. Meanwhile, another man appears on the scene, a representative of modern labor and he seems irresistibly drawn to Ruth and she to him. The whole is set against a background of conflicting political and economic questions.

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '22 90w
 Detroit News p16 My 14 '22 450w

"It is a bit of fiction in its own right, but it also involves a keen observation that amounts almost to an arraignment of certain classes in England. . . . The narrative begins in 1908, slowly unfolding into the first year of the World War. It is richly and beautifully worked out, with evident fidelity and sincerity."

+ Lit R p533 Mr 25 '22 390w

"A situation skillfully developed through the six years covered by the narrative. . . . The anxiety of those fateful days when England's decision still hung in the balance is well depicted, and the account of the meeting at which Joe Burt defies the pacifist leader is vivid and stirring. The Sussex background is affectionately pictured."

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 19 '22 700w

"There are moments in Mr. Alfred Ollivant's 'One Woman' when he seems to be in a veritable point of vantage for clear success; but in the end this second part of a romance of Sussex does not altogether justify the expectations which its passages of patient eloquence for the profundities of life have aroused."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p563 S 1 '21 450w

OLMSTEAD, FLORENCE. Madame Valcour's lodger. 261p $1.75 Scribner

22-7439

"[This story of New Orleans] is all about a very ambitious young man named Luke, who worked his way through college and developed great scientific ability. When he finished college he went to work in a bank. But the world of finance furnished no scope for his chemical genius, and having made this discovery, he rented Mme. Valcour's attic to use as a laboratory. With that singleness of purpose which characterized him, he rigged up a wireless station and set to work on his great idea, the invention of synthetic rubber. Democracy is the plea of the book. Georgina, the aristocrat, doesn't mind plain, substantial people, and she falls in love with Luke without finding out who his family, the Hampdons, were. True, she got a terrible jolt when she discovered his mother, Mrs. Regan. Because Georgina could not conceal her shock, Luke thought her love had ceased. But Democracy triumphs and Georgina accepts him on the last page."—N Y Times

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

"Mildly told in a pleasant style that makes mountains out of mere trifles."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '22 150w

"It is a pleasant romance of rather slight dimensions; a story of several interesting characters, well sketched into the picture, who thereafter move through their scenes not altogether smoothly and convincingly."

+ — Lit R p659 My 13 '22 50w

"Its propriety is not irksome. On the contrary, the book is amusing—very amusing—more amusing than it was meant to be."

+ — N Y Times p17 My 7 '22 280w

N Y Tribune p5 J1 2 '22 100w

"Written pleasantly enough."

Spec 130:191 F 3 '23 50w

Springf'd Republican p5a D 10 '22 200w

"The fresh and charming setting of the book gives it a valid excuse for its existence."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p845 D 14 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

O'NEILL, EUGENE GLADSTONE. Hairy ape; Anna Christie; The first man. 322p $2 Boni & Liveright

812

22-16205

"Briefly, the subjects of these three plays are, in the first the study of a man barely emerged from the condition of a beast, in whom the human birth is undergoing the agonizing pains of parturition; the study, in the second play, of a prostitute who turns toward a clean life and a clean love, only to be beaten down by the two men closest to her, and third, the depiction of a man with an unnatural hatred of fatherhood and of a society of vicious small-town gossips who make the most of an apparent scandal. In each of these grim reflections of life one finds an intense sympathy with the sufferer who exploits the theme, an understanding of his or her soul and an utter absence of sentimentality."—N Y Times

Booklist 19:13 O '22

"The Hairy Ape is a tour de force, an artificial product, which, while possessing nearly every dramatic virtue, fails in the primary quality of convincingness. It is striking in its conception, and its tragic dénouement is the most original thing Mr. O'Neill has ever done."

+ — Cath World 116:714 F '23 400w

Cleveland p67 S '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
 Ind 109:78 Ag 19 '22 130w

Reviewed by Stark Young
 New Repub 32:307 N 15 '22 1550w

"Reading through this book, you feel the author's imagination, and you are impressed with his power and originality. But you also feel a distinct note of hysteria running through the work. There is a sort of screech. The speaking voice is raised a bit beyond normal. It is as though he had been too long in an atmosphere of strain, and even horror, too long in the company of people who are not well in mind and body, and was writing under an obsession. This is partly the result of his subjects, but it is more than that; it has to do with his treatment of these, with his men and women themselves, with his emphasis on certain traits and his refusal entirely to balance the picture he paints." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 13 '22 1750w

Pratt p28 winter '23

St Louis 20:301 D '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:215 O '22

O'NEILL, MOIRA, pseud. (NESTA HIGGINSON). Songs of the glens of Antrim, and More songs of the glens of Antrim. 126p $1.50 Macmillan [5s 6d Blackwood]

821

22-4936

To her original collection, "Songs from the glens of Antrim," published twenty years ago, the author has added "More songs of the glens of Antrim," and the two are now issued in one volume. The new poems consist of fifteen songs of the Antrim glens, six songs from northwest Canada, and eight translations from the Italian poets. All appeared originally in Blackwood's Magazine.

"No one has more accurately revealed the heart of the country folk of Ireland, at home or in exile, than this Irishwoman, who now lives in Canada. This collection of her poems is one of the significant books of contemporary Anglo-Irish literature." N. J. O'Connor

+ Bookm 55:420 Je '22 110w

Cleveland p69 S '22

"The songs are musical, human, and with only a little more Irish dialect than is absolutely necessary for seasoning. Most of the songs are inevitably in minor key; since little employment would there be for the Irish harp were it not for numerous disappointments in love, a high rate of mortality among lovers, and a very whirlwind of sighs of longing for some spot in Green Erin where (ochone!) the singer is not." Arthur Guiterman

+ Ind 108:396 Ap 22 '22 180w

"Moira O'Neill has ability to handle a great variety of stanza forms, and, for rhythm, an ear so exquisite that it may well be envied by the subtlest practitioner of free verse. She frequently employs metres that might easily degenerate into sing-song, but she stops always at the edge of the pitfall, varying the cadence of a line so that there is no descent to the monotony of perfect regularity." N. J. O'Connor

+ Lit R p544 Ap 1 '22 280w

"The delicate magic of Miss O'Neill's lyrical gift translates them to the most charming efforts."

+ N Y Times p19 My 14 '22 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:363 Jl '22

"There is little of her former diversity of method and cadence. She is content with those long loping rhythms which the amateur loves to roll and prolong over the lulled ears of his audience. The poems have swollen to the length required by an item in a concert programme. But where the muse of Miss O'Neill treads the low hills of her own countryside and roams beside its dark waters, she is always simple and melodious. When she moves from Antrim to North-West Canada, she becomes mechanical."

+ Sat R 133:262 Mr 11 '22 300w

"Anyone who cares for Irish melody, Irish wit, and the haunting half-sadness of Irish verse, peering eerily out from behind its most joyous utterance, will find a treasure in this slim volume, admirably printed."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 7 '22 500w

"Moira O'Neill has kept us waiting twenty years for her new sheaf of songs, and we can but regret that a spring which flows so freshly should flow so seldom. She can still give us treasures of humour and aptness."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p24 Ja 12 '22 360w

O'NEILL, ROSE CECIL (MRS HARRY LEON WILSON). Master-mistress. 227p $2.50 Knopf 811

22-19634

The title poem of this collection apostrophizes the duality of sex as a "lovely monster. . . seeming, two in one, with dreadful beauty doomed." All the poems are cryptic, mystical and symbolic, as are also the drawings by the author.

Booklist 19:115 Ja '23

"At times, but all too fitfully, the author wrestles with her chisel and succeeds in trimming the nebulous billows down and shaping them rather hauntingly—but through the book as a whole, one must resign oneself to wandering and wondering."

Bookm 56:774 F '23 150w

"These poems and these drawings make us feel that there is something stupendous about Rose O'Neill. She is not to be judged by any of our ordinary standards. She has in very truth outsoared our time and revealed herself as belonging to that small band to whom we willingly accord the title of Master." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '22 1100w

"One of the significant volumes of American poetry. The collection contains more than a score of poems of such amazing beauty and strength that they push outward the bourn of English singing. To say that she is at once established as a leading American poet of today is less true than untrue. She is as American and as much of today as the wind; and no more. She is a sport, a freak; dateless, eternal." Clement Wood

+ Nation 115:sup622 D 6 '22 800w

"Several poems are far below standard, and the volume would have gained from culling before going to press. In most of the poems, which she calls ballads, Miss O'Neill strikes a note which rings deep and true, and thereby gains forgiveness for some trivialities. There is a deal of humor in the book."

+ — N Y Times p2 D 17 '22 450w

"There are no smug magazine verses here, no pale sighings of the kind put out with such sickening regularity by college boys. An imagination which is both quaint and fiery is at play." Rex Hunter

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 29 '22 450w

ONIONS, BERTA (RUCK) (MRS OLIVER ONIONS). Subconscious courtship. 346p $1.75 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-19908

This comedy is a variation on the familiar theme of the husband and wife who fall in love with each other after marriage. The heroine, Clover Elphinstone, is a young widow the death of whose husband left her at the head of a great business and at the mercy of fortune-seekers. She arranges to marry Harry Carmichael on a strictly business basis, he to furnish protection against her pursuers in return for her financial and social aid in promoting his cherished invention. But since she is irresistibly lovely and he splendid and manly business gives way to romance.

Boston Transcript p9 N 22 '22 390w

"Her novel can be very highly commended to any one of adult experience and intelligence who wants to give romance and sentiment their due without risking the indignities to which the average light novel or moving-picture show exposes one."

+ Lit R p248 N 25 '22 260w

"There is no denying that her effervescent quality has dulled and her ingenuity grown weaker and less spontaneous since her early books. The falling off in this last one is marked, especially in the manner in which it is written which no longer successfully camouflages with its airy gayeties the wild improbabilities of its structure. In theme and plot it is a characteristic Berta Ruck production and bears no little similarity to some of her previous stories."

+ N Y Times p24 O 22 '22 450w

"Probably such books don't do any harm. 'Silly' and 'innocent' are words that were once synonymous and are still near akin." Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p8 O 22 '22 330w

"A cheerful, but not original, story."

+ — Spec 129:407 S 23 '22 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p516 Ag 24 '22 220w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

ONIONS, BERTA (RUCK) (MRS OLIVER ONIONS). Wrong Mr Right. 309p $1.75 Dodd 22-8595

Morwenna Beaugard decides to be independent, so she seeks a post in London. Her desire to provide flowers, theater tickets and candy for her fellow clerks, without their knowing that she is really trying to brighten their lives, causes her to embark on a path of deception. She invents the story of a young man who is supposed to be the donor of all these gifts. Serious complications follow, the man suddenly becomes a stern reality and the heroine, though engaged to the wrong man, finally marries the right one and forfeits the money which might have been hers.

"Of course, an author's main purpose in life is to find something new. Miss Ruck is always succeeding. Human nature does exactly what she tells it to, but she tells it to so amusingly, that we can hardly wonder. What cares the T. B. M. if her fiction is one rainbow colored bluff. If you must bluff the universe, just bluff it with a grin."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 29 '22 340w

"The style of the story would undoubtedly be called 'sprightly.' It is always cheerful and amused at itself, and it gives the impression of having enough action to make several movies. It belongs to a type which comes in summer along with the clouds of yellow butterflies, always moving, always light, always ephemeral."

+ Lit R p551 Ap 1 '22 290w

"There is abundance of action, with bright dialogue and plenty of wholesome humor. While the work cannot boast of any great depth, it is ingenious in a rattle-brained sort of way, and, on the whole, is a smooth, entertaining novel which can be safely recommended for Summer reading."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 23 '22 70w

"Lively and amusing."

+ Outlook 130:656 Ap 19 '22 30w

"The story is told in the author's characteristic light vein and cannot fail to find favor with flappers and sentimental grown-ups."

Spring'd Republican p7a N 12 '22 180w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

ONIONS, OLIVER. Tower of oblivion. 437p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

21-19846

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:191 Mr '22

"We must admit that the developments are handled with considerable plausibility, and that the ending is the only plausible one. But it is a gorgeous bluff. And, after all, that's the fun of it." I. W. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ja 14 '22 640w

Dial 72:324 Mr '22 80w

"It is an artificial type of story, but the writer gives it a touch of emotion and many touches of fancy and characterization which lift it far above the usual mechanism of the mystery tale." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 107:330 D 24 '21 460w

Reviewed by Carl Van Doren

Nation 114:126 F 1 '22 130w

"The idea of the story is alluring, but it refuses to become interesting. . . Mr. Onion's characters are presented with almost burdensome fulness, yet they never become quite real to us."

— No Am 215:280 F '22 880w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:150 Ap '22

"Those whose imaginations are circumscribed, and who are unable to conceive of conditions of life outside their own, or indeed any human experience, had better leave this book severely alone. But those, on the contrary, who have not forgotten how to revel with 'Alice in Wonderland' will not allow such departures from realism to spoil their enjoyment of a book that is in many ways admirable."

+ Spec 127:900 D 31 '21 320w

"If the book had been half as long or the characters a little more striking, the daring originality of the theme would have stood more chance of convincing and absorbing the imagination of all who delight in the bizarre and extravagant. As it is, 'The Tower of Oblivion' is a mildly interesting creation."

— + Spring'd Republican p13a Ja 22 '22 370w

Spring'd Republican p7a F 4 '23 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Evil shepherd. 303p $2 Little

22-18397

'Sir Timothy Brast is a figure of dominant mystery in Mr. Oppenheim's novel. All the other puzzles in the story are solved early in its course. But not until almost the final page is the reader able to determine the facts about Sir Timothy. He may guess and guess again, but he is as likely to be right as wrong. Is Sir Timothy a good man, or is he a monster in the many varieties of iniquity? Is he to be admired or is he to be loathed? Even his daughter is mystified about him, and as for Sir Francis Ledsam, his mystification equals that of the reader. Strange happenings cluster about his secluded estate on the Thames, not far from London, and it is not until the reader is admitted to a view of the place and of what goes on there, that his curiosity is fully satisfied.'—Boston Transcript

Booklist 19:87 D '22

"The story is told in Mr. Oppenheim's vivacious style, his scene as he creates it is more fantastic than real, but at the same time he makes it a very entertaining and plausible world of the imagination. The reader who fails to be pleased by 'The Evil Shepherd' must be difficult to satisfy." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '22 820w

Lit R p371 Ja 6 '23 180w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Great Prince Shan. 303p $2 Little

22-4981

This tale pictures world politics in 1934. England, relying on the supposed security of the League of nations, is to be the victim of a mighty plot of which Russia, having refused to join the League, and Japan and China, having withdrawn from it, are the main instigators. Germany, longing for revenge for the Treaty of Versailles also lends her hand. The mysterious oriental, Prince Shan, and an English girl, whose influence finally saves her country from disaster, are the main figures of interest among others whose secret service activities make the story exciting.

"It is high romance, very high romance! However, the story has some exceedingly good situations and plenty of thrills in it." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 15 '22 900w

"An excellent book, one that holds up from beginning to end and that has no small amount of sound political theory in it, too."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 9 '22 350w

"As a story the book is one of the author's best; and behind the story there are suggestions for serious thought."

+ Outlook 130:656 Ap 19 '22 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:198 My '22

"There is plenty of interest and a measure of excitement in the tale, but it may be said without undue criticism that Mr Oppenheim's natural ability as a story teller suffers when he takes the role of prophet too seriously. He is an adept at clever, puzzling plots, but less gifted and entertaining when he injects, as here, a considerable measure of romance. However, it is, broadly viewed, a characteristic Oppenheim tale."

+ — Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 2 '22 420w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p509 Ag 3 '22 160w

Wis Lib Bul 18:134 My '22

ORAGE, ALFRED RICHARD. Readers and writers (1917-1921). 181p $1.75 Knopf [7s 6d Allen & U.]

824 Books and reading. English literature 22-10417

The author of these essays in miniature is editor of the New Age (London). The essays, which run from half a page to four or five pages in length, cover a wide range of modern literary criticism and comment on such a wide variety of writers as James Joyce and Henry James, Ezra Pound and Standish O'Grady, Nietzsche, and Plotinus, Karl Marx and John Mitchel. There are papers on the London Mercury, the Dial, and the Little Review, on literary copyright in America, on psychoanalysis, and man's survival of bodily death, on the decline of free intelligence, and on nature in English literature.

Booklist 18:357 J1 '22

Cleveland p70 S '22

Reviewed by Vivian Shaw
Dial 73:223 Ag '22 960w

"Mr. Orage is able to play a lone hand without lapsing into eccentricity, or bitterness, or the coterie-spirit. He is absolutely independent and absolutely fearless; he is that most valuable of critics, the man who loves his own generation and chastens it because he loves it. He never permits an idea to pass him unexamined. There is a steely toughness, a hard, clean lucidity about his thought that is obviously the result at once of an unremitting moral effort and of an unflinching delight in the use of the intellect."

Freeman 5:214 My 10 '22 1550w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:488 My 27 '22 120w

"These essays are to be read, not for their phrases, but for their sustained, challenging thought. They are the commentary of one of the keenest minds in England upon the men and books of his time." Ernest Boyd

+ Lit R p718 Je 10 '22 1050w

"Mr. Orage's book is very interesting; it is full of stimulating, or profound, or provocative opinions; and it is most excellently written. But the person who buys it expecting to find a collection of literary judgments will be disappointed. Afterwards, he may come to the conclusion that he has got something better than he bargained for; but he will never be convinced that he got what he bargained for." J. M. Murry

+ Nation and Ath 30:729 F 11 '22 1350w

"Mr. Orage invariably makes you think. You are in deep waters on almost every page; you cannot escape from the force and lucidity of his arguments; he pursues you unrelentingly and compels your attention. Indeed, in a great many instances there is no argument, only plain incontrovertible truth."

+ Sat R 133:93 Ja 28 '22 500w

"He reveals no little point in his reflections and considerable pungency and common sense in his general outlook; but he often generalizes at random. Mr Orage's causeries contain wise and discerning remarks along with paradoxes and labored generalizations. Short causeries of this kind are written on a particular model and for a particular purpose; in their place, the reader makes allowances which he is not disposed to make when they are gathered in a book."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 31 '22 220w
Survey 48:250 My 13 '22 80w

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA. Balance. 351p $1.90 Stokes

22-6162

Changed conditions after the war, as they affect both industry and individual lives, is the theme of this story. Richard Norton, son of the manager of the Norton manufacturing company, still under the spell of a vision that had come to him while wounded in France, is restless and dissatisfied until he finds his mission as industrial reformer. After much struggle, involving a break with his father, the latter's death at the hands of a murderer, and a strike, he succeeds in reorganizing the plant on a democratic basis, giving the workmen a voice in the management. Meanwhile the love affair between Richard and Lola Stewart has also experienced a war change, not by diminishing their love for each other but by deluding themselves that a platonic relationship is more in keeping with their high resolves and their work for humanity. The passionate love of a young working girl for Richard further complicates matters and not until a jealous assassin's knife, in missing its aim, cripples Olga for life, do Lola and Richard feel that they have a right to each other.

Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '22 800w

"All in all the book is dull and commonplace—pallid fustian—no warp of color nor woof of charm to relieve it, although it is written with painstaking and obvious sincerity."

—Lit R p587 Ap 15 '22 200w

N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 110w

"The book makes a pleasing and palatable dish, for light regalement between meals or for evening refreshment. Mr. Orcutt's intelligent purpose in writing the novel becomes somewhat obscured by the wealth of incident."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Ap 9 '22 270w

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

ORCZY, EMMUSKA (MRS MONTAGU BARSTOW) baroness. Castles in the air; being the adventures of M. Hector Ratichon. 252p $1.75 Doran

22-7884

The outstanding figure of these pages is M. Hector Ratichon, a charming rogue whose questionable adventures take place in Paris in the days following Napoleon's fall. He serves his country by divers means and never refuses aid to a beautiful woman. His cunning scheme for his marriage to Mademoiselle Estelle Bachelier on whose fortune he proposes to live comfortably for the remainder of his days, is but one of his many adventures, sometimes successful, sometimes almost disastrous. The serving man Theodore is a treacherous scoundrel whom Ratichon finds useful in helping him to carry out his schemes.

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

"Gay, debonnaire, delicious is M. Hector Ratichon and whether he is recovering a stolen dog or stealing an international treaty his exploits are entirely interesting and entertaining."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 18 '22 250w
Springf'd Republican p13a Mr 26 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

ORCZY, EMMUSKA (MRS MONTAGU BARSTOW) baroness. Nicolette; a tale of old Provence. 315p $1.75 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-26886

"A story of old Provence, and the period selected for it is the reign of Louis XVII. Here we have a love affair between an aristocrat and a girl of the lower classes, but in this case the tables are turned, for the aristocrat, although the lineal descendant of the great troubadour, Comte de Ventadour, is parvenu, and the girl, Nicolette Deydier, is very rich. This makes no difference, however, to the old Countess, for in ancient days the Deydiers were lackeys of the Ventadours. Young Bertrand de Ventadour goes to St. Cyr to train for the army, and for a time he seems to be spoiled by the artificialities and superficialities of Paris and his aristocratic family. Love, however, will find a way, and the reader may be encouraged by the statement that Baroness Orczy never fails to complete her tales with happy endings."

—N Y Times

ORCZY, EMMUSKA—Continued
Booklist 19:55 N '22

Lit R p51 S 23 '22 280w

"The book is well written, and while it in no sense challenges the superior position of the author's more colorful Scarlet Pimpernel stories, it yet is one that her readers should be pleased to read."

+ N Y Times p26 S 17 '22 220w

"Could hardly be expected to entertain any one above the age of eighteen, though for that age it would do very well."

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 24 '22 40w

"Such movement as there is in the tale could be compressed without much difficulty within the limits of a short story. The rest is a matter of atmosphere, and of pretty and graceful sentiment."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 11 '22 70w

OSBORN, EDWARD BOLLAND. Literature and life; things seen, heard and read. 213p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

824 (Eng ed 22-8856)

This collection of essays originally appeared in the London Morning Post. It comprises whims and fancies, life experiences and moods, literary, philosophical and humorous reflections. Partial contents: King Lear's chapter; Cornish pictures; Epic liars; Love or eugenics; Vachel Lindsay's poems; New card-games; The anatomy of wit; London from the Thames; The daily humorist; English folk-songs.

"The depressing spectacle of a naturally pedantic fellow attempting to be One of the Boys—the professorial literary editor of the London 'Morning Post' masquerading as a journalistic Puck. His humor never quite comes off."

— Bookm 56:354 N '22 150w

Reviewed by Newton Arvin

Freeman 6:548 F 14 '23 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:167 S 30 '22 90w

"It is a mild, pleasant book, and gives assurance that the English light essay can still be urbane, allusive, and totally unconcerned with the vital aspects of contemporary literature and life."

+ Lit R p420 Ja 27 '23 290w

"An unusually light-weight production, being, indeed, merely a collection of agreeable essays on nothing in particular and adorned with occasional literary references." J. W. Krutch

— Nation 115:339 O 4 '22 180w

"He has the qualities necessary to the weekly essayist. He has a sense of fun, a varied acquaintance with books, the art of allusion, the capacity to share enthusiasms and emotions with a friendly reader. Necessarily, we find his book somewhat unequal. It is difficult to avoid the impression in reading rapidly a succession of articles that have appeared in a newspaper that the author, however sincere and enthusiastic he may be, has now and then to force the note."

+ New Statesman 18:400 Ja 7 '22 650w

"On the whole Mr. Osborn's essays are excellent in their own way—the way of good talk, that is neither 'highbrow' nor dull; but they were written for British readers."

+ No Am 216:714 N '22 500w

"Mr. Osborn is always worth reading, and has qualities that give him a rather unusual position in modern journalism."

+ Sat R 132:620 N 26 '21 330w

"Mr. Osborn has always something interesting and amusing to say."

+ Spec 127:902 D 31 '21 100w

"There are the fruits of a highly versatile observation in these brief essays. Though some of the subjects may be trite we feel that he takes us over a large breadth of country and makes much of it look new."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p784 D 1 '21 750w

OSGOOD, HENRY OSBORNE. Mildred, Tom and Old Salt. 243p $1.75 Houghton

22-17774

Mildred was a very small girl who had lost her doll, Belinda, while out rowing. Mildred was sure Belinda had been cast away on a desert island, so she was quite ready to set out on a search for her. One night the man with the moon came to see Mildred and introduced her to Tom, a little boy of her own age, and to Old Salt, a sailor. With these two Mildred stowed away on a ship and had many delightful adventures, until they finally found Belinda.

"There is an Alice in Wonderland flavor to it, although it is far below that classic in point of merit. Still, the adventures of Mildred on the Lonely Island are not without their charm."

+ N Y Times p10 N 19 '22 50w

Springf'd Republican p12 D 22 '22 60w

OSLER, SIR WILLIAM. Evolution of modern medicine; a series of lectures delivered at Yale university on the Silliman foundation, in April, 1913. (Silliman memorial lectures) 343p il $6 Yale univ. press. [25s Milford]

610.9 Medicine—History 22-1538

"The lectures are popular rather than technical in form, and were intended, the author stated, to present 'an aeroplane flight over the progress of medicine through the ages.' Covering as it does the growth of the art of healing from the first dawn of written history down to the twentieth century, the work is of necessity general in its nature, yet the economy of diction practiced by its author permits of the inclusion of a wealth of details which is truly surprising."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 18:224 Ap '22

Bookm 55:204 Ap '22 50w

"The only fault in the story itself, written by a master of literary style and starred with apt quotations in prose and verse, is that there is too little of it." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 18 '22 $60w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:146 F 11 '22 50w

"It is by no means a voluminous tome upon the history of medicine, but rather a series of brilliant sketches. With consummate skill, he achieves the almost impossible, and in this rapid flight hovers on the important epochs long enough to allow one to see their essential features with vividness and precision." W. T. Longcope, M.D.

+ Lit R p318 D 16 '22 1300w

"Highly interesting and able summary, suited to layman and doctor alike."

+ Nation and Ath p1:656 Ag 12 '22 1250w

"The large type and abundant and attractive illustration of this volume will make it a delight of the physician who is fortunate enough to have it by him for leisurely reading. Nor will it prove less entertaining to the non-professional reader, for Sir William Osler's literary style is notably agreeable and free from dry-as-dust methods."

+ Outlook 130:391 Mr 8 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:222 My '22

Pratt p16 summer '22

+ Spec 129:112 Jl 22 '22 1700w

"The work has all the fascination of fiction. The style is smooth-flowing and rich in imagery, reflecting the liberal education and catholicity of taste of the author. The work is profusely illustrated, and is so indexed, both by personal names and by subjects, as to make its use as a reference work easy."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 14 '22 400w

"Its strongest section is that which deals with the more modern period, a department that has been curiously neglected by historians of medicine. As a historian Osler here exhibits his especial gift of sympathy. He had an instinct for discerning the relations of men and of things, and this book is a work of intuition rather than of research. Osler's volume presents us with a vivid and moving panorama, the memory of which will not easily fade. It reads to the student and to the practitioner of medicine a lesson against dogmatism and the static view of things, of which we all stand at times in need."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Mr 23 '22 1250w

"One could wish that 'The Evolution of Modern Medicine' might be read of all physicians. Nothing could more dignify and ennoble in their eyes the calling to which they have devoted themselves; nothing might more inspire them to share in the onward and upward advance of their art. Between its covers will be found a great wealth of historic and scientific fact treated in the most engaging literary style."

A. N. Tasker

+ Yale R n s 12:413 Ja '23 1000w

OSSENDOWSKI, FERDINAND. Beasts, men and gods. 325p $3 Dutton

915.1 Mongolia—Description and travel. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917- 22-18122

The book is an account of almost incredible adventures experienced by a Polish scientist after fleeing from the Revolutionary committee in the Siberian town of Krasnoyarsk and spending a year and a half in wandering about in the wilds of Tibet and Mongolia. Lewis Stanton Palen, in an explanatory note to the volume, after admitting that the succession of trying and thrilling experiences recorded seems in places too highly colored to be real or even possible, assures the reader that Dr Ossendowski is a scientist and writer with a training in careful observation which should put the stamp of accuracy and reliability on his chronicle. A part of the book is devoted to the mysteries of Asia and of the land of the Living Buddha, with its strange beliefs and folk-tales. Glossary and index.

Booklist 19:51 N '22

Bookm 56:340 N '22 120w

Boston Transcript p6 S 9 '22 680w

"It is not alone the thrilling story he relates which makes his book attractive, but his style of narrative as well. Whether written in English, translated from the Polish, or transcribed from a Polish-English original, it is difficult to state; but however composed, the book retains a certain flavor of the exotic, a taste of the Slavic salt, which gives the story an unmistakable smack of the simple truth, even in its most highly colored passages."

+ Cath World 116:563 Ja '23 400w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p37 D '22 60w

Int Bk R p33 Ja '23 900w

"The book gives a valuable photographic account of conditions almost unbelievable to the average American. It is well written, with a frankness and a detachment which are highly commendable. There is no suggestion of propaganda either for or against Bolshevism. It is indeed refreshing in a day of radicals and agitators to find a man who is able, after such a terrible succession of experiences, to maintain his equilibrium of thought." S. T. Beach

+ Lit R p46 S 23 '22 1250w

"It is a fascinating book, and whoever opens it is likely to yield to the magic of its account of the perils and marvels and graphic pictures of a world so completely and so distantly removed from our own as to make its pages seem like a tale from some distant planet."

+ N Y Times p22 N 26 '22 1250w

"Though it is technically a book of travel, it resembles far more the narratives of the medieval European voyagers in its quality of surprise than it does the type of work identified by that name in these days. It is a remarkable human document, too, because of its revelation of the reactions of a highly cultured and educated man in the face of conditions of primitive savagery." Robert Cresswell

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 10 '22 600w

Pratt p29 winter '23

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseud.). Above suspicion. 302p $1.75 McBride

Geoffrey Peters, a mason and carpenter in the little Long Island town where Joseph Benkard is murdered, runs the criminal to earth and manages to solve a baffling mystery. Benkard, a wealthy resident is found dead on his veranda, with his head crushed in. There does not appear to be one tangible clue in the whole affair. Peter finds one, however, and he follows it up with complete success.

"The story holds the interest and its conclusion satisfies the gentle reader, if it would not meet the approval of the legal gentry."

+ Lit R p372 Ja 6 '23 190w

"The novel is a cleverly contrived, baffling mystery story, factitious, of course, as all such stories are, but interesting and having certain features in method and material that give it freshness and individuality."

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 7 '23 550w

"The innumerable complications are very cleverly worked out, and interest never flags." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p23 Ja 28 '23 130w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseud.). McCarty incog. 307p $1.75 McBride

22-22438

McCarty, an ex-roundsman, and his friend, Dennis Riordan, while out fishing are overtaken by a storm and McCarty is washed ashore on the sandy dunes of a little Nantucket village. He is battered and exhausted but manages to reach a seemingly deserted cabin where he finds the dead body of a woman. Impelled by his detective instincts he determines to probe the mystery. The discovery of the murdered woman's identity and of the network of circumstances connected with her death make an exciting mystery tale.

"The book is well written and in the end all snarls are straightened out. It has plenty of local color for those whose scene is New England."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 17 '23 140w

"McCarty Incog' is an ingenious and well-constructed mystery story and is sure to please the large class of readers who prefer that type of fiction to any other."

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 7 '23 550w

"A more generally satisfactory detective story seldom comes our way." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p23 Ja 28 '23 260w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseud.). Tattooed arm. 278p $1.90 McBride

22-14186

There is much gossip in the little Long Island town of Brooklea where the Drake family had resided for many years. Why three elderly gentlemen should suddenly act as if bereft of their senses is the mystery Sergeant Miles and "Scotty," his able assistant have to solve. Miss Patricia Drake, whose father is one of the brothers afflicted, in desperation and unbeknown to the other members of the family, calls in the help of detectives. After many exciting weeks a wily scheme is unearthed in which counterfeiters, rogues from Australia and a tattooed arm play important parts, and even the shrewdest reader will be puzzled as to the outcome of the story.

"The skill of Miss Ostrander lies in her successful blinding of her readers. In this she differs from most writers of mystery tales—her clues are gathered and unravelled by sleight of hand. It takes place before our eyes, but we quite honestly remain blind to what is happening." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 9 '22 780w

"This book is the triumph of the regular detective, the gifted amateur plays no part in it."

Daily News Rec p8 Ag 23 '22 450w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 120w

OSTRANDER, I. E.—Continued

"The solution is a little far-fetched, when it comes; but the general plan of the story is original and well worked out."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p62 Ja 25 '23 300w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseud.). Two-gun Sue. 316p $1.90 McBride 22-10771

Two-gun Sue was the eldest of three orphans who inherited Circle Six ranch on the death of their father. She had been gently brought up and educated but her heart was in the ranch which she was determined to keep no matter what the hazards might be. The story tells how she held the property against a band of unscrupulous speculators who had found oil on the land, a fact of which the owners were ignorant. She was helped in her fight by the inevitable young Easterner, with results easily foreseen.

Booklist 18:368 J1 '22

"It is well told, and the exciting incidents are kept within bounds and reality with a skill that makes the story both convincing and entertaining."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 23 '22 150w

"Of course, the tale goes with a dash and includes plenty of dramatic situations, for these are the first two virtues of this type of fiction. Somehow there is a deal of pleasure in reading about the extreme exertions of fictional characters while placidly lying in a hammock, and, therefore, 'Two-Gun Sue' is suggested to the lover of Western tales as the sort of yarn to take along in that satchel."

+ N Y Times p27 Je 4 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p618 S 28 '22 20w

OUSPENSKY, P. D. Tertium organum; the third canon of thought; a key to the enigmas of the world; tr. from the Russian by Nicholas Bessaraboff and Claude Bragdon. 2d ed rev 336p $4 Knopf

197 Philosophy, Russian. Consciousness. Fourth dimension 22-22294

Revised edition of a book first published in 1920. "The book might have appropriately been called A Study of Consciousness, for Ouspensky comes early to the conclusion that all other methods of approach to an understanding of the 'enigmas of the world' are vain. Chapters I to VII, inclusive, deal with the problem of the world-order by the objective method. From chapter VIII onward, he undertakes the study of the world-order from the standpoint of subjectivity—of consciousness. . . . Ouspensky concludes that nothing except consciousness unfolds, develops, and as there appears to be no limit to this development, he conceives of space as the multi-dimensional mirror of consciousness and of time and motion as illusion." (Translator's Intro.)

"The chief value of a book like this is not that it will change our ordinary ways of conducting the affairs of life, but that, greatly to the credit of the author, it reveals in striking ways the limited range of our knowing faculty, opens up fresh opportunities of approach towards inaccessible depths, and discloses new vistas for the human wonder, which is only in its beginnings." E. N.

Boston Transcript p8 N 4 '22 1000w

OUTDOOR stories; retold from St Nicholas. 178p il $1.25 Century

Short Stories—Collections 22-17038

A collection of stories, all with outdoor settings, which have appeared in St Nicholas during the last few years. Contents: The silver cup, by George M. Johnson; How Queela hunted Hawk's-bill, by Peri Lupia; The peace-maker, by Frank Lillie Pollock; Adrift on the Amazon, by Dewey Austin Cobb; The fish that took the medal, by William Hervey Woods; Peggy's 'possum hunt, by Mrs Burton Harrison; Along the trout-stream, by Robert S. Lemmon; The black hero of the ranges, by Enoch J. Mills; Rob Dunstan's first blackfish drive, by Edward Morgan; Racing waters, by Louise de St. Hubert Guyol; A young hunter of to-day, by Robert F. Gilder; The moose that was not afraid, by Frank Stick; A message by fire, by Cullen Bryant Snell; Hunter's luck, by Frank Stick.

Booklist 19:129 Ja '23

"When you get a group of children's stories, even from such a reputable fount as St. Nicholas, you can see what is the whole matter with American juvenilia: haste. But their styles are almost interchangeable. And where are the laughs?"

+ Lit R p206 N 11 '22 60w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 5 '22 120w

OVERTON, GRANT MARTIN. When winter comes to Main street. 384p 50c Doran

820.4 English literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism. Authors 22-23091

With a frankly avowed purpose of advertising Doran books and authors and a frankly borrowed title from two best-sellers, the book brings together convenient information, not easily accessible elsewhere, about some contemporary writers, English and American. A chapter each is devoted to Hugh Walpole, Stewart Edward White, Rebecca West, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Arnold Bennett, Irvin S. Cobb, Richard Dehan, Frank Swinnerton, W. S. Maugham, R. W. Chambers and Stephen McKenna. In other chapters, authors grouped as mystery writers, humorists, memoirists and biographers, children's writers, travelers, etc., are more briefly treated. The individual sketch includes in each case personal information, critical comment, bibliography and portrait. Index.

"If you get a poor idea of the advertising business, correct it by reading Grant Overton's 'When Winter Comes to Main Street!'" E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:167 S 30 '22 150w

St Louis 20:300 D '22

"It is enthusiastic in its admirations. But its praises are not fulsome and if some of its judgments be open to question they nevertheless have the quality and helpfulness of actual critical consideration. Readers and booklovers are indebted to the house of Doran and to Mr. Overton for an exceedingly convenient and useful vade mecum on a considerable number of important writers of the day."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 N 2 '22 140w

Wis Lib Bul 18:272 D '22

OVERTON, JOHN. My lady April. 256p $1.90 Stokes [7s 6d Laurie]

A romance of Bath in the days of Beau Nash. Dorothy Forrest, a charming young person, was used as a decoy by her parents, a pair of titled reprobates who ran a fashionable gaming house. When debts became too pressing Sir George and Lady Forrest departed their ways and left Dorothy penniless. Dorothy, on account of her beauty, had many adventures which almost proved her downfall, but owing to the timely intervention of the gypsy, Merodach, the romance ended surprisingly well.

"All in all, the kind of story to fill most pleasantly an idle hour. Mr. Overton has a brisk, rather piquant manner of writing which suits his theme admirably."

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 13 '22 230w

"Charged with inconsistencies, but still quite charming. The book has no considerable value, but it is diverting, and the action does not drag. The interest is in plot, and, pretending to nothing more, the author succeeds in constructing a very creditable romance."

+ — Lit R p132 O 21 '22 190w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p8 S 24 '22 180w

"We conjecture in no disparaging spirit that the story, full as it is of dramatic situations and potential 'curtains,' has been written with a view to the stage. Should such be its destiny, we hope that the author will prune away those linguistic anachronisms in which the dialogue abounds. They would certainly pass unnoticed by an average audience. But all the same it is a pity that they should disfigure an otherwise creditable piece of work."

+ — Sat R 133:529 My 20 '22 200w

Spec 128:246 F 25 '22 10w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 26 '22 150w

"A charming little romance."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p61 Ja 26 '22 40w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

OWEN, JOHN. Cotton broker. 308p $2 Doran
[8s 6d Hodder & S.]

Edward Crossford fought his way up from nothing to the head of a big cotton house, using everything and everybody, unscrupulously, as stepping stones to his advance. He made a fortune; forced a crash when one of his business associates had indulged in rash speculations; miraculously put the house of Crossford on its feet again—but gained his greatest victory when he stood up before his world a ruined and dishonored man. It all came about because his business sagacity, his fighting ability, were all his own, while the moral courage that was needed in times of stress resided not in himself but in the two women who held his fate in their hands—his mother and his wife. The mother, having discovered the flaw in his character, had watched over him during her life, and, dying, had placed a commission on the wife that was one day to come into the son's life. He felt it was the dead mother's hand that had guided him in the choosing of his wife. Mary, too, sensed the trust that had been put on her and, when the day came, saved her husband from spiritual ruin.

Lit R p513 Mr 18 '22 180w

"The book is not unentertaining. The point of view is often interesting and well put, but there is too much of descriptive analysis, too much of repetition. Moreover, Mr Owen has badly handicapped himself by choosing a very clumsy method of narration."

+ — N Y Times p14 F 5 '22 280w

OYEN, HENRY. Tarrant of Tin Spout. 304p
$1.75 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-9054

A tale of the Texas oil fields. The young westerner Spence Tarrant of Tin Spout is the figure of interest among these men of divers character, all on oil intent. Dr Dickinson, caught in the oil game, is in the power of one Bodine, an unscrupulous ruffian who pays unwelcome attention to Marjorie, the doctor's daughter. They plan to secure Tarrant's option on a certain lease by some trickery, thereby making the Syndicate, a company of which Bodine is the head, absolute master of the field. Their plans are frustrated by the information Marjorie gives to Tarrant, whom she is not sure if she loves or hates, a question decided in the closing chapter of the book.

"From start to finish, the swift-moving incidents are cumulative in their effectiveness. It is full of good, honest melodrama. The events come swirling about the characters with tremendous rapidity but without giving the reader any sense of impossibility. Frankly a 'thriller' but in the best sense a 'thriller' that thrills."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '22 280w

"One of his best tales, full of adventure and excitement, and a considerable amount of humor, not to forget a pleasing love interest. The tale is well told and the plot well developed, making a delightful book."

+ Lit R p643 My 6 '22 180w

"Mr. Oyen has proved long before this that he can write absorbing yarns, and this book is quite up to his best."

+ N Y Times p22 My 7 '22 110w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 8 '22 40w

P

PACKARD, FRANK LUCIUS. Doors of the night. 297p $1.75 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
22-7927

Billy Kane, the trusted secretary, is wanted for the brutal murder of his father's old friend, David Ellsworth. Seeking refuge and determining to track down the real murderer, Kane finds himself accepted by the underworld of the East Side, as their notorious leader, "The Rat." Then follows one adventure after another, of which Kane is the central figure, owing to his mistaken identity. He finally manages to bring the real criminal to justice after a hairbreadth escape in which his life is dramatically saved by the Woman in black.

"In Mr. Packard's story—clever almost convincing as the illusion is—there are a number of serious drawbacks. Entertaining as [the] story is, we cannot [help] the feeling that in many ways these denizens of the underworld seem peculiarly guileless!"

+ — Boston Transcript p7 My 13 '22 670w

"The style of 'Doors of the Night' is sometimes sadly ragged."

+ — Lit R p534 Mr 25 '22 80w

"Part of the plot is hardly plausible, but in an underworld story one must expect certain curious things. The main point is that the novel is a well constructed yarn, bristling with action in every chapter and always thoroughly entertaining."

+ — N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 100w

Springf'd Republican p13a Mr 26 '22 90w

"This provides a luxurious banquet of thrills, which does immense credit even to Mr. Frank L. Packard's tried ability in this kind of culinary art."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p345 My 25 '22 180w

PAGE, THOMAS NELSON. Dante and his influence. 239p il $2 Scribner
$51 Dante Alighieri 22-20550

The book is published under the auspices of the Page-Barbour Foundation of the University of Virginia. Its object is to present a brief sketch of the life of the poet and of the conditions amid which that life was cast, together with certain considerations which a study of Dante and his time throw on the screen of the recent past. It is the author's conviction that Dante is essentially a spiritual educator who is needed today.

Booklist 19:115 Ja '23

"Those who love the great Florentine will be glad to find in this book an enthusiasm supported by scholarly research; those who do not yet love him will learn to do so."

+ Bookm 56:770 F '23 150w

PAGE, THOMAS NELSON—Continued

"To start with, Mr. Page outlines an acceptable though quite conventional treatment of his subject; but he quickly departs therefrom, and the various aspects of his theme overlap in a most disorderly fashion. The chapter on Dante and Italian Nationality contains not a word on the theme announced in the chapter heading. Often a theme is announced, and within a few moments the lecturer is off at a tangent, rising generally to a kind of O altitudo of admiration." S: C. Chew

— Nation 115:695 D 20 '22 500w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 23:26 Ja '23

"Is not the sort of writing Mr. Page did best, and those who have delighted in his stories will find this combination of quoted criticism, personal reminiscence and glorification of Italy a decided disappointment. The tone of the entire book is badly rhetorical. The arrangement of the material is also indifferent. It is the work, one judges, of a tired man. The references to customs Mr. Page observed in modern Italy form the freshest and most appealing parts of a book which will add nothing to Mr. Page's literary standing and little to a wider understanding of Dante."

— Springfield Republican p7a N 19 '22 300w

PAIN, BARRY ERIC ODELL. If winter don't.
88p $1 Stokes [1s 6d T. Laurie]

827 22-20425

The burlesque nature of this parody on "If winter comes" appears in its alleged authorship by A. B. C. D. E. F. Notsonmuchlson. It is in imitation of the staccato style and the mannerisms of that novel and shows up some of the typographical tricks now in vogue among novelists generally. It relates the matrimonial and business vicissitudes of one Luke Sharper whose chief recreation is suffering, who is given to the most startlingly original notions and whose emotional stresses are indicated by the flapping of his ears.

"Not a very bright parody."

— Boston Transcript p8 N 4 '22 130w

"Barry Pain is keen and ruthless. He has caught the style of this very popular novel cunningly. He has put his finger upon many a weak spot. The Hutchinsonian mannerism, every Hutchinsonian mannerism, is done to a crisp. It is cruel, and yet it is helpful."

+ Lit R p154 O 28 '22 300w

N Y Times p2 Ja 14 '23 30w

Springfield Republican p7a D 24 '22 100w

"This is very good fun. Much of the book is superficial fooling; the whole shows the hand of a writer who, jester though he is, was ever a man of fine taste and clean workmanship."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p602 S 21 '22 150w

PAINE, RALPH DELAHAYE. Roads of adventure. 452 il $5 Houghton

13 or 32 22-23739

Beginning with his adventures at Yale as a member of the boat crew the author records one thrilling incident after another in his career as reporter and newspaper correspondent all over the world—in Cuba during the Spanish-American war, in China at the time of the Boxer uprising, on our western frontier, and with the American fleet during the Great war. Always one feels the keen sportsmanlike enjoyment in the doing of the things he describes. He was not one of the "stupid mortals" of whom he says they "are always in haste to reach somewhere else, forgetting that the zest is in the journey and not in the destination."

Booklist 19:156 F '23

"Amusing incident does not fail. There is color, romance and fact. Surely, however, stopping to quarrel in such a book of doing and daring is absurd." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:755 F '23 600w

"These adventures are all mild enough and they have accumulated a tremendous mass of verbiage that seems out of all proportion to their dramatic value. Yet in them is something that holds the interest even though it leaves the reader free to skip without losing much of the substance." W. A. M.

— Boston Transcript p5 F 3 '23 1000w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 109:346 D 9 '22 330w

"Mr. Paine writes beguilingly of what he has seen and done in the last thirty years. Not the least of his accomplishments is the rare ability to separate the wheat from the chaff."

+ Int Bk R p35 Ja '23 1000w
Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
N Y Tribune p21 Ja 21 '23 1100w

"The book will appeal to readers who like lively, conversational accounts of stirring adventures."

+ Outlook 132:726 D 20 '22 60w

"His book of reminiscences has all the interest of a novel."

+ R of Rs 67:109 Ja '23 80w

"Throughout the narrative is brisk and humorous, picture after picture is unrolled in deft vivid strokes and the action is continuous. There is not a dull page."

+ Springfield Republican p7a D 17 '22 1150w

PAINTED windows; studies in religious personality, with an introd. by Kirsopp Lake. 229p il $2.50 Putnam [5s Mills & B.]

922 Church of England—Clergy. England—Biography 22-6538

The "Gentleman with the duster" having analyzed politicians, statesmen and English fashionable society now turns to some of the bishops and clergy of the Church of England, seeking thru the study of these religious personalities to discover a reason for the low regard in which the church is at present held. He sees in Bishop Gore, who is generally regarded as the greatest spiritual force in the English church today, a mystic turned controversialist; in Dean Inge, than whom the author thinks there is no greater mind in England today, a fatal lack of human sympathy; in Archbishop Davidson, a leader who has held the church together but under whose leadership religion in England has steadily declined. And so this tireless analyst goes on with his keen dissection of twelve personalities, attempting by his "dusting" to reveal the blot on the soul, the weak spot which accounts for failure. Contents: Bishop Gore; Dean Inge; Father Knox; Dr. L. F. Jacks; Bishop Hensley Henson; Miss Maude Royden; Canon E. W. Barnes; General Bramwell Booth; Dr. W. E. Orchard; Bishop Temple; Principal W. E. Selbie; Archbishop Randall Davidson; Conclusion.

Booklist 18:327 Je '22

"A masterpiece of journalistic impressionism. The author is a reporter rather than an artist, but one of superior honesty and sincerity. His sympathies, however, are limited by his prepossessions." W: N. Guthrie

+ Bookm 55:419 Je '22 620w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 22 '22 600w

Cath World 115:695 Ag '22 380w

"We have not yet caught up with what the English call their brutal frankness. Some pretentious and over-bearing Americans, in Church and State, might be reduced to a more real dignity if their fellow-countrymen would write about them as the English write of their would-be leaders. 'Painted Windows' is a book to make us look more critically upon our leaders and to demand more humility, more reality, and then to have a greater patience and to know that the real leader is Christ." C: L. Slattery

+ Churchman 125:11 Ap 1 '22 1400w
Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"It is the dreary book of a very earnest man, whose pages of prejudice are illuminated by a series of capital illustrations by Emile Berpilleux, and for whom the publisher has done his best by providing a jacket whose attractiveness merits commendation." C. A. Player

— Detroit News p11 My 2 '22 1250w

Reviewed by H. L. Stuart

Freeman 5:354 Je 21 '22 1250w

J Religion 2:336 My '22 30w

"He would have written a much better book if he did not tinge the windows of the churches he dusts with the colors of his own spectacles." Shane Leslie

— + Lit R p636 My 6 '22 920w

"He has done his job with a will, and if his writing is occasionally spiced with malice, as in the case of Dr. Orchard, or with flattery, as with Dr. Inge, we shall expect the people who liked his political sketches to like his 'religious' ones also."

+ — Nation and Ath 30:804 F 25 '22 250w

"One must confess, while brushing aside the churchmen with a vigorous gesture that is thoroughly enjoyable to most of us, that the windows of these others, though unpainted, are not extravagantly translucent." S. K. Ratcliffe

New Repub 32:283 N 8 '22 680w

"The author is so sure of himself, so dogmatic in his claims to be without prejudice, so superior, so proud, so sure that nobody can regard him humorously, and so determined not to join the ribald throng, above which he sits aloft, that he is constantly amusing, even when he is edifying. Nevertheless, he gives us a vivid view of the present condition of religious thought in England among the near-intellectuals, if not among the real intellectuals." M. F. Egan

— + N Y Times p1 Mr 26 '22 2450w

"The singular potency of the book lies in its cumulative effect. All the qualities of the book seem to have been artfully designed to accomplish one end—to emphasize, without any appearance of special pleading, the significance of the religious life. If it be possible for the critic, the satirist, the iconoclast, even, to create more interest in religion and to advance its interests, in certain ways and under certain conditions, more effectually than can the preachers of religion themselves then it may be said that the Gentleman with a Duster has accomplished this very thing."

+ No Am 216:283 Ag '22 720w

"The artist gives evidence of skillful reading of character and real sincerity of purpose. But he is not unprejudiced, and the sureness of his faith in his own composite rather than catholic creed does not give the reader confidence in the accuracy of his portraits."

+ — Outlook 131:682 Ag 23 '22 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:295 Je '22

Pratt p34 summer '22

R of Rs 65:555 My '22 150w

St Louis 20:127 Je '22

"On the whole they come off well at his hands, for Mr. Begbie, who is the Gentleman with a Duster, has, whether writing anonymously or over his own name, always treated a parson as if he loved him, so that all of them in one way or another, except, perhaps, Dr. W. E. Orchard, who is let off with a caution, are treated not merely with charity but with charity laid on with a trowel."

+ Sat R 133:291 Mr 18 '22 400w

"The 'Gentleman with a Duster' has this time rather missed his mark. He has his former power of holding our attention and an undiminished skill in inventing a telling phrase, but the alleged failure of the Churches to make an impression upon the country is not a convenient subject for his methods."

— + Spec 128:209 F 18 '22 1100w

"A searching criticism of the religious personalities of a great nation. Moreover, it is the kind of criticism which is needed—the kind that is constructive and more than national. The author brings a deft hand to his character-sketching. His portraiture is vivid, telling, and intimately real." J. E. Ward

+ Spring'd Republican p7a My 21 '22 1000w

"He is also fond of the rôle of Ecclesiastes, full to the brim of a Puritan censoriousness that recalls an outworn type of Nonconformity. What he does not realize is that the only fruitful disagreement is based on understanding; here he shows to very small advantage by the side of that eminent Victorian 'Gentleman with a Duster,' Richard Holt Hutton, who always took such pains to get at the real point of view of those he criticized."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 2 '22 650w

PALMER, JOHN LESLIE. Happy fool. 304p $1.90 Harcourt [7s 6d Christophers]

22-20173

Guy Reval, a musician and man of culture, with the impulsiveness and sensitiveness of the artist, blunders into marriage with a country girl whose youthful prettiness and subsequent helplessness appeal to all that is tender and chivalrous in him. The social difference between them and Sabina's instinctive jealousy of Guy's cousin Marian—a woman of fine fibre who has always loved him—create a barrier that gives rise to frequent scenes. After Sabina's somewhat tragic death Guy reasons himself into another impulsive act and marries Marian. Here the memory of his real affection for Sabina creates a sense of aloofness from Marian that never gives way to conjugal warmth. At the moment when the revelation of an affinity for a third woman comes to him discretion prompts him to choose a life of solitude and devotion to his art.

Booklist 19:161 F '23

Boston Transcript p6 S 16 '22 780w

"Mr. Palmer frequently startles one by his perception and understanding of the subtler motives of human conduct; in his unheralded novel there is a deeper knowledge of life, a more precise comprehension of psychological and emotional forces, than can be found in many touted works by the psychological and psycho-analytical brahmins of the day."

+ Dial 73:579 N '22 170w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:170 S 30 '22 360w

"The structural logic of the book may be sound. Life and character, however, are woven of depth and mystery and cannot be resolved into a pattern of alternatives sparsely outlined and as briefly solved. You do believe in Sabina: the other characters are only geometric pentagrams feigning the gestures of passion. Over and over again one wishes that Mr. Palmer would forego his critical aloofness, his tenuous presentment of tragic situations, his immaculate prose and scant summaries for the rich color of our difficult life." A. D. Douglas

+ — Lit R p83 O 7 '22 900w

"Good as much of the first and all of the last part is, nevertheless the novel suffers from the uncertainty of its direction. One hesitates to accuse a practised novelist like Mr. Palmer of having fumbled his story because it was not clear in his mind, but it looks as though something of this kind had happened; as though having started one story he saw no way out and so, concluding it quickly, started another." J. W. Krutch

— Nation 115:sup384 O 11 '22 540w

New Repub 32:257 N 1 '22 180w

"Rarely does one find in current fiction as real and keen a study, so delicate in its touch and so true to life, of clashing temperaments bound together by love, by need for each other and by desire for harmony."

+ N Y Times p17 S 3 '22 500w

"Mr. Palmer tells his story with quiet charm, and convinces by understatement; it is a sympathetic and likeable novel if not a masterpiece." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 3 '22 240w

"Mr. Palmer writes well, but his handling of his plot is a little uncertain. The story, however, has poignant moments, and carries the reader on with a vivid interest." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 134:21 J1 1 '22 150w

"The book is an able study of a neurasthenic, but, although it is distinctly well written, most people will find it irritating reading."

+ — Spec 129:87 J1 15 '22 80w

PALMER, JOHN LESLIE—Continued

"The picture drawn herein is neither distorted nor overdrawn, but is cruelly faithful to people of these types and circumstances, and the emotions dominating the book seem to have been accurately comprehended and valued."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 300w

"In Guy Reval Mr. Palmer has certainly drawn a solid character upon which he is to be congratulated. But where the author is less convincing is in his accessory characters and in his circumstances."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p395 Je 15 '22 500w

PANARETOFF, STEPHEN. Near Eastern affairs and conditions. 216p $2.25 (10s 6d) Macmillan

949.6 Eastern question (Balkan). Balkan states 22-3575

The book, published under the auspices of the Institute of politics publications, Williams college, Williamstown, contains a series of seven lectures giving a history of the Balkan Slavs, their church organization and literature, their educational and political status and their relation to the European powers. The author holds that the Balkan Slavs have always been handicapped by their lack of union, their mutual jealousies and strifes which have always laid them open to foreign intrigues. This fact even now stands in the way of the formation of a Balkan confederation which is their only salvation and for which the way has not been paved by the Peace conference.

"Although his time range extends over some fifteen centuries, the treatment is sufficiently skilful to avoid all dryness or appearance of merely cataloging facts. The impartiality and strict adherence to truth shown are truly remarkable in a native of the Balkan peninsula. The descriptions, anecdotes, and quotations are clear, interesting, and apt." A. H. Lybyer

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:696 N '22 380w

Reviewed by J. A. Hobson

Nation 115:sup382 O 11 '22 200w

"Trite beyond imagination. There are thirty pages on the church and literature, dry, gray, and irrelevant. There is a chapter on Political Progress hot from the Encyclopaedia Britannica and the Statesman's Year Book." C: A. Beard

— New Repub 30:144 Mr 29 '22 100w

"It is a pity that, by trying to cover so large a field in so short a time, he has condemned himself to sketchiness. Mr. Panaretoff is a pro-Bulgar, but, unlike most writers on the Near East, he keeps his partisanship within decent bounds and states Bulgaria's case with moderation and fairness."

+ New Statesman 19:246 Je 3 '22 250w
Pittsburgh, Mo Bul 27:522 N '22

"These lectures are by no means uninteresting, but the well-informed reader will see that they are written not always in a judicial or impartial spirit, and that some of their conclusions can be accepted only with reserve or not accepted at all."

— + Sat R 134:219 Ag 5 '22 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 11 '22 100w

PANZINI, ALFREDO. Wanted—a wife (Io cerco moglie); auth. tr. by Frederic Taber Cooper. 294p $1.90 Brown, N: L.

22-17456

"The leading character in the tale is Cavaliere Ginetto Sconer, the head of a firm making perfumes, soaps and ladies' toilet accessories. He eventually reaches the conclusion that he should have a wife to share his good fortune, and the tale resolves itself into his various adventures in search of the proper woman. This affords the author an opportunity for a number of amusing observations regarding the feminine sex. Whether or not the rather pompous and amusing little Italian manufacturer secures the proper wife need not be revealed here."—N Y Times

"It is not clever, it is not racy, it is decidedly not risqué. On the other hand, it is very nearly dull. Perhaps the Latins rise to it: perhaps the translation into English spoils its fine points. But be as that may, it remains that this side of the water, it collapses into a loose-knit and flabby attempt at hilarity, peopled by no characters worth the mentioning, and containing one curiously dull situation after another."

— Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '22 160w

"The humor is such stuff as slap-stick comedies and knockabout vaudeville are made on. The figure of the vulgar profiteer does offer admirable opportunity for skilled satire; but in 'Wanted—A Wife' vivacity replaces subtlety and a restless vigor passes for wit."

— Lit R p93 O 7 '22 350w

"It is comedy of the lightest and most gossamer tissue, and perhaps it may well be described by the adjective sparkling. The book is well worth reading for its humor and atmosphere."

+ N Y Times p26 S 17 '22 150w

"Stinging, good-humored satire. The translation is excellently done by Frederick Taber Cooper, into graceful yet colloquial English." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 17 '22 850w

PAPINI, GIOVANNI. Four and twenty minds; selected and tr. by Ernest Hatch Wilkins. 324p $2.50 Crowell

854

22-16898

These essays in interpretation are selected from three books of essays by a highly original and vigorous Italian writer. Papini in the preface to one of these volumes thus describes the essays: "Some are tributes of affection, some are slashings; some reveal neglected greatness, others demolish undeserved reputations. . . I have observed these souls not with the scrupulous exactitude of the pure scholar, nor with the definitive cocksureness of the professional critic, but as a man seeking to penetrate deeply into the lives of other men in order to discern and to reveal their loveliness or their hatefulness. The essays, then, are for the most part impassioned, subjective, partial—lyric, in a sense—and not critical." The last essay in the book is a caricature of himself. Contents: The unknown man; Dante; Leonardo da Vinci; Leon Battista Alberti; Berkeley; Spencer; F. C. S. Schiller; Hegel; Nietzsche; Walt Whitman; Croce; Armando Spadini; Hamlet; Remy de Gourmont; Ardengo Soffici; Swift; Carolina Invernizio; Alfredo Oriani; William Tell; Don Quixote; Kwang-Tse; Calderón; Maeterlinck; Giovanni Papini.

Booklist 19:116 Ja '23

"Papini's pages are illumined with flashes of irony, and freshened by outbursts of young enthusiasm."

+ Bookm 56:358 N '22 120w

"The most amusing and instructive of the essays is that on himself—a magnificent little bit of publicity."

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 20 '23 320w

"Papini's essays are undoubtedly interesting. They grip the reader's attention, and lure him to continue reading, even when he differs completely from the views expressed. The sentences are so crisp and vigorous, so many striking and relief-pointing phrases occur that one experiences some difficulty in laying down the volume when once one has taken it up. The essay on 'Hamlet' is the most extraordinary of the collection, and absolutely inadmissible. One really has to rub one's eyes to make sure one is not dreaming, so many literary blasphemies are heaped together there."

+ Cath World 116:414 D '22 800w

Reviewed by Slater Brown

— Dial 73:675 D '22 1000w

"A diversified, entertaining, illuminating volume, introducing adequately one of the most interesting mentalities in contemporary Europe." I. G.

+ Freeman 6:335 D 13 '22 250w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
Int Bk R p50 F '23 1050w

"Withal, Papini looms as a figure that must be reckoned with. He cannot be summarily dismissed as a charlatan. He capers a bit, to be sure; he slashes, often wildly; his mercurial inconstancy may nettle or jar or merely baffle us; but he is a salty leaven, much needed in modern life and letters." Pierre Loving
+ Nation 115:sup379 O 11 '22 1100w

"To judge from the free English translation, there is a genuine style to Papini's prose. It is a style that does not spring from any conscious attempt to ornament, but even when gay and epigrammatic, is a result of the release of thought. So it is Papini's thought which intrigues us. The only marked limitation that we have been able to find in this philosophic essayist is the lack of understanding for Shakespeare." Hutchins Haggood
+ New Repub 32:228 O 25 '22 1650w

"Though Papini is not wholly trustworthy in his judgments and is inclined to be superficial, his style sparkles and flashes and he offers food for thought. He himself says he is no Plutarch; but he is a biographer of the spirit."
+ N Y Times p12 N 19 '22 1600w

"Papini is a vigorous and stimulating writer. He is a man of feeling and of good sense. He has an immense erudition and this has not dulled his sensibility, clogged his expression or pinioned him in the free flights of his alert and volatile spirit. He is a philosopher who is also a man of action, a pedagogue who is also a poet, a literary man who disdains the ivory tower and looks joyously upon life. And these are rare combinations. He has chaos in him and, in this book, he gives birth to a constellation of dancing stars." Burton Rascoe
+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 13 '22 1050w

"The essays are eminently readable, for Prof. Wilkins has retained in his translation the fire that makes them interesting for their own sake. The charge that they are outspoken may be met with the truism that all men who attempt to revise public opinion, whether or not they are wholly in earnest, are outspoken. If this is not sufficient, it may be urged—Papini to the contrary—that the author has focussed upon his subjects a scholarship that almost always keeps him from falling into the trivial."
+ Springfield Republican p8 O 11 '22 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p745 N
16 '22 1500w

PARIS, JOHN, pseud. Kimono. 320p $2 Boni
& Liveright [7s d Collins]

22-5521

The writer of this story of an Anglo-Japanese marriage has evidently lived long enough in Japan to acquire a feeling of horror for its social system and especially the position of women. Captain Geoffrey Barrington marries Asako Fujinami, a young Japanese heiress who had been brought up in Europe, and they go to Japan for a part of their prolonged honeymoon. While there Geoffrey is horrified to learn that his wife's income is derived from property invested in the Yoshiwara (legalized prostitution). Partly because of this discovery and partly thru the intrigues of Asako's Japanese relatives, husband and wife are separated for a time. Geoffrey goes back to England to serve in the war and Asako, now in the clutches of her scheming relatives, passes thru an experience of great suffering from which in the closing pages, she is released, with the promise of restoration to her husband.

"It is a cold passion of disgust which breathes through his description. We read into this interpretation the whole difference between East and West and the whole attitude toward women which is so profound an element of Japanese life and character. So far as the story itself goes it could not well be more dramatic. Mr. Paris has added something to our understanding of these little yellow people which will not soon be forgotten." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 1 '22 800w

"A skilful and realistic picture of Japanese life, vividly written, and well executed." L. B.
+ Freeman 5:501 Ag 2 '22 230w

"His sincerity goes far to redeem his somewhat naive treatment of a theme which demands above all to be handled without sentimentality and without righteousness. Mr. Paris is never righteous, nor does he commit the kindred crime of gloating with an illicit delight, to be shared by the reader, over what he portrays. From the charge of sentimentality the author can be less easily acquitted." Marian O'Connor

+ Lit R p715 Je 10 '22 740w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
— Nation 115:171 Ag 16 '22 100w

"'Kimono' is a good novel, the best in fact that has been done in English with a Far Eastern setting. It alone is on a level of maturity in conception and execution. It is veracious also. . . Its pacing is forced toward the close and dashed to a happy ending through attempted seductions, murder, dungeon cells, torture and not a little coincidence. The author, having marched resolutely and with logical progression through three-quarters of his novel, becomes panicky in the last quarter and leaps out of his entanglement of plot." Nathaniel Peffer

+ New Repub 31:114 Je 21 '22 1400w

"'Kimono' is decidedly a book worth reading, in spite of the fact that the author labours under a curious disability, [for] while Mr. Paris's mind is clean to the point of being antiseptic he has nevertheless no sense of decency. Mr. Paris probably gives us something far short of the ultimate truth about Japan, but his book is better worth reading than most novels for the interesting parallel it offers to Lafcadio Hearn's mental progress in Japan, and for its vividness and its sincerity." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 17:334 Je 25 '21 1150w

Reviewed by Julian Street
N Y Times p7 My 14 '22 680w

"'Kimono' will probably exasperate the Japonophiles, and excite the Japanophobes. As a matter of fact, it should do neither. If it is an argument for anything, it is an argument for Christian eugenics." T. Q. Beesley
N Y Times p7 My 14 '22 1450w

"This story has the naive expression of a man's outlook on a strange world. Captain Barrington is a clean-living gentleman, and his thoughts and impulses are clean ones. Mr. Paris has given us an ably-written book and a much-needed warning against undue optimism."
+ Sat R 132:55 Jl 9 '21 370w

"The main interest of the book lies in the vivid and terrible picture it presents of the underworld of heathen, semi-civilized Tokyo. In order to produce the notable effects which he achieves, however, the author condescends to employ an amount of lurid and unsavoury detail which inevitably detracts from the otherwise considerable merits of the book."

+ Spec 127:115 Jl 23 '21 60w
Springf'd Republican p15a My 7 '22
580w

"We have a feeling that the æsthetic interest is sacrificed to moral emphasis. There are books dealing with kindred subjects in which the writer, while asserting his own horror, represents the vice which he describes as alluring. The flesh uncompromisingly exposed by Mr. Paris, does not enflame the senses, it chills them."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p351 Je
2 '21 700w

PARK, ROBERT EZRA. Immigrant press and its control. (Americanization studies) 488p $2.50 Harper

070 Immigrants in the United States. Newspapers—United States. Foreign language press 22-2469

There are forty-three languages and dialects spoken by the immigrant peoples of the United States and in the great cities the various language colonies almost invariably maintain a newspaper. This immigrant press now includes over one thousand publications. Mr Park's book is a thorough and unbiased study of these much discussed and criticized journals, their history, the features that mark their separateness from the American press, the characteristics of the metropolitan, provincial, and distinctly radical press. The various attempts to control these journals, thru censorship, suspension and advertising, are also studied and the ways by which they may be made agencies of assimilation and Americanization.

PARK, ROBERT EZRA—Continued

"This volume is a significant one, not only because it collects in usable form materials from which an intelligent study of the problems may be made, but because it makes a sane and masterly analysis of the facts in their relation to fundamental principles of social organization." U. G. Weatherly

+ Am J Soc 27:807 My '22 720w

Am Pol Sci R 16:529 Ag '22 70w

Booklist 18:210 Ap '22

"A very interesting and effective work." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 21 '22 850w
 Cleveland p38 My '22

"An interesting handling of a subject whose importance is only beginning to be realized." Hilary Rogers

+ Daily News Rec p9 Ag 18 '22 1100w

"He has brought to it the hospitality of mind which is essential in all Americanization studies; he has brought a fine sense of the European background; and above all, a well-trained intuition as to what is probably true and what is not. But curiously enough, although this is a book about newspapers, there is no specific discussion of the news they publish. Yet, in spite of this serious omission, Mr. Park has by a skillful selection of testimony and shrewd manipulation of the available statistics of circulation, the span of life and the death of the immigrant press, written a very interesting introduction to the subject." Walter Lippmann

+ New Repub 30:259 Ap 26 '22 1250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:151 Ap '22
 Pratt p6 summer '22

"The volume is a distinct contribution to our all too meager literature on the American press and will find widespread interest among all those who are desirous of an adequate understanding of not the least influential section of our newspaper world."

+ Springfield Republican p12 S 22 '22 270w

Reviewed by Alpha Buse
 Survey 47:965 Mr 18 '22 1100w
 Wis Lib Bul 18:178 Jl '22

Reviewed by J. M. Lee
 Yale R n s 12:419 Ja '23 300w

PARKER, CORNELIA STRATTON (MRS CARLETON HUBBELL PARKER), Working with the working woman. 246p $2 Harper

331.4 Woman—Employment 22-2507

Mrs Parker gives a graphic account of her actual experiences in jobs of various kinds—in a candy factory, a brass foundry, a laundry, a dress factory, a bleachery, and a hotel kitchen. She learned to know the workers without any suspicion on their part that they were being investigated. She tried to see the world and the job thru the workers' eyes and to picture their life in its entirety, the causes for content as well as for discontent in their work, and the humor along with the hardness. She offers no theories, but in the last short chapter sums up her conclusions.

Booklist 18:216 Ap '22

"She uses an easy narrative style, many humorous anecdotes, and an optimistic viewpoint, which gets her points across as well as the most learned treatise on social conditions. It is guaranteed unadulterated by propaganda and well worth reading."

+ Bookm 55:202 Ap '22 100w

"It is not because of articulate utterances of wrongs that Mrs. Parker's book deserves a reading, but because, going among working women as a girl who had herself found a job, her pictures of their lives is very vivid and enlightening." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '22 980w

"There is no sentimentalism in her relations with her fellow-workers, although a certain oversprightiness of writing sometimes weakens the general impression of sincerity." Katherine Anthony

+ Freeman 5:166 Ap 26 '22 120w

Ind 108:533 Je 10 '22 80w

"We have had the student of social science more than once masquerading as a working woman and writing up her experiences. Mrs. Parker has done it with more vim than some, with less seriousness than others. She has the advantage of a lively pen with which to describe her associates and surroundings in factory, foundry, or laundry, and the grace of a warm sympathy with the working woman, qualities both of them which lend to her book an eminent readability. Scientific importance it has little, if any."

+ Lit R p512 Mr 18 '22 300w

"A silly book, full of self-consciousness, sophistication, sentiment, and posing."

— Nation 115:531 N 15 '22 30w

Reviewed by Dorothea Brande
 New Repub 31:84 Je 14 '22 540w

Reviewed by E. M. Knight
 N Y Times p11 D 17 '22 1650w

"She combines in exceptional degree the ability to gather facts and to make telling generalizations about them. Her book is an unusual sociological document and it is highly entertaining."

+ Outlook 130:310 F 22 '22 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:208 My '22

Pratt p10 summer '22

R of Rs 65:448 Ap '22 210w

St Louis 20:87 My '22

Springf'd Republican p12 My 10 '22 350w

"Does this picturesque, almost playful treatment of the working woman, who is such an integral part of modern industrial life, meet any of the real problems? For those who wish to have this question presented dramatically and amusingly, this book might meet a real need, were it a little less patronizing. The danger in presenting industrial material in the manner which Mrs. Parker has used is that it too often diverts attention from the real issues." Nelle Swartz

— Survey 48:23 Ap 1 '22 640w

Wis Lib Bul 18:98 Ap '22

PARKER, SIR GILBERT, Carnac's folly. 352p il $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-17387

The action of this story takes place almost entirely in Montreal where the Grier family has made a fortune in the lumber business. Carnac Grier and his father have a strange dislike for each other, and hating his father's business, the son studies art. While in New York he is tricked into marriage with a French girl. This affair almost spoils his life and his chances of marrying the beautiful Junia Shale with whom he is deeply in love. Returning to Quebec with his marriage unconfessed, he runs for Parliament in opposition to Barode Barouche and defeats him. When Barouche dies soon after, Carnac's mother confesses to him that Barouche was his real father. In the end things work out happily to Carnac has to struggle against great odds.

Booklist 19:87 D '22

"It follows paths trodden by a thousand novelists and playwrights, and it keeps to the beaten way without the slightest reluctance on the part of the novelist. He utilizes an old plot, familiar scenes and stereotyped characters unhesitatingly." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p6 S 23 '22 800w

"This volume is worthy of Harold Bell Wright at his balmyest. Sir Gilbert Parker has always been a romanticist, of course, and one does not expect from a romanticist photographic reproductions of life; but one does expect something that at least remotely resembles life. That expectation is disappointed in 'Carnac's Folly.' It bears a recognizable resemblance to nothing ever seen on earth before." G. W. J.

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 D 10 '22 450w

Lit D p61 N 4 '22 950w

"The characters are so twisted into the set grooves of a determined plot that all humanity deserts them in the exciting but unreal speech of giddy melodrama. The plot, too, is such stuff as movies are made of, and its rather too long life is too much rounded with rhetoric. If only we might see motive and act freed from the interminable screen of intruded explanation we might the more easily accept the characters as human beings belonging to the world in which we all live." A. D. Douglas

— Lit R p144 O 28 '22 450w

"The book reads like a motion-picture scenario, not of the best type; it is carelessly written, its characters are puppets, its motivation of the weakest, its plot melodramatic, unreal and unconvincing."

— N Y Times p3 S 24 '22 350w

N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 240w

"Not, in our opinion, one of Sir Gilbert's best books. The mechanics of a good story are all here; but one fails to feel much emotion or care much for the characters."

— Outlook 132:622 D 6 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:533 D '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 S 28 '22 490w

Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

PARKER, HENRY TAYLOR. Eighth notes; voices and figures of music and the dance. 238p $2 Dodd

780.4 Singers. Musicians. Dancers 22-20646

A collection of newspaper criticisms of musicians and dancers, reprinted from the columns of the Boston Transcript. Here grouped under conductors, singing actors, singers of songs, pianists, violinists, chamber music and dancers. with a chapter on Yvette Guilbert, diseuse, are brought together reviews of most of the contemporary stars of opera and concert hall.

Booklist 19:113 Ja '23

"Those who have followed Mr. Parker's daily writings will find in the present volume familiar material and remembered phrases, since in the compiling of the book he has, by his own confession, drawn extensively from past reviews and editorial comment. And herein lies much of the charm and point of these sketches. Written in the vividness of actual experience, they have an accuracy and a felicity of characterization that perchance might not have been the outcome of mere cooled reflection." W. S. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 18 '22 1250w

"The essays are each of two or three pages, little triumphs of compression; they show no signs of the daily rush; and except for one or two stylistic peculiarities they are written with as fine a sensibility as they are conceived. Sensibility, it may be said, when it is added to taste, perception, and dignity, is a priceless quality in criticism."

+ Dial 73:683 D '22 200w

"Interesting and suggestive to living readers who care about how music is performed and interpreted—for even the dancers that Mr. Parker singles out are more or less 'interpreters' of music. It is suggestive primarily because it cannot but challenge the reader to agreement and disagreement. He will nod his head with pleasure when Mr. Parker in happy phrase voices one of his own pet hates or loves. But when he and Mr. Parker differ, his fingers may crisp and tingle at the alluring thought of making somebody's fine fur fly." Pitts Sanborn

Nation 115:670 D 13 '22 1500w

PARKER, THOMAS JEFFERY, and HASWELL, WILLIAM A. Text-book of zoology. 3d ed 2v 816:714p il $12.50 (50s) Macmillan
590 Zoology 22-12171

"A standard work, fairly technical, and sufficiently comprehensive to be of considerable value for reference."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:491 N '22

PARKHURST, HELEN HUSS. Education on the Dalton plan; with an introd. by T. P. Nunn. 278p $2 Dutton [5s Bell]

371.3 Dalton laboratory plan. Teaching 22-26980

The object of the Dalton laboratory plan of education is to combine the acquisition of culture with experience and freedom of action with responsibility and cooperation, and to lead the child to function involuntarily as a member of a social community. Instead of class-rooms the school has laboratories presided over by specialists in the subjects to be studied. The pupil works under contract and carries out his job in his own time and on his own responsibility. The book carefully describes every detail of the plan in its practical working. Rosa Bassett gives an account of a year's experiment with the plan in an English secondary school and John Eades, head master of a school in Leeds, describes its working for elementary schools.

Booklist 19:70 D '22

"Educators and parents alike will be interested in Miss Parkhurst's book. But they will be interested not so much in its delineation of the theory underlying the Dalton plan as in its description of the manner in which practical difficulties have been successfully overcome. To put in writing the class-room assignments for an entire month is not an easy task, especially when the pupils concerned are to be left almost wholly to their own devices. In submitting sample assignments in various subjects and for children of various ages, Miss Parkhurst has done the cause of education a distinct service." H. T. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 18 '22 550w

"The book is well worth reading, not only because of the significance of the plan described, but also because of the tangible manner in which the author has presented her material. It gives a detailed picture of an interesting educational experiment." G. T. Buswell

+ El School J 23:312 D '22 500w

"A reassuring book, rather better written than the usual explanation of an educational project, comparatively free from boasting, and full of concrete materials of the sort that are invaluable for those who are interested in knowing actually what the Dalton plan is." W. C. Ryan, Jr.

+ Lit R p381 Ja 13 '23 550w

"Miss Parkhurst's volume is a delightfully clear exposition of the scheme—a much more helpful and practical book than the one recently published by another American teacher." G. S.

+ Nation and Ath 31:770 S 9 '22 600w

Pratt p14 winter '23

"It propounds no dogmatic and inflexible system, and its guiding stars are knowledge and reason. We must confess, however, that the testimonies of children which Miss Parkhurst introduces into her volume to support her claims sound forbiddingly priggish. Again we must deplore the lack of an index."

+ Spec 129:730 N 18 '22 300w

Survey 49:256 N 15 '22 180w

Wis Lib Bul 19:21 Ja '23

PARKINSON, MAUDE REA. Twenty years in Roumania. 255p $4 Dutton [10s 6d Allen & U.] 914.98 Rumania (Eng ed 21-15191)

Knowing Rumania only from hearsay, the author became so enamored with the country, which to her wore the glamor of the Arabian Nights, that she resolved to go there as a teacher. In a pleasant, gossipy manner she describes the country and the people, as she learned to know them during her twenty years sojourn, in every detail. She pictures them as a thoroughly lovable, warm-hearted, extremely hospitable and charitable people, of a high order of intelligence and full of the joy of life.

"Dowagers will appreciate her book, and also many readers of the National Geographic Magazine will identify the author as a kindred spirit, accustomed as they are to the compressed, the random and the personal in a world of travel."

Boston Transcript p6 S 16 '22 290w

"A pleasant, gossipy book, and not at all a political book. On the whole, however, in all these notes about customs and society, one misses a little too much the note of distinction. The author is, one suspects, a little too adaptable, a little too ready to forget that Roumania is not Ulster. Her descriptions somewhat lack the novelty conferred either by journalistic accumulation of facts or by a fine literary sense. There is a want of broad inference, of really critical comment."

— + No Am 216:713 N '22 350w

PARKS, LEIGHTON. Crisis of the churches. 256p $2.50 Scribner

280 Church. Church unity. Protestant Episcopal church 22-6180

Dr Parks, who is rector of St Bartholomew's church, New York City, considers the task of the churches in this time of crisis in the history of civilization and indicates the new way to Christian unity, thru fellowship. He leads up thru a discussion of sectarianism and church unity, to a consideration of the Episcopal church, its ministry, worship and doctrine, and points out why in his opinion this church has value for this day and country, why its ministry is specially adapted to the needs of the present, and why it is not justified in allowing itself to be absorbed into a general American church.

Cath World 115:692 Ag '22 370w

"'The Crisis of the Churches,' we venture to think, is one of the few books issuing in the present generation from Episcopal rectories which may be considered to be contributions to broad churchmanship. On both its constructive and negative side, Dr. Parks' treatment of his theme shows courage. With admirable good temper and cogent reasoning, he carries through to his conclusions. Not one sentence in the book is an evasion of dangerous ground."

+ Churchman 125:8 Ap 1 '22 1350w
Cleveland p73 S '22

"He has erudition and grace of style and an historical honesty. His temper is sunny, except now and then when the current of his argument drifts him beneath the shadow of the beetling Rock of Peter." H: L. Stuart
+ Freeman 5:353 Je 21 '22 1150w

"A stirring appeal from a great preacher. Dr. Parks writes with refreshing candor and insight. His defense of the peculiar and necessary mission of his own church is thought-provoking and wholesome."

+ J Religion 2:335 My '22 60w

"It is refreshing to read so broad-minded and searching a message. Written in brilliant style and with charming candor, this book will doubtless challenge fruitful discussion." G. B. Smith
+ J Religion 2:555 S '22 750w

"Not since Maurice's 'Kingdom of God' has any member of the Anglican communion interpreted the value of his own church so adequately and with such restraint while providing full recognition of the value of other churches." H: J. Cadbury

+ Lit R p821 J1 '22 '22 1500w

Nation 115:131 Ag 2 '22 110w

"One must plead guilty to criticizing Dr. Parks's book from the point of view of his title rather than from that of his principal theme. What he has really written is, in fact, mainly a discourse on church unity, and a very sound and sensible discourse it is. Fully informed and quite free from optimistic delusions on this subject, he points out the real weakness of the efforts toward union of the churches that have been made in recent years, while he shows at the same time, and rather strikingly, how much all Christian persons have in common."

No Am 215:719 My '22 350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:327 J1 '22

St Louis 20:204 S '22

Spring'd Republican p8 Ja 16 '23 420w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p787 N 30 '22 120w

"The cogent appeal of a scholarly Christian churchman." H: S. Coffin

+ Yale R n s 11:877 J1 '22 700w

PARRISH, RANDALL. Case and the girl. 343p $2 Knopf

22-26240

The baffling mystery of impersonation is continually defeating the endeavors of Captain Matthew West to aid Natalie Coolidge, who is the unconscious victim of a scheme to defraud her of her inheritance. Her guardian and uncle is the main instigator of the plot which becomes very intricate, involving men and women of the underworld. Percival Coolidge, the uncle, is murdered before his plans mature, and Jim Hobart, a deep-dyed villain, carries on the plot. The abandonment of West and Natalie on the sinking yacht "Seminole" is but one of the hairbreadth escapes of the victims who only in the very last chapter are saved from the band of schemers.

"For the most part the episodes are interesting, exciting and, if we admit that great element of luck, without which even the best narratives of this type could not survive, plausible. One cannot, however, compliment the author upon any superlative ability in construction."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 15 '22 250w
Cleveland p28 Ap '22

"Excellent mystery stuff. It is entirely convincing in the first place, holds its interest to the end, and does not fall at the crisis. There is enough adventure to satisfy those who want action, who want gun-play as eagerly as the others desire mystery. And there is a good, clean love story with nothing sloppy about it for those who require a touch of romance in every novel they read. Altogether it is an ideal relaxation story of just the right length with nothing to burden the mind in any way."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 N 19 '22 330w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:198 My '22

"It borders rather closely on the melodramatic, and its situations are more imaginary than probable."

Spring'd Republican p15a Ap 23 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:104 Ap '22

PARRISH, RANDALL. Gift of the desert. 305p $1.90 McClurg

22-16873

"Concerns Mexican border life. A Chicago nurse, in a spirit of adventure, goes to a lonely ranch in Arizona to care for a sick woman. While there she is forced, absolutely against her will, into marriage with a villainous beast of a man. She escapes after the ceremony, into the desert through the help of a supposedly notorious outlaw and bandit, who is really an United States army officer detailed for detective work. Then follow a wild fight, hair breadth escapes, the discovery of a rendezvous of thieves and robbers, a lost mine, big plunder and a real love."—Springf'd Republican

"The story is told interestingly. The incidents described are natural enough, and follow in logical sequence. Of course such a chain of incidents rarely happens outside the jackets of Western novels, but they are enjoyable. Mr. Parrish tells his story well, skillfully brings a sad beginning to a happy ending."

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 23 '22 200w

Lit R p34 S 16 '22 110w

N Y Times p12 O 8 '22 350w

"Standardized stuff. Lots of people like it, undoubtedly, or there would not be such a steady supply." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p6 S 10 '22 80w

"The aim, if the book can be said to have an aim, is to show the activities of the United States army in breaking up the outlawry of the southwestern border. Its profanity and sensationalism are excessive."

— Springf'd Republican p7a S 10 '22 150w

PARSONS, ELSIE WORTHINGTON (CLEWS)
(MRS HERBERT PARSONS). ed. American Indian life. 419p il $10 Huebsch

970.1 Indians of North America 22-16158

The contributors to this collection of monographs on Indian life are anthropologists writing each about the tribe with which he has lived or of which he has knowledge at first hand, but the form of presentation is fictional and the language popular. The stories are not only readable Indian tales, but authentic pictures of the daily life of Indians, their personal relations, religious life and social psychology. Nearly every tale has an illustration as title-page. These illustrations, by O. Grant LaFarge, some of them in color, are based upon study of museum collections which show characteristic features of Indian art. The appendix gives notes about each of the tribes represented, including a bibliography.

Booklist 19:16 O '22

"With some exceptions, the stories lack both the moving quality of sophisticated romance and the simple charm of primæval narrative. There is more than a suggestion of the method of the school reader which tries to present information sugar coated. The typography, press-work, and binding of the volume are a credit to American publishing." N. A. Crawford

— + Bookm 55:636 Ag '22 650w

Boston Transcript p7 Je 17 '22 850w

"The sketches differ widely in merit and there is a greater monotony than the varied styles of treatment would have led one to expect. A little pruning here and there would have helped the volume; two or three of the sketches might have been omitted by a less kindly editor. And yet, all in all, the editor and her collaborators have succeeded in accomplishing their difficult task. While the book is something less than a brilliant achievement, it is a great deal more than a merely creditable one." E. Sapir

+ Dial 73:568 N '22 2250w

"This collection of studies of American Indian life fulfils two important functions with a completeness that can be attributed to no other book on the subject. It is important first for the clear and comprehensive and absorbingly interesting account of the life of the first American peoples. It can be read equally by children and adults. . . . If criticism were in order in a book so much needed, it would be that there has been a deliberate effort at uniformity of style which tends to obliterate the individuality of the writers, nearly every one of whom has had literary experience and has a distinctly recognizable style when he writes from his own initiative." Mary Austin

+ Lit R p884 Ag 19 '22 1500w

"Both the successes and failures of the book follow from the nature of its attempt. Twenty-seven stories from nearly as many tribes, culturally distinct, cannot give any simple or strong impression; if a portrait were to be drawn from the whole it would be of a composite and falsified Indian. Breadth compensates for intensity in the comparative method.

That it succeeds, even partially, in giving us a new conception of the Indian, in replacing the stock figures of the past, is a very positive virtue, justifying all that the editor asks for the book in her entirely modest preface." Hartley Alexander

+ Nation 115:255 S 13 '22 1650w

"This book will hold a value as material for an American literature that will give new meaning to American life." C. F. Ansley

New Repub 33:sup8 N 29 '22 1350w

"The outstanding merit of the whole collection is its honesty. . . . Mr. LaFarge's illustrations, in color and in black and white, are careful, faithful as to detail and beautiful. He has caught the spirit of the scientist turned artist. It is to be regretted that the cost of the book puts it beyond the reach of the average reader, but perhaps a cheaper edition may be issued later on. And when it is, the opportunity may well be grasped to correct certain needless errors of punctuation that annoy the reader."

+ N Y Times p16 Je 18 '22 1400w

"We may cordially congratulate the editor, publishers, and printers in having produced a work of real value, of decided entertainment, and of notable beauty in form and appearance."

+ Outlook 131:427 Jl 5 '22 800w

Pratt p32 winter '23

St Louis 20:303 D '22

Survey 48:629 Ag 15 '22 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 25 '23 1100w

PARSONS, MARY PRESCOTT. New poetry. (Study outline ser.) 2d rev ed 86p pa 50c Wilson, H. W.

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. American poetry—History and criticism 22-10123

Sixteen study outlines of American, English and Irish poets, with a bibliography. Each study outline contains references, and suggestive readings, which for this second edition have been brought down to date. New groupings have been suggested in the programs, children's poetry and a sonnet group have been added and readings from a number of poets not represented in the first edition. The general bibliography is made up of anthologies and books of criticism which include a number of poets.

Booklist 18:376 Jl '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:182 Jl '22

PASVOLSKY, LEO. Russia in the Far East. 181p $1.75 (18s) Macmillan

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations. Far East. Siberia

The book sketches the story of Russia's expansion in Asia as the result of the imperialistic policy of the old régime, the conflict which arose between Japan and Russia in carrying out their aggressive designs, the understanding between the two countries which followed the Russo-Japanese war, the recent policy of Soviet Russia in the Far East and the activities of the Third or communist international. The concluding chapter is devoted to Russia's rôle in a world balance of power and the relative positions of Russia and the United States in this regard. Appendices give text of treaties and documents.

Am Pol Sci R 16:523 Ag '22 70w

"It is the aim of this book to furnish a background for a clear understanding of the Russian situation in the Far East; a situation which, in the mind of the average American, is hopelessly complex and confused. Mr. Pasvol-sky's account unravels it all, throwing upon it the light of a remarkably lucid analysis and that of numerous texts of treatises and documents."

PASVOLSKY, LEO—Continued

+ Cath World 116:119 O '22 250w

"The ideas contained in Mr. Pasvolsky's book are not new. Some of them can be disputed, the accuracy of some others may be doubted, but, in so far as is concerned an attempt to describe and summarize the modern history of the Russian Far East, the Japanese aggression in Siberia and other issues involved there, the book is a useful and interesting one."

— + Lit R p725 Je 10 '22 310w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:331 Jl '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Mr 23 '22 150w

Yale R n s 12:203 O '22 150w

PATON, STEWART. Signs of sanity and the principles of mental hygiene. 211p $1.50 Scribner

131 Mental physiology and hygiene 22-12828

The great problem to-day, according to the author, is "does man to-day possess sufficient soundness of mind to exercise intelligent control over the complicated civilization he has created?" On the answer depends not only individual happiness but the just settlement of social problems, the peace of the world and the destiny of the race. The test of sanity is the successful adjustment of life to reality which calls for not only mental but physical soundness. The object of the essays is to describe the essentials of sanity and to direct attention to that kind of self-knowledge most urgently needed for the requirements of civilization.

Reviewed by Joseph Collins

N Y Times p16 Jl 23 '22 1600w

St Louis 20:242 O '22

"The book contains much useful information, both physiological and psychological, applied in a broad and far-seeing spirit."

+ Spec 130:64 Ja 13 '23 160w

"Prof Stewart Paton is a popular expounder of the newer applications of psychiatry and physiology to an understanding of our mental processes and the adjustment of man to his environment. The essays, as a whole, are general and somewhat sketchy."

+ Springfd Republican p10 Je 28 '22 540w

"We fear that if we let the good doctor and his colleagues conduct clinics they will set up standards of mental normalcy which will fill the world with alarm about the large proportion of abnormal individuals. This little book, nevertheless, is to be warmly commended for the common-sense of the author's observations and suggestions on the prevailing nervous temperament of Americans."

+ — Survey 49:sup206 N 1 '22 150w

PATRI, ANGELO. Child training. 434p $2 (8s) 6d Appleton

173 Children—Management and training 22-21086

The book is a collection of the author's daily contributions to the New York Evening Post on child training. Their object is to help parents and teachers with the thousand and one difficulties that present themselves in the home and school. The short chapters are grouped under the headings: The child in the home; School, child, teacher, parent; Building the child's character; Moral training Boys; Adolescence; Vacation time; Parents; The child and his country. Index.

Booklist 19:144 F '23

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 27 '23 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:7 Ja '23

Pratt p7 winter '23

"In a practical, happy, optimistic manner, he expounds an honest gospel of child training, which merits the attention of parents, teachers, social workers, ministers and physicians and all others who look upon childhood as more than a matter of chance and chronology. The spirit of the child is revealed and interpreted, with a background of rationality, justice and sympathy. In a simple, frank and charmingly human style, he strips pedagogic theory of its harshness and shows the innate forces that seek expression and grope for guidance, unfettered by parental or civic ignorance, indifference or exploitation."

1. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 49:257 N 15 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p787 N 30 '22 20w

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud. (MRS HARRY J. WILSON). Barbara Justice. 329p $2 Dutton [8s 6d Hutchinson]

22-11516

The heroine of this story is modern in ways, but the pattern of the story is old. Barbara Justice is a country girl of great beauty and natural refinement who at seventeen meets her city-bred lover only to lose him, who suffers from the advances of a brutal admirer, and the cruel jealousies of an aunt, goes on the road with a company of travelling performers, and after a variety of experiences, finds her lost lover and happiness.

Booklist 18:368 Jl '22

"Constructively an admirable example of a worthy and delightful love story. It has genuine literary substance. In working it out, Miss Patrick has one literary proclivity which she should watch, fearfully and carefully. She is obsessed with lavishness of words. She riots in opulent description." S. L. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Je 17 '22 680w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:108 S 2 '22 110w

Lit R p891 Ag 19 '22 190w

"It conveys the ring of authentic characterization. Besides that there are several quite individual changes rung on the familiar subject matter. Barbara stands out, a finished and sympathetic portrayal."

+ N Y Times p15 My 14 '22 140w

PATTEE, FRED LEWIS. Side-lights on American literature. 342p $2 Century

810.4 American literature—History and criticism 22-17733

In his characterizations of some of the outstanding figures in American letters the author's endeavor is to show them as direct reflections of their environment, of the growing pains of American civilization. O. Henry, for all his brilliancy and success is shown to be ephemeral and shallow; H. L. Mencken, with his high-powered vocabularies, is not a critic at all but rather a bull in the literary china-shop; and Jack London is an idealistic and egocentric interpreter of our western civilization. An appreciative study of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman deals with her work as the revolt against the left-overs of New England puritanism. Contents: The age of O. Henry; A critic in C major; The prophet of the last frontier; The epic of New England; On the terminal moraine of New England puritanism; The shadow of Longfellow; The modernness of Philip Freneau; The centenary of Bryant's poetry; Poe's "Ulalume."

Booklist 19:46 N '22

"There is a sincerity about 'Sidellights on American Literature' which is pleasant even though it smacks somewhat of lavender."

+ — Bookm 56:512 D '22 130w

"Mr. Pattee possesses a peculiarly ingratiating style of writing which is plentifully interspersed with quotations from the writers he is considering. Thus we may regard him as an expostive critic, letting his subjects betray themselves through their own mouths. It is a successful method when it is well handled and Mr. Patten may be credited with handling it with a high degree of facility." H. S. Gorman

+ Int Bk R p50 F '23 150w

Outlook 133:320 F 14 '23 300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:209 N '22

Pratt p26 winter '23

St Louis 21:12 Ja '23

"Interesting, original in viewpoint, and well worth reading. Worth while for any library."

+ Wis Lib Bul 18:252 N '22

PATTEN, SIMON NELSON. Mud Hollow; from dust to soul. 384p $1.90 Dorrance

22-10401

"Dr. Patten has been known hitherto chiefly as the originator of the 'Pleasure-Pain Theory' of economics, according to which all institutions should be judged and modified on the basis of joy and pleasure [instead] of property as the standard of value. 'Mud Hollow' is the study of a small Pennsylvania college town and its chief characters in the thousand-watt light of this teaching. The dynamically different story of the distinctly unconventional love affair—sex attraction and sex conflict—of Paul and Ruth and their bitter struggle against the obstinate hold-back both from within and from without of wrong ideas and thwarted and thwarting parentage will grip the interest despite the author's ramblings off on the alluring road of abstraction. It is a novel novel. For half of it is frankly devoted to an interpretation of the events and reactions the characters experience, and fully half of the remaining half is devoted to similar interpretation." —Lit R

"Many will criticise this book,—for its literary form and style, for its unconventional attitude toward morality, for inconsistency in places, and for generalizations that may in places be too broad. But such critics should consider and discuss rather the larger ideas of the book, and should remember that prophecy can scarcely be expected to be worked out into a logical, consistent and detailed philosophy, but rather must devote itself to outlining new territory for human thinking. In course of time the reviewer believes that this contribution by Dr. Patten at the close of his life will be reckoned a major contribution to human thinking,—as important as any he has ever made." J. H. Willits

Ann Am Acad 103:151 S '22 1250w

"Mr. Patten evidently delights in the opportunity he has made to discuss various modern problems. And this he does with a devastating frankness—and at times a surprisingly provincial prejudice—which is likely to provoke debate." F. B.

— Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '22 1250w

"Dr. Patten is more worthy of attention as an interpreter than as a novelist. 'Mud Hollow' is a greater contribution as an analysis than as a story. But nobody will bother about whether to place it with fiction or philosophy or psychology or sociology who once comes under the spell of this study of the soul on its way 'from dust to God.'"

+ Lit R p842 Jl 29 '22 600w

"Is it a novel or is it a treatise on psychology and ethics? The characters are abnormal or sub-normal, and their actions are strangely incomprehensible. Part II. reads like a college textbook."

— N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 120w

"It is unfortunate that Dr. Patten has seen fit to couple the fruition of his economic and sociological thinking with an experiment in novel writing. Part II offers a singularly interesting and searching analysis and explanation of the life of the dominant classes, whose uncultured mass judgments tend to become the prevailing public opinion of America. This part of the volume might well have been published by itself as a study of civilization in the United States. And no more valuable contribution to such a study has come to the attention of the reviewer in recent years." W. M. Leiserson

+ Survey 48:627 Ag 15 '22 520w

"It is a maze of quasi-philosophical and metaphysical jargon. The 250 pages which comprise the second part of the book are a series of dissertations chiefly on the emancipation of woman from her ancient 'viron.' We have seldom read anything more mystifying than the chapters entitled 'Sense, Dulness,' 'Normalcy,' 'Super Complexes,' and 'Genetic Philosophy.'"

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Je 1 '22 220w

PAUL, ELLIOT H. Indelible. 297p $1.75 Houghton

22-12391

"Samuel Graydon and Lena Borofsky are the central figures—Samuel a New England boy who develops into a distinguished pianist; and Lena a Russian Jewess who gives promise of becoming a famous violinist. In spite of religious barriers, the two ultimately marry and apparently live happily together; but in their premarital days they go through a series of trials and sorrows, owing largely to an accident which ruins Lena's fingers, leaves her pathetically unable to play the violin, and causes her to flee in despair and lose sight of Samuel for several years, until eventually a fortunate accident reunites them."—Lit R

"Indelible is not a first novel remarkable for its freedom from obvious faults. But it is very truly remarkable for the positive qualities of which its defects are in a way the excess. There is life in the book, in the characters, in the very style; there is a kind of humor, as honest, as true, as American as Huck Finn—a kind which really makes you laugh; and, almost above all, there is a quite professional sanity on the whole subject of music and musicians." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '22 500w

Booklist 19:21 O '22

"If ever there was a writer of cock-sureness to the point of arrogance it is Mr. Paul. The reviewer who would like to praise his work is quite as much baffled as the one who would blame it. So outrageous is it in certain passages, both as to narrative and artistry, that it throws the friendly reviewer quite off the track. On the other hand the reviewer who, completely disgusted by the thump and tootle of its advent, and affronted by much of its absurdly poor writing, has hoped to pounce savagely upon it finds certain episodes so human and certain points of view so honest that he relinquishes part of his purpose." S. L. C.

— + Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '22 920w

"It is an exceptionally disappointing work because the author has liberated himself from stupid conventions of story-telling and has then failed entirely to subject himself to any inherent discipline. The story is generally good, sometimes remarkably childish in its sentiment, and frequently spoiled by the absurd interludes. The genuine talent which produced it is perceptible; its owner needs a more thorough training than any other of our younger writers and is more likely to justify the pains."

— + Dial 73:112 Jl '22 150w

"There is honest stuff in the book, if we don't let ourselves be diverted from it. The humor is sound, and the people are not puppets, and there is a real story." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:49 Ag 5 '22 800w

"This is a first novel good enough to make one seriously deplore its limitations and to regard them with more regret than if they were the faults of a wholly bad piece of work. Although the plot is rather commonplace, the characters are distinct and vivid and the breadth of real life breathes through the book." S. A. Coblentz

+ — Lit R p735 Je 17 '22 490w

"Mr. Paul has selected a rather poor form into which to pour this theme, but the various scenes do manage to present much of the matter. It should be obvious that the book could be better written. But, then, it could also be a much poorer book."

PAUL, ELLIOT H.—Continued

— + N Y Times p19 Je 4 '22 120w

"In many ways is striking, and careful reading deepens the impression that it is not only unusual for a first novel, but that its charm is that of style and even more strongly that of substance. Perhaps the occasional calling of a spade a spade gives a certain savor to Mr. Paul's English, but even without touches of this kind his style is picturesque."

+ Springfield Republican p12 Je 1 '22 380w

"Character and human nature in his folk are what make the earlier part of Mr Paul's book interesting and amusing. Here's hoping that he will exercise his ability more in that direction. Young Samuel and his family, like good pie, suggest another helping, but they are not all the book."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Jl 2 '22 220w

PEABODY, JOSEPHINE PRESTON (MRS LIONEL SIMEON MARKS). Portrait of Mrs W. 150p $1.75 Houghton
812 22-9003

Beginning with a brief sketch of the career of Mary Wollstonecraft, by way of a foreword, the play centers about this pioneer of woman's rights at the time John Opie painted her picture and in the flower of her love for William Godwin. The first of the three acts is in Opie's studio, where many people known to fame, among them John Kemble, Robert Southey, Mrs Siddons and William Godwin, have come to view the picture. In the second act Mary Wollstonecraft has just become Mrs Godwin and the news of the event is broken to a few friends in Mary's new home. In the third act Mary dies after the birth of her daughter, Mary Godwin. In the epilogue young Mary, now sixteen years old, is embarking, according to the theories taught by her mother and father, on her love-venture with the poet Shelley. Throughout the play Mary Wollstonecraft's revolutionary ideas on woman and marriage supply the subject matter for the dialogue.

Booklist 18:324 Je '22

"I think Mrs. Marks has written a very remarkable play. She has drawn vividly the character and personality of an extraordinarily picturesque woman. Her name and her face has found in Mrs. Marks the vision of the dramatic poet who, in this play, has burned the dark away from the memory of Wollstonecraft with the flames of the imagination." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 29 '22 1900w

Cleveland p67 S '22

"A play structurally weak, in which no line of action is followed, persistently enough to absorb one's attention." R. A. P.

— Freeman 6:46 S 20 '22 250w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Lit R p755 Je 24 '22 640w

"A quaint eighteenth century atmosphere is maintained, through which the characters move as if stepping in a minuet. It is not an atmosphere in which Mary Wollstonecraft belongs. She is of the strain of Medea and Penthesilea, and refuses an embodiment composed of curtsies, old English songs, and sentimental motherhood." Katharine Anthony

— New Repub 31:366 Ag 23 '22 450w

"An exceedingly delicate problem. Mere craftsmanship could hardly cope with it; the poetic insight and the sensitive perception of character which have gone into the making of Miss Peabody's play reveal the hand of an artist." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p6 S 24 '22 250w

"As a play the interest is not dramatically very intense, but as a reconstruction of a certain phase of life in the last few years of the Eighteenth century, and as a portrait of a very unusual woman, it is a distinct contribution to literature." Constance Black

+ — N Y Tribune p5 Ag 13 '22 360w

"Miss Peabody has captured the essence of Mary Wollstonecraft in her play and painted a character that will linger in the reader's mind long after he has put the book down."

+ Outlook 131:682 Ag 23 '22 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:512 N '22

"The Portrait of Mrs W.' is a triumph for the subtle pen of its author. She vivifies these literary names of days past for us, giving the public a play as readable as is the novel of today. Disregarding obvious dramatic possibilities of the story, the author holds to the true history of Mary W., showing us a woman enjoying and suffering as other women do. The artistry of the work is complete—there is not an unnecessary word."

+ Springfield Republican p7a My 14 '22 260w

Wis Lib Bul 18:183 Jl '22

"Much better, dramatically, than either Mary or Godwin are the accessory Southey's, Kembles and Inchbalds, in whom the eighteenth century, under the double smile of Mary Wollstonecraft and Miss Peabody, is softened almost into winsomeness." O. W. Firkins

— + Yale R n s 12:195 O '22 130w

PEAKE, ARTHUR SAMUEL. Nature of Scripture. 296p $2 Doran [8s Hodder & S.]

220.1 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. A22-1147

"A collection of papers dealing with the Bible from the point of view of literary criticism and emphasizing its value for an understanding of religion."—J Religion

J Religion 2:655 N '22 30w

"No English scholar has done so much of late years to popularize the Scientia Scripturarum as the author of these lucid and illuminating lectures, which may be commended to students who combine an acceptance of critical method with an adhesion to Evangelical faith."

+ Spec 128:566 My 6 '22 300w

PEARCE, CHARLES E. Queen of the paddock. 251p $1.75 Brentano's [8s 6d S. Paul]

"Violetta Vaughan was the daughter of the thriftless and unscrupulous Captain Vaughan, whose phenomenal luck at cards forced him out of the English army. In the betting club he ran, in, or near London, his daughter was placed in charge of the buffet at the club, and there she learned how to keep the rowdy members in their place. At the death of Captain Vaughan, thrown upon her own resources, she found this experience of inestimable value, particularly through her experiences at Monte Carlo and Paris."—Boston Transcript

"Mr. Pearce has avoided the beaten track in this sporting novel, and the plot is one with plenty of movement and some surprises. Phases of the 'West End' are sketched so faithfully that the life there will be easily recognized. The romance is well worth a bit of spare time belonging to anyone interested in horses, and racing characters in particular."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '22 340w

"It is very English, sometimes smart, but for the most part merely moving-picture material novelized."

— Lit R p173 Mr 4 '22 80w

N Y Times p14 F 12 '22 240w

PEARL, RAYMOND. Biology of death. 275p il $2.50 Lippincott

577.7 Death 22-24032

The book comes under the series of "Monographs on experimental biology" edited by Jacques Loeb, T. H. Morgan, and W. J. V. Osterhout and embodies a course of lectures delivered at the Lowell Institute in Boston in December, 1920. To man's endeavor to prolong the individual life the author attributes, in large measure, the development of the science of biology, pure and applied. Biology can and has contributed much to our knowledge of natural death and the causes which determine the duration of life. It is the purpose of this book to review some of the more important aspects of this phase of biological science and to set forth in an orderly and consistent manner the present state of knowledge on the subject. Bibliography. Index.

Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '22 780w

"Dr. Raymond Pearl is the leading exponent in this country of the biometric school of biologists. . . 'The Biology of Death' is a book full of interest and suggestiveness. And it reveals understandably the attitude and at least the simpler methods of the biometricians." Vernon Kellogg

+ Lit R p450 F 10 '23 1400w

"This book should especially command the attention of those who would know what modern experimental science has done toward explaining life. It is not a difficult book to read. It is, like the other works in the series, devoid of the usual scientific jargon. There are parts which have to do with statistics, charts and deductions which will interest only physiologists, but most of the treatise is as concise, lucid and interesting as any essay." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p9 N 19 '22 1250w

PEARSON, HESKETH. Modern men and mummies. 208p $2.50 Harcourt [10s 6d Allen & U.]

928 Actors and actresses. Authors 22-3307

Some thirty character studies of English men and women of varying degrees of celebrity, mostly writers and actors. The sketches range in length from thirty-five pages to less than a page. The longer sketches are of Bernard Shaw, Sir Herbert Tree, Sir Francis Galton, Sir George Alexander, Frank Harris, Lytton Strachey, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, and Stephen Phillips. The rest are very slight and some of them only caricatures.

"There are a few interesting though one-sided portraits of such men as Bernard Shaw, Sir Herbert Tree, and Frank Harris, and a quantity of absurdly inadequate sketches of other literary and theatrical celebrities."

-- Bookm 55:202 Ap '22 100w
Cleveland p39 My '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:146 F 11 '22 300w

"The reader who likes amusing but trivial personal revelations about actors and authors will find many readable anecdotes and funny stories here. On the whole this book is best in the many parts where the author allows his subjects to speak for themselves."

+ Lit R p386 Ja 28 '22 250w

Nation 114:603 My 17 '22 20w

"Mr. Pearson has added very little to the sum of human knowledge; he is at times amusing and at no time so amusing as when he is serious. He treats certain shadows as if they were still human beings, and he is so cocksure on all subjects that one might believe that he is very young, if his book did not show that he was at least in the spring of middle age." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p10 F 19 '22 1000w

"He seems to have been in two minds as to his function. Sometimes he paints the man, but at others gives us a survey of his works; and on the whole he is less effective as an artist than as a cicerone. The study of Mr. Frank Harris is the best thing in the book—perhaps because there is in it less of the author and more of his subject."

+ Sat R 132:sup10 O 22 '21 600w

"The author's impressions are lively and in spots significant."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 210w

"Vivid, delightful word portraits of English men of letters and art, painted with much shrewdness and humor."

+ Wis L'b Bul 18:103 Ap '22

PECK, ANNIE SMITH. Industrial and commercial South America. 509p $5 Dutton

918 South America—Description and travel.

South America—Industries and resources 22-9386

The object of the book is to promote acquaintance with South America for purposes of friendship and trade, and to consider from a commercial and industrial point of view . . . "the physical characteristics of the individual countries, their advantages and drawbacks; the climate and soil; the resources, including the animal, vegetable, and mineral products, and the water power; the character of the inhabitants including the quality and quantity of human labor; their present needs and wants; the future possibilities; the opportunity for investments of various kinds and political conditions affecting these; the instruments of exchange, banking and trade regulations; the means of communication and transport by land and water." (Intro.) After a general survey of South America as a whole the individual states are taken up on the north, west, and east coast respectively, with additional chapters on South American trade and life. The book contains eight maps, appendices and an index.

Booklist 19:16 O '22

"While it is evident that Miss Peck's design in preparing this book was to produce a volume of distinct value to the specialist—the manufacturer, the exporter and importer, the traveler, or the seeker after knowledge—yet the general reader who picks it up will not readily lay it down. The seeker for a market in South America for the products of his manufacturing will find this an extremely useful volume." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 17 '22 800w

"The workmanship of the book is indifferent, mediocre. Given, however, the lamentable lack of knowledge in this country of most things South American, Miss Peck's volume will without question be edifying and instructive to many of its readers. The amount of general information compacted within its pages is enormous, and as an encyclopedia of facts it will render a real service." C. H. Haring

+ Lit R p25 S 16 '22 900w

"A mine of information,' as the publishers claim, upon the physical characteristics and natural resources of every single country in South America, a handbook which of its kind could scarcely be bettered, it may be searched from cover to cover in vain for a solitary recognition of the fact that the study of Latin America involves any human problem whatever." W. B. W.

+ New Statesman 20:180 N 11 '22 440w

N Y Times p11 Je 25 '22 160w

Outlook 131:500 Ji 19 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:520 N '22

St Louis 20:250 O '22

"A concise encyclopedia of the natural resources, physical characteristics, products, climate, transportation systems, cities and ports of the South American countries, written with such a complete lack of color, interpretation and human touch as to completely fail in its purpose to promote acquaintance with the neighbors to the South."

+ Survey 48:280 My 20 '22 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup' p534 Ag 17 '22 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p571 S 11 '22 310w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 26 '22 110w

Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

PEDLER, MARGARET. Moon out of reach. 351p $1.90 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

23-195

Nan Davenant, an accomplished pianist and Penelope Craig, a singer, share a flat together in London. Nan is a person of impulse, irresistible in many ways, with the soul of an artist and inheriting a strain of French blood from her grandmother. Her affairs of the heart are numerous and complicated. There was Maryon Rooke, but he is now married and she had really never loved him; then she is in honor bound to Roger Trenby, and a Davenant's word could not be broken. Peter Mallory, however, is the man whom Nan really loves, tho honor and duty forbid it. At last Peter's wife dies and Trenby absolves Nan from her pledge to marry him, so the way is cleared for the inevitable ending to the story.

PEDLER, MARGARET—Continued

Boston Transcript p4 J1 29 '22 880w

"It is all just a little unconvincing. One finds it hard to follow the tribulations of these unhappy people with more than a passing degree of sympathy. The English background, too, though in some ways skillfully delineated, betrays an occasional trace of its American design."

— Lit R p779 J1 1 '22 380w

"A very conventional and very old-fashioned romance. There are some good descriptions of the Cornish coast, [and] parts of the dialogue are natural."

— + N Y Times p13 My 28 '22 290w

Wis Lib Bul 18:219 O '22

PEERS, GERTRUDE KATHERINE (SHEPHERD) (MRS CHARLES REED PEERS). Early Italian painters: their art and times. 196p il $3. Medici society of America, 755 Boylston St, Boston, Mass.

759.5 Painting, Italian

22-17033

The pictures chosen for comment belong to the Tuscan, Sienese, Umbrian, Ferrarese, Paduan and Venetian schools and are to be found in the National gallery, London. Because the pictures are there seen out of their own surroundings and atmosphere, the author attempts to supply some of both. Painted at a time when art was completely a part of the lives of the people, when the finishing of an altar-piece was the occasion of a public holiday and when "travelling painters of small price" found support from the peasants, these pictures can be clearly understood only when the student sees the relation of the painter to his life and times. The stories which form the subjects of the pictures are told quite fully and some of the lives of the saints are retold. Part of the illustrations are in color.

Boston Transcript p4 My 27 '22 160w

"A narrative which, while without literary distinction, is readable and intermittently graceful. The book will be useful to persons beginning to be interested in the Italian primitives. For others the chief appeal of the book will be the tasteful typographical form and the excellent color plates furnished by those fastidious publishers, the Medici Society."

+ — Lit R p744 Je 17 '22 110w

Nation 114:700 Je 7 '22 10w

"Not in years have I seen pictures so ludicrously misinterpreted. If the reader is blind, as the author seems to believe, then no amount of detailed description can help him." T: Craven

New Repub 32:sup18 S 27 '22 400w

Outlook 131:534 J1 26 '22 50w

R of Rs 67:111 Ja '23 100w

PEIXOTTO, ERNEST CLIFFORD. Through Spain and Portugal. 281p il $3.50 (16s) Scribner

914.6 Spain—Description and travel. Portugal—Description and travel 22-20738

Pictures and text in this book of travel are by the same hand. Mr Peixotto is especially interested in architecture, history and antiquities and his drawings are chiefly of buildings. Contents: Lisbon; Cintra; Portugal's battle abbeys; Two Edens of Estramadura; North Portugal and its Romarias; An adventure in Salamanca; Two hill-towns of old Castile; Some Spanish gardens; In Catalonia; Mallorca.

Booklist 19:81 D '22

"Merely to turn these pages is to step into enchantment. People and places live for you, the colorful life floods the very room where you sit." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ Int BK R p35 D '22 160w

"It is Ernest Peixotto at his charming best."

+ Lit R p360 D 30 '22 250w

"A rare combination of skill with both pen and pencil. The book is of the kind that stirs the reader to say, 'Can't we manage a trip abroad next year?'"

+ Outlook 132:726 D 20 '22 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:30 Ja '23

"He is not the mere artist-tourist, who is content to keep to well-frequented routes and well-known subjects, but has some excellent chapters (with some yet more excellent drawings) on Spanish Gardens, the Battle Abbeys of Portugal, Montserrat, and the Balearic Islands."

+ Spec 129:sup674 N 11 '22 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p800 D 7 '22 220w

PEMBER, MRS DEVEREUX. See Devereux, R., pseud.

PENDEXTER, HUGH. Virginia scout. 353p $1.75 Bobbs

22-7880

"The story concerns Basdel Morris, a young frontiersman, messenger for Gov Dunmore, and is told by himself. Morris has a continuous performance of hair-breadth escapes, of capture and all but torture, of flouting in love by a girl who knew nothing of the frontier but who learned good and plenty as a captive, and of escape and sharing in the big battle that brought peace, or a long truce, to the mountain settlers."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 19:21 O '22

"Mr. Pendexter is peculiarly successful in giving one a sense of the strain and anxiety of the time, but at his most strenuous points he never degenerates into hysterics or ranting. His is an admirable piece of work."

+ Lit R p707 Je 3 '22 250w

"It is a light book, but it is well handled and should be of some appeal to readers. Indeed, it is to be suspected that boys of 16 years or so are going to find this novel a tale after their own hearts."

+ N Y Times p25 My 21 '22 80w

"It has all the thrills of Indian warfare and a love story that ends better than it begins."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a J1 16 '22 360w

PENNELL, ELIZABETH (ROBINS) (MRS JOSEPH PENNELL) (N. N., pseud.), and PENNELL, JOSEPH. Whistler journal. 339p il $8.50 (35s) Lippincott

B or 92 Whistler, James Abbott McNeill 22-469

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:188 Mr '22

"The work is well done, the documentation full and not excessive, the illustrations intelligently selected. An ideal book in its kind, the kind being indispensable to worshippers and interesting to nearly everyone besides."

+ Dial 73:354 S '22 90w

Freeman 5:118 Ap 12 '22 400w

"In the larger sense this is a poor and superfluous book. In the smaller sense it is well written, vivaciously maintained, and very amusing—once the reader consents to the abasement of eavesdropping. Whistler comes off diminished in character and probity, but unfailingly fascinating." F. J. Mather, jr.

— + Lit R p430 F 18 '22 450w

"The 'Journal' is admirably illustrated and is packed with all manner of good things about Whistler in every aspect. Here hero-worship is pungent and erudite."

+ Nation 114:626 My 24 '22 80w

"It is full of curiosities of art and letters, as well as of delightful sketches of reminiscent and illustrative work. It is intimate and the great Jimmie lives again in the tender domesticity that the Pennells bestowed on him. We suppose that the whole history of art reveals no instance of one artist, of a temperament so difficult as Whistler's, becoming the subject of a life's devotion at the hands of another."

+ Nation and Ath 30:623 Ja 21 '22 800w

"The Whistler Journal," with its many admirable illustrations, makes a considerable, if rather confused, contribution to our knowledge of a great painter."

+ New Statesman 18:418 Ja 28 '22 2500w

Reviewed by M. F. Egan

N Y Times p5 Ja 15 '22 2800w

"The Pennells have been called Whistler's Boswells. It is true in a good sense, for without Boswell's sycophancy they have given an intimate 'close-up' (as the film people say) of their subject."

+ Outlook 130:434 Mr 15 '22 100w

"A friendly, sympathetic study, written in an informal, not too logical diary form."

+ Springfield Republican p11a Mr 19 '22 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p37 Ja 19 '22 1050w

PENNINGTON, PATIENCE, pseud. See Pringle, E. W.

PENTY, ARTHUR J. Post-industrialism. 157p $2 Macmillan [6s Allen & J.]

330 Industry. Machinery in industry. Gilds (Eng ed 22-12095)

The author holds that our present civilization, with its hectic industrialism, unrestricted use of machinery, and sub-division of labor, is headed for destruction, and that socialism can no longer avert the ruin since it has lost sight of its original problem—the problem of the machine—to concentrate its activities upon its war against capitalism. In remedy of our present evils he advises the study of the past, which holds the foundations of all great cultures, and suggests a revival of the guilds, small industries and handicrafts. The book has a preface by G. K. Chesterton who defends the author against the charge of being a romantic reactionary.

Boston Transcript p9 S 30 '22 520w

Nation and Ath 31:689 Ag 19 '22 210w

"Mr. Penty takes too naïve a view of the machine problem, and too naïve a view also, we venture to suggest, of the psychology of the human beings whom he is summoning back to 'a firm foundation.' That does not mean, however, that the problem is not important or that this book will not repay reading and thinking about. Mr. Chesterton perhaps goes rather far in saying that Mr. Penty is one of the two or three original minds of the modern world. But he is certainly one of the most interesting and stimulating among the unorthodox Socialist critics of the modern world."

+ — New Statesman 19:520 Ag 12 '22 420w

PERKINS, MRS EDNA (BRUSH) (MRS ROGER GRISWOLD PERKINS). White heart of Mojave; an adventure with the outdoors of the desert. 229p il $3 Boni & Liveright

917.94 Mohave desert, California. Death Valley, California 22-2629

Two "middle-aged mothers of families," in need of a vacation and solitude, followed the call of the great outdoors of the Mojave desert in lower California. They were irresistibly tempted to explore Death Valley and they accomplished it with a mule, a horse, a grocery wagon and a guide. The book is a vivid description of the terrible fascination and beauty of desolate places where the "here" is ever dreary and the distance ever full of magic. Appendix.

Booklist 19:118 Ja '23

"Page follows page of verbal descriptions so transfused with not only the color but the spirit of these desert spaces where is no sound save that of 'the universe moving on,' that we share with a vividness not often vouchsafed vicarious travellers, a peculiarly alluring and adventurous quest." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '22 1100w

Cleveland p91 D '22

"An intensely interesting book. A book for those who enjoy exciting records of human achievement. . . . The book is not only adventurous, but finely informative."

+ Int Bk R p62 Ja '23 650w

"Full of the atmosphere of the real desert. The account of the difficulties that beset the travelers in reaching their goal is entertaining and at times humorous, and the descriptions of desert scenery are unusually good."

+ Outlook 132:772 D 27 '22 60w

R of Rs 66:672 D '22 160w

"Mrs. Perkins not only has something to say, but she says it unusually well. She has put the hot, alkaline sands into her book, and readers who are weary of the usual travel narrative will find this volume interesting and unusual, as refreshing as it is well-written."

+ Springfield Republican p16 F 9 '23 330w

Wis Lib Bul 19:23 Ja '23

PERLMAN, SELIG. History of trade unionism in the United States. (Social science textbooks) 313p $2 Macmillan

331.88 Trade unions—United States 22-20181

The author was one of Professor Commons's collaborators in the "History of Labor in the United States" (Book Review Digest, 1918) and Part one of the present volume is based on that work. Part two, The larger career of unionism, brings the history from 1897 down to date; and Part three brings together several of the ideas suggested by that history, and draws from them conclusions and inferences. A chapter is devoted to radical unionism and another to the dictatorship of the proletariat. Bibliography. Index.

"His work is interesting and satisfying. Professedly sympathetic with the aims of trade unionism, he makes no attempt to conceal the springs of forces working for evil and discontent in the ranks of the employed. The value of such a study is limitless. It is a book which may be read with profit by executives anxious to find a sincere explanation of the aims of their employees, and by the workers themselves, whose interests lead them to discover through history the basis of their claims today." S. T. Beach

+ Administration 5:229 F '23 600w

"The volume is useful; it summarizes a great deal of material in concise and readable form, and it adds some good chapters on recent developments."

+ Am Pol Sci R 17:150 F '23 70w

"To the tender-minded, who firmly believe in the great new forward movements of the day, this book is not to be recommended. Mr. Perlman has rendered no service at all to us one hundred percent idealists; all he has done is to uncover a discouraging number of hard facts." Stuart Chase

+ — New Repub 33:208 Ja 17 '23 600w

Reviewed by R. C. Feld

N Y Times p8 F 4 '23 1400w

PEROCHON, ERNEST. Nêne (Eng title, Foster mother). 289p $1.75 Doran

22-26242

This tragedy of French peasant life is told with a dignity, restraint and simplicity which won for its hitherto unknown author the Goncourt prize of 1920. Madeleine Clarandeau goes to work as hired girl for Michel Corbier, a young widower with a prosperous farm. She is a selfless, devoted creature needing only an object for her affection and all the love of her maternal heart goes out to Corbier's two little motherless children. Her love becomes a passion which absorbs her whole being. She broods over the children, spends all her savings on them, rescues them from death and becomes to them their beloved Nène. But Corbier, who never has looked upon her as anything but a perfect housekeeper and nurse, becomes infatuated with the heartless and dissolute Violette and when he brings her home as his bride, Madeleine is turned out without a trace of regret or emotion. Coming back two weeks later for a look at the children, she finds them fascinated with their new and pretty mother, herself apparently forgotten. There is nothing left for her but the deep black water of the pond.

PEROCHON, ERNEST—Continued

"The story is set, like a primitive jewel, in the rugged and yet altogether beautiful background of simplicity. There is seldom a word wasted, never a moral pointed. It is like a painting by Millet, a thing of passive activity, a paradox that is not a paradox, and which recalls, more than anything else, Kipling's appeal for the France that all must love 'who love their fellow kind.'" I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 29 '22 550w

"A finely tempered and beautiful story. Nène is an individual in fiction, which is a true achievement and her story is a powerful and beautiful narrative." Howard Weeks

+ Detroit News p7 Jl 16 '22 230w

"Poignantly real, not self-conscious for a moment, and told with the uttermost simplicity. Its style is adapted to the subject and makes a rarely beautiful thing of it."

+ Dial 73:235 Ag '22 120w

"An excellent example of the stories of peasant life that the French know so well how to do; and as such, it well repays reading."

+ Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 60w

"The book is written with consummate art and extraordinary insight and sympathy. Here is no touch of sentimentality to mar the truth. Each character is drawn with entire comprehension, full and round."

+ Lit D p65 My 13 '22 1300w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Lit R p651 My 13 '22 1100w

"Ernest Pérochon is too thoroughly a naturalist to write a story which should be wholly epic or idyl. His tale has a simple nobility not because it is idealized but because that nobility is inherent in the life described." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 114:48 Jl 12 '22 480w

"A well executed piece of work and one feels in its pages the spirit of genuine sincerity and effort. But that something we call genius, so precious that a grain of it will often illumine whole chapters of indifferent workmanship—hardly." E. S.

+ New Repub 31:312 Ag 9 '22 320w

"It is a story simple as the growth of a flower, and as filled with miracle—with beauty, too. . . . It breaks the heart, this little book, that is written so close to nature and to the very core of men and women. It breaks it as beauty and sorrow must, when they are given to us with high art and delicate truth." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p15 Je 11 '22 1550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:262 Je '22

Pratt p36 Ap '22

Spring'd Republican p7a Jl 23 '22 400w

"Mr. Pérochon has clearly observed and meditated on the life in the fields till it has yielded to him the essence of its simple poetry. Such a writer has no need to rhapsodize or force the tone. His glance is as clear and piercing as his language; both go straight to the heart of things. He introduces us to an unsophisticated community firmly attached to the soil. The incessant labour of the farm and the fields engulfs them all, and M. Pérochon renders their life with a tender brilliance almost of enamel. A tragedy so poignant and so free from all sentimental dilution is a truly fine achievement."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr

9 '22 450w

Wis Lib Bul 18:218 O '22

PERRY, BLISS. Life and letters of Henry Lee Higginson. 557p il $4 Atlantic monthly

B or 92 Higginson, Henry Lee 21-19947

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:187 Mr '22

Reviewed by Robert Herrick

Dial 72:305 Mr '22 1850w

"Mr. Perry has done a most skillful and self-effacing piece of work in this book. He has achieved the finest feat of biography in focusing our interest upon his portrait so strongly that we forget for the moment the art of the painter." H. W. Boynton

+ Lit R p428 F 18 '22 900w

"If one should seek to tell the story of the United States from 1850 to the present day in the biographies of a dozen Americans, this excellent and, in places, genuinely moving, life of Major Higginson would inevitably be among them. For, if unusually distinguished, the man's career was typical of much that was finest in the life of New England during the Civil War and after." O. G. Villard

+ Nation 114:321 Mr 15 '22 900w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 30:319 My 10 '22 2100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:238 My '22

PERTWEE, ROLAND. Men of affairs. 285p $2 Knopf

22-10767

His great likeness to Anthony Barraclough, a rich financier, gives Dick Altar, who is reduced almost to his last penny, a chance to earn twenty-five thousand dollars by impersonating him. Van Diest, who is trying to outwit Barraclough in a claim to land where radium has been discovered, thinking that he has at last captured his man, tortures Altar for three weeks in order to make him divulge the whereabouts of the land. It is all in vain, Altar is a gentleman and sticks to his bargain. The real Barraclough, in the meantime, has been enabled to leave London and settle his claim and altho the mistake is discovered by his enemies just as he lands on the Cornish coast, he wins out after an exciting battle of wits.

Booklist 18:368 Jl '22

"Original, well told and thoroughly enjoyable for followers of detective stories. Quite as good as J. S. Fletcher at his best." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:523 Jl '22 80w

Boston Transcript p7 Ag 19 '22 780w

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"While exciting, the author has been able to lend possibility if not probability to his tale, so there is none of the feeling of insulted intelligence on the part of the reader which some thrillers leave."

+ Daily News Rec p17 S 26 '22 470w

"An excellent story. The plot is well worked out and is intensely exciting."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 N 25 '22 500w

"Is well written and the story moves with a quick pace. Its people are real, and in action they move because that's the kind they are, not because the author holds their strings."

+ Lit R p748 Je 17 '22 180w

"Mr. Pertwee's novel is not only the liveliest and most interesting kind of a swiftly moving story; it is well constructed, written in a charming, whimsical style, ingenious, exciting, and with a loveable hero, as well as one of the most delightful old ladies we have encountered in many and many a long day. The story is improbable, of course, but its improbabilities are treated with such gayety of spirit that one remembers only the spirit and forgets the improbabilities."

+ N Y Times p20 Je 18 '22 520w

"It is not at all the usual murder and detective combination. Here, contrary to most plot tales, not the reader but the opposing plotters are mystified; the book is a foreordained big seller." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 131:264 Je 7 '22 50w

"The author apparently has not been at the business of writing novels long enough to acquire all the smoothness of technic involved in writing a successful best-seller, but his ability to spin a good yarn, full of breathless suspense, is proved beyond a doubt."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Je 25 '22 270w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 J1 '22

PETERS, JOHN PUNNETT. Bible and spade; 2 lectures delivered before Lake Forest college on the foundation of the late William Bross. (Bross lib.) 239p il $1.75 Scribner [8s T. Clark]

220.9 Bible—Antiquities 22-2144

"In an easy, intimate, but informing way the author talks to us of the 'Ancestry of the Hebrews,' 'Cosmogony and Folk Lore,' 'History and Prophecy,' 'Hebrew Psalmody,' all in the light of his own travels in Bible lands and the excavations in recent times. He then sketches for us a history of exploration in Palestine and closes with archaeological illustrations of New Testament times, with special reference to the Oxyrhynchus papyri."—J Religion

Booklist 19:35 N '22

J Religion 2:218 Mr '22 40w

"The book does not aim to be an exhaustive or precisely methodical discussion of the subject with which it deals, though it provides a good archaeological background for the study of the Bible. But its chief interest and charm is the autobiographical and reminiscent note that sounds all the way through the lectures." Kemper Fullerton

+ J Religion 2:552 S '22 750w

Pratt p8 winter '23

Spec 129:153 J1 29 '22 220w

"[Dr. Peters] has the gift of lucid exposition, and is able to transmit to others something of the enthusiasm for his subject which he so obviously feels himself."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p447 J1 6 '22 150w

PETERS, JOHN PUNNETT. Psalms as liturgies. 494p $4 Macmillan

223.2 Bible. Old Testament—Psalms 22-2897

The book, which is an expansion of the Paddock lectures for 1920, treats the Psalms as liturgies prepared for, and primarily used in, the services of the Jewish Temple. A long critical introduction on the origin, purpose and development of the Psalter is followed by a critical commentary, in which each Psalm appears both in the rendering of the authorized version and in Dr. Peters's own translation. The notes are brief and chiefly concerned with the liturgical character of the Psalms.

"A profoundly scholarly work. He has produced a beautiful and important book."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '22 260w
Cleveland p73 S '22

"A new translation is always to be welcomed. To put familiar thought in a new dress is always worth while. A translation of the Psalms should combine accuracy and poetic style. Dr. Peters has made many improvements in both respects, for which we shall all be grateful. But the rendering is very uneven; and there are many things to mend. The book shows a lack of careful and exact scholarship; but its main contention is sound and it will stir thought upon many matters of detail. This is justification enough for any book." J. M. P. Smith

+ J Religion 2:550 S '22 750w

"The whole book is written in a style without footnotes or references to dead languages or modern scholars, which makes it available to the ordinary reader. The book leaves something to be desired in general arrangement and printing. There is no index or adequate table of contents. There is a good deal of repetition. The general viewpoint is admirable and sensible." H: J. Cadbury

+ Lit R p8 S 9 '22 1100w

PETERSON, MARGARET (MRS. A. O. FISHER). Dust of desire. 312p $1.75 McBride [7s 6d Melrose]

"The scene of the story is a village in a far corner of East Africa. Tom Simpson, a physician, had met and married Maureen after a brief courtship; he saw no reason to disturb the routine of his easy-going sports-loving life, no reason to make a companion of his wife, and with the end of the honeymoon her dreams had slowly faded. Gerald Kenyon, successful planter, picturesque, frequently a spy in native disguise for the Government, and adventurer in love, meets Maureen. After mishaps and hesitations, true (?) love is crowned at last and the technical conventions are saved by removing the inattentive Simpson from this life."—Lit R

"Her characters, are no mere machine-made individuals, moving back and forth before gay-colored backdrops. In the mere conception they are not remarkable. But on the other hand, her treatment of them brings each and every one into almost dazzlingly clear-cut prominence. Moreover, once launched upon their varied careers, they behave and speak as human beings. They are never false, they are never stiff, and they go their paces through a tale that is too good to spoil by retelling."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 28 '22 160w

Cleveland p91 D '22

Lit R p134 O 21 '22 220w

N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 150w

Spec 128:342 Mr 18 '22 40w

"Animated, vigorously written story. It is marked by first-hand knowledge of the country; but it does not give so much scope for the writer's special talent, shown so admirably in some of her former novels, of reproducing the sinister and mysterious horror which broods over more remote parts of the African continent."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 16 '22 300w

PFISTER, OSKAR ROBERT. Psycho-analysis in the service of education; being an introduction to psycho-analysis; auth. tr. by Charles Rockwell Payne, F. Gochwind and Barbara Low. 176p $2 Moffat [6s Kimpton]

130 Psychoanalysis (Eng ed 22-13346)

"The author, who has already given us a larger work under the title 'The Psychoanalytic Method,' divides his subject into three parts. In the first he dwells on the importance of the psychoanalytic method for teachers and the futility of all other methods. In the second he explains with the aid of copious illustrations the most common Freudian concepts and summarizes the well-known theories of the unconscious, especially in its relation to hysteria, dreams, and the various oddities of everyday life. The third part, called 'The Practice of Pedanalysis,' is concerned with the application of Freudian principles to the business of the educator."—Lit R

"A serious attempt to deal popularly and in a practical way with the essentials of Freudianism. This little work, which consists of a series of lectures delivered before a convention of teachers, gains probably in virtue of the fact that its author is a pastor. . . because of the eloquence that marks the exposition, a quality which must have been derived from the pulpit duties." A. A. Roback

+ Lit R p26 S 16 '22 1350w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p8 O 8 '22 950w

PFISTER, OSKAR ROBERT—Continued

"Dr. Pfister's book is neither very clearly arranged nor very well translated. However, it contains interesting material and shows its author as a man free from the exaggerations which often beset writers on psycho-analysis."

+ — Spec 128:403 Ap 1 '22 230w

PHELPS, EDITH M., ed. University debaters' annual; constructive and rebuttal speeches delivered in debates of American colleges and universities during the college year, 1921-1922. 447p $2.25 Wilson, H. W.

808.5 Debating

The subjects covered this year are the Kansas court of industrial relations, unemployment insurance, the sales tax, independence for the Philippines, recognition of soviet Russia, naval disarmament, government ownership and operation of coal mines, and the closed shop. The last is a dual debate, both contests being reported, and one is the first contest to be reported in this annual series when men and women from non-coeducational colleges met on the debate platform. Each debate or set of arguments is accompanied by briefs and a selected bibliography.

Booklist 19:77 D '22

Survey 49:sup210 N 1 '22 60w

Wis Lib Bul 18:250 N '22

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. Human nature in the Bible. 333p $2 (10s 6d) Scribner

221.92 Bible. Old Testament—Biography
22-20377

In writing of the men and women of the Old Testament Prof Phelps tries to remove the barrier to our understanding of them which the walls of the Bible have made, to show them as human beings whose lives teach us much about the ways of human nature. He writes of them as if living today, in the language of today and sometimes in a humorous tone.

Booklist 19:144 F '23

"It gives a twentieth century twist to the book of the ages by retelling scriptural tales and re-discussing scriptural themes from the human—not the divine—viewpoint. The lucid literary style of the Yale professor is varied with a racy Yankee idiom that suits well the simple moralizing and homely philosophy of this, the book of all time arranged for our own day and generation."

+ Bookm 56:769 F '23 170w

"His aim is to interpret interesting and significant episodes and passages, with the hope that those who read his pages will re-read the Bible with renewed zest. In his endeavor to be graphic and interesting, the author often becomes flippant and irreverent."

— Cath World 116:562 Ja '23 200w

"Modern, lively, sometimes amusingly audacious, and altogether fascinating." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:310 N 25 '22 60w

"When not humorous, Professor Phelps explains the text of the Biblical narrative as he sees it, and the result is a long exposition of the obvious. The paper wrapper concludes by saying that Professor Phelps 'has done nothing better than this book.' This is very sad."

— New Statesman 20:365 D 23 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:8 Ja '23

The Times [London] Lit Sup p751 N 16 '22 90w

PHILLIPS, WILLIAM J. Carols; their origin, music, and connection with mystery-plays; with a foreword by Sir Frederick Bridge. 134p fl $3 Dutton [6s Routledge]

783.6 Carols (Eng ed 22-4326)

From the large amount of carol material, the author has collected a selection varied enough to illustrate the many types in existence and to give an idea of the popularity of the carol in days of old. After a chapter on the origin of carols and on their connection with dancing and with mystery plays he treats in simple and non-technical style the various kinds of carols—story-telling carols, carols of nature, lullabies and cradle-songs, wassails, Epiphany and Christmas carols, etc.

"A pleasant, curious, and entertaining book." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 108:262 Mr 11 '22 100w

"Though in general Dr. Phillips's comments are unilluminating, this book should increase the interest in these songs, once more coming back to their own. The choice of carols is a good one, and the book, with its ten illustrations, is attractively printed."

+ — Lit R p536 Mr 25 '22 310w

"A very delightful little book. The woodcuts with which this book is illustrated well recapture the atmosphere of the subject."

+ Spec 127:790 D 10 '21 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 3 '21 90w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Pan and the twins. 239p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d G. Richards] 22-4212

The symbolism that underlies this charming fantasy represents the old pagan religion of Greece and Rome, on the one hand, and Christianity on the other, by the twins Arcadius and Hilarion. The twins, having been separated in their youth, meet again in mature life, Arcadius as a devotee of the god Pan, who has befriended and guided him from early youth, and Hilarion as a Christian monk and recluse. Both being broad-minded and of excellent disposition, they live as friends, in spite of their religious difference, and exchange their opinions freely. When a crisis confronts Hilarion, in the form of passionate love for a beautiful maiden, Arcadius calls in his god Pan for consultation. The wise Pan convinces even the pious Hilarion that heaven is won not by renunciation but by a life worth while to oneself and one's fellows; that the proof of a god lies in his worshippers; that each generation gets the gods it deserves; and that each religion, like a constellation, has its rising and its setting.

Booklist 18:240 Ap '22

"A pleasant result of his exercising his imagination, his philosophy, and his sense of humor. There is a strong philosophical slant to the book, but one never loses sight of the twinkle in the author's eye."

+ Bookm 55:202 Ap '22 150w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 12 '22 1150w

"A fantasy which tries to link something of Marcus Antoninus with Horace and whimsy. Since whimsy is as elusive a thing as humour, it might have been more practical to put salt on its tail than to spread the elaborate net of slightly archaic and elliptical phrases which Mr. Phillpotts has fashioned."

— + Dial 72:536 My '22 100w

Lit R p445 F 25 '22 360w

"It is satire, almost satiric in purpose like Anatole France rather than Victor Hugo; but Mr. Phillpotts also makes his classic world live naturally again. And if beneath the surface of a lively idyll of Latin life he conceals a critique of religions and a philosophy of life, so much the better. The purchaser will be repaid for the reading even if he misses the argument."

+ Lit R p462 Mr 4 '22 490w

"The style in which the book is written is as clear and bracing as the water of a mountain brook. There is something fresh and sweet in it, a delight to read, a real sensation. It is a playful book, but it is a wise one." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p14 F 26 '22 1300w

"Please don't be deterred by fear of scholasticism. It is a good deal more than classical; it is human through, and through. Also it has much quiet humor." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 130:350 Mr 1 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:322 JI '22

Spec 128:726 Je 10 '22 80w

"A novel to delight those who enjoy a delicate story charmingly told."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 JI 14 '22 360w

"Even the most rigid formalist in eremitism would find it hard to take offence at a book in which a little history and theology, a good deal of thought, and a great deal of gentle wit and fun are mingled so graciously and so urbanely as they are here."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p305 My 11 '22 860w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Red Redmaynes. 377p $2 Macmillan

22-23718

Mark Brendon, the young detective from Scotland Yard, while at Dartmoor on a fishing trip is called in by Mrs Pendean to solve the mystery of her husband's disappearance. The case sorely puzzles him and after the second murder takes place, he realizes that he has hopelessly failed and returns to London disgusted. Robert Redmayne is suspected of the double crime but when he himself is murdered the plot seems a hopeless tangle. The American detective, Peter Ganns, finally probes the mystery.

"A mystery story that approaches perfection in all its details." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 13 '22 750w

"I advise you to read 'The Red Redmaynes.' Do not be discouraged if you find, after the first three or four chapters, that the pace of the narrative slackens for a while. There are strange surprises coming. I have collected opinions about it, and while a few agree with me that the plot puts a strain on your credulity, the majority of readers call it a detective and mystery story very near to the first rank." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 110:96 F 3 '23 420w

"That the novel is well written and contains some lovely descriptive passages goes without saying, since it is the work of Eden Phillpotts. It holds the reader's interest to such an extent that even a usually welcome interruption, such as a summons to dinner, for instance, is decidedly irritating. There are exciting moments, plenty of surprises and unexpected twists. A first-rate mystery and murder story."

+ Int Bk R p62 F '23 420w

"Although the book is decidedly interesting, even thrilling, one must not expect a too close approximation to reality. For a railway journey, or the t. b. m.'s evening at home, however, it would not be easy to find a more appropriate tale."

+ Lit R p301 D 9 '22 330w

"Mr. Phillpotts a professional novelist has done the most professional type of novel. He has done it with professional exactness and competence, with the hard glaze of unreality in characterization and style which has been the approved professional manner of the polite detective story since Wilkie Collins. Yet, when all is said, we like Mr. Phillpotts as a brilliant amateur on the moors of Darts better than as a professional."

+ New Repub 33:154 Ja 3 '23 150w

"The story moves a little too slowly, but it is entertaining, ingenious and plausible. Mr. Phillpotts plays fair with his reader. False clues there are, and plenty of them, but they are not provided simply for that reader's mystification; they are an integral part of the daring devices of an exceptionally clever criminal, whose very cleverness was his destruction. Moreover, the book has the distinction, rare among detective stories, of being very well written."

+ N Y Times p8 D 3 '22 500w

"A second-rate performance; readable, indeed, but not at all plausible and suffering from manifest weaknesses alike in conception and in craftsmanship. Past master in his own line, here he is but a journeyman and must stand aside for his betters." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p21 D 31 '22 650w

PICCOLI, RAFFAELLO. Benedetto Croce: an introduction to his philosophy. 315p $2 Harcourt

195 Croce, Benedetto. Esthetics 22-5683

Benedetto Croce has been for the last fifteen years the leader of Italian philosophical thought. This introduction to his philosophy is intended for the professor or technical student of philosophy. The book opens up the whole range of Croce's thought in esthetics, logic, economics and ethics as well as in historical theory and literary criticism. Much of the material which it summarizes is still inaccessible to the English reader. There is a forty-page introduction giving the main outline of Croce's life and the origins of his thought. There is also a bibliography and an index.

Booklist 18:347 JI '22

Bookm 55:426 Je '22 150w

"There is no royal road to Croce: there is in him a wealth of suggestion worth getting, but the price is serious thinking, even after so expert a hand as Mr. Piccoli's has sifted the material for you and presented it in a handy volume that is surprisingly well written when one recalls that English is not the author's native tongue. His book is the fullest we now have on Croce and completes the fine summary issued some five years ago by H. Wildon Carr." I. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 29 '22 780w

Reviewed by T. Craven
Dial 73:349 S '22 2200w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
N Y Times p12 JI 23 '22 2050w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:325 JI '22
St Louis 20:119 Je '22
Sat R 134:721 N 11 '22 420w

"Mr. Piccoli's idiom is sometimes not completely English, but this is a small failing compared with the excellence of his style and the richness of his mind. His study is admirable and is to be unreservedly recommended."

+ Spec 129:697 N 11 '22 650w

"The author is to be complimented on his excellent English style, as well as on his brilliant intellectual achievement in summarizing so large a system within so small a compass."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 10 '22 470w

"Mr. Piccoli has written this book in an English which, though a little odd or stiff in places, is better than that which most Englishmen command. But he has command of it because he has command of his thought."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 26 '22 1800w

PICKTHALL, MARJORIE LOWRY CHRISTIE. The bridge: a story of the Great Lakes. 292p il $1.75 Century [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-1721

Alan Maclear, engineer, scamped the foundations of a bridge to effect a saving on his contract. The bridge collapsed, killing four men, among them his own brother. He covered all traces of his guilt, but his brother's wife knew. She called him "Poor Cain." Unable to endure his haunting shame he tried to run away from it and find peace on a little sand island in the Great Lakes. Here under the most unusual of circumstances he met Sombra Ransome, who by the power of her love helped him to rebuild his life.

Cleveland p28 Ap '22

"This is a distressingly bald narrative of puppets who, the author would pretend, are human beings moved by profoundest feelings."

— Lit R p513 Mr 18 '22 180w

PICKTHALL, M. L. C.—Continued

"A strong story, with a distinct moral tendency, relieved by a strain of poetic description, intensified by an elemental love affair and enlivened by dramatic action."

+ N Y Times p14 F '12 '22 400w

Outlook 130:473 Mr '22 '22 120w

Pratt p36 Ap '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Je '22 110w

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

PIERCE, FREDERICK. Our unconscious mind and how to use it. 323p $3 Dutton

130 Psychology, Applied. Subconsciousness. Psychoanalysis 22-5311

An explanation in plain untechnical language of the relation which the unconscious mind bears to the conscious, and of the practical applications which can be made of this knowledge in the control and operation of the will, in creating energy, in eliminating worry, in educating children, in getting more done in business, in making a contented human group industrially and politically, in replacing personal opinion with exact knowledge, in merchandising, advertising and selling.

Booklist 18:307 Je '22

"Frederick Pierce's book is beautifully and clearly done, and gives the first definite news of the Nancy and Rousseau schools which are experimenting in suggestion and auto-suggestion. For the present, what he has to say is compelling and brilliant, but deliberately tentative." Ruth Hale

+ Bookm 55:302 My '22 500w

Cleveland p72 S '22

"This book is not unimportant. It throws more light on our average American attitude towards the thing called culture and on what we expect of our scientists than a dozen books of ten times its merely scientific value." E: Sapir

+ Lit R p772 Jl 1 '22 1150w

"With commendable clearness and ingenuity of exposition, Mr. Pierce reveals to us in a new terminology truths that for the most part could be sufficiently well understood in the language of our childhood."

— No Am 215:715 My '22 700w

Pratt p7 winter '23

"The book can be thoroughly recommended to beginners: it is sound and practical and its method of approach to the subject is admirably fitted to give an introduction to the New Psychology which shall be both clear, comprehensible and interesting."

+ Spec 129:1014 D 30 '22 300w

"The book is not important even within its own field, but it may interest people who like easy reading in this sphere and who are dubious and shocked when they read Freud. There is nothing in the present volume that will bring the blush of shame to the cheek of modesty."

Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 28 '22 320w

Wis Lib Bul 18:153 Je '22

PIERSON, CHARLES WHEELER. Our changing constitution. 181p $1.50 Doubleday

342.73 United States—Constitution. State rights 22-18929

The theme of the book is the federal encroachment upon state power. It shows the change which is gradually taking place in our political system and how the division of powers which the constitution effected between the national government and the states, America's greatest contribution to the science of government, is being lost and forgotten. This theme is developed thru a discussion of the prohibition amendment, the woman suffrage amendment, the conflict between Congress and the Supreme court over child labor laws, federal control of trusts, and other contemporary problems of government.

Am Pol Sci R 17:115 F '23 40w

Booklist 19:109 Ja '23

Bookm 56:515 D '22 110w

"He who cares to inquire into the cause of the tendency [towards centralization] and to understand how it has forced compliance from every branch of the government, can do no better than consult this little volume. The style and the manner of treatment are well adapted to the use of both lawyer and layman." C: Nagel

+ Freeman 6:380 D 27 '22 1000w

"Mr. Pierson has succeeded in writing a book that should have a wide appeal. Its mellow style lightened by humor and without the burden of legal verbiage usually found in books on this subject make it attractive to lawyer and layman alike." Lawrason Riggs, Jr.

+ Lit R p102 O 14 '22 750w

"His book is too thin and sketchy to call for critical comment, but it can be read with profit by those not already endowed with the information it bestows. The author is accurate and his exposition is clear and painless."

+ — Pol Sci Q 37:718 D '22 180w

Pratt p13 winter '23

St Louis 21:6 Ja '23

Springf'd Republican p10 S 20 '22 680w

Wis Lib Bul 18:251 N '22

PILSWORTH, EDWARD S. Process engraving. 168p il $2 Macmillan

760 Engraving

22-5706

A thoro description of the processes involved in modern methods of engraving. Formulas are given for the various solutions used and equipment and tools are described and illustrated.

"The book presents a fairly thorough exposition of the processes employed in half-tone and line engraving. Photo-engravers and printers may find the book helpful, but for the general reader it will have little if any interest."

+ — Lit R p706 Je 3 '22 120w

Pratt p23 autumn '22

PIRANDELLO, LUIGI. Three plays. 233p $3.50 Dutton

852

22-23819

"The three plays of Pirandello, here offered in translations, are famous specimens of the 'new' theatre in Italy. Pirandello and his associates have broken the bounds set to the old fashioned 'sentimental' Latin play. 'Six Characters in Search of an Author' has won a distinguished place in the dramatic literature of the Western world, attracting audiences and engaging intellects far removed from the particular influences which made of it a season's sensation in Italy. 'Henry IV.', strong and original variation of the insanity motive, is the first of two plays by Pirandello dealing with a special aspect of the problem of reality and unreality. 'Right You Are' is typical of Pirandello for its rapidity, its harshness and its violence—the skill with which the tense tableau is drawn out of pure dialectic, pure 'conversation.'"—Prefatory note

"If not greatness, here is freshness, originality, piquancy, such nonsense from a wise man as is relished by the best of men." I. G.

Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '22 720w

Reviewed by I: Goldberg

Freeman 6:376 D 27 '22 1500w

"Sometimes, to be sure, Pirandello, the mental equilibrist, performs such remarkable 'stunts' high up on the fine points of casuistry that his followers would grow dizzy irritated if it were not for the steady force of tenderness which motivates his agility. Sometimes, again, he leads the way with such exasperating swiftness into mystifying mental mazes that one might stumble and lose the way were it not for the guiding light of his kindness. . . . But Pirandello is an evasive and subtle writer for translation. Both Edward Storer in 'Six Characters' and in 'Henry IV.' and Arthur Livingstone in 'Right You Are!' have brought the understanding which comes from real appreciation to their translations of Pirandello." Alice Kohn

N Y Times p6 D 10 '22 2200w

"They are a battle-ground for fact and fancy, for illusion and reality, for madness and sanity. But they are never dull and boring. They never wander off into abstract philosophical discussions of the thesis. They are concrete, lively, dramatic; they are interesting; they produce successfully." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Tribune p24 F 4 '23 1800w

PITTMAN, MARVIN SUMMERS. Successful teaching in rural schools. (Am. educ. ser.) 294p $1.40 Am. bk.

371 Teaching. Rural schools 22-4080

An account of an actual experiment in the application of new ideas of theory and technique in one of the most difficult of places—the one-teacher rural school. In the form of letters to a friend a teacher writes an enthusiastic description of the organization of fifteen schools into a demonstration district, of giving standardized tests, overcoming disciplinary troubles, working out new methods in the teaching of elementary school subjects and of applying the project method of teaching.

Booklist 19:8 O '22

PLATT, CHARLES. Psychology of social life; a materialistic study with an idealistic conclusion. 284p $2.50 Dodd

301 Social psychology 22-9640

The author holds that society and the individual present but two sides of the same problem, that society is but the outcome of man's natural propensities and can be explained psychologically; that social man has developed along certain nerve and brain patterns, some of them racial, with their origins in the first beginnings of humanity, some of them of more recent date. These brain patterns, such as the gregarious tendency, sex, fear and war, habit and imitation, sympathy and suggestion, which the book deals with in successive chapters, have determined the evolution of society and all man's effort to sidetrack it to conform to new intellectual formulas, such as socialism or democracy, are useless. The only hope for reform lies in beginning with the individual. Only by education, by drawing out from the vast subconscious storehouse of the child's mind those parts which shall be useful to the child and his fellows, can the world be bettered. Index.

Cleveland p73 S '22

"It is easy reading. It contains many interesting bits of information on various subjects. It is written, on the whole, in the spirit of an old-fashioned liberal. . . . The author has not attempted to write anything other than a popular book. But it is certainly not too much to expect something out of the writer's study and experience and personal observation that would bring psychology and living a little closer together and shed the light of this science on some, at least, of our puzzling human problems." E. D. Martin

+ Lit R p834 J1 29 '22 1850w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p635 O 5 '22 80w

PLIMMER, VIOLET GERALDINE (SHEP-FIELD) (MRS ROBERT HENRY ADERS PLIMMER), and PLIMMER, ROBERT HENRY ADERS. Vitamins and the choice of food. 164p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

613.2 Vitamines. Diet 22-12907

This book, intended for the general reader, gives an account of the discovery of vitamins and their significance. Recent scientific work has brought to light the indispensability of vitamins in nutrition. Their absence from the food is the cause of certain definite diseases. Common errors in the diet may lead to an insufficiency of vitamins in the diet and to consequent ill-health. Lifelong effects may be produced by malnutrition during the period of growth.

"Interesting problems are suggested by almost every page of this book, and it cannot fail to be of great value in disseminating sound doctrine on a subject concerning which there is now widespread ignorance."

+ Nature 110:336 S 9 '22 1100w

New Statesman 19:334 Je 24 '22 520w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:23 Ap '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:493 N '22

St Louis 20:214 S '22

"It is at once the most complete and the most authoritative of recent writings on this subject."

+ Survey 48:530 J1 15 '22 400w

"Dr. Plimmer and Mrs. Plimmer, in their excellent little book, give clear information about vitamins, and supply in an appendix a most attractive list of goods, common and uncommon, from which we can compile menus of assured probity."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 15 '22 900w

POGUE, JOSEPH EZEKIEL. Economics of petroleum. 375p il $6 Wiley

665.5 Petroleum 21-21280

"Painstaking economic study of the petroleum industry. Gives considerable attention to graphic presentation of data."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 19:42 N '22

"The object is to present, in perspective, the more important economic facts relating to petroleum, and it must be said that the author has certainly achieved his aim. He had every opportunity of producing an enormous compilation of statistics, relieved by a few terse, explanatory paragraphs and deductions. Instead, the author has given us a work of tangible value, one which seeks only to use past and present facts in order to foreshadow future possibilities." H. B. Milner

+ Nature 110:474 O 7 '22 1000w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:286 Je '22

POLLOCK, FRANK LILLIE. Woods rider. 384p il $1.75 Century

22-17972

Joe Marshall, altho only a lad, was woods-rider for a big turpentine orchard in Alabama, when a great storm ruined the forest. As Joe had invested all his money in the company he was glad when he learned that a new orchard was to be opened up. Misfortune came to this, too, so Joe decided to join his cousins the Har-mans who had come from Canada to Alabama in search of more bees for their apiary. After a series of thrilling adventures the young people succeeded in reaching Canada safely with their bees, and Joe became a member of the firm.

"Of the 'Woods Rider,' a young reviewer writes, 'There is not a real person in the book, and even the element of surprise is wanting, for the characters do almost exactly what you know beforehand they will do.'" M. H. E. Mussey

+ Nation 115:sup619 D 6 '22 50w

PONTING, HERBERT GEORGE. Great white South; being an account of experiences with Captain Scott's South pole expedition and of the nature life of the Antarctic. 306p il $7.50 McBride [30s Duckworth]

919.9 Antarctic regions. Scott, Robert Falcon. South pole (Eng ed 22-7563)

"The story of the bravery, self-sacrifice and endurance of Captain Scott and his men in the British Antarctic expedition, 1910-1913, retold by the official photographer, illustrated by one hundred and sixty-four pictures taken by the author."—Booklist

Booklist 18:327 Je '22

"It is not a story that loses anything in the retelling. It would not be right to omit mention of his exceedingly interesting photographs of the penguins and seals under many conditions and his important study of their habits. Mr. Ponting's book must be considered to have a very important place in the literature of the Antarctic." D. L. M.

PONTING, H. G.:—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 26 '22 1200w
Cleveland p94 D '22

"It is a feat to write a large book of more than three hundred pages, even about such an exciting event as an expedition to the South Pole, and to keep every page of it free from dullness." E. L. P.

+ Ind 108:418 Ap 29 '22 260w

"It is a charming book and its many beautiful illustrations attest to the skill of the artist-author. The tragic and inspiring story of that brave little band of gentlemen adventurers of the Scott expedition, who risked and lost their lives for the advancement of science, is told with power, and feeling. No one can read it without being moved. The book is enlivened throughout by humorous and vivid descriptions of Antarctic bird and animal life, entertaining to young and old alike." Harold Noice

+ Lit R p758 Je 24 '22 100w

"The author is very skilful, even if not a very imaginative, photographer. As writing, however, it is totally without distinction and it does not present very much material which will not be ancient history." Raymond Holden

+ New Repub 30:351 My 17 '22 340w

"He has given us a fascinating narrative of fortitude and achievement and a mass of information about the Antarctic that is otherwise unobtainable outside the covers of huge and formidably scientific volumes. He writes lucidly and directly in an informal, chatty vein, and his subject is one that stands in no need of stylistic embellishment. The net result is one of the most entertaining and instructive of books." B. R. Redman

+ N Y Times p14 J1 9 '22 2150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:299 Je '22

Pratt p29 autumn '22

PONTING, HERBERT GEORGE. In lotus-land: Japan. 306p il $6 Dutton

915.2 Japan—Description and travel

22-27482

New edition of a book first published twelve years ago. (Book Review Digest, 1910) It is a volume of travellers' impressions, chiefly of manners, customs and scenery, with many and beautiful illustrations. Both text and illustrations have been revised.

"Just to look at the book's illustrations would inspire as well as charm. And when the text which they so marvellously supplement has the brilliancy and revelation of this record of leisurely wanderings through 'the loveliest of the world's lotus-lands,' the result is a volume to be owned with rejoicing, if possible. To be read and remembered, if that happy ownership be denied." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 2 '22 600w

"An excellent book for a gift. This is clear and effective writing, inasmuch as there is no straining for effect."

+ Ind 109:247 O 28 '22 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:274 N 11 '22 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 110:61 Ja 20 '23 150w

Lit R p252 N 25 '22 60w

New Statesman 20:supviii D 2 '22 100w

"The book is sweetly tolerant and condescending. The author plays cricket from cover to cover. Never once does he use a crude if effective baseball bat." Achmed Abdullah

+ N Y Tribune p8 N 12 '22 850w

"The lure of the pictures and of the well-balanced text would win over even a Japanophobe to a liking for the wonderful islands and their remarkable people. The color plates are especially dainty."

+ Outlook 132:331 N 1 '22 60w

Reviewed by W. E. G. Fisher

Sat R 134:795 N 25 '22 120w

"Mr. Ponting's style is undistinguished and he often indulges in the rhapsody of the guide-book; but he has seen so much of Japan and is so awake to its beauties that we are more than willing to tolerate his literary shortcomings for the sake of the wonderful and delightful things which he describes. Notable among his experiences is a thrilling ascent of the sacred mountain, Fuji. The wonderful pictures of Fuji from every variety of view-point in themselves make the book a delightful possession."

+ Spec 129:sup802 D 2 '22 200w

POOLE, ERNEST. Millions. 279p $1.75 Macmillan

22-18298

Gordon Cable, a bachelor supposed to be worth millions, lies at the point of death. His sister Madge is summoned to his side. Other relatives, on the trail of his millions, arrive uninvited. While he lies unconscious, they dream of the possibilities of inheritance and soar into new existences. The barriers are let down, their naked souls and their longings are revealed. The tenseness of the situation is heightened by the daily calls of an actress who claims her right to be by Gordon's bedside and whose name is constantly on his lips in delirium. The relatives all resent her presence, but Madge struggles to be fair to her and Gordon, while the others give way to their prejudices and self interest. The sick man recovers, his wealth proves to be extremely uncertain, the relatives abdicate. Their dreams had come and gone, but Madge at least had caught a vision of something bigger than she had known before.

Booklist 19:88 D '22

"Altogether a very interesting psychological study, well constructed, and well written." J. V. A. Weaver

+ Bookm 56:492 D '22 250w

Cleveland p84 N '22

"Mr. Poole seemingly allowed himself to become so absorbed in underlining his theme that he neglected to make his people quite credible; he has plastered his ideas about so freely that they have lost the power of self-fulfilment, and consequently display a dwindling vitality. As a narrative, it is swiftly projected and shrewdly edged with satire, but a greater degree of artistic restraint would have moved it several notches higher in the scale of excellence."

+ Dial 73:680 D '22 90w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:350 D 9 '22 420w

"'Millions' is not as great a novel as 'The Harbor,' but it is an excellent piece of workmanship on a smaller scale, and every character in it is as true and natural as your own family at the breakfast table."

+ Int Bk R p58 Ja '23 420w

"If the tale is a parable, it is a parable excellently conceived and told."

+ Lit R p340 D 23 '22 400w

"It is a good theme, but here, as in his other books, Mr. Poole falls short because of a certain inadequacy in his spiritual vision. He is too little robust to achieve beauty and too 'nice' to be strong." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 115:504 N 8 '22 240w

"Mr. Poole has done nothing better—and nothing that promises better."

+ New Repub 32:202 O 18 '22 120w

"Mr. Poole is neither ironist nor cynic; the qualities of moral earnestness and of sentimentality are not long absent from his work. And it is these qualities, weighing slightly upon the fine balance of his theme, that relax his art in its development. There is, however, a highly creditable art to be noted in this novel. The progressive revelation of character through incident is accomplished with deftness and precision; the interest is finely sustained." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p14 S 24 '22 820w

N Y Tribune p9 O 22 '22 400w

"Its very simplicity is its strength. The theme interests one singularly. The book has reality and tensivity." R. D. Townsend
+ Outlook 132:253 O 11 '22 270w

"Just to follow the simple, direct and telling sentences is a pleasure. One will read far without coming upon a more effective narrational style. Add to this that the significance of each incident and situation becomes promptly evident through this objective recounting, and you have abundant explanation of the satisfaction that the book affords."

+ Spring'd Republican p6a D 3 '22 250w
Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

POOR, CHARLES LANE. Gravitation versus relativity. 277p il $2.50 Putnam

531.51 Gravitation. Einstein theory. Astronomy 22-22694

"A non-technical explanation of the fundamental principles of gravitational astronomy and a critical examination of the astronomical evidence cited as proof of the generalized theory of relativity." (Subtitle) The work is intended for the general reader as well as for the scientist working in lines other than astronomy. The author is far from accepting relativity as an established scientific fact, maintaining that no substantial experimental proofs of the theory have yet been submitted by any of its adherents. The book contains a preliminary essay upon the fundamental concepts of time and space by Thomas Chrowder Chamberlin. Diagrams, appendices and index.

Boston Transcript p1 D 16 '22 1150w

"Professor Poor's book can be heartily recommended to those who, baffled by the indefiniteness of most writers on the subject, have been unable to comprehend such matters as the motion of the perihelion of Mercury. His diagrams and text are clear and readily followed. The book is well printed in type that will not tire the eyes." Alexander McAdie

+ N Y Times p10 D 31 '22 1500w

"The book is helpful as a popularization of Einstein rather than as a critique of him." Clement Wood

N Y Tribune p30 Ja 28 '23 800w

POPOVIC, PAVLE, ed. Jugo-Slav stories. (Interpreters' ser.) 258p $1.90 Duffield 22-270

"Nine short stories from the modern authors of Yugoslavia, selected, translated and introduced by Professor Popovic of the University of Belgrade. The tales represent seven authors, all of whom belong within the last fifty years, several of them having died but recently. They offer a great variety of theme and style, but all of them are so steeped in local color of scene, character and incident that to read them is like plunging into another and wholly different kind of life."—N Y Times

Booklist 18:240 Ap '22
Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"All told, the book introduces a real new field of literature and leaves us hoping that Pavle Popovic will lead us to the younger writers later."

+ Lit R p371 Ja 21 '22 200w

"The best stories in the collection are those by Lazar Lazarevich, 'The First Matins with My Father' and 'By the Well,' stories notable for the clarity and simplicity and effectiveness of the style, for their characterization and the extraordinary vividness with which they are depicted. They have in a high degree the quality which, by the way, characterizes nearly all the tales of the collection, of freshness and spontaneity, as if the story had come pouring by its own initiative and impetus out of the writer's mind."

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 15 '22 450w

Outlook 130:71 Ja 11 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:150 Ap '22

PORRITT, EDWARD. Fiscal and diplomatic freedom of the British overseas dominions; ed. by David Kinley. (Carnegie endowment for international peace. Division of economics and history. Publications) 492p $4 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]

336.42 Finance—Great Britain. Great Britain —Commercial policy 22-16004

"The author is well known in the field of Canadian history. The theme of the book is the achievement of fiscal independence by the self-governing Dominions and the recognition of their right to make their own commercial treaties. It is a very substantial book. There are over 400 large pages of text, with innumerable notes, and some seventy more pages of bibliography and valuable appendices, including documents to illustrate and fortify the text. There is a good index. The scope of the book covers all the self-governing Dominions; but as a matter of fact, its pages are devoted, to an overbalancing extent, to Canada, and the editor's preface refers almost exclusively to Canada."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Am Econ R 12:632 D '22 140w

"The volume, as a whole, affords abundant evidence of patient and voluminous research in official records. . . . Notwithstanding the defective organization of the materials assembled and the endless repetitions of the same details and assertions, which render a perusal of the volume somewhat tiresome, much valuable material is here brought together and sources of information indicated which will be of undoubted assistance to students following up the subject in independent studies."

+ Am Hist R 28:314 Ja '23 750w

"It can hardly be called either a new or a readable contribution to historical research, but it is a mine of industrious information, and, had it been even moderately well indexed, it would have proved useful as a work of reference." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Canadian Hist R 3:367 D '22 2300w

"This work is written clearly and well, in the objective manner, and is very completely documented. It is evidently the result of a thorough collation and assimilation of immense masses of material."

+ Sat R 134:354 S 2 '22 400w

"The late Mr. Porritt was not an inspiring writer but he knew how to collect and arrange facts."

+ Spec 128:792 Je 24 '22 110w

"A very careful, elaborate documented history"

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Je 8 '22 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p404 Je 22 '22 1450w

PORTE, JOHN F. Edward MacDowell; a great American tone poet; his life and music. 180p $3.50 Dutton [7s 6d K. Paul]

B or 92 MacDowell, Edward Alexander 22-26883

A thirteen-page biographical sketch, followed by a brief estimate of MacDowell as man and composer, and an account of the MacDowell colony, is introductory to the main portion of the volume, which is devoted to analytical and descriptive notes on the composer's works considered in order, by opus number.

Booklist 19:44 N '22

"An impartial, discriminating, and sober book about MacDowell and his place in our music, is much to be desired and might be of valuable service to our art. Mr. Porte, unfortunately, has not written such a book." D. G. Mason

— Freeman 6:237 N 15 '22 600w

"Mr. Porte's 'Edward MacDowell' does not seem to add a contribution of marked importance to existing MacDowell literature, but his descriptive notes may be accepted as guides to

PORTE, JOHN F.—Continued
the understanding of many of MacDowell's obscure and less-known pieces." F. H. Martens
— + Nation 115:554 N 22 '22 400w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:597 D '22
Pratt p34 winter '23
St Louis 20:303 D '22

PORTER, GENE (STRATTON) (MRS CHARLES DARWIN PORTER). Fire bird. 71p il $1.75
Doubleday

$11 22-10268

A long narrative poem of an Indian woman tortured by her conscience for her sin against another woman. She comes to a medicine man to confess her sin and beseech him to ease her soul of its burden and heal her sick spirit.

Booklist 18:357 J1 '22

"In spite of 'The Fire Bird' and her publishers, she is not a poet. It remains but to be pointed out that her book contains an interesting Indian legend which rises to its climax in excellent style but which does not possess a single line that may properly be offered as containing that divine substance which we call poetry. Color and movement are to be discerned compact with an admirable use of Indian properties. The stage is well set but the actors do not sing." H. S. Gorman

— + Bookm 56:96 S '22 400w
Cleveland p69 S '22

"It is both a vivid romance and a grim tragedy; excellently proportioned, compelling, convincing, and moving. The style is simple, at times almost to crudity, yet richly melodious and steeped in the atmosphere of plain and forest."
+ Lit R p62 MY 27 '22 100w

PORTER, HAROLD EVERETT (HOLWORTHY HALL, pseud.). Rope. 303p $1.75 Dodd

22-19906

Henry Devereux had never done a stroke of work in his twenty-five years, but had lived on his rich uncle, loafed around in clubs and played polo, and had finally capped the climax by going off and getting himself married. As a result his uncle's will stipulates that, within a year, Henry show himself capable of making a profit of ten thousand dollars out of a certain piece of property or lose his inheritance. With the aid of his plucky wife, Anna, Henry becomes a movie manager, circumvents the blue laws, introduces a number of clever advertising schemes and wins out against his puritanical and grasping Aunt Mirabelle and her rascally lawyer lover.

Booklist 19:124 Ja '23

"Smartly amiable, farcically plotted, there is the ginger so necessary to make the novel successful among those who never waver at the thought of reading a novel of the rising young business man."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '22 230w

"The novel is hardly in Mr. Hall's best vein. One feels that it is a short story in long trousers."

— Lit R p228 N 18 '22 110w

"A gay little comedy, with high lights of farce. The conversations are particularly well done, having just the off-handed touch that gives the effect of naturalness. There is frequent humor in them, and the situations are also provocative of mirth."

+ — N Y Times p24 O 22 '22 450w

"A light-weight story, but none the less amusing."

+ — Outlook 132:624 D 6 '22 60w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 180w
Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

PORTER, REBECCA NEWMAN. Rest Hollow mystery. 301p $1.75 Century

22-17726

Roger Kenwick, whose memory has been slightly affected as the result of service at the front, is the victim of a cleverly devised and cold-blooded scheme in connection with the perplexing murder at a beautiful old mansion in southern California. The keen observations of a noted psychologist, the cleverness of a spiritualistic medium and the faithful love of Marceta Morgan are factors strong enough to convince the jury that Kenwick is an innocent man, whose sanity is unquestionable.

"The book is full of 'whys,' doubtless an excellent condition for a mystery story, except that we honestly do not care whether we know why or not. We aren't sufficiently interested in any of the people, because the author is so afraid we shall get inside their souls and find out what's going on there. You would expect us to cry just as soon about the fates of Punch and Judy."

— Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '22 370w

"The character drawing is good enough throughout to make one think the author might do something a good deal better than this, with less mystery and more humanity in it. Her construction, however, is a little involved and the unfolding of the plot is jerky. But the story has more life in it than most of its type."

+ — Lit R p34 S 16 '22 250w

"A feature that deserves commendation is the care with which the author has dovetailed together the multitudinous details of her very intricate plot. The novel makes no claim to excellence in any of the finer elements of fiction such as the portrayal of character and the picturing of the realities of life, but it must be credited with being a carefully constructed, well-written and interesting tale of mysteries and strange happenings."

+ — N Y Times p22 S 17 '22 420w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 100w

PORTMAN, LIONEL. Three asses in Bolivia. 236p il $4 Houghton [15s G. Richards]

918.4 Bolivia—Description and travel

(Eng ed 22-26888)

The "three asses" of the title are three young Englishmen who explored some little known sections of Bolivia, the chief ass, as he styles himself, being the narrator of the experiences. Their object being to inspect and acquire ore-bearing properties, they travelled chiefly in the mountains and the ills and discomforts of travelling amid the primitive conditions they met in inns and hotels are described with un-failing humor. There is an interesting description of native methods of mining.

Booklist 19:49 N '22

"Remarkably entertaining throughout, the volume possesses an excellent sense of humor, surely under tests that might have made it vanish. It relates honestly what one may encounter. Mounting exasperation as the months passed made it hard to keep that humorous outlook, but he did well. Entertaining first, instructive next, these elements when combined, reveal a personality one would like to know and a country little known." R. D. W.

+ Boston Transcript p10 O 14 '22 980w

"One must laugh with him, in spite of one's desire to be sympathetic and courteous towards our neighbours of the Western Hemisphere. The book is really rather entertaining in the best manner of cheap entertainment." E. T. B.

+ Freeman 6:358 D 20 '22 170w

Ind 109:215 O 14 '22 100w

"Delightfully written, but Mr. Portman's experiences will not tempt anyone to go there except for the purpose of acquiring and developing Bolivian mining property."

+ — New Statesman 19:336 Je 24 '22 90w

"Mr. Portman is gifted with a fluency in writing, but the viper in his pen removes any chance for possible enjoyment of his best passages. It would seem that he appraised Bolivia and other South American countries through which he traveled by comparison with his own native England which he uses space to describe as the only country in the world."

+ — N Y Times p7 D 21 '22 600w

"A tediously humorous and generally uninteresting travel book." Kenneth Fuessle

— N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 330w

"He writes entertainingly of the discomforts and interesting features of a journey little known to English people, and his light-hearted humour will commend itself to all his readers. His account of Bolivia itself is bright and informing. Mr. Portman does not profess to deal largely in instruction; but his book should be of service to those Englishmen who still think of Bolivia as 'a comic-opera country where revolutions take place every day.'"

+ Sat R 134:145 JI 22 '22 480w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 8 '22 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Je 15 '22 1100w

POST, CHANDLER RATHFON. History of European and American sculpture from the early Christian period to the present day. 2v 604p il $15 (63s) Harvard univ. press
730 Sculpture 22-468

"A history of sculpture from early Christian, Byzantine, and Carolingian, through Romanesque, Gothic, and Renaissance, to the Baroque and Rococo, the neo-classic, and to more modern times. This Professor Post has done most successfully covering the principal countries of Europe and reaching to Scandinavia and even to Yugoslavia. In volume I he surveys the early Christian, Byzantine, Carolingian, Romanesque, Gothic, and Renaissance periods, leaving for volume II the Baroque and Rococo, the neo-classic and modern." —Lit R

Reviewed by N. H. Dole

Boston Transcript p6 F 15 '22 2100w

"Without question this is the most interesting history of European sculpture in any language. . . Likely to remain a standard book of reference for many years to come. Professor Post is keen in detecting important and historically significant monuments, seizing their general tendencies and relations, and expressing his conclusions in living, vibrant language." Allan Marquand

+ Lit R p598 Ap 22 '22 1200w

"He has with incredible research and unflagging courage built up the most monumental and valuable work on sculpture that America has produced, and every one of us who is interested in the aesthetic development of this land will be grateful to him for his scholarly contribution." Lorado Taft

+ Nation 114:371 Mr 29 '22 1100w

St Louis 20:124 Je '22

"The illustrations are profuse and excellently photographed."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 9 '22 50w

"This is one of those painstaking books to which American professors have accustomed us. Professor Post seems to see his subject a little distantly, though with an eager intelligence, seems to see it, so to speak, from across the Atlantic and like a very conscientious tourist who is determined to like nothing bad and to say nothing foolish. He has no distinction of style, and often uses more words than he needs for his sense; but he has written a useful and careful book, which perhaps deserves more praise than we have succeeded in giving it."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 13 '22 1100w

POST, MELVILLE DAVISSON. Mountain school-teacher. 197p $1.50 (6s) Appleton
22-16973

"The Mountain School Teacher,' presents a character that closely follows the biblical life of Christ from episode to episode. It is an allegory. But together with the allegory is to be found a reality that disturbs. All of the things which happen might happen so easily to any one, and it makes the reader a little dubious regarding the progress of humanity. The school teacher, who is the hero of these pages, is drawn in a quiet, almost reverential manner, and the various incidents that star his progress to that last minute when he loses his mortal life, being shot down as he stands between two thieves, are described in a distinguished and smoothly flowing prose that materially assists the solemnity demanded by the story."—N Y Times

"Not only is the conception exquisite, in its simple paralleling, but the language shows a growth, a purity which should give Mr. Post a title to fame. To Melville Davisson Post, after his various vicissitudes, tribute!" I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p6 O 4 '22 1100w

"In a certain measure this book belongs, at least in style, with such pastoral tragedies as Robert Nathan's 'Autumn' and Louis Hémon's 'Maria Chapdelaine.' It is not as fine a book as either of the two mentioned, but it suggests such potentialities in Mr. Post that a further effort in this line will be eagerly awaited from him. There is such a perceptible degree of authentic literary values contained in the book that most readers must revise their opinions of Mr. Post."

+ N Y Times p18 O 1 '22 450w

"It is a slender book, written with restraint and good taste." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 17 '22 120w

Springfld Republican p8 N 7 '22 270w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p650 O 12 '22 40w

Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

POUND, ARTHUR. Iron man in industry. 230p $1.75 Atlantic monthly

338.4 Machinery in industry. Industry. Labor and laboring classes 22-26318

The book is an outline of the social significance of automatic machinery which the author is pleased to call "the iron man." It traces the changes wrought in industrial conditions by the iron man, its leveling of wages, its work-neurosis and threatening racial deterioration, its new feudalism and slavery to corporations, its greater insecurity to the worker, its shortening of the working day with the possibility of the abuse of leisure. In short, it analyses all the pressing problems of this automatic age. Only tentative suggestions are made toward practical solutions and in the end the need of Divine assistance is pointed out.

"This is a book that challenges attention. It ought not to be read in a hurry, but thoughtfully. Nearly every page gives material for much deliberation. Yet, unlike most such books, the Iron Man is readable; the author has an easy, humorous style, and is especially gifted in the use of unusual figures of speech. . . Mr. Pound's thesis assumes to be universal. As a result the premise of universality of Iron Men upon which Mr Pound proceeds to reason leads to 'exaggeration.' Malcolm Keir

+ — Administration 4:617 N '22 900w

"This is a book that challenges attention. It ought not to be read in a hurry, but thoughtfully. Nearly every page gives material for much deliberation. Yet, unlike most such books, the 'Iron Man' is readable; the author has an easy humorous style, and is especially gifted in the use of unusual figures of speech. A wide audience may be predicted for it." Malcolm Keir

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf JI '22 680w

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '22 550w
Cleveland p55 Ag '22

Drug and Chem Markets p1124 My 17 '22 12 l.

Iron Age p1645 Je 8 '22 123col

"A most interesting book—one certain to be discussed with heat. Even the readers most inclined to question Mr. Pound's position must acknowledge that he has stated a problem of great moment with rare effectiveness." W. C. Mitchell

+ Lit R p788 JI 8 '22 1350w

Machinery p852 Je '22 14col

POUND, ARTHUR—Continued

"Sober and scholarly. . . Quarrel with him as we may in principle or in detail, we must admit that he has written an honest book, of extraordinary interest and suggestiveness." H: R. Mussey

+ Nation 114:689 Je 7 '22 920w

"Mr. Pound has written the earnest document of the new convert to old truths. His book enjoys the merits of a fresh zeal, a good style and a vigorous manner, while it adds little if anything to the scholarship on a difficult subject."

+ New Repub 31:142 Je 28 '22 260w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:477 N '22

Pratt p12 winter '23

R of Rs 66:447 O '22 80w

"This book is recommended to all social and welfare workers; and not only to them, but to any and all individuals who are trying to think clearly on the problems with which this industrial age must grapple. The book is refreshing in its entire lack of didacticism."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 14 '22 390w

Wis Lib Bul 18:179 Jl '22

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. Poems 1918-21; including three portraits and four cantos. 90p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

811

21-22337

"The massive isolation of Ezra Pound has probably not been surpassed by that of any other poet in any other generation, and seldom equalled. His poetry is equally separated from the understanding and appreciation of his generation. The Dadaists dislike his mental coherence, removed from the monotone of careless humour to which they bow, and the conservatives feebly attack him, a little frightened at his erudition and vicious sneer. His opaque isolation is one of carved metal standing apart from the thin transparencies of a contemporary world, and this position is sternly disclosed in his latest book of verse."—Dial

Reviewed by Maxwell Bodenheim

Dial 72:87 Ja '22 1850w

"Ezra Pound's new book of poems is as unsatisfactory as his previous ones. He still spends two-thirds of his time translating or quoting other poets, and a good deal of the rest of it imitating them and has not even yet, in his original work, really mastered his own style, which still remains patchy and uneven and acutely self-conscious." Edmund Wilson, jr.

— New Repub 30:232 Ap 19 '22 1400w

"Like all serious artists, he writes primarily to amuse and please himself, knowing far better than his non-admirers his real 'letters,' and bringing to them the homage of profound knowledge and creative imitation." R: Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p2 F 5 '22 2250w

POUND, ROSCOE. Spirit of the common law. (Dartmouth alumni lectureships on the Guernsey Center foundation) 224p $2.50 Jones, Marshall

347 Common law. Law—United States 21-21122

"The book is an analysis of the seven factors which 'have contributed to shape an American common law.' These are briefly: 'An original substratum of Germanic legal institutions and final ideas; the feudal law; Puritanism; the contests between the courts and the crown in the 17th century; 18th century political ideas; the conditions of the pioneer or agricultural communities in America in the first half of the 19th century; the philosophical ideas with respect to justice, law, and the state that prevailed in the formative period in which English common law was made over for us by American courts.'"—Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by T: R. Powell

Am Pol Sci R 16:326 My '22 360w

Booklist 18:176 Mr '22

"This book will be considered an historic development in the literature of the law. Written in the essay form, rather than in the textbook style, it is not a book which lawyers will cite in briefs or in argument, and yet its thought is so profound and its arguments are so clear that its influence will be quite as great as that of many leading cases." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 18 '22 1000w

"Professor Pound shows a mastery not only of the history and development of our legal thought, but also a keen, analytical mind that arrives at conclusions justified by the premises he sets forth. The volume is further evidence of the unquestioned leadership of Dean Pound in the field of law and legal philosophy."

+ Cath World 115:258 My '22 400w

Reviewed by Zechariah Chafee, Jr.

Dial 72:222 Ag '22 2850w

"These lectures should be read by all educated men, and particularly by all lawyers and judges." A. L. Corbin

+ Lit R p466 Mr 4 '22 1500w

Reviewed by M. R. Cohen

New Repub 33:sup5 N 29 '22 1850w

"No lawyer who pretends to be a community leader, no judge who is sympathetic and even moderately conscious of the stupendous sociological progress of recent years, no legislator or administrator of any real purpose or responsibility—none of these should fail to read this book."

+ R of Rs 65:222 F '22 160w

"His book throws a new and interesting light upon the evolution of law in America."

Sat R 133:67 Ja 21 '22 700w

"The first adequate description and interpretation of the growth of our legal system in terms at once understandable to the layman and valuable to the student. Written with the real mastery of fact and a charm of style and diction that add keen delight to unflagging interest, 'The Spirit of the Common Law' is indeed a book 'a gentleman should be ashamed not to have read.' Here is a guide to lawyer and layman in charting the untracked future in the light of the true spirit of our legal tradition." Phillips Bradley

+ Springf'd Republican p9a F 26 '22 1300w

"By reason of the broad sweep of his observation, the emphasis upon the history of ideas as reflected in law and legal doctrine, and the beauty and simplicity of the literary form, the books will command the interested attention of lawyer and layman alike. . . Apart from their intrinsic merit as a major contribution to legal thought in America, these two volumes should do much to overcome the popular prejudice of the bar, and possibly of layman against 'jurists.'" E. M. Borchard

+ Yale R n 12:415 Ja '23 1500w

POWELL, EDWARD ALEXANDER. Asia at the crossroads. 369p il $3 Century

915 Eastern question (Far East). Japan. Korea. China. Philippine Islands 22-6186

The object of the book is to give as concise and simple an outline as possible, for the general reader, of the perplexing problems of the Far East. It aims to be an unbiased, up-to-date description of the political, economic and financial situation in Japan, Korea, China and the Philippine Islands. The appendices give the findings and recommendations of Leonard Wood and W. Cameron Forbes with respect to the Philippines and the text of the two treaties regarding China, approved at the Washington conference. There are maps and illustrations.

"An excellent book for one who wishes to get an elementary idea of social and political conditions in the Far East. The problems of China and Japan are discussed clearly and impartially, but when it comes to the Philippines, the author turns advocate and pleads for the non-independence of the islands."

Am Pol Sci R 16:522 Ag '22 80w

"An open minded and illuminating discussion. Mr. Powell is without bias, but he presents the problems of the Orient in a light that is not always favorable to the white man; the volume on the whole represents a clear sighted and effective plea for that tolerance and that mutual sympathetic understanding which is the sine qua non of harmony between east and west."

+ Bookm 55:430 Je '22 90w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '22 300w

"There is no tedious description and no more history than is essential to the background. Packed with facts and scattered through with anecdote, his work is a vivid panorama of the polyglot peoples and conflicting tendencies that make up the conundrum of the Pacific. Mr. Powell has a persuasive trick of style that raises mooted questions out of the controversial; he uses the scalpel liberally and the kalsomine brush not at all. His volume is an altogether competent and readable contribution to a vital subject." C. G. Thomson

+ Lit R p885 Ag 19 '22 650w

New Statesman 19:664 S 23 '22 420w

Reviewed by T. Q. Beesley

N Y Times p11 Ap 30 '22 1400w

"On the whole, there is in this book uncommonly little that savors of propaganda, sentiment, or political theorizing. It is generally satisfactory and convincing."

No Am 215:855 Je '22 900w

"The author is extremely well informed, he writes in a dispassionate way on matters that are often dealt with in a spirit of partisanship, and his style is remarkably readable."

+ Outlook 130:606 Ap 12 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:301 Je '22

Pratt p29 autumn '22

"His book is not to be confused with the prolific 'travel' literature which has recently included Asia within its scope. What Major Powell has sought to do is to discuss Far Eastern politics in a simple, often informal way, and to interpret for the benefit of American readers those problems that are now to the front in the countries that he attempts to describe."

R of Rs 65:556 My '22 130w

St Louis 20:223 S '22

"Many of his statements are inaccurate, whilst others are self-contradictory, and he displays a remarkable ignorance of recent Chinese history."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 10 '22 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

Reviewed by F. W. Williams

Yale R n s 12:202 O '22 50w

POWELL, JOHN UNDERSHILL, and BARBER, E. A., eds. New chapters in the history of Greek literature; recent discoveries in Greek poetry and prose of the fourth and following centuries B.C. 166p $4.75 Oxford [10s 6d Milford]

880.9 Greek literature—History 22-11890

"The purpose of this volume is to give some account of recent discoveries in Greek poetry and prose of the fourth and following centuries B.C." It is divided into seven sections, the 'Moralists,' 'Lyric Poetry,' 'Comedy,' 'Elegiac and Epic Writers,' 'the Mime,' 'History and Biography,' and 'Oratory'; and the different topics are dealt with by a group of eleven scholars. The volume is a convenient summary of what recent scholarship has achieved in this new field."—Class Philol

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '22 550w

"Quite apart from the discussions of the newly discovered fragments, which are ably and carefully written, the book is useful for the bibliographical material which it contains." W. D. Woodhead

+ Class Philol 17:370 O '22 450w

"Their work is unfortunately not quite complete. There is no mention of the new fragments of Greek tragedy. Nothing is said of the new poems of Pindar. The new fragments of Sappho are ignored. The beautiful epinician odes of Bacchylides, perhaps the greatest find of all, are neglected. The treatment is sometimes a little too technical for the Greekless reader, and a little too amateurish for the professional scholar. But meanwhile these detached chapters by competent specialists are very welcome." Paul Shorey

-- + Lit R p289 D 9 '22 2150w

New Statesman 18:428 Ja 11 '22 350w

"The book must find a place in the library of every scholar."

+ Sat R 133:14 Ja 7 '22 700w

"It is the work of some ten different scholars, each having a special interest in the subject of which he treats, and it forms a valuable introduction to the study of the new texts themselves."

+ Spec 127:892 D 31 '21 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 26 '22 1100w

POWELL, RICHARD STILLMAN, pseud. See Barbour, R. H.

PRATT, ALICE DAY. Homesteader's portfolio. 181p il $2 Macmillan

630 Farm life. Agriculture 22-20726

A spinster, after fifteen years of teaching, determined to take the reins out of the hands of fate and become a creative farmer instead of a humdrum teacher. Without money to buy a farm she took up a homestead in Oregon making her beginnings in a tent with a hundred incubated white leghorn chicks. She tells of her ten years' experience in building a home in the wilderness, in acquiring her little group of farm animals, of her joys and discouragements and of her relations with the old settlers.

Booklist 19:112 Ja '23

PREBBLE, WILLIAM. House decorations and repairs. (Pitman's technical primers.) 114p il 85c Pitman

690 House painting. Plumbing 22-13625

The book is based on thirty years' practical experience in the many operations of maintenance and repair in dwelling houses. It is designed for the use of apprentices, amateurs and the more or less experienced "handy man." Contents: Distemper and papering; Plastering; Painting and enamelling; Staining and varnishing; Color washing and washable distempers; Plumbing and water supply; Kitcheners and hot water supply; Glazing, roofing and gullies; Miscellaneous; Index.

PRESCOTT, FREDERICK CLARKE. Poetic mind. 308p $2 Macmillan

808.1 Poetry. Imagination 22-5394

In his inquiry into the working of the poet's mind, the author calls in the aid of modern psychology. He finds that there is no essential difference between the mental organization of the poet and the ordinary man; that even the man in the street may have flashes of inspiration; that the difference is rather a quantitative one between two mental operations, ordinary thinking and dreaming—reasoning and associative thought. Vision and imagination are analysed and the part played in poetry by the unconscious, by the desires and emotions is demonstrated from the lives and works of the poets themselves—most trustworthy of psychologists. Citations from all the great poets are made extensive use of thruout the book and the psychologic uses of poetry, both to the poet himself and to mankind, are set forth in the last two chapters. There is an index of authors and an index of subjects.

Booklist 18:324 Je '22

"This is a volume that I do not recommend to poets. It would tend to make them conscious. It might even tend to make them seek mad."

PRESCOTT, FREDERICK CLARKE—Cont.
ness; for the greatest inspiration comes to those poets tinged with the greatest madness. An absorbing study, this analysis of genius! Prescott's work opens many new lines of thought." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:415 Je '22 420w

"The Poetic Mind is an honest and patient effort to explore the operations of the creative brain, but its premises are false. Works of this character help to spread the popular contagion which makes the artist a curious and distinct species." T. J. Craven

— Dial 73:103 Jl '22 1100w

"Professor Prescott's great failing is his timidity. He will not drive home his lesson. He is a follower of Freud and is apparently ashamed of the fact. He expressly ignores the most essential doctrines of psycho-analysis while pretending to embrace them." Albert Mordell

— Freeman 5:548 Ag 16 '22 1000w

"Mr. Prescott has not explained poetry, but he has written a book which poets and critics will want to read. He is a real investigator. He has had the energy and the imagination to approach his subject broadly and deeply, to attack it somewhere near its foundations, [but] Mr. Prescott does not explain it to me. With all the will in the world, I cannot find that he has made an intelligible connection between the poetic mind on one side of the field and the poetic product on the other." Mark Van Doren

+ — Lit R p700 Je 3 '22 1200w

"An interesting book. Its value is negative rather than positive; that is to say, it does more towards stating a problem than solving it, and perhaps more towards suggesting how the problem ought not to be stated than towards actually stating it. That sounds like saying it is a bad book. But the subject-matter of Professor Prescott's inquiry is so vague and volatile that any conscientious attempt to define it is an advance." J. M. Murry

+ — Nation and Ath 31:768 S 9 '22 1450w

"Notwithstanding the defects, is fresh and original and distinctly stimulating to thought."

+ Nature 110:444 S 30 '22 280w

"An extraordinarily confused book which contains a few admirable pages and a great deal of rubbish. It is really a glorified Ph. D. thesis; an enormous accumulation of quotations—poetic, critical, psychological, and religious,—which the author makes a heroic but wholly unsuccessful attempt to fuse into unity." Conrad Aiken

— New Repub 31:222 Jl 19 '22 3000w

New Statesman 20:84 O 21 '22 750w

Reviewed by Llewelyn Jones

N Y Tribune p4 Jl 16 '22 1150w

"Here is no mere classification of literary effects, or eloquent avowal of faiths and preferences, but an attempt at fundamental analysis. It is the signal merit of Professor Prescott's book that it presents this question of inspiration as the central problem and attacks it boldly. The simple truth, as Professor Prescott sees it, is that poetry is largely a result either of inspiration or of a more or less successful effort to imitate the ways of inspiration."

+ No Am 215:855 Je '22 1000w

Outlook 133:276 F 7 '23 200w

St Louis 20:247 O '22

"Even were Mr. Prescott's thesis less definite and interesting than it is, the book would be well worth reading for the innumerable fascinating bypaths of thought down which it points the way."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 16 '22 1250w

"The laborious analysis of the process of poetic creation which he formulates does little more than put into diffuse academic language a theory which gives little that is new to any thinking student of poetry."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Je 15 '22 140w

PRICE, EDITH BALLINGER. Fortune of the Indies. 255p il $1.75 Century

22-17388

"With the 'Fortune of the Indies' went the fortunes of the Ingrams" was an old saying in Resthaven. The only Ingrams left were Aunts

Lucia and Jane and their three orphaned charges, Mark, Alan and Jane, and they were very poor. "The Fortune of the Indies," that marvelous clipper ship, had been sunk in the China seas many years before and even the model of it had disappeared. But Jane finally located the model and in it a letter of a great fortune due the Ingrams, which after many mishaps was at last brought back to the little New England town. A mystery story for girls and boys from ten to fourteen.

Booklist 19:92 D '22

"If you love romance, real romance, of the old East India trade and the old modern East, and love also children and the high call of young blood, sail away with us, as swiftly as may be, in 'The Fortune of the Indies.'" I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '22 880w

Cleveland p82 N '22

"Uncommonly well done."

+ Lit R p208 N 11 '22 40w

Wis Lib Bul 18:276 D '22

PRINGLE, MRS ELIZABETH WATRIS (ALL-STON) (PATIENCE PENNINGTON, pseud.) Chronicles of Chicora Wood. 366p il $3 Scribner

917.57 South Carolina—Social life and customs. Plantation life 22-11299

The author of the "Woman rice planter" writes these recollections of the old South and of plantation life in South Carolina. Her father, who owned a number of plantations and many slaves, was a scientific rice planter whose plantations were models of organization and management. Both her father and her mother were among those who felt the responsibility of owning human beings and who devoted themselves to their training and well-being. The chronicles tell of the author's mother coming as a young woman to her husband's plantations, which were so big that neighbors were few and far away, and of the wisdom and self control she had to learn in her dealings with her black helpers. The life of the luxurious days before the war is clearly shown, the privations and suffering of war time, which for these people included the experience of Sherman's raid, and the difficulties of readjustment.

Booklist 18:361 Jl '22

"Chronicles like these of Mrs. Pringle have literary charm even aside from the interest of the story they tell. It is in the last two sections of the Chronicles—'War Times' and 'Readjustment,' that the courage and endurance underlying the pleasure-loving characteristics of the delicately bred women of the South under stress of conditions spared us of the North, stand most fully confessed. These 'war-time' memories are poignantly revealing—and restrained." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '22 650w

Cleveland p88 N '22

"Mrs. Pringle writes with great spirit and with grace, and her pages carry conviction."

+ Lit R p744 Je 17 '22 210w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:516 N '22

R of Rs 66:110 Jl '22 40w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 10 '22 400w

PROCTER, ARTHUR W. Principles of public personnel administration. (Institute for government research) 244p $3 Appleton

351.1 Civil service reform. Government employees. Employment management 22-940

The discussion is limited to employment as it is, or should be, carried on by civil service commissions in the national government and in the various state, city and other local governments. The topics considered are the need of a public employment program, the selection, functions and organization of a civil service commission, standardization and the conduct of a standardization inquiry, examinations, trade and intelligence tests, rating of efficiency, advancement and promotion, and employees' representation. Appendices give (1) civil service commissions in the United States classified according to legal conditions of control, (2) standard civil service laws for states and cities drafted by the National civil service reform league, and (3) a bibliographic note.

Wis Lib Bul 18:154 Je '22

PRODERS, C. H. Adventures in Bolivia. 232p il $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

918.4 Bolivia—Description and travel
(Eng ed 22-22281)

The book has an introduction by R. B. Cunningham Graham consisting of an epitome of the author's adventures. The author received a perilous commission from the Challana and Tongo Rubber company to find out the conditions on which the Indians of Challana would tap rubber for them. The tribe was hostile and no white man had entered their capital, Paroma, and returned safely since 1845. The author tells in great detail of his expedition and the successful accomplishment of his mission. The illustrations are from photographs and sketches in color by the author.

"The volume is really a diary, including what he paid for everything. It is, however, of a great fascination, for it breathes of far horizons, and danger lightly run. Best of all, it is the truth which is stranger than fiction."

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 29 '22 290w

"Were the story not so real throughout, it would find a welcome place in the fiction of adventure. No one could read it without feeling its fascination. It might be questioned whether the writer has added much to the sum of knowledge about Bolivia."

+ N Y Times p7 D 24 '22 650w

"The book is attractive for its simple frankness throughout. Occasional passages bubble with unconscious humor and practical but droll comment and suggestions. In addition to a score of photographs are a half dozen naive and attractive color sketches by the author." Kenneth Fuessele

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 240w

"Without any exception the most enthralling travel book which has come my way during the last ten years." Douglas Goldring

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 26 '22 500w

Outlook 132:254 O 11 '22 90w

"We have read Mr. Proders's account of his journey to Paroma with all the greater interest because of the plain, blunt fashion of the narration. The reproductions of the author's coloured sketches, which Mr. Graham calls neo-Japanese, have a quaint, childish or mediaeval charm."

Sat R 134:482 S 30 '22 190w

Spec 129:sup676 N 11 '22 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p608 S 28 '22 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

PROSPER, JOHN. Gold-Killer; a mystery of the new, underworld. 283p $1.75 Doran

22-7925

The blue-black marks on the neck of John Rice, killed in his box at the opera, show evidence that the much feared Gold-Killer is again at work. A succession of murders, all among people of wealth and all apparently committed by a person of brute force, disturb Wall Street greatly. This last cold-blooded deed and the sorrow of Anne Rice for her father make the young interne, Dr Tom Ware, resolve to find the murderer. He leaves no stone unturned, visits haunts of the underworld, gathers together clues through exciting experiences in which Anne sometimes shares. Their efforts are crowned with success and the identity of the murderer comes as a shock.

"Mr. Prosper has tried to give us something different, something that entertains, and as he has not harrowed our feelings and not made us sorry for anyone's death, we think he has succeeded." W. S. E.

+ Boston Transcript p8 My 20 '22 520w

"It moves eccentrically, often ineptly, and often with the suggestion of broad burlesque, but it does keep going. It would have been a much better story if the author had taken the pains to embody his excellent main idea in characters even faintly human and situations even remotely probable."

— Lit R p643 My 6 '22 180w

"There is a good idea back of Mr. Prosper's story, and many of its incidents and complications are ingenious and cleverly worked out. But unfortunately its characters are puppets, and not very well carved or painted puppets at that."

— + N Y Times p22 Ap 2 '22 370w

Springfield Republican p7a O 1 '22 210w

PROUST, MARCEL. Swann's way; tr. by C. K. Scott Moncrieff. 2v 303;288p $5 Holt [ea 7s 6d Chatto & W.]

Translation of the first instalment of M Proust's novel in five parts entitled "A la recherche du temps perdu." "Swann's Way" opens with the dreamy but, vivid thoughts floating through the mind of the narrator in the borderland between waking and sleeping and recalling the sequence of impressions of a childhood which practically all critics and reviewers have identified with the author's own, but which identity he denies. At the outset of this recital of childish memories a figure is flashed upon the consciousness of the reader so unobtrusively and yet so significantly that, although he plays a very subordinate rôle in the actual life of the child, the reader is prepared without question or surprise to accept him as the outstanding figure throughout the remaining two-thirds of the narrative. This figure is Swann, [and] it is through the mind of the child that we are to know him. With sympathetic subtlety Swann's love story is unfolded in the latter part of the first and most of the second volume."—N Y Times

Booklist 19:161 F '23

Boston Transcript p1 D 23 '22 1100w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p38 D '22 40w

"It is undoubtedly true that any reader desirous of plot or action will be bored to death with 'Swann's Way,' but those readers who take joy in following the immeasurable potentialities of the human mind will discover it to be an experiment of the utmost importance."

+ — Int Bk R p57 Ja '23 950w

"The quality of Mr. Scott Moncrieff's translation of 'Du Côté de chez Swann' is nothing less than amazing. Had it not been done, it would have seemed impossible. But it has been done; and now the average English reader has a smooth road open before him into one of the most important books of our time. No English reader will get more out of reading 'Du Côté de chez Swann' in French than he will out of reading 'Swann's Way' in English." J. M. Murry

+ Nation and Ath 32:124 O 21 '22 1350w

New Statesman 20:76 O 21 '22 880w

New Statesman 20:supxiv D 2 '22 30w

"To his natural gift of a vision as remarkable for breadth as for acuteness M. Proust has added the refinements of an extensive culture. The influence of Saint-Simon, Stendhal and Ruskin is evidenced in all his writings. But he is no mirror of literary immortals, no purveyor of other writers' ideas, he they critic, philosopher or author. He is a creator of great literature, a master of uncommon style, with a profound knowledge of the human heart and head." Joseph Collins

+ N Y Times p2 N 26 '22 2900w

"It is a picture of a society that is overcultured and neurotic, highly-strung and anemic, but interesting, human, amusing, civilized. If you have a leisured and comfortable method of reading, enjoying a book as you would sip wine, savoring and relishing its flavor, M. Proust's novels will reward your inspection." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p9 N 26 '22 1250w

PROUST, MARCEL—Continued

"The translation has a few obvious faults, but the English version as a whole is a piece of work to be proud of. If it is laborious in parts—often a little too literal quite to convey the flavour of the author—how difficult a task it was to translate the work of a writer who is all flavour, whose points are so fine, and whose fine points alone justify whole periods of our reading."

+ Spec 129:sup660 N 11 '22 3150w

"Very close to the original, it is yet written in fastidious English; indeed, it lacks some of that placid dullness which many devotees roll upon their tongues and declare to be the only true flavour for really cultivated palates. And here we think that the translator has made one mistake, if he wished to preserve the quality of the original. He has cut up some of the interminable French paragraphs, with speeches buried in their middles, which are so characteristic of M. Proust. This certainly gives an air of greater lightness and clarity to the text, but neither of these bourgeois virtues is a mark of this aristocratic author."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p596 S 21 '22 500w

PROUT, HENRY GOSLEE. Life of George Westinghouse. 375p il $2.50 Scribner

B or 92 Westinghouse, George, 1846-1914 22-138

Published under the auspices of the American society of mechanical engineers, this biography of George Westinghouse, 1846-1914, is devoted chiefly to his great electrical and manufacturing enterprises. So many and varied were these interests that the author, instead of writing his life as a continuous chronological narrative, treats each of his most important activities as a separate topic. We thus have a chapter on the air brake, with which his name is chiefly connected, on friction draft gear, the induction motor and meter, Niagara Falls power, electric traction, steam and gas engines, signaling and interlocking, and the electric lamp. There are chapters, too, on his European enterprises, his financial and administrative methods and his personality. The appendices give a list of his patents, the most important of these being chosen for brief comment.

Booklist 18:188 Mr '22

Boston Transcript p6 F 4 '22 900w

"Extremely appreciative and well-written biography." H: B. Fuller

+ Freeman 5:308 Je 7 '22 900w

Reviewed by A. W. Vernon

New Repub 32:179 O 11 '22 800w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:10 Mr '22

"Colonel Prout is no thick-and-thin eulogist and, therefore, his discreet record of what Westinghouse actually achieved is all the more impressive. Furthermore, the book is well written; its style is vivid and vivacious." Brander Matthews

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 26 '22 2600w

Outlook 130:434 Mr 15 '22 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:177 Ap '22

Pratt p34 autumn '22

"Lays emphasis on the scientific and business aspects of Westinghouse's career. These are told understandingly and interestingly but without pretension to literary style."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a F 12 '22 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p446 J1 6 '22 220w

PRYDE, ANTHONY, pseud. Clair de lune. 358p $2 Dodd

22-19907

"An old theme is brought to the fore again in Anthony Pryde's 'Clair de Lune.' It is the struggle between art and life. When Charles Evelyn, the musical genius, sensitive as all geniuses are, marries Kitty Dent, the friend of his youth, he does it rather as a duty than as the actual culmination of a love affair. His music alone is his love, and the book develops into a study of two types—the artist, whole-hearted in his devotion to the demon which sways his genius, and the woman, anxious for love and the attentions of her husband."—N Y Times

"Plot? There is not any, to speak of. Things happen, thrilling and otherwise. It is entirely submerged in the human portraiture. Yet 'Clair de Lune' is a volume one finds very hard to put down. It has atmosphere in which to lose one's self."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 25 '22 450w

"A not uninteresting but not very convincing story."

+ — Lit R p205 N 11 '22 190w

"The book is written in Anthony Pryde's usual felicitous style and, as usual with this author, is stretched out a bit beyond its due proportions. The author possesses a sound technique in the construction of that type of light fiction which for a moment deceives the reader into thinking that it is better than it really is."

+ — N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 170w

"Is dished up prettily and without being noticeably padded, is made to fill a fair-sized volume." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p8 O 22 '22 210w

Outlook 132:674 D 13 '22 60w

Springf'd Republican p5a D 10 '22 130w

"The domestic infelicity of a genius and his normal wife is a subject that has been perhaps ever-exploited in fiction; but in Clair De Lune the author divests it of its traditional associations and studies its possibilities, with exceptional discernment, at first hand."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p746 N 16 '22 550w

PRYDE, ANTHONY, pseud. Ordeal of honor. 338p $2 McBride

22-26241

The story is not unsimilar to the author's "Nightfall." Its English society setting is the same—the vicar's impecunious household, his lovable and unsophisticated daughter, her man-of-the-world lover, her devoted brothers, one of whom is endowed with a fanatical sense of honor—all these elements are similar. Dodo Carminow's lover, Charles Auburn, hated his father, and for good reasons. His feeling is known to his friends. When his father, whose heir Charles is, is mysteriously murdered, circumstantial evidence is overwhelmingly against the son, who is condemned to be hanged. His heroic bearing of his unmerited sentence, which was commuted to penal servitude for life, the unwavering loyalty of Dodo, and the unexpected dénouement which frees the prisoner and unites the lovers, make up a sufficiently dramatic tale.

"The plot throughout, although bearing all the hall marks of a sensation plot, is nothing whatever of the kind; gripping, if you will, but essentially unmelodramatic! The scene design is startlingly vivid, and the dialogue lives because both hero and heroine have a sense of humor. It is a brilliant piece of work, quite unique of its kind, and strongly recommended to those who want their pulse-beats quickened." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '22 950w
Cleveland p34 My '22

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
— Ind 108:332 Ap 1 '22 620w

"A good, readable novel, considerably above the average in ability, but in no way fulfilling the promise of the author's previous work. One hopes that it may be only an earlier story of Mr. Pryde's rewritten to take remunerative advantage of a reputation recently acquired."

+ — Lit R p493 Mr 11 '22 240w

Outlook 131:40 My 3 '22 10w

"The narrative commands the closest attention."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 17 '22 200w

PRYDE, ANTHONY. pseud., and WEEKES, ROSE KIRKPATRICK. Purple pearl. 276p $1.90 Dodd

22-4432

When Monte Carlo Mereworth died there was buried with him the secret of the hiding-place of the jewels into which he had converted all his available funds and which included the famous purple pearl. To each of his three sons he left a part of the clue to the place where the jewels were hidden in Mereworth Castle, but no one of the clues was any use without the other two and before they could be combined and the cryptogram worked out, one of them was stolen. The fifty-year feud which followed extended thru three generations and traces of it were still to be seen in strained relations among the four grandchildren of the Mereworth brothers, with whom this story is concerned. The final solution of the mystery involves the love stories of these four engaging young cousins and the complete healing of the old feud.

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

"Perhaps the war and villainous Germans have been a bit overdone, but in any event, the novel cannot for a moment compare with the latter's earlier published works. Indeed it falls under the classification of 'a thriller,' better conceived and better written than the most, but a thriller still."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 15 '22 150w

"Thin, but makes good, light reading."

+ Cleveland p28 Ap '22

N Y Times p11 Ap 2 '22 580w

Outlook 130:558 Ap 5 '22 50w

Spring'd Republican p12 Ap 26 '22 180w

"Unusually well written for a mystery story, with good characterization, and a charming love story."

+ Wis Lib Bul 18:104 Ap '22

PULVER, HARRY E. Materials of construction, prepared for the Extension division of the University of Wisconsin. (Engineering education ser.) 318p il $3 McGraw

691 Building materials 22-16172

"Elementary work dealing briefly with production and properties."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:564 D '22

PUNCH, LONDON. Lloyd George: cartoons; with an introd. by W. Algernon Locker. 194p $2 Stokes [5s Cassell]

741 Caricatures and cartoons. Lloyd George, David 22-26491

"David Lloyd George has been for sixteen years in the continuous service of Great Britain as a Crown Minister, a record that has not been approached by any other democratic statesman. Playing, as he has, a foremost part in all the modern problems of his country, Lloyd George has, naturally enough, been fair game for that British institution, Punch. Mr. Punch has caricatured the little Welsh Premier in all his various phases, with the result that a complete selection of the drawings would prove no less than a meticulously documented commentary on the Premier's career. And this is just what 'Lloyd George by Mr. Punch' affords, although the volume does not include every picture of Lloyd George that has appeared in the humorous weekly."—N Y Times

Booklist 18:361 J1 '22

"As a companion piece to a narrative chronicle of recent history it is a delightful book to possess, one whose graphic representation of events within the memory of the present generation cannot but freshly illuminate episodes which the stress of present perplexities so rapidly renders dim."

+ Lit R p658 My 13 '22 300w

"The best of the caricatures are included and they make up a book that is always amusing and often keen analysis. It portrays Lloyd George in all his quandaries, and, for the most part, with the kindest satire."

N Y Times p5 My 7 '22 1850w

St Louis 20:251 O '22

Spec 128:340 Mr 18 '22 300w

"A veritable biography in caricature of this world-famous character."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 My 6 '22 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Mr 16 '22 80w

PUNSHON, ERNEST ROBERTSON. Bittermeads mystery. 265p $2 Knopf

22-18857

In this sensational murder story both motive and murderer are shrouded in mystery. The action takes place at Bittermeads, in whose gloomy attic Robert Dunn finds the packing case with its gruesome contents. His discovery is the first clue in the long chain of mystery in the unraveling of which he turns housebreaker, detective, and captor of the beautiful girl whom for a while he is bound to believe an accomplice of the arch-villain.

"It is difficult to conceive how any detective-story lover, free to follow out his own will, could lay down this gruesomely fascinating tale until its happy ending is reached."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 23 '22 320w

Lit D p66 S 23 '22 650w

"For readers who like the sensational murder story this book will make a great appeal, but for those who enjoy solving a mystery it is bound to bring disappointment."

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 13 '22 200w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p5 Ag 13 '22 180w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 120w

Wis Lib Bul 18:218 O '22

PUTNAM, GEORGE GRANVILLE. Salem vessels and their voyages. 171p il $3.50 Essex inst. 382 United States—Commerce. Pepper. Sumatra. Salem, Massachusetts—History

Figuring prominently in the East India commerce after the Revolutionary war was the pepper trade between Salem and the island of Sumatra. The first American vessel to visit the northwest coast of Sumatra and to bring a consignment of pepper in bulk to this country was the property of Salem merchants, commanded by Salem shipmasters and manned by Salem men. Mr Putnam, who is an authority on Salem shipping, has gathered from old newspapers and other sources the story of the sagacity and heroism of the men of Salem and nearby towns in bringing their valuable cargoes to port. Much data concerning this lucrative trade is given, with anecdotes of thrilling adventures with the Malays. There are forty-two full-page illustrations, including merchants, shipmasters, vessels, facsimiles, etc. Index.

PUTNAM, MRS NINA (WILCOX) (MRS R. J. SANDERSON). Laughter limited. 341p $1.75 Doran

22-19047

"Bonnie McFadden is a New England girl, who goes to Hollywood to be starred in pictures, as she supposes with a real contract awaiting her. The truth that awaits her is a surprise—a jolt, but with true grit and the knowledge that it pays to smile, she takes a position as maid. Fortune comes her way and despite the prophesy that she would never 'arrive' if she persisted in her straight-laced notions, she succeeds because of her honesty, perseverance and ability."—Spring'd Republican

"It is an entertaining story, an amusing story, but we think far short of what Mrs. Putnam is capable of writing. There are times when she breaks through the mold, when she forgets the careful formula before her and endows her people with a vitality and an individuality which is outside the contract." D. L. M.

PUTNAM, MRS NINA—Continued

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '22 700w

"The quality of humor is strained into undeviating and interminable parade of argot masquerading as the new-born American language. In the case of at least one reader the laughter is limited by the torrential freshets of stale slang which Mrs. Putnam pours with an undiminished enthusiasm through three hundred and more pages of stock situations."

— Lit R p158 O 28 '22 350w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 29 '22 240w

PUTNAM, MRS NINA (WILCOX) (MRS R. J. SANDERSON). Tomorrow we diet. 90p $1 Doran

613.2 Diet. Corpulence 22-14990

After many unsuccessful experiments the author found a way to get thin and stay thin. Humorously, but mercilessly, she shows the way, and it is all a matter of diet. She clearly describes a course of diet which is guaranteed to bring the results desired.

Cleveland p76 S '22

"Quite possibly women will listen to a woman's advice when they wouldn't take that of a mere expert. Anyway, if the reader is heavy, learn and grow thin; if too slender, read and laugh and grow fat."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a J1 2 '22 250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:214 O '22

PYNE, ZOE KENDRICK. Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina; his life and times. 232p il $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

B or 92 Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da 22-13537

In this critical account of the life and times of a sixteenth century composer it is the object of the author to show that the unaccompanied polyphony of that time is a form of music so beautiful that it has never been surpassed and contains a regenerative force that is once more destined to bear fruit. Index to masses, appendix, and general index.

"Miss Pyne has made a fairly scholarly assemblage of the facts gathered. The picture of Pierluigi left by her is co-ordinated and reasonable. . . She has preferred a certain dryness to gratuitous melodrama. Indeed, because of restraint, Miss Pyne has the better succeeded in persuading us of the correctness of the picture as far as she has drawn it. . . And many bits of good criticisms are scattered through the texture of the book." Paul Rosenfeld

+ Dial 73:693 D '22 1300w

"Simply a rather conventional and perfunctory account of the facts of his life, with very little consideration of its significance." D. G. M.

— Freeman 6:526 F 7 '23 170w

"Miss Pyne has done her work well, and her book is the most complete statement of the facts of Palestrina's life that has yet appeared in English. Some analytical remarks on the music are also of value."

+ Sat R 134:258 Ag 12 '22 450w

"Miss Pyne has proved herself eminently fitted to the task of writing a life of the Homer of European Music."

+ Spec 128:688 Je 3 '22 1700w

"This book puts the ascertained facts of Palestrina's life with lucidity and supplements them with imagination. It embodies the most recent research and presents it for the first time in an English dress; but it would have been more valuable if documentary evidence had not been hurried over in order to reach the picturesque result. We could have wished for more definite references."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Ap 27 '22 300w

Q

Q., pseud. See Quiller-Couch, A. T:

QUENNELL, MARJORIE, and QUENNELL, CHARLES HENRY BOURNE. Everyday life in the old stone age. (Everyday life ser.) 201p il $2.50 Putnam [5s Batsford]

571 Man. Prehistoric. Stone age 22-10779

The book is designed to give a history of human life from paleolithic times to the close of the renaissance. The series is for young readers and is illustrated by the authors themselves, the illustrations forming an important part of the book since the authors modestly disclaim any great store of archeological knowledge, but supplement it with a list of authorities for further reading. Contents: The A B C of archaeology; The Strepyan, Chellean, and Acheulean men of the old stone age; The cave-dwellers; Artists of the old stone age; End of the old stone age; Index.

Booklist 18:352 J1 '22

"They have done surprisingly well, for the first book in the field. They succeed in making geology and archaeology intelligible to the average reader. It is rather unfortunate that they do not employ more reproductions of cave-men art rather than illustrations which embody their own conceptions. Original art is good, but for this volume aboriginal art would have been better."

+ — Lit R p875 Ag 12 '22 500w

Nation 115:23 J1 5 '22 40w

"This is a delightful book. It ought to be in every schoolroom; but the elders will want to borrow it and enjoy it in the evenings. The line drawings are masterpieces of well directed imagination." G. A. J. C.

+ Nature 110:443 S 30 '22 250w

New Statesman 20:supxx D 2 '22 50w

Reviewed by Spencer Brodney

N Y Times p29 D 24 '22 1500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:486 N '22

Pratt p16 autumn '22

St Louis 20:210 S '22

Springf'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 180w

"The authors, we fear, are rather out of their depth, and have to resort to didactic statement in place of the simple arrangement of evidence which gave their 'Everyday Life' series its high value."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p791 D 1 '21 260w

QUENNELL, MARJORIE, and QUENNELL, CHARLES HENRY BOURNE. History of everyday things in England. 208:208p $5 Scribner [6s Batsford]

914.2 England—Social life and customs. Costume. Architecture, Domestic—England

The object of the book is to give boys and girls of public school age an idea of the life and everyday surroundings of bygone England and to stimulate their interest in work for work's sake. The two parts of the book are in one volume representing respectively the periods from 1066-1499 and from 1500-1799. Each chapter is devoted to one century and is preceded by a chart giving dates, rulers, famous men, great events and principal buildings of the period. The subject matter concerns itself with general conditions, costumes, the exterior and interior structure of buildings, modes of warfare, arts and crafts, manners and customs, ornaments and amusements. The illustrations, by the authors, are both in black and white and in color and each part is supplied with index and glossary and a bibliography.

Booklist 19:95 D '22

"Among young people's books this handsome and profusely illustrated volume is almost unique. The writers have given just the right touch to their matter, and have produced a sketch of how our forefathers used to live which has charm and fascination."

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 30 '22 190w

QUICK, HERBERT. Vandemark's folly. 420p il $2 Bobbs

22-2739

"The story is autobiographical in its method. For several years the hero is employed on a boat on the Erie Canal; then he sets off on a pathetic search for his mother, only in the end to come across her newly made grave. The quest for his parent leads him ultimately to Iowa, where he finds himself intrusted by chance with the girl whom ultimately he marries; but, after winning her love without realizing it, he dallies for several years before proposing, and in the meanwhile establishes himself on an Iowa farm, where he becomes a conspicuous local character, execrated for his good deeds and excused for his bad ones."—

Lit R

Booklist 18:240 Ap '22

"In a sense, 'Vandemark's Folly' is old-fashioned. It reminded me, somehow, of a Dumas transplanted to Iowa. Exciting at moments, filled with obvious faults of narration, it yet has a quality of the soil that is unmistakable. Occasionally, as in the story of the wedding of the plow and the sod, Mr. Quick writes poetry. He might have been a Hansun; but as yet he is only a blundering Hansun. Jake Vandemark, however, is a character worth remembering." J. F.

+ — Bookm 55:64 Mr '22 400w

"We have long awaited the great American novel, and we shall probably await it forever. But if we have been looking for the novel that represents American greatness, the novel that has its roots in the making of America and in American history, we shall find it in 'Vandemark's Folly.' There have been others of its kind, and Mr. Quick's novel takes a high place among them." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 15 '22 750w

"Mr. Quick turns from the fashioning of rapid romances, skilful and swift-moving and evanescent, and proves himself qualified for a more serious work by one of the best pictures of that period which American fiction affords. The novel is well-constructed, picturesque in detail, and intelligently related to the era with which it is concerned."

+ Dial 73:353 S '22 100w

"It is not only epic in quality, but contrasted with most of the fiction of the day, it is tonic as well."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Mr 19 '22 1550w

"None of our brisk young literary fireworkers could conceivably have written it. It has the mellowed and tempered quality of which youth, with all its ardor and all its cleverness, has never been able to counterfeit. And it has ease, poise, consistency. Within its romantic boundaries it moves secure." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 108:354 Ap 8 '22 420w

"It is difficult to convey the fascination with which Mr. Quick has invested this long, slow progression toward a home and an ideal. Jacob's adventures are never striking, there is nothing of the impossible. But they are convincing and they give an extraordinary sense of actuality to the book."

+ Lit D p63 My 13 '22 900w

Lit R p445 F 25 '22 160w

"Although valuable as a record of an eventful epoch in American pioneering, the novel is chiefly noteworthy as a human document. It has the glow of life and the throb of genuine feeling; the characters are authentic human beings, laughable in their absurdities, pathetic in their misfortunes; the central figure is depicted with rare vividness." S. A. Coblenz

+ Lit R p447 F 25 '22 750w

"There is a solid body of research back of the story, it is very clear, supporting the details of the journey and the settlement. Certain of the minor characters, who do not have to be romantic, are racy and notable. The style is free and charming and the general atmosphere open and frank. But to see wherein it falls short of some of the greatness with which it is credited, one has only to think of any of the better Icelandic sagas. They, unlike 'Vandemark's Folly' with its romantic conventions, keep their eyes forever on the immediate facts of life as their writers understood them. They know how to represent heroic deeds by letting the deeds speak for themselves without the help of any chorus or sentimental overtones." Carl Van Doren

+ — Nation 114:318 Mr 15 '22 410w

"The author has not written the great American novel, nor has he attempted it. His honest unpretentious love story of the Dutch lad is only the pointer with which he captures our attention to show us the beloved prairie, with its rolling hills, its tiny flowers in the grass, its placid shallow rivers fringed with cotton-wood and willow. A well-turned tale, done with workman-like skill." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 31:82 Je 14 '22 720w

"It is a story filled with exciting adventures, living characters, and presented with consummate skill. It is a good story well told. Mr. Quick has caught a rapidly changing phase of American civilization and has made an imperishable record of it. Every chapter of his novel is full of abounding, tumultuous American life; full of real men and real women." W. L. Phelps

+ N Y Times p5 F 19 '22 1750w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:198 My '22

Pratt p36 Ap '22

"The story is rich in incident, for it was a period of history-making. The story is excellently written, and those unfamiliar with the experiences and hardships of our forebears will find this volume not only a delightful romance and adventure tale, but vivid history as well."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Ap 9 '22 320w

"The rambling, slipshod style with its naïve attempts at fine writing, the continual references to people and affairs of which we have no cognizance, the loose episodic structure of the story, are exactly what one expects from the slow-witted, inarticulate Dutch farmer, Jacob Vandemark who sets out to write the history of the township of which he was the first settler and ends by telling his own. There are some attractive descriptions, and many forcible touches of dry humour and quiet pathos."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p729 N 9 '22 170w

Wis Lib Bul 18:74 Mr '22

QUICK, OLIVER CHASE. Liberalism, modernism and tradition. 151p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

230 Theology 22-19247

In the Bishop Paddock lectures for 1922 before the General theological seminary, New York, the canon of Newcastle tries to find a way of reconciliation between modern and traditional modes of thought and a basis for a truly Christian belief about Christ. Contents: Liberal Protestantism; Catholic and evolutionary modernism; Traditionalism; Essential orthodoxy; Philosophic conceptions of the union of Godhead with manhood; God and man in Jesus Christ.

"Mr. Quick is one of the younger Anglican theologians, who brings to his study that moderation which is often less fortunately shown by his church in matters where violence would be more suitable. Sobriety is welcome in the conflicts of religion; and Mr. Quick is polite, both to orthodox and modernist."

+ New Statesman 20:414 Ja 6 '23 200w

"For the general reader this book will be of great assistance in clearing the issues. It will help the ordinary Christian to get the good that can be got from all three sides."

+ Sat R 134:988 D 9 '22 550w

QUICK, OLIVER CHASE—Continued

"This is the ablest book to which the controversies connected with the Cambridge Conference of 1921 have given rise. The lecturer's survey of his ground is detached and suggestive."

+ Spec 129:973 D 23 '22 520w

QUILLER-COUCH, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS (Q., pseud.). Studies in literature; second series. 306p $2.50 Putnam [14s Cambridge univ. press]

$20.4 English literature (Eng ed 22-15193)

A second series of lectures to undergraduates by the King Edward VII professor of English literature at Cambridge university. They are not close-knit criticisms but informal and discursive studies, their chief aim being to arouse in young men and women a love for literature. The book contains thirteen lectures: four on Milton, three on Shelley, two on Chaucer, and one each on Byron, on Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," on Gower and some other of Chaucer's successors, and on the Victorian age.

Booklist 19:76 D '22

Bookm 56:769 F '23 60w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '22 1300w

Cath World 116:712 F '23 400w

"The author writes with considerable analytical faculty, and with a warm appreciation of that which was best in the Victorians and their predecessors."

+ Dial 74:211 F '23 60w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch still writes—or rather talks—with a scandalously unprofessional vibrancy; he still insists on talking about 'the classics'—Chaucer and Shakespeare; Milton, Byron, and Shelley—as if they were live dogs and not merely dead lions, and as if they might have something relevant to say to the spirit of our own times. . . . It is Sir Arthur's distinction to have kept life and literature inseparate, and he has managed admirably to get the best out of both." Newton Arvin

+ Freeman 6:500 Ja 31 '23 1400w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch's 'Studies' are the work of an urbane scholar, who can lecture to young men without preaching, who, in the act of talking about literature can make it. His judgments are standard and authentic, such as a professor ought to deliver to students, but they are also individual and whimsical. He gives a fresh glow to what is familiar, and he has a quiet way of correcting other critics without setting himself up as their superior." J. Macy

+ Nation 115:sup621 D 6 '22 250w

"As talks, rather than lectures, to undergraduates they are a remarkable blend of sheer humanness with real learning, of color and pictorial quality with a true intimacy with the mind of genius, of a sense of æsthetic values and power of exposition with suggestive quotation. A few whimsies do not weigh much against such richness of quality."

+ Nation and Ath 31:508 Jl 8 '22 850w

"There are several literary critics who equal—perhaps surpass—'Q' in intellectual and imaginative curiosity. He seldom opens a new door to the understanding of a great writer. On the other hand, there is no literary critic except 'Q' who could preach the gospel of good literature to youth with just this attractiveness and passion. It is as though 'Q' himself had renewed his youth in the company of youth." Robert Lynd

+ New Statesman 19:361 Jl 1 '22 1850w

N Y Times p18 Ja 7 '23 1000w

Spec 129:341 S 9 '22 950w

"The best work of a Professor of Literature, that of making his hearers love the greatest things. Sir Arthur performs admirably. But the second-best work, that of giving them accurate knowledge and sound criticism, he does not always perform so well. Every page of them brings its evidence of their author's lifelong and loving intimacy with English letters. It is an intimacy which, as often happens, has its moments of perversity and caprice."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Je 8 '22 2300w

R

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Fighting edge. 306p $1.75 Houghton

22-17939

June and her father lead hermits' lives in the West before the coming of the blackmailer Houck who threatens to expose some past crime of her father's if she will not marry him. In desperation June consents, then goes to Bob Dillon and begs him to save her from Houck by marrying her at once. Bob fails to measure up to the stern standards of frontier life when he allows his wife of but a day to be kidnapped by the bully Houck, and feeling runs high against him. He resolves to make a man of himself at all hazards. After many trials he conquers his fears and reclaims June. Their arch enemy, Houck, meets a cruel death at the hands of the Ute Indians.

Booklist 19:88 D '22

"Immensely entertaining and realistic. For Mr. Raine has himself ridden the cattle-ranges of the Southwest. Has met there many picturesque characters. Hence he knows 'first-hand' the life of which he writes. For which, lovers of 'a mighty good story,' periodically rejoice and give thanks."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '22 400w

"A well-constructed story. This book is quite on a par with his previous successes. There is plenty of fighting and all the accessory color that makes Western yarns what they are."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 1 '22 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 150w

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Man-size. 310p $1.75 Houghton

22-10861

A stirring story of life in the great Northwest. Sleeping Dawn known also as Jessie, the adopted daughter of the sturdy Scot, Angus McRae, risks much to try to stop the white man's traffic of whiskey among the Indians. The tracking down of "Bully" West, the villain, in an exciting hunt thru the snow, and the doings of the North-west mounted police, keep the interest wide awake. In the closing chapter Tom Morse confesses his love for Jessie whom he had saved from worse than death on several occasions.

Booklist 19:22 O '22

"Throughout it runs true to form—a swinging, swirling story of northern adventure. All Mr. Raine's books are vigorous and moving stories. He does not go in for subtlety. He does give us honest, decent excitement and plenty of it. When one gets hold of a Raine book he knows what to look for. This volume is up to his standard."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '22 350w
Cleveland p91 D '22

"One of the very best stories of the great northwest that has been published for many a day. It is absorbingly interesting."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 N 19 '22 260w

"He has done his readers the compliment to build plausibly and to write carefully, in contrast with most of his contemporaries in the Western rough-stuff school."

+ Lit R p745 Je 17 '22 140w

"A good Western yarn, a trifle above the average in point of prose narrative, and with characters that carry conviction."

+ N Y Times p25 My 21 '22 100w

"The story as a whole moves along briskly enough; the characters, although conventional, are well drawn, and one must expect a certain amount of rather unnatural posturing and gesticulation in a novel that falls in the red-blooded adventure category." W. H. C.
+ N Y Tribune p6 Je 18 '22 160w

RAINSFORD, WILLIAM STEPHEN. Story of a varied life. 481p il $5 Doubleday
B or 92 22-21492

Dr Rainsford's autobiography is the record of a full and many-sided life and one rich in human contacts. For twenty-four years he was rector of St George's church, New York City. Coming to an empty church, an empty treasury and a great unchurched population, he built St George's up into one of the greatest institutional churches in America. In this work he was ably supported by an unusually loyal and large-minded vestry to whom he gives full credit. The record throout is rich in friendships, notable among them being his relations with his senior warden J. P. Morgan to whom a chapter of his book is devoted.

Booklist 19:83 D '22
Bookm 56:519 D '22 100w
Cath World 116:565 Ja '23 500w
Cleveland p96 D '22
Ind 109:214 O 14 '22 110w

Reviewed by H. I. Young
Nation 115:692 D 20 '22 600w

"This autobiography has all the charm and grace that it might have had if it had begun, 'Once upon a time.' The book is carefully and one might say dramatically written. The story never languishes, the interest in the tale is never damped up with preaching. It will keenly attract and profoundly interest those who are searching for stories of the soul's adventure. To them it will seem a capital story well worth the telling and well worth the reading." W: A. White

+ N Y Times p8 O 29 '22 850w

"In common with so many other autobiographies, Dr. Rainsford's book is particularly vivid and effective in the opening chapters. There is more that is real, more that is humanly appealing, in the first quarter of the book and we warm a little more quickly toward Rainsford, the child and the struggling youth, than we do toward Rainsford, the active and successful rector of a great church." S. A. Coblenz

N Y Tribune p8 N 12 '22 800w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:598 D '22
Pratt p31 autumn '22
R of Rs 66:670 D '22 200w
St Louis 20:303 D '22
Survey 49:528 Ja 15 '23 420w

RAINWATER, CLARENCE ELMER. Play movement in the United States. 371p il $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press [16s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

331.84 Play. Recreation. Community centers 22-2582

The author, who has served in many capacities in connection with playgrounds and recreation centers and as dean of the American college of physical education in Chicago, follows the evolution of the play movement in the United States from its origin thru its various stages of sand garden, model playground, small park, recreation center, civic art and welfare, neighborhood organization and community service. He goes on further to study the transitions of the movement from provision for little children to that for all ages, from summer to all-the-year facilities, from philanthropic to community support, from individual to group activities. He concludes with an analysis of the present trend of the movement. There is a selected bibliography and an index.

"Professor Rainwater traces with care and accuracy the development and extension of the movement. He has provided a useful manual for the student of education and physical education, and for the historian has made a considerable addition to the body of facts relating to the social habits of to-day." F: L. Paxson
+ Am Hist R 27:831 Ji '22 250w

Reviewed by C. C. North
Am J Soc 28:349 N '22 500w
Booklist 18:228 Ap '22

Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '22 480w

"The presentation of the subject is not of a popular nature and will not prove popular in its appeal. It is more encyclopedic in form and is intended by the author to serve as a text book in Normal classes, a book of reference for the general reader and a guide for the practical director of play. The history of the play movement is presented in a careful and detailed way, displaying a broad grasp of the theme. It is a book not to be read and laid aside, but to be consulted from time to time, even to the point of arranging a summer's play-ground schedule for classes." G. R. A.

Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser p11 Ji '22 180w

"The book should be valuable as a brief reference for the general reader, as a textbook for those preparing to work in this line of social activity, and as a real contribution to educational literature. It collects in a single volume much of the material needed by a teacher to understand the many social innovations asking admission into the schools today." E. E. Welle-meyer

+ El School J 22:638 Ap '22 450w
Int J Ethics 32:341 Ap '22 140w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:266 Je '22
Pratt p11 autumn '22

"Professor Rainwater has made a thorough study of the recent history of the play movement and in this volume presents much information that will be equally welcome to the growing number of practical specialists in recreation and to the student of social organization."

+ Survey 47:801 F 18 '22 100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p264 Ap 20 '22 120w
Wis Lib Bul 18:129 My '22

RALEIGH, SIR WALTER ALEXANDER. War in the air; being the story of the part played in the great war by the Royal air force. 490p $7 Oxford [21s Milford]

940.44 European war, 1914-1919—Aerial operations 22-17317

"This volume falls naturally into three divisions, the first relating to the gradual discovery of the principles of flight, the second to flying in England and the beginnings of the Air Force, the third to the early period of the war."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by W. S. Holt
Am Hist R 28:318 Ja '23 820w
Boston Transcript p7 S 2 '22 1550w

"A unique product of official historical writing."

+ Nation and Ath 32:21 O 7 '22 1050w

"Unlike most writers of official histories, he has not permitted himself to be swamped by detail, consequently, in place of a dry as dust chronology he has produced a very human and readable book."

+ New Statesman 19:364 Ji 1 '22 1250w
Pratt p31 winter '23

"Sir Walter Raleigh's history cannot fail to inspire the reader with something of the author's evident enthusiasm. It is written by a true knight of the pen, a lover of high adventure who died, as he would have wished, in harness."

+ Sat R 133:656 Je 24 '22 1700w
Spec 128:783 Je 24 '22 1250w

RALEIGH, SIR WALTER A.—Continued

"This book is fine literature. . . for the simplicity and clarity with which it presents a great story. Everywhere is restraint and discrimination and a rescuing of truth from the spectacular. No fact, however trite, is neglected, and technical details, whether of dynamics or of electricity, are told in a tongue which a child could understand—a feat significant of a mind trained in the school of letters. This is a great story greatly told, because nowhere is there over-statement."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Je '22 '22 2200w

RAMUZ, CHARLES FERDINAND. Reign of the evil one; auth. tr. by James Whitall. (European lib.) 195p $1.75 Harcourt

22-23117

Ernest Boyd introduces the book to the English reader by a critical study in which he compares the story to Sygne's "Playboy of the western world." A French Swiss mountain village is visited by a stranger who settles down as a shoemaker. He prospers greatly but in the village everything goes wrong from the moment of his appearance. Good men go astray, women and children sicken and die. The inhabitants begin to suspect the man but are powerless against him. Even the village priest succumbs to him. Prayers and religious processions avail nothing. A plague breaks out and the village is shunned by the surrounding country. When little Marie, whose father was among the first to stray from the path of righteousness, and who with her mother had left the village to live in a desolate hut in the mountains, thinks she hears her father's voice and, going in quest of him, enters the village, the "man" vanishes before her purity and forgiving love and all things change for the better.

Boston Transcript p3 D 23 '22 330w

"It is quite obvious that here is a writer of whom it would be well to know more, one who has talent as a narrator, and a sympathetic understanding of both the inner and the outer existence of that Swiss peasantry which is so little known to the majority of American readers." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p8 D 3 '22 950w

"The book is curiously disappointing; its first chapters are superb. Here is the opening of a story rich in promise. Then Ramuz, the metaphysician and mystic, banishes Ramuz the novelist. From what promised to be a novel evolves chaotic morality." Kenneth Fuessle

— + N Y Tribune p23 D 31 '22 1150w

RANDALL, EDWARD CALEB. Frontiers of the after life. 213p $2 Knopf

134 Spiritualism 22-17548

Over a period of twenty-two years the author has listened to spirit voices and is convinced that he has received authentic information concerning the after-life. Among his convictions are that we have, even here and now, an invisible, living, active, inner body composed of a material we call ether. It is the permanent form that continues after the outer flesh covering has passed. The spirit world which encompasses the earth in belts or zones of differing densities, is as complete a world as our physical world and more or less beautiful according to the way the spirits had built it while on earth.

"The conclusions he has drawn from these extraordinary experiences Mr. Randall presents with the enthusiasm of absolute belief. Whether or not the reader shares or finds convincing Mr. Randall's belief, he will not doubt his sincerity."

— + Boston Transcript p6 O 21 '22 450w

Reviewed by Joseph Jastrow

Lit R p197 N 11 '22 420w

RANGER, RICHARD H. Radio pathfinder. 155p il $1.50 Doubleday [6s Heinemann]

654.6 Radio communication 22-18540

This little book explains popularly what radio broadcasting is, what happens at the transmitting station and at the receiving station, the equipment needed to start with, how to put up an aerial, the regulations which must be observed, the various parts of the set and how they work.

"His book is a distinct departure from the customary methods of treating a technical subject and I feel certain it will be well received by the radio public. Incidentally, his illustrative analogies may well be considered as a step in the right direction for the future text-book." Pierre Boucheron

+ Bookm 55:640 Ag '22 180w

"The book will very likely find favor with amateurs interested in 'getting into the game' and understanding matters as they go along."

+ Lit R p115 O 14 '22 110w

Pratt p19 winter '23

St Louis 20:267 N '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 26 '22 500w

RAPSON, EDWARD JAMES, ed. Ancient India. (Cambridge history of India) 736p il $7 Macmillan [42s Cambridge univ. press]

954 India—History 22-12332

"This volume of the Cambridge History of India—the first of six—deals with the history of Ancient India from the earliest times to about the middle of the first century, A.D. It represents the stage of progress which research has now reached, the outlines of a history which, only a few years ago, was supposed to be irretrievably lost. . . . As a summary of historical gains, the Cambridge History of India marks a new departure. The literature of the subject has become so vast and is still growing so rapidly that the best hope of securing a real advance in the study obviously lay in following the plan adopted in the Cambridge modern and mediaeval histories. This volume is the outcome of the co-operation of a number of expert scholars with an editor who has co-ordinated, as far as possible, results obtained independently."—New Statesman

"Dealing with ancient India, with one of the most glorious phases of Asian civilization, it is too Anglo-Saxon. It is not so deliberately, but instinctively, which is the more naive, therefore the more dangerous, form of prejudice. . . . The book is labeled 'New.' It is not. It is a mere rehashing and redigesting of old fallacies and prejudices." Achmed Abdullah

— Nation 115:526 N 15 '22 1500w

New Statesman 19:694 S 30 '22 800w

"Every section of the subject has been treated by the scholar best equipped to do it justice and pending future discoveries, this 'History of India' may justly be said to be authoritative. Its value is greatly enhanced by a most voluminous bibliography, of forty-four pages, admirably divided into sections by subjects so as to be unusually satisfactory for reference. There are also six excellent maps." Hamilton Bell

+ N Y Times p4 D 10 '22 2550w

"We must heartily commend this admirable commencement of a work that is much needed."

+ Spec 128:784 Je 24 '22 1100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p294 My

4 '22 70w

RASMUSSEN, KNUD JOHAN VICTOR. Greenland along the Polar sea; tr. from the Danish by Asta and Rowland Kenney. 319p il $12 Stokes [36s Heinemann]

919.8 Greenland, Eskimos 22-26243

"This is an account of a journey into a part of Greenland hitherto only vaguely known. It was undertaken to collect detailed information as to the meteorological conditions and the flora and fauna of the country; accordingly, the small band of specialists was obliged to travel over the land instead of on the sea-ice, across which previous expeditions had made their way. All the elaborate equipment usually carried had to be abandoned, and they took only light Eskimo sledges, relying on hunting as they went to supply food for the party. This method, which is the only one possible under the existing conditions, entailed big risks in a country so little known, where at any time they might come on tracts devoid of all game; it did indeed result in the death of the botanist, but it made for speedy travelling and greater freedom for observation. The chapters on the life and customs of the Polar Eskimo are the most interesting for the ordinary reader."—New Statesman

Booklist 18:232 Ap '22

"By none other has the life of these people been set forth in such intimate detail." E. J. C.
+ Boston Transcript p8 Mr 18 '22 580w

"'Greenland by the Polar Sea' reads like a novel. With plenty of action, excitement, and even starvation and sudden death, adventure follows adventure with startling rapidity." Harold Noise

+ Lit R p758 Je 24 '22 1050w

Reviewed by H. R. Mill

+ Nature 109:702 Je 3 '22 1450w

New Statesman 18:656 Mr 11 '22 320w

"If you want a correct picture of polar lands and seas, of the polar climate and the people of the polar North, Rasmussen's books take their place easily among the dozen most important. If you require readability and human interest, you will find that 'Greenland by the Polar Sea' will hold its place easily among the first half dozen." Vilhjalmur Stefansson

+ N Y Times p14 Je 18 '22 3150w

Pratt p31 autumn '22

St Louis 21:14 Ja '23

"Mr. Rasmussen's story is deeply interesting and well told."

+ Spec 128:147 F 4 '22 800w

"His story is uniformly well told; it is simple and straightforward. The facts speak for themselves without decoration and there is little attempt at the melodramatic. . . Rasmussen knows his Greenland and his Eskimos. He tells a lively story, interweaving adventure, description and anecdote into a narrative that can be read without effort. The illustrations are probably the best that have appeared in any book of the kind."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 31 '22 720w

"The numerous excellent photographs and the coloured plates add greatly to the attraction of the book for the general reader."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p791 D 1 '21 50w

"The book and the expedition derive a special interest from the fact that Mr. Rasmussen, the leader, was born in Greenland and lived there as a boy; he had a perfect knowledge of the Eskimo language, and a great admiration for the character of these people. . . He has been well served by his translators. As a rule there is nothing to show that the book was not written in English; the few quaintnesses of expression sprinkled through its pages are reasonable and even welcome reminders."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p853 D 22 '21 1050w

RAYMOND, EDWARD THOMPSON. Mr Lloyd George. 367p $3 Doran [15s Collins]

B or 32 Lloyd George, David 22-23382

"The author has evidently conceived his function to be something more than that of the mere biographer. His book has developed into a criticism and analysis of Lloyd George's public career. It covers an immense amount of ground in the recent political history of Great Britain. Almost prophetically, one of the last chapters is entitled, 'Decay of the Coalition.'"—R of Rs

Booklist 19:156 F '23

"A brilliant portrait of one of the outstanding figures of modern times. It is a searching analysis, leaving little to the imagination and presenting the facts with such frankness and sincerity that one is left quite free to draw his conclusions and make his own estimate of this good humored adroit, eloquent, self-confident politician."

+ Bookm 56:771 F '23 150w

"Through all the career of Mr. Lloyd George, the author has given us frank illumination. But for a biographical study which looks out of the windows of personality into the broader fields of human circumstance we have here a book of intense contemporary value and a volume that will take its place among commentaries to be drawn upon in future estimates both of a world figure and of the time he influenced, for many years to come." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 16 '22 1650w

"The author will probably be accused of too critical a tone, but this is a fault on the right side. There is a humorous cynicism of tone which may detract from the value of some of the judgments. Motives are, moreover, freely imputed, effects are dogmatically assigned to causes. In short, means are employed when necessary to give complete, well-rounded pictures, but these means are not obvious and their skill rather adds than otherwise to the charm of the style. The book, besides its value as an original work, is a most useful commentary upon much contemporary biography." Robert Wilberforce

+ Int Bk R p27 D '22 1450w

"The book is brilliant, entertaining and informative, and builds up an unforgettable picture of an extraordinary life." Hildegarda Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p36 D '22 60w

"Mr. E. T. Raymond's volume is, of necessity, as unfinished as the career with which it deals, but it is clearly and often brilliantly written; to quote Mr. Raymond's own word, it is well 'documented'; in it the writer maintains, on the whole, a judicial temper; and as a companion, let us say, for the readers of Mr. Lloyd George's own memoirs, as promised, the book is timely and may be accepted as generally reliable." P. W. Wilson

+ — Lit R p221 N 18 '22 1700w

"It is no disparagement of Mr. Raymond to suggest that his qualifications fit him to be the biographer of a great man of the minimum variety rather than of a Gladstone. His lightness of touch is just what is needed for the effective handling of such a subject as Lloyd George. His gift of persiflage finds ample and delightful scope in many an incident of the career he is chronicling. He never adopts the role of a stern censor, but you feel again and again that his deft scalpel has exposed a moral weakness which the devotees of the late Premier would wish to keep concealed." H. W. Horwill

+ Nation 115:719 D 27 '22 1050w

"It is a solid, capable piece of work, illuminated by a sober irony, unpretentious yet in many places really brilliant, restrained but not too cautious, friendly but not blind, or rather animated not so much by friendliness or unfriendliness as by a desire to understand." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 33:99 D 20 '22 3300w

"A most illuminating, absorbing and convincing book."

+ N Y Times p9 D 31 '22 2650w

"All in all, American readers will find in this book an informing and useful statement of the somewhat puzzling elements that go to make up the character of England's great war Premier."

+ R of Rs 66:670 D '22 140w

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

"The book is a failure. One might search far in it for a tolerable epigram. Nor does it hold together; the last chapter is a nondescript thing which reads as though it had been written as an independent article for some newspaper."

— Spec 130:101 Ja 26 '23 1150w

"Mr. Raymond's merit as a writer lies mainly in his flashes of psychological intuition. In this book they occur perhaps even more frequently than in his earlier studies. They are discontinuous, however; and while they give valuable aid to the reader who wishes to 'compose' a balanced portrait of Mr. Lloyd George, they do not perform the task for him. We scarcely feel, as we lay down the study, that the elements of character have been fused in a harmonious whole. It may be said that this is because the character is complex, but Mr. Raymond himself brings enough evidence to disprove that view."

RAYMOND, EDWARD—Continued

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p736 N 16 '22 1100w

RAYMOND, ERNEST. Tell England; a study in a generation. 342p $2 Doran [7s 6d Cassell] 22-25805

A tale of school and war in equal proportions. Rupert Ray, Edgar Doe and Archie Pennybet are friends and schoolmates at Kensington, an English boys' school. Here they have five gay years in an atmosphere which seems a trifle hectic and there is more than a trace of sentimentality in the account of their adolescent gropings. The boys are just of fighting age when the war breaks out. Pennybet is killed in France at its very beginning, while Rupert and Edgar are transferred to the Dardanelles and serve in the Gallipoli campaign. On the voyage out, they make friends with the chaplain, Padre Monty, who converts them and strives to "send them into the fight—white." Edgar falls at Cape Helles and Rupert returns only to die in France at the end of the fighting. The story purports to be written by Rupert with a prologue by Padre Monty.

"We are not sure that the Great War has not kept its best wine in the way of fiction, to the last. 'Tell England' is simply the apparently artless record of the lives of a handful of boys from their earliest days to when they die that their country may live. Yet it grips the mind more firmly and moves the heart more strongly, we think, than any of its precursors. . . . It seems to us to give a clearer account of heroism and of the making and make-up of heroes than any other novel of the war." C: L. Moore

+ Lit R p915 S 2 '22 700w

"Mr. Raymond has no discrimination. He takes his fine fellows at their own valuation, and presents for our approval three of the most complete humbugs that we have met with in fiction. . . . 'Tell England' is unconsciously a sentimental, coarse, and pretentious book—a vulgar book. When Mr. Raymond is not writing of men and the behavior of men, however, he seems to observe with a different eye and write with a different pen. His descriptions of the voyage to Gallipoli, of that dismal coast, and of the island of Mudros are admirable."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:160 Ap 29 '22 650w

"The book is well written, its characters are real people, well and vividly portrayed. And if its especial mission be to 'tell England' it also has a message for these United States."

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 6 '22 550w

"School stories are almost invariably failures, and the half of this novel which deals with the hero's boyhood is no exception to the general rule. The author has succeeded in producing a most disagreeable general impression which persists unhappily in the second half of the book, in which the Kensington 'old boys' serve in the Gallipoli campaign. Unhappily, because these chapters have very considerable merits. They are vivid, full of movement, at times genuinely tragic."

+ Sat R 133:318 Mr 25 '22 420w

"That it must be admitted that the things said are better on the whole than the manner of saying them need not in this case be regarded as severe criticism. So much of simplicity and realism is apt to demand some sacrifice of art."

+ — Spec 128:435 Ap 8 '22 50w

Spring'd Republican p7a N 12 '22 150w

"Can we accept his three young heroes, or must we write them down mawkish? A true judgment, we think, will be that Mr. Raymond, in spite of a languorous phrase or two that makes us restive, has succeeded. He has succeeded because these boys are, fundamentally, not effeminate. When the tale has reached its second phase, and Rupert Ray and Edgar Doe are on their troopship for Gallipoli, the book strengthens at every page, though the author never swerves from his delicacy, his fastidiousness."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 23 '22 660w

REED, THOMAS HARRISON. Loyal citizenship. 333p il $1.40 World bk.

342.73 United States—Politics and government. Citizenship 22-13544

A textbook for the training of pupils for citizenship. The author, professor of municipal government in the University of California, points out that there are two great essentials in the making of loyal citizens. First, to give the pupils the necessary knowledge of government and society in easy, understandable terms, and second, to form the habit of civic-mindedness from a child's earliest years of reason, both by precept and practice. The topics for investigation and suggested civic activities are numerous, with the idea that the teacher will choose according to her especial need. The references are few and easy, and there is an appendix of suggested books for a school library, and another explaining in full the Constitution of the United States. Index.

Am Econ R 12:527 S '22 50w

Am Pol Sci R 16:530 Ag '22 90w

"An excellent textbook. Vastly practical and well selected is the large number of illustrations. Especially fair and instructive is the chapter treating of problems of labor. Neither labor nor capital can object to the manner in which this subject is here treated. Our governmental and judicial systems are carefully explained in a manner completely free from partisanship and bias."

+ Boston Transcript p8 My 20 '22 180w

"The attractive illustrations and the general organization of the material combine to make a very teachable book." E. E. Wellemeyer

+ Ei School J 23:157 O '22 250w

"Contains much clear and reasonable exposition of the machinery of government, many interesting facts, many sensible truisms. Obedience is the keyword of this text-book for sheep, and for them no doubt it is better than nothing."

+ — New Repub 31:56 Je 7 '22 180w

REED, VERBENA. Bird-nest boarding house. 22kp il $2.50 Dutton 22-21773

Hard working Mrs Worm makes things very comfortable for her pay-guests at the Bird-nest boarding house and her lazy husband Enoch Arden Worm just lets his wife slave away from morning till night, assisted by the faithful Cricket. One day Mr Worm disappears and is made to join the Woodpecker's circus. Then Colonel George Grub-Worm's dashing team of horseflies sets out to hunt for him, while the Reverend Beetle tries to console Mrs Worm. Events happen quickly in the insect world. Lallie Ladybug, who taught in the village school, finally accepts Colonel Grub-Worm's offers of love, and little Winnie Wasp, who was continually laundering her Auburn hair, is a bridesmaid at the wedding. The Snake-Doctor, Widow Grasshopper, Bobby Bumblebee and Mr Flea are but a few of the little creatures mentioned in the book, which is delightfully illustrated by Oliver Herford.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Lit R p308 D 9 '22 60w

"As one reads the story one feels that these active little inmates of the boarding house dressed up in clever costumes performed their pranks, but forgot their lines; for the stuff out of which a real story is fashioned is missing in the text."

+ — Lit R p328 D 16 '22 110w

"Using insects to characterize human follies and foibles is an old literary device carried out to perfection by Aesop and Lafontaine. Verbena Reed tries her hand at it and succeeds in creating a boarding house that is a true and vastly entertaining picture. Needless to say, the illustrations add greatly to the mirth of this clever story." L. St J: Power

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 12 '22 210w

"An innovation in the realm of animal books for juveniles. The whimsy and nonsense of this book are so rare that grown-ups need have no hesitancy as to being surprised reading it."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 3 '22 210w

REES, ARTHUR JOHN. Moon rock. 358p $2
Dodd [8s 6d Lane]

22-7534

When about to publish some facts that will ruin his daughter's life and besmirch her mother's memory, Robert Turolid is found dead in his study, apparently murdered. The dead man's nephew and daughter are under grave suspicion. Thalassa, the man-servant, a weird personality, who seems to have held Turolid in his power, is a puzzling factor. Finally, the surly Thalassa tells the story of diamonds stolen from a man's coffin on an island in the Southern Pacific, a quarrel and the apparent killing of one of the party. The return to England of Robert Turolid, a wealthy tho haunted man and his efforts for thirty years to establish his claim to a title long since fallen into abeyance, then his death as an act of revenge, keep the reader guessing almost to the last chapter.

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

"Mr. Rees writes with self-respecting craftsmanship. Above all, Mr. Rees has a literary touch. His characters grow, his tale expands and he is never tricky. This is why he has given us a novel as well as a mystery story."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 6 '22 450w

"Mr. Rees sets a first-rate stage but on this stage he puts characters who compel little interest, and the end of his story is disappointing to one who has pursued the plot through so many pages in the hope of seeing beauty and virtue triumphant and villainy punished and confounded."

— + Lit R p707 Je 3 '22 150w

"The Moon Rock," besides being a well-handled mystery concerning a murder, is also a novel of some literary excellence."

+ N Y Times p22 My 7 '22 200w

Outlook 131:216 My 31 '22 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:323 Ji '22

"We can promise that readers will be both puzzled and thrilled, for Mr. Rees has given them a weird and ingenious book."

+ Sat R 133:97 Ja 28 '22 240w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 21 '22 250w

"Mr. Rees has a deserved reputation as a master of mystery; and this murder-detective story is another toothsome morsel."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 12 '22 30w

"The characters are carefully drawn and the details filled in with much pain and skill. In short, it is rather a novel than a crime story, and an absorbing one, though dreadfully sombre. If the author set out to prove that a sombre tale could be made interesting, he has indeed succeeded; for it is a clever piece of work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 19 '22 130w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

REFLECTIONS of a T. B. M. 189p $1.50
Houghton

817

22-9658

The Tired Business Man offers some amusing reflections on feminine traits and foibles. Contents: A wife's best friend; The modern mother; The lady next door; The trained nurse; The show girl; A mother-in-law; The new stenographer; A near-flapper; The chief operator;

The athletic girl; The authoress; The new voter; The debutante; A neighbor once removed; Sister; Topsy-turvy.

"Delightful and whimsical light essays on woman."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '22 220w

"The sketches are funny, and though sharp they are neither barbed nor poisoned. Certainly his reflections are a happy antidote for 'that tired feeling' which occasionally overtakes the average citizen. But this is a spring tonic to the mind which should not be taken all at one dose. Make it last sixteen days to get the best results."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Ap 16 '22 120w

REGIS, JULIUS. No. 13 Toroni; a mystery. 307p
$1.75 Holt [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-20734

Why the old man Dreyel was murdered in his rooms in a dingy house in Stockholm and who was Toroni are but the appetizers to a network of perplexing problems. Old Dreyel must have known all about the mysteries which lead the amateur detective and his friend to the lonely island on the Alaskan coast, but he left not a word behind. There are narrow escapes, exciting clues unearthed, and the 'girl in gray' adds a spice of romance.

Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '22 130w

"The plot is sufficiently ingenious along conventional lines. The people are rubber-stamped, but few readers hope for characterization in this sort of book."

— + Int Bk R p60 F '23 210w

"A trifle more ingenious and yet a trifle more plausible than the average. Considered from the point of view of faithfulness to life, it is far fetched and fantastic enough, but as a story it holds one's interest from cover to cover, and even the most improbable scenes are enveloped in an atmosphere of reality."

+ Lit R p247 N 25 '22 170w

"The story shows some amateurishness of method and style, but it is ingeniously constructed, with many and varied complications, and is, on the whole, so good a story and so interestingly worked out as to indicate that the young author has an exceptional talent for the writing of mystery and detective stories."

+ N Y Times p25 N 12 '22 400w

"Just fair to middling." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p10 N 26 '22 300w

"It is a rather bizarre tale, but it hangs together and is full of excitement."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p61S S 23 '22 200w

REID, EDITH GITTINGS. Florence Nightingale; a drama. 118p $1.25 Macmillan 812

22-18700

The play is introduced by a character sketch of Florence Nightingale by the author. The first act shows Miss Nightingale in her home with her family, who are perturbed about her determination to establish a nursing system for the English army. She receives her orders from the Queen of England to go to the Crimea and chooses her nurses. In act two she arrives at the barrack hospital of Scutari amid a frightful scene of neglect of the wounded, dead and dying. The army officers and hospital staff are expecting her with mocking incredulity but immediately succumb to her commanding initiative. In the course of the act the efficiency of her measures prove themselves while she falls ill under the strain. Act three shows her upon her return to London, evading the city's festivities and display in her honor and quietly slipping back into her family circle. She now works incessantly for the perfection of her system and receives the Order of Merit in her old age.

"The volume, based on the life of the celebrated war worker, not only betrays an amazing technical ignorance of dramatic elements, but presents characters supposedly human, in reality dull, passionless puppets who act without motive, and speak a language of stilted sentiment."

REID, EDITH GITTINGS—Continued

— Lit R p421 Ja 27 '23 70w

"As a play 'Florence Nightingale' is quite impossible. This is mainly due to a soppy sentimentality. Because of this and because Miss Reid lacks that high literary intuition that is necessary in plays of this sort 'Florence Nightingale' must be accounted a failure."

— N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 360w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 11 '23 130w
Survey 49:sup208 N 1 '22 70w

REINSCH, PAUL SAMUEL. American diplomat in China. 396p $4 Doubleday [16s Allen & U.]

915.1 China—Foreign relations. China—Politics and government 22-5622

The author was appointed American minister to China in 1913 and he occupied this difficult diplomatic post for six years during which time China was more than ever a center of international intrigue and experiencing its re-birth as a republic. His narrative follows the story of the rise and fall of Yuan Shih-kai who had just become the president of China when Dr Reinsch arrived there, the outbreak of the war, the presentation of Japan's famous twenty-one demands, the break with Germany, Russian and Japanese intrigues, the restoration of the empire for a day, and the part played by America in the international tangle. He concludes with an account of the new development of national consciousness in China, the widespread student movement and some of the results already achieved by the general awakening.

"The real value of Dr. Reinsch's new book lies in the record which it preserves of events and people in Peking during the war years 1914-1919. Its weakness, if it is possible to attribute weakness to so fascinating a book, arises from the fact that it is a diary which has been published too soon after the events to permit of everything being said." W. W. McLaren

+ — Am Pol Sci R 16:505 Ag '22 450w

Reviewed by W. W. Willoughby
Ann Am Acad 101:306 My '22 660w
Booklist 18:231 Ap '22

"He has furnished a picture of diplomatic life in the Chinese capital [which], for descriptive and political interest, has few equals in modern literature." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 1 '22 800w

"The writer is a recognized authority on all matters pertaining to China, and anything which he writes is marked by distinction of style and penetrating insight. The book has exceptional merit and interest." W. R. Wheeler

+ Lit R p24 S 16 '22 1500w

"It is delightfully written and will be read with zest by people in the reminiscent stage." C. A. Beard

+ New Repub 30:144 Mr 29 '22 380w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:301 Je '22

Pratt p33 summer '22

St Louis 20:223 S '22

Spec 129:113 Jl 22 '22 1050w

"It is a most readable book, and one that cannot be overlooked in assessing the conflicting factors that swayed the ever-changing currents of politics in the storm center of the Orient during the eventful years of the war."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 2 '22 580w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p479 Jl 20 '22 100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:131 My '22

REINSCH, PAUL SAMUEL. Secret diplomacy; how far can it be eliminated? 231p $2 Harcourt

327 Diplomacy. International law and relations 22-3117

An inquiry into the extent to which secretive methods in foreign affairs are to blame for the condition of the world today and a statement of the new and broader conception of diplomacy as a means of bringing into the clear light of day the common and interrelated interests of mankind, of making the world more habitable, and of bringing about an ideal of cooperation and forbearance. The author traces the practices and results of secret diplomacy from the eighteenth century and the Congress of Vienna thru the World war and after. With this survival of absolutism he contrasts a conduct of public foreign affairs based on democratic principles and well-informed public support.

Am Pol Sci R 16:521 Ag '22 110w

Boston Transcript p6 My 13 '22 680w

"Dr. Reinsch could add considerably to the public information about which he is so solicitous, if he would let us know exactly and fully how he brought the recalcitrant Chinese to book. He should write another book on secret diplomacy. A real one would make diverting reading and do more good than an academic treatise prepared for an academic audience." S. R. Franklin

+ — Freeman 5:404 Jl 5 '22 1100w

Int J Ethics 32:339 Ap '22 100w

Reviewed by G. L. Dickinson

Lit R p580 Ap 15 '22 1050w

Reviewed by J. A. Hobson

Nation 115:73 Jl 19 '22 1350w

"If Dr. Reinsch had been a little less discreet, and if he had given us the benefit of his actual experience of secret and open diplomacy at Peking, he would have written a more illuminating and, we think, a more useful book." L. W.

+ — New Statesman 19:470 Jl 29 '22 240w

"There would seem to be an unconscious disproportion in Mr. Reinsch's book; yet the work contains much information and much clear statement."

+ — No Am 215:568 Ap '22 390w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:268 Je '22

Pratt p10 winter '23

St Louis 20:206 S '22

"This is a book which no person interested and who is not?—in the present and future of our world relationships can afford not to read."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 17 '22 1150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p431 Je 29 '22 220w

Wis Lib Bul 18:131 My '22

REISNER, EDWARD HARTMAN. Nationalism and education since 1789; a social and political history of modern education. 575p $2.60 Macmillan

370.9 Education—History 22-14699

"An elaboration of a syllabus prepared for a course in the history of education and published three years ago by the Teachers' College of Columbia University under the title of 'Democracy and Nationalism in Education.' The author has made free use of educational literature, both American and foreign. Some of his chapters contain paragraphs from his own printed magazine articles, and there is a short bibliography at the close of each section." (Boston Transcript) "The book describes the principal facts of the social, economic, and political life of France, Prussia, England, and the United States since 1789 in relation to educational policy and practice. The record is brought down to date and throughout, the author holds closely to his thesis that 'education is public policy, related inseparably to economic conditions, social organization, and political administration.'" (Greensboro [N.C.] Daily News)

"Dr. Reisner's book supplies just the kind of information which is needed for intelligent judgments in the home field. There would be room for such a volume were it only to show how intimately educational interests are bound up everywhere with social and political interests; still more would it be needed as an account of such old-world experiments in education as may serve alike for guidance and for warning. The author, combining these two aspects of his subject, treats them with a range of illustrative material, grasp of the principles involved, and a felicity of presentation that are beyond praise." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 16 '22 900w

"The book is scholarly and judicious in tone, excellent in organization, and is marked throughout by an easy and attractive style. It will be suggestive and stimulating to the general reader and of practical service to the professional teacher and school administration." E. W. K.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 O 22 '22 880w

REPPINGTON, CHARLES A COURT. After the war: London, Paris, Rome, Athens, Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Bucharest, Berlin, Sofia, Coblenz, New York, Washington. 477p $5 Houghton [21s Constable]

940.5 Europe—Politics and government. Reconstruction (European war)—Europe 22-4587

The book consists of Colonel Repington's diary for 1921. It gives an account of his itinerary throught Europe after the war; of the important and interesting people he met and what they said to him and the impressions he received of the political situations in the various countries. The entries close with the Disarmament conference at Washington. Index.

"The whole book is full of political gossip, much of it interesting, but the eternal reparation squabbles are rather tiresome. The parts on Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria are perhaps the best, because little has been written about the situations there."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:341 My '22 100w

Reviewed by H. S. Rushmore
Bookm 55:306 My '22 850w

"All that Colonel Repington has to say may not meet the approval of the Gentleman with a Duster or indeed certain other readers, but no one who has read him at all can escape the realization that he is a keen and shrewd observer and that he has had unusual opportunities to acquire a first hand knowledge of world affairs." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 8 '22 1200w

"Colonel Repington is a shrewd and pleasant travelling-companion and his latest book is excellent entertainment. But, even making allowances for inevitable haste in composition, 'After the War' fall far behind 'The First World War,' in value as an historical document." H: L. Stuart

+ Freeman 6:19 S 13 '22 520w

"His comments upon prime ministers and generals and presidents and kings and newspaper men are shrewd and entertaining." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 108:262 Mr 11 '22 130w

Reviewed by A. C. Coolidge

+ Lit R p718 Je 10 '22 550w

Nation 114:626 My 24 '22 30w

"The definite value of Colonel Repington's earlier war diary is lacking here. This later diary disappoints us. The Colonel and his notable friends were revealed so well and finally in the earlier work, there is no new light here."

+ Nation and Ath 131:414 Je 17 '22 330w

"It makes racy reading. . . . If some unlucky wight from Omaha should leave his native town and visit many people and write intimate comments about those who wined and dined him, New York City would denounce him as a horrible vulgar wretch. When Mrs. Asquith and Colonel Repington do it, New Yorkers cheer and pay five dollars for the privilege of being on the inside. Will no Erasmus come soon to do justice to them that sit in moonshine?" C: A. Beard

+ New Repu 30:145 Mr 29 '22 200w

"The political and diplomatic part of the book is dull; it is too full of detailed reports of politicians' conversations. Frequently Colonel Repington's views are sound or interesting, but he is too fond of substituting iteration for argument."

+ New Statesman 19:20 Ap 8 '22 1650w
N Y Times p9 Mr 5 '22 1600w

"Colonel Repington's book 'After the war' has been criticised as scrappy and disjointed, and also as indiscreet or scandalous. As to the first charge, the very plan of a diary involves a rapid fire of notes, impressions, and talks; but one rarely finds this method wearisome, for mingled with many minor details the reader constantly comes across anecdotes and readable passages. As to the second charge, the word indiscreet is more apt than the word scandalous. There is not much in the book that appeals to the lover of gossip, but there are many reports of conversations which might well annoy the persons reported and make them wish that they had been less frank."

+ Outlook 130:472 Mr 22 '22 1300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:372 Jl '22

"An interesting but cursory survey of recent economic and political conditions in Europe. There is some descriptive material of value on the political situation in the new states and on the economic collapse of Central Europe, but to secure it the reader must endure many irrelevancies."

+ Pol Sci Q 37:715 D '22 250w

"As a sort of panoramic view of the men in European public life to-day, this new volume of the 'Diary' is unequaled."

+ R of Rs 66:223 Ag '22 70w

St Louis 20:222 S '22

"There is a great deal in this book that is of value, for Colonel Repington has brains and knowledge and he loves thinking. He should, however, display some power of selection. He is much more critical of himself, and be vastly more careful in dealing with other people's secrets."

+ Spec 128:527 Ap 29 '22 2250w

RETURN of Alfred: by the author of Patricia Brent, spinster. 350p $1.75 Doran

22-15473

A story of mistaken identity. Darrell Hildreth, alias James Smith suddenly landed by fate and a railway strike in the village of Little Bilstead and introduced under unusual circumstances into the home of Alfred Warren, was immediately hailed as that prodigal returned. The more he protested the more convinced were family and townsfolk that he was indeed their Alfred. Worst of all he had to assume Alfred's sins, which were many, and to submit to the barrier they made between him and Marjorie Stannard. Little Bilstead "ached with drama" till the situation cleared.

Booklist 19:22 O '22

Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '22 230w

"Although the plot is built upon rickety foundations and the story as a whole is far from convincing the author deserves credit for a vein of genuine humor that pervades his work; and, indeed, in some of his descriptions of provincial English life he rises almost to excellence. One wonders whether he might not be able to produce a far more meritorious piece of work if he devoted less attention to plot and situation and gave more space to character and background."

+ Lit R p875 Ag 12 '22 210w

"It is a story full of humor, full of unexpected sayings, of action and interesting people."

+ N Y Times p26 Je 25 '22 450w

"The book is a bit thin, or padded, which you prefer; a hammock book, to be read between naps; guaranteed not to disturb those drowsy intervals with unduly exciting recollections; equally guaranteed to leave a pleasant taste in the mouth." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 3 '22 150w

RETURN OF ALFRED—Continued

"A wild comedy of errors."

+ Sat R 133:x Ap 20 '22 100w

Spec 128:598 My 13 '22 60w

"This story is in more farcical vein than the author's first book, 'Patricia Brent, Spinster.' In spite of that it will be enjoyed by those who like a tale of mistaken identity plus a mischievous small boy."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Ap 20 '22 230w

REYNOLDS, GERTRUDE M. (ROBINS) (MRS LOUIS BAILLIE REYNOLDS). Judgment of Charis. 306p $1.75 Doran

22-26761

Charis Osbourne, daughter of an English lord, to escape a hateful marriage with her cousin, Lord Vyner, leaves home and loses herself in the London business world as a typist. An accident brings her to the attention of a Canadian millionaire and she becomes his secretary. In this capacity she becomes socially involved with the English bourgeoisie and her aristocratic soul reluctantly yields to the love of a man devoid of personal charm and further handicapped by the name of Cranstoun-Brown. In the course of the romance the lowly lover is metamorphosed and Charis's surrender, when it comes, is complete.

Booklist 19:22 O '22

Boston Transcript p6 S 6 '22 490w

"It is an entertaining story, but of rather slight structure."

+ Lit R p891 Ag 19 '22 80w

"A very pretty romance, related with spirit and humor."

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 30 '22 370w

"It is quite a clever and pleasing little story, however thin; the characters are nicely differentiated and the hero decidedly likable." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 6 '22 120w

RHODES, EUGENE MANLOVE. Copper Streak Trail. 318p $1.75 Houghton

22-10862

Pete Johnson, the breezy, cheerful hero of this tale of the West, and his partner, Stanley Mitchell, have great trouble in trying to secure their right to a copper mine which Johnson has discovered in the wilds of Arizona. They have to combat a band of clever, quick witted rogues, headed by Mayer Zurich, and a cousin of Stanley's, a crook lawyer, is also working against them. Pete is wide awake, however, and an adept with a gun, so there is some very sharp shooting, a fund of cowboy humor, and clever double-crossing, in which Pete and his partner come thru triumphant.

Booklist 18:368 Jl '22

"The effort of the two partners to put their discovery into a working condition are narrated in a rambling way, sometimes humorously, sometimes wittily, but often in such dull fashion that it is difficult to keep the run of the story and to know just what the writer is seeking to say."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '22 250w

"Mr. Rhodes has proved before this that he knows how to handle a Western tale in a restrained and distinguished style, and while his material is essentially light and strung together for purposes of amusement, at the same time he conveys the sense of an intimate knowledge and sympathy with the Western life of his characters that add much to his books."

+ N Y Times p18 My 14 '22 150w

Outlook 131:465 Je 12 '22 40w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:323 Jl '22

"As action-stories Rhodes's yarns stand at the top and by themselves; and his actors are entirely too natural and true to be depreciated by calling them he-men. They aren't he-men, but men. There is none too much of the clean, active, manly kind of fiction that is his instinctive output." R. N.

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Je 25 '22 420w

RHODES, JAMES FORD. McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, 1897-1909. 418p $4 Macmillan

973:91 United States—History—1865-. McKinley, William. Roosevelt, Theodore

22-22730

The twelve years covered by this history, 1897-1909, include the Spanish American war and its resulting problems, the period of vast business expansion and consolidation, the building of the Panama canal and Roosevelt's campaign against the trusts. The personalities who stand out, beside the two presidents, are Mark Hanna, J. P. Morgan, John Hay, Andrew Carnegie, Bryan, Root and Taft. As Mr Rhodes reaches this recent period in our history, his historical detachment is less easily maintained and his political bent more apparent.

"Dr. Rhodes's latest book is below the level of anything he has previously written. It falls short in every way. In style we see little of that lucid and limpid quality which distinguished his earlier work. In illuminating detail it at times is absolutely barren. Finally it lacks, in some degree, at least, the rounded historical judgment of his former accomplishment. Here and there we get a gleam of the Rhodes of old. His portraits of Hanna, Morgan, Carnegie and Rockefeller are exceedingly good. His characterization of Hay is better yet. More than most writers is he able to make McKinley's earnest and honest piety something real and admirable. But taken for all in all Mr. Rhodes has not only produced his weakest book but one that would not be a credit to a lesser man."

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '22 1850w

"Mr. Rhodes's latest volume has the merits and the defects which characterize the volumes that have appeared previously. It limits itself to the chief episodes of its period, which it presents with leisurely thoroughness, instead of cluttering up its pages with a multitude of less important incidents inadequately delineated, as is apt to be the way with books on contemporary or recent history. And it is eminently judicial. These are great merits, and they greatly outweigh, although they cannot obliterate, the defects of a careless style, a want of graphic effect, and an excessive use of bits of quotation from speeches and books." R. J. Davis

+ Lit R p419 F 10 '23 1100w

"The sanity and impartiality which Rhodes has brought to the study of our national life are abundantly in evidence in his new volume. He has given us the focus without seeming to clamp our heads in a vise and telling us to read the small letters on the lower line of fine print."

+ N Y Times pl D 3 '22 2500w

R of Rs 67:110 Ja '23 220w

Spring'd Republican p10 D 16 '22 60w

RHYS, ERNEST, ed. Modern English essays, 1870-1920. 5v $6 per set Dutton [15s Dent]

821 Essays

This set of five pocket-size volumes contains some ninety essays belonging to the fifty years from 1870 to 1920. The essayists range from Pater, Arnold, Bagehot and Emerson in the first volume to such contemporaries as Massingham, Nevins, Chesterton, Galsworthy, Clutton-Brock and Milne in the last two volumes. The essayists, some of whom are represented by more than one essay are mostly English. Among the few Americans included are Emerson, Lowell, Brander Matthews and Vida Scudder.

Booklist 19:116 Ja '23

Dial 74:211 F '23 160w

Ind 109:283 N 11 '22 110w

"Mr. Rhys's choice is good, though we think he might have found better specimens of the work of Bagehot, Arnold, and Stevenson."

+ Lit R p226 N 18 '22 280w

"Contains much good literature. Unfortunately, it also contains a number of poor essays. The last volume falls off lamentably, and includes some essays which are hardly up to the standard of good weekly journalism."

+ New Statesman 20:76 O 21 '22 130w

"We are more than usually in his debt, as he has provided us with a body of lively miscellaneous reading which only such eclecticism as his could have gathered together, so variously entertaining and significant in so many ways."

R: Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 21 '23 3250w

"This collection of essays is notably readable and the reason is that the editor has been at great pains to choose essays which, if we may say so, are not 'essayish.'"

+ Outlook 132:626 D 6 '22 110w

Sat R 134:558 O 14 '22 150w

"How consciously Mr. Rhys approached the snares, succumbed and rose again, is a mere speculation; an onlooker can but say that he was happy, if unaware, and that, if aware, he has well dissembled or cloaked his anxieties. To put it quite plainly, Mr. Rhys has made a queer choice, if choice it be, both as to individual authors and general idea." J: Freeman

Spec 129:sup791 D 2 '22 1500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p769 N 30 '22 4850w

RICHARDS, LENORE, and TREAT, NOLA. Quantity cookery; menu planning and cookery for large numbers. 200p $2 Little

641.57 Cookery. Menus 22-9172

The authors, who are assistant professors of institutional management in the University of Minnesota and managers of the cafeteria of its college of agriculture, design this book for managers of cafeterias, restaurants, tea-rooms and institution dining-rooms and also as a textbook in the teaching of large quantity cookery. The book outlines the principles of this kind of cookery, and the standards for judging meals, suggests types of menus for serving from one hundred to six hundred people daily and provides charts and lists to be used in menu planning. Some two hundred recipes for use in institutions are also given and a useful list of weights and their approximate measures.

Booklist 18:352 Jl '22

"'Quantity Cookery' has quality, has tested recipes, has, above all, commonsense." R. D. W.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '22 500w
Cleveland p60 'Ag '22

"The institution administrators of the country should welcome this book as a valuable addition to their working libraries, for it is practical and deals with subjects which come into the everyday life of every institution. A practical, usable book, a valuable contribution to the meager institutional literature." M. C. Little

+ J Home Econ 14:452 S '22 420w

Pratt p21 autumn '22

St Louis 20:214 S '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:271 D '22

RICHARDSON, NORVAL. Cave woman. 268p $1.75 Scribner

22-18094

"Mary Watson, by lies and deception, drives off the wife of the impecunious writer who is the object of her pursuit, and impels him into the marriage which means wealth and comforts for his one delicate child. Years later the story is resumed, when this child is full grown. By a portrait she identifies her supposedly dead mother in the beloved school teacher who, incognita, has followed her at a distance through the years. Simultaneously fame and funds come to the long-crushed father, and his child reunites a happy family—a fall from a precipice on Capri duly disposing of the cave woman."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p5 O 28 '22 1100w

"Even an Italian background—haltingly sketched, too—is nowadays not enough to support such a story as this. Nor does the author's style help matters."

— Lit R p162 O 28 '22 300w

N Y Times p25 S 24 '22 300w

"Mr. Richardson's plot, like his central idea, is half melodrama, but the other half is genuine drama; he has written an unusual story, if not a contribution to literature." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p8 S 21 '22 230w

"Mr. Richardson has spoiled what might have been an effective and well-written novel by conceding an unnatural 'happy ending' which not only distorts the moral quality of the story but utterly deprives it of any verisimilitude."

+ — Outlook 133:233 Ja 31 '23 220w

RICHARDSON, WILLIAM LEE, and OWEN, JESSE M. Literature of the world; an introductory study. 526p il $2 Ginn

809 Literature—History and criticism

22-15329

A text-book designed to give a general survey of literature. In its summary of the literature of each of the major nations there is provided an historical background and some information about matters of race, language and national characteristics.

"The authors have done their work modestly and conscientiously. They have kept persistently in mind, it seems, the qualifications of a literary education without the help of a lectually though but moderately sophisticated, of a group who are accomplishing what may well be called the preliminary stages of a literary education without the help of a college faculty." H. L. Cohen

+ Educ R 65:64 Ja '23 550w

"From the character and temper of its makers, Literature of the World derives its highest value. It can do much to remove our American ignorance concerning literature not written in our language and thus lessen our provinciality. But its chief service I conceive to be much higher than this. In its most happily written sections it succeeds in suggesting the character and flavor of many of the masterpieces of literature and invites and even entices one to read these for himself. This, it seems to me, is the greatest service that such a manual can perform. . . It is less happy, I think, in the purely informational and critical passages. In these the exact scholar will detect inaccuracies, and the critical reader will occasionally be irritated by the repetition of pangyric and by the crowded sentences and cramped style. But such defects, pardonable or unavoidable in a work of this character, should not be counted too heavily against it." W. F. Bryan

+ — School R 30:627 O '22 720w

RICHBERG, DONALD RANDALL. Man of purpose. 329p $1.75 Crowell

22-13967

"The story of a man with a keen analytical mind and a sense of justice who allows his decision in every crisis but one to be made by one of the three women who dominate his life. Oppressed by financial worries, marital stagnation, and the conventions that threaten to submerge his career, Merrill shows a singular capacity for introspection and a persistent, though somewhat illogical responsiveness to the women influencing him. Only once does he even partially evade their influence. Then he makes the decision which ruins his career but helps him to find himself, renounce the world he has known, and search for the missing Irma Conway, the one woman capable of bringing out his best."—Lit R

"What gives the book its exceptional character is its sense of ultimate responsibility to something greater than self, its sense of the close relation between sex and service, and its successful embodiment of so many public

RICHBURG, DONALD RANDALL—Continued
and social aspects of current American life in a single and consistent action." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:49 Ag 5 '22 650w

"In the background of this story. Mr. Richberg has succeeded well, but in his characterization he has been less happy. The greatest value of the novel is not its intensity of dramatic incident, but its sincerity. As a story of revolt against deadening, humdrum life it is unconvincing but as a story of the revolt of a lawyer and politician against certain vested interests he feels to be unjust it is decidedly readable."

+ — Lit R p658 My 13 '22 200w

New Repub 32:202 O 18 '22 150w

"Realism, and with it goes a literary carefulness that lifts the book above the average. As a full-length portrait the book should securely establish for itself no small place among the genuine efforts of the season."

+ N Y Times p15 My 14 '22 60w

RICHMOND, GRACE LOUISE (SMITH) (MRS NELSON GUERNSEY RICHMOND). Four-square. 358p il $1.75 Doubleday [7s 6d Methuen]

22-18891

Mary Fletcher had been using her facile gifts with the pen to win cheap magazine successes before she found herself and learned to distinguish between the real, worth-while things of life and the glittering allurements of the city. Suspecting her own shortcomings she takes refuge in her native, small college town, to collect her thoughts. Between the boredom of the new and the challenge of the old life she soon finds herself at a crossroads with two human guideposts pointing in different directions. They are John Kirkwood, her editor, flattering her vanity and showing her the brilliant career of a popular writer in the city, and Mark Fenn, her childhood friend, now college professor, uncompromisingly pointing to the uphill road of true achievement. After an almost fatal crisis she learns to distinguish, during a slow recovery, "the light on the road" she must travel.

Booklist 19:88 D '22

"Altogether the volume is what one calls an 'interesting study in character development,' and if there seems to be a good deal of it, that is probably because it takes a soul a good while to grow." F. W. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p8 N 4 '22 520w

Cleveland p91 D '22

"In these days of agitation for clean literature it seems unfortunate that a writer whose work is as free from crudities as Mrs. Richmond's, whose plots are so fully at least the equal of the average, and whose narrative is so wholly free from offence, should not hold the attention of the large audience to whom she might appeal because of faults, which might, it would seem, be eradicated without undue difficulty."

+ — Lit R p93 O 7 '22 360w

"Mrs. Richmond's style fits her story exactly. One could not improve on it for the purpose." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p8 S 24 '22 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:533 D '22

"It is a pleasing work of the lighter kind of workmanship."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 300w

"It is a gentle tale which feminine readers who do not demand humour or excitement may enjoy."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p602 S 21 '22 100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

RICHMOND, MARY ELLEN. What is social case work? an introductory description. (Social work ser.) 268p $1 Russell Sage foundation

360 Social work

22-5436

A little book which gets down to the foundations and philosophy of social case work as practised in a genuinely professional spirit, the term "case" being used to signify a particular social situation or problem, not the person or persons concerned. Beginning with some illustrations of social case work met in actual practice, the treatment of which varied from two to six years, the author, who is director of the Charity organization department of the Russell Sage foundation, attempts a definition of social case work and its aims. She then passes in review some of the concrete forms of case work in present use and considers each in relation to certain permanent social institutions—the home, the school, the workshop, the hospital, and the court.

"The book is well written; the illustrations aptly selected, with a minimum of extraneous details. The library of no social worker or socially minded student is complete without this little book." J. H. S. Bossard

+ Ann Am Acad 102:209 J1 '22 620w

Booklist 18:216 Ap '22

"It is to be hoped that the technical title of this little volume will not limit its reading to those who consider themselves technical people. It is quite as well suited to the needs of the minister and the parish visitor as to the requirements of the social worker." F. E. J.

Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf Ser p6 F '22 740w

"The work is rich in illustrative material. It shows catholic reading in many fields, including sociology, philosophy, and psychology. Many good side lights are given on social work. Pertinent suggestions, thrown out almost as an aside in many cases, form some of the most valuable material in the book." M. R. Carroll

+ J Home Econ 14:289 Je '22 700w

"Miss Richmond's long experience in firsthand contact with the problems in this field lend unusual authority to her writings. The subject matter is so presented that it is wholly intelligible to interested laymen and at the same time it is an important addition to the library of the professional." E. F. Young

+ J Pol Econ 30:722 O '22 200w

"A very readable and stimulating description of social case-work. Religious educators will get much from this little book."

+ J Religion 2:334 My '22 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:267 Je '22

Pratt p13 autumn '22

St Louis 20:208 S '22

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 100w

Reviewed by P. E. Benjamin.
Survey 48:411 Je 15 '22 1250w

RIDDELL, GEORGE ALLARDICE RIDDELL, baron. Some things that matter. 199p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

374 Self-culture. Success 22-23921

In a series of essays the author states and illustrates the essentials of a sane and efficient mentality. After giving good advice on how to learn to concentrate, to observe, to read, to speak in public, to think, to judge of things, and on the importance of habit, he shows how good reasoning can be made habitual by following the methods of the law courts.

Bookm 56:359 N '22 80w

Reviewed by W. McAndrew

Educ R 64:452 D '22 250w

"After reading his book one cannot help wondering whether, perhaps, he is not a more subtle guide to success than he appears to be on the surface. His one point of resemblance to Samuel Smiles suggests that there may be a causal connection between platitudes and success."

+ — Nation and Ath 131:414 Je 17 '22 600w

"With any less illustrious name on its title page it is not likely that the book would have been a subject of comment, favourable or unfavourable, in this or any other public journal, for in no other respect is it noteworthy. However, it is a pleasant, good-tempered book, neither well-written nor badly written, neither interesting nor dull. It contains nothing to which anyone could possibly object, nor anything which anyone need wish to read. It is quite unpretentious and almost incredibly colourless, giving us scarcely a hint even of the author's general personality, and no indication at all of the qualities by which he made his great fortune."

— New Statesman 19:557 Ag 26 '22 2200w

Reviewed by Austin Hay
N Y Times p22 S 3 '22 1700w
St Louis 20:234 O '22

"Lord Riddell's book, while it contains a great deal that is obvious, also, and necessarily, contains a great deal that is very useful. Moreover, it avoids the offence of setting up a purely material conception of success as an ideal."

+ — Spec 129:50 J1 8 '22 1400w
Springf'd Republican p10 O 31 '22 1000w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 8 '22 200w

RIDEOUT, HENRY MILNER. Winter bell. 178p
 il $1.75 Duffield 22-7408

"Story of a clean, sturdy young backwoodsman, unjustly imprisoned for murder and how he keeps his sanity by learning the spiritual release which books give to the pent up spirit. Slight, but has excellent Down-East characterizations and an invigorating picture of the Maine woods in winter."—Cleveland

"The Captain is an original, a genuine creation. It is more amusement to listen to his loud voiced yarning, via Mr. Rideout, than to follow a dozen sheiks 'round Araby and back again." C. K. H.

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 1 '22 410w
Cleveland p34 My '22

"It has that minute fidelity which we recall in the writer's early fiction, to the Yankee vernacular. It is a pleasure to absent us from facility awhile in the enjoyment of its firm and unabashedly literate style." H. W. Boynton

+ — Ind 108:588 J1 8 '22 620w

"The plot itself is commonplace and the story meanders as if the author did not know just where he was headed; but at all times our interest is focussed on the central figure. It is an authentic picture of a certain type of man, and the leading figure stands out the more prominently because of the vividness with which his native northern woods are portrayed."

+ — Lit R p745 Je 17 '22 180w

"Tells an excellent story with some degree of literary excellence."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 30 '22 110w

"A well-knit tale. A charming vein of romance runs through the story."

+ Outlook 131:465 Je 12 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 J1 '22

RIESENBERG, FELIX. Standard seamanship for the merchant service. (Van Nostrand's nautical ser.) 959p il $7.50 Van Nostrand

656 Navigation. Merchant marine 22-11610

"Every operation of sailor work, from the clearing of the bilges to the study of the weather and the handling of the ship in high seas, is detailed from the viewpoint of one who is conscientious in performance of his duties and who realizes how considerable are the consequences that may follow upon his default. . . It differs from any other book of seamanship that I can recall in the attention directed to small matters, the initial lessons in the art of 'sailorizing,' that most writers on the subject are content to leave out as being already understood and familiar to the reader. In this respect the manual is particularly valuable to the young seaman of to-day, as it comes at a time when instruction in seamanship is rarely offered to the 'greenhorn' at sea; he is expected to 'pick up' his trade in the intervals of fetching and carrying for his elders."—Lit R

"One of the most interesting nautical manuals published."

+ Bookm 55:646 Ag '22 130w

"Comprehensive and extremely valuable this volume must be regarded. There is probably no topic of interest and importance to seamen which is not here discussed, from the point of view of the thoroughly competent and experienced navigator."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '22 520w

"Embracing every department of seamanship proper, the book shows evidence of careful planning and wise selection from competent sources. . . Capt. Riesenbergs 'Standard Seamanship' is doubly welcome, not only for the sound technics employed and advocated but for the wholesome atmosphere of professional brotherhood that is a feature of the book." D. W. Bone

+ Lit R p66 S 30 '22 800w

RIGGS, AUSTEN FOX. Just nerves; with an introd. by Henry Van Dyke. 87p 90c Houghton
 131 Mental physiology and hygiene. Nervous system—Diseases 22-19453

A physician writes this little book out of his experience with nervous invalids. He makes it clear that nervousness, which is the result of the victim's imperfect response to his social surroundings, is not only curable but avoidable. The prevention of this maladjustment must begin in childhood, when the seeds of nervousness are planted and the author shows how to detect and deal with the first symptoms.

Booklist 19:149 F '23

"Dr. Riggs maps out, in a sane, straightforward way, a plan of campaign which begins in childhood."

+ Bookm 56:643 Ja '23 100w

Boston Transcript p8 D 9 '22 160w

"The best thing about the book is its insistence on the reality of the mental life: nervousness and all the other mental goods and ills are just as real as the broken leg or the strong arm." E. G. Boring

+ New Repub 33:76 D 13 '22 550w

"This thesis is a bit too big to be demonstrated in an essay of this size, but readers will find here a pungent and convincing analysis of modern faults of adaptation to environment."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 30 '23 480w
Survey 49:sup204 N 1 '22 60w

RIHBANY, ABRAHAM MITRIE. Wise men from the east and from the west. 310p $2.50 Houghton

915 Civilization, Oriental. East and west 22-20296

Syrian by birth, but American by choice and a clergyman of the Unitarian church, the author offers an interpretation of the east to the west. He compares the oriental with the occidental type of mind, the differing religious and social tendencies and suggests how the two civilizations can "profitably to both of them, form points of spiritual contact with one another." Written from a viewpoint sympathetic to both, the book helps to explain the revolt of the east against western domination.

"This book represents a powerful onslaught on the whole civilization of the West. It also represents an equally powerful attack upon the West's commercial, political and religious policy in the East, and adds the emphatic corollary that the East repudiates alike that civilization and that policy, and that it demands and is bound to obtain its liberty of action." F. H. Snow

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 7 '23 1550w

"It is a remarkable story, but Mr. Rihbany is a remarkable man. This new book with its impartiality and general breadth will not only add to the esteem in which he is generally held, but will probably prove the most enlightening book of the season on this dark problem of the Near East."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 O 19 '22 780w

RILEY, FRANKLIN LAFAYETTE, ed. General Robert E. Lee after Appomattox. 250p il $2.50 (12s) Macmillan

B or 92 Lee, Robert Edward. Washington and Lee university 22-1050

The book is a semi-centennial memorial to General Robert E. Lee as president of Washington and Lee university at Lexington, Virginia. It contains contributions and personal reminiscences from the faculty and from all the living alumni that could be reached. These contributions reveal Robert E. Lee from every angle. Among them is a description of his death and funeral and of the mausoleum with the recumbent statue. The appendix reprints a letter from General Lee to Lord Acton in which the former states his views on constitutional freedom and government in the United States. The book is illustrated and indexed.

"The volume is rendered notable, not only by its preservation of many new scholastic facts in his life, but by the evidence that it offers of his solicitude for the welfare of his fellow-men; his lofty conception of the duties of American citizenship; his dignity, serenity and patience under defeat; and his far-sighted statesmanship." P. A. Bruce

+ Am Hist R 27:830 J1 '22 500w

"Some of these papers are simple reminiscences of men who were college boys under the Confederate general's administration. Bold, simple, plainly written documents, most of them, but from this hodgepodge of essays rises a picture that is unforgettable." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:65 Mr '22 90w

"Lee appears here in all the beauty of his fine character, but hardly as a public figure. The twilight is falling peacefully, almost imperceptibly, about him. We see him in the quiet precincts of the college, aiding, encouraging, directing. All this is well depicted in the volume which Professor Riley has edited."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 1 '22 260w
Cleveland p96 D '22

"In every way the volume is excellently done. It has, of course, the faults inherent in any such compilation, but, difficult as the task is in the case of Lee, it throws new light on him, as well as preserves in convenient and accessible form a considerable mass of material worthy of being saved." J. G. de R. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 Mr 26 '22 400w

Reviewed by Gamaliel Bradford

Lit R p25 S 16 '22 840w

"This being a memorial volume, it is inevitable that a considerable part of it should be made up of eulogy. And, sincere and touching though it be, eulogy is not reminiscence, it is not history. But the book also contains much that is fact—glimpses of the defeated chieftain that make even the casual reader not begrudge the space given over to eulogy—for these glimpses help to an understanding of the South's adoration of 'Marse Robert.'" G. Macadam

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 30 '22 2050w

Outlook 130:310 F '22 '22 40w

Pratt p33 autumn '22

R of Rs 65:557 My '22 90w

RINEHART, MARY (ROBERTS) (MRS STANLEY MARSHALL RINEHART). Breaking point. 356p $2 Doran

22-26762

"The story of a man in whom shock inhibits memory of the past and so makes possible a life totally unrelated to the existence that has gone before it. Mrs. Rinehart has skated over the surface of her mental problem and has worked her narrative out in terms of the familiar formula of the hero who regains possession of his submerged personality only to bury it forever. There is much talk of the 'wall' and the 'breaking point' and description of the slow process by which a lost individuality recovers itself, but the psychopathic interest of the story is completely overshadowed by its incident. The chronicle of Dick Livingstone, the young physician on the threshold of love and success, who suddenly discovers that he is not what he seems and sets forth regardless of the cost to unearth the truth, has the elements that make for popular favor."—Lit R

Booklist 19:22 O '22

"Without any question, 'The Breaking Point' is the most thoroughly absorbing novel for sheer story value that I have read in months. Written with a sure knowledge of the technique of plot building, an unflinching use of the dramatic, a deft sense of characterization, and a clever interweaving of sentiment, it again assures us that Mrs. Rinehart has an increasingly intuitive vision." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:89 S '22 400w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 26 '22 1000w

Cleveland p85 N '22

"This is Mary Roberts Rinehart at her very best. She has written a story of absorbing interest, and one in which the reader is kept almost to the final page in utter ignorance as to the outcome."

+ Daily News Rec p17 S 26 '22 310w

"It has enough of mystery to give it piquancy, enough of sentiment to give it appeal. It is improbable as a whole, but its parts dovetail sufficiently well to satisfy those unexact enough to accept its initial implausibility. But Mrs. Rinehart has not lived up to the possibilities of her story. She has not presented a searching character study, and she has failed to make the reader share in the anguish of spirit of the man who goes down into the black night of mental shock. She has produced an interesting yarn but a shallow novel." Amy Loveman

+ Lit R p835 J1 29 '22 520w

"An old-fashioned novel for old-fashioned readers. The hero, with the advantage of a dissociated personality, becomes the basis of a plot such as Wilkie Collins would have framed. The other characters have no obligation except to provide that novel-readers' satisfaction so well understood by Miss Braddon and E. P. Roe."

New Repub 31:365 Ag 23 '22 80w

"For all its highly realistic background, it is not a very convincing plot, and one watches its evolution and evolutions with admiration for the skill and ingenuity of its manufacturer rather than with any very deep interest in its characters or keen anxiety regarding their fate. The tale lacks those humorous touches which its author has so often employed; but it is interesting, and often entertaining, while the surprise which immediately precedes the conventional happy ending is well led up to." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p19 J1 30 '22 750w

"The action is so smooth and continuous that nowhere is credibility strained to the breaking point; it is only by pausing to consider that one sees it is intrinsically impossible; that the long arm of coincidence and the main strength of the author have both been employed to hoist the plot over its difficulties." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p5 J1 30 '22 1350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:462 N '22

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"A recurrent state of irritation or suspense, an alternation of homely and adventurous incident, the whole soured in a wash of antiseptic emotion, mark the high-water of narrative skill as it is at present most appreciated. But there is certainly a pleasure in seeing anything efficiently done, and this, like most of the importations from America, is points ahead of our native product as regards workmanship."

+ Spec 129:643 N 4 '22 110w

"One regrets the lack of character drawing in this well told story, and the humorous and sympathetic touches that one is accustomed to expect from Mrs. Rinehart are absent, but of plot and action there is abundance."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a S 3 '22 390w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p601 S 21
'22 210w

Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

RITCHIE, ROBERT WELLES. Dust of the desert. 300p $1.75 Dodd

22-17775

"Grant Hickman in response to a mysterious summons from his army buddy, [comes to the Mexican border] glad of any excuse to leave his New York office, so uninspiring after his life as a captain overseas. Self-sufficient, yet chivalrous, he meets on the train Benicia, a Spanish girl whose spirit is as fiery as her flaming red hair, reminiscent of a distant Irish ancestor and the insignia of a family curse. With a studied nonchalance Grant incurs the hatred of Col. Hamilcar Urgo, Benicia's villainous cousin and suitor, whose sinister power is far reaching on the Mexican border. Grant realizes the venom of the little Spaniard when he is arrested on his first night in a Mexican town and sent in a chain gang across the desert to die. But he does not quite die. He lives to follow a course of love and adventure in which the ancestral curse overshadowing the beautiful Benicia and the search for the treasure of the lost mission are strangely intertwined. Swift action brings this stirring tale to a climax in which Col. Urgo meets one of the most delightfully complete deaths in fiction."—Lit R

"Besides being a love story gratefully free from modern problems, the novel presents an uncommonly clear picture of present conditions in Mexico, and of the impunity with which the Mexicans insult and imprison citizens of the United States. And it holds descriptions of the desert so vivid, so sympathetic, that the reader feels the spell of its color, its silence."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '22 450w

"There is a certain virility to the style of this romance which renders it more readable than most of its type."

+ Lit R p71 S 30 '22 250w

+ N Y Times p10 O 8 '22 580w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p6 S 10 '22 200w

ROBBINS, HAYES. Labor movement and the farmer; with a preface by Kenyon L. Butterfield. 195p $1.25 Harcourt

331 Labor and laboring classes 22-20185

The book comes under the "Farmer's bookshelf" series edited by Kenyon L. Butterfield. Its aim is to break down the farmer's usual opposition or indifference to labor unions; to show him that his interests are bound up with the interests of other industrial groups; that farm and factory are bound inseparably together. It describes sympathetically, but dispassionately and accurately, just what the labor movement is, shows how and why workingmen have organized for the last hundred years, why they do the things they do, how the remedies they have tried actually work in practice, and what "industrial democracy" really means. It gives a concise statement of the various branches of the movement here and in Europe, tells who its leaders are, and the latest programs of trade unionism, socialism, the I. W. W. and communism. Index.

Lit R p156 O 28 '22 310w

"Mr. Robbins has done his work well. That he is an attorney and not a judge is plain throughout the book, but he impresses one as a fair pleader and as one who believes in his case." E. E. Miller

+ Nation 115:sup636 D 6 '22 430w

R of Rs 66:561 N '22 130w

"In his definition of the aims of the various labor and political factions, Mr. Robbins intrudes no personal opinion; the account is objective and impartial."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 N 21 '22 350w

"The farmer will here secure the essential information about the labor situation past and present to enable him to form a wiser judgment concerning his attitude toward farm labor, the proposal for an alliance between labor and farmers, and an ideal national policy for labor. Mr. Robbins has accomplished his function admirably in a small space and has placed the present reviewer, at any rate, in debt to him." J. M. Gillette

+ Survey 49:395 D 15 '22 230w

ROBERTS, CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS.

In the morning of time. 311p $1.90 Stokes

22-7099

In the morning of time dwelt Gröm and A-ya, his mate, in the caves of the people of the Little Hills. The earth was still in its formative period. Terrible and uncouth beasts roamed at large, and fought each other, or the cavemen when necessary, for the supremacy. Gröm, altho not the chief, was a strong warrior and advanced for his times. On one of their hunting trips Gröm and A-ya discovered fire, and the people of the Little Hills became the children of the Shining One. Among their other discoveries were the bow and arrow, cooked food and the making of rafts, so, when the great migration of the animals began a remnant of the tribe, led by Gröm and his mate, escaped to a new country.

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 8 '22 500w

"To the lover of stories 'In the Morning of Time' will appeal because of the absorbing interest of its characters and the adventures they undergo; and to the person who looks with a scientific eye upon the Old Stone Age it will be attractive because it recreates with vividness and reality one of the most fascinating periods in the history of the world." S. A. Coblentz

+ Lit R p543 Ap 1 '22 680w

"There is no doubt about Mr. Robert's ability in handling prehistoric animal and human life in a manner which will hold the reader from the first to the last page, and the more analytical the mind of the reader is the more enjoyment will be gotten from life in 'the world in the morning of time.'"

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 26 '22 390w

Spring'd Republican p7a Je 25 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS. Why Europe leaves home; a true account of the reasons which cause central Europeans to overrun America. 356p il $3 Bobbs

325.7 Immigration. Europe—Social conditions. Refugees, Political 22-7032

"Most writers on the immigration problem have been content to begin their researches with the arrival of the immigrant at Ellis Island. Mr. Roberts coming to the subject from a different angle, has sought in Central Europe the reasons that actuate so many of the inhabitants of that continent to come to America. His study is not a reassuring one. He leaves the reader with the feeling that if our government is to exercise any real control over immigration, Congress must enact far more radical measures than have thus far been proposed." —R of Rs

Am Pol Sci R 16:529 Ag '22 70w

Booklist 18:312 Je '22

"The book is interestingly written, abounds in entertaining anecdotes. Unfortunately, in spite of its serious purpose, the work is marred by a strained and sophomoric humor that tends to distract the reader's attention and to make him suspect the author's sincerity."

+ Bookm 55:429 Je '22 190w

"Mr. Roberts is a vigorous writer, who conceals nothing from fear of injuring some one's racial or religious prejudices. He makes no pretence to fine writing. He even employs semi-humorous, satirical, even slangy methods of imparting his information and follows at once with his ideas of remedy with powerful blows, as with a sledge-hammer. Mr. Roberts minces no words; he keeps nothing back which can inform the reader concerning conditions affecting immigration on the European side of the Atlantic. He utters words of warning, while he hesitates not to jest at those in Washington or elsewhere, who allow maudlin sentimentality to warp sound judgment. 'Why Europe Leaves Home' is a powerful document that the sentimentalists of our country would do well to read, and having read, to heed."

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS—Continued
 + Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '22 720w

"The style of the book is unique—so delightfully informal that it sparkles with a lively personality and enthusiasm. The author's words ring with the sincerity of an interested observer, but they lack the stability and depth which would mark them as the convictions of a student."

+ — Cath World 116:574 Ja '23 300w
Cleveland p53 Ag '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:353 Ap 8 '22 90w

"The volume would better be described as a hodge-podge of recent alarms and assumptions about immigration, swallowed whole by an author without sympathy for or appreciation of anyone but an Arrow-Collared American, and set forth in Smart Alec newspaperese."

— Nation 114:780 Je 28 '22 440w

Nation and Ath 31:718 Ag 26 '22 200w

Reviewed by E. S. Bagger

— New Repub 30:349 My 17 '22 1050w

"Keenly observant, vividly and breezily written, often humorous and always sound." Julian Street

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 30 '22 2250w

Pratt p9 autumn '22

R of Rs 65:671 Je 28 '22 100w

St Louis 20:206 S '22

"Of all the prohibition propagandists whose writings have come our way Mr. Roberts is at once the most human and the most entertaining. He writes with gusto, and thoroughly enjoys himself while so doing. He is violently prejudiced, but even his most bitter attacks are redeemed by a sense of humour. His exaggerations and puns are blatant, but you cannot help smiling at him."

+ — Sat R 134:630 O 28 '22 1000w

Spec 129:1014 D 30 '22 90w

"A book that abounds in backstairs gossip and in generalizations from casual experiences and contacts. There is not the slightest attempt to answer the question put in the title." B. L.

— Survey 48:531 Jl 15 '22 320w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p547 Ag 24 '22 160w

"At times Mr. Roberts's ambition to get a joke into every paragraph becomes very fatiguing to the reader; but irritation at his facetiousness is, after all, overcome by the vividness and vigour of his narration."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p574 S 14 '22 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:179 Jl '22

ROBERTS, RICHARD. What's best worth saving: a present day discussion of Christian faith and practice. 131p $1.25 Doran

230 Christianity 22-14833

Ten brief addresses, delivered for the most part to college students by the minister of the American Presbyterian church of Montreal. Such subjects as creeds, faith, evil, spiritual freedom and the business of life are discussed from a modern point of view and reverently.

"This book will present little 'worth saying' to Catholics."

— Cath World 116:572 Ja '23 90w

"A simple and thoughtful discussion, beautifully written."

+ Nation 115:312 S 27 '22 50w

"The [address] on Spiritual Freedom alone would rank the author among the foremost hortatory writers of our day; but the other essays likewise are of much strength and beauty."

+ Survey 48:412 Je 15 '22 60w

Wis Lib Bul 18:270 D '22

ROBERTSON, DENNIS HOLME. Money. 182p $1.25 Harcourt [5s Cambridge univ. press]

332 Money. Prices. Foreign exchange

22-8248

The book is the second volume of the "Cambridge economic handbooks series" under the editorship of J. M. Keynes. Its object is to explain the mechanism of money and the pressing monetary problems of the present day. The author points out, both in the introduction to and in the conclusion of his subject, that money as a factor in the general theory of values is not the most important one, and that the real economic problems of society lie in providing for adequate production and equitable distribution of real values. Contents: The merits and drawbacks of money; The value of money; The quantity of money; Bank money and the price-level; The war and the price-level; The question of the standard; The foreign exchanges; Monetary policy; Index.

"The book is well worth reading and might very profitably be put in the hands of beginning students in the subject, but the treatment is too summary to make the volume fully satisfactory as a text." N. R. Whitney

+ — Am Econ R 12:662 D '22 450w

Booklist 18:349 Jl '22

Bookm 55:646 Ag '22 130w

Boston Transcript p5 My 17 '22 450w

"On account of this slavish adherence to the quantity theory the book leaves upon the mind of the critical reader the impression of superficiality. Meritorious as this book is in many respects it will not greatly help in leading the world out of the monetary slough of despond in which it finds itself." W. A. Scott

— + J Pol Econ 31:143 F '22 750w

"Orthodox, without being reactionary or stupid, and relieved by a delightful sense of humor."

+ Nation 115:443 O 25 '22 40w

"Can be read with complete understanding by intelligent persons who make no pretence of being political economists; for he explains with admirable lucidity the few technical terms he is compelled to use, while by the aid of quaintly attractive illustrations he forces readers to follow his trains of exact reasoning."

+ Nation and Ath 31:597 Jl 29 '22 380w

"He writes clearly, but rather too abstractly for the general reader to whom this book appears to be addressed. A little more illustration would have made his book a good deal more useful."

New Statesman 18:684 Mr 18 '22 500w

Pratt p11 autumn '22

Survey 48:250 My 13 '22 170w

ROBERTSON, JOHN MACKINNON. Shakespeare canon. 205p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

$22.33 Shakespeare, William—Authorship

22-16720

The thesis of the book is that in "Henry V," in "Julius Caesar" and in "Richard III" there is comparatively little of Shakespeare's original work. "Richard III" is assigned to Marlowe, an attribution which is admitted by many critics. The author finds traces of Marlowe's hand in the other two plays and allots passages from the three plays in question to other Elizabethan and pre-Elizabethan dramatists.

"Mr. Robertson has written a very learned book. . . The mere scholar stands amazed at the virtuosity of this surprising writer. He can spot you a line of Marlowe, Jonson, Chapman, Heywood, whom you will anywhere. Indeed poor Kit Marlowe, with his scarce seven years of authorship, is much overworked. . . Let us take our Shakespeare as he is and be thankful for him. None of us can make him better, much the least by processes such as these." F. E. Schelling

— + Lit R p5 S 9 '22 900w

"Beyond his general conclusions that 'Richard III.' is substantially a Marlowe play, we are unable to follow Mr. Robertson. When he endeavors to separate the threads contributed by different hands—Kyd's and Heywood's—to Marlowe's carpet he passes beyond our competence, and, to our sense, his verbal clues are too slight to be dependable. In general, Mr. Robertson relies too much on isolated coincidence of phrasing, and above all on the statistical test of double endings." J. M. Murry

— + Nation and Ath 30:865 Mr 11 '22 940w

Reviewed by J. M. Murry

Nation and Ath 30:897 Mr 28 '22

"In the past this critic has done very notable work and this present instalment is worthy of what has gone before. The difficulties of the task have been great, for not only has the investigator had to face the shocked obstinacy of the traditionalists but he has had to formulate for himself a body of principles of what may be called literary connoisseurship." S. C. Chew

— + New Repub 32:24 Ag 30 '22 1550w

New Statesman 18:706 Mr 25 '22 700w
Pratt p26 autumn '22

ROBERTSON, JOHN WOOSTER. Edgar A. Poe; a psychopathic study. 331p il $3.50 Putnam
B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allen 23-306

A previous study of Poe by the same author, privately printed, constitutes the body of the present volume, with additional material bearing on the abnormal phases of Poe's mentality, the author's further investigations and such corrections and additions as have been suggested by leading Poe scholars. In view of the publication of certain distorted and malicious memoirs, on the one hand, and unwarranted extenuations on the other, no defense of Poe is attempted except where the facts have been misrepresented or where there have been absolute misstatements. The psychoneurotic heredity of Poe with its effects on his character and genius, are carefully traced.

"The first part of the Robertson study is devoted to the psychopathic problem; the second is mainly bibliographic, though with frequent references to the 'case.' In both there is a manifest desire to get at the truth and to dispense with theories and apologetics. . . The volume does not restore Poe's reputation to one for sobriety, but it brings his moral character a little nearer to normalcy, and substitutes intelligent sympathy for unintelligent criticism." G. Douglas

— + Bookm 55:423 Je '22 1250w

"This work with its sound and well carried out scientific purpose, is a biography of the most puzzling figure in American literary history." W. S. Braithwaite

— + Boston Transcript p5 Ja 6 '23 1500w

"He carries us through a somewhat portentous rearrangement of familiar biographical matter." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p7 Ja 14 '22 520w

Reviewed by J. Macy

Nation 116:192 F 14 '23 600w

"Dr. Robertson's Psychopathic Study leaves the reader in much the same position as it found him in regard to an interpretation of Poe's personality, his pathology and his genius. As a documentation of many facts about Poe this volume will be welcome. As a contribution to Poe's psychology it is negligible." Augusta Shuford

— + N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '23 2600w

"Repetitious, verbose, ill organized but interesting none the less, if only for the mass of material collected." Burton Rascoe

— + N Y Tribune p22 Ja 7 '23 300w

ROBERTSON, WILLIAM SPENCE. History of the Latin-American nations. 617p $4 (18s) Appleton

980 Latin America—History. South America—History 22-13531

The book contains a description of the physical features and the aborigines of those portions of the New World which were colonized by Spaniards and Portuguese; of the conditions in Spain and Portugal which affected their colonial enterprises; of the romantic era of discovery and conquest and of the Spanish and Portuguese penetration into the American wilderness; of the administration and society under the old régime; and of the separation of the colonies from their motherlands. It also includes a survey of the development of the Latin-American nations from the achievement of independence to the present time, with an account of their political parties, constitutional history and existing governments, their international disputes, and economic, social, and intellectual development. There are numerous maps, a bibliography and suggestions for further reading and study. Index.

"Valuable as the work is, and a testimonial to the scholarship and competence of the author, its very exhaustiveness may interfere somewhat with its usefulness as a text-book, though not as a book of reference." W. R. Shepherd

— + Am Hist R 28:343 Ja '23 800w

"The book lacks form, in style and in substance. The narrative too often sounds like a succession of short, scattered notes hastily strung together, a catalogue of facts unilluminated by interpretative comment or clarifying generalizations. The commonplace or obvious is stressed, while the peculiar or significant is slurred over or forgotten. Especially in the chapters on the colonial era the material, excellent in itself, in arrangement seems haphazard and confusing. The story, consequently, is lacking in color, sometimes elusive in outline and occasionally misleading. On the other hand, it affords the best and most complete text we possess on the subject, and for so much we are under obligation to its author." C. H. Haring

— + Am Pol Sci R 17:133 F '23 360w

Bookm 56:514 D '22 100w

Boston Transcript p9 Ag 16 '22 160w

"He has perhaps written the best book of its kind dealing with the history of Latin-America in any language. He has forever removed one of the best excuses for ignorance of Latin American history on the part of the North American people, and it is hoped that they will soon avail themselves of the opportunity to read this timely volume." J. F. Rippey

— + New Repub 33:sup4 N 29 '22 680w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:523 N '22

St Louis 21:17 Ja '23

"As adequate and readable an account as is available."

— + Springf'd Republican p12 N 21 '22 220w

"The book is bound to be rather of the nature of a catalogue of names, dates, and events. It is, in fact, better fitted to be kept on the shelf for reference than to be read for pleasure. But for the purpose which we suppose it was meant to serve it can be heartily recommended."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 14 '22 310w

ROBERTSON SCOTT, J. W. Foundations of Japan. 446p il $6 Appleton [24s Murray]
915.2 Japan—Description and travel (Eng ed 22-1291S)

The book is the outcome of notes made during journeys of six thousand miles in the rural districts as a basis for a sounder knowledge of the Japanese people. The author went to Japan to study the countryman, not the townified, Europeanised and educated Japanese. He lived among them for four years and the questions he set about to answer were: "What is their health of mind and body? By what social and moral principles and prejudices are they swayed? To what extent are they adequate to the demand that is made and is likely to be made upon them? In what respects are they the masters of their lives or are mastered? In what ways are they still open to Western influences? And in what directions are they now inclined to trust to 'themselves alone'?" (Introd.) Statistical matter is referred to the appendices. There are numerous illustrations and an index.

ROBERTSON SCOTT, J. W.—Continued

"The book is based upon personal observations and experiences which the author has presented in a most delightful manner."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:722 N '22 150w

Booklist 19:81 D '22

Boston Transcript p7 My 6 '22 800w

Cleveland p94 D '22

Lit R p389 Ja 13 '23 480w

Nation and Ath 31:280 My 20 '22 1000w

"The result is in many cases a curious mosaic of random thoughts, greatly satisfying to one who has lived in Japan, but probably not a little confusing to one who has never been there and is reading for enlightenment. In other chapters, however, there is a sustained and serious discussion of some broad aspect of Japanese life. In all cases the author writes with a freshness and accuracy which bespeak a full knowledge and a discriminating judgment."

+ Nature 110:538 O 21 '22 450w

Reviewed by Julian Street

+ N Y Times p22 JI 2 '22 900w

"The author simply sets down his notes in the same random manner in which he took them. Consequently it is not so much a clearly defined interpretation as a detailed description of rural Japan which one gets from his book. His material is voluminous. The author's more technical observations on Japanese industry and agriculture are reserved for the appendices. The body of the text is essentially a narrative of personal experiences and impressions." W. H. Chamberlin

N Y Tribune p5 Je 18 '22 380w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:371 JI '22

Pratt p29 autumn '22

"This handsome, ably-written and well-illustrated book possesses immense interest, because it deals with a field of investigation in Japan which, as its author quite rightly states, no other writer has explored. Mr. Scott sought to probe beneath the surface, and succeeded in getting to know the hopes and fears, the beliefs and the outlook of the Japanese peasant, which he discloses and discusses very interestingly in his book—a good book, and one that it will do everybody good to read."

+ Sat R 133:467 My 6 '22 1000w

"Very readable and candid book, well fortified with statistics and summaries of native views. . . The book is admirably illustrated and may be commended as the work of an honest and competent observer."

+ Spec 128:689 Je 3 '22 1200w

"Apart from its unquestionable value as a contribution to comparative sociology, Mr. Scott's work comes most opportunely to modify certain popular and erroneous impressions of modern Japan, which have been formed (especially in the United States) upon the superficial observations of city-roving travellers, or upon the inevitable racial prejudices of political propaganda."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p484 JI 27 '22 1050w

ROBINSON, EDWIN ARLINGTON. Collected poems. 591p $3.50 Macmillan

811

22-26159

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

"Not since William Vaughn Moody's poems and dramas were collected in the definitive edition after his death, has there been a more important or distinguished contribution to American verse than Edwin Arlington Robinson's latest volume, the fruits of thirty years." Florence Converse

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf F '22 500w

Booklist 18:182 Mr '22

"Mr. Robinson is the one American poet who compels, rather than invites, consideration. We may like or dislike him, we may both like and dislike him, but his accents are too authentic, his aloofness too certain, to give our spirits the choice whether to attend or not." E: Saplr

+ Freeman 5:141 Ap 19 '22 1660w

Lit D p38 D 24 '21 70w

"He is the supreme psychologist among the poets of America. His collected poems are a mine of first-hand experience greatly shared."

W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p409 F 11 '22 2100w

"It offers in its five hundred and ninety pages the best of modern American poetry, a wealth of unique and individual matter that will slowly and surely penetrate the consciousness of the American poetry-reading public." H. S. Gorman

+ New Repub 29:311 F 8 '22 2400w

Reviewed by J. J. Reilly

Spring'd Republican p7a My 28 '22 740w

Wis Lib Bul 18:73 Mr '22

"No contemporary English poet has his insight into character, his intellectual beauty, his exquisite sense of form." Conrad Aiken

+ Yale R n s 11:632 Ap '22 170w

ROBINSON, FRANK ALFRED. Mastered men. 256p $2 Doran

22-9652

"Mastered men" is a collection of short stories telling of the regeneration thru the Gospel of human derelicts in West Canadian mining camps. In his introduction to the book Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) says of them that they are a true account of events that have happened in the author's personal experience. Contents: Old Ken's round-up; Charl; The banner mines; The "hop"; "Thy touch has still its ancient power"; "If a man be overtaken"; The superintendent's visit; The cookee; The regeneration of Bill Sanders; The snake-room; The bush fire; Ruth and the prodigal; The cord of love; Nell's home-going; The hermit; The making of Ross K.

Simple little stories are they. But their sincerity disarms criticism. And to those interested to read them, they must give inspiration."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 20 '22 130w

"Those who, like the author, take Scripture literally will find these well-told—if seemingly improbable—tales pleasant reading."

— Lit R p609 Ap 22 '22 90w

"There is a religious note in the book that is obvious and the tales must be catalogued as inspirational. But at that, they are not tracts in any sense of the word. The New West is painted here and the author, who is quite evidently setting down true stories for the most part, manages to portray some of the derelicts of the New West in vivid fashion."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 9 '22 90w

ROBINSON, JAMES HOWARD. Development of the British Empire. 502p $3.50 Houghton

942 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Colonies

22-20306

A history of the growth and administration of Great Britain's overseas empire from the establishment of the first permanent settlement at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1607. Special emphasis is placed on the developments of the last one hundred years and the changes resulting from the World war. The commercial as well as the political side of British expansion is treated, and recent movements for autonomy in India and Egypt are summarized. Each chapter is provided with a bibliographical note and there is a statistical appendix showing by diagram political relations and distribution of populations within the empire. Maps. Index.

"The facts set down are to be found in every adequate history of Great Britain, but they are here assembled with a view to a unified account of empire development; the work, moreover, though done by an American, is commendably objective and impartial."

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 29 '22 580w

"This compact volume is a model of historical summary. A considerable portion of this book necessarily traverses ground that has already been covered by the historical text-books. Even so, it is of service to the student to get so well-balanced a grouping and so concise a survey of the essential facts in the history of British imperial development." H. W. Horwill

+ Nation 115:sup634 D 6 '22 1300w

ROBINSON, LOUIS NEWTON Penology in the United States. 344p $3 Winston

365 Prisons—United States 21-21557

"Beginning with a survey of penological science through the centuries, this book reviews the American attitude toward criminals, describes the various institutions in which they are punished, points out defects of treatment and suggests remedies. Dr. Robinson puts the zeal of a reformer, as well as the care of a scientific observer, into his account of the situation, and what he saw as a student of it comes out strongly in his recommendations. All prisons in a State, Dr. Robinson holds, should be under the supervision of the State Department of Education, the prison work being directed by men thoroughly imbued with educational ideas. The choice of reformatory officials should be made on the basis of their ability 'to make men out of what is in some instances very unpromising material.' Prisons should be 'laboratories for testing out our theories of vocational education.'"—Boston Transcript

"A noteworthy contribution to the literature of prison reform. While the book is primarily intended for college students of social institutions, it offers the general public a means of becoming acquainted with an important part of our social mechanism. The book maintains the high standard set by the author's previous volumes."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:344 My '22 90w

"It is a pleasure to discover that the author has shown along with accurate knowledge of past conditions and earlier literature on his subject, a wide breadth of information as to existing institutions and methods and has been able to combine these in an interesting and stimulating survey. He appreciates the difficulties under which prison officials labor and yet is able to criticize. His fairness of view will commend him to all readers." Carl Kelsey

+ Ann Am Acad 101:306 My '22 550w

Booklist 18:312 Je '22

Boston Transcript p6 F 25 '22 900w

"Mr. Robinson's book has passed through the somewhat chilling medium of a mind evidently disposed to be scholastic, and therefore it does not present quite as grisly a picture of our penal system as a more realistic treatment would have revealed; but it is rich in facts—facts that should be dynamite to an idiotic and outworn mode of caring for human beings." W. D. Lane

+ Freeman 5:237 My 17 '22 780w

Reviewed by G. P. Wyckoff

Int J Ethics 33:110 O '22 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:472 N '22

"The science of punishment here appears completely surveyed. How the treatment of the prisoner has historically developed is shown, the more modern and scientific methods are explained, and conclusions are drawn from the experience. The work is a thorough and accurate analysis of facts and at the same time progressive, even at times idealistic, in its viewpoint. It will, therefore, be found suitable both as a textbook for students and as a book of information for workers in prison and reformatory." C. L. Chute

+ Survey 48:82 Ap 15 '22 1050w

ROCHE, ARTHUR SOMERS. More honorable man. 290p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hodder & S.] 22-21106

Two men start life on equal terms of ability, and opportunity, and both love the same girl. The one, Jim Willoughby, is a success in the accepted sense of the word, marries the girl, Ramsey, and becomes the richest man in the world. The other, Sam Foyle, expends and sacrifices himself for others and is counted a failure. The story tells how Jim wins his successes, after the most approved manner of American business, always within the law; how Sam yields every advantage to shield his beloved Ramsey from hurt and is ever ready to jump into the breach to right a wrong done by another. The one symbolizes the America of to-day; the other, that brighter, more idealistic America of the future. The one takes more than he gives; the other gives more than he takes. The story has an undercurrent of sarcastic commentary on present-day conditions.

Boston Transcript p1 N 18 '22 1100w

"The book moves swiftly, but it has depth and insight too." Hildegard Hawthorne
Int Bk R p70 D '22 30w

"The plot offers every opportunity for a vivid presentment; and yet Mr. Roche chooses not to unwind a coil of life, but to expound and comment with a labored and almost fussy assiduity. Character does not reveal its mystery in action and appearance. It shines darkly through an interminable author's disquisition affecting the gestures of profundity. In his admirable intention to show the characters from every angle and philosophy Mr. Roche assumes the office of the exhibitor who emits a sound of words between the spectator and the drama."

— Lit R p272 D 2 '22 220w

"The story is set in a matrix of author's comment on America with its hypocrisy, illusions, and jaccal patriotism, which has a faint flavor of Carlyle—and is honest and whole-some."

+ New Repub 33:154 Ja 3 '23 160w

"A novel so much out of the ordinary routine of fiction, so fresh and individual in its viewpoint and its methods, and so interesting in both theme and treatment that its reading is a very great pleasure."

+ N Y Times p20 N 5 '22 850w

"Reads as if it had been written by a visitor from Mars who learned all that he knew of both our life and our language from the yellower kind of Sunday papers." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p8 N 19 '22 200w

"It is not a notable work, but it has many entertaining qualities."

— + Springf'd Republican p5a D 10 '22 450w

RODO, JOSE ENRIQUE. Ariel; tr. with an introductory essay by F. J. Stimson. 150p $1.25 Houghton

196 Social ethics. Democracy 22-19982

This little book is a translation of the work of a Uruguayan writer which first appeared some twenty years ago. It is an eloquent call to youth to follow the cult of Ariel rather than of Caliban, to be guided by the spirit of idealism and beauty instead of materialism and self-interest. Democracy is made to bear a large share of the blame for the triumph of Caliban over Ariel and in particular the spirit of America is held responsible.

"This little book is ranked as one of the most important literary manifestations of South America and at the same time has done more to influence public opinion against the United States than any organized system of propaganda could have done." S. E. Leavitt

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 N 12 '22 700w

"In spite of the faults, Mr. Stimson's 'Ariel' is nevertheless commendable. It is so partly because of its general felicity of phrasing and partly because it reflects after all a great deal of the beauty of the original. It may be recommended to all who are interested in Latin America and to all who are interested in life."

RODO, JOSE ENRIQUE—Continued
F: B. Luquiens

+ — Lit R p398 Ja 20 '23 1200w

"Emerson and Ruskin have long since provided us with statements of the case of Ariel versus Caliban, and Rodó in English cannot add one paragraph to their briefs for the plaintiff, Beauty. When he turns prosecutor and arraigns the culprit, his indictment so obviously lacks all knowledge of the fundamental facts of the case that this disenchanted and disillusioned epoch will be moved to smiles rather than indignation. His preaching is inadequate to the plight of a world in transition." Ernest Boyd

— Nation 115:528 N 15 '22 350w

"It is true that Rodó's essay creates a mood of spiritual expansion, a yearning after beauty, and a feeling of intellectual exaltation, which, in the nature of things, dissipate themselves and return to that eternal sink of good intentions, at zero absolute, where so many hopes and inspirations finally go. But it is not true to say that Rodó's discourse leads nowhere; for it leads back to Rodó himself, and he that touches Ariel touches a man." L. Mumford

New Repub 33:299 F 7 '23 1050w

"It is neither his most mature nor most profound work, though it holds a beauty perhaps unmatched in his later writing. But it suggests the essential principles which he later expanded into a consistent philosophic statement. Because 'Ariel' indicates the central ideas of his philosophy the book is a peculiarly fitting introduction to the habit of his thought." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '22 2600w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

Outlook 132:673 D 13 '22 1750w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p792 D 7 '22 950w

ROGERS, ALLEN. Practical tanning; a handbook of modern practice and processes as applied in the manufacture of leather and allied products. 699p il $10 Baird

675 Tanning 22-9064

"Presentation of American methods, sufficiently comprehensive to constitute a reference treatise on the subject. Includes chapters on artificial leather and on chemical analysis. Based on Louis A. Flemming's 'Practical tanning.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Cleveland p78 S '22

"Dr. Rogers is well known for his writings on chemical technology, and as an account of recent American practice his book will prove interesting to English technologists."

+ Nature 110:840 D 23 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:346 Jl '22

Pratt p24 summer '22

ROGERS, ARTHUR KENYON. English and American philosophy since 1800, a critical survey. 468p $3.50 Macmillan

192 Philosophy, American. Philosophy, English 22-9955

The author frankly states in his preface that this book is not a history of English and American philosophy for the last century and a quarter, but rather a critical review based upon the author's personal attitude, which is that "belief, rather than experience, is the starting point of our cognitive contact with the world." From the standpoint of his own philosophy, clearly stated and strongly defended, he reviews the philosophical systems of other thinkers. Contents: Scottish realism; The utilitarians; Authority and reason in theology; Naturalism and evolution; Absolute idealism; Personal idealism, pan-psychism, and realism; Pragmatism; Neo-realism. Index to authors. Bibliography.

Bookm 56:103 S '22 180w

"Much that he tells us is, of course, not new, especially in the historical part of the book, but the tenets of the various schools are set forth in a fashion both detached and objective—they are invariably viewed with a sympathetic and an understanding eye. The critical part, while acute, is distinguished by its dispassionateness and by its truly philosophical temper."

+ Cath World 116:258 N '22 250w

"It will be particularly useful in that it brings into connection with philosophy in the more technical sense figures and movements representing the influence of science, philosophy, and 'thought' in general, in the field of literature, of religion, of political and social inquiry. . . The last four chapters, constituting over half of the book, furnish the most compact and complete synopsis of recent English and American philosophy with which the reviewer is acquainted."

A. G. A. Balz

+ J Philos 20:76 F 1 '23 1600w

"The conception of philosophy which Professor Rogers holds is rather traditional and very limited in scope. The great issues of the methods of science and of social life are passed over. But it is not necessary to accept this conception of philosophy to find his analysis stimulating even in the case of philosophers like Bentham and Santayana, for whom he lacks sufficient intellectual sympathy." M. R. Cohen

+ — New Repub 32:204 O 18 '22 460w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:466 N '22

"His survey of English and American philosophy, in all its meanderings, has all the clearness and distinction that could be asked of a critical study. The author's opinions are never obtrusive, and although 'more empirical than the empiricists' his attitude even towards the rationalists is intensely judicial."

+ Spec 129:643 N 4 '22 150w

"Prof. Rogers's criticism proceeds from an essentially humanistic point of view which is not, perhaps, very clearly defined, but which, approaching, as it does, that of the critical lay reader, makes a luminous background for the examination of others' ideas. Insight, impartiality and soundness of appraisal are brought to this task."

+ Springfd Republican p8 My 29 '22 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 4 '23 1550w

ROGERS, WILLIAM ALLEN. World worth while; a record of "Auld acquaintance." 305p il $3 Harper

B or 92 Caricatures and cartoons 22-18773

In his introduction to this book of an illustrator's reminiscences, Booth Tarkington says of the author that he never saw a picture drawn by W. A. Rogers without thinking what an interesting and charming man stood behind the pictures—a man who seemed to know pretty much everything that was going on, and to know the people too, who made the things go on. This verdict is borne out by the book, whose memories go back to a time when the newspaper artist worked without the aid of the camera. The author tells how the pictures were made, of the people with whom they brought him in contact, and of the colleagues with whom he worked. The illustrations are the author's own.

Booklist 19:83 D '22

"The reminiscent artist is generally lacking in the one quality in which he should excel—that of perspective. In this Mr. Rogers seems to me exceptionally strong. His keen sense of relative values is shown in the personal anecdotes to which he devotes so much space. He looks back to the happenings of fifty years ago with marvelously clear vision and describes them with the zest of his long vanished youth and with an accuracy that bespeaks a well ordered mind. The strongest impression this book has left on my mind is that it is the product of that rara avis, an artist with a cartooning mind." J. L. Ford

+ Bookm 56:351 N '22 650w

Cleveland p95 D '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:167 S 30 '22 160w

Reviewed by H. I. Young

Nation 115:692 D 20 '22 90w

"A delightful book of reminiscences about cartoonists by one of them. Mr. Rogers's agreeable text is accompanied by a member of reproductions of his cartoons."

+ Outlook 132:254 O 11 '22 90w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:598 D '22
St Louis 21:16 Ja '23
Wis Lib Bul 19:24 Ja '23

ROGET, SAMUEL ROMILLY, ed. Travel in the last two centuries of three generations. 254p il $4 Appleton [16s Unwin]

910 Travels (Eng ed 22-5828)

"A descendant of men who travelled much and recorded with uncommon shrewdness and clarity their impressions of foreign lands and people has gathered various excerpts from their letters and journals. Other travel accounts are also included. But those which Mr. Roget has for the most part selected are from the letters of his father, John Lewis Roget; from those of his grandfather, the famous scientist, best known, perhaps, as the author of 'Roget's Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases'; and from those of his great-grandmother, Catherine Roget, of the brilliant Romilly family."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 18:232 Ap '22

"Visualized as only the letters of a day when letter-writing was an art and bringing home to the reader far more poignantly than by statistics the magnitude of the development of methods of travel during the past one hundred and fifty years, from post-chaise, carriage and coach, sailing packet and primitive 'steamer,' to the great railway trains and ocean liners, the motor vehicles and the aeroplanes of today." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ja 21 '22 700w

"Mr. Roget had a happy inspiration in issuing these bits of diary and old letters from among his family records to illustrate the vanished era; particularly as the travellers in question were observing folk and effectively articulate. He has skillfully supplied enough connective tissue of narrative and enough of annotation to make the result a coherent whole, of considerable interest."

+ Lit R p356 Ja 14 '22 440w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

N Y Times p7 Ja 15 '22 900w

"It is an entertaining book because it is a simple record of simple people, and its proper place is not so much in a library as by the bedside."

+ Sat R 132:539 N 5 '21 360w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p783 O 27 '21 150w

ROHDE, ELEANOR SINCLAIR. Old English herbals. 243p il $7 (21s) Longmans

615.3 Botany, Medical. Materia medica. Vegetable 22-20042

A curious and somewhat neglected branch of garden literature is here treated—old English herbals from Anglo-Saxon times to the end of the seventeenth century. The first two chapters on early manuscript herbals bring together source information about Anglo-Saxon plant lore and folk medicine. Then the famous English herbals of Turner and Gerard, both belonging to the sixteenth century, are described, and some New world herbals, these last containing some of the earliest records of the Indians' use of herbs and of herbs grown in the first New England gardens. A chapter is devoted to John Parkinson and another to later seventeenth-century herbalists. The valuable bibliography includes both manuscripts and printed books and there are eighteen full-page illustrations.

"This book is written with much picturesqueness and charming humor."

+ Lit R p358 D 30 '22 330w

"A delightful book. It is handsome enough to adorn the drawing-room table, but we hope it may be read, for it tells a story of great interest, and one that is in some degree novel." V. R.

+ New Statesman 20:246 N 25 '22 1050w

"Their chief interest and value rests in their preservation of parts of the oldest lore in the world. Then, too, the old herbalists describe with care and freshness the flowers of which they treat. Mrs. Rohde has written an excellent book; she has made her treatise interesting and her bibliography exhaustive."

+ Spec 129:sup532 O 21 '22 680w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 23 '22 2250w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARS-FIELD WARD). Fire-Tongue. 304p $1.75 Doubleday [8s 6d Cassell]

22-3191

The story deals with the machinations of a Hindu secret society founded on the belief of a second coming of Zoroaster, in the person of "Fire-Tongue," who was to redeem and revolutionize the world. The ramifications of the society spread not only over India, but into the outside world, and its secrets are guarded by a sinister power of dealing instantaneous death to suspected persons. In the story an expert criminologist has come upon the tracks of this organization in London and, with the aid of an American millionaire, who had at one time been initiated into the order, and at the risk of his own life, succeeds in exposing its workings and causing the death of Fire-Tongue.

Booklist 18:335 Je '22

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '22 340w

"The machinery balks and rattles a bit at the start. But when the wheels do begin to go round, after a hundred pages or so, they whirl rapidly enough to satisfy any searcher for 'thrills,' and the climax is a truly gaudy spectacle."

+ Lit R p371 Ja 21 '22 250w

N Y Times p14 F 26 '22 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:150 Ap '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p646 O 6 '21 70w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARS-FIELD WARD). Tales of Chinatown. 376p $1.75 Doubleday [7s 6d Cassell]

22-20685

Limehouse, the Chinatown of London, furnishes the background for these tales of mystery and crime with which the author so characteristically surrounds the Chinese. In the "Daughter of Huang Chow" a fabulously rich and cruel importer of art objects, keeps a pet poison spider in a lacquered coffin to sting his victims to death, while a trap door dispatches their bodies into the Thames. When accidentally his daughter becomes the victim he, in the distraction of his grief, covers her body with jewels from the coffin to show that his criminal accumulations had been all for her. The other tales are: Kerry's kid; The pigtail of Hi Wing Ho; The house of golden joss; The man with the shaven skull; The white hat; Tchéri-pin; The dance of the vells; The hand of the mandarin Quong; The key of the temple of heaven.

Lit R p112 O 14 '22 360w

"None of them can be recommended as suitable reading for late at night."

Spec 129:54 Jl 8 '22 30w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 4 '23 300w

"The author is in his best vein. He tells one gruesome story of the sardonic type of Chinese humour, and we could almost wish that, by way of foil to the others, he had included another—of the jolly kind—for Chinese are sometimes

ROHMER, SAX, pseud.—Continued
wags, and have been known to laugh in a way intelligible to a white man and at things which would strike him as being funny."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p345 My
25 '22 150w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Musical tour through the land of the past; tr. by Bernard Miall. (Int.
lib. of music) 235p $2.50 Holt [10s 6d K. Paul] 780.9 Music—History and criticism. Musicians 22-12314

"Essays devoted mainly to an age of transition in which the feeling and form of modern music were taking shape. They show the debt owed to the musicians of the first half of the eighteenth century who prepared the way for Mozart and Beethoven. The essay, 'An English amateur,' which features Pepys, quoting copiously from the diary, is not only amusing but enlightening as a barometer of English taste.
Companion volume to Musicians of to-day and
Some musicians of former days."—Booklist

Booklist 19:44 N '22

"The interest of the first half-dozen essays is rather more literary than musical; and they are by no means free from the sentimentality and
'writing up' that sometimes mar his 'Jean-Christophe' and his life of Beethoven." D. G. M.
+ — Freeman 5:454 J1 19 '22 330w

"This time Mr. Rolland has doffed his grandiose biographical manner and given us a really entertaining book."

+ Spec 129:sup526 O 21 '22 880w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p31 Ja 12
'22 30w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Pierre and Luce; tr. by Charles De Kay. 136p $1.50 Holt 22-9487

This little story is an idyll of love—the love of youth snatching its happiness in the face of death. It was in the early months of the year 1918 in Paris. Pierre had been called to military service but still had six months' respite before his country would be needing his flesh.
During this time of waiting while the sensitive youth was questioning about the madness and futility of war, he met Luce and the two children loved. They spent every possible moment together, talked about love and life and death and wondered if it was too much to ask that they might live. Luce asked even for a little bit of happiness, and this they both had in full in the brief time that was theirs. During Holy week the German drive reached its height. On Good Friday they went to church and there death came, in an explosion which buried them under its crash.

Booklist 18:368 J1 '22

"It is strangely removed from the world—as all true romantic tales must be—while at the same time it is fashioned of homely everyday details. An exquisite idyll." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 20 '22 900w

Cath World 115:693 Ag '22 150w

Cleveland p50 Ag '22

Dial 73:353 S '22 90w

"An extremely fine story, one of those which in all its simplicity and brevity, is produced from a great depth of being."

+ Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 40w

"A tale of eloquent restraint with the true Gallic touch."

+ Lit R p745 Je 17 '22 220w

"Curious and at times difficult it is to realize that the man who steers these children through their intimate, enclosed little romance with such a brooding delicacy, with so loving and almost paternal a hand, also wrote the boisterous electric sunshine of Colas Breugnon and the hunger and the reality of Jean Christophe. In 'Pierre and Luce' Rolland seems becalmed in some shadowy little eddy of the emotions, a vast and tiny universe where quiet waters spin about by themselves."

New Repub 31:56 Je 7 '22 210w

"It is the simplest, most delicate of stories.
The characters are well drawn."
+ N Y Times p15 Je 11 '22 400w
Wis Lib Bul 18:218 O '22

ROLLINS, PHILIP ASHTON. The cowboy: his characteristics, his equipment, and his part in the development of the West. 353p $2.50
(12s 6d) Scribner

917.8 Cowboys. West. Ranch life 22-8713

As the cowboy is now fast slipping out of actual life into history and as his picturesqueness has been unduly stressed and exploited by the dramatist, novelist, illustrator and moving-picture photographer, it is the purpose of the book to recount accurately the every-day life of the old-time range while the testimony of eye-witnesses is still procurable. The author has restricted himself to what he actually saw and heard, with the exception of some historical matter for which he has gone to the most authentic sources available. He begins with the beginnings of ranching and describes every detail of its development up to the later phases of western migration.

Booklist 18:360 J1 '22

"This is an important and oddly fascinating book; important because it is a carefully planned and logically executed record, in summary, of an epic chapter in American history and the central figure of that chapter; and fascinating because it has been written with such a curious love of the subject and as the result of so many years of experience and observation that it has a distilled, quintessential quality."
Struthers Burt

+ Bookm 55:527 J1 '22 560w

"A work which is decidedly impressive. His treatment of the cowboy, while naturally sympathetic, is always frank. No effort is made to polish a halo, or to convince us that the cowboy was an angel in disguise. Rather the facts are presented before us until we understand the glory of the West, its pioneer courage, its exuberant youthfulness." P. L. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 20 '22 800w

Cleveland p94 D '22

Reviewed by E. L. Sabin

Lit R p720 Je 10 '22 600w

Nation 114:626 My 24 '22 30w

Outlook 131:216 My 31 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:370 J1 '22

R of Rs 65:671 Je '22 190w

St Louis 20:223 S '22

"A little difficult in some of its sentences, in other respects Mr. Rollins's presentation of the cowboy—as he was, not as he was romanticised —is readable, authoritative, particularized and accurate. It is well worth attention."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a S 10 '22 240w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Je
22 '22 580w

Wis Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

ROLT-WHEELER, FRANCIS WILLIAM.
Wreck-hunters. 359p il $1.75 Lothrop

22-7207

Search for sunken treasure with all the colorful background of the West Indies, daring and wonderful feats of nautical skill, and the time honored superstitions of the sea make this tale exciting for boys and even grown-ups.
The log of the schooner "Exertion" captured by pirates in the Spanish Main is just one of the absorbing bits of the book and is supposed to be an authentic record of one of the last groups of pirates operating in those waters as late as 1821. Latimer Voley, the outstanding figure of the story, whose father and grandfather were among the most famous "wreckers" of the Bahamas fulfills his great ambition and becomes a real salvager of ships. The expert way of divers and their rescue of sunken millions is graphically told, forming a sharp contrast to the ways of the piratical wreckers of the early days.

"More successful than many of the author's books, the story interest is better handled and an atmosphere of adventure and romance is created."

+ Booklist 18:338 Je '22
Cleveland p82 N '22

"A rattling good tale. And with it all there is a wealth of information about diving and salvage operations and some vastly interesting sidelights on superstitions of the seas."

+ Lit R p780 J1 1 '22 50w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:37 Ja '23

ROSCOE, JOHN. Twenty-five years in East Africa. 288p il $8 Macmillan [25s Cambridge Univ. press]

916.7 Africa, East—Description and travel.
Africa—Native races. Uganda—Description and travel 21-17375

"A dependable and fairly interesting account of the region surrounding Lake Victoria and extending thence southeastward to the coast opposite Zanzibar. It deals largely with tribal ethnology and will doubtless be of value to students of the subject."—Springf'd Republican

"In his effort to present his material in popular form I should say that he has failed, since the book has no form whatever, popular or otherwise. The average reader will find his style dreary; he never forgets that he is a missionary, and the book abounds in such black alpaca words as zeal, endeavor, dreadful, ideal, and endure."

— Lit R p36 S 16 '22 500w
Nature 110:36 J1 8 '22 200w
Sat R 132:435 O 8 '21 860w
Spec 128:119 Ja 28 '22 100w
Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 19 '22 340w

"Mr. Roscoe's book inevitably loses something through the relative poorness of the photographs that accompany it and through its lack of literary style. It is not by any means a banal style, as is that, unfortunately, of so many travellers, for it is easy and conversational; but it is wanting in the charm of atmospheric creation. It does not bring before one the wild spaces and the splendid sights."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p635 O 6 '21 650w

ROSE, PHILIP MARSHMAN. Italians in America. 155p il $1 Doran

325.7 Italians in the United States 22-19808

The book is the fourth volume of racial studies in the New Americans series, published under the auspices of the Interchurch World Movement. After an introduction by Charles Hatch Sears it describes the Italian background of Italian-Americans, the economic and social conditions of the immigrants, and the educational and religious problems engendered thereby. Maps, appendices, bibliography and index.

Booklist 19:108 Ja '23

"For the purposes of the lay student the little handbook represents a brief but zealous survey, with only a shade of condescension toward other Americanizing agencies outside the church."

+ Bookm 56:644 Ja '23 50w
Boston Transcript p6 Ag 30 '22 220w
J Religion 2:659 N '22 60w

Reviewed by E. H. Bierstadt
New Repub 33:231 Ja '24 320w
Pratt p9 winter '23

"Practical handbook which will prove useful to ministers, social workers, doctors and others who want to understand better their foreign-born neighbors without having time to study more important tomes on their backgrounds and modes of thought."

+ Survey 48:629 Ag 15 '22 30w

ROSENBERGER, JESSE LEONARD. Through three centuries: Colver and Rosenberger lives and times, 1620-1922. 407p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Colver, Nathaniel. Colver, Charles Kendrick. Colver, Susan Esther. Rosenberger, Jesse Leonard. Baptists 22-5511

The three centuries of the title are spanned by eight successive members of the Colver family of whom the first came to America with John Winthrop in 1635. Their common characteristics were courage, independence, determination, energy, a love of pioneering and adventure, and sturdy service. Of this last much was devoted to the Baptist ministry and educational purposes. The book deals especially with the lives of three of this family; Nathaniel Colver, Charles Kendrick Colver, and Susan Colver Rosenberger. There are illustrations, a bibliography and an index.

"Although the volume is designed, undoubtedly, to trace the growth of certain phases of Christianity in our country, as understood especially by those professing the Baptist faith, there is very much of an historical nature which will be found of interest to the general reader, of whatever religious faith. There are not a few illustrations of peculiar interest to people of New England."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '22 700w
J Religion 2:331 My '22 40w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:517 N '22
The Times [London] Lit Sup p365 Je 1 '22 110w

ROSS, EDWARD ALSWORTH. Social trend. 235p $1.75 Century

304 Social problems 22-17762

In this collection of essays a keen social observer discusses some of the less obvious bearings of various sociological questions. The first four essays deal with race and population problems. Among the other subjects discussed are woman's position, prohibition, philanthropy, the legal profession, a legal dismissal wage, free speech, and war.

Booklist 19:70 D '22

"One feels that he has been set down hard upon the ground. Professor Ross is himself an astute critic, a diagnostician, but he impresses one as more interested in facts and situations than in social theory. The present volume is not entirely new; it includes reprints of certain magazine articles. Some of the chapters are really very brief notes, yet they are all pertinent and helpful to his discussion." F. E. J. Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser p2 N 25 '22 1250w

"He presents in an easy and rapid style, pertinent facts and opinions gathered at home and abroad in pursuit of his professional studies, or rescued from statistics." F. W. Garrison
+ Freeman 6:428 Ja 10 '23 1000w

"Ross has made himself an illuminating, as he is a provocative, influence upon all economic, moral, and political matters. Those who dissent from his opinions and those who concur in them alike find him worth reading. In these papers on the social trend he is in his happiest mood." F. H. Giddings

+ Lit R p414 Ja 27 '23 550w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:473 N '22

"Professor Ross is always interesting; no other sociologist has his gift of presenting complicated social facts, even whole tables of statistics, in a form in which their significance assumes dramatic proportions."

+ Survey 49:sup206 N 1 '22 170w
Wis Lib Bul 18:213 O '22

ROSS, ESTELLE. Book of noble dogs. 289p il $2 Century

636.7 Dogs—Legends and stories 22-19137

The object of the book is to set forth the important place occupied by the dog as the companion of man through the generations. He is shown to figure in the myths and legends of the dim past, in Greece and Rome in historic times, and thruout Christendom from the beginning, as the comrade of kings and celebrities of all sorts, of fair ladies and of children. The illustrations are copies of famous pictures paying tribute to the dog. Bibliography.

ROSS, ESTELLE—Continued

Booklist 19:112 Ja '23

"Miss Ross discusses her subject from an unusual point of view, and has packed her narrative with apt anecdote, both humorous and pathetic, which throws many flashlights upon other times and other manners."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 25 '22 420w

N Y Times p27 Ja 14 '23 130w

Reviewed by Vivian Radcliffe

N Y World p7e O 22 '22 70w

Pratt p20 winter '23

St Louis 21:8 Ja '23

"The book is entertainingly written, and is interesting because it so thoroughly covers the dog literature of all ages."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 180w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

ROSSMOORE, EMERSON EMANUEL. Federal income tax problems—1922. 541p $5 Dodd

336.24 Income tax—United States 22-7443

On account of the inherent difficulty in treating so complex a subject as the income-tax law by means of general statements the author has adopted the problem method and has analyzed the subject in a series of concrete and representative problems, 336 in number. The various questions that arise in practice are tabulated, the circumstances under which they arise are concisely stated, and a specific answer to each question is given so that the reader who is not himself a legal expert can obtain authoritative directions as to the proper method of procedure. The appendix consists of excerpts from the revenue act of 1921, bearing upon the income and profits. Index.

Booklist 18:313 Je '22

"A great deal of practical information on income taxes brought out by questions and answers."

+ Cleveland p74 S '22

ROSTAND, MAURICE. Crystal coffin; tr. from the French by Alys Eyre Macklin. 250p $2 McBride

(Eng ed 22-6611)

Written by a son of Edmond Rostand, this novel purports to be the diary, in retrospect, of a young man about to commit suicide. It is the story, somewhat feverishly told, of a young man of the century, an esthete and decadent, and his unsuccessful efforts to break down the barrier of misunderstanding which separates him from a loved and loving father.

Lit R p891 Ag 19 '22 130w

"He is too much of a spoiled child to be very interesting." J. W. Knutch

+ Nation 114:48 Jl 12 '22 150w

"The Crystal Coffin," it is understood, was laughed at in Paris, but yet it proved extremely popular. The book will not be as popular in this country, but it is well worth reading. Young Mr. Rostand has far to go before he gets anywhere near his father as a craftsman, but he does sense the secret of the successful bit of fiction—namely, suspense."

+ N Y Times p19 Je 4 '22 150w

ROWELL, NEWTON WESLEY. British empire and world peace. 307p $3.50 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]

172.4 Peace. Great Britain—Foreign relations. League of nations 22-16755

"This treatise comprises in published form a series of lectures, delivered at Victoria College, University of Toronto, in November, 1921, under the Burwash Foundation. The lectures are in four parts. In the first three chapters Dr. Rowell discusses international co-operation as essential to peace. Continuing, Dr. Rowell traces the League of Nations in history. In a concluding chapter of this part is considered the achievements of the League as formed in connection with the conference at Versailles. The second part of the volume is concerned with the topic of the place of the British Empire among the nations, so far as it affected the peace of the world. The third part is concerned with Canada's part in the promotion of world peace; the fourth and final part, with the relation of the Church toward world peace."—Boston Transcript

Am Pol Sci R 17:149 F '23 70w

Boston Transcript p8 S 9 '22 880w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler

Nation 115:sup386 O 11 '22 290w

"It is a great pity that Mr. Rowell loaded his pages with a discussion of the Churches and peace. His jejune declarations of ideal purpose remain barren, and his treatment of the issues in discussion has no novelty or vigor. Pious aspirations are never an adequate substitute for criticism. Nor is his discussion of industrial issues anything more than a collection of banal phrases."

— Nation and Ath 31:690 Ag 19 '22 180w

"Displays a wide range of reading connected with its theme and competent comment thereupon."

+ Sat R 134:322 Ag 26 '22 150w

Spec 129:215 Ag 12 '22 450w

"Even if he has no striking new facts or originality of ideas, he is a safe and sensible guide."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 10 '22 600w

ROWLAND, HENRY COTTRELL. Hirondelle. 321p $1.90 Harper

22-18300

Slaving, buccaneering, freebooting, hate and vengeance contribute to the diversions of this romance. O'Connor an Irish lord, who had acquired a fortune in the Carolinas thru slaving, retires to his castle on the Irish coast to build a fast sailing schooner—for a certain purpose. Horrocks, his master shipwright, and young Rudoric, designing architect, alleged uncle and nephew, also have a purpose in engaging on the work. The basis of O'Connor's fortune had been laid on the tragic ruin of Ruderic's family and Horrocks has brought up the boy on a diet of hate and vengeance. With the schooner they intend to lure O'Connor into piracy and to his doom. But he has a beautiful daughter and with the motley company—there is also a cut-throat crew—as shipmates on the Hirondelle, sailing into piratical seas, the stage is set for romance and thrilling adventures.

Booklist 19:161 F '23

"The yarn revels in adventure, but its swift action is not attained at a sacrifice of either characterization or craftsmanship. Mr. Rowland writes as one well acquainted with his field."

+ Lit R p93 O 7 '22 220w

"Mr. Rowland has displayed his powers as a weaver of absorbing tales before this and 'Hirondelle' may be ranked among his best. It is dramatic and colorful and with a fine eye to the period wherein it is laid."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 1 '22 130w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

ROWNTREE, BENJAMIN SEEBOHM. Human factor in business. 176p $2 (6s) Longmans

331.8 Employment management 21-14072

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Reviewed by D. A. McCabe

Am Econ R 12:510 S '22 560w

"This work is a notable addition to the literature of personnel administration." R. W. Stone

+ Am J Soc 28:351 N '22 250w

Reviewed by C. E. Bechhofer

Freeman 4:501 F 1 '22 850w

"The great merit of Mr. Rowntree's book is that he writes as a responsible employer."
H: R. Seager

+ Lit R p525 Mr 25 '22 1800w

"Mr. Rowntree's is a record of which any labor manager or social organizer might well be proud, a record of thirty years of painstaking experimentation and innovation in small and seemingly trivial as well as in big things—usually after patient investigation—and of achievement not only in maintaining industrial peace, but in progressive humanization of the whole plant." B. L.

+ Survey 47:280 N 19 '21 370w

ROYDEN, AGNES MAUDE. Sex and common sense. 211p $2.50 Putnam [4s 6d Hurst & B.]

176 Sex. Sexual ethics. Marriage 22-8725

"Sex and common sense" sets out to consider the relations between men and women, spiritual and physical, from the point of view of a true morality. And by a true morality Miss Royden means the observance, not of any code based on custom, tradition, or convention, but of laws which can be recognized as part of normal human nature, laws to obey which is perfect freedom. Her defence of monogamy and of marriage is based on an analysis and estimate of human nature as she conceives it and has observed it. And she points out that human nature is, as the conventional classification goes, mental, spiritual, and physical. She rightly says that a moral standard based on the assumption either that we have no body or that we have no spirit inevitably entails suffering and harm for the few who endeavor to act up to it, and will necessarily be disregarded by the overwhelming many. A moral standard, if intelligent people are to observe it, must strike them both as just and as reasonable."—Nation and Ath

Booklist 18:347 Jl '22

Cleveland p72 S '22

Dial 73:458 O '22 130w

Reviewed by L. Mumford

Freeman 6:213 N 8 '22 650w

"Sensible book with a sensible title. It is throughout an earnest effort to encourage and help to build up our character. May it have a wide reading!" W: L. Stowell, M. D.

+ Lit R p774 Jl 1 '22 740w

"This book is bound to have a beneficent influence in the broadening of narrow minds and in increasing charity among the uncharitable. The writer takes normal 'human nature' as she finds it, and she takes it all. The authoress's advice to the married and to those about to marry is, on the whole, excellent and sound. Her treatment of the general problems involved in the satisfaction, repression, or sublimation of the sexual and maternal impulses is, however, by no means so adequate. There is throughout the book a spontaneous or studied air of kindly tolerance towards, and sympathetic understanding of, those who do not share the writer's conclusions."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:62 Ap 8 '22 850w

"Will do a great deal of good in helping parents and teachers to realize what a crime it is to treat sex as a vile topic or an unapproachable mystery" P. L.

+ New Repub 31:163 Jl 5 '22 390w

"The style of these essays is admirably clear, and the attitude of mind logical, tolerant and open to discussion. They will certainly be valuable to many readers as a frank exposition of the stupendous difficulties surrounding the relationship of the sexes; but from a remedial point of view it is to be feared that they do not carry us very far."

+ — Sat R 132:644 D 3 '21 370w

"Miss Royden has the sympathy of complete comprehension for the honest conventional point of view. It is this which makes her book so valuable. With all her progressiveness and her desire to think things out afresh, she is yet careful to preserve the large element of good that remains in ordinary standards. Her book, in our opinion, displays at its best the feminine standpoint in the treatment of a subject."

+ Spec 127:865 D 24 '21 920w

"The book deserves attention on its merits and as a social document, and Miss Royden deserves attention as one of the few distinguished woman preachers. It illustrates both her pugnacity and spiritual eloquence—qualities somewhat difficult of amalgamation, and not entirely amalgamated in this work."

+ Springf'd Republican p15a My 7 '22 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p719 N 3 '21 80w

ROYDS, ROBERT. Heat transmission by radiation, conduction and convection. 246p il $4.50 Van Nostrand [24s Constable]

536.2 Heat—Radiation and absorption. Heat—Conduction A22-517

"Discusses experiments made at Dundee Technical College, and conclusions drawn. Experimental data from apparatus of small size. Contains bibliographical footnotes."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:487 N '22

ROYDS, ROBERT. Heat transmission in boilers, condensers and evaporators. 310p il $4.50 Van Nostrand [24s Constable]

536.2 Heat—Conduction. Steam boilers. Condensers (steam). Evaporating appliances A22-518

"Gives results of experiments using full-size apparatus operated under ordinary working conditions. The apparatus and results are described in detail, giving the reader adequate information from which to judge the value of the data secured. Contains bibliographical footnotes."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:487 N '22

RUCK, BERTA. See Onions, B.

RUFFER, SIR MARC ARMAND. Studies in the palaeopathology of Egypt. 372p il $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press [45s Cambridge univ. press]

616 Pathology. Egypt 21-19865

The author made special study of pathological lesions in Egyptian mummies and is considered one of the pioneers in the science of palaeopathology. This posthumous volume, edited by Roy L. Moodie, is of interest both to the student of the history of medicine and to the Egyptologist. The papers, which are preceded by a biographical sketch of the author and a bibliography of his writings, describe the methods employed in the softening of the mummified tissues, and give an account of the various diseases that have been found and examined and of the evidences of surgical operations. Seventy-one full page illustrations accompany the text. Index.

Boston Transcript p6 F 4 '22 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p36 Ja 19 '22 850w

RUMSEY, FRANCES. Ascent. 379p $2 Bonl & Liveright

22-16147

The story is a character study of a woman without emotion or principles, cold, self-centered and of indomitable will. She is shown as a creature of heredity, her inheritance coming from her grandfather, a man without illusion or faith. There is little plot, the style is sophisticated, the characters and situations outlined are extremely tenuous. Tho Olive Lacey bends almost everyone to her will she remains to the last frustrated and unhappy. The best and most patient of husbands is no help, the Catholic church to which she turns because of a priest's attractions, gives no comfort, her affairs with other men bring no satisfaction. While still young, she dies of an inherited disease.

RUMSEY, FRANCES—Continued

Booklist 19:55 N '22

Cath World 116:267 N '22 60w

"Too carefully swaddled in the thick wool of its embroidered verbal quilt, for anything more lusty than an occasional kicking out of the story. And whenever that happens, Mrs. Rumsey hastily tucks it in again, and continues to rock the cradle of fine writing. Despite her vigilance, the novel emerges now and then with sufficient authority to suggest that—if she were only a little less solicitous—it would stand on its own legs most satisfactorily."

— + Dial 73:580 N '22 100w

"A book which might rank high were it stripped of the verbiage by which it is disfigured, and written in comprehensible English. It contains very little conversation, but that little is, with the exception of Olive's talks with Father Ames, so involved and so obscure as to be absurd. The author should realize that simplicity of style ranks high as a virtue."

— + Lit D p60 N 4 '22 650w

"An exceedingly conscientious study of a somewhat forbidding heroine and a book written with high seriousness and sincerity. But the novel is marred by excessive solemnity, almost unrelieved through over 370 pages. If Mrs. Rumsey can realize that lightness of touch, both in incident and dialogue, does not necessarily detract from a serious character study, her work should be looked forward to with interest."

— + Lit R p891 Ag 19 '22 250w

"Without either humor or sentimentality, it is a quiet, searching study of a stormy life. It has the fundamental pathos of irony. The book is the work of a keen, unhurried intellect. It has the beauty of a rounded, if somewhat tenuous view of life. It requires time and thought to read. Since we have little time for thought, it will probably be overlooked." E. W. Lohrke

+ New Repub 32:104 S 20 '22 680w

"'Ascent' is a drama of the soul, and it is none the less real poignant drama because it concerns itself so little with material things. It is not a novel for Summer hammock reading, but one to be read when one is in a thoughtful mood."

+ N Y Times p27 Jl 30 '22 280w

"Frances Rumsey surrounds herself with a nebula of vaporous words—her style enfolds her meanings in layer upon layer of gauzy implications. What Miss Rumsey has attempted in character drawing is an interesting attempt, if only as an illumination of a certain point of view." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p5 Ag 27 '22 720w

"'Ascent' reveals ideas and careful workmanship, but it is neither a very real nor a spirited book. The involved style in which the story is told goes a long way toward intensifying its heavy unreality. Anyone in a fretful mood might say that 'Ascent' is a painfully long novel by an uninspired follower of Henry James; but it is more than that, for it shows thought, if not skill or warmth."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a D 17 '22 250w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM.

Analysis of mind. (Library of philosophy) 310p $4.50 Macmillan [16s Allen & U.]

150 Psychology 21-16449

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:212 Ap '22

"This book is characterised by all that verisatily, openness of mind, brightness of expression, and aptness of illustration, that we have learned to expect in any work by Mr. Russell." J. S. Mackenzie

+ Int J Ethics 32:212 Ja '22 1450w

"Its chief value, so far as is concerned the progress of psychology in the direction of scientific competency, is critical. It calls attention to data ignored and repressed, to unwarranted inference, to hasty generalization, to assumptions implicit and unexamined, with which those on the line of advance for psychology can perhaps hardly avoid endangering their work, but against which they must guard. As such, it is a genuine contribution to science." H. M. Kallen

+ — New Repub 29:286 F 1 '22 2100w

"Mr. Russell cannot help being interesting, challenging, provoking, whatever the subject of his discourse. Even if he is often wayward and over-ingenious, he never fails to be original. He has that most inestimable gift of the born teacher; he communicates his own joy of thinking, his own zest of discovery, to his readers. The deepest impression which Mr. Russell's book leaves on the reader is that of its infinite remoteness from concrete minds and their actual achievements in the world." R. F. A. Hoernlé

+ — Yale R n s 11:656 Ap '22 1200w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM.
Problem of China. 276p $2 Century [16s Allen & U.]

951 China. Eastern question (Far East) 22-26881

In the course of his treatment of his subject the author considers China historically and compares the influence western civilization has had on Japan and China respectively. Altho backward politically and industrially, China is by no means culturally inferior to the west and the author expresses the hope that in adopting western methods in democracy, industry and science she will not also adopt a western philosophy of life. Her three chief requisites now are: an orderly government; industrial development under Chinese control; and the spread of education. If she can achieve these three things without at the same time being led astray by the western lure of brutal power, she may develop a new civilization better than any the world has yet known. Appendix, index.

Booklist 19:47 N '22

Bookm 56:640 Ja '23 150w

"The book is to me the most enlightening, as a matter of information and comment, of all the many works which have been recently written to put Western readers in touch with the issues of the Far East. It is extraordinarily well done; so well done in fact that only those who by some personal experience recognize the difficulties which have been overcome, will perceive how well it is done." John Dewey

+ Dial 74:193 F '23 2250w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p37 D '22 70w

Reviewed by I. Anderson

Int Bk R p52 Ja '23 400w

"Mr. Russell has written a very interesting and telling book on this subject. He allows his ironic wit to play over his subject with considerable, and sometimes perhaps too obvious, liberty." L. S. W.

+ New Statesman 20:118 O 28 '22 280w

N Y Times p24 D 24 '22 1150w

"The book is in a certain way, a milestone in the steadily growing literature about the Orient; and if the conclusions at which I arrive differ from Russell's, then I have no right to voice them or criticize his, unless I can prove mine more successfully than he—which I cannot. There is no need to speak of Mr. Russell's felicity of style and his supreme power of logic." Ahmed Abdullah

+ — N Y Tribune p9 O 15 '22 550w

R of Rs 66:671 D '22 70w

"A book on the Far East that is admirable in many ways. For one thing, it is eminently readable, and for another it presents the facts in the case correctly and with exceptional lucidity in small space. The reaction of China to her contacts with Japan and the West is described with remarkable understanding and power."

+ Sat R 134:681 N 4 '22 700w

"Its most valuable qualities are its high-mindedness and its detachment. It is a book which everyone should read, honest, highminged, and though frequently humiliating to us of the Western civilization, it is very often just and always salutary."

+ Spec 129:sup521 O 21 '22 1600w

Survey 49:sup205 N 1 '22 160w

"Interesting but wayward volume. Mr. Russell's besetting sins are, to put them mildly, exaggeration and overstatement. With all its faults, which may be chiefly ascribed to Mr. Russell's peculiar angle of vision, his book is a stimulating contribution to our understanding of both those Oriental forms of civilization."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p592 S 21 '22 2200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:253 N '22

RUSSELL, CHARLES EDWARD. Outlook for the Philippines. 411p il $3 Century

919.1 Philippine Islands 22-6035

The author spent months in the Philippine Islands, observing political, social, economic and industrial conditions, the characteristics of the Filipinos, their progress in education, their capacity for self-government and their movement for independence. Of particular interest is his account of the establishment of the present system of education on the islands, the planting of schoolhouses, the voluntary enlistment of about one thousand teachers from America and the development of vocational education and physical training. He vigorously supports the Filipino claim to independence and maintains that the natives have, beyond all question, set up that stable government specified in the Jones act.

Am Pol Sci R 16:522 Ag '22 120w

Booklist 18:361 J1 '22

Freeman 5:526 Ag 9 '22 310w

"The book is an admirable, unbiassed, clear, and vigorous presentment of the Filipino as he is to-day, as he appears in his home, at work, and at play; as a business man, politician, statesman, organizer, financier, farmer, teacher, professional man, and student. Mr. Russell does not argue. He presents facts which argue for themselves. He presents to us a people united in their desire for their own Government and fitted to carry it on." G: St Clair

+ Lit R p870 Ag 12 '22 580w

Reviewed by H. P. Willis

New Repub 32:103 S 20 '22 780w

"The most interesting presentation of the subject put forth in recent years within the limits of an easily readable volume. He has left nothing untouched concerning the Philippines past or present that it is needful for an American to know." A. S. Crockett

+ N Y Times p16 J1 2 '22 2300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:371 J1 '22

"Apart from the controversial material, Mr. Russell's book has many passages of thrilling interest."

+ R of Rs 65:556 My '22 110w

RUTZBECK, HJALMAR. My Alaskan idyll. 296p $2 Boni & Liveright

22-26763

Svend is supremely happy when he brings his bride to her rugged Alaskan home and together they cut logs for their cabin, plant their gardens and tackle a thousand other things with which the pioneer has to cope. Their crops fail and their finances are badly impaired, but together they manage to weather many a storm. Svend accepts a position as a watchman at a cannery in Haines and while he is there a murder is committed and Svend is under suspicion. After long court hearings at Guneau he is exonerated and with his wife and little son he returns to their homestead at Vikings Cove. A long hard winter follows, then the joyful news comes that Svend's book, "Alaska Man's Luck," (Book Review Digest, 1920), has been accepted by the publishers and his happiness is complete.

Booklist 19:22 O '22

"Told in simple narrative style, with a naïveté which is occasionally refreshing, and too frequently bathetic. The author confesses that he is a simple, unlettered Viking. His book confirms accordingly the results of his self analysis."

+ Bookm 56:227 O '22 120w

"Love-making should have a certain privacy, even in the wilds. Here in this volume none exists. Not admiring the he-man, we look askance at 'My Alaskan Idyll.'"

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ag 16 '22 300w

"There is a directness about the chronicle which gives it distinction, a healthiness of tone which ennobles the small things in the record."

+ Cath World 116:571 Ja '23 180w

"The merits of such a book are the merits of sobriety and sincerity. There is nothing startling about them, and they challenge by their quietness and evident faithfulness rather than by any brilliance in mood or manner. The book is a contribution of more than passing interest to the literature of the Frozen North." L. B.

+ Freeman 6:382 D '22 150w

"It is as veritable a document as Garland's 'Son of the Middle Border,' and as truly touched with imaginative power. It is the work of a 'born' storyteller. He has the knack of selection and elimination. He has told enough and not too much. And the work as a whole has structure and balance." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:138 S 16 '22 640w

Lit D p65 N 4 '22 250w

"The rhapsodies on hymeneal bliss become a little tiring. But there is freshness of vision and a naïveté in its statement that give the book individuality, although it remains somewhat amateurish. The most interesting portions are not those detailing the hero's emotions or his state of mind but the purely descriptive passages."

+ Lit R p924 S 2 '22 250w

"Mr. Rutzbeck has a very incomplete mastery of his medium; his exercise of selection seems to be quite haphazard; the reader has to do an unfair share of the work, filling in gaps. The book is in no sense a serious work, but, at least, it is an unpretentious record of the sort of existence which people find alluring."

+ New Statesman 19:368 J1 '22 210w

"The book is too long, and many of Svend's raptures over his love for Marian could easily have been spared, along with a number of the too numerous descriptions of scenery, but it gives an entertaining if, as one cannot help suspecting, rose-colored picture of certain kinds of life in Alaska."

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 20 '22 300w

"The occasional bits of sentimental eulogy, trite phraseology, and the author's casual way of coupling the commonplace and the dramatic, are apt to be annoying. Once past that difficulty, however, one finds a narrative that has much to recommend it. The chief charm of the book lies in its unpretentiousness."

+ Survey 48:732 S 15 '22 250w

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p291 My 4 '22 640w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

RYAN, JOHN AUGUSTINE, and MILLAR, MOORHOUSE, F. X. State and the church; written and ed. for the Department of social action of the National Catholic welfare council. (Social action ser.) 331p $2.25 Macmillan

322 Church and state. State, The. Roman Catholic church 22-11026

The book sets forth the teaching of the Catholic church concerning the state; discusses the nature, authority, and object of the state and the relations that should subsist between the state and the church; defends the doctrine that governments and rulers derive their moral authority from God thru the people; and considers the ethical relations existing between the state and the citizen. Besides the contributions of the authors and editors the book contains chapters by Bishops Ireland, and Spalding, Pope Benedict XV, and extracts from an Encyclical by Pope Leo XIII. Index.

RYAN, J. A., and MILLAR, M.—Continued

Am Econ R 12:671 D '22 40w

"The problem presented is the ethical basis of government. In this new era of political thinking, there is peculiar timeliness in this clear and definite message."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 19 '22 400w

"The work is marked by ample knowledge of the literature of the subject, logical coherence, clear and exact statement, and an entire absence of rhetorical claptrap and sentimental gush. It is a book for the scholarly and the serious minded."

+ Lit R p828 J1 22 '22 110w

"It is not so much a work of pure learning as, in a perfectly proper sense, a piece of propaganda intended to show how liberal one can be in social and political theory and still be a Catholic. The chief value of this book is less its formal solution of a perplexing problem than its evidence of the vitality of a liberal party in an ancient and powerful church."

Norman Thomas

Nation 115:257 S 13 '22 1350w

"Because they accomplish the rare feat of couching important and difficult ideas in plain Anglo-Saxon, Dr. Ryan's chapters will doubtless appeal to a wider circle of readers; but to scholars, especially to historians, Father Millar's hundred-page contribution will prove no less interesting. . . This is a distinct contribution, even though it be exaggerated." P. T. Moon

+ — Pol Sci Q 37:546 S '22 1500w

St Louis 20:264 N '22

S

SABATINI, RAFAEL. Captain Blood; his Odyssey. 356p $2 Houghton

22-16175

"Peter Blood was many things in his time—soldier, country doctor, slave, pirate, and finally Governor of Jamaica. Incidentally, he was an Irishman. Round his humorous-heroic figure Mr. Sabatini has written an exciting romance of the Spanish Main, the facts of which he alleges to have been found in the diary and log-books of one Jeremiah Pitt, a follower of Monmouth in 1685 and Blood's faithful companion in adventure. Blood, of course, never lends his approval to any dishonourable action, even in his piratical days; but like a born good buccaneer, is always able to succour virtue in the nick of time and rescue the oppressed from the most hopeless situations. He gains as his reward, besides the Colonial Governorship, the hand of Miss Arabella Bishop, niece to the planter who bought him when he was transported to Barbados for his alleged complicity in the Monmouth affair."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:55 N '22

"His fertility of invention is remarkable, his imagined incidents are wholly plausible, and what is more, he writes in a spirited and rapidly moving fashion that holds the reader enthralled. At his hands historical fiction becomes a thing of life, a literary product that need not languish in this era of ultra realism." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ag 16 '22 950w

Cleveland p85 N '22

"It is more than usually ingenious; exciting events are related by an author who knows how to treat intelligent readers with respect. A cautious and exacting historical student of my acquaintance says that the book as narrative is in no wise inferior to Dumas." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 109:167 S 30 '22 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:346 D 9 '22 170w

"Stevenson called this kind of thing, of which he himself wrote a great deal, 'tushery.' All we can say is that Mr. Sabatini's book is the very best 'tushery.' It also sticks pretty close to historical fact." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p915 S 2 '22 1050w

N Y Times p28 Ag 20 '22 420w

"It was a great life while it lasted, and it makes a great story." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 20 '22 660w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 132:119 S 20 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:462 N '22

"Mr. Sabatini has an undoubted flair for historical romance. His new book is a pointed example of the effect which can be produced by an audacious crowding of the canvas, a background highly coloured to the point of gaudiness, and dialogue so swift as to border upon consistent violence."

+ — Spec 129:878 D 9 '22 60w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 24 '22 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 14 '22 170w

SABIN, EDWIN LEGRAND. Desert dust. 313p il $1.75 Jacobs

22-8942

The story is of Wyoming of 1868. Frank Beeson from New York starts out to try to regain his health in the high dry air of Benton City. He finds himself a mere catspaw in the midst of the sharks and gamblers who thronged the frontier towns in those early days. In Big Tent camp, a gambling den, under the guidance of My Lady he loses heavily and decides to start for home. My Lady, a decoy of the notorious card sharper Montoyo, begs him to take her away from Benton, but feeling that she is responsible for his losses Beeson refuses. She follows him, however, and their adventures on the road are various and exciting. The brave and noble character of My Lady outshines all else in the battle with the savage Sioux, and she completely captures Beeson's heart.

"A stirring picture of the West before the cowboy came. It bridges the gap between Fenimore Cooper and Zane Grey."

Lit R p745 Je 17 '22 360w

"Such characters cannot but make a tale of absorbing interest, if they are drawn with any degree of art and truth. Mr. Sabin is successful here, for he very evidently has studied the period whereof he treats."

+ N Y Times p25 My 21 '22 100w

SABSOVICH, KATHARINE. Adventures in idealism; a personal record of the life of Professor Sabsovich. 208p il $3 priv ptd Stratford press, 406 W 31st St, N.Y.

B or 92 Sabsovich, Hirsch Loeb. Woodbine colony, New Jersey 22-12986

The subject of this biography is recognized as one of the foremost figures in the field of Jewish social service. A great part of his life was given to the work of the Baron de Hirsch Fund in which capacity he became the builder of the Jewish agricultural colony of Woodbine and the head of the Woodbine Agricultural school. These recollections of him by his wife, the foreword by Eugene S. Benjamin, and the many loving tributes at the end of the volume, all testify to the exceptional character of the man, his rare idealism and devotion to his race.

Am Econ R 12:634 D '22 200w

Booklist 19:120 Ja '23

Cleveland p96 D '22

"As a chronicle of events this book by Mrs. Sabsovich is instructive for all who are interested in the Woodbine plan and in the life-work of her husband. It fails, however, as a character study. Mrs. Sabsovich loved her husband too deeply to see him at a distance. It is the biography of a saint rather than that of a human being." E. C. Vladeck

+ — Nation 114:602 My 17 '22 450w

"Mrs. Sabsovich has done her work very well indeed, writing her interesting story simply and frankly, with dignity and good taste, and diversifying her narrative with many illuminating anecdotes."

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 23 '22 500w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:516 N '22
Pratt p24 autumn '22
Survey 49:119 O 15 '22 160w

SACKVILLE-WEST, VICTORIA MARY. See Nicolson, V. M.

SAINT DENIS, LOUIS ETIENNE. Napoleon from the Tuilleries to St Helena; personal recollections of the emperor's second mameluke and valet, Louis Etienne St Denis (known as Ali); tr. from the French and notes by Frank Hunter Potter; with an introd. by Professor G. Michaut. 303p il $3 Harper

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French 22-23570

The writer entered Napoleon's household in 1806 and from 1811 to the time of the Emperor's death was his devoted personal attendant. He accompanied Napoleon on his Russian campaign, followed him to Elba and to Waterloo and in his exile at St Helena. He gives a simple and detailed account of the Emperor's everyday life at Longwood, of his literary work and religious observances, describing minutely his rooms, his manner of life, his last illness and his death. Saint-Denis's worship of his master is apparent throughout his memoirs, which he claims to have written not from notes but from memory. The manuscript of his recollections has been in the possession of the writer's family for years and has been only recently published.

"That portion of St. Denis's book which deals with the sojourn at St. Helena is a distinct improvement on what precedes it. Whereas in his earlier chapters the valet fails to record essential bits which, taken together, might give a good picture of Napoleon, confining himself instead to chronicling much that is unessential and giving us only here and there genuinely illuminating touches, there is a surprising change when he takes up the story of Napoleon's exile." T. R. Ybarra

+ — N Y Times p4 D 17 '22 2100w
 Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p20 Ja 7 '23 2500w

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATEMAN, ed. Letter book. 306p $2.25 Harcourt [6s Bell]

808.6 Letters 22-11392

A collection of letters with an introduction on the history and art of letter writing. Except for a few Greek and Latin letters, the book is made up entirely of English letters, ranging from the Paston letters of the fifteenth century to Robert Louis Stevenson. Each letter-writer is introduced by a short prefatory note.

Booklist 18:324 Je '22
Bookm 55:298 My '22 430w
Cleveland p71 S '22
Dial 73:235 Ag '22 160w

Reviewed by Maurice Hewlett
Lit R p546 Ap 1 '22 1850w
Nation 115:22 Jl 5 '22 40w

"The propriety of anthologies in general has been discussed by so many reviewers lately that we may surely let alone the question of whether Professor Saintsbury did well to add to their number. Nor is it very fruitful to abuse him for leaving out this and putting in that and not making his letter book a better book. The letters are nearly all by the well-known men and women letter-writers (Mr. Saintsbury is probably right in maintaining that women are the better); on the whole, they are not so interesting as the introduction, which together with the extensive headnotes, when you have got over your bad temper, make really jolly reading."

New Statesman 19:46 Ap 15 '22 650w

New Statesman 20:supxvi D 2 '22 30w
St Louis 20:218 S '22

"He has gone on the principle of using the best letter-writers but not their most famous letters, as a rule preferring those of great merit and interest but less well known. His book is not to be improved upon. Another would have done it differently: no one else alive could have done it so well, with such an abundance of knowledge, with so fine a judgment."

+ Sat R 133:233 Mr 4 '22 980w

"No lover of letters, in any sense of the term, could fail of delight in reading this book: no hand could have made it more neatly than Professor Saintsbury's. . . In spite of all that has been written on the famous letter-writers of the past, what Professor Saintsbury writes of them is as fresh and clear as a glass of good wine."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p121 F 23 '22 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 18:182 Jl '22

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATEMAN. Scrap book. 298p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan 824

"This latest of Mr. Saintsbury's books is what he calls it, a collection of scraps. There are some eighty of them: jottings down of his loves and hates, his learning, his experiences, his literary and political and personal opinions. Here are four little 'necrologies,' as he calls them on Lang and Traill and Henley and Dobson—men, each of them in one way or another, after his own heart. Here is much about the worship of good wine and of good books, of both of which cults he is almost the oldest and quite the sincerest of high priests; and much about 'Labour' and 'the Pussyfoots.'"—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"A book both literary people and men of the world will enjoy. He carries his great learning very lightly."

+ New Statesman 20:supxvi D 2 '22 60w

"It must be admitted that some of the 'scrap' is slag; and once or twice is a tenuous subject treated with such seriousness that Saintsbury gives the impression of an elephant entangled in a spider's web."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ja 7 '23 1400w

"It is all authentic Saintsbury, lively, genial, life-loving, critical in grain, Tory without compromise. This 'scrap book' contains many sorts of good reading—pregnant notes on letters and criticism, curious bits of knowledge, personal experiences, some of them far away from libraries."

+ Sat R 134:882 D 9 '22 700w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 1200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p779 N 30 '22 1000w

SALTUS, EDGAR EVERTSON. Ghost girl. 236p $2 Boni & Liveright

22-15848

A beautiful girl, thru her mother's machinations, is forced to marry a man whom she does not love. Immediately after the ceremony she is stunned into unconsciousness in an automobile accident and apparently dead altho really in a state of catalepsy, is buried in the family vault. From there she is rescued by her true lover and thereafter appears occasionally as a ghost to her nominal husband and others. The story offers occasion for some psychic speculations.

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 23 '22 200w
Cath World 116:266 N '22 160w

"A mystery tale, ingenious and occasionally exciting, but the texture of it is thin, as if to advertise the author's own lack of belief in it; and nothing travels on more leaden soles than a ghost story in which the creator keeps passing his hand through the apparition with a cynical smile, as if to say: 'See, it's a sure-enough spook!'" L. B.

+ Freeman 16:118 O 11 '22 150w

SALTUS, EDGAR EVERTSON—Continued

"Had 'The Ghost Girl' been as adroitly worked out as it was interestingly conceived it would have been a mystery tale of outstanding merit. As it is, it is merely one of unusual brilliance of style."

+ — Lit R p906 Ag 26 '22 500w

Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 30w

"Ghost stories as a rule pass as quickly as a cheap fiction fortnightly. They lack attitude, style and sophisticated plausibility. The Ghost Girl has them. What it purports to be, it admirably is. It will be regrettable if the few cheap faults resident in it should prevent its readers from hunting for older Saltus items."

G. B. Munson

+ — New Repub 33:sup22 N 29 '22 1350w

"A first-rate mystery story, in which the characters are not subordinated to the plot, startling as that is—a story written brilliantly, with flashes of wit crackling through it like lightning through a sultry evening. It is a story that is something of a stunt, certainly, but a stunt so thoroughly well done that it becomes a work of art." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ — N Y Times p15 Ag 13 '22 800w

"Saltus has manipulated the pseudo-spiritualistic thrills of his new romance with considerable adroitness. The limpity of the prose (Saltus was particularly a master of the short sentence), the cynicism of the treatment, the glamor which Saltus knew so well how to cast over anything he did will repay any reader's attention." Carl Van Vechten

+ — N Y Tribune p8 S 10 '22 420w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 3 '22 100w

SAND, GEORGE, pseud. (MME AMANTINE LUCILE AURORE [DUPIN] DUDEVANT), and FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE. George Sand-Gustave Flaubert letters; tr. by Aimee L. McKenzie; with an introd. by Stuart Pratt Sherman. (Intimate letters ser.) 382p $4 Boni & Liveright

B or 92 Sand, George, pseud. (Mme Amantine Lucile Aurore [Dupin] Dudevant. Flaubert, Gustave 21-21963

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:234 Ap '22

"Mr. Sherman's masterly introduction of twenty-seven pages merits unqualified praise. In a lucid style, he has set forth not only the divergent ideals and aspirations of George Sand and Flaubert, but also the main currents of French thought in the nineteenth century. Nothing finer has been written on this subject."

+ Cath World 115:105 Ap '22 160w

Cleveland p71 S '22

"This long debate of intimate opposites, this ten-year tournament between a heart and a brain, possesses immense interest." C. L. Moore

+ Lit R p382 Ja 23 '22 740w

"It was a beautiful relationship productive of some of the best letters ever exchanged between masters of letters." J. Macy

+ Nation 114:168 F 8 '22 420w

Reviewed by Austin Hay

N Y Times p6 Ja 15 '22 2250w

Outlook 130:560 Ap 5 '22 140w

"The translation of the letters is uneven, but on the whole adequate. The worst complaint to be made against it is not that it fails to catch the sense but that it sometimes transfers it into less than idiomatic English."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p629 O 5 '22 1550w

SANDBURG, CARL. Rootabaga stories; il. and decorations by Maud and Miska Petersham. 230p $2 Harcourt

22-20317

"Carl Sandburg has developed a new field in American fairy-tale conception. He has gone to the American prairies, to the Middle West towns and cities, to the great American corn belt, and conceived a series of tales that smack mightily of American soil. Even to the cadences of his prose, so often implicit of poetry, the reader will find an American spirit. Such tales as those of the Potato Faced Blind Man and his friend, Any Ice Today, or that of Gimme the Ax and his two children, Please Gimme and Ax Me No Questions, or (to mention another) the story of the animals who traveled from Philadelphia to Medicine Hat to get back their tails, could have been conceived in no other locale than the United States."—N Y Times

Booklist 19:92 D '22

Cleveland p96 D '22

"The result has rather the effect of a sultry blast from some forced draft theory of nursery education, than a book of ingenuous cool tales for children."

+ — Dial 74:210 F '23 150w

"A most delightful book, perfectly illustrated, and well worth your purchase." W. R. Benet

+ Lit R p193 N 11 '22 1200w

"They will clearly be the feature of the season; they will be scolded, it will be pointed out that children take to them no better than to 'Alice in Wonderland'—and all the time they will be intrenching themselves in our literature." M. L. Becker

+ Lit R p303 D 9 '22 50w

"One indignant child, on whom Carl Sandburg's 'Rootabaga Stories' was tried, declared that 'no sensible child would so much as look at it.'" M. H. B. Mussey

Nation 115:sup618 D 6 '22 110w

Reviewed by Clarence Britten

New Repub 33:126 D 27 '22 1400w

"Quaint, whimsical and unusual. Mr. Sandburg's book is a genuine addition to the season's literature."

+ N Y Times p10 N 19 '22 180w

"It is a rare treat to be a child and read it for the first time. It is like no other book. It is nonsensical and wise; it is laughing and serious; it is crude and polished; it has the windiness of prairies and the stillness of blue mists and mountains. It makes America thrilling."

L. St J: Power

+ N Y Tribune p10 O 12 '22 270w

"There is no doubt that the children for whom these folk tales have been written—the children of the East as well as of the West—will thoroughly enjoy them in all their originality of subject and treatment, while those grown persons who know Sandburg's poetry will wish to compare his prose with his verse."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 3 '22 120w

"They are not pretty things written for grown-ups who like the fireside game of pretending to be young again. Grown-ups will read them, of course, but with a lively mind and in a fresh morning mood. For they simply are youth, with no pretense about it; tumbling, gay, vigorous, with running shallows of droll fooling and sudden pools of poetry. And they are shaped and pointed not by an idle patronizing fancy, but by shrewd humor and real thought."

+ Survey 49:397 D 15 '22 220w

Wis Lib Bul 18:276 D '22

SANDBURG, CARL. Slabs of the sunburnt West. 76p $1.75 Harcourt

$11

22-9964

A collection of some thirty poems of which the first and longest is "The windy city." From its crowding workers, its monotonous streets, its skyscrapers, its winds from lake and prairie, the poet evokes the heart of Chicago, its beauty as well as its strength. Another of the longer poems is a song to the unknown soldier, "the doughboy who dug under and died when they told him to."

Booklist 18:357 Jl '22

"In much of this small book there is the sign of a mellowed Sandburg. To the old music and understanding comes sweetness." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:521 Jl '22 250w

"All the best and all the worst of Mr. Sandburg's character as a writer of verse is in this book. His virility is here in the unadorned lingo, as he chooses to call his speech, of the city and the plains; his tenderness is here, with a pathos and a sentiment of the misty mirages of dreams." W: S. Braithwaite

+ — Boston Transcript p4 J1 29 '22 1250w

"Sandburg in his poems uses neither metre nor rhyme, but if he gives an impression of ragged ease it is not much more than a surface impression. His verse as a matter of fact is highly organized; it is not free verse at all, in the common acceptance of the word. Rather it is repetitive verse. He uses parallel constructions; he repeats words and phrases with great skill; thereby he produces effects as complex and difficult sometimes as those of Swinburne's most intricate ballades. Sandburg writes American like a foreign language, like a language freshly acquired in which each word has a new and fascinating meaning. It is a language, in fact, which never existed before; the separate words existed, but in the speech of no one man; Sandburg was the first to thesaurize them. More than H. L. Mencken or John V. A. Weaver or any one else he can claim the discredit of bringing a new language into a world whose tongues are too confused already." Malcolm Cowley

+ — Dial 73:563 N '22 1200w

"No assortment of verbal Roman candles and pinwheels and other interjectional fireworks, no quantity of Whitmanesque catalogues, can supply the place of coherent and cohering sentences, whether in prose or verse." Arthur Guiterman

+ — Ind 109:53 Ag 5 '22 500w

"There is no use asking again, 'Is it poetry?' However long they may or may not endure, his words are now strikingly alive, his irony rasps, the impression sinks deep." W: R. Benet

+ — Lit R p820 J1 22 '22 230w

"Mr. Sandburg's method, including his vocabulary, limits his audience today, and does more to his lovers of tomorrow. For slang is last night's toadstool growth; some of it is trodden underfoot before the page that uses it leaves the presses. Sandburg uses unfamiliar rhythms, and a vocabulary that tomorrow will speak only to the archaeologist. It will take unusual vitality to overcome this handicap. In any case, he is uniquely himself, penetrating, courageous, heartening." Clement Wood

+ — Nation 115:96 J1 26 '22 1400w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden

New Repub 32:26 Ag 30 '22 600w

"A book of decided merit, but its highest excellence comes not in the virile portions, but in those quieter, more restrained moments when a poet, rather unkempt, it is true, naturally flows out of Carl Sandburg. He is already in danger of becoming the Professional Chanter of Virility, and this is too bad, for he certainly has an individual utterance to give America that well may be choked in this emphatic attitude."

+ — N Y Times p11 Je 4 '22 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:511 N '22

Wis Lib Bul 15:182 J1 '22

SANDEPSON, EZRA DWIGHT. Farmer and his community. 254p $1.25 Harcourt

630.1 Country life. Community life 22-23192

The book comes under the "Farmers Bookshelf" series edited by Kenyon L. Butterfield. Its object is to give to rural leaders who are working for the development of country life a better understanding of the nature of the community and of the activities and interests it is meant to further, viz., economic prosperity, health, education, sociability and recreation, artistic and religious expression and family welfare. Index.

— — — — —
Boston Transcript p3 D 30 '22 320w

"Mr. Sanderson has excellent chapters on The Community's Education, Religious Life, and The Community's Government. The last of these is an original and valuable contribution on the reconstruction of the civic life. The book is an excellent text for a village high school or for the worker in the country town who is intent upon health or recreational improvement." W. H. Wilson

+ — Survey 49:525 Ja 15 '23 280w

SANGER, MARGARET H. Pivot of civilization; introd. by H. G. Wells. 284p $2 Brentano's

176 Birth control

22-11775

"At the beginning she stands forth frankly as a propagandist, not a scientist. The issue of birth control is to Mrs. Sanger paramount because uncontrolled breeding tends to overcrowd the means of living, thus bringing on famine and war; modern peoples can no longer regard war and disease as satisfactory means of holding population in check; over-crowding is the most potent cause of famine, unemployment, poverty, stupidity and ignorance; reckless breeding costs the lives of thousands of women annually, and cripples thousands more; the happiness of women and children depends on knowledge and control of the processes of population; and contraceptive methods are, therefore, not sinful, but highly ethical."—New Repub

— — — — —
Booklist 19:112 Ja '23

"Mrs. Sanger rides rough shod over the world saving programs of philanthropists, economists, and philosophers as she marshals a most effective array of arguments for the dissemination of birth control knowledge. She sees in voluntary motherhood the only way in which a better civilization can be started, and to the reader she gives most vividly her reasons for this belief."

+ — Bookm 56:103 S '22 120w

"Remarkable book. It is composed with breadth and tolerance, and, above all, with a fidelity to fact which places it well above any work I have read upon this turbulent subject." Brooks Shepard

+ — Lit R p107 O 14 '22 540w

"A stimulating, moving, and genuinely valuable study of birth control."

+ — Nation 115:77 J1 19 '22 50w

"Mrs. Sanger's equipment is unique for piercing clean through the smug fiction that all is beautiful in motherhood. She has developed a power of speech to tell exactly what she has seen and heard, and she is brave enough to do it. Margaret Sanger's real contribution is that she proclaims aloud what women have been taught they must smother to whispers." L. S. Hollingworth

+ — New Repub 32:178 O 11 '22 550w

Reviewed by W. J. Fielding

N Y Tribune p5 Ag 20 '22 1200w

SANTAYANA, GEORGE. Soliloquies in England; and later soliloquies. 264p $3.50 Scribner [12s Constable]

814 Philosophy. Literature 22-26761

The outbreak of the war found Mr Santayana in England, and there he remained until the days of the peace. During this time the most of these soliloquies were written, but they have a philosophic detachment from the war. The themes are for the most part English, and the essays are written under the influence of English impressions and a deep love for England. They are soliloquies of a spirit ranging freely and tolerantly over a variety of themes, but philosophic and literary interests are the strongest. The author's critical faculty is shown at its best in the essay on Dickens. Partial contents: Atmosphere; Praises of water; Cloud castles; The British character; Seafaring; Privacy; Apology for snobs; Distinction in Englishmen; Friendships; Dickens; English architecture; Death-bed manners; War shrines; Skylarks; Imagination; Masks; A contrast with Spanish drama; The censor and the poet; German freedom; Liberalism and culture; John Bull and his philosophers; The British Hegelians; Reversion to Platonism; Ideas; The mansions of Helen; On my friendly critics.

SANTAYANA, GEORGE—Continued

Booklist 19:13 O '22

"What a brilliant vision! What a quiet understanding! Packed with knowledge, wisdom, and beauty." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:632 Ag '22 320w

"It is superfluous to praise the style of Mr. Santayana, which must delight every lover of good English; or the genuinely philosophic outlook of the soliloquies, which will be familiar to all his admirers. Most English-speaking readers, even when they admire most, will feel something which they cannot share in this outlook. This is a barrier to sympathy rather than to understanding; but it enhances the value of the book, by making it more distinctive and challenging. Indeed, few people were better employed during the years 1914-1918 than Mr. Santayana, who built this memorial of the beauties that were perishing while he wrote." Bertrand Russell

+ Dial 73:559 N '22 2000w

"There are phrases and whole passages here before which criticism drops its eyes and only the heart responds. Meantly to speculate whether the philosopher in Mr. Santayana has always maintained his intellectual integrity, would be a poor return for boons such as these. Sometimes it almost seems that he is a philosopher only by accident, and that the only duty which we can safely assign him is to be Beauty's servant-cavalier." H. L. Stuart

+ Freeman 6:164 O 25 '22 750w

"As a philosophic commentator on human life as a whole Mr. Santayana need not be taken too seriously. As a writer of prose and a fashioner of aphorisms he can scarcely be taken seriously enough. These soliloquies have not, perhaps, quite the splendor and marble glow of 'The Life of Reason'; they contain passages and pages unmatched in contemporary English." L. L.

— + Nation 115:233 S 6 '22 800w

Nation and Ath 31:474 J1 1 '22 1300w

"The bulk of the wartime soliloquies are vocal of a deep emotion. The war mood of the land is in them, transmuted by the thinker's personal vision of the nature and destiny of man, ordered and beautified by the cadences of his own spirit and the music of his intellect. . . The fact is that in spite of all his earnestness with respect to the need of understanding the true causes of things, Mr. Santayana is impatient of the grubby and confused detail of them." H. M. Kallen

+ — New Repub 36:sup10 N 29 '22 3000w

New Statesman 19:325 Je 24 '22 1500w

Reviewed by L. R. Morris

N Y Times p8 Ag 13 '22 2100w

"Probably the most distinguished series of philosophical discourses published in English during this century. He is in this book a philosopher, a critic, an essayist, a stylist and (except when he writes verse), a poet. He is a kindly and tolerant man who has found his happiest expression, his most valuable gift to the world, in these soliloquies wherein he speaks what is in his heart as frankly and as honestly as he knows how. No volume of philosophical essays has appeared since the death of Remy de Gourmont which contains so many ideas, faultlessly expressed with wit and grace." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p5 Je 18 '22 1550w

"Mr. Santayana's intellectual reveries, though they partake of the monotony of all reverie, and though one misses in them the clear-cut revelatory analysis characteristic of more purposeful thinking,—a virtue of which this writer is eminently capable,—are fascinating. A peculiarly refined sense of the relativity of all things pervades them."

+ No Am 216:279 Ag '22 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:510 N '22

St Louis 20:247 O '22

"Packed, like the best sort of Christmas pudding, with the fruit of felicitous phrase and epigram. It is also full of the most excellent literary and aesthetic criticism."

+ Spec 129:144 J1 29 '22 1850w

Springf'd Republican p8 J1 1 '22 540w

"Mr. Santayana's latest work is of a slighter order, echoes and reverberations, as it were, of his former great harmonies."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p377 Je 8 '22 1750w

SAPIR, EDWARD. Language. 258p $1.75 Harcourt

410 Language 21-20134

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:176 Mr '22

"There is not a diacritical mark in this book, yet its philology is sound; not a foot-note reference, yet it is scholarly; not a page that is difficult for an interested layman, yet it opens new paths of thought. A rare felicity pervades it, a freedom from the hackneyed; and its balance equals its spontaneity. It is unique in its field, and is likely to become and long remain standard." A. L. Kroeber

+ Dial 72:314 Mr '22 1450w

"The present book is a real contribution, all the more so as it claims to appeal to the general reader." A. F. J. Remy

+ Lit R p639 My 6 '22 820w

"There is nothing trite or matter-of-fact between its covers. The discussions spring from an unusually wide acquaintance with language in all its varieties and a scholarly understanding of the principles of psychology underlying expression. But more than by its learning the book impresses us by its quick insight and acute analysis." Jacob Zeitlin

+ Nation 114:290 Mr 8 '22 1100w

New Statesman 19:364 J1 1 '22 800w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 10 '23 450w

SARETT, LEW R. Box of God. 89p $1.75 Holt

811 22-20939

The title-poem in a book of poetry devoted almost entirely to the red man pictures the struggle in the soul of an Indian between his own and the white man's God, the "God who lived in a box" (the mission chapel). The rest of the poems are in two groups: first, On green altars, poems of the Rocky mountains; second, Red gods, poems expressing something of the poetry and meaning of Indian ceremonies—dances, lullabies, council-tables, a warrior's death, etc.

Booklist 19:153 F '23

Reviewed by D. Morton

Bookm 56:765 F '23 380w

"'The Box of God' has been praised by such poets as Carl Sandburg, Louis Untermeyer, and John Hall Wheelock, a few of many. It is poignant and impresses one with its accuracy. Mr. Sarett's study of his red men has been sincere and intuitive." W. R. Benet

+ Lit R p361 Ja 6 '23 1000w

"The opening poem is not as impressive in its totality as many of the shorter things. . . The dominant impression is of a fresh soil for cultivation, a keen sense of beauty at times, but a lack of the synthesizing power to utter with finality the shaped song. This may well come; it is much to have the new word to say." Clement Wood

+ — Nation 115:sup624 D 6 '22 500w

"Sarett's volume will recommend itself to the reader with a true love of plains and woods. His verses may not be momentous."

+ — N Y Times p2 D 17 '22 400w

Reviewed by Eva Goldbeck

N Y Tribune p23 Ja 28 '23 300w

SARGENT, CHARLES SPRAGUE. Manual of trees of North America (exclusive of Mexico). 2d ed 910p il $12.50 Houghton

581.97 Trees—North America 22-4910

"Systematic handbook, with non-technical descriptions and excellent drawings for the identification of trees. Ed. 2 includes 717 species. Key, glossary, and complete index."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"This admirable book is no rehash of the former edition, but in fact an original work, embodying a great deal of new research. It is in truth a most worthy monument." J. E. C.
 + Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '22 450w
 Lit R p551 Ap 1 '22 130w
 Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:490 N '22

SAVAGE, MARION DUTTON. Industrial unionism in America. 344p $2.25 Ronald
 331.88 Trade unions—United States 22-12315

An account of the various types of industrial unions in the United States, their history and policies. Part one discusses industrial unionism within the American federation of labor, including the brewery workers and the coal and metal miners. Part two takes up revolutionary industrial unionism including workers of all industries—the I. W. W. and the One big union. Part three discusses independent industrial unionism—the Amalgamated clothing workers and the Amalgamated textile workers, with their affiliated organizations, and some other smaller unions. Bibliography. Index.

"The book affords an excellent summary of the development of industrial unions. Its treatment of the growth of industrialism during the past three years is especially useful. The philosophy of the industrialists is also well handled." F. T. Stockton

+ Am Econ R 12:654 D '22 600w
 Booklist 19:109 Ja '23

"In covering so wide a field Miss Savage almost necessarily deals for the most part with the external and structural features of the organizations described, and her efforts to distill any particular industrial philosophy out of these widely various industrial unions are not particularly successful. Yet her work is a serviceable compendium showing what the various organizations are doing. It is interesting and encouraging to see a Columbia dissertation on this subject bearing the imprint of a publisher of 'business' books. Evidently one business publisher thinks that light as well as heat is needed. He is right." H. R. Mussey

+ Nation 115:475 N 1 '22 250w
 Pratt p12 winter '23

"Miss Savage has done a useful piece of work. The arguments for and against the industrial form of organization, the tendencies toward that form where it does not exist, and the probabilities for the future are also summarized. All this is accomplished without any propagandist purpose and without any marked point of view or thesis in regard to the labor movement or any of its manifestations." G. Soule

+ Survey 49:256 N 15 '22 640w

SAVI, ETHEL WINIFRED. Devil drives. 320p $1.75 (6s) Putnam

From the prologue to this story it appears that Clive Warren was not the son of Clifford Mostyn Warren of Warren Court. The latter, tainted with insanity, had married only to save an unfortunate girl from the world, had adopted her son and made him his heir. When compassion had turned into love and the inevitable result threatened, Clifford Warren, rather than hand on his taint to offspring of his own, had killed himself and his wife. In the story itself Clive has grown into manhood, a veritable Apollo of physical perfection and gifted with all the graces of heart and mind. On the eve of his marriage, both young people are cast into the depths of misery by the maliciously imparted information of the taint in his blood. But the supposed cousin, disappointed both in the hope of an inheritance and of an amour, experiences a change of heart, divulges the truth and lifts the cloud.

"Is not as intense a story as the name would indicate. Weave together few romances, involve a few characters, color it a bit with India, a mission and the jungles and you have 'The Devil Drives.'"

— N Y Times p14 F 12 '22 200w

"Mrs. Savi's Anglo-Indians are not quite so amusing as usual, and Birdie Branson is almost impossibly detestable."

— Spec 127:751 D 3 '21 20w

SAYLER, OLIVER MARTIN. Russian theatre. 346p il $2 Brentano's
 792 Theater—Russia 22-23090

"The body of the work consists of his observations in the Winter of 1917-18 in Moscow and Petrograd upon players and play-giving organizations that refused to be extinguished by revolution or semi-starvation. The Russian Opera and Ballet in the Great State Theatre, the Kamerny Theatre, the Moscow Art Theatre and its Studios, Mayerhold and Yevreyeff in Petrograd, their plays (ranging from Tolstoy and Ibsen to Shakespeare and Wilde), actors, methods, theories, are eagerly investigated and industriously explicated. All this, though included in an earlier edition of the work, has now a more lively interest. Three added chapters are concerned with the progress of the Russians at home in the four years since the earlier material was gathered and with what the Russians have done toward making New York a rival of Moscow and Petrograd as a stage for Russian theatrical art."—N Y Times

"The one indispensable book in any modern theatrical library." Kenneth McGowan
 + Bookm 56:761 F '23 420w

"The author combines enthusiasm with sobriety and tempered judgment. He gives us both direct picture and critical comment; the book is a piece of experience and a piece of history." Ludwig Lewisohn

+ Nation 115:697 D 20 '22 450w
 N Y Times p4 D 31 '22 1050w

"Once you grant to Mr. Saylor the truth of his theme, that the Russian theater is the greatest in the world, you will find the book excellent. But if you agree with Mr. Saylor on all points or not his book belongs in every dramatic library." Achmed Abdullah

+ N Y Tribune p25 D 17 '22 1700w

SAYWELL, EVELYN. Growing girl; her development and training; with a preface by Hugh Crichton Miller. 37p 40c McDevitt-Wilson

136.7 Girls. Children—Management and training. Sex instruction

Three lectures by a doctor which deal frankly and sensibly with the sex factor in the education and upbringing of children. The first lecture applies equally to boys and girls and deals with the questions children ask. The second treats the physical, mental and spiritual changes which take place in the adolescent girl and the mother's part in helping her to understand them. The third follows the girl into womanhood and the signs of development, normal and abnormal, which show themselves.

The Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 27 '22 40w

SCALES, MRS LAURA WOOLSEY (LORD). Boys of the ages; their dreams and their crafts. 210p il 72c Ginn

22-9960

Nine stories of boys of various countries and periods of history, each giving a glimpse of the daily life of the times. Contents: Meryt and the eye of Horus; the Egyptian builder; Megacles and his two ambitions; the Greek sculptor; Petronius and the two-faced Janus; the Roman soldier; Yusuf and the star of his fate; the Saracen scholar; Christolphe and the golden fleece; the Flemish weaver; Francesco and the song of the birds; the Italian painter;

SCALES, MRS LAURA WOOLSEY—Continued
Hugh and the quest of the unknown: the English poet-adventurer; Pierre and a daughter of France: the French lover of the beautiful; Nathaniel and the handicraft of a patriot: the American silversmith.

Booklist 18:338 Je '22
Cleveland p96 D '22

SCHAUB, LINCOLN FREDERICK, and ISAACS, NATHAN. Law in business problems; cases and other materials for the study of legal aspects of business. $21p $6 Macmillan
347.7 Commercial law 21-12240

"A presentation of the rules of law in their relation to modern business. The book contains not only a statement of the rules but numerous representative cases in elucidation of the rules. The editorial text diminishes as the book proceeds and the student is ultimately thrown very largely upon his own resources in working out the principles from the cases, and the book will be found well fitted for use in collegiate courses relating to the subject."— Am Pol Sci R

"The book as a whole is of high character, ably worked out, and of interest and value to any well educated business executive or accountant." T: Conyngton

+ Administration 2:698 N '21 600w
Reviewed by S. W. Gilman

Am Econ R 12:649 D '22 500w
Am Pol Sci R 16:344 My '22 100w
Booklist 18:313 Je '22
Int J Ethics 33:116 O '22 80w

"As a whole the divisions of a volume are logical from the business point of view. If any criticism is to be made, it is on the basis that too much space is devoted to single specific problems, without mention of equally important correlative questions; and that frequently cases are interposed where possibly it would have made for clarity to have devoted the space to explanatory text." R. F. Magill

+ J Pol Econ 30:134 F '22 780w

"The method of treatment is technical, but reasonably clear. The book, in the main, is suitable for a layman's reading, but possibly the typographical arrangement is such as may not invariably make it quickly apparent to the layman whether the material is original with the authors or is a cited decision or a condensation of a decision. The authors' understanding of the law is sharply defined and the book, consisting of more than 800 pages, will aid the reader to understand the principles that govern legal procedure with relation to business."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 D 30 '21 200w

SCHAW, JANET. Journal of a lady of quality; ed. by Evangeline Walker Andrews, in collaboration with Charles McLean Andrews. 314p il $3.50 Yale univ. press [15s Milford] 917.29 West Indies—Description and travel. Lisbon 22-1377
North Carolina—Description and travel.

This eighteenth century traveler sailed from Scotland to Antigua, of the West Indies, in the latter part of the year 1771. She visited various other islands, then sailed for North Carolina where she stayed for nearly a year, and crossed the ocean again to visit Lisbon. The part of the journal relating to North Carolina is of particular interest since Miss Schaw who while on Cape Fear was an eye-witness to some of the events preliminary to the Revolution, views these events thru the eyes of a visiting loyalist, and writes of them in a lively and graphic manner. The work of editing has been done with much care and many notes have been supplied.

"Valuable as are these sketches of colonial life, they are matched in quality by the work of the editors. The introduction is all that such an essay should be, an appreciation of the fine traits of the main character by a sympathetic and kindred soul. The foot-notes and the ap-pendixes, the latter consisting of fourteen short essays, contain such wide information regarding colonial affairs and the beginning of the Revolution in North Carolina, much of it hitherto undisclosed, as to make the book a kind of vade mecum, an indispensable work of reference for all who would read deeply in West Indian and North Carolina affairs in the years 1774 and 1775." W: K. Boyd

+ Am Hist R 27:801 Jl '22 750w

Booklist 18:234 Ap '22

"The book is so attractive in both appearance and material that one regrets that it should not be offered to the general reading public. In interest it far surpasses many a book of travel foisted upon romantic readers who journey by proxy; in color and incident it outrivals many of the boring but popular narratives of South Pacific voyages; in value for Americans it ranks higher than many a tome dealing with colonial customs." Clarence Stratton

+ Educ R 64:168 S '22 400w

"Exceptional powers both of observation and of description, keen sense of humour and unflinching courage under difficulties, combine to make Miss Schaw's account of her journey of much value as well as interest. Nowhere will be found a clearer presentment of the political situation, as it affected individuals, at the beginning of the revolutionary struggle than in the chapter on North Carolina."

+ Eng Hist R 37:469 Jl '22 $300w

"To the North Carolina reader it will be of particular value, since it is almost unique among the historical documents relating to the Colonial and Revolutionary period of the state. I recall no other which has anything like the human interest possessed in such high degree by this journal, and none which has anything like its spicy humor. Combined with these characteristics is high value as a historical source. The volume is a model in annotation. In addition to the running notes there is a series of appendices, fourteen in all, which contain a wealth of material—much of it new—bearing upon the history of the Lower Cape Fear. Miss Schaw's comments on things not political are highly enlightening. It is in every way a most delightful bit of reading and is as well a striking and welcome addition to the historical literature of the state [North Carolina]." J. G. de R. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 Mr 5 '22 1650w

"Her journal is written with skill and humor, it is admirably explained and annotated by the editors, and presented in a volume which is a model of typographical good taste." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 108:262 Mr 11 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:32 Ja '23
St Louis 20:250 O '22

"Miss Schaw had a singularly sensitive and receptive mind, herein lies her success; her experiences were vivid, and she reacted to them vividly. There is practically no character-drawing; everyone is either very black or very white; and their colour is largely determined by their politics. The Americans she dislikes and despises so bitterly that one cannot help wondering whether the Dames of North Carolina have read the book they are financing. Miss Andrews has fallen into the prevailing fault of American editors: of serving up raw to the public all the information which their researches have exhumed, however irrelevant, instead of selecting from it the few facts necessary for an occasional illustration."

+ Spec 128:754 Je 17 '22 1000w

"To the wholly detached reader the pleasure of the Journal itself is in three things: in its lively, quick sketching of people and places; in the slightly acid candor which casts across so many pages a shadow, evidently exact, of the author's mind, so nimble, so prejudiced, so entertaining, in its frank advocacy of a partisan view of a great event. Miss Schaw had that blend of sweetness and something else, like a tart but mellow fruit, which only Scottish women appear to have in perfection." N. W. Stephenson

+ Yale R n s 12:121 Ja '23 1250w

SCHEVILL, FERDINAND. History of the Balkan peninsula from the earliest times to the present day. 558p $5 Harcourt

949.6 Balkan peninsula—History 22-17716

This is the first history to cover the almost 3000 years' story of man on the southeastern projection of Europe known as the Balkan peninsula. Beginning with the first or Greek phase of Balkan history and the period of Roman domination which first brought the Balkan peninsula within the scope of Mediterranean civilization, the early periods are summarized to give space for the Byzantine and Ottoman epochs and for the recent period of liberation. The book provides the historical background for an understanding of present-day issues and shows the rivalry of European powers, the conflict between eastern and western civilization, between nationalism and imperialism, which has created the troubled international situation of today. There are bibliographies, maps and an index.

Booklist 19:48 N '22

Bookm 56:515 D '22 170w

"Nothing could be more timely than this survey of Balkan conditions in the light of their historical background, nor could the student of them hope for surer guidance through their sudden turns and bewildering complexities than that which is provided here." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 7 '22 950w

"It is a scholarly work, brilliantly written. But there can be no successful summary of this book. Without the author's lightness of touch, his human handling of epic events, his flexible vocabulary, and the humorous relief of his satire and his most enlightening figures of speech, the five hundred and fifty-nine pages would be of too great and complicated content for any but the professional historian who had already gleaned half its facts from a dozen books. As it is, this history will undoubtedly be read." H. I. Gilchrist

+ Dial 73:669 D '22 1100w

"The vast range and enormous complications of Balkan history are presented in a most lucid and orderly manner." Herman Simpson

+ Freeman 6:476 Ja 24 '23 1100w

"On the whole Professor Schevill has handled remarkably well, and better than any predecessor, the very complex problem of preserving unity in the history of a region which contains many areas and peoples, with all sorts of internal and external relationships. The point of view maintained is surprisingly near to impartiality, so that the book lacks such unreliability as has shortened the period of usefulness of many recent works." A. H. Lybber

+ New Repub 33:181 Ja 10 '23 920w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:603 D '22

Pratt p31 winter '23

"An important feature of this volume is the emphasis placed on the geographical basis of Balkan history. It is said that this is the first attempt in any language to cover the subject comprehensively."

+ R of Rs 66:446 O '22 90w

"Well-designed and ably-written, it is the work of a thoroughly competent writer who evidently has studied his subject long and carefully, and in a spirit of independence has come to quite definite conclusions about it."

+ Sat R 134:721 N 11 '22 820w

"Professor Schevill, of the University of Chicago, writes with all the dignity of the historian who is conscious of a specialized knowledge and unimpeachable accuracy. But his history of the Balkans is not uninteresting, as such integrity might seem to imply."

+ Spec 129:977 D 23 '22 200w

"It will find ready use both as a class text and as an accurate source-book for the general reader who desires the background for the drama—or tragedy—of eastern Europe."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 29 '23 320w

"Professor Schevill has written a useful and creditably impartial account of a difficult bit of country to manage, historically speaking. [He] will not, however, attract many adherents to his theory of the part played by Germany immediately before the outbreak of war in 1914."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p754 N 23 '22 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER. New viewpoints in American history. 299p $2.40 Macmillan

973 United States—History. United States—Politics and government 22-7401

"In this volume the reader is provided with a summary of the new ideas regarding our history which may be said to have begun in 1893 with Professor F. J. Turner's paper on 'The Significance of the Frontier in American History.' The subjects considered include geographic and economic factors, the nature of the Revolution, the significance of Jacksonian Democracy, State rights, the rôle of women, and 'the riddle of the parties.'"—Lit R

"His story flows easily, smoothly, with here and there a refreshing eddy of humor. The book is hard to find fault with. . . The chapter bibliographies are good above the ordinary. They are crisp, critical essays on recent tendencies in American historical research and writing. The index is very full, covering even the bibliographies." R. W. Kelsey

+ Am Hist R 28:131 O '22 550w

Am Pol Sci R 16:726 N '22 80w

Booklist 19:79 D '22

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '22 450w

"His work is descriptive rather than interpretative in scope and character. One finds, however, both insight and originality in his discussion of such subjects as the Jacksonian Democracy, the influence of immigration upon America's spiritual and material development and the shifting yet permanent presence of caste in American life." W. H. C.

+ Freeman 5:478 Jl 26 '22 230w

"To say that the book meets real and vital needs of history teachers is but a mild way of stating the facts in the case. In twelve well-balanced and interestingly written chapters Professor Schlesinger brings together the results of the recent researches in the field of American history in a non-technical manner which is sure to attract the general reader and the history teacher. Professor Schlesinger's book should be read not only by history teachers but also by teachers of economics, geography, sociology, and political science, for the new conceptions and fresh points of view recently afforded by these subjects have had much influence in reconstructing the new story of our past." R. M. Tryon

+ J Pol Econ 30:723 O '22 500w

"Dr. Schlesinger has a tendency to force facts into line with generalities. On the whole the book fulfils its very useful purpose."

+ Lit R p725 Je 10 '22 190w

"Newer interpretations of American history which Professor Schlesinger draws in language distinguished alike for clarity and moderation of tone." H. E. Barnes

+ New Repub 31:259 Jl 26 '22 2400w

"It would be impossible to name a book of greater usefulness and suggestion to the advanced student of American history, or of more solid information in attractive form to the general educated reader who is interested to know the latest results of scholarly research in the field of American history, than these illuminating essays of Professor Schlesinger's. They will bear reading and re-reading before either the charm of their presentation or the profit of their contents is exhausted." D. S. Muzzey

+ Pol Sci Q 37:523 S '22 1450w

"Written in an engaging, vigorous style the book is more than ordinarily readable. Not the least entertaining and valuable material is to be found in the bibliographical notes, in which the author appraises at the end of each chapter

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR M.—Continued
the 'authorities' on the various subjects treated, and does not hesitate to apply new formulas to ancient creeds and their upholders."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 5 '22 300w
Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

SCHMIDT, HARRY. Relativity and the universe; a popular introduction into Einstein's theory of space and time; tr. by Karl Wichmann. 136p $2 McBride [3s Methuen]

530.1 Einstein theory

The book is based on a series of popular lectures and is therefore written in simple, colloquial language, explaining, without the use of mathematics and theoretical physics, how Einstein arrived at his conclusions, which are likely to change our entire conceptions of space, time and matter.

"There are passages here and there which the man in the street will find hard reading, but as a rule the technical terms common in Einstein doctrine have been softened down with homely substitutes."

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 12 '22 390w

"This addition to the large number of popular expositions of the relativity theory has little to commend it beyond the extreme simplicity of the author's treatment. The substance of the argument could have been compressed into half the space had the author been content with a less flowery style."

— Lit R p892 Ag 19 '22 70w

"Colloquial and entertaining, and shows that the author feels the story of physical science to be part of the wonder book of the universe."

+ Nature 109:545 Ap 29 '22 180w

New Statesman 18:596 F 25 '22 670w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:10 Mr '22

"The demonstrations are so ingenious, the summaries so concise, the chapters so well built and thorough, that I feel I have only myself to blame if I do not quite get the idea." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Tribune p10 O 15 '22 30w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:487 N '22

St Louis 20:211 S '22

SCHROEDER, SEATON. Half century of naval service. 444p il $4 Appleton

359 United States—Navy 22-8719

The author begins his autobiographical account of his naval career as a midshipman at the Annapolis academy in the class of '68. From the time of his graduation he took part in all the important expeditions of the Atlantic fleet, including the Spanish-American war and the fleet cruise around the world. In 1909 he was made Commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet and in 1911 retired from active service. Index.

"This book was not written for students of history, and there is not much in it for them. In the first part there are a few passages to delight lovers of the old sailing navy; but the latter half is too much filled with reviews, receptions, and balls, with what the governor said and the text of the admiral's after-dinner speeches to be very interesting."

— + Am Hist R 28:373 Ja '23 200w

"Full of gossip as well as of genuine American history. The story is of personal experience, yet modestly and unobtrusively written, with an evident attempt on the part of the admiral simply to tell his story without unduly exploiting himself." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 27 '22 700w

"The readers of this unusually interesting book of reminiscence will be glad that such varied experiences fell to the lot of one who can, and does, recount them in the clear and simple style which befits an old salt spinning a fascinating yarn. . . . Interspersed with his breezy narrative are delicious bits of salt-water humor and discussions of certain technical questions." C. F. Goodrich

+ Ind 2:17 S 23 '22 1050w

"A vivid story of service, in which the functions of a navy stand forth in true proportion. The book carries an immense amount of valuable and interesting information for the student of naval life." Felix Riesenber

+ Lit R p65 S 30 '22 1150w

St Louis 20:224 S '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 15 '22 600w

SCHROEDER, THEODORE ALBERT. Free speech bibliography. 247p $4 Wilson, H. W.

016.323 Free speech—Bibliography 22-8066

"Every discovered attitude toward the problem, covering every method of transmitting ideas and of abridging their promulgation upon every subject-matter." (Sub-title) The contents are grouped not by chronological nor alphabetical arrangement, but according to the motives, such as economic, personal, religious, seditious, which called forth the expression of opinion they represent. English, French, German and Italian publications are listed, from the time of Queen Elizabeth to the present day.—Survey

Booklist 19:67 D '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:473 N '22

"A remarkably complete bibliography."

+ Survey 48:56 Ap 8 '22 80w

SCHUCKING, LEVIN LUDWIG. Character problems in Shakespeare's plays. 270p $3.50 Holt [10s 6d Harrap]

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Characters

"Contradictions of character, problems unresolved, were of small account to Shakespeare. He did what he could with them. There are, in consequence, plenty of character problems in Shakespeare. The point of Professor Schucking's book is to suggest that we should approach them as problems of Elizabethan dramatic technique. We should have regard to the bareness of the Elizabethan stage, and to the fact that it was visible from three sides. Dramatic illusion in the modern sense was hardly possible, and the Elizabethan drama was much more a drama of convention than the drama with which we are familiar. . . . Above all, we must call to a halt the modern tendency to see in Shakespeare the perfect artist as well as the perfect genius; we must abandon the axiom that all Shakespeare's characters are homogeneous and all his plays internally harmonious."—Nation and Ath

Reviewed by S: C. Chew

Nation 116:151 F 7 '23 1000w

"His is one of the most suggestive essays in Shakespeare criticism which have lately appeared. If we are to be precise, we should rank it almost exactly on a level with Mr. J. M. Robertson's recent book." J: M. Murry

+ Nation and Ath 31:825 S 23 '22 1350w

Spec 129:339 S 9 '22 1200w

"The interest of this book lies in its reassertion of the historical method. We do not think it is a good book; it is certainly a one-sided book. But its downright insistence on the need for history in criticism, and its frequent examples of the fantastic nonsense which the neglect of history may produce, make it at least a wholesome corrective."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p567 S 7 '22 1650w

SCHULTZ, JAMES WILLARD. Seizer of eagles. 230p il $1.75 Houghton

22-12392

The story of a little Indian boy whose great ambition is to become a "Seizer of Eagles." To be a seizer of eagles is a position of great distinction among the Blackfeet tribes and in order to merit it vigorous fasts have to be endured, feats of archery accomplished and many religious rites performed. Little Otter starts out with a happy heart, and with the help of old Red Wings the great Sun priest, he gains his end after having, of course, gone thru many exciting experiences, which boys will love to read about.

Booklist 19:57 N '22

Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '22 230w

Cleveland p96 D '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:256 N '22

SCHULTZ, JAMES WILLARD. Trail of the Spanish horse. 213p il $1.75 Houghton 22-17722

Mr Schultz, himself a Blackfoot Indian by adoption, here tells a story for boys of all ages, of life on the old frontier. Tom Fox, the nephew of the head of a trading post, borrows his uncle's most valuable horse Is-spai-u, and goes to visit his almost-brother, the Blackfoot Indian lad, Pitamakan. While in the Blackfoot camp Is-spai-u is stolen by thieving Indians, and Tom vows never to face his uncle until the horse is recovered. The two boys pass thru many adventures safely and return at last with the horse.

"Well told story for boys of ten and over."

+ Booklist 19:92 D '22

Cleveland p82 N '22

"It has in it much good Blackfoot Indian lore and one chapter of great beauty—that in which the boy, Indian by adoption, makes his solitary fast for a 'vision.'"

+ Lit R p206 N 11 '22 40w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:613 D '22

Springf'd Republican p12 D 22 '22 40w

SCOTT, ALEXANDER MACCALLUM. Barbary: the romance of the nearest East. 222p il $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d T. Butterworth]

916.1 Africa, North—Description and travel. Algeria—Description and travel

(Eng ed 22-4775)

"Mr. MacCallum Scott's new book describes a winter tour in Algeria and Tunis, with special insistence on the past and on the future of these lands. The author was deeply impressed by the ruined cities of Roman Africa, such as Lambaesis and Thamugadi, at the foot of the mountains, or Caesarea (Cherchel) and Tipasa on the coast near Algiers. . . Mr. Scott devotes three chapters to the well-known books of Mr. Hichens, Mr. Belloc and Flaubert."—Spec

"Mr. Scott writes well, writes easily. His descriptions are as vivid picturing as H. M. Tomlinson's own fleeting glance at the shifting sands of this pirate coast. His glimpses of Old Rome are as good, his running fire of comment interesting in the extreme. Even his chapter heads are well chosen; they allure the reader at first glance, and if he be wise, he will read straight through the somewhat bulky book to the conclusion."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '22 250w

"Mr. Scott is of the class of travellers who carry their standards of home along with them and do not attempt to see the Oriental point of view. He shows no acquaintance with Arab life and character and no appreciation of Arab art. The best of the book is in the sketches on Phœnician and Roman remains. The photographs which illustrate the book are excellent." C. E. Andrews

+ Lit R p636 My 6 '22 250w

"Picturesque volume, with its striking pictures. Strange atmosphere and strange gods, modern problems for the French, with slave markets, ruined arches and aqueducts to remind one of the past—no better book than this for the deck of a steamer." M. J. Moses

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 9 '22 330w

"Two admirable chapters on 'The Old Gods' of the Phœnicians and 'Islam' bear witness to the theological acumen which Mr. MacCallum Scott has so often displayed in the House of Commons. A brief but weighty chapter on 'The Task of France' in her African dominions deserves to be read with care; the comparison with our own task in Egypt is especially good."

+ Sat R 133:42 Ja 14 '22 260w

Spec 127:750 D 3 '21 270w

"This is the sort of book a traveller writes not because it serves any special purpose, but out of the simple pleasure of remembrance. Mr. MacCallum Scott made a very usual tour in North Africa, but, having enjoyed himself thoroughly and being impressed by the novelty of all he saw, he has thought fit to expand his experiences into a considerable volume. The good nature of the work is rather disarming to the critic. Mr. MacCallum Scott has little charm of style, and he saw only what thousands have seen before him. . . Unfortunately, nothing can quite redeem the essential triviality of the book, whose paucity of material has to be padded out by three chapters of literary criticism which might well have been omitted."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p794 D 8 '21 390w

SCOTT, CATHERINE AMY DAWSON. Haunting. 310p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]

A grim story of the Cornish coast. Gale Corlyon poisons his brother Pascoe but cannot rid himself of his haunting ghost and the fear that it will one day become visible to others. The haunt drives him from his home, follows him to church on his wedding-day, sits, an uninvited guest, at the marriage feast and finally exacts its price—a life for a life.

"An excellent study of Immobile matter interpenetrated by the eternally mobile."

+ Dial 73:457 O '22 70w

"Mrs. Dawson-Scott has a rather gasping, breathless style; sometimes her Cornish effects have a certain stagginess, and the figure of Gale himself lacks the clear characterization of most of the minor characters. But her story is carefully built up and works steadily up through more than 300 pages to an excellent climax."

+ — Lit R p691 My 27 '22 320w

"Mrs. Dawson Scott is more interested in the amorous adventures of her characters than in any others, even when those others include committing a murder and seeing a ghost. This is a pity, because 'The Haunting' is really an excellent sensational novel and love is a subsidiary theme in it."

+ — Nation and Ath 30:764 F 18 '22 210w

New Repub 31:312 Ag 9 '22 320w

"Here is an unusually well-written story of abundant contrasts, both effective and deeply interesting."

+ N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 100w

"It is a strange and rather moving tale, well written, and interesting from the first page to the last."

+ Sat R 132:621 N 26 '21 280w

"The novel is written with great power, and the description of the love of a middle-aged woman is given with a tenderness which excites sympathy. Nothing so commonplace could be said of this book as that it makes your flesh creep; it is terrible with the inevitability of retribution."

+ Spec 127:900 D 31 '21 600w

"Mrs. Dawson-Scott has a gift of taut and telling narrative, and her characterization, often revealed in a few powerful strokes, is almost uniformly successful."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p750 N 17 '21 340w

SCOTT, MRS EVELYN. Narcissus. 263p $1.75 Harcourt 22-12397

This story is in some sense a continuation of the "Narrow house" since Lawrence Farley appears in it re-married, and hardly more successful in his second wife Julia than in his first wife Winnie. Julia is restless and unsatisfied, interested in clubs and movements, torn by her emotions and the fear that life is not yielding her enough experiences, apparently loving her husband, but having her intrigues with other men. The young people in the story,

SCOTT, MRS EVELYN—Continued

Julia's fifteen-year-old step-daughter May and her boy-friend Paul, are likewise bewildered with life and drifting. The plotless story comes to an inconclusive end.

— Boston Transcript p4 J1 5 '22 550w

"Whether or not one enjoys this book depends on what one expects of a novel. It is not a story for the young, either in years or in culture. It is not a book to be picked up for an hour's diversion. Neither is it abstract science. For one, however, to whom it is interesting that the novel should depict human character with scientific accuracy and detail, here is a book that is well done." G. H. Bishop

— + Detroit News p7 J1 16 '22 550w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke
Dial 73:346 S '22 1600w

"By accepting her neurotics Mrs. Scott intensifies her art; she brings her characters upon a cramped stage under a glaring light; she crowds them into a cage which they think a trap and there inspects their struggles. With the fewest reticences she sets them forth, making stroke after stroke of the subtlest penetration, shearing away disguises and subtleties till she reaches the red quick. And praise of a high degree must be given Mrs. Scott, who with less exuberance and splendor of language than Mr. Lawrence, has a better sense of art, a sharper intellect, a neater hand at satire, and a crisper wit." Carl Van Doren

+ Lit R p803 J1 15 '22 1350w

"Except at moments, except for a page, Evelyn Scott is as far from the center of things as Gene Stratton-Porter. She is, of course, infinitely more civilized." Ludwig Lewisohn

— + Nation 115:192 Ag 23 '22 650w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 31:283 Ag 2 '22 580w

"One-sided in its viewpoint as the book is, within its very marked limitations it is well done, interesting and excellently written."

+ — N Y Times p21 J1 2 '22 950w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 3 '22 300w

SCOTT, FREDERICK GEORGE. Great war as I saw it. 328p $3 Goodchild
940.48 European war—Personal narratives

The author was senior chaplain of the first division of the Canadian expeditionary force and was in France from February, 1915, to the end. His personal reminiscences are a simple, human account of almost every side of the war; of the everyday life of the men in the trenches and dugouts on the march and on the firing line; of officers in their billets; of the wounded; and of men under sentence whom he visited. There are many stories of heroism as well as of amusing happenings.

"His reminiscences are characteristic of the man, who is a student of human nature, a poet, and a humorist. Told with quiet humour, his experiences furnish a very human document in the rapidly accumulating material dealing with Canada's part in the war." H. W. A. Foster

+ Canadian Hist R 3:296 S '22 160w

"His manner is his own. It is an altogether charming manner, marked by sincerity, warmth of sentiment (never sentimentality), and a humorous understanding of men and events. He is capable of eloquence upon occasion and can be dramatic in narrative. It is one of the comparatively few books of its kind that is likely to last, as of more than ephemeral interest."

+ Lit R p812 J1 15 '22 250w

"He has scores of interesting, amusing, and moving experiences to relate."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p478 J1 20 '22 400w

SCOTT, MIRIAM (FINN) (MRS LEROY SCOTT). Meeting your child's problems. 231p $2 Little 173 Children—Management and training

22-9507

It is the instinctive desire of all normal modern parents to make the most of their children, says the author. Unfortunately thru lack of knowledge and training, this too often remains a blind desire. The purpose of the book is to give eyes to that desire, to help parents see the possibilities that lie in their children, to help them see how best to develop these possibilities. It is done in a series of essays with concrete examples. The essays are: The normal home; The magic child; The child who lags behind; Why children lie; Making our dreams come true; Our friends and our children; How to break the rules; When parents are vices; The new riches of play.

Booklist 19:6 O '22

"Mrs. Scott is, to our taste, too academic, and her book has about it some pervasive odor of enforced nobility." Ruth Hale

— Bookm 55:530 J1 '22 50w

"There are jolts to the complacent parent on every page. But once shaken from his complacency, every parent will rejoice that the questions coming before him daily will receive real help in Mrs. Scott's book." R. B. Hibbard

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 5 '22 700w

"Mrs. Scott's book is written simply and clearly. It is interesting. It is short enough to be read through in an evening and rich enough to furnish thoughtful practice for years to come."

+ Lit R p762 Je 24 '22 170w

St Louis 20:204 S '22

"She is never sentimental or 'soft' either with childhood or parenthood, but gives honest, practical advice with innumerable concrete examples. Mothers ought indeed to read it and will read it with absorbing interest—the only difficulty being that those mothers who need it most, are just the sort who will pass it by (and all books like it) with a shrug, deeming the problems of their children unworthy intelligent study."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 J1 5 '22 450w

Wis Lib Bul 18:153 Je '22

SCOTT, MARTIN J. Mother Machree. 177p 2 $1.75 Macmillan
22-21772

"A little choir boy, only nine, with a marvelous voice is the hero. The title is that of his favorite song which touches every heart within hearing distance. It wins him rapid promotion in the most famous choir in the city, and gains the attention of famous singers. The dominant note in the story, however, is rather spiritual than musical. The little Bernard and his sister Alice who is a mother to him are both deeply religious. The story is written from the standpoint of the Roman communion and pictures the devotion and piety of the pair in most winning fashion. Singing in church was not an exhibition in Bernard's mind but a service of worship, and very worshipfully did he offer it. Because the story is mainly true the author lets it end in pathos and sacrifice rather than in a brilliant and successful career."—Springf'd Republican

"The story is very simply told and is one that will not soon be forgotten."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '22 130w

"A sweet tale of religion and of music."

+ Lit R p340 D 23 '22 140w

"A beautiful little story of a boy with an angel's voice, of a sister who loved him and was loved by him, and of the church to which both gave their devoted service."

+ N Y Times p8 D 3 '22 330w

"An appealing little story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 170w

SCOVILLE, SAMUEL. Wild folk. 184p il $2 Atlantic monthly

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior

22-11467

The first of these dramatic stories from the life of wild folk is about a raccoon family the Cleanlys. It tells of their cleanly habits, of the care and training the mother coon bestows upon her young, the dangers that await them and the fierce encounters with their enemies from which they emerge victorious. Contents: The Cleanlys; Blackbear; The seventh sleeper; High sky; The little people; The path of the air; Blackcat; Little death; Blackcross; Sea otter.

"Mr. Scoville is distinctly at his best when writing of birds and snakes and wild flowers. His chapters dealing with the four-foots are much less convincing. The habitats are charmingly described, and there is much useful information, especially concerning the food habits of the species dealt with. But the behavior of his animals continually taxes the credulity of one familiar with the woods, and in many cases his furry characters seem to be creatures of fairyland rather than of New England fields and forests." E. H. Baynes

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '22 500w

Booklist 18:369 J1 '22

Reviewed by A. E. Newton

Bookm 55:641 Ag '22 720w

"One cannot too highly recommend these stories to all nature lovers. Not only are the stories themselves irresistible, but Mr. Scoville's descriptions of the wild folk and forest and river settings of these wild folk dramas are vivid with light and with color."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 20 '22 550w

Cleveland p64 Ag '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:488 My 27 '22 150w

"There is good descriptive writing in the book as well as good story telling. Mr. Scoville's usual inventory method of describing, with his knowledge of detail and his feeling of color, works especially well with such small, jewelled subjects as a raccoon's-eye view of a woodland brookside in May. On a larger scale his brush is sometimes overcharged with adjectives." H. E. Dounce

+ Lit R p852 Ag 5 '22 360w

"They breathe the wholesome spirit of all outdoors and fill the dulllest and stodgiest reader with the desire to go into the woods and fields to study nature from her own open book."

+ N Y Times p15 J1 2 '22 200w

"He to whom circumstances forbid first hand excursions will get an excellent substitute in Mr. Scoville's graphic and sympathetic writing in 'Wild Folk,' and its predecessor, 'Every Day Adventures.'"

+ Outlook 131:314 Je 14 '22 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:491 N '22

St Louis 20:210 S '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 J1 '22

"The stories show much feeling for the out-of-doors, with excellent descriptions of scenes and of animals. Though placed in settings of fact, not all the habits and customs attributed to the wild folk must be taken seriously. Yet the tales will serve to interest people in our wild neighbors." G. B. Grinnell

+ Yale R n s 12:439 Ja '23 250w

SEAMAN, AUGUSTA (HUIELL) (MRS ROBERT R. SEAMAN). Mystery at Number Six. 254p il $1.75 Century

22-1889I

A mystery story for boys and girls, the scene of which is laid in the phosphate mining district of Florida. Number Six was an abandoned mine, long since filled with water. While fishing there one day Beatrice Conant and her cousin Sydney met a strange girl of Beatrice's age. Altho Delight, as she was called, seemed of their own class, she lived with a half-breed guide and his "cracker" wife. Delight had no knowledge of her own people, she only knew that "Uncle Jerry," the guide, had taken care of her as long as she could remember. Here was a fascinating mystery, and Beatrice and Sydney helped in the solving of it.

"An entertaining juvenile mystery tale."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 120w

SEARS, BALDWIN, pseud. See Young, E. G.

SEARS, CLARA ENDICOTT. Romance of Fiddler's Green. 239p $1.75 Houghton

22-4439

Fiddler's Green was the name of an old tavern in Bolton, Massachusetts, where old Abel Stone fiddled for the country dances. His son Zeke was an irresponsible ne'er-do-weel, with a streak of the devil in him who yet charmed the girls and had won the love of Eunice Gates, the prettiest girl of the village. When he mysteriously disappeared on the wedding day and was the cause of the death of the poor jilted bride-to-be, the infuriated villagers only awaited his return to wreak vengeance upon him. After two years he came back under cover of darkness, was at first kept in concealment by his mother and later came under the protection of the Shakers, thru whose efforts the devil in him was routed. The happier romance of his sister Myrtle and a fine young farmer develops along with these happenings and a Shaker garden with its symbolic flowers adds to the element of mysticism in the tale.

"Miss Sears has succeeded in conveying emotion to her readers, in making them see and feel her characters as she must see and feel them herself. Her book has passages of sincere poetic beauty, the more effective for being entirely lacking in conscious poetic endeavor." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ap 1 '22 550w

"The adjective that comes first to mind in thinking about this book is 'pleasant.' The story, the characters, the manner of telling—all are pleasant. Not in any derogatory sense is this intended, nothing of Pollyanna about it, but genuinely wholesome."

+ Lit R p569 Ap 8 '22 220w

"A pleasant little story, with interesting moments and some pretty bits of description. Perhaps the most interesting portion of the book is that which describes the planting of the Shaker garden, its symbolism and significance."

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 2 '22 220w

"As in her previous novel, 'The Bell-Ringer,' the author has one deliciously funny chapter that lightens the rather somber tone of the book. But the book is valuable chiefly for its pictures of the play of spiritual forces and the superstitions of a generation long departed."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Ap 16 '22 350w

SEDGWICK, ANNE DOUGLAS (MRS BASIL DE SELINCOURT). Adrienne Toner. 374p $2 Houghton [7s 6d E. Arnold]

22-9191

Adrienne Toner is a new creation in fiction, an ineffable person who speaks the queer soulful language of an unnamed cult. She is an American who uses generously her large fortune derived from tooth-paste, beneficently manages the affairs of her friends, cures their aching heads by laying hands on them, dominates almost everyone she meets and counts among her devotees even cynics and clear-eyed youth. She captivates Barney Chadwick, a young Englishman, with all his family, but his friend Roger Oldmeadow, older, keener and more skeptical, resists her influence. He wants Barney to marry a nice young cousin who is in every way suited to him, but it is Adrienne whom Barney marries, with the disastrous results that Roger feared. She wants to make everybody happy but seems instead to make every one suffer who comes near her. When Barney leaves her and his whole family turns against her, Roger from a sense of fair play takes her part and becomes almost her only friend. When the war comes Adrienne proves her soul and the reality of her faith and love. The figure which at first seemed almost a caricature takes on an unmistakable beauty and radiance and Roger, who comes in the end to love her, tho hopelessly, finds her faith flowing into him.

SEDGWICK, ANNE DOUGLAS—Continued

Booklist 18:333 Je '22

"Anne Douglas Sedgwick is doing something more than telling the story of one headstrong girl. She is trying out, weighing and pondering upon the truth as it reveals itself through Adrienne as she typifies a certain ideal. Her findings are at once personal and general. That she justifies Adrienne in her final humanizing experiences is undeniable. It is the strongest, most dramatic story she has ever told." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 29 '22 750w
Cleveland p50 Ag '22

"The author's method is one of vague outlines; she is guilty of endless circumlocutions, of needless iteration and reiteration, of page after page of dull and unnecessary conversation. She has not striven for the economy which is necessary to perfect art; she has frequently been guilty of putting into empty verbiage that which might more effectively be expressed in action."

— Dial 73:234 Ag '22 80w

"The novel can be recommended as being, on the whole, rather good summer reading, and it is written by a clever and practised hand." M. M. C.

+ — Freeman 6:22 S 13 '22 500w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 108:565 Je 24 '22 700w

"The qualities of a great writer are to be seen thoroughly coordinated in 'Adrienne Toner,' yet it is not a great novel. . . Miss Sedgwick seems unable—perhaps she is unwilling—to go outside of her intimate circle, the closed circle of English patricians. . . Sooner or later she must realize that if her work is to achieve greatness and longevity it must take root in the common clay below the rich surface soil of her garden." J. J. Smertenko

+ — Lit R p737 Je 17 '22 1000w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 114:653 My 31 '22 1050w

"Behind the work of Mrs. Anne Douglas Sedgwick we feel the force of intellect. The effects that she produces are intended effects. Adrienne Toner herself is a being whose like has never before been created in fiction. Mrs. Sedgwick in creating her achieves a triumph. She is a unique personality, whom we seem to know as if we had encountered her in real life."

+ Nation and Ath 30:764 F 18 '22 380w

New Repub 31:141 Je 28 '22 180w

"A novel filled with real characters, with profound observations of life, with subtle, delicate analysis; its language reaches so high an excellence as to charm lovers of beauty. And it is the natural expression of a sincere and noble mind, which, fortunately for us all, has chosen this outlet." W: L. Phelps

+ N Y Times p19 JI 23 '22 1000w

"This novel is intellectually keen and a little hard in tone; as a piece of masterful character dissection it is a notable work." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 131:351 Je 21 '22 270w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:323 JI '22

"'Anne Douglas Sedgwick' may be congratulated on having achieved a very successful piece of character-drawing in the portrait of the heroine of her novel 'Adrienne Toner.' This new creation may almost claim to be a worthy pendant to the picture of 'Tante' with which the author delighted her readers some years ago."

+ Spec 127:711 N 26 '21 950w

"The warmth of the book is rather long in coming. Through two-thirds of it we feel a very good brain at work, using its skill to touch our emotions as well as to analyse and set out a type of mind. In the last part there is something more: the creative sympathy that draws the reader inside the story instead of leaving him an interested spectator."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p695 O 27 '21 780w

Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

SEERS, A. WADDINGHAM. Earth and its life. 208p il $1.20 World bk.

570 Biology. Man, Phehistoric 22-17378

Beginning with the outstanding known facts about the universe in general, the book is a short compendium of the history of the earth, inorganic and organic. The first ten chapters are devoted to the formation of the earth, the coming of life and its evolution in plants and animals up to the coming of man. The remaining nine chapters trace man from his earliest fossil remains thru his various phases of physical and mental development from the stone age, to the present.

"Undoubtedly this book will be read with interest by children of junior high school age. The subject-matter will prove very instructive, and on the whole it appears that the junior high school student will be able to assimilate it." James Vaughn

+ El School J 23:158 O '22 320w

General Sci Q p569 My '22 10 1

School Sci and Math p594 Je '22 8 1

SELLARS, ROY WOOD. Evolutionary naturalism. 349p $2.50 (12s 6d) Open ct.

113 Evolution. Philosophy of nature 22-1392

The time has come, says the author, for a persistent effort to throw the scientific and philosophical insights of the last generation into an organized whole. It is the dawning of a new era of philosophical systems founded upon an interpretative synthesis of the physical and biological sciences, with the additional implications of a psychology that points out the organic roots of behavior and of consciousness. The resultant world-view will be of the nature of an evolutionary naturalism the problems of which the author attempts to point out and solve, avoiding the defects of the old naturalisms which founded themselves upon the results of the exact sciences alone. He is also not defending the naturalistic ethics associated with the names of Haeckel, Huxley and Spencer but places evolutionary naturalism in the period with pragmatism, genetic psychology, behaviorism, electronic physics, social ethics and epistemological realism. Index.

"While not pretending to have reached finality, Dr. Sellars has worked out in brilliant fashion the thesis with which he began. He has produced a highly suggestive and stimulating book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 4 '22 850w

"Professor Sellars is to be commended in his attempt to square critical realism with naturalism. His writing suffers, however, from a disorderly style. The headings and sub-headings of the individual chapters are clear, but their matter often reads like a note-book, rather than like a finished treatise. This fault is unfortunate in an age when philosophers are striving to reach mutual understanding." Maurice Picard

— + J Philos 19:582 O 12 '22 2550w

Nature 110:631 N 11 '22 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Ap 20 '22 140w

SEYMOUR, MRS BEATRICE KEAN (STAPLETON). Intrusion. 339p $2 Seltzer [8s 6d Chapman & H.]

22-9359

Into a fastidious English family of high intelligence and ideals is introduced an alien element in the person of Roberta Leigh, a girl of rare beauty, but vulgar and soulless. Her intrusion, which comes about by merest accident, affects in greater or less degree every member of the family, but to Allan Sumfield, the eldest son, who marries her and to his sister Caryl whose lover she steals, it brings tragedy. Allan is helpless before her beauty, tho in his sane moments realizing how vulgar she is, and Roberta, seeing her power, makes him pay the full price. The sensitiveness and high honor of the family put them all at the mercy of her meanness and cruelty and she takes the utmost advantage of her power. Her influence is so tragic that there is nothing left to the novelist but to take Roberta's devastating body out of their lives, while its devastating effect remains.

Booklist 18:389 J1 '22

"Some of the emotional situations created are hectic and strained, but the character of Roberta, in which the interest of the book centres, is depicted with a strength and subtlety not manifested in the earlier work."

+ — Dial 73:234 Ag '22 110w

"Has received the most flattering notices from a race of English reviewers. I don't quite see what the excitement is about in this instance. 'Intrusion' appears to be a well-built, well-written example of a very usual kind of thing. . . . I cannot quite make myself feel that Roberta is 'good enough,' real and meaning enough, apart from her type, to justify all the pother." H. W. Boynton

+ — Ind 108:561 Je 24 '22 350w

"It will take Miss Seymour a step nearer than did her 'Invisible Tides' to the place which she obviously aspires to occupy among the more important contemporary novelists. She demands a hearing from all readers of contemporary fiction, yet hers is not perfect work." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 114:752 Je 21 '22 550w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 31:283 Ag 2 '22 170w

"Immensely and incompetently long. . . . Plainly, the idea that art is a selective process as well as a response to life, and demands treatment as well as statement of situations, is not present in Mrs. Seymour's mind." Rebecca West

— New Statesman 17:277 Je 11 '21 200w

"Any lover of genuinely excellent fiction cannot afford to miss reading 'Intrusion' if he desires to keep up with the best work, for it quite definitely places Mrs. Seymour among those figures of our day who are to be considered in the most serious manner."

+ N Y Times p21 My 28 '22 640w

"Apart from Bobbie and Allan, the characters are a little sketchy, as if they had walked in a while from one of Rose Macaulay's novels to talk cleverly and vanish. The book is decidedly well written and it is the reverse of being tedious, but perhaps one gets a little too much of sex attraction as an unavoidable contagion." R. D. Townsend

+ — Outlook 131:263 Je 7 '22 260w

"The whole success or failure of the book really depends on the realizing of the character of Roberta, and certainly Mrs. Seymour succeeds in conveying the fact of her physical beauty through the cold medium of print. The book is a study in contrasts and interesting as a detailed picture of a large family whose temperaments can be most truly described as being 'post-war.'"

+ Spec 127:21 J1 2 '21 380w

"The whole book is depressing; there are six deaths in it, and nobody is happy for more than a page or two at most. Also, the careful detail with which the infatuations of various youths for the heartless Roberta is described, grows wearisome. However, the characters are well drawn, and some of them are rather likable and interesting."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a My 14 '22 130w

"Mrs. Seymour is not sufficiently aware that a character so negligible as Roberta's cannot furnish enough material for such a lengthy drama; it does not offer sufficient 'content,' and instead of a development, which would have justified any length which the author might feel to be necessary, we merely have a reiteration of episodes. If superfluities had been cut out and Mrs. Seymour had applied her abundant intelligence more closely, with more of the artist's severity, her book would have gained enormously in verisimilitude and solidity."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 5 '21 800w

SHACKLETON, ROBERT. Book of Washington.

2 375p il $3.50 Penn

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Description 22-22413

"Mr. Shackleton has taken up Washington's various outstanding features, buildings, streets, and institutions, and described them with liberal accompaniment of anecdote. He has added to his text a large number of photographs and pen and ink drawings that materially add to the worth of the book."—Lit R

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p35 D '22 30w

Lit R p360 D 30 '22 110w

"An intelligent summary and review of the past and present attractions of the city."

+ R of Rs 66:672 D '22 90w

"By anecdotes, by snatches of history, by witty observations and suggestive descriptions, Mr. Shackleton brings Washington before the reader with an abundance of vivacity and color."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 19 '22 450w

SHAFFER, ROBERT. Progress and science; essays in criticism. 243p $2.50 Yale Univ. press [12s Milford]

301 Progress. Science 22-19225

"His general thesis is that science makes for accelerated change but not for progress; that the one kind of progress that most people are talking about is a progress towards material sufficiency; but that since material sufficiency does not clear the way to spiritual progress and since from the evidence at his hand there is little likelihood of raising permanently the standard of living, the author considers progress nothing short of a mischief-making dogma, and ascribes the reason for his conclusion to human nature itself and particularly to human nature's self-centeredness."—Survey

Bookm 56:359 N '22 200w

"The main criticism of his book is aimed at the scientific idea of progress as something inevitable in the nature of things. That he calls a delusion." E. N.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 S 9 '22 820w

Reviewed by Clement Wood

Nation 116:123 Ja 31 '23 320w

"It is a challenge to optimism, or rather to meliorism, based on science and would have more justification if the author could find any passage either in Mr. Marvin's writings, or in any sympathiser's, indicating a belief either that this progress was complete, or that it could be expected to continue without the strenuous efforts of mankind to carry it further and remedy its defects. This Mr. Shafer does not attempt to do."

Nature 110:662 N 18 '22 420w

"On the whole, the book is neither pessimistic nor optimistic, but could be classed as realistic and anti-socialistic. Mr. Shafer knows how to write. He is familiar also with the technique of acute criticism. The arrows which he wings at industrialism, at Karl Marx, at guild socialism, at communism, at school 'self-government' at Wells' world state, hit their target squarely. Such a work serves the useful purpose of compelling people to stand still once in a while and take account of themselves lest their doctrines swallow the bit, run away with their riders and spill them in the bog. His critique, however, would have gained strength had it protected itself by a little more care in certain places: the more so since the author is to all intents and purposes a belles-lettrist and not a trained scientist." A. J. Todd

+ — Survey 49:394 D 15 '22 820w

"It is an able book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p619 S 28 '22 70w

SHANDS, HUBERT ANTHONY (H. ANTHONY, pseud.). White and black. 304p $1.90 Harcourt

22-5074

The story deals with the racial problem as it has developed in cotton-growing Texas between the negro tenant-farmers and the whites. It shows us the temptations to which both races are subjected—the whites to abuse their power, the blacks to drift aimlessly in an environment to which they are insufficiently adapted both economically and morally. The inevitability of miscegenation and its immediate evil effects are enlarged upon thruout the book, a lynching and a raid by the Ku Klux Klan come upon the scene and in the end the man who has all his life endeavored to deal with the situation with broad-minded understanding and justice, falls a victim to a Ku Klux mob.

SHANDS, H. A.—Continued

Booklist 18:334 Je '22

"Some people have said that this book is better than 'Birthright.' We do not agree. We do think, however, that it tells in very interesting fashion facts known to every man or woman who has lived in the South. We think it is an honest attempt to make southern white people think this thing out loud and stop trying to deceive themselves." A. L. Jackson

Bookm 55:423 Je '22 460w

"'White and Black' is worth a thousand 'Birthrights.' Its author is a novelist from whom it is not too unreasonable to expect a masterpiece dealing with the racial question in the South." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '22 1500w

"The picture he draws is not comforting; it is harsh and disturbing, but it is due to such uncompromising treatment that he has turned out a novel with body and backbone." L. B. Freeman 5:502 Ag 2 '22 30w

"A many sided book which succeeds in presenting impartially the salient facts, if not all the facts, on both sides of the race question, or rather situation, as it exists in at least one part of the South. Such a book deserves careful reading by those who are soberly interested in problems of race impact and entanglement." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 108:457 My 13 '22 220w

"'White and Black' is more than a good novel. In it, set down without bias, are more facts—more simple truths about the negro question, the attitude of the Southern white men of different classes towards it, and the difficulties that beset efforts to find a solution for it than may be found in a dozen solemn treatises on the subject. A tellingly effective novel, written with genuine artistry and filled with excellent characterizations, as well as with first-rate bits of realistic description." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p595 Ap 22 '22 600w

Reviewed by S. N. Cleghorn

Nation 114:498 Ap 26 '22 380w

"The material is promising enough, but it is left as material, because the author is interested in something else. What he has attempted to do is to set forth the drama of race relations as it is played or might be played almost anywhere in the rural South. And he has succeeded. One who has not lived in the South will learn more about the real race problem from this novel than from a dozen scientific treatises."

+ New Repub 30:383 My 24 '22 1250w

"Portrays the relationship between the negroes and the whites in the South in the most satisfactory manner we have yet seen, and contains the most veracious transcription of the sonorous and musical negro dialect that has got into print."

+ N Y Tribune p6 My 7 '22 50w

"To pass from 'Birthright' to 'White and Black' is to pass from cynicism and satire to broad stark tragedy. The story succeeds especially in setting forth the bewilderment and the groping of honest men in the face of the situation, and is as merciless on the white people as the Negroes. It has a larger charity than 'Birthright' but unfortunately at no point suggests anything higher than the assumptions on which that book rests." B. Brawley

+ Springfld Republican p15a Ap 23 '22 210w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Je 29 '22 600w

SHARFMAN, ISAIAH LEO. American railroad problem; a study in war and reconstruction. (Century new world ser.) 474p $3 Century 385 Railroads—United States 21-16037 For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

"The book deals with matters of railroad operation during the last few years presenting information which is not easily accessible, but more fundamental is the calm and thoughtful comment running through the entire historical development. The book is timely, adequate, and immensely helpful in comprehending our great railroad problem." E. J. Rich

+ Am Econ R 12:127 Mr '22 1050w

"A well-balanced and impartial analysis of the American railroad problem." W. J. Cunningham

+ Am Hist R 27:597 Ap '22 650w

Am Pol Sci R 16:157 F '22 170w

Ind 108:566 Je 24 '22 520w

"The book is neither exhaustive in scope nor profound and searching in analysis; however, it aims at a readable, not too technical discussion of the most general matters of public interest, and in this it is distinctly successful. It is well written, as well as timely, and strikes a sane balance between the various conflicting interests." J. M. Clark

+ J Pol Econ 30:315 Ap '22 770w

SHARP, DALLAS LORE. Education in a democracy. 154p $1.25 Houghton

370.4 Education. Public schools 22-20047

These four essays, reprinted from periodicals, are a plea for the public school as a national institution and as a training ground for democracy. The third essay, Education for individuality tells something about the home education and reading of Professor Sharp's own children. Contents: The national school; Education for democracy; Education for individuality; Education for authority.

Booklist 19:70 D '22

Bookm 56:641 Ja '23 120w

"The numerous fallacies, bits of casuistry, specious argument, the begging of questions by assuming them proved without citing the evidence—in general, the hollowness of his special pleading, in the name of democracy, for the abolishment of all private schools, and the compulsory attendance by all children of the public schools, carries its own suggestions. The first two chapters, 'The National School' and 'Education for Democracy,' are scarcely less than vicious. [In his two concluding chapters] Mr. Sharp is on more congenial ground; these discussions are an offset to the tendencies of the former chapters. Not the least interesting thing in the book is the matter biographical of the writer's family, which in its objectivity attains somewhat the charm of a good novel." J. E. Jacoby

+ Freeman 6:356 D 20 '22 520w

"Those who see in the recent legislation in Oregon the triumph of a democratic principle will welcome 'Education in a Democracy' as new fuel for the flame; others will shake their heads."

Lit R p371 Ja 6 '23 160w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:12 Ja '23

Pratt p14 winter '23

"The book is lucid, interesting, and thought-provoking. It is intended for the laity as well as for educators." H. F. Walker

+ School R 31:155 F '23 500w

SHAY, FRANK, ed. Contemporary one-act plays of 1921 (American). 630p $3.75 Stewart Kidd

812 American drama—Collections 22-17528

The twenty plays contained in this volume, which supplements his "Fifty contemporary one-act plays" (Book Review Digest, 1921), are a choice of the best one-act plays written by Americans and recently produced in little theatres. There is a bibliography of books of the past year about the theater and another of contemporary plays of the little theater.

Booklist 19:47 N '22

"On the whole the entire collection reads admirably and can be honestly recommended to intelligent amateurs who like to enter the dramatic laboratory with satisfaction to themselves and only a modicum of distress to their friends."

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '22 290w

"Together with several masterly little dramas, clever satires, and skilful fantasies, there are a number of plays that are either too trivial, too shallow, or too glaringly pretentious to be accorded equal rank with the better work in the book. On the whole, the collection maintains a good standard."

+ Dial 74:211 F '23 80w

N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 170w

"A hopeful revelation. The level is high, indicating an unusual level of public taste. The printed play is holding its own with other forms of literature." M. J. Moses

+ Outlook 132:620 D 6 '22 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:513 N '22

St Louis 20:301 D '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:252 N '22

SHAY, FRANK, ed. Treasury of plays for women. 443p $3 Little

808.2 Drama—Collections 22-18799

The plays in this contain only women characters or such male characters as can be played by women. An additional list of plays requiring only women to cast and a list of books on the theory and technique of the theater and the drama are given in the bibliography. Contents: The siege; Columbine, by C. C. Clements; The lost pleiad, by J. Dransfield; The China pig, by E. Emig; A patroness; Ever young, by A. Gerstenberg; For distinguished service, by F. C. Knox; Rocking chairs; Manikin and minikin, by A. Kreymborg; The death of Tintagiles, by M. Maeterlinck; The conflict, by C. V. McCauley; The lamp and the bell, by E. St V. Millay; Rehearsal, by Christopher Morley; Before breakfast, by E. G. O'Neill; My lady dreams, by E. Pillot; Black-berryin', by H. F. Smith; The stronger woman; Motherly love, by A. Strindberg.

Booklist 19:77 D '22

Reviewed by Djuna Barnes

N Y Tribune p9 O 15 '22 900w

"A hopeful revelation. The level is high, indicating an unusual level of public taste. The printed play is holding its own with other forms of literature." M. J. Moses

+ Outlook 132:620 D 6 '22 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:513 N '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:253 N '22

SHEDD, GEORGE CLIFFORD. Cryder. 388p $1.75 Doubleday

22-20683

The story is illustrative of the industrial war now raging thruout civilization. As Doctor Cryder put it: it is a war between the selfishness and greed among the wealthy, and the passion and ignorance among the poor. In the present case it is a wealthy lumber company in the northwest trying to beat a poor settlement out of their claims on a rich timber tract. "Doc" Cryder, a brilliant surgeon, has thrown in his lot with the Kettle Creek settlement, has built a hospital for them and has become their spiritual as well as their physical advisor. He is something of a bully and an autocrat, qualities which repel Frances Huff and inspire her "no" to his proposal of marriage. In the war which develops, in which recourse is had to violence and bloodshed and in which the entire timber tract in question is burned to the ground, Cryder espouses the cause of the settlers only to be misunderstood and repudiated by them, finding himself in the end a crippled and homeless wanderer. But Frances Huff has also gone thru a trial by fire and her eyes have been opened.

Booklist 19:161 F '23

"An honest piece of work, definitely shaped and consciously executed."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 11 '22 500w

Cleveland p85 N '22

"This book is somewhat above the average of the novels of the 'great outdoors.' It is written a trifle more vividly, the background is painted a bit more convincingly, the characters are portrayed with a little more realism and truth, than is usual in tales of timber lands and logging camps. But in spite of these advantages it enjoys no more distinction of plot than does the average novel of its type."

+ Lit R p133 O 21 '22 160w

"The plot is consistent and well-constructed; but the main interest of the story is the character drawing, which, if not always subtle, is singularly accurate. Mr. Shedd does not find it necessary either to romanticize or blacken human nature to find it of interest; even his villains are entirely probable, almost inevitable." W: McFee

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 8 '22 310w

SHEFFIELD, ALFRED DWIGHT. Joining in public discussion. 168p $1.25 Doran

808.5 Public speaking. Debating 22-14848

The book belongs to the "Worker's book-shelf" series and is designed for the use of members of labor unions, conferences, forums, and other discussion groups. After setting forth the aims of discussion groups in the introduction, the book consists of two sections: Qualifying oneself to contribute; and Making the discussion group cooperate. In section one such things as self-control, voice, pronunciation and mental requirements are discussed, and section two is devoted to the committee—as the discussion group in embryo—and to parliamentary procedure. Index.

Booklist 19:116 Ja '23

"These instructions are so reasonable and so thoroughly workable that they should prove almost a life saver to those many would-be speakers who really have something to say, but who lack the self-confidence necessary to put their idea across."

+ Daily News Rec p9 Je 13 '22 450w

"Joining in Public Discussion is a striking achievement in more ways than one. It assumes a thoroughgoing scientific attitude toward facts and problems. It uses simple language. It bases its material upon genuine human experience. And it is scholarly. Writers, publishers and teachers will do well to study the technique and the style of this new venture in educational literature. It reads well, but what is far more important, it actually performs; it is usable and fruitful in the hands of students. [It] is more than a book. It is a challenge." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 33:127 D 27 '22 950w

SHEPHERD, C. K. Across America by motor cycle. 248p il $4 Longmans [12s 6d Arnold]

917.3 United States—Description and travel

The author, a young Englishman, undertook his motor cycle trip across America, from New York to San Francisco, alone, travelling nearly five thousand miles and having many adventures along the way. He writes a lively account of his experiences and most frankly of his impressions of Americans—their roads, their hotels, their manners, their speech. He has a keen eye for the scenery along his route which lay thru the Alleghanies, the Dixie highway, Cincinnati, Kansas City, the Santa Fé trail, the Rio Grande valley, the Petrified forest of Arizona, the Grand canyon, the Mohave desert, and thru Los Angeles to San Francisco.

"Mr. Shepherd's 'Across America by Motor-Cycle' must make the tolerant American, for the time being, at least as long as he is reading the volume, violently anti-British."

— Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '22 260w

SHEPHERD, C. K.—Continued

"It is evident from Capt. Shepherd's account that of all the many angles of observation Americans appear to the least advantage from the seat of a motorcycle. Things strange and unaccustomed which might be the basis of charming and interesting narrative are, through the author's lack of the power of detached observation, made the objects of mere ridicule. Capt. Shepherd's book, however, may appeal to readers who love adventure which combines sport with danger and hardship."

— + Lit R p232 N 18 '22 130w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 26 '22 450w

"The reader soon comes to regard the narrative of this journey across America as a drama in which Captain Shepherd, the rider of the motor-cycle, is struggling with a protean villain. The villain is the road. . . . Passages expressing delight in the aesthetic beauty of Santa Fé, in the stupendous gorges of Colorado and in the suggestive mysteries of the Petrified Forest, recommend the writer as an impartial witness about things American, and compel us to believe that the road was just as he describes it."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 19 '22 850w

SHERIDAN, MRS CLARE CONSUELO (FREWEN). My American diary. 359p il $3 Boni & Liveright

917.3 United States—Description and travel. Mexico—Description and travel 22-5450

This lively and confident diarist having travelled to Moscow, hobnobbed with Bolshevik leaders and done their busts, came to America and spent almost a year here, meeting and being entertained by everybody and recording her impressions with the utmost frankness. She visited New York, Pittsburgh, Washington and Philadelphia, turned south for a trip to Mexico, and then north again to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where most of her time was spent with Charlie Chaplin, whose head she modeled.

"This is no reportorial but an unusually jaundiced account of an America which is not really America at all. As a story of an unusual woman it is entertaining." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:417 Je '22 360w

"Of all [her] adventures Mrs. Sheridan writes brightly, attractively, often delightfully and the reader follows her with the greatest interest, which increases as she leaves New York and all its joys for Washington." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 1 '22 600w

"When she leaves her studio and poses as a radical thinker, she becomes at once merely a noisy, chattering person of no profundity of thought, with no appreciation of the underlying principles of philosophy, either of government or life, and a person distinctly of the type of parlor Bolshevik who listens enraptured to the sound of his own voice."

— Cath World 116:119 O '22 120w

Dial 73:115 Jl '22 70w

"The diary, though it can not be said to reveal any very refined or distinguished attitude towards life, has at least the merit of being 'chatty.'" L. P.

+ Freeman 5:451 Jl 19 '22 180w

"Lively, bright, sparkling, and tinkling—like a gay little brook winding through a pretty landscape, just as charming, and just as deep. She laughs merrily and delightfully." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 108:332 Ap 1 '22 220w

"This lively chronicling of Clare Sheridan's impressions of America is by turns naïve and sophisticated, humorous and serious, forthright and whimsical. It's an abounding, rollicking diary. Despite strange inequalities—among them a curious mixture of knowledge and the lack of it—"My American Diary" is not only alive with keen, sparkling observation, but reaches into wide areas of sympathetic imagination."

Mary Siegrist

+ Lit R p721 Je 10 '22 580w

"It seems ungrateful to say, after having read this very amusing and sparkling account of the sacrifices which a head hunter in exile has made for her principles and her art, that Mrs. Clare Sheridan is almost as frank as Colonel Repington. . . . It is for the touches of nature, for the charm of little Dick, [the author's son] and for the reality beneath the assumed sophistication that one forgives the silliness of much of 'My American Diary.'" M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 2 '22 2000w

Reviewed by Lawrence Gilman

No Am 215:844 Je '22 1750w

Outlook 131:500 Jl 19 '22 100w

R of Rs 65:672 Je '22 110w

Springf'd Republican p12 My 10 '22 220w

Wis Lib Bul 18:184 Jl '22

SHERINGHAM, HUGH TEMPEST. Ourselves when young. 250p $1.75 (6s) Putnam

814 Children 22-2340

"A compilation of delightful sketches of child life, replete with quiet humor which keeps the reader chuckling continually. The workings of the child mind, the whims and fancies in which it delights, are portrayed through the adventures of Guy and Penelope and Poggin with such loving skill as to make the volume one to appeal to all who are interested in children."—Springf'd Republican

"Wrought with a delicate artistry they have a haunting appeal, recreating as they do memories long forgotten, through whose shadowy aisles flit winged feet now walking sedately or forever quiet, and echo the voices of the 'Guy' or 'Penny' or 'Poggin' we ourselves knew, laughing and chattering and weeping in the immemorial April fashion of childhood."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '22 300w

Ind 108:359 Ap 8 '22 60w

"There may be some who will not like it, just as there are those whose digestions permit them only beef broth or milk toast, but any average healthy individual is almost certain to find it charming. From early morning till bedtime there is continuous activity, about which one enjoys reading almost as much as the author must have enjoyed writing."

+ Lit R p586 Ap 15 '22 250w

"Every nursery topic is delightfully discussed, and immersed in such a book it is almost possible for a brief half hour to imagine oneself to have achieved the impossible and for once to have put the clock back."

+ Spec 129:248 Ag 19 '22 70w

+ Springf'd Republican p13a F 5 '22 190w

"The style is bright, crisp, and vivid. Our only criticism is that it is all a little consciously clever and hardly catches the true aroma of a child's simple naïveté."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p310 My 11 '22 130w

"The individual stories, all about equally charming, will tell you that you cannot write for children, or about them either, without the kind of imagination that turns the commonplace into miracle; and that, to succeed, you must adopt the child's own philosophy, which is to treat life as a rare adventure. This imagination and this philosophy are the spirit of the book; and its substance is that of an author who must write beautifully of the smallest happenings, the every-day affairs of small folk." H. T. Follett

+ Yale R n s 11:888 Jl '22 350w

SHERMAN HENRY CLAPP, and SMITH, SY-BIL LAURA. Vitamins. (Monograph ser.) 273p il $4 Chemical catalog co.

613.2 Vitamines 22-4912

"The term vitamins was introduced about ten years ago and although their chemical nature is unknown, much has been written concerning their effects upon animal organisms. This book, by two eminent food specialists summarizes these results and endeavors to stimulate research in a quantitative rather than in a qualitative way. The work is brought through the year 1921. For the general reader the authors advise a preliminary reading of chapter 5, which covers the relation of vitamins to food supply. There is a bibliography of 26 pages."—N Y P L New Tech Bks

"As was to be expected from his experience as an investigator in the field of animal nutrition, the treatment of the subject is comprehensive, but delightfully conservative. Chapter 1 gives an historical sketch of vitamins which is the best we have seen. . . In Chapter 5 there is a discussion of the distribution of the vitamins in natural foods so far as they have been investigated. This chapter has particular value for dietitians and medical men. An extensive bibliography is added which makes the monograph of very great value." E. B. Hart

+ J Am Chem Soc 44:1162 My '22 290w
+ Am Food J p33 Je '22 1col
+ Am J Sci p310 Ap '22 ½p
+ Canadian Chem and Metallurgy p136 Je '22 ½col

+ Chem News p273 My 12 '22 ¼col

+ Cleveland p76 S '22

+ J Franklin Inst p573 Ap '22 1 ¾p

Reviewed by A. F. Morgan

+ J Home Econ 14:343 Jl '22 850w

"The authors have done their work admirably; they have correlated the many facts presented in a wonderful way. The book is very readable and at the same time judiciously critical. It will prove to be of the greatest value to the scientist working in the realm of the vitamins and will save many weary hours of culling the literature."

+ Lit R p669 My 20 '22 620w

"The treatment of the subject is throughout clear and critical, and the authors err if at all on the side of caution." S. Brodetsky

+ Nature 110:6 Jl 1 '22 600w

+ N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:11 Mr '22

+ Public Health Nurse p266 My '22 2col

SHERMAN, STUART PRATT. Americans. 336p. $2. Scribner

514 American literature—History and criticism. United States—Bibliography 23-224

The author makes a distinction between the flag-waving nationalism, discredited since the war, and a higher nationalism that is built on what is best in our traditions. He elucidates his purpose in the first two chapters in which he compares the indiscriminate iconoclasm of such modernists as H. L. Mencken with the formative spirit of our traditions, and concludes that our young people's complete emancipation from tradition is a matter for regret. Thus introduced the book presents critical studies of such representative personalities in American life and literature as Franklin, Emerson, Hawthorne, Whitman, Joaquin Miller, Carl Sandburg, Andrew Carnegie, Roosevelt, the Adams family, P. E. More.

Booklist 19:153 F '23

"When Professor Sherman is able to forget the impudence of Mr. Mencken, the Jeune Fille and the New Spirit in Letters, his essays finely reflect the imperishable dignity of the American worthies and men of genius who were the first notable fruition of Puritanism. . . But throughout all these studies there is, unfortunately, a frequent backfiring from Professor Sherman's irritation with the reckless mood of the moment." E. T. Booth

+ Freeman 6:477 Ja 24 '23 1350w

Reviewed by H. A. Beers

+ Lit R p432 F 3 '23 600w

Reviewed by G. H. Carson

+ Nation 116:100 Ja 24 '23 1150w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 33:178 Ja 10 '23 1350w

"In many respects Professor Sherman is a pupil of Arnold—perhaps too apt a pupil. But Sherman has what Arnold lacked—a developed sense of humor and an abundance of wit. The American critic, however, never allows his sense of humor to disturb the soundness of his judgments."

+ N Y Times p1 D 24 '22 2750w

"The obvious points in the case for and against Mr. Sherman are: he is clever, witty, resourceful, passionate, personal, envious, deficient in a historical sense, at fault in a welter of contradictory ideas, a revolté by instinct and a reactionary by training, a poet, a gifted dialectician, an ironist, a man who resolutely refuses at times to see the truth, a critic in fear of the present and in awe of the past. When he is surveying a figure of the past, such as Franklin or Emerson, or more recently, Henry Adams and Theodore Roosevelt, he is able to bring to his subject the shrewdest analysis visible in modern letters. When he is talking about contemporary literature all he sees is H. L. Mencken." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p17 D 17 '22 2600w

SHERRILL, CHARLES HITCHCOCK. Prime ministers and presidents. 314p il $2.50. Doran 923.2 Statesmen. Europe—Politics and government

22-6615

On the ground that the prime ministers of the European system are more immediately representative of current public opinion than is our chief executive, and that a study of their personalities would place us into direct communication with up-to-date political thought in Europe, the author undertook to visit them in their own capitals and among their own people, so as to envisage, at the same time, the leaders and their backgrounds, the representatives and the represented. Only so, he thinks, can we ascertain the dominant public opinion and the lessons that every European people today has to teach us. The book is illustrated with eleven portraits.

"The book as a whole is sensible, polite and entertaining, just what one would expect from an experienced diplomat."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:341 My '22 130w

"The reader will find it full of excellent and interesting detail concerning the methods by which world affairs are now being carried on. There is no tang of disappointment and no expression of a sense of the futility of mundane things. Above all it has variety." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 8 '22 1400w

+ Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"The book shows signs of having been dictated, and dictated in a hurry. Mr. Sherrill's wrong estimates of character call for sterner criticism. He has been led into his misunderstanding by the pleasing facility of his pen. . . Mr. Sherrill has done his best, a very readable best, but a rather puerile one. It is, however, a welcome sign of the times that such a book should be written. It is time that Americans discovered Europe and that a flood-tide of competent Mrs. Trollope should descend upon the Old World with fat notebooks." F. W. Willson

+ Lit R p507 Mr 18 '22 1400w

Reviewed by J. Dewey

+ New Repub 31:285 Ag 2 '22 620w

"A book well worth serious attention. It is very easy to give attention to this volume, as Mr. Sherrill is the master of a direct, crisp and entertaining style, and he avoids the temptation to be flippant, or the temptation on the other side to be prophetic. Emphatically, a book worth reading and serious discussion, and very easy to read. The reproduced photographs of the various persons mentioned are rare, and as near being works of art as portrait photographs can ever be." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 12 '22 2100w

"Well-informed and highly readable book. Although the political comment is not very systematic, and though some of the portrayals are brief and not very memorable, the book has exceptional value as employing intimate knowledge in the service of good sense. On the whole, it is extremely persuasive."

+ No Am 216:141 Jl '22 440w

SHERILL, C. H.—Continued

Outlook 132:32 S 6 '22 220w

Pratt p34 summer '22

"There is no current book about politics that can be recommended more cordially to the general reader."

+ R of Rs 65:555 My '22 240w

St Louis 20:225 S '22

SHOTWELL, JAMES THOMSON. Introduction to the history of history. 339p $4 Columbia univ. press

909 History—Historiography 22-9959

In explaining the object of the present volume the author calls attention to the twofold interpretation of the word "history." He is using it in its original and more limited meaning of a record of events, instead of in the comparatively recent one of the events themselves. The phrase "history of history" brings the subject of history within the realm of science. It is one of the newest branches of scientific research and leads the inquirer into pre-historic times. The origins of history are accordingly treated in section one of the book, beginning with myth and legend and leading up to Egyptian annals and Babylonian, Assyrian and Persian records. The other sections of the book are: Jewish history; Greek history; Roman history; Christianity and history; Mediaeval and modern history.

"Professor Shotwell approaches the history of history with a contagious sense for the philosophic implications and the wide human interest of his theme. His book abounds in striking thoughts strikingly expressed. Without neglecting the needful biographical details he has thrown open to all who can read a serious book a subject ordinarily reserved as part of the strict discipline of a profession." W. S. Ferguson

+ Am Hist R 28:286 Ja '23 950w

Booklist 19:154 F '23

"Professor Shotwell writes with simplicity, yet with a grace of expression and a warmth of enthusiasm that fire the imagination. His field is one as yet little tilled, his book professedly only an 'introduction to the exacting disciplines of history,' but it goes a long way in breaking ground and is a most valuable bridge for the layman to the study of antique historiography. As to the accuracy of its narrative, Professor Shotwell's name is enough to vouch for that."

+ Lit R p389 Ja 13 '23 170w

"Not only is Professor Shotwell's work one of high scholarship and interpretative profundity, but it is also admirably written, and the stylistic effort rarely demands a sacrifice of accuracy. The only regret that the reader or the student of history will have in closing the book is that the other volumes will not follow in rapid succession." H. E. Barnes

+ New Repub 32:sup1 S 27 '22 2400w

Spec 129:977 D 23 '22 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p750 N 16 '22 150w

SHOWERMAN, GRANT. Horace and his influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 176p $1.50 Jones, Marshall

874 Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus) 22-20301

"This essay is about equally divided between an interpretation of Horace—his personality, his poetry, his philosophy, his literary creed—and an account of his influence through the ages."—Cath World

Booklist 19:77 D '22

"All lovers of Horace can be grateful to Dr. Showerman for helping to advance the Horatian tradition in this age, and adding to the praise of posterity which Horace foretold would be his."

+ Cath World 116:561 Ja '23 480w

Reviewed by A. H. Rice

Nation 115:sup642 D 6 '22 480w

"For intelligence and charm one may safely back Professor Showerman's essay against any other in the whole voluminous literature on Horace. It is written in good, clear English, restrained, yet rich and flexible. There are occasional translations in verse which rank among the most successful in a field where many brilliant writers have tried their skill." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 33:sup10 N 29 '22 450w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 22 '23 150w

SHRUBSALL, FRANK W. Efficient salesmanship; the organization and management of the sales department. (Pitman's popular business books) 118p 85c (2s) Pitman

658 Salesmanship (Eng ed 22-23082)

In describing the organization and management of the sales department of a business the book addresses itself less to the experienced man of business than to beginners. Contents: Outlines of sales department organization; The sales force. Index.

"The little book is written in clear, concise style, and is an excellent addition to the series."

+ Daily News Rec p11 Je 30 '22 220w

St Louis 20:243 O '22

SHURICK, ADAM THOMAS. Coal mining costs. 515p il $5 McGraw

622.33 Coal mines and mining 22-11251

"The present volume is confined to underground costs. It is the first work to deal comprehensively with the subject and it thus constitutes an important contribution to the economics of coal mining. Costs are accompanied by detailed discussion of methods employed, thus permitting intelligent interpretation of cost figures. Comparison of work at different periods is facilitated by a table of all wage scales in Central competitive district, 1898-1921."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:496 N '22

SHUSTER, GEORGE NAUMAN. Catholic spirit in modern English literature. 365p $2 Macmillan

820.9 Religion in literature. English literature—Catholic authors. English literature—History and criticism 22-12491

The author's thesis is that the "Catholic spirit has been, and is, hard at work in modern English literature." His book is a survey of the contributions made by Catholic authors during the last hundred years to English and American literature. Three chapters are given to Cardinal Newman, and a chapter each is devoted to Kenelm Digby, to the Oxford movement and its leaders, to Francis Thompson, Robert Hugh Benson, G. K. Chesterton, Hilaire Belloc and to the American contribution. The index makes a serviceable list of Catholic authors.

"A survey of the Catholic spirit in modern literature which is important and authoritative." + Boston Transcript p6 S 6 '22 300w

"In general scope and intent, Professor Shuster's work is magnificent. The chapters dealing with 'The Voice of Ireland' and 'Vistas of the Catholic Spirit,' seem to suggest that various portions of this extraordinary book may have been written as separate essays and later brought rather hastily together—which would go far toward explaining the qualities and the defects of the whole."

+ Cath World 116:111 O '22 600w

"Mr. Shuster's mixed metaphors, occasional solecisms, uncertain proofreading, poor puns, and careless self-contradictions are not exclusively Catholic peculiarities, of course, and perhaps after all do no very great harm to his argument. He seems to betray a tendency to substitute 'fine writing' or too easy rallery for a rigorous thinking-the-thing-through." Lawrence Mason

— Lit R p7 S 9 '22 1550w

St Louis 20:300 D '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p826 D 7 '22 120w

SILVERS, EARL REED. Ned Beals, freshman. 238p $1.75 Appleton

22-4434

Ned Beals and his chum Dud Chalmers were freshmen at the state university. As Redway, their home town, was only ten miles from Collegeville, the boys commuted each day. To their surprise they found that commuters were looked down upon by the men who lived on campus, and each man seemed to consider it a duty to make life miserable for the commuter. However, Ned and Dud gathered around them a little group of fellow commuters, called themselves the "commuters' club," and set out to live down the spirit of animosity. They succeeded so well, that the end of their first year found them all acknowledged members in good standing of their alma mater.

"The book is perfectly innocuous, and not as crude as Horatio Alger. Mr. Silvers is to be congratulated for not making his hero an athlete, and for introducing the anti-commuter feeling present in the larger institutions. He has written a good book for boys, but any freshman will agree that it tells only half the story of what college is."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 9 '22 100w

SIMKHOVITCH, VLADIMIR GREGORIE-VITCH. Toward the understanding of Jesus and other historical studies. 165p $1.75 Macmillan

904 Jesus Christ. Rome—Economic conditions 21-21955

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:185 Mr '22

J Religion 2:219 Mr '22 80w

"Professor Simkhovitch's digression into the problem of the Gospel records is welcome for its unaffected interest and will render a service. But his critical reputation will find a much firmer base in the two little essays which complete the volume, 'Rome's Fall Reconsidered' and 'Hay and History.' They are full of originality, learning, and popular interest."

+ Lit R p439 F 18 '22 400w

"Of the three extremely interesting studies the first, which gives the title to the book, is the least valuable. Far more impressive is his second essay on the fall of Rome." Preserved Smith

+ Nation 114:263 Mr 1 '22 400w

"The whole book reflects the mind of an unbiased and constructive scholar."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a D 24 '22 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p827 D 7 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 18:102 Ap '22

SIMMONS, EDWARD. From seven to seventy: memories of a painter and a Yankee; with an interruption by Oliver Herford. 344p il $4 Harper

B or 92

22-21923

These memoirs of one of America's famous painters begin with his boyhood in the Old Manse in Concord, where he met all the great ones of his day from Emerson to Thoreau. With much humor and a wealth of anecdotes he tells of his adventures from the East to the far West of the United States before he found himself, and later of his meetings with many famous people in Europe and America.

"So few people are able to make entertaining reading even from the most interesting of lives, that these reminiscences by a celebrated American painter are certain to be hailed with great joy. . . 'From Seven to Seventy' is a rare book, full of rich enjoyment throughout, and leaving behind it a wealth of new impressions." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript pl D 2 '22 1050w

"This book is the fine chronicle of a New England artist who has lived to the hilt. For anecdote, frankness, reminiscence, and vitality it must be set on the shelf by the side of Hunker's 'Steeplejack.' There is a smell of wine and life in the raw in all the pages of this book. It is one of those rare autobiographies—a book with a bouquet." B: DeCasseres

+ Nation 115:721 D 27 '22 900w

"Needless to say the autobiography of a man who lived life to the utmost through a term of sixty-three years, which included the literary heyday of old Concord, the Civil War, the West when it was still 'wild,' the Latin Quarter of Lefebvre, Boulanger, Bougereau and Whistler, and New York 'when Delmonico's was at Twenty-sixth Street,' cannot fail to be an absorbing narrative."

+ N Y Times p15 D 24 '22 2800w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe

N Y Tribune p9 N 26 '22 60w

"He is evidently a born story-teller, and his book is as full as a book possibly can be of anecdotes about men and women of all sorts."

+ Outlook 133:147 Ja 17 '23 200w

Wis Lib Bul 19:24 Ja '23

SIMPSON, BERTRAM LENOX. See Weale, B. L. P., pseud.

SINCLAIR, BERTHA MUZZY. See Bower, B. M., pseud.

SINCLAIR, BERTRAND WILLIAM. Hidden places. 318p $1.90 Little

22-655

Robert Hollister finds himself after the war with a mutilated face that repels everybody, and officially dead. His wife has married again and disappeared into parts unknown with all his money. Discouraged and almost penniless he hides himself in the wilds of British Columbia, where he owns a tract of timber. There he comes across a blind girl, falls in love with and marries her, in reliance on her blindness. The dénouement of the story depends on Doris' recovery of her sight, and the possible difficulties that may arise from his former marriage, both eventualities leading to much futile agony.

Booklist 18:192 Mr '22

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 7 '22 500w

"Mr. Sinclair's style never rises to distinction, but there are many apt phrases in the book. He is as sensitive to the moods of nature as he is to the shadows that pass over the human spirit, and has given us a book which is filled with the mingled awe and spirit of adventure that enfold the dwellers in the wilderness, and is also a genuine human document."

+ Lit R p387 Ja 28 '22 350w

N Y Times p11 Ja 22 '22 130w

"Mr. Sinclair is a practiced writer and he deals with these problems carefully and well."

+ Outlook 130:229 F 8 '22 80w

Pratt p36 Ap '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 14 '22 50w

SINCLAIR, MAY. Anne Severn and the Fieldings. 320p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hutchinson]

22-23903

The relation of Anne Severn to the Fieldings—father, mother and three sons, makes up the story. From the time she first went to them, a motherless child of ten, their lives became indissolubly bound. In their different ways the Fieldings all loved and leaned upon the steadfast Anne, but it was the second son, Jerrold, whom she loved, from childhood, with simple, unswerving faithfulness. This otherwise likable Jerrold had in him a streak of cowardice which kept him from claiming Anne's love because she had been more than once connected in his mind with suffering, which he was always unable to face. The inevitability of their union is felt from the beginning, even after Jerrold had committed the folly of marrying Maisie.

SINCLAIR, MAY—Continued

During an absence of his wife's, the overmastering passion of Anne and Jerrold became an illicit one. The exquisite Maisie loved them both and was unsuspecting. When she finally discovered their secret she set Jerrold free and the lovers were at liberty to take such happiness as they could in the face of Maisie's sacrifice.

Booklist 19:124 Ja '23

"It is an achievement; but, in the main, a mechanical achievement. In reality, these Fielding boys are simply facets of Anne's own character, or rather, they are her need to satisfy various sides of her character." J. F.

+ — Bookm 56:754 F '23 460w

"It is one of Miss Sinclair's best novels, though not her very best." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 22 '22 1350w

"In the main the book is a success—and to it contribute those elements which one takes for granted in Miss Sinclair's work—a decency, a brightness, a dignity, and the acute observation of human beings." Vivian Shaw

+ Dial 74:197 F '23 1150w

"The story is of the slightest. Never, possibly, has a long novel been accomplished with such tenuous material. It is very interesting in spots, however, for when Miss Sinclair gets down to sex unashamed she is always interesting. But the intervals are trying." Gertrude Atherton

+ Int Bk R p11 D '22 3500w

Reviewed by H. S. Canby

Lit R p315 D 16 '22 750w

"All that we have learned to associate with Miss Sinclair, all that makes us approach her recent books with a certainty of reward, 'Anne Severn and the Fieldings' contains." L. Mumford

+ Nation 116:99 Ja 24 '23 1050w

New Repub 33:154 Ja 3 '22 170w

"The circumstances of the book are so casually imagined that the mind is sceptical. The book is distinctly less impressive than Miss Sinclair's novels usually are. This is not to say that Miss Sinclair is not a gifted and delightful artist. She has shown herself that in other volumes; she shows herself that here, in the description of the happy peace of Wyck on the Cotswolds, and in the characterisation of the Fieldings. But perhaps just because here is a romantic theme, that might well involve its writer in adherence to the romantic conception of women, she has forfeited one tiny part of her artistry." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 20:270 D 2 '22 1100w

"Triangle novel, tale of illicit passion, though it is, with nothing shirked and full value given to the physical, it is absolutely clean and often exquisite. Somewhat less of a psycho-analytical study than most of Miss Sinclair's recent work, it is no less valuable to the student of human nature. Unquestionably, one of the most notable novels of the year is this history of 'Anne Severn and the Fieldings.'"

+ N Y Times p8 N 19 '22 1100w

"So selective and significant is the material she employs and so ingenious her method of projecting it that her by no means sensational theme seems crammed with dramatic incident. The result is a narrative that loses nothing in grace, cohesion and conclusiveness or in psychological depth for being vibrant with human interest in every page." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p17 D 3 '22 2000w

"Miss Sinclair's story is a marvelously compact piece of writing. She indicates depths of character, carries on dialogue, deals with subtleties of psychosis, conveys just what she wants the reader to see, all with a minimum of adjectives and adverbs, and with an astounding preponderance of short, simple, common English words." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 133:186 Ja 24 '23 280w

"She has written an extraordinarily able and interesting book, but it is purely abstract. It deals in aspects of people, not in people; there is not a breath of life in it from cover to cover." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 134:794 N 25 '22 1150w

"Miss Sinclair's book is a masterly picture of modern life, having special regard to its sex-problems."

+ Spec 130:24 Ja 6 '23 350w

"Whether the story is significant or not may be a question, but there is no question about the craftsmanship of the book. Admiration for Miss Sinclair's technical skill can only be heightened by a perusal of 'Anne Severn and the Fieldings.'"

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ja 14 '23 250w

"So alive, so moving, so coloured with the bright thread of passion, that one leaves it to walk out into a newly disturbed world aching with the sharp beauty of a borrowed vision. First and last it is a triumph of colour and vitality."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p726 N 9 '22 780w

SINCLAIR, MAY. Life and death of Harriett Fream. 133p $1.25 Macmillan [6s Collins]

22-2309

In this book Miss Sinclair returns to her old manner. In 133 pages, with no unnecessary word, is told the life from babyhood to old age of Harriett Fream, whose parents taught her always "to behave beautifully." Each episode of that sheltered barren life stands out with utmost clearness. Beginning with her renunciation of her first and only lover, because he was already engaged to her friend, life was one renunciation after another. She never once failed in beautiful behavior or arrived at anything but futility.

"Written in a beautifully quiet prose that emphasizes the 'post-Freudian' character analysis and indirect criticism of her scheme of life. Not a popular book."

+ Booklist 18:241 Ap '22

Bookm 55:200 Ap '22 150w

"In content and in significance 'Harriett Fream' is a long novel, although in the number of words it is very short. It contains much more feeling, thought and utterance than may be found in many another novel of four or five times its length, and the richness and fullness of humanity pervades every page. It is May Sinclair at her firmest and deepest, and there is genius in it." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 11 '22 1200w

Cath World 115:700 Ag '22 180w

Cleveland p34 My '22

"A well-conceived study carefully planned, modern and thoughtful in its psychology. And Miss Sinclair is right in the title of her book. For Harriett's death, though it only occupies a couple of pages, is given with a fine intensity which makes the book worth reading for it alone. Miss Sinclair's skill is astonishing, her brilliance never failing, but she writes a priori. She is an academic artist in the truest and least insulting sense." Raymond Mortimer

+ Dial 72:531 My '22 1400w

Reviewed by K. F. Gerould

+ Lit R p447 F 25 '22 550w

"The austere economy of the art of May Sinclair contributes to the power of her portrait. She goes to work with the sureness and the delicacy of a Belgian lace-maker. She places all her little guide-pins with the precision of a perfect craftswoman and weaves her way through her projected forms with never a lost motion." Katharine Anthony

+ Nation 114:400 Ap 5 '22 1200w

"For all its cleverness in design [it] is an empty, as well as a brief story. We feel that we are starved of the mid-Victorian world that sends us so many comical and pathetic echoes. Miss Sinclair does not let us live in it. This is not because she has pruned away all but the stem of her story; it is because she has imagined too little about her characters. . . A triumph, however, Miss Sinclair has achieved in these pages. She has made a long, indubitably dull life a thing so interesting as to be positively exciting. She has transformed a novel, of one character, into a novel of action."

+ Nation and Ath 31:64 Ap 8 '22 1500w

"It is in no sense a novel. It is a tragedy of the meticulous. Harriett's life is as smooth and glassily reflecting as a mill pond. But no one can read it without flashes of self-realization that are as startling as the isolating brilliance of a searchlight, showing the dark rocks of our balked impulses, the treacherous sandbars and shallows of our judgments and our self-deceptions." Una Hunt

New Repub 31:260 J1 26 '22 950w

"An admirably concentrated novel. There are few superfluous words in it and, what is rarer in fiction, no superfluous episodes or descriptions."

+ New Statesman 18:532 F 11 '22 1050w

"Admirably proportioned and constructed, it is in every way, and from every point of view, a notable novel—one not to be missed by those who care for what is really fine and worthwhile in contemporary fiction." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p15 F 19 '22 1100w

"A commonplace mind does not necessarily mean an empty mind, but Miss Sinclair, in her determination to stress the commonplaceness of Miss Harriett Freen, has very nearly succeeded in emptying her of literary content altogether."

— Sat R 133:292 Mr 18 '22 420w

"While the novel in its detailed analysis is an unmistakably clever piece of work, the reader cannot help feeling that, as a whole, it is distinctly anaemic—the result probably of there being absolutely no vigorous personality among the characters. There is ability, but no vigour, on every page of the book. The reader will close it with a feeling of relief, and will wish that Miss Sinclair had employed her analytical gifts on a less bloodless subject."

— + Spec 128:183 F 11 '22 800w

"Though the picture Miss Sinclair gives us is interesting, the story makes no tax on one's sympathy. In values is a notable bit of artistry; it is a thin little book that contains no useless word, but is definite and concise."

+ — Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 2 '22 320w

"This little book is packed tight; it is carved with minute precision; its economy is not of the axe but of the burin. Yet it is fluid and mobile, and rich in suggestion. Every word does its work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p73 F 2 '22 1000w

SINCLAIR, MAY. New idealism. 333p $3 Macmillan

141 Idealism. Realism 22-8982

In her introduction Miss Sinclair says: "This book is not a defence of my 'Defence of Idealism,' (Book Review Digest, 1917) On the contrary it is an attempt to remedy the shortcomings of that light-hearted essay . . . its failure to realise the supreme importance of Space-Time in the problem of consciousness, and the bearing of values on the moral problem." With the admission that the old idealism of Berkeley, Kant and Hegel must go, giving place to an idealism which shall take serious account of the world of space and time, and that, in its controversy with realism, idealism must change its methods and make definite revisions and surrenders of cherished positions, the author proceeds to examine critically the foundations of realism and to outline a reconstruction of idealism. The book is written with the ease and freshness and freedom from technicality which characterized her earlier essay.

Booklist 19:6 O '22

"She has brought to the work a novelist's concreteness of style, and a sense of humor which she manages to insert into a very able attack on the foundations of realism."

+ Bookm 55:647 Ag '22 120w

Cleveland p86 N '22

"Characterised by the happy combination of lightness of touch, with patient and penetrating criticism."

+ Int J Ethics 33:113 O '22 400w

"The present reviewer considers that the book is one of the best defences of idealism that have appeared in recent years. It shows admirable patience in mastering books with which the author does not agree, and does complete justice to their merits. Particularly, the well-deserved tribute to Professor Alexander shows a generous appreciation which is not as common in philosophy as it ought to be." Bertrand Russell

+ — Nation and Ath 31:625 Ag 5 '22 1400w

"You start reading the book with a sigh of relief on finding one written by a novelist and not by a professional philosopher. But as you read on, the brightness begins to pall; and you begin to think that Miss Sinclair would have been better able to express her meaning had she been less liable to be carried away by her metaphors and epigrams. The problems with which philosophy deals are so difficult, and mistakes in it are so easy, that its study demands the greatest possible lucidity, the attainment of which is worth the sacrifice of much superficial brilliance, even of the quality of Miss Sinclair's." R. B. B.

+ — New Statesman 20:36 O 21 '22 500w

"A provocative and in some ways an important addition to contemporary philosophic theory." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p12 Je 11 '22 1700w

"Unquestionably stimulating. The author's extraordinary liveliness and her occasionally remarkable lucidity have enabled her to write a treatise which anyone not hopelessly repelled by the subject matter can read with enjoyment."

+ No Am 216:136 J1 '22 940w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:466 N '22

"Miss Sinclair's second essay in philosophy is written with the blitheness the first would lead us to expect. It is to be regretted that her high spirits occasionally lead her to raise her voice unduly."

+ — Sat R 134:546 O 14 '22 640w

Spec 129:81 J1 15 '22 300w

"In her discussion of the theories of Bertrand Russell, Bergson, Einstein and the lesser lights of philosophy, she makes her point with keenness and humor."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Ap 22 '22 100w

"The style of the book gains from Miss Sinclair's other personality, the novelists's, and the reader will have much enjoyment from the writer's happy gift of phrase."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 O 27 '22 360w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p582 S 14 '22 1600w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL (ARTHUR STIRLING, pseud.). They call me carpenter: a tale of the second coming. 225p $1.75 Boni & Liveright

22-20962

Billy, a member of the idle rich, coming from a moving picture theatre, encounters a rioting mob from which after receiving a severe beating, he takes refuge in a church. Falling asleep in a pew he dreams that the Christ on the painted window over the altar comes down to comfort and heal him. The two go out into the street together and from then on the story is a transcription of the life of Christ as told in the four gospels, but in a modern setting. Every Bible incident repeats itself under present-day conditions and when "Mr Carpenter," as a soap-box orator, literally repeats his Bible speeches, the epithets anarchist, red, Bolshevik, are hurled at him. When in the final martyrdom Billy makes a last effort to save his prophet from the mob the latter in sudden fury breaks away with a: "Let me go back where I was—where I do not see, where I do not hear, where I do not think! Let me go back to the church!" And Billy wakes up.

"A merely impudent pamphlet to prove that Christ and Mr. Sinclair are in exact agreement about politics and sociology, and that all of Mr. Sinclair's hatreds would be shared by Christ, should he return to earth. They talk about the self-righteousness of the orthodox Christians!"

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL—Continued
E. L. Pearson

— Ind 109:167 S 30 '22 180w

"It is the mysteriousness of Christ's utterances, it is the fact that his point of view was utterly unworldly in any sense, that his words were a two-edged sword, that makes any propagandist interpretation of him so self-defeating. And Mr. Sinclair, including much that is true of Christ leaves out as much again. He was definitely dogmatic in many ways that modern Socialists would hotly dispute. The Soul of Man, for instance, interested him far more even than what we call 'social justice.'"

— Lit R p219 N 18 '22 950w

"A generous estimate of the work would be that Mr Sinclair has written little more than a trivial, light and unimportant 'message.' The entire style of the book, as well as the underlying spirit, might properly be described as 'sophomoric;' obviously intended to be highly sensational, and to make the conservative cry out in angry protest, it will probably serve little more than to awaken an amused smile."

— Springf'd Republican p7a O 8 '22 330w

"Upton Sinclair has a reputation for rushing in where angels fear to tread. He has done it again, and, artist that he is, has mastered the most difficult theme with ease and sureness. Like all of Sinclair's writings, this book, is, of course, a Socialist tract; but here he is unmerciful in his exposure of the sins of the poor as well as of the rich, and directs at the comrades in radical movements a sermon which every churchman will gladly endorse."

+ Survey 49:sup210 N 1 '22 260w

SINGLETON, ESTHER. Shakespeare garden.
360p il $3 Century

716 Shakespeare, William—Natural history.
Flowers in poetry. Gardens 22-20854

The author, a devoted Shakespeare student and enthusiastic gardener, purposes to supply the lack of any adequate book on the Elizabethan garden and the condition of horticulture in Shakespeare's time. Part one is devoted to the history and evolution of the small enclosed garden within the walls of the medieval castle into the Garden of Delight of which Parkinson writes; to the Elizabethan herbalists and horticulturists and the new flowers of the day. Part two describes the flowers mentioned by Shakespeare and much quaint flower lore. Part three is devoted to technical hints, instructions and practical suggestions for making a correct Shakespeare garden. There are numerous illustrations from photographs and reproductions of old woodcuts. Index.

Booklist 19:113 Ja '23

"A volume that should fill a much too long existent gap in the many libraries of colleges, schools and private homes. There are far too few books so simultaneously delightful and instructive. The pictures in the book are choice and rare." C. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '22 520w

"Besides being concretely valuable to planters of gardens, the book has literary charm."

+ Lit R p305 D 9 '22 160w

"It is a charming book; its material, interesting alike to flower-lover and bookworm, is entertainingly presented, accompanied by valuable illustrations." Helen Buckler

+ Nation 115:723 D 27 '22 500w

St Louis 21:12 Ja '23

Springf'd Republican p8 D 27 '22 280w

SINGMASTER, ELSIE, (MRS HAROLD LEWARS). Bennett Malin. 328p $2 Houghton 22-12396

In this novel another portrait is added to the gallery of male egoists in fiction. Bennett Malin was born with striking physical gifts and with an inherited urge to write. To this end he chose the ministry as his profession, believing that it would leave him leisure for writing; and with this idea in mind he chose a wife who would attend to his creature comforts and leave him free for the pursuit of literature. An unexpected legacy provided him with sufficient income to devote himself wholly to writing and he forsook the ministry. But with all his painstaking application success never came except when an act of plagiarism brought him a brief moment of ill-gotten fame. After having striven for thirty years without success, he saw his son of nineteen successfully writing, without apprenticeship, without apparent effort. This added the last drop to his bitterness. He had sacrificed everything to the tyranny of his profession, had even sold his soul, and had been cheated.

Booklist 19:22 O '22

"The simple and unpretentious appeal of 'Bennett Malin' carries its readers through it in comfortable mood to the very end. As realism, it is not especially convincing, and it is obviously an attempt to follow the paths blazed many times by Mr. Howells. Its pictures of Cambridge life are faithful, but they are very obviously drawn by the unskilled hand of a visitor or temporary resident to whom the time and place will always be something strange." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '22 840w

"The narrative reflects life intimately and with a first-hand directness which is at once challenging and illuminating. As a character study, it has substance and back-ground; as an accomplishment it is sure-footed and sincere."

+ Dial 73:680 D '22 50w

Freeman 5:359 Je 21 '22 30w

Lit D p55 Ag 19 '22 550w

"The story is told with great sincerity and simplicity, but one is often impatient with the author's straightforward and sombre presentation. The characters are almost without exception drawn with a clumsiness and lack of balance that are grotesque, and the whole is stuck with a sticky vein of religious sentiment of the thickly treacle coated variety."

— + Lit R p842 Jl 29 '22 340w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 115:214 Ag 30 '22 350w

"A singularly flat piece of writing. Action throughout the story is distinctly sluggish. As a matter of fact, Miss Singmaster succeeds in never being quite plausible; and that is due, no doubt, to her being so ardent a devotee of the stock phrase and the stock situation." R. C.

— New Repub 32:76 S 13 '22 120w

"Word must be said for the consistency with which the author develops the various characters who surround her central figure. All of them are painted with a careful brush, and because of this care they stand out as breathing realities before the eyes of the reader. It is this quality that is so great a part of the author's charm."

+ N Y Times p26 Je 11 '22 440w

"The story has structure, action developing naturally and with quiet power from character reacting to environment. It is pleasant to come across a tale so well thought out and soundly balanced as this, in an era of literary incoherence and sloppiness." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p4 Je 18 '22 1250w

"Marked with sincere workmanship and sound spiritual psychology." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 132:119 S 20 '22 100w

"A story of absorbing interest, told with simplicity and directness."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 8 '22 290w

"The story can without inaccuracy be termed powerful, but it does not interpret character beyond the relations set by the conception indicated." R. W. N.

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 9 '22 370w

SKELTON, OSCAR DOUGLAS. Life and letters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. 2v 485:576p il $8 Century [42s Milford]

B or 92 Laurier, Sir Wilfrid. Canada—
Politics and government

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, coming from French pioneer stock with eight generations of French-

Canadian ancestors behind him, took a prominent part in the political development of Canada at the most creative and formative period in its history, in the years when the Dominion was attaining at once industrial and national status. Volume I gives the history of Sir Wilfrid's youth and early political career and Volume II, of his career as prime minister of Canada and of his closing years. There is an appendix and an index.

Am Pol Sci R 16:518 Ag '22 280w

Booklist 18:188 Mr '22

Bookm 55:313 My '22 140w

"The preparation of this biography is accomplished in workmanlike fashion, and its two volumes have a romantic appeal. They contain many photographic portraits of leaders in Canadian affairs, and they are equipped with a serviceable index." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p8 Ja 21 '22 1050w

"The biography before us amply justifies itself as a whole, although exception may be taken, on different grounds, to special sections of it." Adam Shortt

+ — Canadian Hist R 3:77 Mr '22 4050w

"Admirably conceived and executed." L. J. Burpee

+ Ind 109:242 O 28 '22 1300w

"Mr. Skelton's work is obviously that of a partisan admirer of its subject with the resultant effect that it suffers slightly from lack of frankness in criticism and convincingness of defense. From the point of view of an American reader, Mr. Skelton's work suffers also from an occasional obscurity of allusion to the little-known participants in provincial politics. Less frequently there is obscurity of statement and careless proofreading. Upon the whole the impression which this book creates remains that of an inviting task graciously undertaken and competently performed. Undoubtedly it will take the place it rightfully deserves, among the greater Canadian biographies." V. L. O. Chittick

+ — Nation 115:151 Ag 9 '22 1600w

Nation and Ath 31:315 My 27 '22 220w

"Mr. Skelton has been true to his subject. He has written a plain, prosaic account worthy of a plain, prosaic man, but nevertheless a work which we provincial Americans should all read. There is a chapter on the making of a Canadian as interesting as any background ever drawn for the Adams family." C. A. Beard

New Repub 31:313 Ag 9 '22 820w

"Mr. Skelton's book is so comprehensive, and so detailed in its narrative of political struggles that it contains much that for American readers is scarcely worth while. But, after omitting these, for them, trivial matters, they will find enough picturing of Canadian conditions during various stages of the country's progress and enough analysis of Canadian attitude toward the United States to make it richly rewarding. Its value would have been greatly enhanced had the author attempted, in some part of the work, a concise summary, analysis and estimate of Sir Wilfrid's life, character and achievement."

+ — N Y Times p19 Jl 9 '22 2300w

Outlook 131:500 Jl 19 '22 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:176 Ap '22

Spec 128:462 Ap 1 '22 1250w

"To many Americans Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been an honored name. Oscar Douglas Skelton makes that name, for those who have the good fortune to read these volumes, something of a real individual. . . We would have had a clearer picture of Sir Wilfrid if Mr. Skelton had given us more personalia—his recreations, his method of organizing his daily work, his friends other than political associates, and the like. Yet the figure which emerges from these pages, though failing to reveal fully his rare personal attractiveness, is one which we must respect and like." J. M. Gaus

+ — Springf'd Republican p13a Mr 26 '22 1050w

"A comprehensive life of Laurier on a monumental scale, thoroughly well informed and manifestly the result of long and patient research. In this long and at times dreary recital of political events and personalities the human touch is often missing, and that more than anything else was the secret of Laurier's success. At the same time, the story is told with a manifest political bias, and one cannot help feeling that the merits of Laurier rest on a far wider basis."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 23 '22 1450w

SLATTERY, CHARLES LEWIS. Prayers for private and family use. 181p $1 Macmillan
249 Prayers 22-19246

These prayers by the rector of Grace church New York city, were written in response to a parishioner's desire for prayers that should voice individual needs more distinctly than the petitions of the Prayer book. In the form of leaflets these prayers have been kept in Grace Church porch, and being taken away by worshippers there, have come to be widely used and loved. They are now issued in book form, with the addition of some short readings from the Bible suggested for family prayers.

SLAUGHTER, GERTRUDE ELIZABETH (TAYLOR) (MRS MOSES STEPHEN SLAUGHTER). Shakespeare and the heart of a child. 262p il $2 Macmillan

822.33 Shakespeare, William 22-20280

"The story of a little girl who liked to read Shakespeare. In the narrative of her travels are introduced the characters and plots of a dozen or more of Shakespeare's plays, with quotations, descriptions and illustrations that will make a colorful background for reading Shakespeare later on. Especially likely to interest girls from ten to fifteen."—Survey

Booklist 19:93 D '22

"Is rather for mother's table than for the child's bookshelf. It is delightful to read of Barbara's enthusiasm for Shakespeare, and it is easy to see how such a royal playfellow inspired her comrades to follow where she led. Many a parent, on reading this, may find it easier to bring child and poet together." M. H. B. Mussey

+ Nation 115:sup620 D 6 '22 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:37 Ja '23

"A very happy piece of work for young people. The book is a commendable bit of literature deserving a wide popularity."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 17 '22 250w

Survey 49:397 D 15 '22 40w

SLEEPER, MILTON BLAKE. Construction of radio phone and telegraph receivers for beginners. 112p il pa 75c Henley

654.6 Radio communication 22-7019

Presents useful data, photographs, and drawings prepared specially for the radio novice and experimenter on the erection of antennas, planning a station, and building all kinds of crystal, audion, and regenerative receivers, with amplifiers and loud speakers for radio telephone broadcast reception and telegraph signals.

Booklist 18:353 Jl '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:497 N '22

Pratt p18 summer '22

St Louis 20:213 S '22

SLEEPER, MILTON BLAKE. How to make commercial type radio apparatus; a guide book for those who desire to make their equipment the equal, in appearance as well as performance, of the commercial apparatus. 159p il 75c Henley

654.1 Radio communication 22-8739

"Receiving, transmitting, and miscellaneous equipment. Several chapters on aeroplane equipment."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:197 N '22

SLOSSON, EDWIN EMERY, and DOWNEY, JUNE ETTA. Plots and personalities; a new method of testing and training the creative imagination. 238p $1.75 Century

808.3 Plots (drama, novel, etc.). Imagination. Fiction. Personals 22-11694

The personal column of the London Times is responsible for the book. These cryptic personal advertisements gave one of the authors, Mr Slosson, the idea of using them not only as a test of the creative imagination but for training and developing it, and as exercises in plot-making. Their literary and psychological possibilities are amusingly set forth by both collaborators, who initial their respective chapters. Several pages of miscellaneous personals are appended for additional exercise and entertainment.

Booklist 18:357 J1 '22

Bookm 55:634 Ag '22 280w

"Once in a great while appears a book which can be decorated with the rare adjective unique. 'Plots and Personalities' is such a book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 5 '22 390w

"An exceedingly interesting compendium of the tricks of the trade of writing, the tricks being on parade in the new garments of psychoanalytic terms, the whole being addressed to the fantasy which combines and not the imagination which creates. Apart from this error in description the book is interesting because it stresses what the American short-story writer already has in abundance: ingenuity."

+ Dial 73:459 O '22 90w

"Has the merit of being novel in conception, stimulating, and, best of all, not too serious. Consequently, 'Plots and Personalities' is suggestive rather than dogmatic, a book to dip into for contacts rather than calisthenics." L. B.

+ Freeman 5:550 Ag 16 '22 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:522 Je 10 '22 420w

"The book develops into an out-and-out handbook for budding authors, and one that is difficult to plough through. Much of it is written in a distressing pseudo-scientific jargon, varied by an elephantine playfulness. It is curious and highly significant that there is nothing in his book about learning how to write."

+ Lit R p922 S 2 '22 230w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

N Y Times p2 Ag 6 '22 2000w

"The book is eminently practical in spirit and purpose, and its hints on fictional technique and craftsmanship should prove extremely valuable to young writers." W. H. C.

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 6 '22 150w

St Louis 20:218 S '22

"Possibly some aspiring young authors, after their completion of a course in story-writing, will buy this book and use it as a mind-stimulator. In fact, some of the short stories now appearing in American magazines appear to have been written by such a conscious process. Other readers who enjoyed Dr Slosson's 'Creative Chemistry' are likely to be disappointed at his efforts in 'Plots and Personalities.'"

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 2 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Je 15 '22 250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:215 O '22

SMALLWOOD, WILLIAM MARTIN. Man,—the animal. 223p il $2.50 (12s) Macmillan

570 Man. Biology 22-1459

The book "aims to summarize the discoveries of scholars during recent years and to indicate some of their relations to the more fundamental problems of man's physical existence—problems that many are losing sight of in their hasty attempts to produce immediate changes." (Introd.) The subjects discussed are: The laws of the living protoplasm; The biological unit;

What makes man go; The law of biogenesis; Reproduction in man; Heredity; Some applications of the laws of protoplasms; The law of sensation and the nervous system of man; Biological discussion of the problem of learning; Biology and progress. There are numerous illustrations.

"If it possessed an index—and no book ever cried louder for one—we could give almost unstinted praise to this work, for it is marked by a sanity and a reserve that might well be imitated by other biological writers."

+ Cath World 115:834 S '22 250w

Cleveland p57 Ag '22

"We close his book feeling that if this biology, then did Huxley not live and this our faith is vain. Surely it is not too much to expect that even the most elementary information should be charged and vital, and presented with something of a glow. Even in the matter of clarity, 'Man, the Animal,' simple as it is, is hardly easier reading than biologists of genuine originality and flavour, like Osborn, Holmes and Morgan." G. B. K.

+ Freeman 5:286 My 31 '22 180w

Lit R p571 Ap 8 '22 340w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:275 Je '22

St Louis 20:122 Je '22

"The field covered is so large that the treatment is necessarily sketchy. The discussion of Mendelism, for instance, is so slight as to be of little value; on the other hand, the observations on social problems and sex instruction are somewhat out of the picture. Many good illustrations and diagrams."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Mr 23 '22 50w

SMITH, ARTHUR DOUGLAS HOWDEN (AL-LAN GRANT, pseud.). Doom trail. 312p $1.90 Brentano's

22-5457

"Rivalry of Great Britain and France to develop and corner the North American fur trade during the early part of the 17th century has long proved a fertile field for the writer of fiction and historian. This story opens in London, where trade rivalry of English and French pioneers in the New World had begun to loom up as a question of importance. Scenes of action are early transferred to the colonies. The reader visits New York, Albany, and historical trading posts, and then takes the long trail leading to the French posts in territory that is now Canada. As the title implies, the work has to do with adventures of English investigators along the 'doom trail,' a sort of 'underground' railroad designed to get English manufactured goods secretly into possession of French trading posts for their use in cornering the Indian fur trade. In the end, with the aid of the Six Nations, the 'doom trail' is wiped out, its defenders exterminated and the entire plot of trade rivalry exposed."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 18:369 J1 '22

Cleveland p85 N '22

"Excellent historical fiction of the light, adventurous type."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Ap 2 '22 220w

"Throughout it is difficult reading, one's interest is never sufficiently stimulated nor aroused, and at the close one feels that it has not been worth the effort or the attention and concentration that one has been forced to summon through 312 pages. Perhaps small boys will have entirely different sentiments on the subject."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 16 '22 190w

"In description of historical scenes, action and presentation of principals, both Indian and white, the author has reflected a realism that will be appreciated by and hold the attention of the average reader."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Mr 26 '22 250w

SMITH, ARTHUR LAPHORN. How to be useful and happy from sixty to ninety; with a foreword by Sir Charters Symonds. 237p $2 Dodd

612.67 Old age (Eng ed 22-13886)

Illustrating with many instances of long life and usefulness extended far into the nineties, the author elaborates on the principal factors that help to prolong personal efficiency beyond the so-called normal. Among these the most important are moderation and simplicity in food, fresh air, and continued activity. Retiring from active life at sixty is a great mistake, likewise leading of too placid an existence, the pace that kills being the crawl rather than the hustle and bustle of present day life. He also warns against changing one's life-long habits at sixty, and against some of the special enemies of old age. Appendix, index.

Booklist 19:72 D '22

"As useful and sensible a book for those beyond middle age as can wisely be written, for the general public."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 11 '22 290w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p9 N 19 '22 1200w

St Louis 20:267 N '22

"Admirably wise and witty book."

+ Sat R 133:264 Mr 11 '22 420w

"A charming book to give to your soured bachelor uncle."

+ Survey 49:sup210 N 1 '22 100w

Wis Lib Bul 19:22 Ja '23

SMITH, BRUCE. Truisms of statecraft; an attempt to define, in general terms, the origin, growth, purpose, and possibilities, of popular government. 255p $2.60 (7s 6d) Longmans

320 Political science 22-4275

"Bruce Smith, for nineteen years a member of the Australian House of Representatives, has written [an account] of the purposes and possibilities of popular government. Great stress is laid upon the necessity of drilling into the usually provincial legislator's mind an understanding of human affairs and the history of various peoples, and an attempt is made to lay down a body of general principles as a guide to practical legislators concerning the wisdom or unwisdom of this or that particular kind of legislation. One does not have to read very far to discover that Mr. Smith's political creed is one opposed to the present socialistic tendencies of his own and other governments."—Am Pol Sci R

"A sane and searching account."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:526 Ag '22 140w

"If there is a more useless volume on political science than that of Mr. Bruce Smith, I have yet to meet it. It dates, a little pathetically, from the era of Herbert Spencer. It abounds in pious sententiousness. It is full of sound moral advice without a single gleam of how the institutions are to be had which might make that advice effective." H. J. Laski

— New Repub 32:203 O 18 '22 130w

Sat R 133:264 Mr 11 '22 540w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p143 Mr 2 '22 40w

SMITH, ELVA SOPHRONIA, comp. More mystery tales for boys and girls. 392p il $2 Lothrop

"Stories and poems of ghosts and wizards, of hidden treasure and strange enchantments. This collection supplements 'Mystery Tales for Boys and Girls' and has been compiled in response to requests for another book of magic and mystery. Irving, Hawthorne, Poe and Scott are represented and there are additional selections from such modern writers as Alfred Noyes, Charles Egbert Craddock, Arthur Machen and Quiller-Couch. The collection will be of interest to young people for general reading at all times of the year, but will perhaps be especially useful at Halloween in providing stories and poems appropriate to the season. The book is for boys and girls from 12 years upward."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 19:93 D '22

Cleveland p96 D '22

"This is a rich book for reading aloud or for recitations. This is one of the few books sent him that this reviewer will not throw away."

+ Lit R p207 N 11 '22 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:524 N '22

Springf'd Republican p7a O 8 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:256 N '22

SMITH, FREDERICK MILLER, comp. Essays and studies; prose selections for college reading. 351p $1.40 Houghton

824 Essays

22-12774

The essays here brought together combine material for the study of both composition and literature. They are intended to be used as models in college classes and to stimulate the student's interest in books. Descriptive and character sketches are included, dramatic bits and longer essays which lend themselves to analysis and illustrate construction, clarity and logic. The writers represented range from Bacon to Joseph Conrad and the selections are arranged in five groups: Books and study; Conduct of life; The outdoors; Cities and men; A little group of interesting people.

SMITH, GORDON ARTHUR. There goes the groom. 237p $2 Dutton

22-13453

George Coventry, a gay young man just returned from the war, is met at the station by his guardian and uncle. This uncle Foster is one of four old bachelors all living together who think that it is their duty to interest themselves in the matrimonial affairs of the young nephew. They plan to marry him off to charming Deborah, but she seems to have other ideas and, of course, things do not go as planned. Uncle Foster, who tells the story, finds himself in love with Annabel, one of the girls designed for George. Deborah marries somebody else, and Esmée refuses him, so George decides that since his attempts at matrimony are so unsuccessful he will travel round the world in the hope of better luck.

Booklist 19:22 O '22

"The treatment is necessarily light, the theme engaging and sophisticated, the artistry exquisite."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 27 '22 380w

"The incident of the old scientist and his invention are overlabored and rather flat in the upshot. The merit of the book lies in its amusing minor situations and turns of phrase"

H. W. Boynton

+ — Ind 108:526 Je 10 '22 180w

"With a quite different manner he nevertheless reminds one a little of no less a personage than Stockton, though Mr. Smith does not quite go to Stocktonian lengths. One feels that he could if he wanted to let himself go, but this is a rather more subtly imagined story. It nears the edge of the burlesque—in fact, it sometimes hops frankly over it—but for the most part we are more interested in the more delicate elements of the story than in its sheer fun."

+ Lit R p746 Je 17 '22 250w

"Is the type of light novel that will be dubbed breezy by the hurrying reviewer. The entanglements that ensue are always amusing and full of swift action and light patter. It is the sort of book that the reader will want to take with him on a long train journey."

+ N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:462 N '22

SMITH, HENRY JUSTIN. Deadlines; being the quaint, the amusing, the tragic memoirs of a news-room. 249p $1.75 Covici-McGee

070 Journalism

The incidents of these sketches, presented thru portrait composites, are fictional. Only the atmosphere of a certain news-room is authentic. There is a full description of a day in a newspaper office, beginning with the morning twilight among the deserted desks and waste-baskets, presaging boredom but growing more tense as the hours wear, becoming suddenly hectic when a piece of important news flashes over the wires, then slackening, till at last the room is deserted and sad-faced old men with large sacks come to clear away the debris of the day's task. Then there is the "cave of tongues," the cigar-store below the office—noon-hour haunt of the gang. There follow pen pictures of the star reporter, the drunkard, the "young-man-going-somewhere" and several other types, not the least of which is the poet, to whom the desk of city-editor becomes a Golgotha.

"There is no clap-trap about the book. It is a straightforward story."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 13 '23 190w

"Mr. Smith has caught and put into pages that are alive and vivid with reality the atmosphere, the dynamic energies, the abiding spirit of a newspaper office. [He] has written vividly and well the epic of the making of a daily paper—the epic of the creation of a mighty thing that dies almost as soon as it is born."

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 7 '23 450w

"It is an entertaining and informative series of accurate stories of newspaper life, romantic, if you like, but about a romantic profession." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p17 Ja 14 '23 880w

"Readers will find here suggested the moods, the habits, the professional oddities, and the ideals of the journalistic clan. 'Deadlines' presents and interprets each effectively. Nor does one have to have any special interest in journalism in order to enjoy it." R. W. N.

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 300w

SMITH, JOHN GEORGE. Organized produce markets. 238p (12s 6d) $4 Longmans

338.1 Produce trade. Speculation

22-8401

Here are described the organization and trading methods of the principal produce markets of the world, the services rendered by the professional speculator, the evils and abuses of speculation and the manner in which it influences the prices of the two commodities—cotton and wheat—in which it is most widely employed. Successive chapters deal with warrants and grading; spot transactions; futures and privileges; settlements and clearing houses, crop reports and market price quotations; marketing by auction. Appendices include the text of the Future trading act (U.S.), a typical market report, and specimens of contract forms.

"The subject is treated by Professor Smith with the thoroughness and completeness so typical of the English scholar. The author does not confine his treatise to English practices and institutions, for he gives much attention to the more important American and Canadian exchanges."

+ Lit R p354 D 30 '22 300w

Nation 115:444 O 25 '22 40w

Nature 110:404 S 23 '22 50w

New Statesman 10:338 Je 24 '22 160w

"Unfortunately the first three chapters contain many involved sentences and paragraphs. This is regrettable since the chapters on spot transactions, futures and privileges, settlements and clearing houses and crop reports and market price quotations are interestingly discussed. The volume contains a mass of information not readily accessible elsewhere." J. A. Crone

+ N Y Tribune p7 S 10 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:11 Ja '23

"Mr. Smith's detailed descriptions of the methods adopted by the leading produce exchanges, especially in this country and America, are singularly clear. His readers will be able to interpret the market reports and will know the meaning of 'options', 'puts and calls', 'straddles', 'arbitrage', and other fascinating terms."

+ Spec 128:724 Je 10 '22 550w

SMITH, JOHN MERLIN POWIS. Religion of the Psalms. 170p $1.75 Univ. of Chicago press

223.2 Bible. Old Testament—Psalms

22-5471

The purpose of the book is to bring out the meaning of the Psalms as it lay in the minds of their authors and earliest readers, to show the Psalms as the hymn book of the Hebrews and as the expression of their religious and moral life. There is no attempt to interpret the Psalms in the light of today.

"Scholarly, sane, and illuminating." A. R. Gordon

+ J Religion 2:548 S '22 900w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p347 My 25 '22 30w

SMITH, MINNA CAROLINE. Saint Jeanne d'Arc; the mystical story of a girl of the people. 373p il $2.25 Macmillan

B or 92 Jeanne d'Arc

22-18816

The story is replete with religious and patriotic fervor. Beginning with Jeanne's dedication of herself to God and France at the age of four, it ends with an account, in the epilogue, of her canonization by Benedict XV in May, 1920. The emphasis thruout is on the ecstatic and mystical nature of her life and mission.

"Young readers as well as their elders will find this a fascinating record of the life of the mystical and heroic Maid of France." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '22 650w

"The author has, evidently, studied painstakingly the historical sources. Her book is not burdened with reference or many footnotes, but it is built solidly upon historical fact and accurate citation. It has literary charm, the highest of dramatic interest, and will, therefore, appeal as effectively as a novel to the young and to the old."

+ Cath World 116:568 Ja '23 300w

"At first sight one wonders what excuse a writer can offer for another life of the Maid of Orleans. One sees significance, however, in the first word of the title, for it is 'Saint' Jeanne who figures in the story. Miss Smith apparently cares not a fig for probability, when it comes between her and the object of her adoration. Legend, superstition, religious fanaticism, everything that has contributed to the popular myth, has been embodied in her work, even to acceptance of an anti-English point of view. The book is charmingly written, however, and is at times interesting." E. K. Maxfield

+ Freeman 6:308 D 6 '22 520w

"The tale of the Maid of Orleans has been told again and very tenderly in a book by Minna Caroline Smith. In its latest form here it is a vivid story, with detail drawn from the author's fancy to some measure, but with regard for the proportions of the centuries-old legend very reverently maintained."

+ N Y World p6 O 22 '22 180w

"It has imagination and earnestness and leaves one filled with enthusiastic belief in Joan's personality and honesty. The author takes a more literalistic, and therefore ecclesiastical, view than most students of the psychology of spiritual sincerity would accept."

+ Outlook 132:624 D 6 '22 80w

"Jeanne was a mystic before she was a soldier; in fact, her mysticism was the direct source of the power she exercised on the field. This is emphasized by Minna Caroline Smith's book, which dwells reverently and without undue sentimentality on the spiritual side of this heroine. The influence of the 'voices' which directed the maid in her efforts in behalf of France is stressed throughout the work. The story is told simply, so that a child can understand it, yet with such charm as to appeal to older readers as well."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 N 1 '22 250w

SMITH, ONNIE WARREN. Book of the pike. 197p il $3 Stewart Kidd

799 Pike. Fishing 22-12558

In the experience of the author there is no single topic which has brought more questions to him as angling editor of Outdoor Life than has the pike family. In this book he answers the many questions which have been put to him by readers. He tells how to distinguish pike, pickerel, and muskellunge, gives advice as to tackle, lures, bait and trolling, and devotes a chapter each to the literature of the subject and to pike cookery.

Booklist 19:11 O '22

"This is the first American book to deal exclusively with the pike family. A great deal of information about tackle for all varieties of pike is included in the volume."

+ R of Rs 67:112 Ja '23 50w

Wis Lib Bul 18:214 O '22

SMITH, SIR ROSS MACPHERSON. 14,000 miles through the air. 137p il $3 Macmillan [2s 6d Australian bk. co.]

629:13 Aeronautics—Voyages 22-5412

The book is an account of the Viny's flight from England to Australia. It was the first aeroplane to make this trip, which was undertaken in response to an offer of £10,000 made by the Australian Commonwealth government for the first machine to make the flight in thirty days. The details of the preparation and the incidents of the way are given, with time-table, map and numerous illustrations.

Booklist 18:318 Je '22

"The descriptive portions of the narrative have at times an intense interest, especially in those parts in which is told of the crossing of the Alps, of the route across Egypt, the Suez Canal and the cities of India and Persia. Frequent half-tone reproductions of aerial photographs, most successfully made, add greatly to the interest of the story."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '22 400w

Natlon and Ath 31:599 Jl 29 '22 180w

Nature 110:631 N 11 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:341 Jl '22

Pratt p20 winter '23

St Louis 20:276 N '22

Sat R 134:107 Jl 15 '22 660w

Spec 129:149 Jl 29 '22 650w

Spring'd Republican p12 My 19 '22 380w

"The whole story is a wonderful record of human courage and endurance, and a tribute to the efficiency and skill of those who built the 'Vimy' and her engines."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p431 Je 29 '22 300w

SMYTH, ETHEL MARY. Streaks of life. 280p $3 Knopf [10s 6d Longmans]

824 Eugénie, empress consort of Napoleon III. Musicians 22-9056

Most of the essays in this book are autobiographical but justify the title by being disconnected. The subjects chosen reveal the author's wide sympathies, for besides personal reminiscences of the Empress Eugénie, Queen Victoria, and the mother-in-law of Prince Bülów, there are descriptions of two trusted servants and of a woman of the people accidentally encountered in a railway coach. "Mount music" is the review of a book by that name by E. O. Somerville and Martin Ross and the last two essays deal with the musical plight of England and the boycott of women musicians in the Hallé orchestra of London.

Bookm 55:428 Je '22 130w

Cleveland p40 My '22

"'Streaks of Life' is the sort of book that you open at random and put down when you have read it all."

+ Dial 72:650 Je '22 200w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:395 Ap 22 '22 170w

"Pleasant excursions into various fields though they are, Miss Smyth's essays are too heterogeneous a collection to be of much importance, and too often given over to personal matters to have a general appeal. Their greatest attraction is their style and the informality of their characterization of notabilities. But their characterization is neither striking nor profound; it is little more than gossip, and frequently trivial gossip at that." Amy Loveman

+ Lit R p517 Ap 1 '22 720w

"She is impressionable, but she is very discriminating. In an enthusiastic temperament we are generally ready to pardon a certain amount of gush. But though Miss Smyth can be strident, she is never sentimental. Indeed, she possesses the combination of enthusiasm and shrewdness which fitted her for what, after her music, appears to be the great pursuit of her life—the pursuit of friendship."

+ New Statesman 17:80 Ap 23 '21 880w

"There is one thing to say of Miss Smyth; she does her job well. Her reminiscences are told in just the right way; they are interesting in themselves, and illuminating in the view they give us. We will not spoil the enjoyment of a reader of this book by a single quotation; it is a book to buy and delight in."

+ Sat R 132:89 Jl 16 '21 340w

Spec 126:431 Ap 2 '21 1450w

"We should say—and Miss Smyth will forgive us if we are wrong—that when she is writing she does not struggle for her effects, but lets them come to her. And come they do, with a vivacity and spontaneity which bear witness to the rich spring of artistry which is in her nature. Whether in pure description or in controversy, she writes brilliantly; and for that brilliance a most observant eye, a vigilant sense of humour, deep affections, vigorous opinions, and an impressionable temperament are accountable. One hesitates to revel with too much enthusiasm in the sheer fun of this book, lest one should seem to overlook the intense interest of much that it tells."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 24 '21 780w

SMYTH, JOHN COLLIS. The Van Roon. 310p $2 Appleton

22-17147

On the same day there arrive at the little antique shop of S. Gedge in London, two treasures—his orphaned niece June and a small picture which proves to be a Van Roon masterpiece. Gedge's simple-minded assistant, William, had bought the picture on his own account for the matter of a few shillings. He sets to work to remove the overlay of paint which he believes may conceal something interesting beneath. When a picture of rare beauty and value begins to be revealed, old Gedge's cupidity is aroused, but June detects his designs and thereupon enters on a series of exciting experiences to save the picture for William. Her daring and devotion are rewarded by the final rescue of the picture, its sale for a fabulous sum and the happy outcome of her romance with William.

Booklist 19:88 D '22

"To take it too seriously would be a mistake. To take it as an excursion into the realms of fancy is to take it for exactly what it is."

E. F. E.

Boston Transcript p6 S 6 '22 900w

SNATH, JOHN COLLIS—Continued

Cleveland p85 N '22

Freeman 6:525 F 7 '23 230w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p7 D '22 30w

"A deftly done piece of fiction, without any great claim to distinction, but interesting enough withal."

+ Lit R p33 S 16 '22 280w

"Innocent of ideas, the tale is bright, light and amusing."

+ Nation 115:286 S 20 '22 80w

"It is not vulgarity or tastelessness that prevents our enjoying this bland story, but Mr. Snath's relentless realism. Reading this novel where everybody is searching for this picture is like sitting in a small room where six old ladies are simultaneously looking for their spectacles." Rebecca West

+ New Statesman 20:16 O 7 '22 180w

"He has a story to tell, and he tells it convincingly and well; but beneath the story, giving it firmness and significance, is a criticism, not so much of life as of certain attitudes toward life."

+ N Y Times p14 S 3 '22 900w

Outlook 132:390 N 1 '22 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:462 N '22

Pratt p36 autumn '22

"A fairy story, doubtless, but a good and convincing one."

+ Spec 129:604 O 28 '22 80w

"Not a strong story but a very human one."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 250w

"The story is not a masterpiece. There is no possibility of mistaking the characters of this novel for living creatures."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 28 '22 220w

"Interesting and well written story."

+ Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

SNEDDEN, DAVID SAMUEL. Civic education; ² sociological foundations and courses. 333p $2.16 World bk.

307 Citizenship, Education for. Social education 22-16159

"Designed to aid educators who are engaged in the teaching of the social sciences in elementary and secondary schools. Part I consists of a number of valuable suggestions to teachers as to the general meaning, importance, need and objects of civic education. Part II is devoted to a more detailed study of the topics which are mentioned in Part I; while the last part contains courses of study for civic education, problems for research and about a dozen sample studies which illustrate the value of the case method of approach to the study of various practical problems of civic education."—Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by F. R. Clow

Am J Soc 28:487 Ja '23 380w

Am Pol Sci R 16:724 N '22 80w

"The book is stimulating and thought-provoking especially to teachers of grammar and high school grades. It is somewhat repetitious and inconsequential in places. Perhaps this is due in part to the immaturity of the project method. Like many modern books it abounds in questions not intended for immediate answer. It is a book no one interested in civic education can ignore." A. J. W. M.

+ Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser p5 N 25 '22 350w

"The book is more than a teachers' handbook. It seeks to provide and to interpret educational theory and to arouse a deeper interest in educational values. The book, therefore, is a valuable addition to the literature of educational sociology and will, no doubt, stimulate thought and activity among educators in the direction of a better solution of the problem of civic education." E. G. Payne

+ School R 30:711 N '22 500w

SNEDDEN, DAVID SAMUEL. Educational ² sociology. (Century social science ser.) 689p $4 Century

301 Sociology. Education 22-16160

"The treatment is divided into four parts, of which the last is considerably longer than the others. Part I discusses 'Societies and Social Groups' and is clearly designed to give a sufficient background to a student who comes without any formal training in sociology, if taken in connection with part II on 'Social Forces, Processes, and Values.' Part III is devoted to the 'Sociological Foundations of Education,' while Part IV, some 220 pages in length, takes up specifically the 'sociological foundations' of the different school subjects. It goes into gratifying detail as to the different school subjects, beginning with the English language studies and discussing languages, literature, mathematics, science, geography, civics, mental science, art, music, and vocational education and vocational guidance."—School R

Booklist 19:38 N '22

"Dr. Snedden leaves answers and solutions to his readers, but his own opinions are frequently expressed, and his guiding mind dominates the presentment throughout. Throughout, also, he keeps the sociological facts directed to their educational interest, with the result of an informing interpretation of their value for pedagogy." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 7 '22 1200w

"The concrete questions about concrete people not only make the reader feel that the author is in touch with life but make the book exceedingly readable and interesting. The method of introducing questions at the beginning of the chapter to stimulate the minds of the readers is carried out in a way to insure the success of the effort to get and hold the attention." Ellsworth Faris

+ School R 30:707 N '22 900w

Survey 49:394 D 15 '22 500w

SNODGRASS, RHEY T., and CAMP, VICTOR F. Radio receiving for beginners. 99p il $1 Macmillan

654.6 Radio telephone 22-9748

Assuming no previous knowledge or experience in radio work, the book tells the beginner how to select, install and operate radio receivers and how to begin at once to listen in. The book describes a crystal detector set, receiving with vacuum tubes and regenerative receiving, amplification and construction of the antenna. General hints for operating are added, also the Morse code, a list of abbreviations used in radio communication and a wire table.

Booklist 19:72 D '22

"The illustrations are more useful than those given in the average book because they help the possible purchaser to visualize the essential parts and units employed in reception. Evident care has been taken to show only types of apparatus manufactured by reliable concerns and no favoritism has been shown in the matter of presentation. I think, however, the authors could have given a few specific instances of the cost involved. This may smack of the commercial catalogue, but after all, it is a most important item to the embryo Marconi." Pierre Boucheron

+ Bookm 55:640 Ag '22 160w

"The book is an ordinary jumble of ordinary information, interspersed with occasional gems such as: 'After you have made the most elementary beginning and found how easily you can get good signals the whole realm is before you, and your own methods or opinions may be as good as Marconi's.'" Dudley Nichols

+ Lit R p741 Je 17 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:21 Ja '23

Pratt p18 summer '22

St Louis 20:21 S '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p536 Ag 17 '22 40w

SOSKICE, MRS JULIET M. (HUEFFER). Chapters from childhood; reminiscences of an artist's grand-daughter; with a foreword by A. G. Gardiner. 239p il $3 Harcourt [10s 6d Selwyn & B.]

B or 92 Brown, Ford Madox-, 1821-1893
22-5912

"An indisputable addition to the authentic literature of childhood. The writer had the advantage of an unusual setting for her experiences. To have had Ford Madox-Brown for grandfather and playmate, to have lived in the Rossetti circle was to have had an introduction to life of a quality that falls to few. The picture of F. M. B. in his old age, as seen through the eyes of his 'little pigeon,' has the untroubled beauty of the child vision, but no less remarkable are the thumbnail sketches, at once artless and penetrating, of the nameless and ordinary people who flit across the field of view, the amiable policeman, the lovesick cabman, the Reverend Mother, the nuns, the domestic servants. But the chief person on the little stage is the child herself, and it is as a record of the first impressions of things and the first intellectual and emotional reaction to ideas, that these chapters are chiefly valuable." (Foreword)

Booklist 18:234 Ap '22

"These are clear-cut impressions of people and places, treated with the unconscious humor and the penetrating wisdom of extreme youth."
+ Bookm 55:79 Mr '22 110w

"This seems to be a profound book, in spite of its childish outlook upon the daily life that little Juliet Hueffer encountered. From beginning to end it is one long felicity of amusement over the prankish imagination of a little girl who says what she thinks about everything. But underneath it all runs a thread, a golden thread, of the aspiration of a susceptible childhood, striving to form the ideal of belief in something true and permanent." W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 25 '22 1800w
Cleveland p39 My '22

"Roguish, captivating, and intimate disclosure. The chapters about Ford Madox-Brown are especially vivid, while the glimpses of backstairs life, with their scraps of gossip sieved through the alert intelligence of a child, are at once droll and delicious."

+ Dial 72:434 Ap '22 100w

"She writes with such charm and candor and, at times, pathos, that we are entranced." Katherine Tappert

+ Lit R p604 Ap 22 '22 650w

"The narrative is given with a conscious but effective simplicity, and with the humorous irony of an adult recollecting infancy and adolescence."

+ Nation 114:700 Je 7 '22 70w

"More than the matter, the manner of the book is irresistible. By some miracle Mrs. Soskice has recaptured the atmosphere of seven years, and with it the language fitted to describe it. Her style is a marvel of simplicity shot through with a Puckish humor, like a lyric of Heine."

+ Nation and Ath 31:91 Ap 15 '22 1500w

"Either Mrs. Soskice's memories have happily fallen into a sort of pictorial perspective, or else she has chosen among them with much skill: her book is not a heap of haphazard recollections, but is shapely and restrained." D. B.

+ New Repub 30:325 My 10 '22 230w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:176 Ap '22
St Louis 20:127 Je '22

"Throughout the book, but especially at the beginning, its most striking quality is an uncritical statement of fact."

+ Sat R 132:718 D 24 '21 260w

Spec 127:672 N 19 '21 1400w

"As the record of little girl life, it should take a proud position among those few books which give to the adult, simply and vividly, the mind and personality of the child. . . . All the details of her life, all her emotions are set down briefly, usually without comment, but in such a way that she carries us with her, completely convinced, completely sympathizing, to the very last page of her chapters."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 7 '22 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p747 N
17 '21 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 18:103 Ap '22

"It is both a faithful rendering of the artistic child in an unusual environment, and inherently a distinguished piece of creative writing. Mrs. Soskice possesses the kind of imagination that can re-interpret the child she was through the eyes of the mature and discriminating individual she now is, and keep both points of view implicitly present." H. T. Follett

+ Yale R n s 11:889 Jl '22 440w

SOUTHARD, ELMER ERNEST, and JARRETT, MARY CROMWELL. Kingdom of evils; with an introd. by Richard C. Cabot; and A note upon legal entanglement as a division of evil, by Roscoe Pound. 708p $5.50 Macmillan 616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Social work.

Defective and delinquent classes 22-22164

The book is written to illustrate how doctor and social worker can cooperate in the care of the mentally deranged. The body of the text presents a set of one hundred social cases showing psychiatric material, drawn from the experience of the social service work at the Boston psychopathic hospital. The rest of the book consists of a statement of principles drawn from these cases, a classification of the main groups of mental diseases and an account of the history, organization and function of psychiatric social work. Bibliography. Index.

Boston Transcript p7 D 13 '22 600w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 110:25 Ja 6 '23 50w

"'The Kingdom of Evils' impresses one as the vision of a seer expressed in the voice of a pedagogue. . . . Dr. Southard was both a poet and a philosopher—but there is no indication of it in this book. He had the vision to see the biggest possibility in the world. But he had not the imagination to see its difficulties." Joseph Collins

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 21 '23 3100w

SPAETH, JOHN DUNCAN ERNST, ed. and tr. Old English poetry. 268p $2 Princeton univ. press [8s 6d Milford]

829.1 Anglo-Saxon poetry—Collections
22-12117

"A comprehensive selection from Old English poetry, including the greater part of Beowulf, the later Genesis, Exodus, Elene, Guthlac, The Dream of the Rood, the Phoenix, Wanderer, Seafarer, Husband's Message, Brunanburgh, Maldon, and several of the Riddles and Charms. The translations, which are fairly literal, avoid archaic forms, but preserve the alliterative form of the original, though the rhythm is somewhat stereotyped. The notes are excellent, and the book should be of great value to teachers and students of Old English."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 18:377 Jl '22

"The translations are excellent and portray, as nearly as any translation can, the elements that made the old poems of particular worth. Copious and intelligible notes are helpful to a more complete comprehension of the rhetorical and textual difficulties met with in the poems proper."

+ Bookm 56:103 S '22 120w

"The translator has been more than commonly successful in transfusing the life blood of the vigorous old poems in translation."

+ Dial 73:458 O '22 100w

"Professor Spaeth's task was difficult. That his success has been mitigated is not strange. That he has been successful at all is due to the tremendous pains he has taken. The evidence of scrupulous and affectionate care may be read on every page of his book. If he has not plenty of wine, it should be remembered that he has trampled wild grapes." Leonard Bacon

SPAETH, J. D. E., ed.—Continued

+ — Lit R p125 O 21 '22 1450w

Nation 115:23 J1 5 '22 130w

"Mr. Spaeth has knowledge, taste, judgment, and power of expression, but he does not happen to be a poet."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:716 Ag 26 '22 130w

"Throughout the whole book, which comprises the best and most important Anglo-Saxon poetry we are never in any doubt as to the poetic quality of the original." R. H.

+ New Repub 31:288 Ag 2 '22 200w

"Mr. Spaeth's notes are interesting and suggestive. Future strugglers with Sweet's Anglo-Saxon Reader will be very grateful for this book." O. B.

+ New Statesman 20:20 O 7 '22 500w

Outlook 132:725 D 20 '22 200w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 29 '22 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p463 J1 13 '22 80w

SPEAKMAN, HAROLD. Beyond Shanghai. 198p il $2.50 Abingdon press

915.1 China—Description and travel 22-5623

"An artist tells in this book, by pen and palette, how he visited China, living, so far as a foreigner can, in Chinese fashion, and seeing much of life on the Grand Canal and in the cities on its banks and elsewhere. The pictures are attractive and the narrative spirited." —Outlook

"The triumphant notes of Mr. Speakman's Chinese idyll are humor, mysticism and an eye for the beauty of small things. A most brilliantly unusual book!" I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '22 1050w

"A charming and original book. Its charm and its originality are due not only to the personality of the author, which is itself original and charming, but to the fact that it is conceived, so to speak, in the amateur spirit." J. P. Rice

+ Lit R p898 Ag 26 '22 850w

New Statesman 20:supxvi D 2 '22 20w

"It is purely a personal reaction to things Chinese, the observation of an artist out for the picturesque. It is the kind of book that will be of no use to the tourist except as a flavoring." M. J. Moses

+ — N Y Times p16 J1 9 '22 120w

Outlook 130:559 Ap 5 '22 50w

St Louis 20:274 N '22

"Mr. Speakman is an artist both with brush and typewriter. Proof of his brush is found in the eight illustrations in color which adorn the book, and proof of his literary artistry is the letterpress of 200 pages which is merely a teaser for a more pretentious volume if only the author can persuade himself to write it. Both what he saw and the way he tells it are off the beaten track of travel books and lend to this one an air of distinction, a pleasant flavor, delightful to remember."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Je 7 '22 200w

SPEARE, DOROTHY. Dancers in the dark. 290p $1.75 Doran

22-8045

"It is not a college or a flapper story. Joy Nelson, the heroine, comes from a small town to study music in Boston, and goes to live with two girls whom she has met casually at a Prom. The status of these girls is a bit difficult to gauge. They lead a riotous existence whose principal factors are drink, cigarettes, and roadhouses, and they seem to be finding it pretty dull after all. The book is supposed to show the girls' side of the question. We wondered for some time what question. 'What is the matter with the younger generation?' seems the most likely. The solution is that they are 'excitement eaters,' always seeking for new sensations, and never content with amusement that does not include men and money. Which would be very discouraging if the story did not show that when they marry and settle down they do as well as the next."—Lit R

"In characterization and in getting under the surface of a peculiar environment, Miss Speare has shown an insight that would not be inadequate in a writer of far greater experience. Her English style is, of course, handicapped by the surroundings she depicts. Occasionally we get a bit that makes us wonder, if in a book less hectic, Miss Speare may not achieve real distinction. The craftsmanship is generally good. Sometimes, however, Miss Speare has not dealt with her writing problem quite so much with the sweat of her brain as we could wish." S. L. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 29 '22 950w

"If this book had been written as a satire it would have been inimitable. It is almost Daisy Ashford grown up—but not very far up."

— Dial 73:113 J1 '22 50w

"It is written in a breezy, entertaining style with a knack for clever description. That makes one forget at times that the rather slender plot is considerably over-burdened with detail and that two important situations are wound up with almost identical motor accidents. The author has not failed to abide by the rule that 'sin brings punishment,' which makes it a very moral book after all. Whatever its faults it holds the interest right through to the last page."

+ — Lit R p586 Ap 15 '22 270w

"Here we find the usual flappers indulging in dances, slang of the most virulent order and cigarettes. Miss Speare possesses a flippant and vivid style, a gift for obvious epigrams, and much self-consciousness."

— N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 140w

SPEARS, JOHN RANDOLPH. Captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer: an old-time sailor of the sea. 252p il $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Palmer, Nathaniel Brown. Voyages and travels 22-7633

The book is a biography of one of the most notable characters of the clipper ship era. Captain Palmer not only did distinguished service in the American merchant marine during the period between the War of 1812 and the Civil war, he also is deserving of renown as a master mariner, a designer of famous clippers and an Antarctic explorer.

Booklist 18:361 J1 '22

Cleveland p78 S '22

"It is a pity that Capt. Palmer did not leave more autobiographic material, but it seems a common failing of great geographers to be ignorant of the importance of their achievements. The qualities which make a man a great commander are not invariably coupled with a facile pen. Mr. Spears has reconstructed for us a notable period in the history of the American merchant marine." W: McFee

Lit R p822 J1 22 '22 950w

"John R. Spears has done a real service in gathering this material together. He indicates a bulk of matter that will bear much more investigation and creative handling." H. L. Gorman

N Y Times p17 J1 2 '22 270w

St Louis 20:251 O '22

SPENCER, WILLIAM HOMER. Law and business. (Materials for the study of business) 3v v 2-3 670:653p ea $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press [ea 30s Cambridge univ. press]

317.7 Commercial law 21-11044

The concluding volumes of a three-volume work providing material, composed for the most part of reports of leading cases, for the study of law and business. The first volume (Book Review Digest, 1921) was devoted to an introduction to the study. The contents of the second volume deal with the legal aspects of the business man's relation to his market and to his finances. The materials in the third volume deal with the legal aspects of the business man's relation to risk and risk-bearing, to labor, and to his business unit.

The Times [London] Lit Sup p510 Ag 3 '22 250w

SPRINGER, NORMAN. Blood ship. 302p $1.90 Watt

"There was Swope, Black Yankee Swope, who captained that hell-ship, a man with a twisted heart, a man who delighted in evil and worked for its own sake. . . . There was the lady, the beautiful, despairing lady aft, wife of the infamous brute who ruled us. . . . And there was the man with the scar, he who called himself Newman, man of mystery, who came like a fabled knight, killed the beast who held the princess captive and let her out of bondage. And so a yarn is spun around these three. It is a tale of low characters on the high seas, of adventure, romance, mystery."—Lit R

Booklist 19:124 Ja '23

"Not for a moment does the interest flag in the reading of this terribly fascinating story. There is nothing attractive about it. The romance in it is entangled in the story of hideous brutalities, which have the fascination of the serpent's charm on its victim."

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 22 '22 200w

Cleveland p91 D '22

Lit R p132 O 21 '22 170w

"The gourmet with a taste for vicarious thrills will sate his appetite at a sitting." K. F.
New Repub 33:50 D 6 '22 150w

"It is what used to be termed 'a red-blooded yarn.'"

N Y Times p28 S 17 '22 60w

"Mr. Springer has accomplished with rare success the feat of developing a character through that character's own words. His method is neither strained nor apologetic, for he has simply permitted his main character to view himself with tolerant and comprehending and critical eyes. Three contributions—a convincing and spirited appearance of truth, an unprejudiced account of shanghaied crews and hell-ship life of forty years ago, and a character that exhibits the elemental idealism of a seaman without ever making a maudlin appeal to sentimental emotion—do much to alleviate a not too new plot that is handled in a not too new manner." Kenneth Fuesle

+ — N Y Tribune p7 S 17 '22 450w

SQUIER, EMMA-LINDSAY. Wild heart; with an introd. by Gene Stratton-Porter. 220p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

22-7117

The simple experiences of a little girl and boy who lived on the shores of Puget Sound not many years ago. There are stories of the great out-of-doors and the all but human animals. Clarence the old gander who takes a fatherly interest in O'Henry the quail baby "who did not know that he was not a chicken," the heron and the bantam rooster whose friendship was broken up by a black Minorca hen and Princess, the royal Bengal tiger, who is saved from death by Pudgy the menagerie keeper are but a few of the tales.

Booklist 18:353 Jl '22

Cleveland p75 S '22

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce

Lit R p852 Ag 5 '22 100w

"In a language which, because of its simplicity, is beautiful and makes a deep appeal to the child and grown-up, we are told of the habits and the traits of the different birds and animals of the woods. The book is dramatically written from the first page to the last."

+ N Y Times p2 Je 4 '22 580w

R of Rs 67:112 Ja '23 50w

"Her writing is simple and forceful; she does not try to be literary, but she has written well. But the mere writing of 'The Wild Heart' is essentially unimportant compared to its substance."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 10 '22 500w

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS (SOLOMON EAGLE, pseud.), ed. Book of women's verse; with a prefatory essay. 192p $3.75 Oxford [7s 6d Milford]

$21.08 English poetry—Collections 22-5587

"A book of selections from women poets ranging in time from Anne Askewe, martyred in 1546, down to Alice Meynell and Moira O'Neill. Julia Ward Howe and Phoebe Cary are the only Americans included. Binding similar to other Oxford books of verse."—Wis Lib Bul

"In this day and generation, when women are numbered as frequently as men among the writers of verse, an arbitrary distinction between poetry written by them and that of men seems rather a futile performance. In Mr. Squire's anthology those names stand out as most worthy of notice which have generally been accorded first rank—Mrs. Browning, Emily Brontë, Christina Rossetti. From it are omitted many, especially among those of the more recent poets, which would have lent far greater impressiveness to its pages than those which are included."

— + Lit R p388 Ja 28 '22 150w

"Mr. Squire condescends to everything he touches. 'A Book of Women's Verse,' entertaining in parts as it may be, is also very slovenly. Mr. Squire has not even read his proof." Mark Van Doren

— Nation 114:498 Ap 26 '22 250w

"The title of this book is too sweeping, for the contents are confined to verse by English women, or I suppose I should say British, as Scotch and Irish women are included. Being thus confined, the poetical showing of women is, obviously, less impressive than it might have been had the women-poets of other races been included." R: Le Gallienne

— N Y Times p6 Ap 2 '22 2400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:292 Je '22

Pratt p25 autumn '22

St Louis 20:93 My '22

"Some of the omissions are both remarkable and unfortunate. For example, neither of the two best living women poets is represented—Miss Charlotte Mew and Miss Edith Sitwell."

— Spec 128:84 Ja 21 '22 30w

"Two things are specially required of an anthologist—judgment in what he chooses to reproduce and accuracy in reproducing it. Mr. Squire has given us neither. We find his volume littered with negligences."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p767 X 21 '21 1750w

Wis Lib Bul 18:102 Ap '22

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS (SOLOMON EAGLE, pseud.), Books in general; third series. 245p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

$24 Books and reading. English literature (Eng ed 21-15096)

The book is the third series of selected papers from the author's weekly contributions to the New Statesman (London). They contain reflections on books and authors and things literary, old and new, ranging from Shakespeare to our recent war poetry.

Booklist 18:324 Je '22

"Inevitably the material has become a little thinner in each succeeding volume, and this book certainly adds nothing to the success of the series."

— + Lit R p512 Mr 18 '22 250w

Spec 127:83 Jl 16 '21 500w

"Rather too much of the book seems to have been written at low pressure. There are lucky hits but they sometimes appear accidental; and often, when a good theme is stated, nothing comes of it. Still he says many good things, though some are too good for their context;

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS—Continued
and his criticism is often just, even where justice is unexpected. But he is, at his best, so interesting a talker that we are exasperated by the promise he does not fulfill."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p367 Je 9 '21 900w

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS (SOLOMON EAGLE, pseud.). Collected parodies. 238p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

827 Parodies

This collection includes almost the whole of three previous books: "Imaginary speeches," "Steps to Parnassus," and "Tricks of the trade." Some of the parodies have been regrouped; a few have been omitted. The best of them are the poetic parodies.

Bookm 55:314 My '22 300w

Cleveland p38 My '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:235 My '22

"Mr Squire has collected all his various parodies into one volume with delightful effect."

+ Spec 126:243 F 19 '21 320w

"Any collection of parodies is bound to be uneven, for the best of parodists cannot always be illuminated by that brilliant flash which lifts parody above mere badinage; but the great merit of Mr Squire's exercises in this art is that in those unregenerate days the true flash came to him not once but several times. Having all the stuff of poetry in him, he was able to penetrate into the workings of his object's mind and into the secrets of the technique which then arried him."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p320 My 19 '21 1200w

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS. (SOLOMON EAGLE, pseud.). Poems: second series. 79p $2 Doran [6s Hodder & S.] 821 22-26244

"The last forty pages of this book alone represent new work (the rest is reprinted without change from the volume entitled 'The Birds, and Other Poems).'"—Freeman

Booklist 18:230 Ap '22

"J. C. Squire follows the school of John Freeman and Edward Thomas a while, then reaches back to older classic forms and forward to an easy, swinging, individual rhythm of his own in embodying his sensitive, sincere, and romance-lit reactions to life."

+ Bookm 54:591 F '22 80w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

Dial 73:108 Jl '22 430w

"Whatever Mr. Squire attempts turns into something as dull and depressing as a November Sunday in England; a double misfortune for him and for us." J. G. Fletcher

— Freeman 4:524 F 8 '22 450w

"He does better than the majority and not as well as the best. But in fragments, in brief stark etchings or sudden snatches of melody, he impresses. Also, there is a nobly human attitude in this latest work that fills one with liking for the man. Certainly he is one of the modern English poets in whose development one remains interested." W. R. Benet

+ Lit R p787 Jl 8 '22 560w

"In spite of his being so fashionable, Mr. Squire, it is to be feared, is blessedly old-fashioned... [he is also] human—a rare thing with poets nowadays." R. Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 19 '22 1750w

Reviewed by A. Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 128:343 Mr 18 '22 1050w

"By no means objective or impersonal, his poetry has a wider scope and a calmer mood than most modern verse can claim, and it gains notably in dignity because of these qualities. A slinger of the familiar and even obviously beautiful aspects of Nature, Mr Squire celebrates them in language both simple and sensuous. Besides he is intense without appearing to strive for intensity; his quietest moods are often his deepest and loveliest."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 F 6 '22 650w

"The forms are not infrequently original. All is good, but all is deliberate, extorted by firm pressure from a well-chosen and well-handled medium. We recognize the admirable joinery and miss the illusion of growth."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 9 '22 1100w

STACPOOLE, HENRY DE VERE STACPOOLE. Vanderdecken. 282p $1.75 McBride

22-17065

"The name immediately suggests the famous Flying Dutchman, and, indeed, there is a Flying Dutchman in the story, but he is not the somewhat macabre figure of romance. He proves to be a rather delightful pirate, who sails up and down the California coast, veiled in mystery, robbing whom he pleases and always evading capture in a canny fashion. Hank Fisher, who needs money, sets his heart upon the reward offered to any one who will run Vanderdecken to earth (or sea), and he sets out, with a friend, and a mysterious individual who shows up at the last minute, in a disreputable old yacht, on his man-hunting trip. He runs into adventures galore."—N Y Times

Booklist 19:124 Ja '23

Cleveland p91 D '22

"Mr. Stacpoole has handled his material with his usual skill and has provided surprizes and thrills enough to satisfy the most exacting reader."

+ Int Bk R p65 F '23 420w

Lit R p205 N 11 '22 220w

"The reader will find much to hold his interest in this story, which is told in a light and sparkling style, and not a few surprises."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 180w

"Despite the obvious situation, the book is good reading. Stacpoole has humor, an easy Sunday magazine style and an eye for tricks that hold the reader." Milton Raison

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 300w

STANDARD handbook for electrical engineers;

Frank F. Fowle, editor-in-chief. 5th ed rev 2137p il $6 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering 22-15984

"Tables, formulas and important data on all branches of electrical engineering. Contains bibliographies."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:495 N '22

STANNARD, HAROLD. Gambetta and the foundation of the third republic. 266p $4 Small [15s Methuen]

B or 92 Gambetta, Léon Michel. France—

History—Third republic, 1870—

(Eng ed 22-11276)

"A straight-forward study of Gambetta and his place in French life from a fresh and provocative point of view. The book gives the first detailed account in English of Gambetta's creation of a French national army after Sedan. Subsequent chapters treat of Gambetta's predominant part in securing a republican constitution from a monarchist assembly, and of his vindication of parliamentary sovereignty over the executive. Important as is this material to the student of history and government, the story of Gambetta's romance, told in full, adds human interest to this contribution."—Publisher's note

Am Pol Sci R 16:720 N '22 100w

"Detailed and vivid account—the first thus far published in English—of the statesman's services to his country in both peace and war, and of his vallant though unsuccessful effort to rouse France for effective resistance to the German invaders." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '22 1200w

"In this well conceived and well written volume—exhaustive and complete—the character of the dictator, whose talent for opportunism and for compromise kept him in power, is very accurately delineated." Llewelyn Powys

+ Freeman 6:42 S 20 '22 1800w

"As a biography, Mr. Stannard's work leaves something to be desired in that it tells too little of the personal side of the man. It would be more accurate, perhaps, to call the book a study of Gambetta's public career, for it covers that ground very thoroughly indeed."

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 13 '22 1250w

STANOYEVICH, MILIVOY STOYAN. Early Yugoslav literature (1000-1800). (Columbia univ. Slavonic studies, v 1) 91p $1.75 Columbia univ. press

891.8 Servian literature. Croatian literature. Dalmatian literature 22-8076

In the solution of linguistic problems, ethnographical nomenclature and national tradition are important factors and the tracing of the Slavonic languages to their sources involves a critical inquiry into the origin, character and distribution of the Slavonic race—Russians, Ukrainians, Bulgars, Yugoslavs, Czechoslovaks and Poles. Owing to the complexity of the subject, the author gives merely a comparative digest of the substance of the research of distinguished scholars. He dwells on the early literature of that branch of the Yugoslavs composed of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes which he divides into three periods: The origins—comprising the epoch from the tenth until the end of the fourteenth century; The renaissance—to the middle of the seventeenth century; and The age of decline—to the close of the eighteenth century. Bibliography and index.

"A severely cautious investigation, valuable chiefly because of the light it throws on the genesis of the Serbo-Croatian language and the literature that has been written in it, small though this is in bulk and apparently uninteresting in content."

+ Bookm 55:316 My '22 310w

"A model of sobriety and precision. Will prove of great service to students and good reading to occasional explorers of the Southern Slavonic culture." Pierre de Lanux

+ Lit R p776 J1 1 '22 720w

"Never before has there been an opportunity to read in the English language the connected account of the rise of Yugoslav literature."

+ R of Rs 65:671 Je '22 60w

"Dr. Stanoyevich is thoroughly well equipped for this task. He is erudite without being pedantic, and his enthusiasm for the subject is combined with good taste and judgment which keep him free from unbalanced praise."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 11 '22 540w

STANTON, A. ELLEN. My life in Paris fifty years ago; from the journal of A. Ellen Stanton, Paris, 1868-1869. 432p il $4 Stratford

B or 92 Paris—Social life and customs 22-2517

"In the later sixties Miss Stanton spent a year or more in Paris, her chief object, she leaves us to infer, to acquire a reading, speaking and teaching knowledge of the French language. One infers this from the fact that her book is dedicated to her pupils in French. She was accompanied by three young people—two boys and a young girl, Miss Ellie Stanton, who figures much in the story. It was the Paris of the Third Napoleon, of Eugénie and their court into which they came, of the Second Empire shortly before its fall. The volume is in journal form; indeed, it appears to be a veritable journal, written from day to day, not probably for publication, nor with the thought of publication, then nor at any future time."

—Boston Transcript

"It is well worth a reading, for, while there is much of the personal in the record, which otherwise might fail to appeal to the general reader, the writer evidently quite unconsciously has interwoven much of the life of the Paris of half a century ago into her story." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 22 '22 520w

"Because publication never occurred to her, Miss Stanton's book has a great deal of spontaneous and intimate charm. Her journal is a faithful day-by-day account of careful descriptions and humorous little touches, sufficiently connected to hold the reader's intense interest. Moreover, she is writing about Paris during an important historical era, which adds value to the book."

+ Springfd Republican p10 Ap 21 '22 100w

STANTON, MRS ELIZABETH (CADY). Elizabeth Cady Stanton; ed. by Theodore Stanton and Harriot Stanton Blatch. 2v 362p;369p il ea $6 Harper

B or 92 Woman suffrage 22-5796

Elizabeth Cady Stanton, 1815-1902, inaugurated the movement for woman suffrage in the United States, led that movement for fifty years, and founded the National woman's suffrage association. The story of her life as revealed in her reminiscences, letters and diary reflects her domestic as well as her public character, her friendships with distinguished men and women, her vital, enthusiastic personality and her interest in every forward-looking movement. Susan B. Anthony was her life-long friend and of the two a mutual friend wrote: "These two women . . . have, for the last thirty years, been diligent forgers of all manner of projectiles, from fireworks to thunderbolts, and have hurled them with unexpected explosion into the midst of all manner of educational, reformatory, religious, and political assemblies. . . In fact this noise-making twain are the two sticks of a drum, keeping up what Daniel Webster called 'The rub-a-dub of agitation.'"

Booklist 18:328 Je '22

"This book is full of lovable, humorous, appreciative comment. Its style is as direct, clear, and vital as the mind of the great woman who wrote it." G. F. Brown

+ Bookm 55:421 Je '22 600w

Reviewed by Katharine Anthony
Freeman 5:284 My 31 '22 1050w

Reviewed by Hazel Stanton
Lit R p887 Ag 19 '22 950w

"Here are two formidable volumes: letters, diary and reminiscences of Elizabeth Cady Stanton. For a moment you wonder if there can be anything new or exciting that has not been revealed and revealed again about woman suffrage and its founders. But the most faint-hearted reader is rewarded. Neither ancient history nor propaganda can obscure the irresistible personality that shines through the seven hundred or more pages of the book. You know, somehow, that if Elizabeth Cady Stanton had never thought of woman's rights, she would have discovered something equally adventurous to whet her appetite for action." F. G. W.

+ New Repub 30:176 Ap 5 '22 880w

N Y Times p6 S 24 '22 1700w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p4 Ag 20 '22 1350w

"Mrs. Stanton was a woman of abounding vitality, physical and intellectual and these volumes are permeated with her virile spirit. The work unaccountably lacks an index, but is otherwise highly creditable to the editors."

+ Outlook 131:76 My 10 '22 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:295 Je '22

Pratt p34 autumn '22

"They afford valuable material for the historian."

R of Rs 65:557 My '22 70w

St Louis 20:127 Je '22

Springfd Republican p7a My 14 '22 350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:132 My '22

STAPP, EMILIE BLACKMORE, and CAMERON, ELEANOR. Happyland's fairy grotto plays. 149p $1.25 Houghton

812

22-17093

Six little plays written for children, and especially designed for fall and winter. Descriptions of characters and costumes, a story of the play, and stage directions are given for each play. Contents: September play, "The tadpole school"; October play, "The lost firewood"; November play, "The little gray lady"; December play, "The holly wreath"; January play, "Molly's New Year's party"; February play, "Mr. February Thaw."

"The rhymed narrative is not monotonous, and is rather gracefully and naturally done; the verse effect fits in well with the light and airy material. Each play is just an airy little episode, and is the better for not attempting to be really dramatic. The book holds together in aim and execution, and has a pretty fancy if it is lacking in substance."

+ — Lit R p209 N 11 '22 110w

STARLING, SYDNEY GEORGE. Electricity (Science in the service of man) 245p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

621.3 Electric engineering

22-8132

The purpose of the book is to give the general reader an account of the present stage of electrical knowledge. A brief historical sketch is followed by chapters on industrial applications. The treatment is non-mathematical. Simple explanations are given of the physical processes involved and electrical terms in general use are defined at the end of the book.

"A valuable, usable handbook."

+ Nation 115:23 J1 5 '22 10w

"The book is most interesting reading from start to finish. The historical section is not by any means lengthy or prosy, and the subsequent chapters are all equally readable and interesting, while the illustrations are clear and thoroughly explanatory."

+ N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:24 Ap '22

Pratt p18 winter '23

R of Rs 67:224 F '23 20w

"Mr. Starling is not only a trustworthy guide, but a lucid writer, and no special knowledge of physics or mathematics is necessary for the complete understanding of his book. . . It presents the varied applications of electricity to the service of man in a simple and authoritative fashion."

+ Sat R 134:19 J1 1 '22 650w

"Mr. Starling's chapter on electro-magnetic theory and wireless is specially interesting and lucid."

+ Spec 128:697 Je 3 '22 70w

STARR, JOHN WILLIAM, jr. Lincoln's last day. 100p il $1.50 Stokes

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham

22-18812

This is a complete account of Lincoln's last day from the time he arose in the morning until he left the White House in the company of his wife to go to the theater. The conversations with his family and his callers, the business he transacted and the stories he told are all recorded after careful research among all the available material. There are eight portraits of Lincoln, notes, corrections of some commonly accepted stories, and a bibliography of authorities.

"It has remained for Mr. Starr to find a Lincoln subject that was not exhausted. Mr. Starr has gathered all the authorities and written a careful and absorbing book about this last day of a great man."

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 28 '22 520w

Cleveland p88 N '22

"Every word of the book is interesting. But there is one thing which makes the record particularly valuable, and especially to the south. Through this medium one can see displayed in clearest definition the great heart of the man. One can see equally clearly that on this day of victory and rejoicing Lincoln's thoughts were deeply engaged with his defeated fellow-countrymen of the south." J. G. de R. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 29 '22 1100w

Reviewed by R. J. Davis

Lit R p380 Ja 13 '23 270w

"The microscopic care with which this writer has collected his material is demonstrated by the fact that he has documented his brief text with over fifty notes substantiating his statements and cites upward of sixty authorities." F: T. Hill

+ N Y Times p5 N 19 '22 700w

St Louis 20:303 D '22

STAUFFER, ROBERT E., ed. American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. 185p $2 Christopher pub. house

325.7 United States—Foreign population. American literature—Collections. Americanization. Immigrants in the United States

22-7422

The aim of these selections is to bring about a better understanding between the native and foreign born Americans, to show forth the splendid American spirit to be found in naturalized Americans and to point the way to true Americanization. All the European countries, including the British Isles, are represented in the authors of these selections, some of the names well known in American literature, among them: Carl Schurz; John Boyle O'Reilly; Jacob Riis; Edward Bok; Felix Adler; Mary Antin; Angelo Patri.

Reviewed by E. S. Bogardus

Am J Soc 28:496 Ja '23 90w

"The general spirit of the book is excellent from the point of view of the melting pot. If Mr. Stauffer ever does this kind of compilation again we suggest that he try obtaining expressions from different classes of persons, that is to say from, the very young, from men who work in factories or from women who live in tenements. Criticism of these collected utterances is suggested only because those who here write in such glowing terms are representing a single class—newcomers who have succeeded. We should like to hear from the failures."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 1 '22 220w

"Some of the narratives . . . rouse indignation and anger; among them, too, are glorious tributes to the spirit of America that thrill the patriot heart. Anyone who wants to know the soul of the foreign-born may well begin with this book. . . It will be well for all of us to ponder over Mr. Stauffer's definition of an American." C. S. Northup

Eng J p320 My '22

"His thesis is sound. We can only wish that in his biographical paragraphs he had played the role of the biographer exclusively and left that of the appreciator to the reader."

+ — Lit R p535 Mr 25 '22 360w

"An illuminating anthology."

+ Nation 114:700 Je 7 '22 50w

St Louis 20:295 D '22

STEAD, ESTELLE WILSON, ed. Communication with the next world; tr. from the French by A. Victor. 121p $1 Doran [3s 6d Stead's pub. house]

134 Spiritualism. Stead, William Thomas

This series of messages from William T. Stead, the well-known spiritualist, was received thru a French medium, Mme Hyver, two years after he went down in the Titanic. It is a little textbook of spiritualism, explaining the right and wrong methods of conducting séances, the different ways of communicating, the conditions necessary to a good manifestation, how to form a group, how to choose a medium, etc. The communications are accompanied by a symposium of opinions on the messages, by Sir Oliver Lodge, G. Vale Owen, Ellis T. Powell, David Gow, Katharine Bates and others.

Reviewed by Joseph Jastrow
Lit R p197 N 11 '22 480w

"The book is sane, moderate and conservative to a degree which some spiritualists would consider excessive. It bears the mark of deep thought and mellow wisdom. Nothing of greater authority has ever appeared upon the subject, though it is only the advanced psychic student who will appreciate how weighty are the judgments expressed." A. C. Doyle
+ N Y Times p3 Je 18 '22 800w

STEARNS, HAROLD EDMUND, ed. Civilization in the United States; an inquiry by thirty Americans. 577p $5 Harcourt [25s J. Cape]

917.3 United States—Civilization. National characteristics, American 22-2320

The book represents an adventure in intellectual cooperation. A group of people, with much in common in their points of view about American civilization, agreed to write a series of essays on American problems, each on the special topic he knew most thoroly, and while doing so to keep in touch with and confer with each other, in order to avoid duplication and secure an underlying unity for the volume. Altho the treatment of the subjects is uncompromising and sometimes harshly analytic, the contributors are all American citizens, none of them are professional propagandists or disgruntled martyrs to an idea. Besides the thirty essays by Americans there are three by European writers, giving their attitude towards American civilization, also biographical notes, a Who's who of the contributors and an index. Some of the contributors are: H. L. Mencken; Zechariah Chafee, jr.; J. E. Spingarn; Van Wyck Brooks; George Jean Nathan; George Soule; H. W. Van Loon; Elsie Clews Parsons; Katharine Anthony; Garet Garrett; Frank M. Colby. Some of the subjects treated are: Politics; Journalism; Education; The intellectual life; The literary life; Music; Poetry; Art; Economic opinion; Radicalism; The family; The alien; Business; Sport and play.

"While there is much wit and a good many grains of truth in this whole symposium or inquiry by thirty Americans, it is unmistakably a Jeremiad of youth which repeats again and again the sad refrain 'singular impotence of the creative spirit' as characteristic of America. A cynical critic might turn against these authors their own sad refrain, for it is altogether too apparent that Civilization in America is not a triumph of the creative spirit." A. J. Todd
+ Am J Soc 28:340 N '22 520w

Am Pol Sci R 16:337 My '22 150w

Reviewed by Zechariah Chafee, jr.
Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '22 800w
Booklist 18:186 Mr '22

"Almost all the chapters in the book are admirable in style and manner, some of the vulnerable ones are unpardonably cheap and personal in tone. . . Yet after all that an unsympathetic or a sympathetic critic might charge against the book, it is beyond question one of the most significant and thought-provoking volumes we have had in recent years." J. Erskine
+ Bookm 55:192 Ap '22 1400w

Cleveland p87 N '22

"I can not see that it tends in any way to enlarge or revise, or even by re-presentation significantly to clear and sharpen, one's view of the civilization that we live in."

— Freeman 5:574 Ag 23 '22 2200w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:85 Ja 28 '22 750w

"It is not, as a rule, the assertions, it is the attempt to sum up a civilization by describing its faults that we violently deprecate. Such an attempt is neither judicious nor scholarly; it is condemned at the outset to capriciousness; it challenges the writer to say, not what he makes of America, which is difficult, but what he finds wrong in the United States, which is easy. It gives a false tone of merely destructive criticism to the soundest articles, and makes a captious survey of what might have been an attempt to weigh and understand."

— Lit R p377 Ja 28 '22 850w

"It is as though the thirty gloomy young persons standing arm in arm and making faces at the United States had suddenly been transformed by a Freudian magician into their own suppressed desires and had appeared incarnate before us as the eternal maiden aunt. A proper title for the book would be 'America spanked by a maiden aunt, in sorrow, not in anger'. . . The entire collection of essays, while each may have a basis in fact and while many essays have a basis on truth, produces a book that is not a true book in its attempt to take stock of American life." W. A. White
+ Lit R p414 F 11 '22 1350w

"Of the thirty Americans who have thus inquired into the character of our civilization, who seem at times almost to be inquiring whether we have a civilization at all, it is natural that some should be inferior to the best. . . Too many of the inquirers swing the ax which with Mr. Mencken does good execution for the reason that it is hard metal, but which with them merely amuses or irritates for the reason that it is, of necessity, wood or paper. Several are splenetic, a few are trivial, one or two are downright dull. . . But with the central contention one may not quarrel; that in the long run we shall probably be saved, if we are to be saved at all, largely by the intellect, and that it must not sleep nor falter in its task of scrutiny." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 114:222 F 22 '22 780w

"Mr. Stearns declares himself and his fellow-adventurers to have been animated by the spirit and temper of the French Encyclopedists. The description, of course, enlivens our hopes and invites our mind. It conspicuously challenges a comparison. But alas, how we are misled! Here is no philosophic synthesis of new life and new knowledge used to judge ancient privilege and antiquated institutions. Here is no sage and witty scholarship, no reasoned irony and satirical tolerance compact at once of sympathy and judgment, which are the attributes of the Encyclopedists. You find yourself, on the contrary, compelled to the inference that all that most of our adventurers ever saw of the Encyclopedists was the name in a book." H. M. Kallen

— New Repub 30:54 Mr 8 '22 4000w

"Mr. Stearns' volume is the cry of the American young, the fierce slogan of the intelligentsia. Many of the essays are spoiled by the excess of their fervor, and occasionally by a deliberate ignoring of favourable facts."

+ New Statesman 19:244 Je 3 '22 230w

"At least half of its thirty-odd articles have merit; and several of the less meritorious are lively enough, not to call them explosive. Some of the authors seem to be suffering from moral biliousness; some of them are victims of mental strabismus; some of them make it plainly evident that a young intellectual does not always feel the need of being intelligent." Brander Matthews

+ N Y Times p18 F 12 '22 2150w

Reviewed by Lawrence Gilman

No Am 215:698 My '22 2850w

Outlook 131:41 My 3 '22 2900w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:179 Ap '22

St Louis 20:96 My '22

Spec 128:369 Mr 25 '22 620w

"As a whole, the book fails to afford a comprehensive interpretation of our civilization chiefly because much of the thought is canalized within the lubrications of a clique. The struggle to be discordant, dissident, superior to 'Main street' is pushed too far. But the book has some strong and many provocative points."

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Ja 15 '22 1100w

"This elaborate book, instead of being a manifesto of the aims of the young intellectuals, is 'almost wholly a recital of grievances.'

STEARNS, H. E., ed.—Continued

The young intellectuals are prolific of discontent, but have shown themselves deficient in creative aim and principle."

— Springf'd Republican p10 Je 3 '22 430w
(Reprinted from The Times [London] Lit Sup)

The Times [London] Lit Sup p159 Mr
9 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 18:102 Ap '22

Reviewed by F. Manning

Yale R n s 12:209 O '22 2350w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR. Hunters of the great north. 301p il $2.50 Harcourt
919.8 Arctic regions. Eskimos. Hunting—
Arctic regions 22-20703

The author translated his enthusiasm for the Arctic and the Eskimos, after his first polar expedition, into the organization of a second expedition, instead of writing a book. His first book was written with a background of five winters and seven summers in the north; the second book with a background of ten winters and thirteen summers. In the present book he has tried to recapture his first vivid impressions and enthusiasms while using his mature knowledge to eliminate early faults of observation and conclusion. After a biographical chapter describing his pioneer origin, there follow the history of his first expedition with Leffingwell and Mikkelsen and his first impressions of the Eskimos. The rest of the book deals with life in the north after the manner of the Eskimo, with travels, adventures and hunting exploits. Maps.

Booklist 19:93 D '22

"One can sit down to this volume by this indomitable Arctic explorer with every expectation of interesting reading, and not be disappointed. An admirable one for boys to read in order to learn how to meet disaster and hardships like a man. The story is a 'story,' for it is no dry account of travels, and still it is full of valuable information about the Arctic, with revelations for the layman about this and other Arctic explorations." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 2 '22 550w

Int Bk R p34 Ja '23 520w

"Mr. Stefansson is a first-class writing man as well as a first-class hunter and explorer, and no one, young or old, can take up this book without becoming absorbed in its accounts of Arctic life. The author has many original points of view, and when he takes the reader into his confidence as to these, his pages are most entertaining."

+ Outlook 132:675 D 13 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:32 Ja '23

R of Rs 66:672 D '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 19:27 Ja '23

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR. Northward course of empire; with an introd. by Edward William Nelson. 274p il $2 Harcourt
919.8 Arctic regions 22-17054

The book is a further development of the thesis advanced in the author's "Friendly Arctic" (Book Review Digest, 1921), that far northern lands are not the icy deserts of popular belief, but quite the opposite—habitable, possessed of a variety of resources, full of attractions for men of pioneering stamp and a hopeful means of relief for our overcrowded populations. Beginning with a view of the northward course of civilization and a tearing down of the popular conception of a "North that never was," Mr. Stefansson proceeds to show the great natural resources of the polar regions, giving special attention to the reindeer industry. He outlines the possibilities of transpolar commerce by air and submarine and closes with some general considerations about colonization. The appendix contains a more technical discussion of the reasons for the persistence of erroneous ideas of the polar regions.

Booklist 19:50 N '22

"A readable book and convincing argument for settling the great north."

+ Bookm 56:514 D '22 130w

"This book is crammed with inspiring ideas, not so new many of them as when he first began writing and lecturing about the Far North but still sufficiently breath-taking to appeal to adventurous spirits. Not the least advantage of the book comes from his keen imagination and the picturesque quality of his writing. He gives life to even dull statistical facts." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 30 '22 950w

Cleveland p94 D '22

"Mr. Stefansson is intelligent; he writes in a vivid, straightforward style that is free from literary clichés, journalistic jargon and scientific slang; and he dramatizes his material with an amazing skill." E. T. Booth

+ Freeman 6:188 N 1 '22 900w

Reviewed by F. H. Giddings

N Y Times p4 D 24 '22 1550w

"Captures the imagination. His ideas are original, his interpretations individual, frequently iconoclastic; and his method of presentation subtly tempers the compelling with the persuasive." C. L. Skinner

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 19 '22 1350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:32 Ja '23

R of Rs 66:672 D '22 80w

St Louis 20:274 N '22

Springf'd Republican p6 O 9 '22 200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

STEPHENS, WINIFRED. Women of the French revolution. 287p $5 Dutton [15s Chapman &
H.]

944.04 France—History—Revolution. Woman
—France (Eng ed 22-21008)

Beside the chapters devoted to Mme Roland, Mine de Stael, Charlotte Corday, and other prominent women of the revolution, the book brings together many sketches of more obscure and now almost forgotten heroines of the day. Among these are the agitators Théroigne de Méricourt and Claire Lacombe, Etta Palm d'Aelders, founder of women's clubs, Olympe de Gouges and others. A chapter is devoted to the women's clubs which sprang up during the French revolution, another to the women writers of the period, and one to the women militarists. The last chapter is an account of the rise and fall of the women's party.

Booklist 19:120 Ja '23

"In her desire to be entirely impartial she is in danger of being possibly slightly superficial. This book of Miss Stephens is not the kind of volume which will add greatly to the knowledge of those who are familiar with the period she so pleasantly describes. Miss Stephens' book may reasonably expect a place in the library of any home of cultivation and taste, although it will not be essential upon the shelves of any university of standing."

— + Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '22 360w

"Miss Stephens is never dull and never quite exciting. 'Women of the French Revolution' may be added without dishonour to those already brimming reference-files in our great public libraries where the word 'woman' leads to so many quaint, humorous, and astounding discoveries." Alyse Gregory

Freeman 6:333 D 13 '22 850w

"Miss Stephens' book is a work of history, reflecting earnestness of purpose and care for accuracy. She has compared sources, verified her statements, and referred frequently by footnotes to other authorities. Indeed, the whole book suffers from impartiality. If a book of history is to be of permanent interest for the lay reader it must be incisive in its comment. It is useless for the historian to try to be unbiased beyond a certain point, for he can never shake off his own prejudices, and he concludes by being out of sympathy with his subject."

+ — N Y Times p15 Ja 28 '23 880w

"Miss Stephens' book is a valuable contribution to the better understanding of a curious and obscure phase of the French Revolution."

tion. It might almost be described as a history of feminism during the revolution. For Miss Stephens has made the participation of women as a whole, as well as individually, in the revolutionary movement, the theme of her book." Esther Murphy

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 22 '22 1550w

Outlook 132:390 N 1 '22 30w

"Unfortunately, Miss Stephens does not bring a particularly penetrating intellect to bear upon them, and what ought to be a strange and revealing treatise on human nature becomes merely an agglomeration of interesting fact. It is really the raw material of a book, and, though its pages are attractive and there is much to be learnt from it, the reader is apt to be exasperated now and then by Miss Stephens's missed opportunities."

+ — Spec 129:313 S 2 '22 150w

"She has trifled with figures like that of Mme. de Staël, about whom it is waste of time to write unless one has something new and interesting to say. She has made a more interesting study of Mme. Roland, and another of the less known Mme. de Condorcet. But that which gives her book its real value is the series of portraits of now almost forgotten women who held the limelight in the revolutionary years."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p471 J1 20 '22 680w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS. GEOFFREY LISLE HOLDSWORTH). The room. 298p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

22-22772

The story is descriptive of a large and very commonplace family including, besides parents and children, "Aunt Lavvy"—by adoption—a son-in-law and grandchildren, all jammed into one house and for all their close propinquity "knowing no more of each other than was visible to the eye." Only one of them, young Ursula, had a real need for privacy and jealously guarded her right to her own little room. The little room and her sacrifice of it become symbolic to her, in later life, of other needs of her personality and of other sacrifices, implying the moral that the real sacrifice is the one that sheds no glamor and brings no reward.

"Why dwell unhappily on the latter half of 'The Room,' when the first half can be praised unreservedly as a very clever and honest piece of realism, that flickers with keen wit of perception and expression, and is stamped with the author's delightful originality of style and view?" E. T. B.

+ — Freeman 6:310 D 6 '22 220w

"The best and worst to be said of this book is that it is brilliant. The people are too brilliant, they talk far too uniformly 'like a book.'" H. W. Boynton

+ — Ind 109:390 D 23 '22 380w

Lit R p273 D 2 '22 330w

"Miss Stern has one of the queerest talents among contemporary novelists, for she lives by choice on a mental desert rich in natural beauties but unvisited by culture. She simply does not care for any of the literary conventions of to-day. But The Room is a very rich and jolly book. It shows Miss Stern's power of creating real people at its very best." Rebecca West

+ — New Statesman 18:734 Ap 1 '22 1300w
N Y Times p18 N 5 '22 800w

"The last section of the book, with its novel twist in the handling of an age-old situation, would have stood perfectly well by itself; but it would have been of a very awkward length for disposal, and we think that the author, conscious or subconscious of this fact, has artificially inflated the childhood of her heroine, so as to fill a whole volume with her history. This first section, at least, which is as long as the remaining three put together, is simple fare to place before mature guests. . . Throughout, the book is written with a humorous cheerfulness that draws one on, even through the innocent vacancy of the early chapters."

+ — Sat R 133:373 Ap 8 '22 270w

"It is a very great pity that the second part of this novel is by no means on the same level of ability as the first. The book is rather disfigured by a final episode of crude melodrama which it is difficult to forgive the author for having tacked on to the admirable study of life at the beginning of her story."

+ — Spec 128:503 Ap 22 '22 300w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 28 '23 300w

STERRETT, FRANCES ROBERTA. Amazing inheritance. 323p $2 Appleton

22-17148

From salesgirl in the aluminum department of the Evergreen to queen of the cannibal islands was a big step for little Tessie Gilfooly to take. The inheritance came from Uncle Pete who had run away to sea and had not been heard from for years. It set the town of Waloo all agog, gave Mr Kingley, proprietor of the Evergreen, some splendid publicity, made it worth while for Mr Bill, Kingley's son, to notice Tessie for the first time in his life, and gave Tessie a chance to queen it in Waloo for several months while waiting for the special representative from the Sunshine Islands to arrive. The queening, altho good fun, had its serious drawbacks, and Tessie at the end resigned her queenship with one hundred thousand dollars to the good, and married Mr Bill.

"The situation is certainly humorous and it gives Miss Sterrett opportunity for the weaving of an amusing tale."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '22 230w

N Y Times p27 S 3 '22 330w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p785 N 30 '22 30w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT. King-makers. 314p $1.90 Dodd [7s 6d Hutchinson] 22-20994

Monte Carlo and Nice have been chosen as the scene for a plot to restore the little kingdom of Goritz to its exiled king by a stroke of diplomacy. The population of the new republic, ignorant and starving, could easily be persuaded to take back their ruler and the old régime, if sufficient funds for reconstruction were forthcoming. So reasoned the king's loyal ex-minister, who accordingly arranged a marriage between the king's grandson and successor and the daughter of an American copper-king. But the minister did not reckon with the gambling propensities of the young prince and the fact that President Jeneski of Goritz was in love with the chosen bride. Thus the neatly planned intrigue was doomed to a dramatic, and, for the king and prince, tragic ending.

Booklist 19:124 Ja '23

"Perhaps our wide-eyed innocence as to royalty in general made us like the book. We are very young and inexperienced upon international affairs. The author has made the abstract concrete, and by sun and moon convinced us that his people have imagination, fluency of speech, and readiness to plot for the joy of it. Our periodicals missed these elements, but the reader of 'The King-makers' shall revel in them, if he so desires." R. D. W.

+ Boston Transcript p9 N 22 '22 450w

Lit R p272 D 2 '22 110w

"One of the best of all the many tales that center about revolutions and plots of restoration in imaginary petty kingdoms in the east of Europe. We won't say that this story is as charmingly written as Stevenson's 'Prince Otto,' but it is as good as or better than 'The Prisoner of Zenda.'"

+ Outlook 132:674 D 13 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:5 Ja '23

"The whole book, with a theme which might have made cynicism pardonable, is, nevertheless, refreshing in tone, and the incidental romance sincere and unforced. The argumentative passages do not altogether escape from tediousness, but the book is worth a little effort on the reader's part."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p749 N 16 '22 350w

STEVENSON, EDWARD LUTHER. Terrestrial and celestial globes. (Publications of the Hispanic soc. of America). 2v 218;291p il $12 Yale univ. press [50s Milford]

910.9 Geography—History. Globes 21-18954
For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

"This work is by America's foremost geographer and cartographer. It is the first detailed work of its kind in English and it is the only extensive historical treatise on terrestrial and celestial globes in any language." V: H. Paltis

+ Am Hist R 27:543 Ap '22 980w

"It is not a technical work for globe-makers, but a readable work for globe-users and those who ought to be. The excellent illustrations, themselves of extraordinary interest, show globes of different periods and likenesses of geographers, explorers and astronomers."

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 9 '22 2250w

"Dr. Stevenson is evidently an enthusiastic student of globes and has brought together, in these substantial and well-illustrated volumes, a vast amount of information."

+ Spec 128:376 Mr 25 '22 130w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 20 '22 1800w

STEWART, ALFRED WALTER. Some physico-chemical themes. 419p il $7 (21s) Longmans

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 22-8142

"With the object of stimulating the student to further reading, the author presents in considerable detail a number of subjects not hitherto covered in books. To facilitate the approach to original literature liberal references are given and brief bibliographies are provided."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:489 N '22

STEWART, CHARLES DAVID. Valley waters. 2 370p $2 Dutton

22-20877

The theme of the story is the search of a shell-shocked soldier for the mother he had been separated from in early childhood and whom he had never really known. Starting with fleeting and fragmentary memories certain clues developed which finally brought him to Zanesville, Ohio, the central scene of the story, to his long-lost mother and the little girl playmate of his childhood.

Booklist 19:161 F '23

"A really human, humorous, delightful story." L. N.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 9 '22 450w

"It is subdued in key, experienced, contemplative, not aimed at distinction; but it is also soundly written in a sincere, scrupulous, real mood, with humor, and with fineness of understanding. We do not turn from it, however, with a completely fed sense of life." C: Trueblood

+ Nation 116:152 F 7 '23 200w

"The novel is very poorly constructed. The secret of the hero's identity is revealed early in the narrative—during the first hundred pages—most of the book being composed of padding. Some of it is very good padding."

+ N Y Times p14 N 26 '22 380w

"It has a pleasant atmosphere, homely and intimate, like the smell of a country kitchen on baking day, of apple pie sprinkled with cinnamon. It is as distinctively American as Indian summer. Sentiment is the keynote, but never sentimentality." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p20 Ja 21 '23 450w

"The story is leisurely and mildly humorous and has good character drawing, but even those who like the quality of the book will find the author's tendency to linger lovingly over every little detail somewhat wearisome."

+ Outlook 133:101 Ja 10 '23 70w

STEWART, MRS CORA (WILSON). Moonlight schools for the emancipation of adult illiterates. 194p il $2 Dutton

374.8 Evening and continuation schools. Illiteracy 22-26890

"Moonlight schools" is the name given to the night schools for illiterate adults in rural communities, which were first tried as an experiment in the mountain districts of Kentucky and which have since spread to Tennessee, the Carolinas, Alabama and other states. Mrs Stewart is the leader of the movement which brought about these schools, and the author of the first textbooks for adult illiterates. In this book she tells the story of the schools and the movement which they represent.

Booklist 19:38 N '22

"It is a very inspiring book."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 21 '22 260w

"The story of the attempt to teach adult illiterates how to read and write is told in this book simply but with an eloquence that stirs the emotions. The photographs and letters of the pupils, some of them old men and women who attended the 'moonlight schools' after their day's work was done and mastered the rudiments of their subject, are altogether unusual."

+ Outlook 132:392 N 1 '22 90w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 21 '22 150w

Reviewed by B. C. Downing
Survey 49:662 F 15 '23 220w

Wis Lib Bul 18:271 D '22

STEWART, DONALD OGDEN. Perfect behavior: a parody outline of etiquette. 227p il $2 Doran

817 Humor. Parodies 22-23737

"Mr. Stewart's book aims to be 'a guide for ladies and gentlemen in all social crises.' It is a most thorough manual of manners of all sorts and should prove invaluable as a reference book to those who desire to secure or to preserve a social status—or to learn the proper form for letters to a taxidermist and a bearded lady. With an amazing display of knowledge concerning correct procedure the author discusses every social phenomenon from the peculiar behavior of the best man and ushers at weddings to synthetic gin"—Nation

Booklist 19:116 Ja '23

"He handles his subject with more consistent skill than he displayed in 'A Parody Outline of History.' It is a much evener performance, accomplished with less obvious effort." R. E. Sherwood

+ Bookm 56:766 F '23 550w

"This book is superlatively well done. It is boisterous, keen, violent in language, occasionally, a wee bit risqué. Perhaps sophisticated is the truer way of looking at it, and at the pictures also, by Mr. Ralph Barton. Of their kind they are far above the average. Good drawing, a sense of the ridiculous, make them as successful as are the chapters."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 6 '23 220w

Dial 74:104 Ja '23 80w

"A new parody outline which is perhaps no funnier than the common variety of etiquette books, but could there be higher praise than to say it is fully the equal of the finest of these? It is! There is a chapter on Etiquette for Dry Agents which alone would make the book a success. Ralph Barton is the successful illustrator." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p37 D '22 40w

"With keen appreciation of the weak points in our armor he holds our pet foibles up for all the world to laugh at. There lies his power, in his ability to give enough gloss of truth to his exaggeration for the keen point of his satire to pierce home."

+ Lit R p420 Ja 27 '23 300w

"Although Stewart swings the slapstick of extravagant burlesque, he can handle, upon occasion, the lighter, yet more formidable, quarterstaff of satire. The text is generously interspersed with diagrams of the more poignant social crises by the inimitable Ralph Barton." H. I. Young

+ Nation 115:584 N 29 '22 200w

"Mr. Stewart's is an entertaining book, and it serves a useful purpose. It is good stuff." T: L. Masson

+ N Y Times p12 D 24 '22 1200w

STILLMAN, MILDRED WHITNEY. Wood notes. 99p $1.25 Duffield

811 22-9878

"A group of nature songs, child songs and mother songs, all slight, but nearly all pleasing or at least showing a certain discernment and appreciation of beauty."—Ind

"Has distinct charm and originality. There is no attempt to express great depth of feeling, but the sincerity throughout adds to the enjoyment and pleasantness of the themes."

+ Bookm 55:537 J1 '22 130w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

+ Ind 109:55 Ag 5 '22 90w

"Her nature lyrics are not so good as her children's poems, which seem to me very good indeed." R: Le Gallienne

+ — N Y Times p9 S 17 '22 370w

Springf'd Republican p16 Je 23 '22 200w

STILSON, CHARLES B., and BEAHAN, CHARLES. Island God forgot. 319p $1.90 Holt

22-16743

"The mysterious passenger aboard the trading ship of Capt. Sam Ross precipitates mutiny with his tale of the Grand Mogul's fabulous treasure hidden on an uncharted island in the Pacific. When the sunken treasure chest is discovered the crew sail off with their hollow booty to a sudden fate, leaving marooned on the uninhabited island the captain, the mate, their wives, and the faithful cabin boy. To each couple is born a child, which grows to maturity unhampered by any high degree of civilization. Memory, the captain's daughter, is a radiant, untamed child of nature, of whom we see too little; while Abe, the mate's son, is a creature of surpassing ugliness, endowed with his father's cowardice and his mother's villainy. Their impending marriage, the disclosure of the real treasure, and an invasion of Malay marauders from the sea add to the stress of the situation."—Lit R

"Is it trash? Well, we've read so much of this kind of thing lately that our judgment is warped and our taste spoiled. Is it the worst we have read since 1921? Have done! Have done! It's worse than anything we have read since 1920."

— Boston Transcript p4 S 13 '22 580w

"Action abounds, but style, atmosphere, analysis, characterization—all that distinguishes good writing from mere story telling is sadly lacking."

+ Lit R p33 S 16 '22 250w

"The two authors have written with excellent co-operation, fitting their work so smoothly together that the double authorship is scarcely at all betrayed in either construction or style. It is a good tale of sea and ship adventure."

+ N Y Times p14 S 24 '22 330w

"If the story of how the treasure is traced to the island is not too convincing, the air race across the Pacific is particularly well done."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 4 '23 90w

Wis Lib Bul 18:218 O '22

STIRLING, MRS ANNA MARIA WILHELMINA (PICKERING). William De Morgan and his wife; with a preface by Sir William Richmond. 403p il $6 Holt [25s T. Butterworth]

B or 92 De Morgan, William Friend. De Morgan, Evelyn (Pickering) (Mrs William Friend De Morgan) 22-16210

Mrs Stirling, who is Mrs De Morgan's sister, divides her biography into three parts. The first deals with William De Morgan, his life and work and friends for the first nearly fifty years of his life. During this time he was working as a designer and potter and his friends were William Morris, Edward Burne-Jones and others of the Pre-Raphaelites. The letters and anecdotes of this period are full of the charm which delighted his friends and which was later to show itself so clearly in his novels. The second part is devoted to his wife Evelyn De Morgan, an artist of genius, whose painting belongs to the school of Burne-Jones. The third and longest part deals with De Morgan's belated literary career, from his first novel "Joseph Vance" written in his sixty-eighth year thru that succession of novels which was to bring him such richness of appreciation and love and the freedom from financial worry which harassed his whole career as an artist. Many illustrations of his pottery and of Mrs De Morgan's painting are included.

Booklist 19:18 O '22

"The atmosphere of two most interesting lives is painted by Mrs. Stirling with a skill which is very little inferior to that of De Morgan himself. If one is reduced to the choice of a thoroughly charming book for the winter evenings to come, this one can be ardently recommended." M. F. Egan

+ Bookm 56:218 O '22 1200w

"She has some of Boswell's thoroughness—and of his platitudes. Still, like that immortal admirer of the Doctor, she permits her subject to talk and write letters copiously, so that his keen humor and fine grace of character make a host of pages worth lingering over. From the literary point of view, one would have preferred a somewhat more critical biographer."

+ — Cath World 116:109 O '22 250w

Cleveland p88 N '22

"Mrs. Stirling displays an admirable talent for research, together with an almost unrelieved ineptitude as biographer. The result of her labour is a book which has charm in spite of the complete absence of tact in the arrangement of the material. The charm of the work radiates from the rare personalities of William and Evelyn De Morgan, which will not be submerged in the mass of letters and anecdotes with which the book is salted."

+ — Dial 73:581 N '22 100w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

Freeman 6:450 Ja 17 '23 3700w

"Picture of two lovable geniuses who lived unusual and harmonious lives, told in a style as easy and winning as the flow of a clear river." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p36 D '22 60w

Reviewed by G. H. Carson

Lit R p22 S 16 '22 600w

Reviewed by Temple Scott

Nation 115:256 S 13 '22 1100w

Nation and Ath 31:627 Ag 5 '22 880w

"The chief defect of this book is its diffuseness, yet it is one which could hardly be avoided. William De Morgan is not a writer whose quality can be gauged by a sip, neither can the flavour of his personality be transmitted in a concise account."

New Statesman 19:334 Je 21 '22 580w

"No one can read this biography without a sense of gratitude toward the author of it, first, for presenting to us so clearly a remarkable personality, and second, for the proof that such a personality gives of the possibility of living a cheerful, happy life, provided one lives from day to day, taking happiness as it comes without discontent, and without crying for the moon. For if any man in this imperfect world ever lived happily that man was William De Morgan." W: L. Phelps

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '22 3100w

"A welcome and enjoyable addition to literature. The author is an experienced biographer; her intimate knowledge of those about whom she writes, joined to sound literary judgment, made her the one person admirably equipped for this particular task."

+ Outlook 131:703 Ag 30 '22 1250w

STIRLING, MRS. A. M. W.—Continued

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:514 N '22

Pratt p33 autumn '22

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

Sat R 134:218 Ag 5 '22 350w

"We congratulate Mrs. Stirling on producing a vivid picture of two accomplished and lovable people."

+ Spec 129:49 Jl 8 '22 1400w

"Illuminating scraps are there, but the portraits, either of William or Evelyn de Morgan, are not. Mrs. Stirling is by no means an ideal biographer. One might have excused a bland and old-fashioned sententiousness and overlooked an excessive partiality for trivial anecdote, if an orderly and well-developed study had been given of the lives and characters of two remarkable people. . . . We are told, and can well believe, that it was a perfect union—but for the thirty years of their married life Mrs. Stirling leaves our poor imaginations to supply the details of the perfection. On the subjects of Evelyn de Morgan's pictures she is copious, but she shrouds her almost completely from our view as a living character and the help-meet of a much harassed man."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 22 '22 4200w

Wls Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

STIRLING, ARTHUR, pseud. See Sinclair, U. B.

STOCK, RALPH. South of the line. 333p il $1.75
" Doubleday [Ts 6d Heinemann]

22-21183

The heroine of the first eight of these short stories, the scenes of which are laid in the South Sea islands, is Felisi, a half-grown native of Luana. She is very wise and she is the eternal feminine. She has made a study of the white man and, when he has aroused her sympathies, she gives her help and service willingly. The other twelve stories deal with the island folk, native and white.

Booklist 19:125 Ja '23

"The twenty tales in the volume vary somewhat in quality, but the average is very good."

+ Lit R p132 O 21 '22 170w

"Told with much sympathetic feeling and a wealth of local colour."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p730 N 9 '22 30w

STODDARD, THEODORE LOTHROP. Revolt against civilization; the menace of the under man. 274p $2.50 Scribner [16s Chapman & H.]

901 Degeneration. Civilization. Revolutions. Bolshevism 22-12093

The march of civilization, the author asserts, has hitherto never been a steady advance. The most superior people, after flourishing greatly, have relapsed into stagnation and decadence. The reason is neither political nor social, but biologic—a matter of superior germ-plasm running out of stock. There are three tendencies that bring civilizations to decline and ruin: structural overloading, biological regression and atavistic revolt. All three of these tendencies are manifested in our present social unrest and revolutionary activities. Civilization is once more threatened by the under-man. The ultimate antagonists are biology and Bolshevism—Bolshevism as the incarnation of the atavistic past and biology, in the science of eugenics, as the hope of the future. It is only by eugenically creating a new aristocracy that chaos can be averted. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 16:528 Ag '22 100w

"Mr. Stoddard is one of the most stimulating writers on public affairs to-day, but like all stimulants he must be taken with due caution. The Revolt Against Civilization is a book to be pondered, but it is not a book to be swallowed whole. Remarkable here, as in all Mr. Stoddard's writing, are his extraordinary lucidity, and the fascination with which he clothes social and biological questions that, in most hands, would be far drier than dust. To say that The Revolt Against Civilization is 'as interesting as a novel' would perhaps be too flattering to the novelists." J. Bakeless

+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '22 600w

Booklist 19:8 O '22

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 12 '22 1100w

Cath World 116:713 F '23 280w

"The numerous and striking errors of fact lend a touch of absurdity to the tone of solemn dogmatism which the author employs throughout his work." A. C. F.

— Freeman 6:21 S 13 '22 400w

Reviewed by A. G. Keller

Lit R p8 S 9 '22 1400w

Nation 115:77 Jl 19 '22 130w

"Farrago of scientific half-truths and journalistic nightmare. It is a symptom of the time that Mr. Stoddard is taken seriously."

— Nation and Ath 31:714 Ag 26 '22 700w

Reviewed by T. Q. Beesley

N Y Times p8 O 8 '22 2350w

Reviewed by F. M. Davenport

Outlook 131:577 Ag 2 '22 2250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:473 N '22

Pratt p9 winter '23

St Louis 20:205 S '22

"A very valuable contribution to the carrying out of that reconstruction and stabilization of civil society which we all desire. He not merely performs the office of the watchman on the tower, but shows us how we are to deal with the evils which he sees coming upon us—some already great and imminent, some at the moment only as big as a man's hand." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 129:337 S 9; 16 '22 3900w

Survey 48:412 Je 15 '22 130w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p419 Je 29 '22 1750w

STOLL, ALBERT (A. PETER STOWE, pseud.)

Making the letter pay. rev ed 106p il $1 Regan

652 Commercial correspondence

A small book designed to help the business man in planning his correspondence department and systematizing his files. More attention is given to forms and methods, letterheads, mechanical devices, filing systems, etc. than to the actual writing of the letters.

STONE, CLARENCE R. Silent and oral reading; a practical handbook of methods based on the most recent scientific investigations. (Riverside textbooks in education) 306p $2 Houghton

372.4 Reading

22-4669

"The present volume represents a new type of procedure in teaching methods, the emphasis is being shifted from theorizing about the teaching of reading to accurate determination of progress in the different elements that enter into the acquiring of the fundamental and rather difficult art of learning to read, and to use reading as a tool. The emphasis, too, is placed on training for intelligent silent-reading and the analysis and comprehension of what is read rather than on oral and expressive reading, though directions as to this latter are not left out. . . . The author has set forth the essentials of sound reading methods, both for beginning and upper-grade work; has explained and illustrated how to train pupils for good work in silent reading; has shown how teachers and principals may test and measure reading progress, by means of the new scientific tests which have recently been evolved."—Intro.

"As a general handbook on reading for the classroom teacher, the book has many merits. It is full of concrete material which is directly applicable to schoolroom procedure. As a summary and interpretation of the contributions of the recent investigations in the field of reading, the book does not as fully meet the reader's expectation." G. T. Buswell

+ — El School J 22:629 Ap '22 470w

STONE, GILBERT. History of labour. 416p $4.50
Macmillan [15s Harrap]

331 Labor and laboring classes—History. Industry
(Eng ed 22-601)

A firm believer in the evolutionary forces of history, rather than in short cuts by way of violent upheavals, the author attempts to show how, slowly and toilsomely, the masses of mankind have worked their way up from slavery and serfdom to their present stage of freedom and power. His object is to point the way out of their still remaining industrial oppression thru the same evolutionary means—political power and education—rather than by violent revolutions. Part one, beginning with historic times and leading up to the development of representative government on a popular basis, describes the origins of slavery and serfdom, the poverty due to the emancipation, the guilds and master worker, the early educational standards, the agrarian and industrial revolutions and the rise of trade unionism. Part two begins with the unreformed Parliament and describes the political and industrial reforms of nineteenth century England, the rise of the factory system, conditions in the home, the mental horizon of the masses and present tendencies. Bibliography and index.

Am Econ R 12:657 D '22 350w

Reviewed by E. H. Sutherland

Am J Soc 28:498 Ja '23 220w

St Louis 20:295 D '22

"A careful, well reasoned and intensely interesting book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '22 420w

"It contains a valuable accumulation of references in a small compass and brings into prominence several important facts in the history of the working-class. . . The book, as a whole, should be useful, but will hardly be accepted by Labour as a valid description of essentials. The attitude of the author is that of the benevolent Radicalism of the middle of the nineteenth century, and, in spite of occasional references to France and Germany, the facts referred to are peculiarly British."

Sat R 132:467 O 15 '21 430w

Survey 49:119 O 15 '22 80w

"The many references to French, American, and classical conditions seem to be chosen rather by the caprice of the author, or from their own accessibility in well-known secondary authorities, than with the idea of adding to the coherence of the argument."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p571 S 8 '21 1500w

STONE, GRACE ZARING. Letters to a djinn. 258p $1.75 Century

22-18088

This is a travelogue novel in the form of letters by a young American girl to a friend in New York whom she affects to conjure up as a djinn whenever she is in need of guidance. The girl is companion to a lady in Australia and is sent by her to Singapore to bring the woman's sick sister to Australia. The letters are descriptive of the trip, her sightseings during the several landings en route, her travelling companions and, especially her romance with an explorer.

Booklist 19:125 Ja '23

Cleveland p85 N '22

"A good 'travel-book' and a good love-story. The really difficult scheme of the book is easily and happily worked out, so that the effect of the whole lies safe between pretentious and flippant, on a plane of artfully colored but genuine comedy." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:311 N 25 '22 190w

"If only the letter-writer did not have such a coy, overbearing conceit of herself as a heart-breaker; of the four eligible bachelors who are treated of in the story three propose to her. This cavilling is allowable, because the book succeeds easily, in spite of its self-hindrances."

— + Lit R p96 O 7 '22 330w

N Y Times p8 N 12 '22 370w

"There is a gayety and elusive charm about these letters which will delight every reader." Kathleen Field

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 8 '22 480w

STOUT, ARLOW BURDETTE. Gardening. (New-world science ser.) 354p il $1.60 World bk. [5s Harrap]

635 Vegetable gardening 22-6633

The author of this school text is director of the laboratories of the New York botanical garden. His book is designed especially for junior high schools and presents both theory and practice. With the working knowledge of plants given in the early chapters the gardener can easily follow the full practical directions in the later chapters for the actual growing of the different garden crops. The book deals also with the subject of seed growing and plant breeding. The illustrations, which are numerous and mostly from photographs, show at a glance the garden methods described.

"There is hardly a question that could be asked which is not answered in these 354 pages."

+ Lit R p590 Ap 15 '22 80w

STOUT, HENRIETTA MARIA (SCHROEDER) (MRS CHARLES H. STOUT). Amateur's book of the dahlia; introd. by Mrs Francis King. 314p il $3 Doubleday

716.2 Dahlias 22-5909

The writer is a well-known amateur expert on the growing of the dahlia, of which there are more than five thousand named varieties. She writes of its history, cultivation and hybridization, of the organization of dahlia shows, of cutting, packing and shipping the blossoms, of color combinations in the garden and for house decoration and of varieties of the dahlia in alien soil and climate. A large section of the book is devoted to a classification and chart of named varieties, giving name, originator, color and habit.

Booklist 18:321 Je '22

"The growing and deserved popularity of the dahlia should make certain a wide circle of readers for this excellent book on their culture. Mrs. Stout writes with pardonable enthusiasm, which indeed is quite refreshing. There is no lack of specific, practical information in Mrs. Stout's chapters, which is a model of what a volume on a single flower should be."

+ Lit R p571 Ap 8 '22 60w

"The chapters of this book, which may be accepted as a final word on raising dahlias, are brimmed with knowledge of methods to be employed in order to get best results, are rich in a quaint humor and are strengthened by a wealth of experience and experiment." S. A.

+ N Y Tribune p7 My 21 '22 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:357 Jl '22

Pratt p22 autumn '22

St Louis 20:214 S '22

Springfd Republican p6 Jl 10 '22 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Jl 20 '22 150w

STOWE, A. PETER, pseud. See Stoll, A.

STRACHEY, JOHN ST LOE. Adventure of living; a subjective autobiography (1860-1922). 500p il $5 Putnam [20s Hodder & S.]

B or 92

22-23085

The autobiography of this English journalist, who has been associated for forty years with the Spectator, follows no strict chronological order. Beginning with an account of how he came to the Spectator, he then turns back to his early life and devotes ten chapters to his home and family, his childhood, his father, his family nurse, his early education and his life at Oxford.

STRACHEY, JOHN ST LOE—Continued

Then come an account of his experiences with other newspapers and more chapters on his work with the Spectator, his chiefs and predecessors there, including a sketch of Meredith Townsend. Of the five men to whom he gives special studies, two are Americans, John Hay and Theodore Roosevelt. The Englishmen are Lord Cromer, Joseph Chamberlain and the Duke of Devonshire. There are chapters on the ethics of journalism and its place in modern life and a chapter on the author's political opinions.

Booklist 19:156 F '23

"In an era of many biographies and autobiographies, Mr. Strachey takes high place. The personality of its subject is of course predominant in its pages, but it is never obtrusive, and its statements of what its author has accomplished do not reach to the limits of egotism. It is a record of a distinguished career which does great credit to English journalism, and it reflects the social, the political and the artistic trend of its time. Everybody knows The Spectator, and now everybody may readily know something about the intellectual force and methods which have governed it in recent years." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 29 '22 1750w

"As one reads this account of his well-disciplined days, one comes more and more to realize how impossible it would be for any other country in the world to have produced an individual of just his kind. Nothing, absolutely nothing, one feels, could take place under the sun, capable of shaking his deep-rooted complacency. Not for a single moment would he permit his mind to harbour dangerous thoughts. Imagination, that strange gift of the gods, has no play whatever in his spirit. The very tone and temper of his intellect has taken to itself, one might almost fancy, something of the sweet security of Sutton Court, that lovely country place which has been the undisputed possession of his family for so many generations." Llewelyn Powys

Freeman 6:307 D 6 '22 2250w

"A beautifully written, wise and genial book." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p36 D '22 80w

Reviewed by Joseph Collins

Int Bk R p50 D '22 4000w

"So much has been reserved by the tactful and manfully reticent editor for posthumous issuance—and very wisely reserved—that every reader of this delightful book must envy the public which at some future period will have the diaries from which we are here given but the briefest extracts." Allan Nevins

+ Lit R p262 D 2 '22 1550w

"A book of reminiscences which fascinates the reader from beginning to end. Its attraction is not in piquant revelations or chroniques scandaleuses. By making it his rule to speak as little as possible of living persons, Mr. Strachey has deliberately denied himself many opportunities of making a sensation. . . Much of the charm of this book lies in the personality it unconsciously reveals."

+ Nation 116:45 Ja 10 '23 1350w

Nation and Ath 31:855 S 30 '22 550w

New Statesman 20:146 N 4 '22 1300w

N Y Times 47 N 19 '22 2000w

Pratt p35 winter '23

"It is not to any indiscreet revelations but to the candid exposition of a striking individuality that 'The Adventure of Living' will owe the popularity which we predict for it."

Sat R 134:480 S 30 '22 1250w

Reviewed by Herbert Warren

itsell to the skill of the artistic book designer. "His book is a charming record—written with great simplicity and abounding in admirably-written passages—of a 'full man' who has had a remarkably useful, interesting, and many-sided life." J. A. Spender

+ Spec 129:161 O 7 '22 2200w

"An autobiography unaffectedly but not trivially personal and at the same time informing objective in its presentation of persons and scenes."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 28 '23 1400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 28 '22 1200w

STRACHEY, GILES LYTON. Books and characters. French & English. 324p il $3.50 Harcourt [12s 6d Chatto & W.]

824 Biography. Authors. English literature. French literature. Voltaire, François Marie Arout de 22-12340

Fourteen essays written between 1905 and 1919, most of them reprinted from periodicals. They are on French and English subjects and about equally divided between biography and literary criticism. The critical studies are of Racine, Sir Thomas Browne, Shakespeare's final period, William Blake, Thomas Beddoes and Henri Beyle; the biographical studies, of Voltaire, Rousseau, Madame du Deffand, Lady Hester Stanhope and Thomas Creevy. The most of them belong to Mr Strachey's early period, they show, in lesser degree, the qualities of his later great successes in biography, the same power of dramatizing his subject. But they are by no means iconoclastic and some of the sketches speak for greater appreciation of neglected books and characters.

Reviewed by Gamaliel Bradford

Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '22 520w

Booklist 19:13 O '22

Bookm 56:90 S '22 350w

"The first characteristic of Mr. Strachey's art is the startling vividness with which he paints his personages. They satisfy the eye. You feel you can walk round them. They are almost too lifelike, one feels, too good to be true. But they are hypotheses that work; and work neatly and gracefully, so that if we sometimes suspect that the whole truth would be something very different, what matter?" Raymond Mortimer

+ Dial 73:338 S '22 2350w

"Though it is true that they lack the superb intensity and brilliant concentration of his later work, there are many beautiful and illuminating passages. He encourages the subjects of his observation to be extravagantly idiosyncratic, and notes down with quick, philosophic eye every chance and revealing characteristic in which they are wont to indulge in their less conscious hours. Though on these occasions he draws his conclusions in a mood profoundly disillusioned, profoundly indulgent, it may be noted as an interesting fact that he is ever ready to throw into a clear light the noble and magnanimous in contrast with what is base and unimaginative." Llewelyn Powys

+ Freeman 6:115 O 11 '22 2650w

"Mr. Strachey shows in this volume, which contains his most chiselled work, possession of an uncanny knack of raising dead ghosts beyond the dull pencilling of fiction, but whether they would be recognized by their contemporaries or even by themselves is as doubtful as any of the queries which Mr. Strachey is fond of dropping into history." Shane Leslie

+ Lit R p737 Je 17 '22 1200w

"These fourteen essays and reviews show Lytton Strachey at his worst as well as at his best; his worst is not more reprehensible than mere competence, and his best is of a kind that he alone seems able to furnish. From this varied and unequal collection the portrait of Madame du Deffand stands superbly forth; it is a masterpiece by a man who has a number of masterpieces to his credit." B. K. Redman

Nation 115:163 Ag 16 '22 1200w

"I suspect that many have enjoyed Mr. Strachey's labors of recreation hitherto because they looked like destruction, and that they will feel they have been cheated when they read a book in which the effort of restoration is more than perceptible. . . Justice, the finest of all virtues, is the least popular. Mr. Strachey has more of it than any other critic writing today." J. M. Murry

+ Nation and Ath 31:346 Je 3 '22 1950w

"Mr. Strachey's fundamental quality, upon which most of his other qualities are built, is, I suppose, a searching common sense, an independence of mind which may use an opinion he thinks false as a means of giving an edge to his own opinion, but which is never pushed into exaggeration by any will to disagree." Philip Littell

+ New Repub 31:219 JI 19 '22 1950w

"Mr. Strachey's latest volume contains less solid value than either of his others. It is none the less a considerable achievement. The critical studies are never incompetent, but one feels that they were written before their author had discovered his true métier. They are not instinct with his personality; another skilful writer might have done them equally well." G. B.

+ New Statesman 19:242 Je 3 '22 1000w

"They are all interesting, for I do not believe that Mr. Strachey could be dull if he tried; they are interesting in their subjects, in their style, and in their indication of the development of the author." W: L. Phelps

+ N Y Times p5 JI 30 '22 2450w

Reviewed by Esther Murphy

N Y Tribune p6 Ag 13 '22 1200w

"Mr. Strachey as a discoverer and appreciator of æsthetic qualities is beguiling and sensitive and distinguished, and he writes with point, with wit, with beauty. He is clairvoyant, eloquent, delightful, when he writes of poets and prose-men." Lawrence Gilman

+ No Am 216:553 O '22 4300w

"In Mr. Strachey we have, I believe, a potential interpreter of the great personalities of the eighteenth century. And of this revival of influence, since he is one of its most evident exponents, Mr. Strachey should be a gifted and brilliant critic." L. R. Morris

+ Outlook 131:681 Ag 23 '22 1550w

Pratt p27 autumn '22

R of Rs 66:223 Ag '22 100w

St Louis 20:219 S '22

"The essays are all sensible, fresh, and enthusiastic; there is little trace here of the Mr. Strachey who is a terror to the Victorian evildoer, except in the instance of 'Mr. Creevy.' The essay on Racine is put first, and although quite short, it is the most important of the series. It deals with the objections brought by English criticism against the preponderating value which the French set upon their leading tragic writer. It is admirably conceived and studded with fine observations."

+ Sat R 133:551 My 27 '22 650w

"No one who is interested in Mr. Strachey's career as a writer must fail to read the book; but, judging him by his own high standard, there is perhaps only one essay in it which is of first-rate intrinsic importance—of remarkable interest, that is, apart from the light which it may throw on the habits of mind of its author. That exception is the essay on Racine."

+ Spec 128:658 My 27 '22 1250w

"The essays, in themselves, are not all important, and their subject-matter is too varied to make the book significant of anything in particular except the neatness and brilliance, the sustained dash and the relaxing rhythms of the author's style. But for this we shall all be grateful, and we may find not a few examples of Mr. Strachey's gift of revealing portraiture, in impish but never impertinent vein."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a JI 9 '22 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 25 '22 1300w

WIs Lib Bul 18:215 O '22

"Readers of 'Eminent Victorians' and 'Queen Victoria' will turn eagerly to the character sketches in this collection, expecting to find the same brilliantly caustic analyses which toppled down so many tall idols in the previous volumes. True, these papers, though not exactly the sweepings of the author's desk, are more miscellaneous, and perhaps rather less important, than the former chapters. But they are quite worth while." H: A. Beers

+ Yale R n s 12:398 Ja '23 1200w

STRACHEY, MARJORIE. David, the son of Jesse. 351p $1.75 Century [17s 6d J. Capell David, king of Israel—Fiction 22-4827

Miss Strachey says that she has drawn her story of David from three sources—the Bible, the critics and her own imagination, using whichever seemed best for each episode and sometimes blending all three. She tells the story of David as man and king from his coming to Saul's court to sooth the half-demented king with his minstrelsy, to his death. Of David the poet she has nothing to say. Using the Strachey method of dealing with eminent figures (she is a sister of Lytton Strachey) she draws a picture of David which discards the romance and picturesqueness of the Bible narrative. The story is told with a studied simplicity and dry matter-of-factness, with an evident intention of making David a human being moved by the passions and desires which have always moved men.

"Miss Strachey has painted in her background with a fidelity to historic fact impossible to be too highly commended."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '22 360w

Dial 73:233 Ag '22 80w

"Miss Strachey has written a story of adventure full of rushing action that reveals the futility of ambition. But she has not done for David what Strachey did for Victoria—made a real human being out of an abstraction. If any one wishes really to know David, the Bible is the place to seek him."

+ Lit D p60 Ag 19 '22 720w

"The treatment is unexpectedly modern, irreverent, frank, undecorated and, for that matter, a little jarring. The story is well told in spite of its inappropriate modernity. It has real vigor and virility interspersed with moments of great beauty and true emotion."

+ N Y Times p20 Je 18 '22 350w

"The novel is throughout less picturesque and less vivid than the story of which we are accustomed. There are very few 'close up' psychological studies of the character such as we might have expected. The whole tale is told with a sort of efficient dry rapidity. We might expect that such a book would be very dull reading. Oddly enough, this is not the case, and every now and then we have an uncanny feeling that Miss Strachey had some occult source of knowledge of her subject. Here and there a trivial incident, a little turn of phrase, occurs in the novel which is not to be found in the Bible or any authority on it, but it rings absolutely true and gives the impression of the narration of an eye-witness. Miss Strachey has somehow succeeded in seeing the whole episode absolutely afresh."

+ Spec 127:602 N 5 '21 230w

"Her imagination is no less inadequate for the ambitious task which she has attempted. For the most part, through incident after incident, she 'recreates' the life of David by slightly paraphrasing the narrative in Samuel, adding little more than such details as any reader could add for himself, and turning a phrase of description into two or three sentences of commonplace dialogue. Before the great events of David's life her imagination fails as comically as her words."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 6 '21 600w

STRATTON, GEORGE MALCOLM. Developing mental power. 77p 80c Houghton

150 Psychology. Educational 22-5473

The book is one of the Riverside educational monographs edited by Henry Suzzallo. The paper appeared originally in the Atlantic Monthly under the title "The mind as misrepresented to teachers" and in its present form is entirely rewritten with the addition of new material. Its object is to give teachers and other daily workers with the mind a simple general view of mental life in its fundamental working aspects and it points out how education can develop the total organization of the person with the least waste. Partial contents: Is the mind a gymnasium or a tool-chest? The interplay of mind and body; Emotion and mental energy; The organization of impulses and will; The care of the emotions; Exercises for the will.

STRATTON, G. M.—Continued

"A possible criticism of the monograph is that no evidence is presented to prove that increase in teaching power inevitably follows the adoption of the principles formulated. Yet from one point of view this defect is really a virtue. On the whole the booklet is a refreshing stimulating antidote for some of the fatalistic, short-sighted pessimism which, masquerading as science, has for a time operated to restrict experimentation by inhibiting faith in the teacher's power to develop personality. Every teacher and parent should read and ponder Professor Stratton's message. It emphasizes the development of a unified, reasoned control of behavior as the basic and all-inclusive aim of education." S. A. Courts

+ Educ R 64:446 D '22 400w

"The book gives a wholesome presentation of a problem which is of vital interest to all teachers." E. E. Wellemeyer

+ El School J 23:156 O '22 240w

Pratt p7 autumn '22

St Louis 20:296 D '22

STRAUS, OSCAR SOLOMON. Under four administrations; from Cleveland to Taft; recollections. 456p il $4 Houghton

B or 92

22-23556

This autobiography, after giving the author's family history and youthful recollections, treats mainly of his public career as minister to Turkey, member of President Roosevelt's cabinet and in other official capacities, including his activities before and during the World war and recollections of notable personages. Index.

Booklist 19:156 F '23

Bookm 56:771 F '23 130w

"[Mr Straus] has the happy knack of keeping men and events moving through his pages with natural and characteristic gait. His genial pages are free from stiffness or formality and there is a tone of delightful intimacy that makes throne-rooms real and history uncommonly human. These pages, drawn from rich reservoirs of material, are alive with incidents sharpened into reality by the closest of observation." Newton Fuessele

+ N Y Times p3 N 19 '22 3500w

"A wise book, charmingly written: a book to read." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p18 Ja 21 '23 3650w

"One of the most fascinating of the new volumes of personal record and reminiscence that have been making their appearance of late with unwonted frequency." A. S.

+ R of Rs 67:84 Ja '23 1250w

STREET, JULIAN LEONARD. Mysterious Japan. 349p il $4 Doubleday [12s 6d Heinemann]

915.2 Japan—Social life and customs. Japan—Description and travel. National characteristics, Japanese 21-20074

"Although there is nothing new, the daily incidents of a traveler in Japan are retold with a humorous twist and sympathy that makes a chatty, easily read narrative. Accounts of Japanese women, sports, fashions, statesmen and the Japanese equivalent of the ubiquitous organ grinder of our cities, who in Japan carries a drum and a monkey."—Booklist

Booklist 18:116 Ja '22

"Mr Street tells a story well, he analyzes convincingly, and he writes with a skill of dramatizing fact that is seldom equalled outside the ranks of American journalism." J. F.

+ Bookm 54:577 F '22 120w

"The astonishing thing about Julian Street is that having wandered all about the world for a number of years, and having moved in every sort of a circle, high and low, he yet so meticulously preserves the exact point-of-view of the perfect suburbanite, the scrupulous commuter. He is curious about the same things, funny about the same things, facetious in the same fashion, in fact employs the same quips which have made delightful for some years the matutinal conclave on Long Island station platforms."

+ Dial 72:220 F '22 140w

"It is a wonderful human-interest story written by a brilliant journalist as he passed through the land." Collier Cobb

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 My 21 '22 470w

"Mr. Street's book is easy reading; it is sympathetic, humorous."

+ Ind 107:214 N 26 '21 150w

"He entered the country with a sympathetic determination to be pleased with everything he saw, and he succeeds in finding little to criticize and much to amuse and enjoy. There is a backbone of serious discussion of the commercial problems of Japan and their relation to the race problem in California, in which Mr. Street holds a very fair balance between the rights of both nations."

+ Lit R p292 D 17 '21 250w

New Statesman 19:394 Jl 8 '22 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:94 F '22

Springfd Republican p14a D 4 '21

"This book of his is likely to prove unpopular with a good many of his countrymen, because of its frank and uncompromising dissent from many prejudices that have lately become prevalent, not to say fashionable, since the war. Be this as it may, his work comes opportunely at a time when public opinion in the United States and elsewhere is being rapidly led, by the propaganda of an influential group of political writers, to look upon all things Japanese with increasing suspicion and hostility."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p119 F 23 '22 1050w

"The author took with him to Japan a lively curiosity, a kindly interest in his fellow men of whatever race, and an American sense of humor. The result is a readable book which should promote better understanding and good will."

+ Wis Lib Bul 18:29 Ja '22 40w

STREET, JULIAN LEONARD. Rita Coventry. 306p $1.75 Doubleday

22-19913

"Richard Parrish is a young Southerner of excellent family who has come to New York and made money in Wall Street. When the story opens, he is lazily drifting along in an affair with Alice Meldrum. Rita Coventry is a famous opera singer and a very beautiful woman, fêted and flattered, accustomed to doing precisely as she pleases, defying the conventions with perfect serenity whenever such defiance happens to be in accordance with her momentary whim. She sweeps the selfish, sophisticated Richard off his feet; he is infatuated by her, and she teaches him several things he very much needed to know, wounding him in the most vulnerable spot of all, which is his vanity."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Floyd Dell

Bookm 56:347 N '22 240w

Boston Transcript p7 O 21 '22 1050w

"Mr. Street has a suave and often brilliant manner, and he can be witty. His analyses of sexual emotion are, however, little more than the conventional thing. It is a cleverly managed, somewhat superficial drama, reminiscent of the French novel of a generation ago, but ultimately moralized, and acclimatized to American magazine ideals."

+ Lit R p74 S 30 '22 160w

"It is a well-written book, done with a light and agreeable touch, and on the whole deftly contrived."

+ N Y Times p18 S 24 '22 680w

"A perfectly finished bit of fiction. It contains a theme, an idea, as well as a story." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 17 '22 540w

"To us it is an extraordinarily pleasant and able work, which is not marred, but rather improved, by the fact that Mr. Street leaps gracefully over places where some authors would lie down and wallow." F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Tribune p19 D 31 '22 800w

"A story that is at once finished in manner, yet readable, that has the interest of narrative and the interest of interpretation combined."

+ Springfield Republican p7a N 5 '22 420w

STREETER, BERTHA. Homemaking simplified. 244p $1.50 Harper

640 Home economics 22-10183

The object of the book is to help the housekeeper take a business-like view of her work and increase both her economies and her efficiency in great things and small. Beginning with the furnishing of the bride's home no housekeeping details seem to be forgotten, from cooking the breakfast, thru the day's routine, up to planning and building a home. There are hints about vacuum cleaners, conveniences and short cuts of every kind; advice about cooking and preserving, sewing and laundry work, domestic help and entertaining.

Booklist 19:10 O '22

Cleveland p61 Ag '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:271 D '22

STRIBLING, THOMAS SIGISMUND. Birthing. 309p il $1.90 Century

22-6160

Peter Siner, a southern mulatto, on his way home after graduation from Harvard, first becomes reaware of the difference between the North and the South when he is ordered into a Jim Crow car. At Hooker's Bend, the sordid little village of his birth, his high hopes and plans for the betterment of his race, rapidly dwindled before the insurmountable obstacles of existing conditions. After a series of the most depressing experiences he becomes resigned to being, in spite of his education, just a Negro among Negroes and returns North with the octoroon girl he is, more than half unwillingly, compelled to love. The story is a tragically realistic picture of the mutual demoralization of both blacks and whites in southern towns and of the vicious circle about which they appear to be hopelessly revolving.

"This novel shows a very bad moral standard; it shows an infinitely worse artistic standard. The purpose may be, in the back of the author's mind, to show up the false conception of the South in regard to the mental and moral capacities of the negro, but the purpose would be pretty hard to visualize. Is it the 'Birthright,' as Mr Stribling unquestionably attempts to convey, that a negro of the type of Peter Siner, born in the squalid purlieus of 'Nigger-town,' Hooker's Bend, Tenn., should be, even after four years of Harvard, always a 'Nigger-town nigger?' For that is what Peter Siner confesses himself to be, after his failures." W. S. B.

— Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '22 1650w

"There are some excellent genre pictures in Birthing, and, save for the author's tendency to think aloud, a feeling for continuity, for actuality, which promises even more for his future work. Meanwhile, this is worth reading"

+ Dial 72:648 Je '22 170w

"While Mr. Stribling's contribution to the problem of the educated Negro is not momentous, his picture of Southern life, on the other hand, is fresh and often singularly beautiful. He has not only an unusual sensitiveness to atmosphere and speech and the power of vividly reproducing their details, but a genuine gift of exposition. 'Birthing' remains a first novel of unusual distinction, power and sincerity, in a field in which these qualities have heretofore been conspicuously lacking." Martha Gruening

+ — Freeman 5:475 Jl 26 '22 1500w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 108:459 My 13 '22 800w

Lit D p56 Je 10 '22 680w

"A tellingly effective novel, written with genuine artistry and filled with excellent characterizations, as well as with first-rate bits of realistic description. Whatever technical faults may be found in the book, there are many excellent qualities, and it is, withal, a first book of rare promise." Herschel Brickell

+ — Lit R p595 Ap 22 '22 600w

Reviewed by S. N. Cleghorn

Nation 114:498 Ap 26 '22 390w

"The story is told in a series of photograph-like episodes, smoothly connected, but distinct in themselves; a few of them murky and badly developed, a few startlingly distinct in their revelation of Southern character and situation. . . . With the damaging exception of the hero and heroine the characters are excellently drawn. One cannot hold Mr. Stribling entirely responsible for his failure with Peter. The wider the education, the wider the breach between the races; the Southern white man does not know the cultured Negro. Mr. Stribling knows the Negro domestic and the roustabout; but he fails with the educated young Negro because he sees him only at a distance." Worth Tuttle

+ — New Repub 30:288 My 3 '22 850w

"Under an appearance of fairness, there is the thinly veiled imputation of the sheer impossibility of the man or woman whose veins contain the slightest infusion of Negro blood, ever to grasp the conception of common honesty, moral responsibility and sexual purity as supposedly understood by white men. There is not a single Negro character out of over a dozen in the story who is portrayed as possessing any of these qualities. The author lays the foundation of his story upon most of the old myths about the Negro; myths which are constantly bending and breaking under the attack of enlightened reason and science." F. R. Cross-waith

— N Y Call p11 Ap 16 '22 1050w

"The story has its touches of negro humor and pathos—its complications, its love interest. And by many readers it will be rated among the best and cleverest of its kind."

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 9 '22 1250w

"The author of 'Birthing' throughout his book accepts no woman of color as virtuous and the assumption of Hooker's Bend that all educated Negroes are fools, and because he has taken these points of view his book is false, no matter what may be its truth in detail." B. Brawley

— Springfield Republican p15a Ap 23 '22 600w

"The author evidently has an intimate knowledge of his small southern town, and of the sordid relations between the races. The pictures in his narrative are vivid and his characterizations are convincing. It is unfortunate that Mr. Stribling should attribute what is fine in Peter to his white blood." E. T. Ware

+ — Survey 48:628 Ag 15 '22 400w

STRINGER, ARTHUR JOHN ARBUTHNOTT. Prairie child. 382p il $2 Bobbs

22-9192

Written in diary form, this tale is told by Chaddie McKail whose love for her son Dinkie seems to be the ruling passion of her life. Love between herself and her husband is fast waning and after having joined him in Calgary, and there had positive proofs of his unfaithfulness, she treks back to Casa Grande her first home in the prairie wilds. Happiness seems at last to dawn for the mother, for she finds her beloved Dinkie, who had run away from Calgary after a thrashing from his father, and her faithful old lover Peter Kettle persuades her to share his all with him.

STRINGER, A. J.: A.—Continued

"A certain amount of sentimentality is inescapable in the particular type of story which Mr. Stringer is telling. The book was written first of all for serialization in a woman's magazine and despite the fact that the Pictorial Review has made several announcements that it had no desire to confine itself to the type of story definitely intended and designated as a woman's story, this tale of 'The Prairie Child' most emphatically belongs in that class. It is regrettable that so few novelists can strike the happy middle ground which has some chance of approximating normality in the portraying of character." D. L. M.

— Boston Transcript p7 My 17 '22 860w

"It is a book that is worth reading and keeping to read again."

+ Lit D p60 Je 10 '22 950w

"The book is to be commended for its vivid and realistic pictures and for the skill and delicate insight with which it studies the soul of a woman."

+ — Lit R p740 Je 17 '22 500w

"In its own whimsical way, the book has more to say than many of the pompous blasts trumpeted forth by the self-conscious, heavy-browed realists. It is an unusual pleasure to find one who can tell a serious story with a twinkle in his eye, and tell a little more than a story without shouting in your ear that he's going to make you think."

+ N Y Times p17 My 7 '22 330w

"Here is sentimentality a-plenty and the most distasteful phase of it is that it revolves about a mother's relation with her small son, for although there is a somewhat conventional triangle-story involved, it is negligible beside the more vital one of the mother-son relation."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 23 '22 300w

STRONG, CHARLES AUGUSTUS. Wisdom of the beasts. 76p $1.50 Houghton [5s Con-818 Fables (Eng ed 22-15331)

In the form of fables the author satirizes various theories, old and new, in the realms of science, philosophy and religion. In learned language and with much seriousness the birds and beasts, the insects, fish and reptiles discuss such subjects as time and space, relativity and truth, mathematical, physical, metaphysical and ethical problems.

"This is not a zoological treatise on animal instincts and the like, but a series of philosophical fables of excellent humor—indeed the prefatory quotation from the Prologue to Phædrus' Book I. makes us shrewdly suspect the author of exquisite satire directed at relativity and other scientific concepts."

+ Nature 109:608 My 13 '22 200w

"His arguments, put into the mouths of non-human creatures, are spirited and entertaining, such technical terms and abstractions as are allowed to appear being responsible for much of the humor. We may patronizingly recommend the book to schools, but, to be perfectly frank, half an hour of this 'Infants' Einstein' would be no bad thing for most of us who are grown up."

+ Spec 128:54 Ja 14 '22 340w

STURGEON, MARY C. Michael Field. 246p $1.75 Macmillan [6s Harrap]

B or 92 Field, Michael, pseud. (Katharine Harris Bradley, and Emma Edith Cooper) (Eng ed 22-16930)

Michael Field was the pen-name of two remarkably gifted women, aunt and niece, who wrote as one—Katharine Bradley and Edith Cooper. "The collaboration was so loyal, the union so complete, that one may search diligently, and search in vain, for any sign in the work both wrought that this is the creation of two minds and not of one. . . So completely were the poets at one in the imaginative effort, that frequently they could not themselves decide (except by reference to the handwriting on the original sheet of manuscript) who had composed a given passage." They wrote in all twenty-eight tragedies and eight volumes of lyrics which enjoyed the praise of the appreciative few but never had wide recognition. Miss Sturgeon's volume is both biographical and critical, treating the lyrics and tragedies separately, with frequent quotations. Bibliography

"Miss Sturgeon has succeeded where so many biographers fail: she has made these two women as vivid and separate as are their interesting portraits in the frontispiece."

+ Cath World 116:702 F '23 1000w

"It is written with enthusiasm for the subject, with literary skill, and with sound critical ability, and will probably succeed in rousing the children of the naughty world which ignored Michael Field during her lifetime to demand fresh editions of her work." Caleb Reade

+ Lit R p44 S 23 '22 1900w

"Miss Sturgeon's biography is a competent piece of exposition and is critically aware of the merits of Michael Field, but misses that dual author's vein of humor."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:477 Jl 1 '22 300w

New Statesman 19:160 My 13 '22 1200w

"The volume before us shows a very marked advance upon Miss Sturgeon's earlier critical volume, 'Studies of Contemporary Poets.' Her style and judgment have improved considerably. Nothing could be more subtly just than her analysis of the nature of the tragic poet. Only at rare moments does Miss Sturgeon betray an unconscious humour which she perhaps should not seek to eliminate."

+ — Sat R 133:495 My 13 '22 860w

STURT, HENRY CECIL. Socialism and character. 214p $3 Dutton

355 Socialism 22-24949

"The main purpose of the book is to show what improvements in personal character may be looked for as the result of framing a better social organization, and in particular of distributing wealth upon an equitable system." Part one explains the organization of the community which will be needed to carry socialism into effect. Part two shows the influence on character which the author believes the adoption of socialism will have. Among the benefits which he thinks the socialist state will bring about are a free citizenship, more patriotism, better family life, a more refined society thru the increased influence of women, more happiness, higher intelligence and standards of taste.

"Mr. Sturt's writing is not distinguished; it is neither good nor bad, but commonplace." J: Spargo

Lit R p351 D 30 '22 950w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 26 '22 120w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 30 '23 190w

"It is the most comprehensive statement of the socialist case in answer to the prevalent charge that socialism necessarily means greater interference with liberty and less chance for personal development than capitalism. Communists and guild socialists probably will find fault with his argument. And, as is the wont of authors who cannot quite concretely formulate the blessings of the social system they advocate, he is apt to fall back upon lambasting the capitalist state whenever his picture of the social state loses distinctness of outline."

Survey 49:sup208 N 1 '22 150w

"Here, as in his earlier books, he does a good deal of effective criticism on current fallacies."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p247 Ap 13 '22 400w

SULLIVAN, MARK. Great adventure at Washington; the story of the conference. 290p ll $2.50 Doubleday

341.1 Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22 22-11004

The author has attempted to give the story of the conference as a connected narrative, piecing together the things that he personally saw or knew—in his capacity as newspaper correspondent—with the accounts of others and, in some cases, especially in dealing with such subjects as motive and the like, having recourse to surmise. The opening meeting with "that inspired moment" of Hughes's speech is minutely described; the resulting naval agreement between Great Britain, the United States and Japan is made clear; and the part played by France, thru her delegates is reported and analysed. A chapter each is devoted to the Four-power treaty and the situation between Japan and China. The supreme fact of the conference is the peaceful surrender, by Great Britain, of her actual dominance of naval power, and by the United States of potential dominance. Portraits in color. Index.

"Naturally a few of the author's conclusions are debatable, and now and then a careful reader may jot an interrogation point on the margin, less in a spirit of controversy than of further inquiry. But upon the whole this is, within its professed limitations, a very dependable book. A good index adds to its value as a permanent library volume." V: S. Clark
+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '22 200w

Booklist 18:350 Jl '22

"Mr. Sullivan's picture of the conference is all the more pleasing because it is in no way highfalutin."

+ Bookm 53:649 Ag '22 50w

"It is a book of distinct present appeal and yet it seems to us that if one was to read it many years in the future it would not be without potency and charm. Its delightful qualities come from Mr. Sullivan's keen, shrewd, human insight. He appreciates the fallible qualities of man and sees their reasons for sensitiveness and opposition. He also sees quite as clearly the rising to heights which they sometimes accomplish and the national sacrifices which were nobly made. Above all he is kindly, human and tolerant." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '22 1300w
Cleveland p74 S '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Ind 108:488 My 27 '22 190w

"Mr. Sullivan's narrative is thoroughly dramatic. From the opening session the record of the conference falls into a series of dramatic episodes. . . . Swiftly and deftly as the action moves under Mr. Sullivan's skilful pen throughout the reader is inspired with an extraordinary conviction of accuracy and fairness." G: W. Wickersham

+ Lit R p717 Je 10 '22 1750w

+ — Nation and Ath 31:829 S 23 '22 580w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

— New Repub 31:262 Jl 26 '22 520w

"Vividness Mr. Sullivan has certainly obtained, and a rapid running narrative that is not delayed even by the long footnotes or quotations from news dispatches. His book is full of sharply drawn pictures, physical or psychological. It is an easy, entertaining, and—within its chosen field—accurate story of the conference, such as ought to be valuable to every citizen who feels that it is his duty to understand these things, but who can't retain the residue of historical substance that was held in solution by the rivers of contemporary news dispatches." Elmer Davis

+ N Y Times p11 My 14 '22 1500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:479 N '22

"A very interesting, easily understood, impressionistic account of some of the plenary sessions of the Washington Conference. Marked with excellent word-pictures of many of the delegates and many of the conference scenes." R. L. Buell

+ — Pol Sci Q 37:694 D '22 1900w

Pratt p10 autumn '22

R of Rs 66:109 Jl '22 180w

St Louis 20:207 S '22

"Mr. Sullivan's analysis is neither profound nor penetrating, and a number of important points are not sufficiently brought out or placed in their true perspective."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p463 Jl 13 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:179 Jl '22

SUMAN, JOHN R. Petroleum production methods. 2d ed 558p il $6 Gulf pub. co., Houston, Tex.

665.5 Petroleum 21-14888

"Useful practical work for those 'engaged in the business of drilling wells, operating producing properties or constructing pipe lines, tank farms and pumping stations.' (Preface)"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:566 D '22

SUN YAT-SEN. International development of China. 265p $4.50 Putnam

915.1 China—Industries and resources. Transportation—China 22-18102

Dr Sun Yat-sen, who is president of the present Republic of South China, here outlines a comprehensive program for the development of the railroads, waterways and industries of China. There are sixteen maps in the text and a folding map at the end.

Booklist 19:147 F '23

"In his 'International Development of China' Dr. Sun proves himself to be not a mere politician, but the embodiment of constructive statesmanship. His program for the economic development of China is national in scope and, in view of his country's vast area and population and immense natural resources, can hardly be regarded as chimerical."

+ N Y Times p24 D 24 '22 450w

"Dr. Sun has been called a theorist and a dreamer. The present volume, with its pretentious programmes, its painstaking consideration of details that are parts of speculative plans, and its slight emphasis upon political or economic feasibility, does nothing to counteract this impression."

— No Am 216:858 D '22 750w

SUTHERLAND, HALLIDAY GIBSON. Birth control; a statement of Christian doctrine against the Neo-Malthusians. 160p $1.75 Kenedy [6s Harding & M.]

176 Birth control 22-21800

"The author of this book attacks [birth control] not merely as a physician but from a Catholic point of view. He attempts to show that birth control has been accepted on the fallacy of Malthusian teaching. Thus he attempts to disprove the theories of Malthus and his followers. The question of over-population, poverty, disease and war, are the prime factors which the Malthusian theory was supposed to correct by a limitation of birth rates. Birth rates and death rates are statistically examined by Dr. Sutherland to prove that populations have nothing to do with their percentage as a cause. He does show, according to his evidence, what affects birthrates and deathrates, and the first is related in some way to the artificial means of birth control. He devotes a whole chapter to the evils of artificial birth control, from a purely medical point of view. He confirms the religious argument against it, which has become one of the teachings of the Catholic Church."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p5 S 23 '22 260w

"Studied with a skill and refinement of touch possible only to a man who is an expert in medical science and of devout and well-informed Catholic faith. Dr. Sutherland, in clear and forcible language, yet free from exaggeration, presents such an array of facts as must convince the reader. The book deserves the widest circulation as an antidote to vicious propaganda."

+ Cath World 116:263 N '22 250w

"In its 'scientific' refutation the book suffers by its dishonesty. Dr. Sutherland's method of refuting Malthus is to quote Malthus as having

SUTHERLAND, H. G.—Continued
said something he did not say and proving the alleged statement untrue." Brooks Shepard

— Lit R p107 O 14 '22 360w

Reviewed by L. S. Hollingworth

— New Repub 32:178 O 11 '22 550w

St Louis 20:235 O '22

"We will not weary the reader by pointing out the circular arguments, the substitutions of assertion for logic, the examples of 'thinking in a passion,' with which Dr. Sutherland's book abounds. The judicially-minded person who feels that, as there are proverbially two sides to every question, there must be arguments against birth control, will not find them set out in this book."

— Spec 128:562 My 6 '22 120w

SUTHERLAND, JOHN GEORGESON. At sea with Joseph Conrad; with a foreword by Joseph Conrad. 150p il $5 Houghton [16s G. Richards]

B or 92 Conrad, Joseph

22-25262

"Captain Sutherland chronicles the incidents of Conrad's sojourn in H. M. Brigantine Ready, a 'Q boat,' and the first sailing ship to be commissioned for active service during the war. His book is illustrated by several excellent photographs of Mr. Conrad."—New Statesman

Bookm 56:511 D '22 90w

"'At Sea with Joseph Conrad' is possibly a more accurate title than Mr. Sutherland realizes; he was indeed at sea with Conrad. . . This is an admirable book from the viewpoint of the connoisseur of typography and binding, but as a revelation of Joseph Conrad, it is frankly inadequate." L. B.

— Freeman 6:358 D 20 '22 330w

Ind 109:284 N 11 '22 60w

New Statesman 19:546 Ag 19 '22 100w

"It should be borne in mind that Captain Sutherland is not a writer. He has set down with an admirable degree of polish the facts of the trip, and as such they are important. Another writer, a man trained in the study of character for literary purposes, might have discovered more in Conrad and set it forth with a higher degree of art and illumination. But what there is here has its interest, and if the author has unduly padded his little volume out with a series of British naval anecdotes he is to be forgiven." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p2 O 1 '22 2500w

Outlook 133:321 F 14 '23 300w

"Captain Sutherland makes good use of his guest as a peg whereon to hang a very readable account of his Q-boat adventure, and throws in a handful of stories whose irrelevance is excused by their having depressed or diverted Mr. Conrad."

+ Spec 129:214 Ag 12 '22 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p440 J1 6 '22 1100w

SUTPHEN, WILLIAM GILBERT VAN TASSEL. In jeopardy. 300p $1.90 Harper

22-18297

"An ancestral home is the center of the mystery. The Hildebrand Hundred, an old crown grant in Maryland and seat of an aristocratic Colonial family, was fatal to its owners until at last it went to a Northern scion of the race who knew nothing of its history. Now, if you had stood in his shoes, and gradually learned that there was some sort of curse upon the place, especially during the month of June of each year, would you have lingered around trying to find out why and what it was, or would you have hastily wished it onto some unsuspecting purchaser? No doubt the latter; but in that case there would have been no story—which would be a pity. It was an awful chance Hugh Hildebrand took, but a great reward came to him through it."—N Y Tribune

"The story is not unpleasantly narrated in the first person, but all elements are subordinated to its theme, the riddle on which the reader is allowed to exercise his ingenuity until the exciting dénouement."

— + Lit R p112 O 14 '22 250w

"The mysterious lethal power is one of the most excellent conceptions that have appeared in mystery fiction for some time and Mr. Sutphen deserves all the credit."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 1 '22 400w

"Everything about this story is plausible and well motivated, except, perhaps, the agency of death, and that is so weird it is quite excusable." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p8 O 1 '22 150w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 14 '23 190w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

SWAIN, GEORGE FILLMORE. Young man and civil engineering. (Vocational ser.) 203p $2 Macmillan

620 Civil engineering. Engineers 22-10188

The professor of civil engineering in Harvard university surveys the engineering field for the Vocational series. Beginning with an historical introduction devoted to definitions and the historical developments of the profession, the author goes on to discuss the various branches of civil engineering, the qualifications and education of the civil engineer, the characteristics of the profession and the opportunities which it offers. The book concludes with some practical suggestions to young men who are thinking of following civil engineering as a career.

Booklist 19:42 N '22

"Prof. Swain's book is exceedingly practical."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 15 '22 190w

Engin News-Rec p1005 Je 15 '22 1¼col

"The author's attitude on the spirit with which a young man should approach an engineering career is, to our mind, one of the most valuable attributes of the book. The relation of civil engineering to other branches of engineering is carefully explained, and there is no doubt in our mind that any boy having to choose between one branch of engineering and another can do so after reading this book with a full appreciation of the nature of his choice."

J. M. Van Harlingen

+ Lit R p26 S 16 '22 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:496 N '22

Pratt p20 winter '23

SWASEY, ROBERT. Kendall's sister. 314p $1.90 Little

22-4240

"Its setting is wholly in Boston and at a South shore summer resort within easy reach of the city. Mr. Swasey has lived for some years in Boston, and has been professionally engaged in welfare work. The insight thus obtained of social conditions has enabled him to treat intelligently not merely the difference between social classes as exemplified in the Back Bay, and in the lodging house section of the South End, but between moral standards held by women so unlike as Florence Wainwright of Marlboro street and Gracie and Tommy, the girls of the street, for whom Florence plans an impossible regeneration."—Spring'd Republican

"There is some fairly good writing in the volume. Some day the author may be 'in every home,' but he won't be, we feel sufficiently certain to assure him, if he doesn't try something about which he knows something first."

I. W. L.

— + Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '22 500w

"The contrast of the society and money as depicted by Kendall and his sister and by the Delanes proves a very interesting subject at the hands of Mr. Swasey, though a reader would by far prefer to see and hear a little less of Jim Delane and his sister."

+ — N Y Times p19 Mr 26 '22 330w

"Without any serious complications, the plot is strong enough to hold the attention of the average reader, while the interest of him who knows his Boston is sustained not only by characteristic incidents and true character portraiture, but by good pictures of the city. 'Kendall's Sister' has a particular value from its plain speaking on the possibility of reforming the so-called 'unfortunate girl,' whom some regard as wholly the victim of circumstances. Mr. Swasey, as a sociological worker acquainted with all sorts and conditions of men in Boston, writes from observation of this somewhat difficult subject."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Mr 2 '22 500w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Three lovers. 334p $2 Doran

22-26983

Patricia Quinn was a lonely orphan when she was introduced into a London Bohemian circle. Her beauty and naïveté won her immediate admirers; she begins to experiment with life and comes close to the danger line with two of her lovers. The first, a happy-go-lucky, quite honest chap, holds the very modern view that love is a rapture, bound to run its course, wherefore one has an affair but does not marry. The other a Sybaritic rake, is trying to lure her into a sensual debauch. In both cases her inherent sanity and her unconscious awareness that the eyes of a thoroughly good and wholesome, altho apparently rather severe man, are upon her, save her from ruin. It is the severe man who finally wins her love and restores her self-respect.

"The Three Lovers has not, and is not intended to have, the concentrated brilliancy of Nocturne; but it has more perspective and as true an economy. The only superfluous words are those of the signature on the title-page." H. T. Follett

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf D '22 350w

Booklist 19:88 D '22

"Swinerton has never done a more difficult thing more magnificently than he has done this study of a girl. In the writing of this novel Swinerton's art was never surer or more beautiful. His style seems effortless, unstudied, almost casual, but what knowledge, training, and taste it holds." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Bookm 56:499 D '22 260w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 20 '23 360w

Cleveland p85 N '22

Reviewed by: Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p70 D '22 30w

"Mr. Swinerton has narrowly missed writing a conventional love story in his newest novel, happy ending and all. But whatever may be charged against him on that score is more than offset by his shrewd presentation of the character of Patricia Quin, the type of ego-centric young woman current in books, and, if one may credit some observers, in life." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p259 D 2 '22 550w

"Apart from some rather odd details of Kensington life, the book makes a likely enough story. It is hardly bad enough to sell much among the illiterate, and nothing like good enough to add to Mr. Swinerton's considerable reputation." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman 20:486 Ja 27 '23 360w

"It must be admitted at once that, interesting as it is, excellent as is its style, penetrating and sympathetic as is its studies of character, 'The Three Lovers' belongs with Mr. Swinerton's second best work. But, then, even Mr. Swinerton's second best is so far ahead of the highest achievement of all save a very few among contemporary writers!" L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p10 O 8 '22 350w

"A very pleasant tale of its kind. It is an excellent example of writing which is not what should be called good writing, and which is yet somehow delightfully easy to read in spite of rough phrases which might so easily have been smoothed; and very few of its characters sink into mere types." Frances Newman

+ N Y Tribune p9 O 8 '22 1150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:5 Ja '23

"Mr. Swinerton constructs a novel with the apparent ease of the laborious artist, and makes every sentence tell towards the whole. He depicts a world from which conventional restraints have been removed." Gerald Gould

Sat R 135:154 F 3 '23 560w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p28 Ja 11 '23 950w

SYKES, SIR PERCY MOLESWORTH. Persia. (Histories of the nations) 188p $2.50 Oxford [7s 6d Milford]

955 Persia—History

"Within the compass of less than two hundred pages, General Sykes has compressed a sketch of Persian history from the earliest times to the present day. Following a brief statement concerning the geography of Persia and its people, Sir Percy begins at the very beginning of things Persian, the ancient civilization which dominated the world's people even almost at the earliest days after the world's creation. The inscriptions upon the rocks that rear themselves up out of the plains; the strange cuneiform tablets unearthed, not so many years ago, out of the vast Mesopotamian sandheaps furnish the material for much that is now known, but which was for so many ages hidden and forgotten."—Boston Transcript

"The entire story is told with great rapidity and yet with an interest which at times is deep and abiding."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 2 '22 420w

"As a sketch, nothing could be better. The story is so full of interest, especially in the pre-Christian era, that readers will assuredly go on to the author's standard history."

+ Spec 129:153 JI 29 '22 70w

"For those who are able to buy, or to study, the larger work the abridgment may be superfluous, but the Oxford Press are no doubt right in holding that a small volume of this kind will meet the need of a large public who desire to get a clearer idea of the part Persia has played in the world, and for whom it will be a benefit to have the story told by some one so well qualified as Sir Percy Sykes. The abridgment will hardly give to anyone who has not already some knowledge of Persia an idea of what Persia has stood for, since it confines itself almost exclusively to the political history, and makes no attempt to treat of Persian literature and Persian art."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p468 JI 20 '22 1350w

SYMES, JOHN ELLIOTSON. Evolution of the New Testament. 353p $7 Dutton [18s Murray]

225 Bible—New Testament—History, Literary (Eng ed 22-6261)

In this attempt to trace the gradual evolution of the New Testament the author deals with the different books as far as possible in their chronological order, which differs greatly from the order in which they appear in the Bible. In his consideration of each book he brings out the points concerning which modern critics have reached some agreement or where no such agreement has been reached indicates the problems on which they disagree. Having dealt in this way with the Pauline writings, the Gospels and the Johannine books, he treats briefly a few of the rejected books and then indicates the steps by which the canon of the New Testament was built up. Each chapter has a supplementary note giving a summary of the views on disputed points of the chief modern critics, and suggestions for further reading. A general bibliography of English works published since 1890 is appended. Index.

"The book is clear and interesting and well written, the work of a teacher rather than of a scholar, and of a teacher who has evidently read widely and used accurately the books that preceded him. His authorities were chiefly books in English, and this fact, as well as his own theological inclination, makes his conclusions somewhat conservative on critical questions. The chief merit of the volume lies in its treatment of the characteristics and contents of the New Testament writings and in the effort made to explain the environment of the writers in the apostolic age. Paul's letters are explained with simplicity and effectiveness."

SYMES, J. E.—Continued
+ — Lit R p648 My 6 '22 450w

"Mr. Symes is fully equipped with a knowledge of the literature bearing on the New Testament; but he does not bespatter his pages with names or with a succession of opinions quoted from different authorities. The history and critical examination of each of the books and the controversies which may have arisen about them are presented to the reader in a clear, scholarly, and attractive way, and with balanced statements of the arguments."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p831 D 8 '21 520w

T

T., B. L., pseud. See Taylor, B. L.

TAGORE, SIR RABINDRANATH (RAVIN-DRANATHA THAKURA). Creative unity. 195p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan
891.4 22-4932

Essays covering a wide range of subjects but held together by their lofty idealism and their central, and constantly recurring theme,—the sense of unity which comes from harmony within and harmony with one's surroundings. Contents: The poet's religion; The creative ideal; The religion of the forest; An Indian folk religion; East and West; The modern age; The spirit of freedom; The nation; Woman and home; An eastern university.

Booklist 18:324 Je '22

"A series of essays clothed in language of rare beauty and breathing lofty idealism."

+ Bookm 55:426 Je '22 40w

"Essays revealing the age old spirit of Orientalism as little else has done." G. M. H.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 6 '22 650w
Cleveland p70 S '22

"A mystical, poetic, gentle voice arraigns our civilization in the terrible terms which the spirit of non-violence finds natural. But it all said so musically that many a reader is bound to pass it by as a poet's book of essays." Russell Gore

+ Detroit News p8 Je 4 '22 700w

"With the exception of some personal observations concerning his recent tour of the Western World, Tagore has really added nothing new to his system in the collection of essays denunciation of the West. And yet Tagore contends that the West must meet the East, that the one must assimilate the other's culture bound together. The one novel feature of this particular treatise is the unrelieved censure, and that the two must work in harmony. The 192 pages of this admirably written book attempt to show that each will act as a corrective to the other."

+ Lit R p728 Je 10 '22 330w

Pratt p27 autumn '22

"We find more value in Sir Rabindranath Tagore's new volume of collected prose essays than in all the volumes of his poetry. His prose clearly and beautifully renders for us the specific philosophies of the great races for whom he is the spokesman. A volume which we consider the most important yet published by its eminent author."

+ Sat R 133:343 Ap 1 '22 950w

"There are some telling comparisons of eastern and western thought and life, and a smooth-flowing beauty of expression."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 21 '22 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p335 My 25 '22 1300w

TALLEY, THOMAS WASHINGTON, comp. Negro folk rhymes, wise and otherwise. 347p il $2.25 (11s) Macmillan
811.08 Negro songs 22-1477

"A collection by one of the professors of Fisk university of all the rhymes common among the negroes of the South (exclusive of religious songs) a few with the music to which they are sung. Very interesting as the one emotional product of the race during slavery, while many of the rhymes can be traced back to their origin in Africa. There is a general index and also a 'comparative study' or classified index."—Booklist

Reviewed by R. E. Park

Am J Soc 28:486 Ja '23 190w

Booklist 18:183 Mr '22

"This study seems to me to be a most valuable contribution to the history of rhythm, as well as a book of what should prove popular verse." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:65 Mr '22 200w

"All in all, the compilation gives a real picture of the negro in his less guarded and sincerer moments." Clement Wood
+ — Lit R p716 Je 10 '22 1200w

"Mr. Talley has carefully gathered the best of these rhymes and has edited them with care in a delightful book. An interesting part of the book is the author's lengthy treatise on the origin and development of these rhymes, and the study of the musical scores to which these verses are sung." W. F. White

+ Nation 114:694 Je 7 '22 120w

"There are examples in these pages of obvious adaptations of foreign—that is to say, non-African—material. Either Professor Talley has been too much inclined to accept all that came to him without question, or he has been too sparing of footnotes. In either case a wrong impression is likely to be obtained by the reader unfamiliar with the peculiar conditions under which the black race has lived in the South. Still, when all is said, we have here a collection of much vital, some poetical, and very great historical interest." J. G. Fletcher

+ — Nation and Ath 31:763 S 9 '22 1650w

"So excellent is much of the work which the compiler has painstakingly set down that he may well be forgiven his lack of exactitude. Much of the material is of a broad comical order, but there are times when the reader will observe the primitive singer fumbling toward a poetical utterance."

+ — Outlook 132:120 S 20 '22 160w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:236 My '22

Pratt p27 winter '23

Reviewed by A. Williams-Ellis

Spec 128:790 Je 24 '22 500w

"A distinct contribution to folklore. Of exceptional value is Prof Talley's study in 'Negro Folk Rhymes,' which is highly technical and considers such connections as those with instrumental music, play, child life, biology, and necessarily African origins." B. Brawley

+ Springf'd Republican p13a Ap 9 '22 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Je 22 '22 800w

TANNENBAUM, FRANK. Wall shadows; a study in American prisons. 168p $2 Putnam
365 Prisons—United States. Crime and criminals 22-6523

Thomas Mott Osborn, in his introduction to this book says of it: "Mr. Tannenbaum sees all sides of the prison question; and his book gives not only desirable destructive criticism of the old methods but still more valuable constructive suggestions for the new. He sets the facts about prisons clearly before us. He is a keen and intelligent observer—one of the few who can visit such institutions and understand what he sees. He can discern matters which an ordinary visitor, or even an official investigator, misses entirely. And he dares to tell us the truth afterwards." Contents: Psychology of prison cruelty; Prison democracy; Some prison facts; Facing the prison problem.

Am Pol Sci R 16:731 N '22 70w

Booklist 18:313 Je '22

"Singularity without bitterness or that slushy sentiment which characterizes so much of the work of professional prison reformers."

+ Bookm 55:426 Je '22 110w

Dial 73:236 Ag '22 150w

Lit R p859 Ag 5 '22 720w

Reviewed by B. L. Burman

Nation 115:528 N 15 '22 720w

"Mr. Tannenbaum's book, while in no sense a comprehensive factual survey of American penology, is an invaluable interpretation of the spirit and methods of the actual operation of American prisons." H. E. Barnes

+ New Repub 31:115 Je 21 '22 880w

"Mr. Tannenbaum's book is distinguished from most of what has been written about American prisons, not so much by the concreteness of his evidence—though the book is based upon thorough personal investigations—as by the acuteness and vigor of the author's analysis of prison psychology—the psychology of the prisoner and still more that of the jailer. 'Wall Shadows' is a book that is 'human' without being in the least sentimental; it is well informed and analytical, yet savors not at all of the academic manner of the professional criminologist."

+ N Am 215:858 Je '22 580w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:267 Je '22

"As a factual compilation of penal legislation and administration it possesses next to no significance, but as a graphic description of the actual operation of American prisons today, with special emphasis upon the manner in which these methods react upon the mental attitudes of the convict and the prison officials, it is probably the most important work which has been brought out in this country in recent years." H. E. Barnes

+ Pol Sci Q 37:705 D '22 1100w

R of Rs 66:561 N '22 100w

St Louis 20:208 S '22

Spring'd Republican p10 My 13 '22 130w

Spring'd Republican p7a O 15 '22 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 18:154 Je '22

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA. He knew Lincoln, and other Billy Brown stories. 179p $1.50 Macmillan

Lincoln, Abraham—Fiction 22-3092

In this volume Miss Tarbell has collected her three already well-known stories of Lincoln—"Father Abraham," "He knew Lincoln" and "In Lincoln's chair" and to these she has added one not before published in book form, "Back in '58."

Booklist 18:377 Jl '22

"The trained reader cannot but wonder just how far Miss Tarbell is candid in her portrayal of Billy Brown as an actual character. He seems to us to be Miss Tarbell herself using idiom. He reflects too absolutely and invariably the enlightened judgments of history for a small town shop-keeper. No doubt there was a Billy Brown, but we think Miss Tarbell has furnished him up considerably. The effort is visible. As a piece of literary effort, so far as characterization goes the whole thing is unconvincing to the reader. As a study, expressed through a medium not in general use, the book deserves a more favorable estimate." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 20 '22 620w

"He knew Lincoln" is a masterpiece, without a break in tone, giving us a Lincoln more real because of homely humor than Drinkwater's and fully as big."

+ Lit R p535 Mr 25 '22 110w

Outlook 132:80 S 13 '22 50w

"The simplicity, straightforwardness, kindness and honesty of Mr Lincoln shine out in these sketches with a brilliance well deserved, in which the author also deserves to stand forth as an artist of no mean ability. If it be possible to enhance the popular regard for Mr Lincoln, Miss Tarbell has done it here. Certainly she has contributed worthily to the growing library of Lincolniana."

+ Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 9 '22 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p430 Je 29 '22 50w

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA. Peacemakers—blessed and otherwise. 227p $1.60 Macmillan
341.1 Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22. Disarmament 22-7444

The author describes her book in the subtitle as a collection of "observations, reflections and irritations" concerning the Conference on the limitation of armaments. It is not a history, but a book of impressions set down each week of the first two months of its sessions. These impressions reflect the atmosphere of the conference, the whole gamut of public feeling toward it, from the cynicism of pre-conference days giving way to the evident sincerity of Armistice day, thru the shock produced by Mr Hughes's bold program, the rising and falling of hopes and the gradually developing attitude toward the different delegations, French, British, Japanese and Chinese. The closing chapter is an attempt to measure the results of the conference.

Booklist 18:350 Jl '22

Boston Transcript p6 My 31 '22 480w

"It would have been a better book if Miss Tarbell had been better able to contain, or at least not to repeat unduly, her evidently heartfelt conviction that a nation which had declined to accept the League Covenant had really no business to indulge in peace negotiations. This querulous tendency takes something of actuality from the narrative and mars an otherwise sprightly and competent piece of reporting."

+ Ind 108:567 Je 24 '22 120w

Reviewed by C. Seymour

Lit R p147 O 23 '22 400w

"She puts forward her book not as a history or critical examination of the Conference, but only as a body of reflections called out by the occasion. As such they are sane and sensible and worth while, except that she wears too conspicuously on her sleeve the broken heart of the world." Nathaniel Peffer

+ New Repub 31:262 Jl 26 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:335 Jl '22

"Some of her comments are caustic, while all are pointed and illuminating. If her account is in any degree inadequate as history, it largely makes up for such lack in vividness and intimacy as a narrative."

+ R of Rs 65:670 Je '22 100w

St Louis 20:207 S '22

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. Gentle Julia. 375p il $1.75 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder & S.] 22-9877

The real heroine of this diverting book is not the gentle Aunt Julia whose lovely face and ways work such havoc in the hearts of men, but her niece Florence Atwater, going on fourteen, a feminine Fenrod. She has not Aunt Julia's tact and charm, but possesses striking gifts of imagination and leadership, especially in ways of mischief, in which she is often associated with her cousin Henry Atwater, a month older than she, and sometimes useful, tho far from congenial or sympathetic. In Aunt Julia's love affairs she is intensely interested and often complicates delicate situations. She even appropriates to herself one of her aunt's "overflow" of lovers and builds up a romance all her own. The climax is reached when Florence, by the clever and ruthless use of the weapon of blackmail, is enabled to take over the printing press of the North End Daily Oriole, owned by Cousin Henry and his friend Harry Rooter, and print in it some truly sensational news items.

TARKINGTON, BOOTH—Continued

Booklist 18:334 Je '22

"Scarcely a page of 'Gentle Julia' is unprovocative of irresistible laughter." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 29 '22 1000w

"Booth Tarkington has outdone himself again. 'Gentle Julia' is probably the funniest book published in years. Every page is charged with the sprightliest humor—humor that provokes contented chuckles, boisterous sudden outbursts, or that long-continued laughter that wets the eyes with tears and veritably cramps the midriff. Clean humor. Good-humored humor. Genuine humor that scorns all tricks and cheap clowning and falsifications, and merely delights us by telling the unexpected truth." E. C. Adams

+ Detroit News p14 My 2 '22 650w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:454 My 13 '22 380w

"On the whole, this is an excellent characteristic turn by a deservedly popular entertainer." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 108:527 Je 10 '22 540w

"Tho this book is in a far lighter vein than the author's 'Alice Adams,' it is no whit less true to life, less delightfully, even brilliantly, written, and the dialog is inimitable. No one we know can write such dialog as this of Tarkington's."

+ Lit D p42 Jl 15 '22 1250w

"'Gentle Julia' is Tarkington at his best, no one can surpass him in the delineation of American youth between the ages of ten and twenty. The technique of his treatment of their thoughts, dreams, and actions is perfected and delightfully pliant. He is not merely their humorist, but their inmost sympathizer."

+ Lit R p619 Ap 29 '22 620w

"Perhaps after all 'Alice Adams' was but a flurry of excellence. Can it be the essential Tarkington who now returns to his little girl and boy puppets, winds them up, and puts them through their amusing—but mechanical—antics once more? Considered merely as farce, however, the piece is funny. The author's asides have plenty of satiric point; the action is brisk and simple; the dialogue and dialect are racy; and the observation of the surface manners of children is almost creative in its acuteness." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 114:569 My 10 '22 350w

"'Gentle Julia' accords with the seasonal taste for soft, sweet and cool drink. It is refreshing and harmless."

+ New Repub 31:141 Je 28 '22 60w

"Simple is this story, but it manages to keep you amused and alert every moment, and it rouses you every now and again to loud laughter; sudden ungovernable bursts that will not down. The book is as careless and whimsical as a spring wind and as adorable. It takes you into a land you once knew well and lets you view it from an angle that makes it as funny as it once was serious." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 30 '22 600w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 131:264 Je 7 '22 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:323 Ji '22

"Tarkington is giving us a high quality of comedy through his fiction—not the merely comic, but essential comedy. It is none too frequently encountered in our creative fiction."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ji 21 '22 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Je 1 '22 140w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

TAUBMAN-GOLDIE, VALENTINE FRANCIS.

Case of Sir Edward Talbot. 274p $2 Dutton 22-14353

Shirley Cresswell, a pretty young English girl, meets Sir Edward Talbot at a party in London and his convincing arguments determine her to join the secret cult of which he is the exponent. Despite warnings from one who has actually been a victim, Shirley accepts Sir Edward's invitation and goes to his house in the country for her initiation. Strange and terrible things happen in the cellar, where a band of fanatics perform weird religious rites. Shirley manages to escape and finds her way back to town. Sir Edward, who seems to believe he has found an elixir of life, is murdered by the man who had warned Shirley. The supernatural element and the mystery of Sir Edward's curious personality add zest to the tale.

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '22 600w

"In point of structure the book is well done, although it is inconclusive in parts. May be safely recommended to anyone who desires to while away an hour or two without particularly thinking."

+ N Y Times p21 Jl 2 '22 370w

"Mr. Goldie offers a story pure and simple, not an erudite treatise on the mysteries of the Kabbala. All that he reveals of magical lore might be picked out of the Encyclopedia Britannica; but he has managed to invest Sir Edward Talbot with an aura of unholy power, and as the whole story hinges on that it moves without creaking or seeming absurd." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p4 Jl 9 '22 150w

"A daring, original and successful venture in the horrible." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 134:632 O 28 '22 90w

"It is obvious that in a story like this everything depends on the telling and the details, and it is here that Mr. Goldie's strength lies. All the characters are clearly drawn, or, rather, they draw themselves, by their words and deeds, which is the true way of art. Little touches reveal them."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p664 O 19 '22 640w

TAUSSIG, FRANK WILLIAM, comp. Selected readings in international trade and tariff problems. (Selections and documents in economics) 566p $3 Ginn

337 Commerce. Free trade and protection. Tariff 21-20942

This volume of selections, intended primarily for college and university students but also for the general reader, is designed to present for discussion the underlying questions of principle as they have been dealt with by writers of different schools. Part one takes up the theory of international trade, the list of writers beginning with Ricardo and running mainly thru the British economists of the nineteenth century. Part two, on the controversy between free trade and protection, begins with readings from Adam Smith and proceeds to writers of the German and French school (in translation). Part three is devoted to the protective controversy in the United States and draws its selections from writings on speeches of Alexander Hamilton, Albert Gallatin, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Grover Cleveland, William McKinley and Thomas B. Reed. All of the extracts are of considerable length and some of them are not elsewhere accessible.

TAYLOR, BERT LESTON (B. L. T., pseud.). So-called human race; arranged, with an intro. by Henry B. Fuller. 330p $2 Knopf

817 Humor 22-8853

The second volume in the collected edition of B. L. T.'s work. It includes both verse and prose, the best pieces from his famous column "A line-o'-type-or-two" in the Chicago Tribune which he founded and conducted up to the time of his death. "The so-called human race" follows in form and spirit Taylor's daily column, interspersed with some of his longer prose writings.

"He was more than a dally jester. If he amused the world, he pricked its swollen bubbles, and led the way to a sane regard for the verities, with a smile that was kindly, not superior or contemptuous," Philip Hale

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '22 470w

Booklist 18:325 Je '22

"All in all, the most delicious combination of foolery and sprightly philosophy one could desire to chase away that grouchy feeling."

+ Bookm 55:647 Ag '22 180w

"As may be expected by those who followed Mr. Taylor's column in its daily progress, the selection made in this book is of the most extreme miscellaneous character. It should be read a few pages at a time. Their contents are ephemeral, of course, but they are entertaining, and that is all that need be asked of him." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 12 '22 520w
Cleveland p71 S '22

"A more rigorous editing, and a winnowing out of some of the ephemeral topical lines and reprinted misprints would have rendered the collection more uniformly entertaining, although its value as a model for the newspaper-paragrapher would have been lessened by that process." L. B.

— Freeman 5:429 J1 12 '22 220w

Ind 108:418 Ap 29 '22 340w

Lit R p890 Ag 19 '22 390w

Nation 114:627 My 24 '22 20w

Reviewed by T. Q. Beesley

N Y Times p20 J1 16 '22 1800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:365 J1 '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:182 J1 '22

TAYLOR, KATHARINE HAVILAND. Modern trio in an old town. 268p il $1.50 Harcourt 22-16474

"This lovable young American girl, Jane Jones, is one of the large family of a certain physician in a little Pennsylvania town. And to her, one day, when she is just eighteen a fairy-godmother appears. Miss Sheila Parrish merely waves her wand. And presto—Jane finds herself, a few weeks later, on board the steamship Carpatia, on the way to Florence where she is to study that music for which she has uncommon talent with one of the most famous of Italian maestros. Jane finds more friends at the Pension Dante on the Piazza Indipendenza, Leslie Parrish, a niece of Jane's fairy godmother, and Viola Harris-Clarke, especially mindful of the hyphen! They also become pupils of that Signor Paggi, with whom Jane studies. Later, two others become of the family at Pension Dante: the artist, Sam Deane, as fine an example of the best type of young America, as in her way is Jane; and—the fairy godmother herself, with whose coming to Firenze, the engaging drama culminates."—Boston Transcript

"There is a two-fold pleasure in reading this little tale: that of the story itself with its rarely picturesque settings and that of meeting 'plain Jane Jones.'"

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '22 520w

"A pleasant and not very artfully disguised travelogue, held together by a predominant human interest, a continuous fluency of easy humor and gentle satire."

+ Lit R p76 S 30 '22 190w

"An ingeniously managed story. It is a wholesome little tale, notable for the girlish freshness of impression, of interest and of feeling that the author has skillfully put into her heroine's record of her stay in Italy. It would be an excellent gift for a girl who is about to make a journey thither."

+ N Y Times p27 S 3 '22 330w

"It is entertaining, and no ridicule for reading it need be leveled at the mature woman who for two or three hours makes it the means of getting back to the mood and outlook of the feminine years from 16 to 18."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a S 24 '22 60w

TEASDALE, SARA (MRS ERNEST B. FIL-SINGER), comp. Rainbow gold; poems old and new selected for girls and boys. 267p il $2 Macmillan

821.08 Children's poetry. English poetry—Collections 22-18833

The compiler's principle of selection is the simple one of choosing the poems 'that would have pleased the child I used to be and the boy who was my playmate. . . The poems that they loved best had highly accented rhythms, and took them into 'a land of clear colors and stories.' " Some of her poet friends have helped by giving the names of poems they liked best when they were children. The poems are mostly by the older poets, but living poets are represented, among them Walter De La Mare, Alfred Noyes, Padraic Colum, Robert Frost, Vachel Lindsay, John Masefield, Anna Hempstead Branch, and Hilda Conkling.

Booklist 19:93 D '22

"The decorative illustrations for the book are by Dugald Walker and the introduction by the compiler is a direct invitation to read poetry for its own sake." A. C. Moore

+ Bookm 56:203 O '22 50w

"There is nothing put into this book by Miss Teasdale but is not pure gold. It ought to be a very popular book, for it has about it those qualities which attend a book that grows into popularity. Mr. Walker's illustrations admirably catch the spirit of the individual poems, and his sketches whatever their character, head or tail pieces, full-paged or vignettes, add a vividness of symbol and description to the treasure of the verse." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 14 '22 1200w

"Very representative and very beautiful. We may all enjoy it, even if we are big and wise instead of small and too trusting. The illustrations by Dugald Walker, of fairies, clouds, birds, flowers, pipers and mice, are delightful and will win children from six years old onward even if a poem now and then (for which Miss Teasdale need not apologize for loving) fails to take hold." Stirling Bowen

+ Detroit News p12 N 12 '22 420w

"I should not ask a better fate than to be a child to whom these most adorable toys, these pictures and trumpets and magic rings, were given for the first time, unless it were that of the supremely lucky one who, having long and painfully toiled to discover some part of the treasures among a number of heavy tomes and discouraging complexities of print, suddenly found himself the possessor of them all, bound up with many more in nice blue covers and shining clearly upon a page worthy of such delights." Elinor Wylie

+ Lit R p195 N 11 '22 420w

Reviewed by M. H. B. Mussey

Nation 115:sup620 D 6 '22 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:38 Ja '23

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Black Caesar's clan. 281p $1.75 Doran

22-19051

The scene is Miami, Florida, and the surrounding keys; the essence mystery and secret service strategy, humanized by romance. A very sleek criminal and German ex-spy, alias Rodney Hade, has localized a treasure consisting of Louisiana purchase money, salvaged and hidden away by the black pirate, Caesar, whose descendants have guarded its uncertain whereabouts for over a century. Hade has pressed a rich Floridian into his services by first supplying him with a guilty conscience and then forcing him to assist in the removal of the treasure. His estate becomes the scene of dramatic events in which an exceedingly nimble witted secret service man performs marvellous feats of brain and jiu-jitsu while remaining sufficiently human to win the love of a fair lady.

Booklist 19:125 Ja '23

Cleveland p86 N '22

TERHUNE, A. P.—Continued

"It is strongly recommended for that tired feeling that follows an overdose of modern realism."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 N 19 '22 270w

"This swift-moving mystery story is a melodrama of excellent construction and unusual interest."

+ Lit R p73 S 30 '22 280w

"The plot, well constructed, is replete with thrills." C. R. S.

+ N Y Tribune p9 N 19 '22 170w

"The author says the book is rank melodrama; to entertain and thrill not to edify, and he cherishes the belief that no reader will go to sleep over it. In all this official verdict the reviewer agrees."

+ Springfield Republican p7a N 19 '22 150w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Black gold. 297p $1.75 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-6320

Gold ingots painted black found now and again near Barry Gale's ranch in the mountains of Northern California, and the coming to these lonely parts of the wealthy Jared Drace and his daughter, with whom Gale has been in love since his doctor days in Baltimore, appear rather puzzling facts. Gale seems to be dogged by an intangible being and some exciting adventures befall him. The mysterious happenings are brought to a happy climax by the tracking down of the villains and the betrothal of the hero to the girl of his heart.

Booklist 18:241 Ap '22

"From start to finish, the story is 'alive!'" F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 1 '22 580w

"Of course there are dogs in the story, but they are not asked to play any supercanine parts. Here Mr. Terhune, in spite of himself, is committing flagrant realism. They are very good dogs, indeed. And the story is a very good story of its family."

+ Lit R p473 Mr 4 '22 320w

"It is a book which all who like action, and plenty of it, will be sure to enjoy."

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 5 '22 200w

"The author frankly admits in advance his intention to be sensational. He succeeds in this, and one does not much care whether the outcome of the story is credible or not. In its telling it is vivid and lively and its agreeable characters are as charming as its villains are devilish. It fills an hour's time in the reading with entertainment as well as excitement."

+ Outlook 130:473 Mr 22 '22 50w

Pratt p36 Ap '22

Springf'd Republican p13a Mr 26 '22 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p326 My 18 '22 170w

Wis Lib Bul 18:134 My '22

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Further adventures of Lad. 341p $2 Doran 22-26765

Some more of the very human doings of that delightful collie who was the hero of an earlier tale, "Lad: a dog." (Book Review Digest, 1919) Lad is of course the center of many exciting and humorous incidents, a thoroughbred always and a much beloved member of the family.

Booklist 19:23 O '22

Boston Transcript p6 S 6 '22 550w

Cleveland p92 D '22

"The book is the work of an ardent dog-lover and no one can read these delightful sketches without feeling what a privilege it is to be admitted to the friendship and to obtain the devotion of an animal like Lad."

+ Lit D p55 S 23 '22 400w

Lit R p922 S 2 '22 170w

N Y Times p27 Jl 30 '22 400w

"'Lad' is pretty hard to believe in. To have such a dog around would be worse than being afflicted with a regiment of Boy Scouts all desperately intent upon their one good deed per diem. And Mr. Terhune's rather hysterical style, his incessant piling up of the agony and adjectives, is almost equally wearing. Still, if you are a dog lover, no doubt you'll like this book." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p7 S 3 '22 180w

"'Lad's' new adventures will prove as entertaining as his early experiences, and are written with the same understanding of dog nature which made the other stories universally read."

+ Springfield Republican p7a S 10 '22 100w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. His dog. 183p $1.50 Dutton

22-8429

Link Ferris, a discouraged, lonely mountaineer on a worthless farm in North Jersey, was going to the dogs himself when he found a wounded collie by the road-side, and took him home to nurse and pet. The story tells at some length how the coming of Chum, the only creature Link ever loved, marked a turning point in the latter's career and made a man of him; how Link's affection for Chum prevailed even over the avarice of the valuable dog's former owner; and how Chum's excellent qualities melted the heart of the jealous woman, who had placed before Link the alternative of making a choice between his two loves, but at last saved him from this necessity.

"Mr. Terhune's collie story has become a standard product. They are all very much alike. But because the author knows the breed scientifically as well as he loves it, these idealized canine characters of his and the wonderful things they do are kept fairly plausible and interesting."

+ Lit R p533 Mr 25 '22 220w

"Many people who do and who do not love dogs have admired Mr. Terhune's stories about them. But some readers feel in his books a certain lack. He writes with sympathy, but hardly with imagination: he tells us a great deal about what dogs think, but not enough about what they feel. But, on the other hand, he is never guilty of the 'pathetic fallacy,' and his dogs stand firm on their own feet as animals, with no mawkishness of human sentiment."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 23 '22 230w

"The human interest note of this well-written dog story will attract new readers, while there can be no doubt that it will appeal to those who have read Mr Terhune's other stories."

+ Springfield Republican p8 Ap 3 '22 100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 Jl '22

TETRAZZINI, MME LUISA. My life of song. 326p il $4 Dorrance [21s Cassell]

B or 92 Tetrizzini, Luisa. Singers 22-5066

The Florentine prima donna writes with gusto of her débuts, her triumphs, her financial successes, her huge audiences, her experiences with impresarios and with other singers. Great successes in South America and Mexico kept her in these countries for several years, and her experiences here afforded her material in plenty for her autobiography. The book is almost entirely personal and has little to say of singing as an art, but it concludes with a chapter of advice to young singers. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 18:328 Je '22

"Mme. Tetrizzini has succeeded in producing a most readable and chatty volume, into which she has thrown not a little of that gusto which was one of her chief qualities as a singer. Mme. Tetrizzini possesses that rarest of all gifts, an ingratiating personality, and this gift informs her 'Life of Song.'" Lucrezia Borl

+ Bookm 55:307 My '22 500w

"That Madame Tetrassini possesses a pleasing and vivacious personality carrying her triumphantly through the difficulties as well as the admiration and excitements of a prima donna's life is evident in this entertaining book. It is a delightful account of her life, and we are spared dull recitals of her roles and get chronological descriptions of all of her doings."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 13 '22 600w
Cleveland p63 Ag '22

"The book is easy reading, and in spite of a bad lapse from reticence in regard to one aspect of her religious life, gives one an agreeable impression of the singer as a woman. We cannot see, however, that it is of any importance either as pure autobiography or as a contribution to the musical history of our time."

— + Sat R 132:488 O 22 '21 500w

"Is neither for the lover of music nor for the lover of literature. No doubt the indefatigable reader, who indiscriminately devours all books that come his way will find some amusement in the financial transactions, the popular triumphs, and the trivial recollections of an operatic star, but to our mind three hundred pages is a large space to occupy with such matters."

— Spec 128:179 F 11 '22 430w

"There are gems of supreme simplicity in this quite entertaining specimen of its kind. Financial success, of course, is a commonplace in these records, and we are hardly impressed at learning that the wonderful voice has earned its owner over a million pounds. Nevertheless, padding and conventionality apart, the account which Mme. Tetrassini gives of her life is very interesting."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p591 S 15 '21 860w

Wis Lib Bul 18:184 JI '22

THALER, ALWIN. Shakespeare to Sheridan: a book about the theatre of yesterday and to-day. 339p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Milford]

792 Theater—England. English drama—History and criticism. London—Theaters. Actors and actresses 22-7465

"Treats of the life story of the theater in Shakespeare's time and during the two succeeding centuries as an organic whole, traces its influence upon the theater of our day, and shows its great debt to the Shakespeare tradition. The author is assistant professor of English in the University of California and has had access to much rare material here and in England. The reproductions of old programmes and cuts are delightful."—Booklist

Booklist 18:321 Je '22

Freeman 5:526 Ag 9 '22 350w

"A scholarly and instructive book which will be of great interest to all ordinary lovers of the theatre and also of use to students of stage history. It does not, of course, contain much that is absolutely new, but it presents in compact and orderly arrangement a quantity of contributory evidence industriously and intelligently collated from an infinite variety of records beyond the reach of most readers, which, in this concentrated form, gains in value and significance." J. R. Towne

+ Lit R p790 JI 8 '22 1050w

"Credit is due the author for his skilful handling of difficult material. The book presents a mass of unwieldy substance in coherent, interesting form. Any reader can follow the trend of events without going back to play texts for a basis; those who are well read in eighteenth-century literature will find the book a storehouse of miscellaneous items regarding stage plays not available elsewhere." D. H. Stevens

+ Mod Philol 20:220 N '22 750w

New Statesman 19:640 S 16 '22 420w

"If Professor Thaler has intended his book for specialists, he has here provided them with very little that they did not know already; and if he meant it for that more or less mythical entity, the 'general reader,' he has too often disregarded strict chronological sequence of narrative, with the result that the general reader will find himself suddenly whisked from the sixteenth century to the eighteenth and then from the eighteenth back to the seventeenth. Nevertheless, the general reader will be rewarded by anecdotes well selected, even if some of them are well worn." Brander Matthews

— + N Y Times p9 My 21 '22 700w

St Louis 21:11 Ja '23

Spec 129:313 S 2 '22 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p332 Je 15 '22 1250w

THAYER, LEE (MRS H. W. THAYER). Q. E. D. 278p $1.75 Doubleday

22-6603

Three of Louis Hood's friends call for him to go on a fishing trip and in his front garden they find the dead body of a man in the snow. Clues are intangible and the police are inclined to suspect Hood who seems to know a great deal about the dead man, but evades all questions. Peter Clancy, the clever young detective, believes that Hood is merely the victim of circumstances, and he finally tracks down the real murderer. The unravelling of the mystery involves Hood's cousin, Robert Kent, and a young actress and when the identity of the murdered man is established, Hood's reticence is fully explained.

Booklist 18:334 Je '22

"Mrs. Thayer's plot is reasonable and logical throughout, and while the experienced absorber of 'mystery fiction' may have little doubt who it was that killed Walter Brown, the crime itself is so baffling, is so expertly committed and in a manner so unusual that the reader's interest is challenged from the start and held until the end."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 22 '22 280w

Cleveland p31 D '22

"First-rate mystery story. The interest in the persons involved and in the rapidly moving events is well sustained; and the opening situation of the murdered man excites real curiosity."

+ Lit R p608 Ap 22 '22 80w

"A splendid mystery tale."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 9 '22 200w

Spring'd Republican p15a Ap 23 '22 150w

THAYER, MARY DIXON. Songs of youth. 149p $1.50 Knopf

511

22-22419

A first book of poetry, including some short pieces of rhythmic prose. Most of the poems are expressive of joy in nature and of wistful questioning about life and death and eternity.

"Miss Thayer is a poet of distinct ability; but her very method has crippled more than half of the songs in this book. She is an authentic poet, but a defter command of the file will double the appreciation in the fine things she has to say." Clement Wood

— + Bookm 56:348 N '22 270w

"Taken as a whole Miss Thayer's book is non-committal. It leaves one in ignorance of what degree of power will prove to be hers. The poems are always uncritically sincere, occasionally charming, and never very penetrating."

— + Lit R p116 O 11 '22 220w

"Too much of a piece. There is something monotonous about a hundred and forty pages of maiden blitheness; the one thin note of silver is almost lost in a certain breathiness of voice." D. M.

— + Nation 115:sup382 O 11 '22 30w

THAYER, WILLIAM ROSCOE. George Washington. 279p il $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 Washington, George 22-19955

The author's aim is to present a Washington freed from the errors and absurdities which some of the early biographers fastened upon him, which have passed into legend and are even now difficult to dislodge. In one volume of moderate size is sketched Washington's origin and youth, his marriage and life as a planter, his services in the Revolutionary war, his presidency and his retirement from public life. His letters are freely quoted and in the last chapter is given an account of the details of his death as recorded by his secretary, Tobias Lear.

THAYER, W: R.—Continued

"The volume under review takes its place among the better short biographies of Washington but it can hardly be awarded pre-eminence among them. The definitive one-volume life of Washington remains to be written." M. S. Brown

+ Am Hist R 28:366 Ja '23 550w
Am Pol Sci R 17:143 F '23 80w
Booklist 19:83 D '22

"It is an uninspired book, but thoroughly efficient and readable."

+ Bookm 56:639 Ja '23 80w

"Lest he make an unreal and imaginary figure, he seems to have withheld the application of those qualities of imagination and insight which must be in the equipment of all who would write great biography. We cannot see how Dr. Thayer's technical historical correctness, unassisted by this spiritual quality, so largely wanting, can in any degree rescue Washington from the garrulous irresponsibility of Parson Weems, who set up a figure that was believed in because it had personality. A little more showing of the human contacts, or the spiritual progress of Washington, is needed in a single-volume biography if it is to counteract the devastating influences of his earliest popular biography." S. L. C.

— Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '22 1250w

Reviewed by S: M. Crothers

Boston Transcript p1 D 23 '22 3000w

"Charmingly written, the book brings out no new facts, presents no new points of view of the life and character of Washington."

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily news p6 D 17 '22 360w

"Mr. Thayer elaborates the salient features of the 'character' with admirable selection, sufficient documentation, and a style always arresting, sometimes vivid." J. E. Jacoby

+ Nation 116:19 Ja 3 '23 1100w

"With vigor, common sense and breeziness Mr. Thayer proceeds to demolish the idol, and to put in its stead a figure of flesh and blood. With a considerable measure of success he has disclosed the 'human residue' which persists in Washington despite the mass of rubbish by which he has for so long been concealed from view. Mr. Thayer has produced a thoroughly readable and heartily appreciative estimate of Washington. The broader lines of his character, achievements and policies are skillfully drawn with practiced hand by the talented biographer." Archibald Henderson

+ N Y Times p7 O 22 '22 1650w

"He has painted an admirable portrait, which has the rare quality of vitality. But it does little to contradict the popular conception of Washington as an almost superhuman individual." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 19 '22 360w

"As a political narrative, Mr. Thayer's book lacks much of completeness. As an account of military operations and of diplomatic negotiations it is designedly thin. Even in the depiction of Washington's contemporaries, Mr. Thayer, masterly portrait artist as he is, does not notably excel others who have treated of the same period. All is carefully subordinated to the great figure of Washington; all brilliancies are studiously toned down to suit the sober grandeur of the central theme. But the portrait of Washington is a portrait indeed! Mr. Thayer has presented his readers with that rare thing, an ideal set forth without the sentimentality of hero worship or the exaggerations of rhetoric."

+ No Am 216:860 D '22 500w

R of Rs 67:109 Ja '23 110w
St Louis 20:275 N '22
Wis Lib Bul 18:274 D '22

THIRRING, J. HANS. Ideas of Einstein's theory; the theory of relativity in simple language; tr. by Rhoda A. B. Russell. 166p $2 McBride [5s Methuen]

530.1 Einstein theory (Eng ed 22-786)

The purpose of the book is to give, not an account of mere details appertaining to the theory, but rather a complete and coherent exposition of the whole, with the avoidance of all mathematical accessories. The logical connection of the whole theory is followed, beginning with the special principle of relativity in its most simple and primitive form, and leading up to the far-reaching speculations on the finiteness of the universe, along the path taken originally by Einstein. It is shown, moreover, how very revolutionary Einstein's theory is from the point of view of principle and theory and how very non-revolutionary it appears from a practical point of view. Diagrams and illustrative chart.

"There are passages here and there which the man in the street will find hard reading, but as a rule the technical terms common in Einstein doctrine have been softened down with homely substitutes."

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 12 '22 390w

"This popular account of the relativity theory is free from mathematical equations, and the author does not discourage his reader by the use of technical terms the meanings of which are clear only to those who have had some training in mathematical physics. The exposition of the subject is logical and accurate and the illustrations are particularly well chosen."

+ Lit R p908 Ag 26 '22 360w

"Dr. Thirring is severe and academic; but at the same time is lucid and free from exaggerations and misleading illustrations."

+ Nature 109:545 Ap 29 '22 20w

New Statesman 18:596 F 25 '22 270w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:11 Mr '22

Pratt p5 autumn '22

St Louis 20:211 S '22

THOMAS, AUGUSTUS. Print of my remembrance. 477p il $4 Scribner

L or 92 Theater—United States 22-19739

The playwright, in giving an account of his childhood environment in Civil war days and of the influences that shaped his early youth, makes it plain that his love for the theatre and its art came to him almost as a birthright. The reminiscences beside recalling the writing and productions of his own plays provide a considerable contribution to American stage history. The last chapter is devoted to the author's opinions and beliefs about books and men. Illustrations from photographs and from the author's sketch-book. Index.

Booklist 19:83 D '22

"A wise, modest, kindly and charming tale, crammed with life, and agile, at times, with a most sly, delicate, and twinkly humor. It is quite the richest book of theatre memoirs that I have ever read." Alexander Woolcott

+ Bookm 56:345 N '22 750w

Dial 74:104 Ja '23 30w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:274 N 11 '22 90w

"There is no one he hasn't met. He writes with a fluency, color and wit that are unequalled, fills his book with unusual photographs, and packs it with amusing yarns." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p36 D '22 50w

"It is the reflection of the man himself—a personality physically and mentally robust, shrewd, capable, observant, humorous, resolute, honest in thought and action—that shines in every page and lends an added charm to a fascinating narrative." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p146 O 28 '22 1600w

"About the whole book there is first of all a kind of sanity, a certain well-aimed and healthy view of life—though life seen from the big end of the horn, from an assured success. The temperament revealed is balanced, intelligent and lovable. The natural affections appear simply and gently and often tenderly expressed. The memory for past fashions and movements is lively. The theatrical sidelights are both informing and diverting; the record of by-gone days and once famous idols is rich with fading tradition. And then when I have got all this, there comes all of a sudden the realization that I have been reading the autobiography of a worker in art." Stark Young

+ New Repub 33:69 D 13 '22 1500w

"His reminiscences are crowded with detail, much of it too trivial for record, and with the names of the illustrious obscure, who must, for the most part, be outside the ken of even his American readers."

— New Statesman 20:250 N 25 '22 120w

"Brisk in the telling, rich in anecdote, abundant in recollections of actors and actresses, and unfaillingly fascinating by reason of the author's own pungent personality. It is a book to be recommended to all playgoers, to all students of the art of playmaking, to all aspiring playwrights." Brander Matthews

+ N Y Times p2 O 15 '22 2650w

"Mr. Thomas's book, despite his apparent ignorance of other active practitioners of his trade, is interesting reading. He has a neat sense of humor, though it takes him endless quantities of words to reach his point, and some of the incidents he records have become classical." H. J. Mankiewicz

+ — N Y World p6 O 22 '22 950w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:29 Ja '23

Pratt p35 winter '23

"His volume of reminiscences, while seemingly the casual by-product of a rich and varied personal experience, is a genuine contribution to the story of American life in our times. It could not be otherwise than highly entertaining, and it also contains more than one permanently valuable footnote to American contemporary history."

+ R of Rs 66:668 D '22 350w

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

"The book is crammed with commonplace descriptions of commonplace people with whom it is unlikely that the English reader will desire acquaintance. The style of the writer attains at best to a flat banality."

— Sat R 134:994 D 30 '22 180w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 3 '22 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p728 N 9 '22 80w

THOMPSON, LILLIAN BENNETT-, and HUBBARD, GEORGE. Without compromise. 298p $1.75 Century

22-4674

Dick Leighton, a rising young lawyer and politician, is confronted with the alternative of walking the straight and narrow path of abstract right, or the opportunist way of greatest immediate usefulness to himself and friends. It was Judge Randolph, Dick's benefactor and partner, who, on his deathbed, for the first time warningly points out the difference between the two ways. The second time he finds Jean Ainsworth, the girl he loves, daughter of his enemy and political opponent, at the crossroads pointing in the right direction. Should Dick, in his capacity of sheriff, protect a criminal from a lynching mob and thereby risk his own political future, or should he yield to the superior force of the mob? He follows Jean and as a result Jean's brother loses his life. The third time Dick himself sees the way clearly and takes it, altho it leads away from Jean—temporarily.

Booklist 18:369 Jl '22

"The book has a 'stirring' plot. It has unity of an ordinary sort. Yet this fairly good story, not too sentimental, interesting, remains a lay figure of a book, worked out by two. Imaginative ownership is not in it, nor is the breath of life."

— + Lit R p587 Ap 15 '22 100w

"The characters in the book are very human, having their moments of weakness and strength, their tears and their smiles, saying what real people say, and not acting on the 'novel stage.'"

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 2 '22 480w

THOMPSON, WALLACE. Mexican mind; a study of national psychology. 303p $2.50 Little

917.2 National characteristics, Mexican. Mexico—Social life and customs 22-5374

The issue before the world now with regard to Mexico, the author asserts, is whether the civilization of Mexico will eventually become a white or a yellow civilization. In his opinion it does not lie within the trend of things to allow it to slip back into half-breedism and Indianism. We are today as far from understanding the Indian psychology as in the days of Columbus and it behooves us to study it if we would achieve the civilizing of Latin America, educate the Mexican and save the white culture in the western hemisphere. Partial contents: The Mexican temperament; Signposts of custom; Mexican culture; The "emotional" Mexican; The Mexican crowd; The cauldron of politics. Index.

"His spirit is good. Though he seems to overestimate our own standards and achievements, he means to be just and he looks forward with hope." F. Starr

+ — Am J Soc 28:342 N '22 800w

"The author brings enthusiasm and conscientiousness to his task. The volume fails to be a first rate piece of work for two reasons: In the first place, Mr. Thompson ruins the clarity of his style and the intelligibility of his thought by dragging in, from time to time, useless psychological phrases, culled from text books, which impair the validity of his writing. For the second, we feel as if the author had lived with the Mexicans and with no one else, making his estimate of their qualities entirely too low."

— + Boston Transcript p5 Mr 29 '22 210w

"The author says he has lived long in Mexico. He has learned amazingly little about the place or its people. Beyond the primary fatal blunder, which is his point of view, he makes quaint mistakes in his estimate of such an important thing as the native arts. He ascribes to certain villages industries unknown to them; emphasizes the value of the comparatively worthless Puebla Talavera over the genuine native pottery of Guadalajara or the State of Oaxaca, and generally views the flourishing folk art as if it was in a decline." K. A. Porter

— Lit R p869 Ag 12 '22 1700w

N Y Times p11 Je 25 '22 140w

Outlook 131:216 My 31 '22 60w

"There are many good paragraphs and pages scattered through the book. But the book as a whole is bad. While the author has lived in Mexico many years, he has evidently never sympathized—suffered with—the Mexicans. As a foreigner and a newspaper man he has met the governing classes and the serving classes in the capital city and probably been entertained in some large haciendas and Indian villages. But he would hardly have written this book if he had really lived with the people."

— + Pol Sci Q 37:727 D '22 400w

"At the end of nearly three hundred pages of rather desultory writing, the author of this book confesses himself baffled. If he had said that at the beginning, perhaps those of his readers who know the Mexicans would have experienced less irritation, and those who do not less disappointment." G. B. Winton

— Survey 48:280 My 20 '22 490w

Wis Lib Bul 18:273 D '22

THOMSON, CHRISTOPHER BIRDWOOD. Old Europe's suicide; or, The building of a pyramid of errors. 192p $2 Seitzer

940.3 Europe—History. European war. Balkan states 22-9402

The author calls his book an account of certain events in Europe during the period 1912-1919. Instead of a continuous narrative it is a series of separate but interrelated sketches. The first seven of these sketches describe the Balkan situation before and during the Balkan wars and its portent of the Great war. Broadly following the course of the Great war, due consideration is given to the Eastern front, where the writer acted as British military representative. Later he was present, in the same capacity, at the Peace conference and he eloquently registers his disappointment in the outcome. He places his trust in the plain people and hopes for a mighty movement towards world betterment in which the manual worker will find a freer, wider life.

"The author writes largely on the basis of personal experience, his narrative has force and vividness, and he succeeds in bringing out his point clearly and convincingly."

+ Bookm 55:648 Ag '22 120w

"Brigadier General Thomson does, in this book, throw a little light on what was before obscure; we wish he might have felt that he could throw a searchlight."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 13 '22 350w

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 D 17 '22 1850w

"The Suicide of Europe" is, despite many incidents of interest, of slight texture and of ephemeral nature. A curious hodge podge, of which the title page gives no adequate description. The reader leaves the book not merely with the feelings of depression which the author doubtless intended to produce, but hopelessly confused as to the relation of cause and effect." C: Seymour

+ Lit R p147 O 28 '22 660w

"General Thomson has achieved a far more interesting book than are most war records, for beyond being a soldier and a keen observer he is a consummate artist. He has remembered that we are all children as far as liking to have things graphically told and pictured, and so has interpolated through his book verbal sketches of Balkan life of great beauty, which glow with color, atmosphere, and personality." B. U. Burke

+ Nation 112:748 My 25 '21 1150w

"He has produced a book whose charm is undeniable and whose vivid tales of Balkan life alone entitle it to a place in any library."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 7 '23 500w

"The book is beautifully written by one who loves the color and life of the Balkans."

+ Survey 48:250 My 13 '22 100w

"The actuality which these experiences give to history is helped by an effective literary gift; nor, it must be added, does it lose from the writer's very definite and outspoken views on the present European situation."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p623 S 23 '20 240w

THOMSON, EDITH. Afterglow. 273p $2 Dutton 22-1517

Gerry Chilton, twenty-five, marries Jacqueline Duncan, a beautiful widow of forty-one, with a mysterious past. She graces Gerry's house with charm and beauty, wins the admiration of many, and the disparity in years seems to be forgotten. Then comes life in diplomatic circles in Washington, and Jacqueline meets people who had known her in the old days in Europe. Her past is a sad tale with nothing in it discreditable to her. She had always wished to tell everything to Gerry and he had refused to hear. Consumed with love for her young husband she nearly kills herself in trying to keep up with his youth and enthusiasm. At last finding out that Gerry does regret a little that she is not younger, she makes one tremendous and highly successful effort to please him. It proves too much for her already over-taxed heart, and brings on a fatal attack.

"Although its theme is developed along somewhat well-worn lines, and its 'sentiment' degenerates at times into sentimentality, the story is pleasantly told. The backgrounds of the scenes, also, are sketched with cleverness and surety of touch."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '22 370w

Lit R p89C Ag 19 '22 250w

N Y Times p15 My 14 '22 80w

"The employment of a mystery element in the plot, and the introduction of the adventure-secret service motif, are the unmistakable sign of conceptive and constructive skill not yet perfected. The story can be read with interest; but the volume nevertheless must be set down as a work of promise, not achievement."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Jl 2 '22 150w

"The end of the book, which might easily have been melodramatic, is restrained and satisfying, and the long foreseen climax comes after all as a surprise."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p845 D 14 '22 280w

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR. Haunts of life. 272p il $2.50 Harcourt [9s Melrose]

591.92 Marine biology. Flight 22-8375

The book consists of six lectures delivered at the Royal Institution, 1920-1921. Their aim was to enable the audience to form vivid pictures of the great haunts of animal life and to get glimpses of the subtle ways in which living creatures solve the problems of particular places. The author finds it useful to distinguish six great haunts of life and devotes a lecture to each: the shore of the sea, the open sea, the depths of the sea, the fresh waters, the dry land, the air. The descriptions are of an interesting general nature, avoiding scientific detail. In the last lecture, "The mastery of the air," he tells how the problem of flight has been solved by animals. There are numerous text and full-page illustrations and an index.

Booklist 18:353 Jl '22

Bookm 55:535 Jl '22 140w

"So easy and flowing is the fiction, so complete is the appeal to the minds and imagination of the masses, apart from an attitude of scientific instruction, that the reader finds himself agreeably entertained."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '22 500w

Cleveland p75 S '22

"A book of authentic science and it is fascinatingly interesting, and it can hardly fail to stimulate its readers to want to know more of this kind of science told in this sort of way. Professor Thomson is one of the few, and perhaps first among those few, outstanding scientific men who are today writing serious science, especially biological science, clearly and interestingly, for the educated lay public." Vernon Kellogg

+ Lit R p671 My 20 '22 680w

"Mr. Thomson has written with his usual vividness and sweep, and with sound understanding of what intelligent laymen want to know."

+ Nation 114:700 Je 7 '22 130w

"A sound test of a book for children is whether it instructs and interests adults, and from that 'The Haunts of Life' emerges with colors flying. The expansion and simplification of a theme that can never be exhausted, afford his pictorial and expository powers their fullest scope, and the book makes that best of all fairy-tales—a true one. . . It would be difficult to do justice to the variety, significance, and scope of its contents."

+ Nation and Ath 30:696 F 4 '22 650w

Nature 109:710 Je 3 '22 100w

"An extraordinarily fascinating book. Professor Thomson combines the detailed knowledge of the expert with the rare gift of imagination, without which it is impossible either to grasp oneself, or to convey to others the wider implications in that knowledge."

+ New Statesman 18:482 Ja 28 '22 390w

N Y Times p18 J1 9 '22 1350w

"To those interested in biology and the development of the lower forms of animated existence this will prove a valuable volume."

+ N Y World p7e O 22 '22 80w

Outlook 131:216 My 31 '22 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:563 D '22

Pratt p16 autumn '22

R of Rs 65:672 Je '22 50w

St Louis 20:241 O '22

"Using simple and vivid language throughout, as befitted one lecturing to young people, he yet speaks with authority, and he avoids the superficial and the arid with equal success in his difficult task."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 My 12 '22 160w

"Humour, a devoted love of nature, and a gift of simple description, must make these lectures a delight to almost every kind of reader."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p15 Ja 5 '22 180w

Wis Lib Bul 18:181 J1 '22

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR, ed. Outline of science. 4v 1220p il ea $4.50 per set $18 Putnam [32s 6d Newnes]

500 Science (22-7935)

A series of four volumes, giving the essentials of present day science in "a plain story simply told," edited by J. A. Thomson, professor of natural history in the University of Aberdeen. The series is designed for the general reader, who lacks time and opportunity for special study but takes an intelligent interest in the progress of science. The editor maintains that technicalities, altho clearly necessary for terse and precise scientific description can be reduced to a minimum without sacrificing accuracy when the object in view is to explain the gist of the matter. For further study a list of books is given at the end of each chapter. There are numerous half-tones and color plates.

Reviewed by L. J. Henderson

Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '22 550w (Review of v 1)

"Because of the difficulty of theoretical science many of [its] omissions were unavoidable. Yet, as a result of them, this work is not a guide-book to science. It is, however, a useful popular treatment of many interesting topics, and in its best chapters a source of delight."

L. J. Henderson

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf F '23 300w (Review of v 2-4)

Booklist 18:353 J1 '22 (Review of v 1)

Booklist 19:10 O '22 (Review of v 2-3)

Booklist 19:72 D '22 (Review of v 4)

"The Outline of Science" occupies a new field and has no rivals. There is no other book in existence that presents all the sciences from the modern point of view in familiar language. The style varies with the writers but it is never pedantic or silly. It is a book for every library—public, private, or school—and more than that it is a book to be read right through or in casual chapters by scholar and layman alike."

E. E. Slosson

+ Bookm 56:91 S '22 650w

Bookm Transcript p4 Je 21 '22 1000w (Review of v 1)

Boston Transcript p4 J1 29 '22 550w (Review of v 2)

Boston Transcript p9 S 30 '22 520w (Review of v 3)

Boston Transcript p5 D 2 '22 520w (Review of v 4)

"The illustrations are admirable; it is doubtful if so excellent a series have ever appeared before in a work of this character. The book is admirably written. It is sane and conservative on almost all points, though we think it exaggerates—as many do—the period of man's existence on earth and it is quite as sure that Evolution was the process by which things have come to be as they are, as M. de Dorlodot."

+ Cath World 116:411 D '22 850w

"Astonishingly readable, convincingly accurate, abreast of the latest discoveries, and comprehensive enough to satisfy the graduate of an American university."

+ Dial 74:106 Ja '23 200w

"Very interestingly written; the style is lucid and straightforward though often somewhat jerky; in places the reader's head is being continually twisted about to contemplate some new marvel. The illustrations are always vivid and clear."

Alexander Weinstein

+ Freeman 6:69 S 27 '22 2350w (Review of v 1-2)

"It does not aim to outline science in a systematic way. It merely 'hits the high spots' and these not in any orderly way. But this is just what the casual reader wants. He will not find any other book in print that will give him so comprehensive a survey of modern scientific thought in so comprehensible a form."

E. Slosson

+ Ind 109:111 S 2 '22 680w

"Professor Thomson has given us an example of pure compilation of the highest type, infinitely more valuable than any corresponding attempt at originality could possibly be. As a whole, the work is as reliable as researches into extant scientific literature by the mind of a single man could well make it."

+ Int Bk R p20 Ja '23 2050w (Review of v 4)

"An understandable and fascinating book of science for the layman that will win far in appreciation and circulation."

+ Lit R p684 My 27 '22 1300w (Review of v 1)

"Professor Thomson's book is a fine thing to do and it is done in a fine way."

+ Lit R p839 J1 29 '22 640w (Review of v 2)

"Professor Thomson has made a delighting, an informing, an inspiring book about science, but he has not made an outline of science. He has written, and had written, a series of highly entertaining and useful chapters or sections, thirty-eight in all, about various scientific subjects ranging from, but not proceeding from, bacteria to man, from atoms to suns, from the dawn of mind to the Einstein theory. He has given his readers a series of most suggestive illustrations of scientific methods and scientific knowledge. But he has not given his readers an all-inclusive or logical outline of science. Of course, he did not intend to—for if he had intended to he could and would have done it. But he calls his book 'The Outline of Science.' Which is, I repeat, not quite fair."

Vernon Kellogg

+ Lit R p212 N 25 '22 1250w

"The work is qualified to run wherever our language goes and wherever interest in condensed yet clear accounts of the latest theories, discoveries, and advances is felt. Besides being English in origin, it is English in tone and temper—quiet, well poised, assured."

+ Nation 115:72 J1 19 '22 1350w

Reviewed by H. B. Fuller

Nation 115:720 D 27 '22 1050w (Review of v 3-4)

"There are several excellent reproductions of solar, lunar, planetary, and nebular photographs, and a bold coloured drawing of a gigantic solar prominence. The descriptive matter is attractively written."

+ Nature 108:463 D 8 '21 320w

"Almost everything in science the layman is eager to know more about is here, or is promised for the next two volumes. . . It is a text so attractive that you can read it on a suburban train—and pass your station. It is partly that you are lured on by the illustrations, of which each volume has some two hundred, remarkable both for their beauty and their fitness to the purposes of the work. But it is

THOMSON, J. A., ed.—Continued
chiefly because the writers succeed in maintaining the traditions of Huxley in clarity and directness of exposition, if not in distinction of style." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 31:231 JI 19 '22 950w (Review of v 1-2)

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:24 Ap '22 (Review of v 1)

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:39 JI '22 (Review of v 2)

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:51 O '22 (Review of v 3-4)

"Thomson is without doubt the most capable compiler of scientific literature in the world. In this work we have the cream of his genius focused on the elaboration of the details and the elucidation of the entire field of science, carefully planned and masterfully executed. These volumes when completed should stand with Wells's 'History' and be read by every human being whose mind and eyes are now and then lifted to the stars and the birds, no matter where his body may be. In popular character the work seems ideal; it is not simplified to one syllable, but couched in clear, cultured phrases, with sufficiently numerous, unusual words to encourage an occasional healthy use of the dictionary." W: Beebe

+ N Y Times p4 My 14 '22 2300w

N Y Times p14 S 3 '22 820 (Review of v 3)

N Y Times p14 Ja 14 '23 1000w (Review of v 4)

Reviewed by C. P. Pierson

N Y Tribune p7 S 10 '22 1050w (Review of v 2-3)

Reviewed by C. P. Pierson

N Y Tribune p28 D 3 '22 1000w (Review of v 4)

Outlook 131:428 JI 5 '22 120w (Review of v 1)

Outlook 132:32 S 6 '22 70w (Review of v 3)

"We know not where to find so comprehensive and readable an account of the principal scientific ideas of our time."

+ Outlook 132:626 D 6 '22 60w (Review of v 4)

Pratt p14 autumn '22 (Review of v 1-3)

R of Rs 66:112 JI '22 210w

St Louis 20:210 S '22 (Review of v 1)

St Louis 20:266 N '22 (Review of v 2-3)

Sat R 134:64 JI 8 '22 1150w (Review of v 1)

"It is well planned and carefully written, and it is remarkably well illustrated. The popularization of the achievements of scientific research could hardly be better done."

+ Spec 128:758 Je 17 '22 190w

Springf'd Republican p6 JI 24 '22 750w (Review of v 1)

Springf'd Republican p6 S 5 '22 320w (Review of v 2)

"The method of presentation is well calculated to maintain the interest of the most casual reader, and the matter is both informative and accurate."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 19 '23 300w (Review of v 3)

The Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 8 '22 90w

Wis Lib Bul 18:214 O '22 (Review of v 1)

"Delightfully readable, many facts well known to a teacher of science appearing in so novel a form that they are invested with new interest that impels the reading of familiar subjects which cruder handling would render wearisome. Inaccuracies are rare, although some have been noticed; they are, I imagine largely due to oversight." R: S. Lull

+ Yale R n s 12:190 O '22 850w (Review of v 1-2)

THORNE, GUY, pseud. See Gull, C. A. E: R.

THORNE, PAUL, and THORNE, MABEL. Secret toll. 268p $1.75 Dodd

22-12467

Very baffling are the messages on wrapping paper adorned with a skull, that demand huge sums of money to be left in an old oak tree at a certain time on a certain date. Death is the penalty for refusal to comply. Various rich men in Chicago have been the victims and some have paid the fatal toll. When Robert Forrester receives one of these threatening notes he determines to fathom the mystery. His life is in constant danger, and the uncanny happenings near the lonely tree, the part played by Mary Sturtevant and the unexpected implication of one of Forrester's closest friends are elements worked up to an exciting finish.

"The development of the story much more than lives up to our expectation of the work of the Thornes. It will take a very good guesser indeed to predict its ending."

Boston Transcript p4 JI 5 '22 370w

"There are two or three weak spots in the book. But the authors play fair with their readers, the tale moves with a good deal of swiftness, many of its complications are cleverly brought about, and it is entertaining. Of course, there is a love story, with a heroine whose extraordinary behavior provides no small part of the mystery."

+ N Y Times p21 JI 2 '22 270w

"The elements don't combine just right, and the result has a distinctly ersatz or synthetic flavor. Perhaps the authors omitted to set it on a red hot stove, stirring constantly." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p4 Je 25 '22 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a JI 30 '22 210w

Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

THURSTON, ERNEST TEMPLE. The miracle. 2 338p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

22-20348

This quiet tale of the country and fisher folk on the west coast of Ireland, turns on the belief in fairies still to be found among them. Many are the legends told by the peat fire, of people that have been "taken by Them" sometimes to be returned after a longer or shorter period of absence. Mary Kirwan, a farmer's daughter, is one of these. She is found and rescued by Joe Fennel, her devoted lover, and marries him, without love on her part. Neither Joe nor any of Mary's world, ever had a suspicion of the romantic passion that had swept Mary and the young curate, Father Costello off their feet. The country's superstition, which had also been Mary's, proves a haven of refuge in this instance. But later, when Joe's devotion and gentleness have conquered Mary, and happiness is in sight for them, that same superstition becomes her doom.

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne
Int Bk R p70 JI '22 40w

"An impressive piece of work, with many incidental passages of very fine quality. Mr. Thurston does reproduce the atmosphere of superstition, of active belief in the fairies and their direct intervention in human affairs, in most convincing, even startling fashion."

+ Lit R p205 N 11 '22 480w

"The author has his limitations, but they hardly affect the course of a story that is poignant from beginning to end and which ends in true modern Irish fashion—with a death. Added to the poignancy of theme is an admirable capturing of the West Irish dialect. There are moments when the reader will think of Synge."

+ N Y Times p13 O 22 '22 500w

"There is a slackness and superfluity about the book as a whole. It is just too long drawn out. Nevertheless, it is considerably above the level of the average popular novel in every way." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p26 D 10 '22 480w

"The author does not yield to the temptations of inherent melodrama, but endeavors to picture people and events as though one of the participants himself. There is a variety of excellently drawn characters which fit perfectly into the background of Irish farm and village life."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a F 4 '23 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p840 D 14 '22 550w

TICKNOR, CAROLINE. Glimpses of authors. 335p il $3.50 Houghton

928 Authors

22-19933

These glimpses of authors are obtained thru the recollections of a member of a well known publisher's family. The Ticknor home, like the home of James T. Fields, who belonged to the same publishing firm, welcomed many authors, both English and American, whose associations with their Boston publishers were most friendly and warm. In these memories, as in those of Mrs Fields, Dickens occupies an important place, with his Boston readings and a chapter giving an account of a visit by the author in the home of the novelist's son, Henry Fielding Dickens, in London. There follow recollections of Hawthorne, Longfellow and others of the Boston group, of Edward Bellamy, Lafcadio Hearn, Mark Twain, Trowbridge, Stedman, William Winter, Eugene Field, Henry James and of some English authors whom the writer visited.

Booklist 19:83 D '22

"Miss Ticknor's pages are rich in these bits of humanization, so excellent for the memory of figures who are getting a little stiff and formal and forgotten on their lofty pedestals." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Bookm 56:633 Ja '23 310w

"So much that is new enters into Miss Ticknor's reminiscences that the repetition of ancient stories may be forgiven. Her pages are illustrated with interesting portraits and facsimile manuscripts, and they come to an end with a lamentably incomplete index. Better no index at all than one only half done." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 7 '22 1350w

"Not much of it is new, but almost all of it is entertaining, and the reader renews an acquaintance not only with the members of the Fields's circle, but with Lew Wallace, Bellamy of 'Looking Backward,' Lafcadio Hearn, Uncle Remus, Howells, Stedman, Eugene Field, the Dickens, Thackeray and Austen descendants, and many others. It is all brought about pleasantly, with no betrayal of confidences and no shattering of images." R. L. Duffus

+ Freeman 6:430 Ja 10 '23 260w

"All in all, the volume is scarcely of interest to the general reader. What is new and worthwhile could be presented in 25 of the 325 pages. The rest is either commonplace material found in school books and biographies or 'patches' made up from the Ticknor wardrobe and of interest hardly outside of the family. If one must recommend the book to some one, it would be wise to call it to the attention of the people who delight in a well-printed and well-bound volume." C. A. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 28 '23 600w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman

Int Bk R p49 Ja '23 1250w

"It is a more or less haphazard collection of sketches, indifferently written, and frequently lacking in perspective, but its subject matter is inherently interesting, and it introduces ever and again piquant anecdote. Despite its mildly entertaining character, it is the accident of its publication at the same time as Mr. Howe's 'Memories of a Hostess' that makes the interest of Miss Ticknor's volume rather than its own merits. The book is too slight in substance and too entirely lacking in distinction of style to be of more than ephemeral appeal." Amy Loveman

+ Lit R p176 N 4 '22 1250w

"Sincerity and gentleness of a kind we like to think typical of older civilizations inform the book, and make us proud that Americans

once wore their honors with so much grace." Stanley Alden

+ Nation 115:583 N 29 '22 450w

"The volume, if not precisely important, is agreeable and familiar and contains a deal of charming and entertaining gossip." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 7 '23 1650w

Reviewed by Esther Eaton

N Y Tribune p11 N 19 '22 750w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

Outlook 132:725 D 20 '22 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:579 D '22

"Full of entertaining chat about the literary lions of the past generation, much of which now reaches the general public for the first time."

+ R of Rs 65:560 N '22 180w

St Louis 21:15 Ja '23

"The many portraits of authors, most of them unique as publications, and the facsimiles of autographs from the remarkable Ticknor collection, give the volume a particular value. In the present work she has achieved what might be thought impossible. The writer has so subordinated herself to her subjects that not the slightest trace of egotism appears, and yet each little portrait is clear and well defined. The reader feels that the whole collection is one of lifelike pictures painted by an observer of men and women who has a true understanding of values, combined with the power of making others see what she has seen."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 O 13 '22 700w

TIHOTI, pseud. See Calderon, G:

TILDEN, WILLIAM TATEM. It's all in the game; and other tennis tales. 245p il $1.75 Doubleday [5s Methuen]

Tennis—Fiction

22-5372

This, the author tells us, is the first attempt to serve tennis lore in the form of fiction. The stories are based on true incidents in many cases, even some of the names being authentic, and the author has drawn from experiences of his own and of his friends. They are written with an eye to the spirit of fair play, good sportsmanship and honesty. A bit of romance is allowed to creep in and four illustrations.

Booklist 18:334 Je '22

"A good tennis story is a rare jewel, and Mr. Tilden's are very good indeed. Never is he tiresome, always he has some novel angle of the game to exploit. The wonder is that so many good stories can be woven about the varying fortunes of clay court matches."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '22 150w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:353 Ap 8 '22 90w

"It would be devoured most enthusiastically. I am sure, by boys; but I am left to think that for Mr. Tilden the racquet is mightier than the pen."

— Sat R 133:614 Je 10 '22 150w

"No doubt it would be found exceedingly interesting by the spectators at Wimbledon, but the casual reader will find it not only monotonous but very difficult to follow, as the technical language is all in 'American.'"

+ Spec 129:87 JI 15 '22 50w

"The book hammers at its theme with forceful consistency, and Mr Tilden makes up with his sincerity for some of its mechanical defects."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 JI 18 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Je 1 '22 550w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 JI '22

TIMBIE, WILLIAM HENRY, and BUSH, VAN-NEVAR. Principles of electrical engineering. 513p il $4 Wiley [20s Chapman & H.]

621.3 Electric engineering

22-7092

"A first course in electrical engineering for students of college grade possessing a knowledge of calculus and physics.—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

TIMBIE, W. H. and BUSH, V.—Continued

"This book is intended for students of electrical engineering. Although much of the ground has been covered in a similar way before, yet there are several novel features. The magnetic circuit—the importance of the theory of which in electrical engineering can scarcely be over-estimated—is allotted the space it deserves. The electron theory, which is admirably adapted for giving easily intelligible explanations, is freely used."

Nature 110:506 O 14 '22 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:417 O '22

TINKER, CHAUNCEY BREWSTER. Nature's simple plan; a phase of radical thought in the mid-eighteenth century. (Louis Clark Vanuxen foundation lectures for 1922) 117p il $1.50 Princeton univ. press [6s 6d Milford]

901 Civilization. Savages. Corsica. Bards and bardism 22-13017

"An account of that period of the eighteenth century which saw the literary and the fashionable people of Great Britain speculating about the state of nature, sympathizing with Corsica in its rebellion, looking for primitive bards abroad and poetical peasants at home, and otherwise getting ready for Burns's songs and Wordsworth's doctrines."—Nation

"Professor Tinker's book, besides being a pungent footnote to human history, is allegory. Its hero, which was a generation, set out to find simplicity." Carl Van Doren

+ Lit R p702 Je 3 '22 1200w

"Shrewd, detached and amusing." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 114:688 Je 7 '22 80w

"The pity is that Professor Tinker should have made no serious inquiry into the true implications of his theme. He is really investigating two or three of the most fruitful paths which lie just off the main highroad of political philosophy. He has succeeded admirably in being amusing; but with a little effort he could have been immensely instructive as well."

+ — Nation and Ath 31:689 Ag 19 '22 180w

"Discursive in manner, it nevertheless helps to throw a new light on the efforts of the century to escape out of the formalism of civilisation into some sphere in which, it was hoped, the spirit of man could be more at its ease." Robert Lynd

+ New Statesman 19:516 Ag 12 '22 1800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:603 D '22

Pratt p27 autumn '22

Spec 129:307 S 2 '22 1000w

"Extremely interesting volume."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p488 JI 27 '22 1100w

"Historians of the Romantic Movement, of which the glorification of 'nature's simple plan' is a phase, have generally lighted their picture from the nineteenth-century side. Professor Tinker achieves some novel effects by lighting the same phenomena from the centre. He has a contemporary's sense of his period. He pours broad daylight over the yellowing marble of the substantial English classicism of George the Third's time." S. P. Sherman

+ Yale R n s 12:403 Ja '23 2000w

TINKER, CHAUNCEY BREWSTER. Young Boswell. 266p il $3.50 Atlantic monthly

B or 92 Boswell, James 22-7770

Much of this study of the "prince of biographers" is based upon new materials which by great good fortune came into the author's hands and which enabled him to fill some hitherto blank pages in the biography of Boswell. Professor Tinker writes of Boswell in a spirit of genuine liking and understanding without the tone of patronage so commonly used toward him. He shows him as a man whose spirit was always young, who found life anything but dull, whose ruling passion was to be known as the associate of authors and who was happy to shine by the reflected light of greatness. He follows Boswell in his first trip to Europe, in his meeting and correspondence with Rousseau and in his relations with John Wilkes and General Paoli. He traces his somewhat involved and inconstant love affairs, shows his zest for social life and his abiding habit of recording what people said. One chapter is devoted to his magnum opus. There are some interesting and hitherto unpublished illustrations and a full index.

"Professor Tinker has given us a valuable study of Boswell's method of work and of the magnum opus itself, and the story of his passion for London, and his justice and generosity as a landlord. From it all emerges the true Boswell, the man in his habit as he lived, and, beyond this, the figure of the genius, the great artist, far greater than he ever dreamed himself to be, with the reward of him who is willing to give himself heart and soul to the attainment of his object—an immortal work of art." B. S. Hurlbut

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf My '22 1000w

Booklist 18:328 Je '22

"So able a piece of portraiture that after you've used your superlatives in calling it the most this piece of biography and the most that piece of biography you'll be at a loss to know what to say." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:299 My '22 400w

"It is unfortunate that Professor Tinker's volume appears in such a bulky form. It is the sort of literary work that readily lends itself to the skill of the artistic book designer, but for some reason it is made formidable and unattractive by means of large pages, thick paper and unnecessarily big type. With its reproductions of old prints and its eighteenth century atmosphere, a small form would have made it much more readable and much more appealing to the book lover." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '22 850w

Cleveland p71 S '22

"To any one with even a casual, browsing interest in the greatest unread biography in English, this book will be interesting; to readers of Boswell it will be engrossing."

+ Dial 72:650 Je '22 180w

"There is not a dull page from cover to cover. Only occasionally, very rarely indeed, does his manifest determination to be entertaining betray him into the cheaper kind of sprightliness, which is the pit digged for the unwary scholar who runs from pedantry." P. W. More

+ — Ind 108:593 JI 8 '22 850w

Reviewed by J. M. Murry

Nation and Ath 32:18 O 7 '22 1700w

New Repub 30:378 My 24 '22 1300w

New Statesman 20:50 O 14 '22 1650w

"Not only Boswellians, Johnsonians and kindred enthusiasts, but all lovers of literature, will be pleasantly surprised on reading this book. . . But in our enthusiasm for the subject, let us not neglect to do justice to Professor Tinker for his penetrating interpretation, his many sagacious comments, and the delightful style in which he has presented the results of a fine and thorough scholarship."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 9 '22 2950w

"Professor Tinker has been completely successful in his task of portraying a unique and complex character. He shows us the inimitable Boswell, pompous, sentimental, garrulous and insatiably curious. A likable fellow, and yet one who was more than a little absurd. Surely the most curious figure in all the ranks of genius." Esther Murphy

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 3 '22 1600w

Reviewed by Arnold Mulder

Outlook 132:78 S 13 '22 2800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:365 JI '22

Pratt p32 autumn '22

St Louis 20:127 Je '22

"The style of Mr. Tinker is a little too boisterous for our taste, but his book, besides being a complete summary of the events of Boswell's career, as already revealed, contains new material of very considerable value"

+ — Sat R 134:414 S 16 '22 1000w

"His relations with the great do not show us the whole man so well as his relations with the ladies. Mr. Tinker cannot be thanked too often for his diverting chapters on this theme. Mr. Tinker has completely vindicated the artist in the biographer, and by putting side by side Boswell's rough notes and the parallel passage in the Life has given us perhaps the best account we possess of Boswell's peculiar method. Young Boswell is both capital fun and excellent criticism."

+ Spec 129:500 O 14 '22 1250w
Spring'd Republican p10 Ap 27 '22 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p596 S
21 '22 1700w
Wis Lib Bul 18:156 Je '22

TIPPER, HARRY. Human factors in industry; a study of group organization. 280p $2 Ronald
331 Industrial relations 22-10619

An examination of present industrial conditions and of some of the experiments that are being made to better them. The book analyzes the movements among workers and among employers, with their definite and opposing aims, which have affected not only the industrial organization but the political and social outlook as well. He finds industry not yet ready for the democracy so much discussed and shows that the democratic cooperation described demands a greater development and education of the individual before it can be effective.

"Mr. Tipper puts the whole story before us in such a lucid and straight-from-the-shoulder style that any student interested in industrial affairs, or the labor unionist, or the level-headed business man who fails to get this book, has a dangerous void in his or her industrial library." F. P. Pitzer

+ Administration 4:620 N '22 3800w
Am Pol Sci R 16:730 N '22 30w
Booklist 19:8 O '22
Iron Age p1645 Je 8 '22 1%col

"A useful and a very badly written book." C. N. Hitchcock

+ J Pol Econ 31:144 F '23 1150w

"This is an excellent handbook on industrial relations, written by one busy business man for others. While it by no means plumbs the depths, the volume will probably carry its readers further along than they would have gone without it and will no doubt stimulate further inquiry by harassed and not too hide-bound employers."

+ Lit R p127 N 18 '22 180w
Machinery p852 Je '22 1/2col
Manufacturers Rec p99 My 25 '22 1%col
St Louis 20:206 S '22
Spring'd Republican p7a O 29 '22 130w

"Excellent as his many suggestions are, they are not likely without more fundamental changes to create a real partnership of capital and labor."

+ Survey 49:119 O 15 '22 130w
Textile World p53 Je 17 '22 3%col

TITTONI, TOMMASO. Modern Italy; its intellectual, cultural and financial aspects. 236p $2 Macmillan

914.5 Italy—Intellectual life. Italy—Economic conditions 22-18947

The book consists of eight lectures delivered before the Institute of politics, Williamstown, Mass., in 1922, by the president of the Italian senate. He sets forth Italy's contribution to modern literature, art and science, to history, philosophy and law, to international law, and to economic doctrine. He shows the development of labor legislation in Italy, her financial situation, and the international aspects of the problem of raw materials, prices and export duties. The concluding lecture is a discussion of Italian emigration.

Booklist 19:147 F '23

"On the whole the book is disappointing. In the first place, its use of English, while fluent enough, is stilted and hard. . . . The book is also disappointing because one feels that the distinguished author might have told a great deal more about affairs in which he had an important part, if his discretion had not too frequently kept him within the bounds of the commonplace. Nevertheless, there is much of value and of interest in it, particularly when economic conditions are under discussion." Kenneth Mackenzie

+ Lit R p350 D 30 '22 1600w
New Statesman 20:492 Ja 27 '23 610w

"This book is valuable for its presentation of the views of an Italian regarding modern Italy. As a result of covering so many fields, and all in a volume of some 200 odd pages, he is necessarily cursory and sketchy in his method." S. A. C.

+ N Y Tribune p7 O 29 '22 400w
R of Rs 66:671 D '22 120w

"The reader who desires any real understanding of present day conditions in Italy cannot afford to pass it by. The book will take a high place in the growing list of interpretations of one great culture to another."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 N 8 '22 350w

"The senator is a lawyer and an economist, and it is in the light he throws on the present social and economical condition of Italy that the importance of his lectures lies."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p791 D 7 '22 1050w

TOBENKIN, ELIAS. The road. 316p $2 Harcourt

22-2346

Hilda Thorsen and Raymond Evert had been playmates and later became lovers, when the latter succumbed before his father's sternness and abandoned Hilda to fight her battle alone. Hilda goes to New York, becomes a mother and a factory worker and undergoes a long and courageous struggle from poverty to comfort, from ignorance to a well-informed mind and a deep insight into social and economic problems. She plays an important part in socialistic activities and when, ten years after her desertion by him, she meets Raymond Evert again—an unhappy man because never quite enough of a man—she is able to tell him that her own name is a sufficiently honorable one for her son and that he will require no other advantages than those that she can give him.

"Mr. Tobenkin is slowly thinking his way somewhere. When he gets there we shall be glad to follow him; until he does, we prefer to follow some other beaten path."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 1 '22 260w

"The materials are not unfamiliar, but they have been handled with restraint and a constant sense of their fitness. The industrial background of the story is sharply and significantly rendered; there are no documentary patches—consequently no dull ones. A well-turned piece of writing."

+ Dial 72:535 My '22 90w

"In addition to his simplicity, Mr. Tobenkin has the merit of keeping close to his subject matter, and it is only to be regretted that he could not have allured more of it into his book. . . . Quite incidentally Mr. Tobenkin has made a contribution to social psychology, the more valuable because it is uncolored by intentions." Alice Beal

+ Lit R p531 Mr 25 '22 440w

"Though the author's style is decidedly jerky at times, the book, considered as a whole, is well written."

+ N Y Times p17 F 12 '22 550w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:533 D '22

"The book is replete with stock phrases of socialistic arguments which in themselves are not impressive. The book does not impress one as favorably as the author's earlier stories."

+ Spring'd Republican p13a Mr 12 '22, 240w

TOKUTOMI, HICHIRO. Japanese-American relations; tr. by Sukeshide Yanagiwara. 207p $1.50 (7s) Macmillan

327.52 Japan—Foreign relations. United States—Foreign relations 22-7750

The present volume consists of the chapters relating to Japanese-American relations, from the author's book "The world and Japan after the Great war." This book was written entirely for Japanese readers and the translated chapters show the American-Japanese controversy from the Japanese angle. The author holds that the United States is an imperialistic nation, not as peace-loving as it would have other nations believe, nor entitled to the leadership of the world in justice and humanity. The book is in three parts: I, The relations between Japan and America; II, Facts about anti-Japanese sentiments in America; III, What will be the result of the complications between Japan and America. There is an extended appendix consisting of extracts from treaties, letters and legal documents and statistical tables.

Am Pol Sci R 16:522 Ag '22 100w

Booklist 19:147 F '23

"So calmly and lucidly does Mr. Tokutomi set forth the case for Japan against the United States that he cannot help but make converts. Obviously his view is as one-sided as our own, yet it is not that of a professional jingo. Cleverly the author marshalls his facts against the United States, and they are facts for the most part that we may not dispute."

Boston Transcript p7 My 17 '22 280w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Tokutomi has not chosen the most happy way of presenting the case, but it must be remembered that this work was written for a Japanese audience before the Washington conference was held. Perhaps for this very reason the volume ought to be read by every American who wishes to understand the currents of opinion and temper in modern Japan." C. A. Beard

Freeman 5:573 Ag 23 '22 560w

"It is with a sense of relief that one closes this disquieting little book, for it is as out of date as it is outspoken." Shigeyoshi Obata

— Lit R p792 Jl 8 '22 540w

"It is only because of his personality that his book is worth notice at all. Nevertheless, one welcomes the opportunity to see as here in this book what has formed Japan's political thinking, and simultaneously utters a prayer of gratitude that the influence of the Tokutomis has begun to wane in Japan" Nathaniel Peffer

— + New Repub 31:314 Ag 9 '22 700w

"Americans who are familiar with the various antagonisms between the two countries and the basis for them will find little that is new in Mr. Tokutomi's book; it is, however, valuable as a simple and succinct textbook for persons wishing to learn what the Japanese people, or at all events a large section of them, think of the United States. If to an American it appears that Mr. Tokutomi is in some respects biased, his bias is a natural one, and his language is always temperate." Julian Street

N Y Times p22 Jl 2 '22 700w

R of Rs 65:671 Je '22 140w

St Louis 20:236 O '22

Spec 129:310 S 2 '22 370w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Je 8 '22 60w

TOLSTOI, SOPHIE ANDREEVNA (COUNTESS LEO TOLSTOI). Autobiography of Countess Tolstoy; tr. by S. S. Kotliansky and Leonard Woolf. 159p $1.50 Huebsch [4s L. & V. Woolf]

B or 92 Tolstoi, Leo Nikolaievich, count

In her brief autobiography Countess Tolstoy gives her version of the unhappiness and confusion in the Tolstoy family during the later years of her married life. Marrying Count Leo Tolstoy in 1862, she devoted herself with sympathy to her husband's work, acted as his copyist, and lived with him in apparent happiness on his estate of Yasnaya Polyana till about 1875. Then Tolstoy began to withdraw from his family because he considered that his home was not run in accordance with his teaching and that his children were being taught wrong principles and religion. But tho separated by her husband's teaching they still loved each other and it was not till Tolstoy was over eighty years old and they had lived together for forty-eight years that his "going away" occurred. This separation was soon followed by his illness and death. The book shows from the wife's viewpoint the widening of the rift between them and the difficulties of her life.

Booklist 19:157 F '23

"The short 'Autobiography of Countess Tolstoy,' which was to have supplied the other face of the unhappy domestic story told by Tolstoy's autobiography and his letters, is by itself rather unrevealing; it seems but another memorandum in the controversy over their private situation."

+ — Bookm 56:768 F '23 250w

Reviewed by Nathan Asch

Nation 116:155 F 7 '23 420w

Reviewed by Austin Hay

N Y Times p3 N 12 '22 2750w

"Throughout this tragical little life story there runs an unreasonable cry of injustice. It is but the dramatic story of a woman married to a man who is driven by the gadfly of genius. After a brief spell his concerns inevitably were not hers, for the important, the goading thing in his life was the satisfaction of an inner necessity; something she could not know, nor he, its victim, know except that it was the only thing that mattered." Burton Rascoe

N Y Tribune p9 N 5 '22 1000w

R of Rs 66:670 D '22 80w

Spec 129:214 Ag 12 '22 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p456 Jl 13 '22 1350w

TOMLINSON, H. M. Waiting for daylight. 205p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Cassell] 22-11695

Notes from a diary these sketches—some short, some long—appear to be. All are tinged by the war and the impress of war memories upon the spirit of the author. There is a description of Ypres at night and in ruins, of a night raid on a London suburb, of the peace celebration, reflections on books and authors, and on the war change in all things.

Booklist 18:358 Jl '22

"The unaffected writing makes this collection of essays a delight."

+ — Bookm 55:648 Ag '22 100w

"Aside from his reminiscences of his war experiences, Mr. Tomlinson's reflections upon nature in this volume are few and far between. We might well wish for more of them, for this sketch of 'A Devon Estuary' is perfect in its visualization of the time and the place." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '22 1200w

"Back of these papers—some sombre and others touched with a wistful gaiety—one discerns the outlines of a keen intelligence, an intelligence that led to clear thinking at a time when clear thinking was anathema. The author of these papers is essentially a lover of life, a circumstance which his occasional bookish flavour but serves to emphasize. He has a deft and colourful touch—the hallmark of a craftsman in letters." L. B.

+ — Freeman 6:94 O 4 '22 190w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:560 Je 24 '22 140w

Reviewed by W. McFee

Lit R p867 Ag 12 '22 400w

New Statesman 19:542 Ag 19 '22 760w

"On the whole, it is not a cheerful book, but it is sincere, of good workmanship and well worth the attention of admirers of this sterling writer."

+ — N Y Times p2 N 26 '22 650w

"Intensely interesting, that is, if the essays it contains are read one by one: the only way that one can really appreciate his fine control, his extraordinary dexterity in writing English prose and miss that heaviness evident with a hasty perusal." W: B. Smart

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 3 '22 550w
St Louis 20:276 N '22

"He is humorous and ironical by turns. His irony is always effective but never bitter, but his smile is generally a little wry. We knew from 'London River' that Mr. Tomlinson was an artist. There is nothing in these subdued pages that can alter that opinion. They are written with the true simplicity of sincerity and the economy of the true artist, so that though their subjects and the manner of their treatment are so slight, you feel that they go very deep. It is not what is said so much as what is left unsaid that lends this book its true significance."

+ Sat R 133:470 My 6 '22 320w

"Provides just the sort of bedside reading that many fastidious people find it a little hard to procure. His essays are discursive, intelligent, and presented in a pure and distinguished style. Written as they were during the War the tone of some of them is a little gloomy."

+ Spec 128:631 My 20 '22 50w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 22 '22 230w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 20 '22 160w

TOMLINSON, PAUL GREENE. Princeton boy in the Revolution. 299p il $1.75 Dodd

22-18647

John Stirling, freshman in the College of New Jersey (Princeton University) in the year 1776, is much interested in the doings of the colonists. At the earliest opportunity he and several classmates enlist in Washington's ever-varying army and go thru a series of battles and hardships, which are enough to try the souls of older men than they. From their college days a suspected spy dogs their footsteps. All the boys have for proof is a queer nasal voice, and yet there are three men in their regiment with that queer voice! In the end the spy is caught and turns out to be the least suspected of the three.

"An artless narrative, without plot, much characterization, style or smile. Mr. Tomlinson, by thorough knowledge of the locality and events and a straightforward manner, makes us interested in the famous crossing of the Delaware and subsequent attack on Princeton as the pages in the school history never could."

+ — Lit R p207 N 11 '22 70w

TOOHEY, JOHN PETER. Fresh every hour. 256p $2 Boni & Liveright

22-4978

"The hero is Jimmy Martin who blithely fills the position of press agent for shows ranging from 'Jollyland' at Coney Island to classical performances of a tragedienne. Some of his conceptions are employed to forward the dramatic success of Lolita Murphy of Cedar Rapids, Ia. Jimmy is in love with her, but his biggest effort in her behalf is also his biggest failure. Jimmy fails to differentiate between the garish methods employed in advertising the Coney Island amusement park and the dignity surrounding the performances of a tragedy star, with the result that he is led into grave difficulties. But setbacks or difficulties refuse to dampen his ardor for the spectacular. Generally he turns his difficulties to good account. After all his adventures and escapades, Jimmy ends his lively career by marrying Lolita and taking over the management of a 'movie' house at Cedar Rapids."—Springf'd Republican

"An entertaining sketch of an up-to-the-minute American type not hitherto presented in fiction, from the pen of a writer whose sense of humor is keen and not exaggerated."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '22 150w

Dial 73:113 Jl '22 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:395 Ap 22 '22 90w

"Mr. Toohey's book provides a truly entertaining evening."

+ Lit R p587 Ap 15 '22 130w

"To the newspaper man who has dabbled or is dabbling with similar experiences it may be exceedingly interesting, but to the average reader it grows a bit tedious. The author's style is breezy and amusing, it is never stilted or lagging, and a keen sense of humor peeps out through every incident."

+ — N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 160w

"The story is in a very light vein, and is highly readable."

+ Springf'd Republican p15a My 7 '22 250w

TORMAY, CECILE. The old house; tr. from the Hungarian by E. Torday. 287p $2 McBride

22-20687

This Hungarian story is the history of a family and a house both having their origin in Christopher Ulwing. From a simple carpenter he rose to be master-builder and acquired wealth and reputation. But already the son showed signs of weakness, for the masterful and domineering qualities of the father had acted repressively on his development. The grandson became a degenerate. The constructive work of the grandfather was cast into the fitful winds of the stock exchange. Only one member of the family, his granddaughter Anna, inherited a measure of Ulwing's fine strength. She needed it all to face the ruin of her house and, as the wife of a descendant of the old Hungarian landed gentry, to endure the gradual estrangement from her husband caused by the latter's misunderstood yearning for his ancestral home. When at last it once more opens its portals to him, he is carried there in his coffin, and Anna, having witnessed the actual destruction of the old house of Ulwing, enters life as a widow—with her sons.

Booklist 19:125 Ja '23

"There is a great deal of beauty in this novel. In spite of the strange setting and circumstance we feel its reality as a vivid, vital thing." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 2 '22 750w

"From a literary standpoint, this book is unquestionably a piece of fine art, written with an unusually high degree of skill and insight—though in parts heavy with excess of detail. Yet we find in it a misuse of the rare gifts of the writer, since its story of decay and death is anything but one to uplift, inspire, and leave us better for the reading."

+ — Cath World 116:421 D '22 80w

Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 20w

N Y Times p27 Ag 20 '22 550w

"Miss Tormay has presented each phase of this family history with remarkable psychological insight. The interplay of character she has managed with a dexterous hand, giving to each conflict of personalities a dramatic significance. The atmosphere of fatality involving helpless human beings is preserved throughout the very human, sympathetic and sorrowful history. It is, in fine, a distinguished and beautiful work of fiction, meriting that burst of critical and popular enthusiasm which greeted its appearance in Hungary some years ago." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 27 '22 700w

TOURTOULON, PIERRE DE. Philosophy in the development of law. 653p $5 Macmillan

340.1 Law—Philosophy 22-7024

The book comes under the Modern legal philosophy series published under the auspices of the Association of American law schools. It is translated from the French by Martha McC. Read and furnished with a long editorial preface by Morris R. Cohen and an introduction by Andrew A. Bruce. In reviewing the attitude of history in relation to law and that of law in relation to history, the author distinguishes three schools: the teleological, which disavows any connection between moral and physical sciences; the determinist, which denies free will as a factor in the progress of human institutions; and the causalist school to which the author belongs and which allows for physical, biological, economic, psychological and juristic influences in the evolution of the law. By far the greater part of the book is accordingly devoted to "Causality in the history of law." A bibliography is appended to each chapter.

TOURTOULON, P. de—Continued

"It is valuable as an exhibit of a cautious thinker from the field of law, attempting to analyze and to make explicit the background of his legal notions." W. B. Bodenhafer

+ Am J Soc 28:348 N '22 800w

Reviewed by F. R. Mechem

Am Pol Sci R 17:114 F '23 780w

"The leading thinkers on legal philosophy are here estimated and classified. Here are found copious extracts from their writings. Here, above all, is the work of a philosopher himself, who scrutinizes the doctrine of these same thinkers and comments upon it with the enlightened breadth of a mind alike deep and copious."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '22 250w

"This is an interesting and important book. It is well worth the attention of all those who are interested in clear thinking about law and its development." F. R. Mechem

+ Int J Ethics 33:212 Ja '23 850w

"The closest sort of legal and philosophical reasoning, each page of which displays an extraordinary versatility in the treatment of his sources scattered throughout the whole literature of legal history."

Springf'd Republican p6 S 18 '22 110w

TOUT, THOMAS FREDERICK. France and England; their relations in the middle ages and now. (Publications of the University of Manchester. Historical ser.) 168p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

942 England—Relations (general) with France. France—Relations (general) with England 22-8988

"Professor Tout, our greatest mediaevalist, has published in an enlarged form four lectures which he gave before the University of Rennes last year. His main purpose is to lay stress on the common civilization and close affinities of the two nations through the ages, despite the antagonism between them that repeatedly found expression. The first lecture is an exposition of the cosmopolitanism of Western Europe in the Middle Ages, with its common faith, its common language for all educated people—first Latin and then French—and its common ideals. Next, the author shows how up to the thirteenth century England and France were so closely united by many ties of race, language, religion and administration as to be unconscious of the division that the consciousness of nationality gradually brought. In his concluding lecture, Professor Tout discusses the Hundred Years' War, as a struggle between kinsfolk which left a tradition of national enmity and yet did not keep the two peoples apart or put an end to all international courtesies."—Spec

"Anyone who has a cursory acquaintance with medieval history will find [the lectures] pleasant reading." G. C. Sellery

+ Am Hist R 28:149 O '22 480w

"Would be a splendid book if the 'and Now' had been left out of the title. The relations between the two countries in the Middle Ages are discussed in a scholarly and thoroughly interesting manner, and the author has brought out many points of contact that have not always been appreciated. But except for a few allusions here and there the author does not get as far as the Renaissance, much less to the present day."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:525 Ag '22 90w

"This small volume is full of arresting phrases and illuminating ideas, and cannot fail to be helpful to the student of medieval history." Z. N. T.

+ Eng Hist R 38:139 Ja '23 400w

"As an authority on the medieval administrative institutions of both countries, Mr. Tout can and does set forth some valuable and serious historical information. One questions his judgment when he appeals to the mass prejudices of today." E. F. Humphrey

+ Nation 115:74 JI 19 '22 750w

"Scholarly and suggestive little volume"

+ Nation and Ath 31:569 JI 22 '22 1350w

"Professor Tout is the greatest living master of the erudite in modern history. Now, however, [he] appears in another rôle, as a popular lecturer on the relations of France and England in the Middle Ages. As might be expected, the lectures are not as vivacious, as pointed, as nimbly witty, or as ripely humorous as such lectures have been known to be."

+ New Statesman 19:72 Ap 22 '22 600w

"Devoted to emphasizing the common elements in the culture and political history of the two peoples. Prof. Tout not only achieves this aim with the ease and completeness which we should expect from our leading mediaeval historian, but he takes the opportunity of connecting many common misapprehensions, and of clarifying popular notions of such things as nationality in the Middle Ages."

+ Sat R 133:238 Mr 4 '22 150w

"The lectures form one of the best introductions to the study of the Middle Ages that we have ever read."

+ Spec 128:309 Mr 11 '22 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 2 '22 40w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p148 Mr 9 '22 1050w

TOWNE, CHARLES HANSON. The chain. 364p $1.90 Putnam

22-17773

A story of the youth of twenty years ago, not quite so arrogant and self-assertive as the youth of today, but just as eager and aspiring. John Darrow, a young poet from the country comes to New York to make a literary career for himself. He is sensitive and idealistic, yet he has a curious belief in himself and his talents. Bound, as he realizes himself to be, in the chain of circumstance, he is not afraid of his destiny. Before long he has become the editor of a promising new magazine and an accepted member of the group of young literati. The story has a distinctive atmosphere, but little plot. From the first page John Darrow is a friend whose career and personality and love affairs it is pleasant to follow.

Booklist 19:125 Ja '23

"This is one of the few modern novels that a discriminating person may read twice, with pleasure. Mr. Towne's humor is here suggested, never emphasized, all the more pleasant for that; and the wit has the restraint of an artist who knows when he has made his point." M. F. Egan

+ Bookm 56:352 N '22 520w

"There are splendid bits of character-drawing in the story, the spirit of youth is in it, a hint of poetry and vision, a sense of life." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p70 D '22 40w

"It is a fairly interesting narrative, spoiled by some very poor writing. Is utterly unrelieved by any traces of a style. There is a deal of stereotype; the obvious is belabored, and melodrama and sentimentality cheapen the work. Yet a picture is drawn of editorial life in New York in the early years of this century that contains much verisimilitude."

+ Lit R p133 O 21 '22 400w

New Repub 33:50 D 6 '22 160w

"It is a book to linger over. It is not flawless, of course. But it is one from which so much enjoyment is to be derived that to pick out its faults seems at once ungracious and ungrateful. An entertaining and an interesting novel." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p24 S 10 '22 1250w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 330w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 N 30 '22 40w

TOWNLEY, SUSAN MARY (KEPPEL) lady. Indiscretions of Lady Susan. 314p il $5 Appleton [21s T. Butterworth]

B or 92

22-23379

"Daughter of the seventh Earl of Albermarle and wife of a diplomatist whose official duties took him from China to the Argentine, birth and position have combined to give Lady Susan a front seat at dramas great and small played the world over. She can look back on twenty-five years in the diplomatic service, and the place-names taken from her chapter headings will indicate the extent of the vista—Lisbon, Berlin, Rome, Peking, Constantinople, the Holy Land, America, the Argentine, Bukarest, Persia, Belgium and Holland, the last two associated with the climax of the war. The Chinese Empress-Dowager (the 'Old Buddha') figures in many pages, and the ex-Emperor Wilhelm in more."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Ruth Hale

Bookm 56:760 F '23 450w

Boston Transcript p6 D 9 '22 1450w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p36 D '22 70w

"Lady Susan's book as a whole is most interesting. The book is one which cannot fail to excite the reader's interest." S. T. Beach.

+ Lit R p367 Ja 6 '23 950w

"This book is not indiscreet, but it is amusing. By far the most interesting portion of her book describes her time in China, when she got into closer personal relations with the Dowager Empress than the other European ladies, and her descriptions of the Chinese Court are well worth reading."

+ New Statesman 20:280 D 2 '22 250w

N Y Times p5 D 31 '22 1800w

"Without being epoch-making, it is at the least a spontaneous revelation of a sprightly personality." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p20 D 3 '22 1200w

"It is the opportunity that gives it its interest, not the writing. Lady Susan visits interesting places and people, but she sees them in a commonplace way, through the eyes of a tourist. There is little in the book that the ordinary readers of the newspapers have not read before."

— + Sat R 134:925 D 16 '22 330w

"The book throughout is full of interesting and amusing information about the intimate life of the places described. It is another question whether the information is always accurate. It is, at any rate, entertaining."

+ Spec 129:sup796 D 2 '22 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 24 '22 700w

"The things that Lady Susan has seen and the people whom she has to do with would suffice to make her book good reading, if she were a mere recorder; but she is much more than that; she gives the impression of being part of all she met—of having entered heartily into whatever game was being played, social, diplomatic, or military."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p716 N 9 '22 1000w

TOWNSEND, REGINALD T., ed. Country Life book of building and decorating. 100p il $3 Doubleday

728 Architecture, Domestic. House decoration 22-9632

"The volume is compiled by the editor of Country Life, with its motif the belief that every dwelling whether cottage or a mansion should express the character, individuality and distinction of the life within. There are many suggestions and designs for new and unusual types of houses and chapters on decorating and furnishing them. Then too there are suggestions for solving individual problems. For the father of a large family there is the chapter on 'The House that Will Keep Children' and for the woman 'The House That Will Keep Servants' and 'The House That Needs No House Cleaning.' There are also suggestions as to furnishings."—Greensboro Daily News

Booklist 18:355 JI '22

"We surely have Mr. Townsend to thank for placing before us this collection of articles on building and decorating."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 12 '22 120w

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p4 Mr 12 '22 120w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 1 '22 50w

TOZZI, FEDERIGO. Three crosses; tr. by M. R. Capellero. 174p $2 Moffat [6s Secker]

"This little masterpiece of realistic fiction is the first work of Federigo Tozzi to be translated into English. It is simply the story of a vulgar crime, a forgery committed by the three brothers Gambi, booksellers and antiquity dealers at Siena. The disintegrating effect of their crime, whose discovery is inevitable, supplies the material of the narrative. Finally the fraud is discovered and one of the brothers, assuming all responsibility, commits suicide. This is his way of making a double gesture which will mark him off from the commonplace. The two other brothers do not survive him long. Nicholas dies suddenly of apoplexy and Henry sinks to the lowest depths of poverty, until finally he dies in an asylum for old men."—Lit R

"A notable novel of contemporary Italian literature. The narrative progresses naturally, and there is nothing in its handling which suggests the novelist behind the scene, manipulating the strings. Subsidiary characters are sketched with their proper values, and remain lifelike despite the occasional naïve, over-literal touches in the translation." L. B.

+ Freeman 4:502 F 1 '22 150w

"It is a story in which incident is reduced to the barest minimum, yet it holds the attention and grips the imagination with the power of destiny."

+ Lit R p284 D 17 '21 200w

Pratt p36 Ap '22

Spec 127:751 D 3 '21 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p737 N 10 '21 100w

TRAPROCK, WALTER E., pseud. See Chapell. G: S.

TREMAINE, HERBERT. Tribal god. 232p $1.75 Doubleday [8s 6d Constable]

(Eng ed 21-10177)

"There are two labels for the entire human race, according to Mr. Tremaine, people who love money and people who love. Bridget Ray represents the people who love. Paul Casshers, youngest of a large and unpleasant group of Casshers and Casshers-in-law, represents the people who love money. At first, before the tribal god becomes so frightfully hungry, Paul thinks he loves Bridget. Bridget thinks he does, too, until after she visits her prospective family and finds them snarling at each other and fawning upon Lady Cassher, the matriarchal old woman, who, widowed and intrepid, guards the tribal treasure. This ill-bred family, with its pitiful pretensions to breeding, its bought title, its arrogance as a cover for shame at its Jewish blood, is excellently drawn. So also is Bridget, with her sensitive, immature mind and affectionate nature feeding on approbation and affection."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p9 F 25 '22 500w

Lit R p436 F 18 '22 400w

"He writes lucidly and easily, although with an occasional perversity of style. Especially those readers who are interested in the interplay of character and social forces will find Mr. Tremaine's work of interest."

TREMAINE, HERBERT—Continued

+ — N Y Times p14 F 12 '22 500w

"An interesting study of a too united family. Some of the 'set piece' descriptions are admirable."

+ Spec 126:403 Mr 26 '21 20w

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 2 '22 170w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 3 '21 200w

TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY. British history in the nineteenth century (1782-1901). 445p il $3.75 (12s 6d) Longmans

942.07 Great Britain—History—19th century 22-9407

The period covered is from the beginning of the French revolution to the death of Queen Victoria. Tho the book is hardly a history of the British Empire, the course of events in Canada, Australasia, Ireland, India and British Africa have been indicated in broken outlines. In particular Mr Trevelyan has shown the relation of the various phases of English affairs to the separate stories of Imperial development and the effect of politics and persons at home on relations with Europe and the United States. The state of society before the industrial revolution is shown in the opening chapters and from this point is traced the social evolution as brought about by economic change and in turn causing political change. Eight maps. Bibliography. Index

"A brilliant study of the period."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:524 Ag '22 100w

Booklist 19:48 N '22

"Besides confining himself rather too closely to political history he has a tendency, all too common among English historians, of touching on subjects without sufficient explanation. This latter characteristic may impair, to some extent, the usefulness of this suggestive and stimulating work as a text for American students." A. L. Cross

+ Educ R 64:448 D '22 160w

"Mr. Trevelyan's treatment of his theme is wonderfully well-balanced, synthetic, and convincing. The most meticulous critic will find little to cavil at with regard to the writer's precision. . . His fairness goes a long way to vindicate those who believe that recent English history and what is called 'civics' or 'civism' can be perfectly well taught without being coloured by party feeling." G. B. Hurst

+ Eng Hist R 38:116 Ja '23 1250w

"One knows not whether to admire more the wealth of information here purveyed, or the skill and interest with which the artificer has set it forth." S. B. Fay

+ Ind 109:140 S 16 '22 720w

"Honest and not unsuccessful effort to condense the history of the author's native land into such compass and still keep it moderately palatable."

+ — Lit R p916 S 2 '22 700w

"Mr. Trevelyan is at his best in describing the manners, habits, and social aspects of the period he is reviewing. His pictures and reflections are admirable. He moves easily about the literature, the art, the taste, the customs of each generation, and always contrives to draw some enlightening lesson for his readers. His judgments on men are interesting and striking."

+ Nation and Ath 31:507 Jl 8 '22 1950w

"Although the book is packed solidly with facts, the author has most successfully avoided any suggestion of the encyclopedia. His sense of continuity and proportion is unfailing. The style is Trevelyan at his best—rich in allusion, brilliant in comment, masterly in summary, fruitful in speculation, just in judgment—the finished instrument of a furnished mind. Such books as this show the legitimate power of imagination in history." D. S. Muzzey

+ New Repub 31:363 Ag 23 '22 1450w

"Until M. Halévy has completed his fourth volume we can certainly expect no such vue d'ensemble of the nineteenth century in England as we get in this book, and not even M. Halévy will be able to surpass that peculiar blend of zest and charm which is partly Mr. Trevelyan's birthright and partly the ripening harvest of his own labours." K. B.

+ New Statesman 19:492 Ag 5 '22 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:603 D '22

Pratt p31 winter '23

R of Rs 66:109 Jl '22 160w

St Louis 21:17 Ja '23

"Mr. Trevelyan's volume is written in a style so buoyant and graceful that it carries the reader with it through some of the most abstruse and obscure complications of our economical and legislative history."

+ Sat R 134:106 Jl 15 '22 680w

"A very wise, a very fair, and a very interesting book. It is fair without being vapid, moderate without loss of a vivifying vehemence, temperate without tepidness. Mr. George Trevelyan never fails to understand the case of his opponents, or to give their views a proper weight. He writes like a judge and not like an advocate. He wants to interpret the case so as to give the jury of public opinion true premises for forming their conclusions. He never makes an appeal to prejudice. My only quarrel with his book is that it is too compressed, or rather, that he has not allowed himself quite a large enough canvas." J. St. L. Strachey

+ — Spec 129:17 Jl 1 '22 1800w

Reviewed by J. St. L. Strachey

Spec 129:48 Jl 8 '22 2250w

"Mr Trevelyan has many good qualities as an historian, but not even his gifts of imagination and of lucidity are here so remarkable as his fairness. . . On the whole it may be doubted whether any of the numerous histories of this period is as full, as well-informed, as just, or as interesting as this book of Mr. Trevelyan's."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p329 My 25 '22 3600w

TROUBRIDGE, LAURA (GURNEY) lady. His Grace gives notice. 245p $1.75 Duffield [7s 6d Methuen]

22-9196

"George Berwick was a young farm labourer in Canada, who enlisted and fought in the Great War, and when demobbed, became second footman to Lord Rennock. This very ordinary story runs just on the lines which might be anticipated from the fact that Lord Rennock had a haughty and beautiful daughter, while Berwick is really the Duke of St. Bevis."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Lit D p57 S 23 '22 800w

"The author makes several obnoxious grammatical and other errors of a sort more befitting the servants' dining hall than the polite atmosphere to which his Grace ascends."

— Lit R p842 Jl 29 '22 110w

"The author's style is easy and intelligent, and she has a perception of the human comedy, which should mean good work in the future."

+ N Y Times p18 Je 25 '22 370w

Outlook 132:32 S 6 '22 20w

"This novel shows a considerable advance in technique on the author's part. It would probably lend itself to dramatization, for the dialogue is neat and vivacious, the action, for the most part easy, and the theme, though making no pretence at originality, one which nearly always succeeds on the stage."

+ — Sat R 133:397 Ap 15 '22 140w

"A mildly amusing comedy."

+ — Spec 128:435 Ap 8 '22 50w

"An entertaining story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 27 '22 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 23 '22 50w

TUCKERMAN, ARTHUR. Breath of life; a story of youth. 347p $1.75 Putnam

22-19301

In his efforts to find himself, Everett Gail appeared restless and inconstant. He left Yale as an undergraduate, to enter business, became tired of the preliminary drudgeries of the learner and after several changes and in a mood of desperation seeks out wild company. He gets gloriously drunk and in a restaurant embarrasses the girl he is in love with. His equally irresponsible companions put him on board an outgoing steamer. Coming to himself a day out from New York, he is made to work his passage, lands on one of the Caribbean Islands, gets into the thick of a revolution and at the risk of his own life saves a trainload of American marines. After his return to America he discovers, in writing up his experiences for a newspaper, that he is cut out for a journalist, and that his romantic episode with Bianca Valdez in Santa Palma has clarified his love for Margaret Blair.

"A somewhat wandering plot, and an occasional frightened peep at sentimentality, are all the unripe signs we find. The story is as live as Scott Fitzgerald never is, but the author has no objection to his hero's doing the decent thing as a general rule."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 18 '22 390w

Cleveland p86 N '22

"Mr. Tuckerman is a great believer in sheer motion, with an utter indifference to destinations."

— Dial 71:210 F '23 50w

"A clever, promising tale." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p70 D '22 30w

"Both a promise and a disappointment. The promise is contained in the earlier chapters. Unfortunately, he has not yet learned a sufficient sense of proportion, and in the second part of his book characterization ceases and the tale becomes simply a story of adventure."

— + Lit R p132 O 21 '22 350w

"Its plot is well constructed. Among the assets which Mr. Tuckerman shows himself to possess as a writer of fiction is a strong sense of character. While his lesser people do not fare quite so well at his hands, his central character is definitely and strongly conceived and portrayed with vitality."

+ N Y Times p10 O 8 '22 370w

Spec 130:191 F 3 '23 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p786 N 30 '22 20w

TULLY, JIM. Emmett Lawler. 315p $1.90 Harcourt

22-4922

The following stages marked Emmett Lawler's life as far as recorded in the story: an orphan at six, a waif in an orphan asylum for another six years, a farmer's slave a tramp and a prize-fighter. Of Irish birth, he had inherited his mother's rare poetic nature and his uncle's fighting qualities. He loved nature, beautiful women, books, poetry and dreaming, had an appealing personality and could always be won by kindness and sympathy. But he was impatient of restraint, chose the line of least resistance and drifted into a hobo existence, from the utter degradation of which he was saved by a natural delicacy and his memory and dreams of good women that had come into his life. There was the tradition of his mother, the kind sweet face of a boyhood playmate and the pure and splendid girl who was the ministering angel of his adolescence. Last of all came the true-hearted woman of the underworld who strove to arouse the poet in him. The book contains vivid pictures of hobo life and descriptions of prizefights.

"It is worth reading; but more as a psychological study of its author, than as a piece of writing." J. F.

— + Bookm 55:191 Ap '22 240w

"In spite of its faults, it is well worth reading; and as a piece of human expression, it is far superior to most of the literate novels that contrive to get themselves talked about." M. M. C.

+ — Freeman 5:622 S 6 '22 340w

"Emmett Lawler is not overflowing with romance of hairbreadth adventure. Its main quality is its power to work on the sympathy of the reader by pitiable stories of orphan and tramp life. Being written by one who was a tramp himself, these stories are of course very realistic." P. H. E., Jr.

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ja 28 '23 380w

"It's an uneven book. There are many good things in it, things which would be good in any man's book. On the other hand, there is a bit of sentimentalizing here and there." Hulbert Footner

+ — Lit R p559 Ap 8 '22 680w

"He makes his reader know what he knew. Some of it is very impolite. Some of it would have been even impoliter if it had not been impolitic and unprintable. The acute reader will read much in that place where the best of all literature is stored—between the lines. He has much more to say, but he has already said a brave and priceless bookful." Rupert Hughes

+ N Y Times p11 F 26 '22 2050w

"The whole has a human and pleasant touch, and should furnish good enough entertainment for those in a holiday mood."

Sat R 134:217 Ag 5 '22 150w

Springfield Republican p13a Ap 9 '22 280w

Survey 47:933 Mr 11 '22 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p446 JI 6 '22 110w

TURBYFILL, MARK. Living frieze. 83p $2 The author, 3760 Sheffield Av., Chicago

811

21-16680

"Mr. Mark Turbyfill, while in no sense whatever an imitator of any of the leading contemporaries, is acutely a modernist. In his individual fashion he represents a good many of the vices of his time, with their corresponding virtues. He is brief always; sometimes he is chaotic, the relations of things he mentions not always being clear or important. On the other hand he has a power of compacting much into few words, of making his briefness a vivid and living presentation of a very big emotion. The poems in the book are cameo work, finely cut with the ease of sure artistry in fragilely delicate rhythms, but the important poems of the volume are also something very much more."—New Repub

"Fragments of emotional ecstasy cast in brittle forms that have a delicate strength—drops of loveliness caught up in shells."

+ Bookm 55:429 Je '22 180w

"He has very frankly taken the new manner of free rhythm and made it serve something more than rhetorical flourishes of the most ornate description. He does not always succeed, but he succeeds sufficiently to achieve individuality and distinction." W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 31 '21 3000w

"The interest of the book is in what Turbyfill tries for—his title is eloquent of his effort—rather than in what he actually achieves. His intensity fails before his desire for delicacy. His imagery fades before his anxious intellection. The book is less the authentic gesture of the poet than the studied voice of the dancer."

— + Dial 72:218 F '22 100w

"This book is unlike the imagist poetry we have seen. It is a frieze—of delicately tinted, exotic flowers, but the flowers, instead of being arranged in cold vases, spring from a pool of living water—a pool that while not as deep as it will be later on, has caught effects in sky, leaf-shade, and moving human figures that move us to exclaim. Form and spirit quicken side by side for Mr. Turbyfill, his frieze is anything but coldly antique, though just because there is youth in the poems some arouse echoes." Laura Benet

TURBYFILL, MARK—Continued

+ Lit R p87 O 15 '21 420w

Nation 114:700 Je 7 '22 80w

"Mr. Turbyfill does not write in rhythms or forms which echo other more famous names; he has developed his own styles, a nervous, sharply marked line of rhythm that is his own and fits perfectly his viewpoint. Pungency of phrase and an occasional whimsy of humor add the final touch of individuality to this work." Royall Snow

+ New Repub 29:254 Ja 25 '22 950w

"Mr. Turbyfill can indeed be sentimental. But it is not for this reason that he is one of the dozen or so living Americans who have done anything worth remembering. At his best, Mr. Turbyfill is the master of a certain fleeting precision that, like the finest of needles, strikes deep into one's being and is gone before it can be observed." Yvor Winters

Poetry 20:337 Mr '22 600w

TURNER, JOHN HASTINGS. Where your treasure is—. 313p $1.75 Scribner

22-11034

Charles Cutman, a successful barrister, and Peter Margett, a well-known editor, are friends, both in the middle fifties and both married, to all appearances happily. They are accustomed to spend their holidays together with their families at a Devonshire resort, where most of the action of the story takes place. They simultaneously make the discovery that life has lost its romance and that they cannot re-ignite the fire of their youthful loves. At this moment a mysterious lady calling herself simply Mary comes into their lives, renews in their hearts the flames of thirty years ago and they become jealous rivals. She proves to be purely symbolical, representing all the bits of their respective wives whom they had fallen in love with and forgotten in the everyday humdrum. At the same time Cutman's son and Margett's daughter are starting the adventure of love on strictly modern lines. They go through very much the same phases of feeling as their parents before them and find that despite their advanced ideas romance and sentiment creep in and that the old ardor may be re-awakened by some remembrance of the past.

Booklist 18:369 J1 '22

"There is always a touch of quaintness in Mr. Turner's stories, a touch of quaintness which has its charm in the unfolding of subtle emotions. For all the whimsicality that sparkles on the surface of the story, one feels that it has an underbody of substance that is vital and significant." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '22 1200w

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"Middle age is rarely thought worth writing about, and it is a pity that a book like this should be circulated and give an added impression of dullness to an interesting subject."

— Dial 73:681 D '22 60w

"An original and interesting book. The style is quiet, but moulded by thought and sympathy into considerable richness and subtlety. The unique theme, at first sight so unpromising, is handled as it should be, unconventionally, by little scenes straight out of the personalities of their actors, strung into a life story by a slight narrative." Marion Ponsonby

+ Lit R p3 S 9 '22 1100w

"Were it not for a symbolical confusion of narrative method a considerable popular success might be predicted for 'Where Your Treasure Is.' The beginnings are admirably true and well if not at all pungently recorded. The stage is set, the problem proposed, the true interplay of forces may set in. Nothing of the kind happens. Instead, heavily yet hazily wrapped in a symbolical texture, a series of moral miracles takes place." Ludwig Lewisohn

— + Nation 114:696 Je 7 '22 370w

"Mr. Turner, in writing a better book than his earlier two, has written also a more faulty one; its very sincerity and zeal for truth have betrayed it into an oversteering of the point and into a fallacious technique by which incongruous fairy-tale methods are dragged into a story of the most actual kind." L. T. N.

+ New Repub 31:288 Ag 2 '22 110w

"Partly realistic, partly phantastical and generally somewhat indefinite. Mr. Turner's thought is rather involved, and not always easy to follow, perhaps because his book does not always hold one's interest or attention, though there are good things in it."

+ N Y Times p4 My 28 '22 420w

"There is a vein of humor in it and a deft light touch of a sure writer, but the motif is sober and the situations suggest tragedy, even though keeping clear of shipwreck."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 30 '22 640w

TURNER, JOHN KENNETH. Shall it be again? 448p $2.50 Huebsch

940.373 European war—United States.

22-14372

The book is a vehement arraignment of the alleged motives for the World war in general and for America's entry into it in particular. The author holds that the story of its beginning is a myth; that its professed objectives—democracy and permanent peace—were false; that it has not laid the foundations for future peace but has set up the groundwork for more war; that it was a war for business, into which the American people were betrayed, and a crime; that democracy is not a reality in America but that America is a financial oligarchy in which the president is the willing, tho pretendedly reluctant, servant of the great financial powers. Index.

"It is not only an impeachment of American motives for going to war but is also an attack upon the policies and activities of President Wilson, a defense of Germany and a criticism of the treaty of Versailles."

Am Pol Sci R 16:718 N '22 60w

Booklist 19:117 Ja '23

"A vitriolic attack on Wilson's policies, charging him with forcing an unwilling America to fight Germany. The author shatters illusions with the eagerness of all revolutionaries and whether or not such attacks are quixotic, at least his book is capable of stimulating thought and wonderment."

Bookman 56:105 S '22 150w

"Extraordinary book which opens up a new line of argument as to the probability of another world war in the near future. It is well to read it, for there are many facts, though misapplied, which it is useful to store away in the mind for future reference."

Boston Transcript p5 Je 10 '22 480w

"He works out the thesis with a dialectical skill and a wealth of illustrative citations." J. A. Hobson

+ Freeman 5:500 Ag 2 '22 1500w

"The volume is as good an example of special pleading as has appeared recently."

— Lit R p116 O 14 '22 160w

"'Shall It Be Again?' is a book that everyone interested in the future of this country should read. It is neither measured nor judicious in tone. It is a philippic, and rings passionately with the yearning for justice and the sincerity of conviction. It challenges overwhelming public opinion, deeply radicated concepts, and the entrenched power of organized privilege. It is a contribution in our day to mankind's age-long fight for freedom—the offering of a man whose vision for the ideal is steadfast, an American in whom lies the hope of an America true to her best self." E. H. Gruening

+ Nation 115:667 D 13 '22 1950w

"Woodrow Wilson might be described as the heavy, extremely heavy, villain of a book purporting to tell the exact hows, whys and wherefores of the World War. It contains 413 pages, but the arguments may be summed up in the endlessly reiterated assertions that the war was caused by Wilson and Wall street. Mr. Turner documents his book with much care—to prove his own points. But often memory of things by and large is more reliable than small quotations wrenched from their context."

— Spring'd Republican p7a O 29 '22 600w
Survey 48:629 Ag 15 '22 100w

TURNER, W. J. Music and life. 213p $3 Dutton
[7s 6d Methuen]
780.4 Music (Eng ed 22-10414)

A collection of this English musical critic's articles, many of which appeared originally in the columns of the New Statesman. Partial contents: On listening to music; Programme music; The morality of music; Song-writing; African and suburban music; Scriabin; The Royal philharmonic society; Max Reger; The London choral society; The technique of opera; César Franck; A concert at the front; Stravinsky; Debussy; On conducting; A note on Hector Berlioz; On pianists; Style in singing; Jazz music.

"Despite a regrettable tendency to exaggerate and an occasional cocksureness of tone unworthy so cautious a thinker, he has given us one of the most enlightening and emancipating books on music that has appeared for some time." D. G. Mason

+ — Freeman 6:285 N 29 '22 1100w

"He has no bee in his bonnet and he is not very profound, but he is one of our most useful writers on music; and his lively articles in a weekly paper are deliberately written to make musical people more interested and the others less 'unmusical' than they were before. In fact, everyone who shouts, thumps, blows, or scrapes should see what this book has to say."

+ Nation and Ath 30:732 F 11 '22 260w

"Mr. W. J. Turner is a refreshing representative of a tendency among English critics to regard the fine arts as human and intelligible expressions of the spirit of man rather than as Eleusinian mysteries known to but a few initiates who are sworn to keep all they know to themselves. . . . He has opinions and ideas of his own, and he states them with vigor and clarity. His estimates of Stravinsky, Scriabin, Debussy, jazz, opera, program music and English musical audiences are interesting, amusing and full of ideas." Burton Rascoe

+ — N Y Tribune p5 Ag 20 '22 800w

Pratt p24 autumn '22

"We may not agree with Mr. Turner, but at least we may admire such illuminating criticism."

+ Spec 128:178 F 11 '22 600w

"Readers will find some uncompromising views on music and its performance, animated, for all their dogmatism, by a strong love for what is great and true in music. His personal sincerity is Mr. Turner's great charm. He is so honest, so fearless, and usually so just that one is not put out when, in his bustling progress after the ideal, he tramples emphatically on one's toes."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p751 N 17 '21 1050w

TURPIN, EDNA HENRY LEE. Whistling Jimps. 328p il $1.75 Century

22-17447

Page Ruffin is spending the summer vacation with her cousin and a number of friends in the Virginia mountains. Here she meets Jimps Farlan, known as Whistling Jimps, who has a strange power over birds and wild animals. Jimps takes a fancy to Page and shows her some of the beautiful spots of forest he has discovered in his wanderings. On one of their trips they run into some moonshiners, are caught by them and Page is tied up in a dim cabin where she finds a queer little half-witted lad. Page is rescued by her cousin and Jimps, and later helps to restore the little boy of the cabin to his father. For girls and boys in the early teens.

Lit R p206 N 11 '22 50w

TWEEDY, HENRY HALLAM, BEACH, HARLAN P., and MCKIM, JUDSON JACKSON. Christian work as a vocation. (Christian service ser.) 56;50;44p $1 Macmillan

260 Ministers of the gospel. Missionaries. Young men's Christian association 21-9651

This little book is intended for the young man who is thinking of some form of Christian service as a life work. It describes the nature and opportunities of such service in the ministry, in the mission field, and in the Young men's Christian association.

Booklist 19:144 F '23

Cleveland p73 S '22

J Religion 2:662 N '22 40w

TYAU, MIN-CH'EN TUK ZUNG. China awakened. 475p il $5 (25s) Macmillan

915.1 China—Social conditions. China—Foreign relations 22-699

The author is a Chinese publicist and educator who acted as technical adviser of the Chinese delegation to the assembly of the League of nations. He gives a full account of the intellectual, moral and material transformation which China is undergoing and of the new forces which are at work in every department of the national life. Among these forces are educational reforms, the growth of public opinion, the student movement, improved communications and industrial progress, judicial reforms and a new self respect in international relations. The complexities of politics and finance are omitted from the survey. Valuable appendices include the official statement of the Sino-Japanese negotiations, 1915; China's claims in respect to the Shantung province; and questions of readjustment submitted by China to the Peace conference, 1919.

Booklist 18:186 Mr '22

Reviewed by J. M. Thompson

Freeman 5:187 My 3 '22 180w

Lit R p438 F 18 '22 500w

"With prodigious industry Dr. Tyau has catalogued in 'China Awakened' all that missionaries and business men and junketing newspaper reporters have sung for these many years. He has catalogued them with prodigious industry but with little critical sense and less sophistication. However, for those who would know the directions which change in China is taking this is the most comprehensive book yet written." Nathaniel Peffer

+ — Nation 114:536 My 3 '22 720w

Nation and Ath 31:228 My 13 '22 880w

"A most excellent, concise, unsentimental and well-documented account of events in China for the last twenty years."

+ New Statesman 19:300 Je 17 '22 780w

Reviewed by T. Q. Beesley

N Y Times p11 Ap 30 '22 1400w

Pratt p28 Ap '22

"The work merits attention because in the first place, it is that of a Chinese writer who presents the Chinese point of view in readable English, and, in the second, it has much that is fresh, instructive and hopeful to say about the awakening of China. One of the most interesting chapters, in an interesting book, is that on the Student Movement which has become a great force in the whole life and outlook of the Chinese people."

+ Sat R 133:530 My 20 '22 90w

"Well planned and interesting. It is disappointing, however, to find that politics and finance are ignored, for an intelligible account of the causes leading up to the present turmoil is much needed."

+ — Spec 129:408 S 23 '22 220w

"As a literary effort, or as a contribution to history, Dr. Tyau's latest book contains little that is interesting or original. The ground which it covers has been so frequently traversed by other writers, native and foreign, during the past five years, that it will require either new facts or new arguments to make the subject attractive to the general reader. It is nevertheless deserving of attention, not only because of the time and manner of its presentation, but because it is undoubtedly symptomatic."

TYAU, M. T. Z.—Continued

The Times [London] Lit Sup p299 My 11 '22 1150w

"Furnishes perhaps the most comprehensive account of the state of China to-day to be found in a single volume." F. W. Williams
+ Yale R n s 12:204 O '22 200w

TYLER, MRS GEORGIE VERE. Children of transgression. 316p $1.75 Holt [7s 6d Unwin]

22-6316

George Lindsay and his unmarried mother live in a Virginian community ostracized by everyone. George grows up embittered by the cruel treatment meted out to them and he determines to make Ruby Dangerfield, the daughter of Judge Dangerfield, the social light of the village, suffer the same stigma that has ruined his mother's life. George's father was a Dangerfield and his revenge is planned in consequence. The true love of Dick Marshall for Ruby adds a ray of comfort to the sombre story.

"Although the story is unpleasant, it is absorbing and is by no means a narrative of unveiled sordidness. The final event is not tragic and the reader believes not only in the sincerity of the man who saves the situation, but in his ability to put all right. 'The Children of Transgression' is in many ways a remarkable book, and one cannot leave it without a feeling of respect for the unrelenting bravery and deep insight of its author." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '22 980w

"In its first framework this story gives promise of being a tragic structure of some dimensions, but its early promises are far from being borne out. The structure remains only framework; the narrative is bare, unfinished, and the end is entirely theatrical."

+ Lit R p587 Ap 15 '22 180w

"It is frank, but it is not powerful, because it is not convincing. The plot lacks what the professors of writing term 'motivation.' The characters act without sufficient outward cause, and as we cannot find in their natures the causes of their actions we lose interest and belief in them."

+ N Y Times p16 My 7 '22 580w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p61 Ja 26 '22 100w

TYNDALE-BISCOE, CECIL EARLE. Kashmir in sunlight and shade; with an introd. by L. C. Dunsterville. 315p il $5 Lippincott [12s 6d Seeley, Service]

915.46 Kashmir (Eng ed 21-18402)

"The book gives, as in its sub-title it purports to give, a description of the beauties of Kashmir and the life, habits and customs of its population, as well as an account of the gradual but steady rebuilding of a once down-trodden race. There is in fact plenty of information about Kashmir and the Kashmiris. But the book has a serious undertone, for Mr. Biscoe is the well-known missionary, and he tells the story of his long connexion with the Mission School in Sringar, the capital, a picturesque but dirty city of about 120,000 souls, of whom nevertheless he has hopes."—Sat R

Reviewed by F. O'Brien

N Y Times p12 F 12 '22 1600w

Pratt p32 summer '22

"This delightful book is to be enjoyed rather than criticised. It is the fresh, lively manner in which all is presented that makes the book such very pleasant reading. Humour, shewed but kindly, is ever present. Mr. Biscoe is an excellent raconteur."

+ Sat R 132:438 O 8 '21 340w

"An excellent book. He describes the country, the towns and the people with sympathy and humour."

+ Spec 127:676 N 19 '21 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p599 S 15 '21 50w

"A simple account of a great work, set forth modestly without, it must be admitted, any great literary skill."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p619 S 29 '21 750w

TYSON, JOHN AUBREY. Scarlet tanager. 340p $1.75 Macmillan

22-7758

The intense unrest following the World war and the various sinister influences at work form the background for this tale. The "Brotherhood," a society banded together under the leadership of a man called Seafalcon, for the express purpose of overthrowing Anglo-Saxon civilization, is the secret power to be fought in connection with the murder of Oliver Channing, the inventor of a very clever naval device. His death and the disappearance of his papers cause consternation in naval and secret service circles. Miriam Warburton, an English actress, and Captain Rennison of the Bureau of military intelligence, are colorful figures in the tale which pictures this country in 1930

Booklist 18:335 Je '22

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '22 580w

Cleveland p92 D '22

"This story is a splendid example of its class, for virtues, for defects. It is unusually smooth, vivid, and thrilling; it is perhaps unusually artificial. But does such a defect make much difference in a detective story?"

+ Lit R p642 My 6 '22 120w

"In the development of its plot this novel is distinguished unmistakably from the common run of stories of its type."

+ N Y Times p27 Je 4 '22 140w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 11 '23 140w

U

UKERS, WILLIAM HARRISON. All about coffee. 796p il $15 Tea and coffee trade journal co., 79 Wall st., N.Y.

663.9 Coffee

22-20988

"Mr. William H. Ukers, the editor of the Tea and Coffee Trade Journal of New York, is an unquestioned authority on the coffee industry, and has spent upwards of twenty years of his life in gathering data from various parts of the world for the making of this book. The evolution of coffee is traced from the earliest discovery through the thousand years or more of its development. The diverse methods of cultivation in various countries are presented together with its export and import use in trade, its manner of transportation, markets, machinery, consumption, coffee trade associations, exchanges, roasting, grinding, packing, price fluctuations. The book is written with such readability and with such attention to literary, historic, and artistic charm that it carries the reader to the ends of the earth and becomes a fascinating story of travel and romance. The subject matter has been profusely illustrated with 777 illustrations, 17 pages in color, and 102 portraits. There are also 29 maps and diagrams, a veritable encyclopædia of chronology, coffee bibliography, index, and references."—Lit R

Booklist 19:149 F '23

"It is a book with much to fascinate the layman as well as the student of the coffee industry, particularly because of its several hundred illustrations. The pictures would have an appeal to all sorts and conditions of men." C. G. F.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 10 '23 420w

"We believe this book will be for at least a generation the standard work of reference and information on coffee." C. S. Cooper
+ Lit R p382 Ja 13 '23 1450w

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:52 O '22

"Without doubt the most comprehensive and authoritative work on the subject that has been published in any language."

+ N Y Times p2 D 3 '22 450w

"The book is well written, well printed and profusely illustrated."

+ Spec 130:188 F 3 '23 750w

UNAMUNO, MIGUEL DE. Tragic sense of life in men and in peoples; tr. by J. E. Crawford Flitch; with an introductory essay by Salvador de Madariaga. 332p $5 (17s) Macmillan
211 Rationalism. Immortality. Skepticism

"Don Miguel De Unamuno, who is now introduced to English-speaking readers for the first time, is one of the most original figures in contemporary Spanish literature. The ex-rector of Salamanca University is a professor of Greek by trade, but his best activities have been in the field of literature and philosophy. 'The Tragic Sentiment of Life' is a work which comes in direct line from the literature of the Spanish mystics. It is the reply of a Spaniard of to-day to self-sufficient rationalism, and in it is heard the note of Pascal, torn between the logic of reason and the irrepressible demands of faith. The visionary passion of a mind which refuses to accept the denial of spiritual hopes and is yet conscious of the sovereignty of the reasoning faculties finds dramatic expression in this book. Unamuno confesses an impotence of feeling when confronted by the unanswerable arguments of reason. The desire for immortality can find no rational confirmation, but reason leaves us no object in life and gives it no finality. Thought and feeling thus meet in a common despair."—Lit R

Int J Ethics 33:108 O '22 400w

"His book will be read by us rather for its poignant drama of the human soul than for its doctrine, which rests too easily upon assumptions which have long since ceased to be taken for granted outside Spain." Ernest Boyd

+ Lit R p470 Mr 1 '22 630w

"Miguel de Unamuno, poet, novelist, metaphysician, whom Salvador de Madariaga calls 'the greatest literary figure in Spain.' His masterpiece, a mighty volume ably translated here by Crawford Flitch, is modern Catholicism's richest, most passionate, most brilliant statement of the grounds that exist for faith in immortality, now that reason and science have done their worst. His book is very absurd, but it is tremendous work and fun for the mind." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 114:600 My 17 '22 780w

"What is wrong with our author is not his ideal; it is his assertion that, in order to believe in it, he must deny reason. His mind is all passion and is nowhere lucid. The passion will command readers, and readers that he will deserve. But it is one more force heading men back and down to the abyss."

+ Nation and Ath 30:592 Ja 14 '22 1300w

"'The Tragic Sense of Life' can be reckoned as his masterpiece, because it is the most direct expression of the conflict, reflected in the person of the author, contained in a 'whole man'—with all his affirmations and all his negations; all the pitiless thought of a penetrating mind that denies, and all the desperate self-assertions of a soul that desires eternal life."

+ New Statesman 18:624 Mr 4 '22 720w

"Nobody but a Spaniard could have written this unique, learned, vital and intensely interesting series of essays. To know them is to know what the advanced thinkers of Spain are poignantly considering today." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 19 '22 2550w

"The book as a whole is a bit incoherent; it resembles in form one of the prophetic books of the Old Testament; it is, after all, difficult to formulate, except in the vaguest terms, Unamuno's final philosophy. But the harsh, downright, and penetrating assertions with which the book is filled, its mere outcries, may find entrance into one's mind and suddenly alter one's whole point of view. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that, whatever may be one's philosophical attitude, to miss reading this book would be as great a loss as not to have read 'Sartor Resartus.'"

+ No Am 215:567 Ap '22 720w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:470 N '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 5 '22 2000w

UNDERHILL, EVELYN (MRS STUART MOORE). Life of the spirit and the life of today. 311p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

240 Spiritual life 22-20918

The object of the book is the practical one of showing how the facts of the spiritual life can become working factors for good in every life. There is in man an instinct for spiritual reality that he perceives in three ways: first as the universe; next, as a presence including and exceeding the best that personality can mean to him; last, as an indwelling and energizing life. This is revealed in the outstanding types of spiritual men and women thruout history, in psychology and in religious institutions and, thru our modern and deeper psychological knowledge, opens up new possibilities for self-discipline, for education and for social and religious effort. Bibliography and index.

"It is this conviction of hers that a sense of the supernatural is a great practical need which makes her essays of immediate interest and importance. Her arguments, as we should expect, are supported by very generous reference to modern psychology as well as to patristic and mediæval mystical philosophy."

New Statesman 19:496 Ag 5 '22 650w

"Our only quarrel with Miss Underhill is because of a certain dullness of style which makes her book less readable than it would otherwise be. This is in no sense a complaint at an absence of fine writing, nor at the scientific attitude and terminology which necessarily form part of the book: it is that one feels the need of a sharper precision and concentration which would have presented the essentials more clearly by actually diminishing the volume of the matter."

+ Spec 129:178 Ag 5 '22 950w

UNDERHILL, JAMES. Mineral land surveying. 3d ed rev and enl 237p il $3.50 Wiley

626.99 Mine surveying 22-2461

"Omits material of a general nature which is available in general text-books, and gives a concise description of methods used in the West. The author is (1922) United States mineral surveyor for Colorado."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:486 N '22

UNDERWOOD, MRS EDNA (WORTHLEY). The penitent. 367p $2 Houghton

22-19550

This novel, the first of a "New world trilogy" deals with the period of Russian history following the invasion by Napoleon's armies and with the beginnings of the Russian struggle for freedom. The chief characters are the czar Alexander I and the poet Pushkin. Alexander is shown in his waning popularity, turning his back on his ideas of reform, and coming under the sinister influence of Metternich's policy. For the purposes of her romance, the author accepts in place of Alexander's death the legend of his withdrawal, a penitent, to a monastery in Siberia. Pushkin, drawn into a revolutionary plot in the opening pages, is shown in his exile and wanderings thru the Ukraine, the Crimea and Caucasus.

"Its spirit, its handling, its point of view, its psychology are almost startlingly Russian. The extraordinary versatility of an author who has so far imbibed the spirit of an alien race need hardly be commented upon."

UNDERWOOD, MRS EDNA—Continued

+ Lit R p156 O 28 '22 500w

"A portentously stiff and serious historical novel. The characters are as carefully made up and dressed to period as wax works—and as dead."

— New Repub 33:154 Ja 3 '23 60w

"Miss Underwood has visualized her period in a vivid manner; her characters live and breathe; the great spirit of unrest which is to culminate in a new order of things throbs through the pages of the book. Her principal deficiency rests in her use of prose. Often it is crude. She appears to have written too fast to smooth the paragraphs. But the book does rise to certain admirable scenes that lift it from the usual efforts of the season."

+ N Y Times p14 O 22 '22 800w

"Of the great number of figures that pass across her pages every one [with one exception] is distinct, an individual, no matter how briefly indicated. . . Of the literal accuracy of the book, only a specialist in that period can judge; but any one else will believe perforce. Considered merely as a novel, 'The Penitent' deserves unstinted, if not unqualified, praise." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p12 O 15 '22 1150w

UTERMAYER, LOUIS. Heavens. 153p $1.75
Harcourt

$17 Parodies 22-5818

This literary extravaganza consists of two sections: Heavens, and Five previews. In the first a candidate for heaven finds that instead of simply going to heaven he has to make his choice between nine hundred and seventy-six of them. The reader is permitted to share with him the sampling of five: the literary heaven of queer stars of G. K. Chesterton; the scientific heaven of the time-machine presided over by H. G. Wells; the heaven of George Moore; the romantic heaven above Storysden; the midwesterners' heaven of Main streets. A preview, we are told, is the exact opposite of a review and the previewer in this instance hopes that the intensity of his forecasts may actually will such books into being. The previews are on Woodroovian poetry; The manufacture of verse; The lowest form of wit; Versed aid to the injured; Rhyme and relativity—the last being parodies on our best known contemporary poets. There is an index of victims.

Bookm 55:534 Jl '22 170w

"Up to the present volume the versatility of Mr. Utermeyer was interesting, with the publication of 'Heavens' it becomes amazing. I do not know of anybody who could have conceived and executed the first part of this volume called 'Heavens.' It is a brilliant piece of work. A volume that is without its like in contemporary American literature." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 5 '22 1500w
Cleveland p71 S '22

"His consideration of the various literary heavens is an intricate piece of imaginative fooling, although the cream of the book is to be found in the parodies of various poets upon the theme of relativity." L. B.

+ Freeman 5:286 My 31 '22 230w

"Mr. Utermeyer continues to be clever, almost fatally clever, and would be more enjoyable if he did not produce the effect of being completely fascinated by his own cleverness." Arthur Guiterman

+ Ind 108:396 Ap 22 '22 200w

"On the whole, Mr. Utermeyer has merely thrown a moderately humorous glow upon the thinness of his creative stream. Since his earlier work presented an animal strength and defiance, this latter fact is regrettable." Maxwell Bodenheim

— Nation 115:311 S 27 '22 1100w

"There is an air of good humor and high spirits in this collection of parodies and literary chit-chat. But if one is not exactly primed to meet Mr. Utermeyer half way, or a bit more than half way, he will find that the cleverness seems obvious, the allusions too thick-set and insistent, and will accumulate weariness as he proceeds." E: Sapir

— + New Repub 30:351 My 17 '22 320w

"Exceptionally fine pieces of work, for in each parody Mr. Utermeyer catches perfectly the spirit and technical idiosyncrasies of the poets who are his victims. Perhaps the one criticism would be that the parodist should not base his efforts on particular poems of those parodied."

+ N Y Times p22 Je 11 '22 400w

St Louis 20:301 D '22

UPDIKE, DANIEL BERKELEY. Printing types, their history, forms, and use; a study in survivals. 2v 276:308p il $15 Harvard univ. press

655.1 Printing—History 22-17300

"While the printer will get from the books a new insight into type possibilities, the scholar and the collector will get new understanding of their treasures, and the general reader will come to appreciate clearly the beauty of the books of that first century when manuscripts still influenced print: the flowering of French artistic genius in Estienne, Tory, and Garamond; the Dutch industry of Plantin and the Elzevirs; the admirable sturdiness of the Fell types and the Caslons; the painstaking Baskerville; the influential Bodini; the taste of the Fourniers and the elegance of the Didots; the sure-footed Whittinghams; the versatile Morris and the beginnings of our new and promising typographical revival."—Atlantic's Bookshelf. The author, as head of the Merrymount Press, Boston, has had a conspicuous part in the improvement of typography in America in recent years.

"These are volumes which it would be difficult to overpraise. They could not have been written by a scholar who was not a printer, nor planned by a printer who was not a scholar. In them lie, not bare facts of printing history, nor details of technical progress in the craft, but a master printer's story of types, their characteristics and their survival, and of the taste which can raise typography from a craft to an art." F: G. Melcher

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf D '22 650w

"Mr. Updike's work, which combines the wisdom of the ancient writers on typography with his own original ideas on the subject of printing types, is not only a book lover's book, but monumental in its character, likely to fix the standards for years to come." G: H. Sargent

+ Bookm 56:491 D '22 750w

"A monumental work and one that seems destined to be ranked as a classic by printers. In well ordered perspective, with nice balance of judgment and careful phrasing, the book presents a comprehensive, scholarly, and stimulating study of the growth and development of the printer's art." C. C. Lane

+ Lit R p320 D 16 '22 1150w

V

VALENTINE, DOUGLAS, pseud. See Williams. V.

VALLANDIGHAM, EDWARD NOBLE. Delaware and the Eastern Shore: some aspects of a peninsula pleasant and well beloved. 329p il $5 Lippincott

917.51 Delaware—Description and travel.
Maryland—Description and travel. Virginia
—Description and travel 22-17771

"The early history of the peninsula is here summarized mainly to make clear the interrelation of its parts and the relation of the whole to its neighbors and to the country at large. This book does not pretend to be a history of Delaware and the Eastern states, but it contains much historical matter introduced by way of illustrating phases of industrial and social development, and there are personal and local incidents and anecdotes illustrative of the character and temperament distinguishing a people isolated in some measure for three centuries by the peninsular geography of their home. It is an interpretation of the rare and somewhat elusive charm of a region distinguished by the variety of its quiet landscapes, the rich freshness of its woodlands and the unique beauty of its waters."—N Y Tribune

"One could not pick out from his book a consecutive history of Delaware or of these eastern counties of Maryland and Virginia. But he is a very intelligent man, who writes excellently, though sometimes with a little obvious intention toward the drawing-room table; he knows well the region which he describes, and loves it, yet is a man of reading, and of travel elsewhere, and takes a view of its present and its past that is nowise provincial. His historical knowledge is in general sound, and he achieves what he aims at, to explain what this rather charming but little known region is, and what it has been. The book has many illustrations, well reproduced from photographs of extraordinary merit."

+ Am Hist R 28:375 Ja '23 320w
"Delightful chronicle. His method is engagingly desultory."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 25 '22 680w
"A fascinating book." Hildegard Hawthorne
+ Int Bk R p35 D '22 40w

"This is a very pleasant book, and what is more, a very informative book. He has somewhat neglected the Brandywine Valley, most beautiful of American pastorals, but this, though he treats of Wilmington, is a little outside his theme, which is of the peninsula." H: S. Canby

+ Lit R p202 N 11 '22 360w
Nation 116:47 Ja 10 '23 130w
N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:601 D '22
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 26 '22 70w

"Mr. Vallandigham supplies a keenly intelligent account of the country and its inhabitants, and above all, communicates to the reader its peculiar nature and charm. The book will add to the number of those who are desirous of really discovering America."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 15 '22 1400w

VANCE, LOUIS JOSEPH. Linda Lee incorporated; a novel. 389p $2 Dutton 22-8240

Life in the moving picture city of Hollywood in California forms the background for this story of Lucinda Druce, the wealthy young wife of Bellamy Druce, who decides to become a movie actress. She learns the different phases of studio life and is courted in turn by many. Lynn Summerlad, the handsome moving picture hero who has been her most ardent admirer, she finally dismisses and returns to her husband.

"Although the tale is meretricious and sentimental and at times even coarse, it is well written. Mr. Vance has chosen this kind of story to write, and he has done it marvelously well. There is no real character study attempted. The whole thing would film well, without much alteration. But it is exciting and holds one's attention. We confess that we enjoyed the story. And Mr. Vance must have had his tongue in his cheek while he was writing it."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '22 450w
"You can always find plot and construction and, more, flexible, satisfying English (with a trifle of French) in a story by Mr. Vance. In 'Linda Lee Incorporated' he certainly gives quantity, but he gives quality also."

+ Lit R p746 Je 17 '22 290w

"Not in any sense of the word a badly written book. It moves smoothly and flowingly, naturally carrying the reader from one incident to another and fulfilling all the functions of the romance, suspense, a few thrills, a love affair whose course is rather jagged, but which ends just as the reader would desire it to end, and a bit of poetical posing here and there to keep one aware that the story is a romance."

+ N Y Times p19 My 7 '22 300w

VANDEN BERGH, LEONARD JOHN. On the trail of the pigmies; with a foreword by Robert H. Lowie. 264p il $3 McCann [12s 6d Unwin]

916.7 Africa, Central—Description and travel 21-15403

For descriptive note see Digest for 1921.

"Many of the investigations are extremely valuable in the case of tribes such as the Pigmies and Kavirondo, which have never before been the subject of monographic treatment."

+ Cath World 114:688 F '22 420w

"An interesting book with some excellent pictures, and, unfortunately, without the index that it deserves. The author has a rather exuberant journalistic style which occasionally ruffles us, but he is modest and frank, and his presentation of his facts is always vivid."

+ New Statesman 19:104 Ap 29 '22 330w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblenz
N Y Times p19 Ja 22 '22 950w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:116 Mr '22

"Dr. Vanden Bergh has given us a charming book—the outcome of prolonged and sympathetic studies. It is often stranger than fiction, but it bears throughout the mark of the careful observer. The photographs are of great excellence and they always have their point. Whoever wishes an engrossing evening, let him follow the trail of the pigmies."

+ Sat R 133:368 Ap 8 '22 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Mr 16 '22 1000w

VAN DENBURG, JOSEPH KING. Junior high school idea. 423p $1.50 Holt

373 Junior high schools 22-7413

The aims and practices discussed in the book have been successfully worked out in the Speyer experimental junior high school in New York city, a school maintained by the City of New York, but directed by Teachers College, Columbia university. The six hundred pupils have been selected from the public schools for their promise and the twenty teachers, for their initiative and professional spirit. The principles developed in the book are applied to the actual administration and operation of the school and classroom work. The actual teaching material in six subjects of study—English, mathematics, introductory foreign language, science, social science, and art appreciation is discussed. In later chapters the project method of study is treated, also written examinations, relative ratings and pupils' report cards, pupil self-government and teacher participation in junior high school administration.

Booklist 19:39 N '22

"Dr. Van Denburg has made a noteworthy contribution to junior high school literature. Every curriculum maker in the intermediate field should know this book. There is no purely academic tone. The book abounds in common sense. It makes delightful reading." J. M. Glass

+ Educ R 64:168 S '22 300w

Pratt p14 winter '23

Reviewed by W. S. Guiler
School R 30:477 Je '22 500w

VANDERBILT, CORNELIUS, jr. Personal experiences of a cub reporter. 212p $1.25 Sully 070 Reporters and reporting 22-12543

In the introductory chapter the author gives his reasons for entering the reportorial field, chief of which was a desire for service and for earning his way in the world by a process of brain and bodily energy. He also outlines the duties of the cub, reporter and the qualities that make for success. The rest of the book

VANDERBILT, CORNELIUS, Jr.—Continued
relates individual instances of "stories" and how they were obtained by dint of ingenuity and resourcefulness.

"The lack of literary merit in this account detracts considerably from what might have been a mildly interesting book. Mr. Vanderbilt has not natural skill in the use of words, and there are many glaring examples of this failing throughout the book, not to mention the all-too-frequent occurrence of grating solecisms."
— Lit R p795 J1 8 '22 220w

N Y Times p2 Je 25 '22 380w

"Hardly a book of importance. The author has picked a subject of no smart interest, not only to newspapermen, but to the general public as well, but the way the book is written will rob it of any appeal except perhaps, to that group of young men and women who make miserable the lives of city editors with their desire to enter the journalistic field."
— Springf'd Republican p7a O 8 '22 300w

VANDERLIP, FRANK ARTHUR. What next in Europe? 308p $2 Harcourt [8s 6d Allen & U] 330.94 Europe—Economic conditions. Peace treaty, 1919. Reconstruction (European war) 22-2352

A review of the economic situation in Europe supplementing the author's earlier book on the subject, "What happened to Europe" (Book Review Digest, 1919). The book is based on impressions gained from four months' travel thru fifteen European countries, in the latter part of 1921, and discussions with responsible government ministers, financiers, industrialists, labor leaders, and Americans at work on various welfare projects. After a general discussion of trade conditions, currencies, government budgets and debts, the author considers the economic conditions of individual European countries. The last hundred pages, which are devoted to his proposals for reconstruction, include a suggestion for the organization of a gold reserve bank of the world.

Reviewed by F: A. Ogg
Am Pol Sci R 16:507 Ag '22 190w

"Mr. Vanderlip's general thesis is set forth with deep conviction. But despite his earnestness, perhaps because of it, Mr. Vanderlip is careless of his details. Too often he neglects to check his impressions by easily available facts. The outstanding facts in the European economic situation are unbalanced budgets and inflated currencies. Mr. Vanderlip's account of these facts, of their unwholesome effects upon the economic life of nations, of the barriers they put in the way of international trade, is lucid and instructive. What is lacking is any adequate analysis of the really more fundamental facts of work and living. Impressions, after all, rather than reasoned findings are what Mr. Vanderlip, with all candor, frankly offers." A. A. Young

+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '22 470w

Booklist 18:216 Ap '22

Bookm 55:203 Ap '22 50w

"Mr. Vanderlip sees clearly and writes well, is thoroughly businesslike and yet properly and reservedly sympathetic." R. D. Williams

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 21 '22 1450w

"Probably no one in America who can speak authoritatively concerning post-war conditions in Europe has reported them so effectively or so courageously as has Mr. Vanderlip in this volume. It seems hardly too much to say that if the business, political, educational and religious leaders of America would read this book, our foreign policy would be changed forthwith." F. E. J.

+ Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser pl J1 '22 800w

Reviewed by C: A. Beard
Freeman 5:333 Jè 14 '22 310w
Int J Ethics 32:338 Ap '22 190w

Reviewed by Clive Day
Lit R p485 Mr 11 '22 440w

Reviewed by J: A. Hobson
Nation 114:sup433 Ap 12 '22 640w

"Mr. Vanderlip's book will antagonize nobody and help everyone who reads it to saner and more humane views. It will not greatly disturb anyone's equilibrium or stir him to a desire for action." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 30:24 Mr 1 '22 850w

"The present book is interesting for its reflection of the impressions derived by an experienced American business man from personal observation of Europe's economic condition. The reader will find in Mr. Vanderlip's book no thorough reconsideration of the governmental policies and programs described to him. He explains them; sometimes, as in the case of the paper inflation of Central Europe, he gives the apology for them; but searching analysis is not employed. Its defect lies in precisely this absence of thorough examination of the economic problems." A. D. Noyes

+ — N Y Times p6 F 26 '22 2350w

"Perhaps the most noteworthy fact about Mr. Vanderlip's book is, after all, this: that it sees salvation for the world in a combination of economic common sense and spirituality! The one is impotent without the other. This point of view has seldom, if ever, been so effectively expressed."

+ No Am 215:569 Ap '22 480w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:271 Je '22

Pratt p33 summer '22

St Louis p88 My '22

Sat R 133:sup70 Ap 1 '22 500w

Sat R 133:443 Ap 29 '22 640w

Spec 128:561 My 6 '22 1100w

Survey 47:901 Mr 4 '22 70w

Wis Lib Bul 18:99 Ap '22

"The work of no theorist, but of a well-trained practical observer. His report of a somewhat cursory, though intimate, investigation of most of the countries involved in the war is very readable and informing. It is infused with the American temper shown in a politic optimism, which, to me, is not completely convincing." C. R. Noyes

+ — Yale R n s 11:864 J1 '22 480w

VAN DE WATER, FREDERIC FRANKLYN.
Grey riders. 370p il $2.50 Putnam

353.9 Police—New York (state) 22-8971

"The story of the New York state troopers, organized in 1917, to provide an adequate protective system for the country sections where town constables and deputy sheriffs wore badges and did nothing. To know the troopers Mr Van de Water lived their life, catching so much of the spirit of the organization that he was given the only warrant of 'honorary trooper' that has been issued."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 19:39 N '22

"Here is suspense and excitement for the most avid reader of 'detective stuff' with the appeal to serious readers who think it worth while to follow modern development and get inspiration from courageous competency in circumstances that must be met by the brains and muscle of men rather than by the ingenuity and imagination of writers."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '22 150w

"All good reading, told freshly and vigorously, especially those that deal with a good fight. Here the author is at his best."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 20 '22 330w

Pratt p11 winter '23

St Louis 20:296 D '22

"The book is written in a rapidly moving style that conveys some of the determined spirit of the subject. The typography is good, and the illustrations clear. It is a readable, interesting book, and as a portrayal of what state troopers are and do its value is timely."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 21 '22 420w

"Told with humor and enthusiasm and a flavor that reminds one of the stories frontier-men and cowboys traditionally call forth."

+ Survey 48:220 My 6 '22 50w

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON. Contemporary American novelists, 1900-1920. 176p $1.50 Macmillan

813 American fiction—History and criticism.
Novelists, American 22-8071

This book supplements the author's "American novel." (Book Review Digest, 1921) The later volume is critical rather than historical, since he is here dealing with shifting and fluid material, with reputations that are in the making. He keeps as strictly as possible to his chosen date, 1920, as a stopping place and gives no more than a glance at work produced since then. He treats somewhat at length and in separate sections the work of Hamlin Garland, Winston Churchill, Robert Herrick, Upton Sinclair, Theodore Dreiser, Booth Tarkington, Edith Wharton, James Branch Cabell, Willa Cather and Joseph Hergesheimer and groups as "emergent types" Ellen Glasgow, Ernest Poole, and others. Under the category "the revolt from the village," he treats those authors who have broken away from the cult of the village and have shown it up for what it is, instead of as an ideal collection of people. In this last group, he considers Edgar Lee Masters, Sherwood Anderson, E. W. Howe, Sinclair Lewis, Zona Gale and others.

Booklist 18:358 J1 '22

+ Bookm 55:522 J1 '22 450w

Reviewed by D. K. Laub

+ Detroit News p11 Ag 13 '22 1150w

"By far the most attractive quality of the volume is the striking power of phrase which the author evinces in summarizing his subjects. . . This is no short cut to an understanding of the tendencies of our fiction—it is the sort of book which should come after, rather than before, an acquaintance with the writers considered. However, it may well be used as an acceptable readers' guide to the worth while in modern American fiction." C. A. Hibbard

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 J1 9 '22 640w

"It is no ordinary achievement to carry a piece of literary history to a point within one calendar year of the present moment in such terms that one cannot see how even the future is greatly to modify the account. It would be, if it were nothing more, a noteworthy feat of condensation, of sheer lucidity. The impersonal and judicial qualities which make such an achievement possible . . . need the supplement of a kind of life, of livingness, which simply is not in them. They plough the ground, but they do not sow the seed. They need, perhaps, for eventual fruitfulness, a touch of that very indiscretion which gets excited, joins issues, commits itself, enters the thick of the battle of ideas and tendencies." Wilson Follett

+ Lit R p317 D 16 '22 2500w

"Mr. Van Doren's examination of the American novel of the last twenty years is really an analysis of contemporaneous American civilization. He goes behind the printed page to the life that produced it, to what happened and is happening not only in the brains of individual artists, with their temperaments and styles, but in the communities which they express. Thus he becomes himself an historian of manners and customs and intellectual tendencies. If all the novels he discusses were destroyed, a reader in the next century could get from Mr. Van Doren's book an intelligible view of the sort of people we Americans are at this hour. That is the very essence of criticism. If Mr. Van Doren has a fault it is excess of generosity." J. Macy

+ Nation 114:571 My 10 '22 1350w

Reviewed by P. H. Boynton

New Repub 32:sup20 S 27 '22 950w

"The only authoritative and comprehensive analysis of the particularly rich and varied work of contemporary American novelists, written by a man who has a cultural background, broad interests and sympathies, a sense of humor, discernment and a clear and limpid style."

+ N Y Tribune p6 My 7 '22 50w

"Unquestionably an interesting, stimulating, and provocative book. It reveals the salient characteristics of his critical equipment: a vigorous and independent judgment, a capacity for acute analysis, fine insight. It reveals likewise an intelligent interest in ideas for their own sake and a receptivity to innovation and to vitality from which our criticism cannot help but benefit." L. R. Morris

+ Outlook 131:312 Je 14 '22 1850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:362 J1 '22

Pratt p25 autumn '22

St Louis 26:219 S '22

"If Dr. Van Doren's absolute critical standards seem to be a little broader than we should permit ourselves, still he is judicious and his relative standards are trustworthy. Whether one has read the books which Dr. Van Doren discusses or not, his criticism is very pleasant reading, and its sincere enthusiasm is infectious."

+ Spec 129:735 N 18 '22 170w

"A valuable analysis of present-day writers, not without bias, to be sure, but resting on facts, concise, judicious, discriminating, and eminently readable."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Je 25 '22 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p510 Ag 3 '22 350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:215 O '22

"An excellent account, without confusing details. Mr. Van Doren has done what nobody else has lately done; he has created a perspective for current fiction. If his perspective is here and there illusory, it is the illusion that belongs to art." Wilbur Cross

+ Yale R n s 12:186 O '22 1300w

VAN DYKE, HENRY. Companionable books. 2 391p il $2 Scribner

804 Books and reading. English literature—History and criticism 22-19632

Essays in appreciation of some well known books and authors. Contents: The book of books; Poetry in the Psalms; The good enchantment of Dickens; Thackeray and real men; George Eliot and real women; The poet of immortal youth (Keats); The recovery of joy (Wordsworth); The glory of the imperfect (Browning); A quaint comrade by quiet streams (Walton); A sturdy believer (Samuel Johnson); A puritan plus poetry (Emerson); An adventurer in a velvet jacket (Stevenson).

Booklist 19:77 D '22

"Treated with the sympathetic handling of one who loves books not only for their novelty or brilliance but because of their companionship and because of the insight they reveal into the personality of their authors. Particularly sympathetic is the chapter on Dickens."

+ Bookm 56:774 F '23 120w

"An elderly professor whose criticism contains bone and meat is Dr. Henry van Dyke. I have always found his verses weak and his stories sugary. It is an agreeable surprise to find in his 'Companionable Books' much sound, virile writing, which is only slightly weakened by touches of religious and moralistic plavacy." J. Macy

+ Nation 115:sup621 D 6 '22 250w

N Y Times p18 D 24 '22 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:26 Ja '23

Pratt p28 winter '23

St Louis 21:12 Ja '23

Springf'd Republican p7a D 17 '22 250w

VAN DYKE, JOHN CHARLES. Open spaces; incidents of nights and days under the blue sky. 272p $2 (9s) Scribner

796 Camping. Outdoor life. Fishing. Hunting 22-7213

"As a boy, Mr. Van Dyke was taken to the great Northwest. He followed in canoes the far waterways of the wild geese, he hunted the forests, rode the plains, and slept by the prairie pool. Again and again, through boyhood and manhood, he came and went in the mountains, the Bad Lands, the buffalo ranges, the deserts.' And as in retrospect Mr. Van Dyke leads us over the old paths, he discourses pleasantly of the delights of 'sleeping out,' of riding in the open, of riding the cattle ranges, of the characteristics of that almost extinct 'species,' the Cowboy, of experiences in the Colorado and Mohave deserts, of mountain trailings, of water-journeys via dug-out and canoe, of trout fishing and trolling, of spearing, of hunting game birds, wolves, bear and deer."—Boston Transcript

VAN DYKE, J. C:—Continued

Booklist 18:355 J1 '22

"Never were vicarious loiterings more enthralling than these through the hunting and fishing grounds of Minnesota, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming and Dakota, California and Arizona."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 19 '22 450w
Cleveland p64 Ag '22

"A genuine love of nature pervades the book, a genuine appreciation of lakes and forests and rivers for their own sake; and this enthusiasm of the author conveys itself to the reader in a graceful and spirited style that makes his feelings contagious."

+ Lit R p611 Ap 22 '22 120w

"This volume is a book every boy will love, longing to emulate its author; and it is a book that every man who has ever had a chance (however brief) at life in the open will enjoy. . . . Professor Van Dyke's style is simple and strong, with no 'fine writing' falsely so called; and his direct and vigorous paragraphs with their scientific precision and their artistic grace call up in our minds the images he is seeking to evoke. His enthusiasm is always under control; and he paints his pictures with the utmost economy of stroke." Brander Matthews

+ N Y Times p3 My 7 '22 2650w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:298 Je '22
R of Rs 65:558 My '22 100w
St Louis 20:218 S '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 1 '22 1100w

VAN DYKE, PAUL. Catherine de Médicis. 2v
2 389;447p il $9 Scribner

B or 92 22-23125

The volumes are the result of ten years' painstaking research in archives, documents, letters and memoirs. The author introduces himself as neither an apologist nor a prosecutor, his intention being to draw a portrait, not to pronounce judgment. "It is impossible to understand what Catherine de Médicis did and what she was without knowing the public events in which for thirty years she was involved, but the attempt has been made to let the reader see them as far as possible from the center of her life outward." (Preface) Notes, bibliography, index.

Booklist 19:157 F '23

Boston Transcript p3 D 9 '22 1700w

"It is amazing that without sacrificing truth or indulging in meretricious ornament an author, clearing the mist from a complicated and darkened background, could have produced such a thoroughly readable book. . . . Here is a book of research without pedantry." M. F. Egan

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 21 '23 2100w

"Certainly he has presented the chief figures of the time in the round, made them alive and plausible. What he occasionally lacks in distinction of style is made up in directness. . . . Simply as history, this is a notable achievement. It gives the whole story, the complete picture. It may be even redundant at times, but that is a fault on the right side." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p20 D 17 '22 1050w

VAN SCHAICK, JOHN, Jr. Little corner never conquered; the story of the American Red Cross war work for Belgium. 282p il $2 Macmillan

940.477 European war—Hospitals, charities, etc. Red cross. European war—Belgium
22-11091

The little corner was that small strip of Belgium which blocked the way of the Germans to the English Channel and guarded certain gates of entry into the war zone. In this little section of West Flanders four armies were operating and when the American Red Cross reached there in the early fall of 1917, there were comparatively few civilians left. The book tells something of the story of the war in Flanders, and of the work of the American Red cross in helping Belgian hospitals, cheering the soldiers, saving the children and helping both the refugees and those who refused to flee. The king and queen of the Belgians move continually thru the pages and one chapter is devoted to the queen's hospital. Another chapter is devoted to the "great ambassador" (Brand Whitlock) and one to Cardinal Mercier.

"Authoritative as well as interesting."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:719 N '22 50w

Booklist 19:48 N '22

"The story of the Red Cross activities is intense in its graphic interest. Especially touching are many of the anecdotes of the children—some told by themselves—which must appeal to every sensitive heart."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 19 '22 340w

"A straightforward chronicle, quite without graces of style though warm with enthusiasm. The book is, because of its comparative brevity and its consequently sketchy character, too slight to add much to the history of Red Cross activities, but it presents in succinct form the progress of the work carried on by the American Commission, and it has the great virtues of lack of heroics and authoritativeness."

+ Lit R p908 Ag 26 '22 220w

"Mr. van Schaick's terse account gives the reader an excellent idea of what was accomplished."

+ N Y Times p19 J1 2 '22 1350w

"Besides giving a comprehensive report of the work of the commission, the author presents somewhat lifelike sketches of notable personalities. It is to pages like these that historians of the future will turn when they wish to distinguish the facts of character from myth and popular tradition."

+ No Am 216:423 S '22 900w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:606 D '22

"The author, who was American Red Cross Commissioner to Belgium during the war, is able to contribute a great deal of interesting information about what went on in and near the headquarters. The prime purpose of the volume is to tell the story of the American Red Cross war work. This has been prepared after a sufficient interval of time to admit of the careful survey of what was actually accomplished."

+ R of Rs 66:222 Ag '22 170w

VAN TYNE, CLAUDE HALSTEAD. Causes of the war of independence; being the first volume of a history of the founding of the American republic. 499p $5 Houghton [21s Constable]

973.3 United States—History—Revolution—Causes
22-16374

The author, who is professor of history in the University of Michigan, examines the period during which the colonies were advancing toward independence and explains the growth of the spirit which made Americans discontented with their position in the British empire. He looks back of the events which directly brought on the Revolution and shows the conditions of colonial government which bred independence, the development of representative government in the colonies, the social, intellectual and religious forces which prevented unity, the gradual growth of the patriotic movement and the conflict between conservatives and radicals here. The specific measures that raised rebellion are in turn considered, the book closing with the meeting of the Continental congress and the first bloodshed.

"The general reader and the busy teacher will find this volume a convenient and trustworthy short-cut to an extensive and somewhat specialized literature. The author's attitude throughout is even-tempered and unruffled." A. M. Schlesinger

+ Am Hist R 28:327 Ja '23 1300w

Booklist 19:48 N '22

Bookm 56:354 N '22 190w

"Professor Van Tyne has gone deep into records and historical sources. His notations are most satisfactory and copious. His text is not only a boon to the reader who dips deep into history, but it is lucid enough and provokes such interest that the everyday reader can enjoy every word, while the specialist who studies deeply will not only cherish this text but find many doors opened to him by the footnotes. Not many historical works in a season will be accepted by so many readers with so keen a relish." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '22 780w

"In this first volume of a history of the founding of the American Republic Professor Van Tyne once more shows himself a leading member of that new school of American historians (if, indeed, it can any longer be called 'new') which approaches the controversial questions of the past history without prejudice or bias, and makes an honest attempt to understand the point of view of both sides in a dispute." H. E. Egerton

+ Eng Hist R 38:113 Ja '23 700w

"It is evident that the causes traditionally assigned to explain the American revolution are inadequate. We must search deeper; we must seek for the ultimate causes in the history of the colonies, and find them in the evolution of their political theories, their institutions, and their ideals in the peculiar frontier conditions under which they lived. This is what Mr. Van Tyne does, and it is this which gives distinction to his book. The book with all of its merits, which are very great, is not without its defects. There is too much tendency to underestimate the importance and significance of colonial affairs merely because they were conducted on a small scale." R. D. W. C.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p6 O 22 '22 1000w

"We cannot complain that Mr. Van Tyne does not tell us what happened, and in view of his excellent and scholarly narrative of the antecedents of the War of Independence perhaps we should not begrudge him occasional rather amateurish excursions into the realm of philosophical interpretations." R. L. Schuyler

+ Nation 115:416 O 18 '22 1300w

"This volume has all the qualities of modern scientific American historical scholarship, and the defects of those qualities. It is honest, painstaking, thorough, impartial, judicious and well-proportioned. But it is also dry, lacking in the color, the vivid personalities and the sense of movement that one expects of first-rate historical literature." S. E. Morison

+ New Repub 32:sup15 O 25 '22 1400w

"This is an honest, straightforward and candid book. The author can lay claim neither to the discovery of much original material nor to very much literary skill in telling his story, but he has read all the most up-to-date secondary authorities and has made a determined effort to arrive at an impartial judgment of a really complicated case. The more one reads the book, the greater grows one's respect for the author." K. B.

+ New Statesman 20:178 N 11 '22 1350w

N Y Times p6 N 26 '22 2450w

N Y Tribune p9 N 19 '22 300w

Outlook 132:344 O 25 '22 50w

Pratt p32 winter '23

R of Rs 66:446 O '22 120w

"Professor Van Tyne writes well and quotes freely and with excellent effect from a variety of sources. His quotations, as well as his own sense of humour, give reality and liveliness to his narrative and, above all, his psychological view of the historical process is convincing; one feels generally that he has penetrated behind the historical facts to the causes and motives."

+ Spec 129:499 O 14 '22 1800w

"Prof Van Tyne's trenchant analysis, his vivid portrayal of characters and his dramatic but carefully-detailed narrative of events give this new work an appeal to the literary reader or the average citizen that matches its authoritativeness."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a O 8 '22 1000w

Spring'd Republican p7a O 29 '22 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p602 S 21 '22 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p607 S 28 '22 1100w

VAN VECHTEN, CARL. Peter Whiffle; his life and works. 247p $2.50 Knopf

22-8592

Peter Whiffle, the subject of this fictitious biography, was an eager, versatile, vacillating youth, who seems to sum up in his character and person, the restlessness and curiosity of his age. Life in the Ohio town in which he was born in the eighties had made no arrangement for one of his temperament and college did not help. He read omnivorously, but dreaded and avoided every kind of work, being willing to endure suffering rather than be forced into it. He went to New York, living there a life of vagrancy, or when dire necessity urged, taking an odd job. When a rich uncle unexpectedly left him a fortune he went without delay to Paris. There he continued reading, and collecting notes for books which he never wrote. We meet him in Paris, in Florence, in New York, always collecting notes and sensations and incessantly talking. A continuous procession of restless moderns passes thru these pages—writers, musicians, artists, actors, radical thinkers, many of them under their own and sometimes distinguished names. He almost married once, but just couldn't do it at the last, a decision always being a cause of physical pain to him. He died at thirty-four, making the author of this book his literary executor.

"Such a sure-footed and airy-heeled promenade of the imagination that apologies for him on the basis of inexperience are rendered pointless by the sureness of his stride."

+ Dial 73:353 S '22 70w

Reviewed by H. L. Stuart

Freeman 6:19 S 13 '22 1100w

"Reading 'Peter Whiffle' recalls Huneker, and Cabell, and Arthur Machen, whose disciple Peter aspired to be. It is a recital of strange adventures, a catalogue of curious scenes, and books and plays. Some of the folk in it I have seen eating their dinners—sedately—within a fortnight. Some of the fictitious names conceal personalities which may be guessed without serious difficulty. . . . But Peter should have been created with a little more care. He should have been made either less or more real. He should not have been contemptuously named 'Whiffle.'" E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 108:395 Ap 22 '22 190w

"Perhaps good nature is what is wrong with 'Peter Whiffle.' Certainly it needs something acid, some flavor of bitterness, to sharpen its mild tang."

+ Lit R p780 J1 1 '22 270w

"It is strange that so few authors have written biographies of imaginary persons. The mixture is particularly tempting. In 'Peter Whiffle' Carl Van Vechten has crossed the two literary forms fascinatingly. His hero has a fin de siècle look about him, as if he were, perhaps, a version of Stephen Crane or of one of his contemporaries. Whether in Paris or in New York he glitters in his setting. And that setting is even more of a triumph than the character of Peter. Mr. Van Vechten, however he made up his protagonist, has taken his setting from life: actual persons appear in it, actual places. He deals with it now racily, now poetically. He is full of allusions, of pungencies, of learning in his times. He knows how to laugh, he scorns solemnity, he has filled his book with wit and erudition. He is a civilized writer." Carl Van Doren

VAN VECHTEN, CARL—Continued

+ Nation 114:569 My 10 '22 380w
New Repub 31:312 Ag 9 '22 260w

"'Peter Whiffle' is sparkling stuff. It is light, indeed, but it is delightful fare after the solid dishes of our solemn realists."

+ N Y Times p21 J1 2 '22 550w

"The mood of railery is attained easily and maintained almost to the end. The tale sags just a bit before it is done, but perfection in the manner which Mr. Van Vechten has chosen for himself is never achieved in our day by anybody but Max Beerbohm. 'Peter Whiffle' is at least as good as Huxley's 'Crome yellow,' and both are distinguished additions to the literature of cleverness. . . The best portion of the book deals with Paris, which Mr. Van Vechten has re-created with great charm." Heywood Broun

+ N Y World p11 My 6 '22 450w

"The book may be chuckled over and delighted in. It is not at all burlesque by any means: a good deal of sound argument and many interesting ideas filter into the conversation of Peter Whiffle and his friends."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 370w
Wis Lib Bul 18:185 J1 '22

VAN VORST, MARIE. Queen of Karmania. 358p $1.75 Small [7s 6d Mills & B.]

22-7203

"The scene is laid in a hypothetical kingdom in Central Europe. The hero is a young American engineer who has gone over to Karmania to construct a railroad tunnel, and who from the time he arrives is enmeshed in the conventional tangle of intrigue, revolution, spies, and raids. At the same time he manages to fall in love with the queen, who is deposed by a convenient uprising with the result that they can be married and live happily ever after."—Lit R

Booklist 18:370 J1 '22

"It is a cheerful, amusing tale, doubtless written with less art than the modern psychological novel, but it also has its place in the world of books."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ap 22 '22 240w

"The story is written with a freshness and enthusiasm which does much to redeem it. The leading characters belong to the good old school in which a hero was a hero and a heroine was a heroine. But the story moves with animation, and the setting is vivid and pretty enough for the purpose. All in all it is a good book of its kind."

+ — Lit R p744 Je 17 '22 310w

N Y Times p19 My 7 '22 350w

"A romantic, fantastic, but wholly delightful story."

+ Spec 128:695 Je 3 '22 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 3 '22 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p278 Ap 21 '22 80w

VAN WAGENEN, JARED. The cow. (Open country bks.) 153p il $1.50 Macmillan

636.2 Cows 22-20153

"This little volume is not an attempt to reduce cow-keeping to cold demonstrations of chemistry, and physiology and bacteriology—and cash—but rather to strike the personal note and to speak of dairying on one old hill farm and to put into language a little of the glow and the glamor of real farm life." (Preface) The treatment is rather from the point of view of the farmer-naturalist than of the modern dairyman and includes such things as cow-pastures and cow-paths, old stone walls and old home-sfeads. Index.

Boston Transcript p1 D 23 '22 320w

"A humane little book for readers who are interested in the country, cows, or men."
+ Lit R p342 D 23 '22 250w

VEDDER, HENRY CLAY. Fundamentals of Christianity; a study of the teaching of Jesus and Paul. 250p $2 Macmillan

230 Christianity. Jesus Christ—Teaching. Paul, Saint 22-3035

The author's answer to the question "What is Christianity?" is based on his belief (1) that man's conception of the character of God is not static but always growing; (2) that the highest forms of this progressive knowledge of God are found in the Old and New Testament and culminate in the words and teachings of Jesus; (3) that the teaching of Jesus is the standard by which all Christian teaching must be judged and that Christian doctrine, program and methods rest on the authority of Jesus alone.

Booklist 18:347 J1 '22

Cleveland p53 Ag '22

J Religion 2:333 My '22 60w

"The book cannot be said to make any contribution to the historical reconstruction of primitive Christianity. It fails as a full statement of the results reached by the historical method because it underestimates the mystical in religion. But as a vigorous polemic against obscurantism and an able popular statement of moderate views based upon critical principles it will serve a useful purpose." C. C. McCown
— + J Religion 2:648 N '22 680w

"It voices a very much needed reaction against traditional dogma, but, like all reactions, is partial." Lyman Abbott

— Outlook 130:701 Ap 26 '22 680w

Pratt p8 autumn '22

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Boys' hook of whalers. 210p il $1.65 Dodd

639.2 Whaling 22-17948

Two boys having seen an old whaler starting out on a long cruise, appeal to the curator of the Old Dartmouth Historical Society in New Bedford to tell them all about the whaling industry from the beginning. The book is the result. It gives the most important facts about whales, whale ships, and whalemén. It tells about their lives and dangers; how they capture, cut-in and boil down the whales and what the whaling industry meant to New England. It includes whalemén's chanties and verbal extracts from logs, besides stories of fights with the whales and with savages.

"An entertaining book."

+ Ind 109:248 O 28 '22 20w

Lit R p208 N 11 '22 130w

"For boys and men who want to know of the romance of the whaling business and of the technical side this book will prove a wealth of information and knowledge." Vivian Radcliffe

+ N Y World p7e O 22 '22 90w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Deep sea hunters; adventures on a whaler. 242p $1.75 Appleton

22-4920

The good ship Hector after a thoro overhauling sets out on a whaling trip. The crew is a motley and humorous one and Tim and Tom, two lads who persuaded the captain to take them, have one adventure after another. The submarine attack, the finding of a strange message attached to the foot of an albatross, and the hunting of sea elephants are just a few of the thrills the boys experience. After a stay of several weeks on Elephant Island about fifteen hundred miles from the South Pole, the Hector sets sail for home with a splendid cargo.

"A very pleasantly written story. There is a nice mixture on the pages of humor and information. Mr. Verrill knows his whale, his sea, and his reader, and the book is so natural in spite of the desirable spectacular things that keep happening!"

+ Lit R p659 My 13 '22 200w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Home radio: how to make and use it. 105p il 75c (3s 6d) Harper

654.6 Radio telephone 22-7278

"This book is not intended as a treatise on radio telephony nor has any attempt been made to enter deeply into an explanation or discussion of the scientific phase of radio transmission. It is intended and designed particularly for the use of amateurs, boys, and those who wish to know how to make, use or adjust wireless telephone instruments and who are not interested in, or do not care to learn, the technicalities of practical electricity as applied to wireless work." (Preface)

Booklist 18:318 Je '22

"Under 'Useful Things to Remember,' I am afraid the author ran short of material—there are so many obviously childish precautions given. My real complaint, however, is that some quite impossible and unscientific statements are made; these eight pages should never have been printed in their present form." Pierre Boucheron.

— Bookm 55:640 Ag '22 220w

Cleveland p57 Ag '22

Lit R p727 Je 10 '22 160w

Reviewed by T. L. Masson

N Y Times p27 Je 11 '22 250w

"Popular and written in interesting style, but not entirely accurate."

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:353 Jl '22

Pratt p18 summer '22

St Louis 20:123 Je '22

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Panama, past and present. 262p il $2 Dodd

918.6 Panama—Description and travel 22-432

A popular description of the Republic of Panama, including an outline of its history, an account of the canal, chapters on Veraguas, Chiriqui and Darien and on Panama's resources. An appendix supplies a variety of statistics.

"To prospective travellers, business men as well as tourists, Mr. Verrill's study of Panama will be of practical value, for beside the travel suggestions scattered throughout the text, appendices give much carefully detailed useful information for tourists." F. B.

Boston Transcript p9 Mr 4 '22 840w

Cleveland p87 N '22

"This volume presents a picture of Panama that has been needed for some time. Sight-seers have dashed across the Isthmus. But few, even of the Americans domiciled in Panama have gone up or down the coast. This Mr. Verrill does in three chapters on 'Veraguas the Golden,' on 'Chiriqui,' and on 'Darien the Unknown.' With an eye for the fascinating, in phrase as well as in fact, the author has simply described the Republic of Panama as it is seen by a man who comes and goes. He has avoided the cut and dried guidebook method."

+ Lit R p476 Mr 4 '22 380w

"Rich with facts and flowing of phrase. Mr. Verrill wields a fascinating pen, ever willing to elaborate the charming and the fantastic. Mr. Verrill has produced a more interesting book than the usual account of a traveler. He has subordinated or eliminated the personal, in the interests of clear exposition, and even though he sometimes indulges in profuse rhetoric and unduly sentimental descriptions and florid adjectives, he has rendered distinct service."

+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 16 '22 2250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:242 My '22

R of Rs 65:224 F '22 60w

St Louis 21:14 Ja '23

Wis Lib Bul 18:184 Jl '22

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Radio detectives. 253p $1.75 Appleton

22-14993

A thrilling story for older boys. One night Tom Pauling and his friend Frank picked up a strange message while working with their radio set. The next night they heard the same party again and decided the stranger was a rum-runner. After much maneuvering with their radios and those of their friends the boys narrowed it down to the block from which the strange messages came, and then notified a detective. But no radio sets could be located in the block, and they gave up their detective work for a time. Then while experimenting with underwater radio they came across the strange messages once more, and were finally able to set the police on the trail of a dangerous band of criminals.

"A fine tale of adventure in the heart of the big city that will please even the boy (if there is one) who is not a radio fan."

+ Lit R p207 N 11 '22 110w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Radio for amateurs; how to use, make and install wireless telephone and telegraph instruments. 288p $2 Dodd

654.6 Radio communication 22-10856

"A handbook and guide to amateur radio operators, to help them in an understanding of radio telegraphy and telephony, to teach them the functions of the various parts of radio apparatus, to show them how the various instruments are constructed and to supply them with information which will enable them to install and make their own outfits. The author has endeavored to make his descriptions and explanations simple, concise and easily understood; he has taken types rather than definite makes and designs of the various instruments as subjects for discussion, and he has tried to make the diagrams so simple and plain that any boy can understand them and work from them."—Preface

Cleveland p77 S '22

"Mr. Verrill is an old hand at writing boys' books, and apparently he works with equal ease and lack of effort whether his subject be carpentry or radio." Dudley Nichols

Lit R p741 Je 17 '22 90w

St Louis 20:213 S '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:181 Jl '22

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Rivers and their mysteries. 213p il $1.50 Duffield

551.48 Rivers 22-4603

"First comes the romance of the earth's great streams as expressed in the ancient faiths, in history and in literature. Science is then called in to show how rivers, formed from rainfall, are carried to the sea, lifted as vapor to the clouds and again precipitated, all in an endless round of which only the most salient feature is conspicuously in evidence. The author next tells the story of the life which abounds in rivers, passing by easy transition to the services they render as means of intercommunication, as sources of water power and for irrigation of fields and crops. Salt rivers, sulphur rivers, ice rivers, glacial rivers, rivers that have no outlet and rivers that run underground are all included in the survey. Emphasizing the part which great rivers have had in determining the sites of great cities, Mr. Verrill also shows how effectively man has taken leaves from the book of nature in his resort to the construction of artificial aqueducts and canals."—Boston Transcript.

VERRILL, A. H.—Continued

Booklist 18:319 Je '22

"The book is rich in the elements that appeal to nature lovers, and the author's skillful combination of fact, description and appeal to the imagination is nowhere more evident than in his account of 'Important and Famous Rivers.'"

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '22 400w
Cleveland p75 S '22

"The author has a style with color and sparkle, while his wide travels have given him first-hand information. The readability of the book is enhanced by the fact that the descriptive element, in comparison with the expository, is surprisingly large, and the pictures of a typical Canadian river and a typical South American river are especially well done."

+ Lit R p843 Jl 29 '22 170w

— N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:25 Ap '22

"Described in an appropriately flowing style that holds the interest unflaggingly."

+ Outlook 131:172 My 24 '22 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:344 Jl '22

"He gives a fresh and striking presentation of a subject that has heretofore been scantily treated or to a great extent overlooked by authors of geographical text-books."

R of Rs 65:558 My '22 60w

St Louis 20:297 D '22

Wis Lib Bul 18:132 My '22

VIAUD, LOUIS MARIE JULIEN. See Loti, P., pseud.

VINAL, HAROLD. White April. 46p $1.25
Yale univ. press [6s 6d Milford]

811

22-6835

"'White April' is part of the Yale Series of the works of younger poets. It contains some thirty, more or less, short lyrical and descriptive poems, several of which are reprinted from magazines. These poems in the main express the search for the ideal and its imaginative fulfillment in dreams, rather than open war upon ugly reality. The poet expresses a sensitiveness to the more delicate forms of beauty, April rather than June, daffodils rather than roses, memory rather than hot present emotion. The sense of these loved things is so keenly felt that he seems often happily blind to the things that are trying to obtrude themselves upon him, and in his own metaphor, having seen many things too beautiful for words, he now sits, a miser counting his gold."—Lit R

"His first volume leaves much to be desired. [It] is apt to weary the reader with the repetition of moods that seem so fragilely stretched that they will shatter at the touch. His crying after beauty past or for beauty to come is so prevalent as to appear almost petulant, as though there were no dignity in life but only in the intellectual representation of it."

— + Bookm 55:649 Ag '22 120w

"A very charming first book of poems and it fills us with expectation of an increasing distinction and power in the poet's future work." W. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 25 '22 1000w
Lit R p660 My 13 '22 200w

"Mr. Vinal has a fanciful eye and a gift of easy picturization which lead him, however delightfully, into over-frequent enumerations of objects of 'old loveliness.' His nature is a sensitive one, not yet roughly bruised, one feels. Then also, the influence of other poets is strong upon him—particularly that of Miss Millay. His ship sonnets, showing lines of fine beauty, are too often like David Morton's in that they possess grace, ease, ready imagery, but little else. Mr. Vinal shows promise, but has yet largely to find himself." G. B. S.

+ — New Repub 32:226 O 25 '22 150w

"Mr. Vinal repeats the old formulas with refreshing economy in his love poems. He has yet to acquire a more workmanlike vocabulary."

+ — Spec 128:758 Je 17 '22 30w

"Haunted by the melodies of the true lyricism. His themes are age-old, but worked out with delicacy, restraint, and flavor. He is a pleasing poet."

+ Spring'd Republican p16 Je 23 '22 260w

"Pursuing the path along which his 'lyric cry' leads us we shall find him very near to the core of poetry; for his little fancies are not devices clothed in ornamental language, but seem to come to him ready moulded in dainty verse form."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p415 Je 22 '22 300w

VINCE, CHARLES. Wayfarers in Arcady. 168p $2 Putnam [7s 6d P. Allen]

824 Sussex, England

22-3578

"Mr. Vince's Arcady is Sussex. Of the twenty-six short essays in his book almost all have the Downs for direct inspiration. The first paper tells how a sick man came to the chalk hills in search of rest and quiet, and found them both in looking out in two green valleys where 'none came and nothing had ever happened.' The other papers may be regarded as embodying the thoughts that came to him out of the seeming emptiness—the fancies suggested by the dark and turreted walls of the woods in winter, by the sheep wandering across the green curves like the gentle white clouds of summer; by the wind; and above all by the roads. It is the enchantment of roads that Mr. Vince finds in Sussex."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland p64 Ag '22

"For any one attuned to a leisurely and wandering imagination Mr. Vince's book will pass a very pleasant hour."

+ Lit R p512 Mr 18 '22 330w

"He writes of the Sussex Downs, of country breakfasts, and of mad shepherds with a pleasing inconsequence."

+ Spec 127:309 S 3 '21 80w

Spring'd Republican p13a Ap 2 '22 280w

"Mr. Vince sets the reader at ease at once; he is too conscious of the magic to presume to analyse it; he is content to recount how the spell works on himself."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 14 '21 500w

VOGT, VON OGDEN. Art and religion. 265p il $5 Yale univ. press [21s Milford]

246 Art and religion. Church architecture 22-1390

"Mr. Vogt, who for many years has studied church architecture, music and liturgy from the point of view of a minister anxious to make the church a living reality in the community, here sets forth a plea for the unity of religion and art which is based on much concrete experience, past and present. He proves conclusively that the ugliness of so many church buildings is not necessitated by economy."—Survey

Boston Transcript p6 F 11 '22 190w

Cath World 116:253 N '22 1200w

"The message of this book to churchmen is important and greatly needed. It will promote a recognition of the fact that the arts of the painter, decorator, architect, musician, and liturgist are languages which speak with particular potency to many. The book, moreover, makes an appeal broader than its announced intention. Its sound philosophy makes it a distinct contribution to the literature of aesthetics." Walter Sargent

+ J Religion 2:325 My '22 1050w

"Mr. Vogt has produced a book of the utmost value from half a dozen points of view, and it can only do a great amount of good. Strong sincerity and very real devotional spirit inform it throughout. It is justly destructive in its criticisms, but it is equally constructive and expressed in terms of moderation and charity. Incidentally it is not only a piece of acute analysis and lucid thinking, it is also expressed in clear and admirable English, and is, as well, a model of distinguished bookmaking." R. A. Cram

+ Lit R p7 S 9 '22 2150w

"Beautifully and clearly written, it is at the same time profound and based on wide reading, and both the author and the publishers are to be congratulated on it."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 5 '22 270w

"An unusual book that is likely to be widely discussed for some time to come. The book is unique in that it discusses at the same time significant technical questions and the whole range of theoretical, aesthetic and philosophical considerations that enter into the problem." B. L.

Survey 48:250 My 13 '22 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 11 '22 100w

VON ENGELN, OSCAR DIEDRICH. Inheriting the earth; or the geographical factor in national development. 379p $2 Macmillan

573.4 Anthropogeography. Nationalism and nationality 22-11679

The object of the author's inquiry is to ascertain how the riches of all the regions of the earth's surface can be made available to all peoples under amicable and just conditions. He shows how nationality in its last analysis is geographic and how, by a proper respect for nations as geographic units, a full recognition of the free trade principle, and a cessation of imperialistic expansion, the most efficient utilization of both temperate and tropical lands can be brought about. A great part of the book is devoted to the conquest of the tropics and suggestions for the development of backward peoples for their own and the common benefit of mankind.

Am Pol Sci R 17:140 F '23 60w

R of Rs 66:223 Ag '22 90w

"The book is full of sound economics, which are presented in a form likely to be interesting to the most casual reader."

+ Spec 129:877 D 9 '22 380w

Springf'd Republican p10 J1 26 '22 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 28 '22 50w

W

WADE, GEORGE WOOSUNG. New Testament history; with a contribution by J. H. Wade. 690p $7 Dutton [18s Methuen]

225.9 Bible. New Testament—History (Eng ed 22-20549)

A work of comprehensive scope covering the history, criticism and theology of the New Testament. Part one embraces a description of Palestine in New Testament times, an account of political and religious developments among the Jews, of the Roman empire at that time, of Jewish institutions, and of the ideas and methods of Jewish historians. Part two explains the results of textual and documentary criticism. Part three contains a narrative of the ministry of Jesus, based on the earliest sources, a history of the Christian church during the apostolic age and a sketch of the historic growth of New Testament theology. Maps and plans. Index.

"The outstanding characteristics of the work are frankness and impartiality. The book is a veritable mine of material for the student of the New Testament. It is entirely lacking in dogmatism, so much so that in some places it is rather difficult, after the author has presented two opposing sides, to discover which he adheres to. And all of it is permeated with a fine spirit of reverence." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p8 S 30 '22 580w

J Religion 3:106 Ja '23 50w

"It deserves almost unqualified commendation. It is really a remarkable achievement. So far as we know, there is no other book in English which gives so complete a survey as Dr. Wade's. That it will become, like his 'Old Testament History,' a standard text-book in all theological schools may be confidently predicted. The most serious omission in the book is that of a bibliography."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p474 J1 20 '22 2250w

WADE, MRS MARY HAZELTON (BLANCHARD). Real Americans. 277p il $1.65 Little 920 United States—Biography. Analytics 22-18643

Short sketches of the life and activities of six famous Americans, for boys and girls from ten to fifteen. Contents: Theodore Roosevelt, Herbert Clarke Hoover, Leonard Wood, John Burroughs, Mark Twain, Edward Everett Hale.

Booklist 19:165 F '23

Cleveland p83 N '22

"Pleasant reading for children."

+ Lit R p206 N 11 '22 70w

"In 'Real Americans' will be found the stories of these men told in such an interesting manner that children of all ages will read them and remember them." Vivian Radcliffe

+ N Y World p6e O 22 '22 110w

WAGNER, CHARLES ABRAHAM. Poems of the soil and sea. 62p $1.50 Knopf

811

22-22918

The author is the winner of the Knopf publication prize for 1922. This prize, offered to Columbia undergraduates, consists of the publication each year of that book by an undergraduate which is judged most deserving. The first award was made in 1921.

"Mr. Wagner's controlling intelligence is strikingly free. A surprisingly small proportion of his beauties are trite; his rhythms are often original. He possesses already much of the necessary technical equipment for a poetic interpretation of life."

+ Lit R p342 D 23 '22 350w

"Simplicity, the artful artlessness of the skilled workman, and the sincerity of the true lyricist, dominate Wagner's little volume."

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 7 '23 500w

Reviewed by Glenway Westcott

N Y Tribune p27 D 10 '22 230w

"There are in his book certain signs that he has a proper notion of the stuff of which poetry is made, and some conception of how to make it. He has something of poetic magic about many of his phrases, and despite mixed and imperfectly realized figures of speeches, some memorable comparisons."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 430w

WALDRON, WEBB. Road to the world. 416p $1.90 Century

22-6315

But for the lack of something in his make-up Stan Hilgert would not have been, at the age of twenty-six when the reader parts with him, the self-confessed failure that he was. Because he was afraid to fight as a boy, he smarted under the consciousness of being a coward, lived his childhood under a cloud and groped blindly among the mysteries of life he dared not explore. Later he partially retrieved himself in his own and the community's eyes by his literary gifts. But he failed in this field also thru lack of decision, and the courage to be himself. When the girl he loved gave him up after years of patient waiting, even his half-hearted spurts of energy seemed to be paralyzed.

"One might wish that the skill and discernment of this author had been more adequate. But the thing moves truly with a kind of Scandinavian consistence and, though I am a little weary of the incipient cosmic urge in fiction, I stuck to Mr. Waldron's novel to the end and was glad to do it." Sidney Howard

WALDRON, WEBB—Continued

+ — Bookm 55:525 J1 '22 500w

"There is something strong and fine and void of sentimentality in the whole treatment of the book which makes it one of the most promising of recent novels." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 2 '22 750w

"In his first novel, Mr. Waldron has dealt well with entirely American backgrounds. He can accurately present a scene, an indigenous group of people. The aperture of his camera is small, but the picture distinct. One's final impression of his book is of a tonelessly sincere, second-rate, realistic novel. The volume bears no particular impress of style, no wealth of significance, yet its spare delineation comes as a relief after much literary buncombe. Its author's attitude towards his material manifests intellectual integrity. We are interested in his future." W: R. Benet

+ — Lit R p667 My 20 '22 540w

"Mr. Waldron does not point morals or ride a theory, or even suggest subtly any such application of his material. He has been interested in setting down a sensitive, intelligent boy with a distinct gift for writing. He has made a book alive with real characters, rather casually drawn, and so full of the American scene that it almost becomes the American panorama. A good book, and well, though somewhat unevenly, written."

+ New Repub 31:58 Je 7 '22 400w

WALEY, ARTHUR. Nō plays of Japan. 270p il $5 Knopf [18s Allen & U.]

895 Japanese drama

22-7958

The book contains translations of twenty Nō plays and summaries of seventeen more. There are some two hundred and fifty of these plays extant, written between the fourteenth and sixteenth centuries. The Nō art owes most to the genius of two men, Kwanami Kiyotsugu and his son Seami Motokiyo (1363-1444) both of whom played the triple rôle of author, actor and musical composer. Seami left behind him a number of treatises from which our present knowledge of the art has been derived. Mr. Waley provides an introduction describing stage settings, costumes and properties and tracing the origins of the plays. The illustrations include a plan of a fifteenth century theater in Kyoto and of a modern stage.

Reviewed by L. W. Dodd

Lit R p668 My 20 '22 1440w

"This beautiful book is full of beautiful images and elegiac reflections. As a piece of translation it is manifestly in no need of praise; as a literary discovery, influence, and model its value for us is by no means equally clear. The playlets are thin and wraith-like. They are like the shades of the underworld, and no Odysseus will ever give them a drink of that vintage which can make them speak." Ludwig Lewisohn

+ — Nation 114:501 Ap 26 '22 950w

"Of the distinction, the flower of these *Nō*s, Mr. Waley seems in his translations to have caught a great deal. Only in one respect does he seem lacking—the musical values of the lines; he does not seem to have an ear either fine or sensitive enough for the poetic necessities of the best passages. Otherwise it must be said that his selections are admirably varied; the short introductory notes appear where they are truly needed and nowhere else; the original quality of the Nō mind is respected; and the restraint and taste of the original, beautifully set forth in their English transcription, no easy achievement." Stark Young

+ — New Repub 30:233 My 3 '22 1500w

"It is indeed the highest tribute to this book that, fascinating as is the introduction, the text is more fascinating still. The ordinary English reader must approach these plays under every sort of disadvantage. And yet, out of this unpromising soil of obstruction and complexity and incompatibility, the natural beauty of the poetry rises like a flower. . . . Nor does it much matter to the reader how much of its quality is due to Seami and how much to Mr. Waley."

+ New Statesman 17:20 Ap 9 '21 1300w

"Of the excellence of Mr. Waley's translations and their adequacy as an introduction to the spirit of the plays, there can be no question. That they preserve so exquisitely the poetry, the delicate imagery and the fastidious reticence of the originals is in itself sufficient. They constitute an important contribution to the art of the drama and to scholarship." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p6 My 7 '22 2150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:89 F '22

Pratt p29 summer '22

"Mr. Waley gives an admirable receipt for the writing of Nō plays in the introduction to his translations, fully describing the method of their composition. Though the occasionally crabbed style of the Nō writers seldom gives this most perfect of translators the same opportunities as did the Chinese Lyrist of his former volumes, still there is not one play of the many here rendered which is not a work of art as well as a possible model."

+ Spec 126:658 My 21 '21 1250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p213 Mr 31 '21 60w

"By his admirably copious translations, and by his introductory essay Mr. Waley not only enlarges, but also corrects the knowledge of the subject."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 21 '21 1400w

Theatre Arts M 6:259 J1 '22 440w

WALKER, CHARLES RUMFORD. Steel; the diary of a furnace worker. 157p $1.75 Atlantic monthly

331.8 Steel workers

22-27486

"The experience of a young man, a college graduate and an ex-army officer, who went into the steel mills as a laborer. The hardships, the long hours, the drain on man-power involved in the present methods of production in what may be regarded as America's basic industry are presented in realistic style."—Outlook

"Excellent, true, real, live story of an experience. 'Steel' does not attempt to preach any doctrine or suggest any remedy or reform. It is a record of a normal young man's experiences among the rough Americans and Hunkies who earn their daily bread under the conditions he found. It is a story that will make the executive think and will provide material for much theory for the economist and perhaps work for the efficiency expert. Yet it is not a technical, serious narrative." V. A. Zielinska

+ Administration 5:107 Ja '23 520w

"A delicate and restrained—although detailed—picture of his comings and goings during the long hours. The book is like a deftly drawn picture of an operating-room, recorded through the work and the gossip and sometimes the play of the doctors and nurses—and patients." M. L. Cooke

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf F '23 450w

Booklist 19:110 Ja '23

"There is something Homeric in the simplicity of Charles Rumford Walker's 'Steel.' Head and shoulders, it stands above other books of its sort." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:623 Ja '23 350w

"He has provided the public in general and the student of the problems of steel-mill toil with a document of rare value. It is a human document, a story that entices like fiction, but breathes reality on every page." F. L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 16 '22 400w

"As the testimony of a witness who did not set out in quest of evidence for a preconceived doctrine or point of view, the book is a first-rate sociological document." R. P. Farley

+ Lit R p241 N 25 '22 360w

Nation 116:196 N 14 '23 110w

"This book is a most readable affair and brief. The subject matter of this particular personal experience is of greater social significance than most. The moments of adventure when molten metal is splattering about, the account of hunkie rivalries, of huge breakfasts eaten, furnish sufficient relief from the details of scorching heat and the dragging hours of the twenty-four hour shift to insure the book being read by an unsociological public." L. G. S. Spear

+ New Repub 33:258 Ja 31 '23 560w

"A crisp, well-written account. The book is an exceedingly good example of a class that has become somewhat familiar."

+ Outlook 132:533 N 22 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:11 Ja '23

"It is a picture from the inside, and is full of intense human interest."

+ R of Rs 67:112 Ja '23 70w

St Louis 21:5 Ja '23

"He writes clearly, simply, dispassionately of his actual work, the physical reaction and fatigue following the long shifts, and his conversations with the different men with whom he seemed to have the gift of mingling in true comradely fashion. . . There is no thought of propaganda or criticism and very rarely even a definite expression of opinion: just facts warm with the breath of actual living."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 31 '23 660w

Reviewed by Heber Blankenhorn

Survey 49:395 D 15 '22 450w

Wis Lib Bul 18:274 D '22

WALKER, STUART. Portmanteau adaptations; ed. with an introd. by Edward Hale Bierstadt. 229p il $2.50 Stewart Kidd

812

21-20909

The final volume of the Portmanteau series contains four plays, two of which are adaptations and two are Stuart Walker's own. There is a thirty-page introduction by Edward Hale Bierstadt and an appendix giving the personnel and repertory of the Stuart Walker company. Contents: Gammer Gurton's needle; The birthday of the infant; Sir David wears a crown; Nelljumbo.

Booklist 18:183 Mr '22

Ind 108:359 Ap 8 '22 60w

Theatre Arts M 6:174 Ap '22 110w

Wis Lib Bul 18:49 F '22 50w

WALLACE, EDGAR. Angel of terror. 267p $1.75 Small [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

22-4237

"Jean Briggerland seems to have deliberately chosen to be beautiful rather than good, and Mr. Wallace recounts the various efforts which this lovely young woman made in hopes of becoming rich as well. As she was not good she had few scruples as to the means she used to fatten her bank account—kidnapping, forgery, blackmail, murder, all serve her purpose. It is possible that she might have won in the end but for the clumsiness of her father, who took to crime too late in life to be really clever at it, and the ill-natured interference of a solicitor. The latter not only failed to succumb—as did Judge and jury—to her beauty, but even wanted to get her hanged, and entirely declined to allow her to murder the dramatically widowed Lydia, who, raised from penury to affluence by a set of curious chances, incurred Jean's avaricious and almost fatal friendship."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

— Boston Transcript p4 Mr 29 '22 180w

"The story is of the wholly artificial variety, with no pretense of presenting a mirror of life, but it is well made and well told, it is ingenious in its freshening up of the materials which go into most stories of crime, and for people who like novels of that kind it will provide a very entertaining hour."

+ — N Y Times p11 Ap 2 '22 250w

"Mr. Wallace seasons his story with plenty of violent episode, introduces quite a good mystery man, and in the end cleverly contrives that the same rejected lover should save the lives of heroine and villainess in turn."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p345 My 25 '22 190w

WALPOLE, HUGH SEYMOUR. The cathedral. 459p $2 Doran [7s 6d Macmillan]

22-26981

The scene of the story is the cathedral dominated town of Polchester. Here, when the story opens, Archdeacon Brandon is undisputed king, having acquired his position thru a commanding personality, magnificent presence, and a belief in himself as childlike and strong as his belief in God. In the year of the Queen's jubilee there is introduced into the intrigue ridden circles of the cathedral a new and disturbing element in the person of Canon Roder, ambitious, keen, and a clever intriguer. From almost the moment of his arrival the story resolves itself into a struggle for power between the two men, in which the simple-minded archdeacon, weakened by a succession of home tragedies and beset by one misfortune after another, is foredoomed to failure. The interest of the story is in the character studies of the two men and the skilfully produced atmosphere of the cathedral.

"Some may deplore Mr. Walpole's showing forth of the faults of the Church; but those who read between the lines will know that one who so glorifies the Church's Master will not destroy His dwelling-place, as he drives out those who defile it. Hugh Walpole writes as the true artist—that he may catch and fix aspects of human life upon the printed page." H. E. Hersey

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf D '22 450w

Booklist 19:88 D '22

"Archbishop Brandon is a penetrating, a merciless study of a man blinded by his own conceit. The handful of characters associated with him are drawn with the greatest charm and insight, and made to live for you in a telling phrase. Humor, sympathy, and graciousness are in the book, and much beauty, and there is also the wild, sweet breath of young and happy love." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Bookm 56:498 D '22 500w

"The Cathedral' is his best; it is Hugh Walpole, big, with a fine surface, and beautifully clothed; it is that rare thing today—rare in the comparatively young—a splendid Anglo-Saxon novel." Joseph Hergesheimer

+ Bookm 56:625 Ja '23 1750w

"Mr. Walpole writes so vigorously and clearly at times that his occasional lapses of style are all the more remarkable. His portraits of life in a cathedral city, of the good and the ill among the dignitaries of the church, of the antagonisms between the laity and the clergy, are all drawn by the hand of one who has seen and known and observed with the eye and mind of the imagination."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '22 1450w

Dial 74:103 Ja '23 80w

"It is not only a triumph of literary art, but a valuable contribution to a study of English society." M. F. Egan

+ Freeman 6:378 D 27 '22 1200w

"Magnificent, compassionate study of the tragedy of a good but self-centered man who comes to ruin." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p38 D '22 50w

"The story, at once complicated and simple, with all its many threads woven presently into a fabric of rich and changeable color—color with much of the mellow quality of an English landscape—is unusually interesting." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p52 D '22 800w

"Mr. Walpole has written a powerful and a very vivid and interesting story. Nevertheless, one is somehow left the least bit unsatisfied. It was never quite clear, one feels, where the author was going, and the end, with the arch-

WALPOLE, H. S.—Continued

deacon's death, leaves one in doubt as to where he has arrived. One has a dim suspicion of a moral lesson, apart from the Job motive, lurking somewhere in the back of the author's mind, but eluding both him and the reader." Stanley Went

+ — Lit R p143 O 28 '22 1000w

"Hugh Walpole uses much detail in 'The Cathedral.' But all this detail is relevant. It builds, slowly and inevitably, the atmosphere desired." Rex Hunter

+ — Nation 115:555 N 22 '22 350w

"The faults in Mr. Walpole's execution are those of over-emphasis. The catastrophe is too long foreseen, and the events which lead to it too insistently calculated to this purpose. In short the hand of the potter is thick and his clay stiff and sticky. No wonder he bears too heavily on his wheel." R. M. Lovett

— New Repub 32:339 N 22 '22 600w

"Long as it is, the novel does not drag. It tells an interesting story of individuals, human, faulty, some of them lovable, others, at best, merely pitiable. And this story is strengthened and made significant by the richness of its background. It has that quality of mellowness, of a full and well-considered maturity which so few books possess. Nothing crude, no touch of garishness mars the book. It is, too, all seen broadly, with a deep, wide sympathy which perceives the pitiable, rather than the absurdity of lonely, insignificant, stupid Mrs. Brandon."

+ — N Y Times p9 O 22 '22 850w

"The book is undoubtedly dull reading. Despite Mr. Walpole's famous 'atmosphere,' the cathedral's towers are too tall and too solidly roofed for one to feel even a symbolic tenderness for it." Frances Newman

— N Y Tribune p11 N 19 '22 1100w

"Mr. Walpole has told an absorbingly dramatic story in a masterful way. His detail and his word pictures are wonderful. Yet we do not at the end know just what he means us to make of it all." E. W. Osborn

+ — N Y World p7e O 22 '22 460w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 133:186 Ja 24 '22 280w

"It is Mr. Walpole's excellence almost alone among novelists of repute that he does not continue to harp always on the same theme, that he does not publish a new novel which is simply a rehash of the last three. And it is the same thing with his style. Even within this book he tries fresh experiments from chapter to chapter."

+ — Spec 129:603 O 28 '22 820w

Reviewed by G. B. Dutton

Springfd Republican p7a D 24 '22 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p664 O 19 '22 960w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

WALSH, EDMUND ALOYSIUS, ed. History and nature of international relations. (Georgetown foreign service ser.) 299p $2.25 (10s'6d) Macmillan

341 International law and relations 22-3102

"A series of ten lectures delivered at the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University during the academic year, 1920-21. Each lecture is the work of a scholar distinguished in the field assigned to him, and the entire series forms an analytical and historical survey of the chief problems of international law and diplomacy. Professor Duggan contributes a study of the nature and methods of diplomacy. Professors Rostovtseff, Hayes and Scott present an outline of diplomacy in ancient, mediæval and modern times. Professors Loughlin and Moore discuss the economic factors in international relations and the procedure of peace and of war. Doctors Rowe and Reinsch and Professor Borchard show the special position of Latin America, the Far East and the United States as factors in the development of international relations."—Cath World

"Although the lectures contain nothing new or strikingly original, they form a fairly consistent organic whole. This fact, together with the fact that the contributors are all men of distinction, and authorities in their respective fields, may be said to constitute a sufficient justification for the publication of the volume." A. S. Hershey

+ — Am Hist R 28:144 O '22 550w

"It is, of course, no reflection upon any of the authors of these various papers to point out that, to the average reader, certain of them are of much greater value than others, or, rather, that just at the present time it is especially desirable to have published such papers as those dealing with the methods of international government which are available for settling the various economic and political controversies arising among the nations. It is to be hoped that such propagandist utterances as those in the third and fourth paragraphs of the preface and in the appendix will not be too common in subsequent numbers of the Georgetown Foreign Service Series." P. E. Potter

+ — Am Pol Sci R 16:503 Ag '22 420w

Cath World 115:687 Ag '22 240w

Cleveland p74 S '22

"On the side of what may be called the technical description of diplomacy and its methods of operating and of the broad outline of the legalistic growth of international law these papers give a good and adequate account. The authorities of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service are to be congratulated on having preserved and given to a larger audience these lectures; they will make admirable texts for further discussion of the subject by any one wishing to teach it."

+ — Lit R p164 O 28 '22 280w

"In spite of Professor Laughlin's statement that foreign relations are probably eight-tenths economics (p. 133), this book is about ninety-nine one-hundredths formality and ancient history." C. A. Beard

— New Repub 30:144 Mr 29 '22 180w

R of Rs 65:670 Je '22 120w

Springfd Republican p6 My 22 '22 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p295 My 4 '22 160w

WALTER, FREDERICK W., ed. Retail charge account. 264p il $3 Ronald press

657 Retail trade. Credit. Accounting 22-8620

"This book has been prepared under the direction of the Educational committee of the Associated retail credit men of New York city, inc., and supplied with a preface by Joseph B. Auerbach and introductory chapters by the editor. It describes in detail the methods developed by the credit departments of a number of large stores in handling the specific problems that come before them. It is based on the practical experience of the credit managers of New York's leading stores and consists of their contributions as delivered in lecture form before the associated retail credit men of New York City with a membership embracing over 600 leading retailers and bankers." (Preface) It contains numerous forms and illustrations, an appendix and an index.

Booklist 18:350 Jl '22

Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '22 680w

Cleveland p78 S '22

"Mr. Walter is to be congratulated on organizing and presenting a body of material on a specialized and technical business problem in such a manner as to make it not only extremely suggestive and helpful to business executives whose special field it touches, but also interesting and worth-while reading for anyone interested in the general subject of business administration." A. C. Hodge

+ — J Pol Econ 31:147 F '23 880w

Lit R p762 Je 24 '22 250w

St Louis 20:243 O '22

Springfd Republican p7a O 29 '22 150w

WARD, ARTHUR SANSFIELD. See Rohmer. S., pseud.

WARD, EMILY. Three travellers in North Africa. 224p il $2 Lippincott [6s Lane] 916.5 Tunis. Algeria

An account of travels thru the more remote parts of Algeria and Tunisia, which led to the haunts of the Arab and Kabyle, to strange towns and market places, thru mountain passes and over wild tracts of desert.

"As a whole it is a book which will serve not only as a fascinating story of travel, but also in some sort as a guide to this part of the world."

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '22 450w

"The narrative, while it is interesting and illuminative, does not differ from many by other observant travelers who have taken notes in their diaries. But the picturesque itinerary of this party gives it a special value of its own."

+ N Y Times p17 D 24 '22 520w

WARREN, CHARLES. Supreme court in United States history. 3v 540:551:532p il $1x Little

345 United States—Constitution. United States—Supreme court 22-11303

In this narrative of the history of the Supreme court from its beginning in 1789 to 1918, the Court and the important decisions it has made are shown as vital factors in the course of United States history. The Court is pictured from term to term in its contemporary setting and its decisions are correlated with political events. The author emphasizes the views taken of the Court and its important cases by contemporary writers and statesmen and the important part which the attacks upon it have played affecting or modifying its status and decisions. No detailed description of Court and cases is attempted later than the death of Chief Justice Waite in 1888. Since then only a broad outline of leading cases and doctrines is given. Illustrations include portraits.

"A work of great interest and value not only to bench and bar and to special students of constitutional law and theory, but to all students of public opinion in democracies, and especially the American democracy. The two principal criticisms of Mr. Warren's book are, first, that it is too long; and, secondly, that it is not long enough. His efforts to correct accepted historical verdicts are not always convincingly successful, but otherwise the work is singularly free of statements to which the informed reader will be apt to take exception." E. S. Corwin

+ — Am Hist R 28:134 O '22 1600w

"These volumes are useful, enlightening, absorbing. The author deserves praise for originality, thoroughness of investigation, fairness of spirit, and clearness of expression. His book is the result of vast research. The footnotes teem with citations." Eugene Wambaugh

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:705 N '22 1150w

Booklist 19:110 Ja '23

"The author attempted a tremendous task when he determined to write this history, and the way he has accomplished it has laid under obligation not only the American Bar but all Americans who care to read deeply and with intelligence the history of their country." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 24 '22 1650w

Reviewed by T. R. Powell

Nation 116:98 Ja 24 '23 1700w

"Mr. Warren has made an important contribution to the history of the United States, and to legal history. His book deserves a wider appreciation than its title and length are likely to obtain. No lawyer or historian should fail to read it, and the numerous company of laymen who enjoyed Beveridge's Life of Marshall should find an equal, if somewhat more sober pleasure, in this quiet, deep-running narrative, covering a longer period and from a different point of view." S. E. Morison

+ New Repub 32:sup3 S 27 '22 2450w

R of Rs 66:110 Jl '22 200w

"The honest difference of opinion on conclusions which he has drawn, do not subtract from the debt in which Mr. Warren has placed the historian, the lawyer, and the layman. His work will stand as an unmatched contribution to our other store of knowledge in a field already widely explored in detail but never so brilliantly synthesized and delightfully recounted." Phillips Bradley

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 5 '22 1100w

WARSHAW, JACOB. New Latin America; with an introd. by James E. LeRossignol. 415p il $3 Crowell

918 Latin America 22-16082

The aim of the book is to present Latin America as a complex of onward moving countries and to give a faithful picture of their geographical, industrial, agricultural and cultural characteristics. The author holds that altho still somewhat backward in the material achievements of civilization, and altho their morals and customs are those of southern Europe, the Latin Americans are in no way an inferior or decadent race; that their initiative and enterprise are fast overcoming their isolation from the rest of the world; and that by learning to see ourselves thru their eyes we shall be able to facilitate friendly relations and avail ourselves of the commercial and industrial opportunities their countries offer. Maps, appendix of useful information, bibliography, index.

Am Pol Sci R 17:149 F '23 180w

"An exceedingly illuminating and helpful book and will be of great service to the general reading public. Dr. Warsaw has done a real service in making this volume available to the American public."

+ Ann Am Acad 104:176 N '22 180w

Booklist 19:118 Ja '23

Bookm 56:359 N '22 100w

"A bibliography of writings concerning various phases of Latin-American life, an excellent detailed map and an index prepared with evident care complete a timely and valuable compendium."

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 30 '22 680w

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey

New Repub 33:sup3 N 29 '22 800w

R of Rs 65:335 S '22 130w

Springf'd Republican p12 N 21 '22 110w

"A valuable study of Latin America. Dr. Warsaw's book should help to dispel the ignorance of Latin America which he asserts to prevail to a surprising degree in the United States."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p574 S 14 '22 780w

Wis Lib Bul 19:22 Ja '23

WARWICK, GEORGE, pseud. See Deeping, W.

WASHBURN, CLAUDE CARLOS. Lonely warrior. 345p $2 Harcourt

22-2313

"Stacey Carrol, the 'Lonely warrior,' returned after four years of war to his home in Illinois obsessed with the idea that his mind has been twisted by events out of all harmony with the past—that his old self is dead. The novel treats of the period during which he comes to the gradual realization that no part of oneself ever dies."—Lit R

"From the evidence in 'The Lonely Warrior' I cannot discover in Claude Washburn the slightest gift for writing. The novel is painfully built up in the style of a petulant second year high school boy." Burton Rascoe

— Bookm 55:305 My '22 280w

Boston Transcript p6 My 27 '22 700w

WASHBURN, C. C.—Continued

"One may be tempted to dispute some of the author's conclusions, one does not always care for the company in which he finds himself, but the descriptions of certain phases of society in the chief character's native town will strike more than one reader as true."

+ — Daily News Rec p9 Je.5 '22 1000w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 108:285 Mr 18 '22 620w

"He has given us in 'The lonely warrior' the elements of a great novel and his effort is sure to arouse interest; but uninspired, its appeal is not likely to be permanent." T: Pearson

+ — Lit R p448 F 25 '22 850w

"In spite of much that is crude and amateurish Mr. Washburn's novel is, in more ways than one, thoroughly excellent. The people in the story, flattened as they are under their load of words, do still bear a resemblance to life. They are not stock characters; each has an idea, even several, and is struggling rather pitifully against the author to express it."

+ — N Y Times p18 F 19 '22 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 27 '22 400w

"Mr. Washburn writes vividly enough to conceal from all but alert readers the fact that he is somewhat uncritical of his underlying assumptions."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p62 Ja 25 '23 100w

WASSERMANN, JACOB. Goose-man; auth. tr. by Allen W. Porterfield. (European lib.) 470p $2.50 Harcourt

22-21210

A musical genius, hewing his way thru poverty and opposition, ruthlessly trampling down everything that interferes with the exercise of his creative genius, wins the love of two rare women, sisters. He marries each in turn and both succumb to his blind egotism. Then he himself falls into the snares of a wily superficial creature who preys upon him body and soul and finally abandons him. All his treasured musical scores, the work of a lifetime, are maliciously burned. In the delirium of a man fighting for his sanity, the goose-man—the four centuries old bronze statue of a peasant with two geese under his arms, in the market place—appears to him and holds up the mirror of his life to him. He tells him that he has been living under the delusion of having borne the suffering of the world when he has merely borne his own sufferings, a loveless egoist, a monster; that peace will come to him when he has learned to behold mankind, to feel its distress, to give, not only to take.

Booklist 19:125 Ja '23

"The book is no common novel. There is true passion of life in these pages; it turns hectic at times, but it is usually authentic. It is at its best not as a whole, but in its outstanding parts." I. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 9 '22 1400w

"The book is a highway of multifarious human action and reaction, and a gallery of marvellous portraits." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 110:28 Ja 6 '23 600w

"It is not excessive praise to say that for sheer artistic power, as well as for philosophic significance, 'The Goose Man' is among the most vital and important contemporary novels."

+ Int Bk R p46 D '22 1700w

"The whole texture, for all its nightmare characteristics, is a sincere effort to mould a conception of the divinity of genius into a powerful literary organism. That it does not always ring true, that it sometimes seems distorted and higgledy-piggledy, that its characters are often caricatures a la Cruikshank or William Gropper, is due to this elder novelist's accord with his younger contemporaries, who look upon the garbled phantasmagoria of modern civilization through discolored supermagnifying glasses and observe only a confusion of detail that goes to make up this 'world's illusion.' Wassermann does not seem to see life steadily and see it whole." Ernest Brennecke

+ — Lit R p314 D 16 '22 1100w

"Like Dostoevski, Wassermann belongs with those men who have descended into the hell of poverty and want and who have brought back with them a vision of life which is as fascinating as it is terrible. The form of his novels with their enormous scope and rapidly changing scene is striking, but it is not this form so much as it is the intensity of his spiritual ardor which makes him remarkable. Few contemporary novelists are capable of giving the reader an emotional experience equally powerful." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 115:sup624 D 6 '22 1550w

"The World's Illusion and The Goose Man are clearly complementary to each other. Both bear witness to Wassermann's early training in the schools of his day. His fragments of a world are drawn with the cunning of the naturalist, but beyond this mechanical skill there are touches of reality that cry out as life itself. Of the two, The Goose Man is the nearer to what we call realism." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 33:sup18 N 29 '22 1050w

"One closes this German novel with something of the feeling of having awakened from a nightmare. With one or two possible exceptions among its minor characters, the people who move through its pages are neurasthenics, hysterics, moral perverts, or lunatics. Its tremendous length, its multiplicity of characters, each with his or her own story, make the reading of the novel a somewhat formidable undertaking. It is all abundantly detailed, a very serious piece of work, seriously and conscientiously done, emphasizing its moral that to be a great creator one must first of all be a worth-while human being."

+ — N Y Times p8 N 26 '22 850w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p8 N 12 '22 950w

"Wassermann writes with a fevered rush. His style is brilliant, succinct, full of power; it lacks ease and the quietness of conviction. We cannot quite lose consciousness of the emotional tension of the author even in scenes most splendidly dramatic. It is a long book and every page is charged and tense."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 600w

WATANNA, ONOTO, pseud. (MRS WINNIFRED EATON BABCOCK) (MRS BERTRAND BABCOCK). Sunny-San. 311p $2 Doran

22-9055

Four American students travelling in Japan are attracted by Sunny-San, a little Japanese-American geisha girl. They decide to furnish enough money for her education and band themselves together under the title of the Sunny Syndicate Limited. Sunny, a winsome little thing, speaks English most entertainingly. The boys return to America and Sunny fades to a pleasant memory. Jerry Hammond, the promoter of the syndicate, opens the door of his apartment one fine day to find Sunny smiling at him. Sunny in Japan was just delightful, but Sunny in New York rather frightens the four young men who, however, quickly devise the ways and means of caring for her. A wealthy steel magnate proves to be Sunny's father, and when she is finally established in luxury and ease Jerry is the lucky one to whom she gives her heart.

"Close criticism would not lack opportunity, in this engaging chronicle of Sunny-San's experiences. But as well criticise some delicately wrought flower because some of its petals betray carelessness of workmanship."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 My 17 '22 380w

"'Sunny-San' will probably find its way to the library shelves of summer resorts, where it may hope to hold its own with other summer fiction for those who seek no mental stimulus or reaction. It is a relic of the civilization which will not see beyond the finale of cupids and strewn roses."

+ — Lit R p746 Je 17 '22 140w

"An innocuous, mildly amusing and extremely improbable little tale of the Summer fiction type."

— + N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 $0w

"The plot is commonplace; the sentiment is obvious and cheap and robust." Gerald Gould

— Sat R 134:147 Jl 22 '22 360w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p462 Jl 13 '22 110w

WATERFIELD, MARGARET, ed. and il. Garden colour: Spring, by Mrs C. W. Earle; Summer, by E. V. B.; Autumn, by Rose Kingsley; Winter, by Vicary Gibbs. 192p il $6 Dutton

716 Gardens. Flowers

These chapters by different writers follow the garden thru the seasons, describing the characteristic flowers of each month and giving suggestions for their arrangement and cultivation. These chapters with the forty-eight water-color sketches of actual gardens, illustrate the value of artistic massing of color and skilful groupings of one variety of plant. Pictures in flowers are thus produced, changing from day to day and month to month.

"The four chapters not only furnish information for lovers of carefully planned gardens but show affectionate interest and love for the flower world. The color sketches by Margaret Waterfield are charming; especially is this true of those which set forth the brilliant and rich colors of the autumn garden."

+ Outlook 132:580 N 29 '22 60w

WATKINS, GORDON S. Introduction to the study of labor problems. (Crowell's social science ser.) 664p $3 Crowell

331 Labor and laboring classes

Of the three parts Part I, The nature and development of the problems, is largely historical. Part II, Analysis of the problem, includes the standard of living, wages, wage theories, the working day, child labor, women in industry, human waste in industry, unemployment and the labor market, labor turnover, immigration and industrial unrest. Part III, Agencies and methods of readjustment, discusses labor organizations, employer's associations, adjustment of industrial disputes, industrial government, personnel administration, industrial education and training, profit-sharing and labor copartnership, cooperation, socialism, labor legislation and social insurance. Selected references at the end of each chapter and index.

"Being intended primarily for teachers and students, it states with care in their behalf much that is obvious to those whose lives have been spent in factories. Yet it would be wise for a well-informed factory superintendent to read a book written with so much fairness and poise." W: C. Redfield

+ — N Y Times p10 N 26 '22 2200w

"The treatment of current labor problems by Dr. Watkins is of more than academic interest. The author has embodied his own first-hand observations as a wage-earner in mines and machine industries."

+ R of Rs 66:448 O '22 70w

WATSON, HERBERT. Applied business correspondence. 599p il $6 Shaw, A. W.

652 Commercial correspondence 22-16135

The book is a complete course in business correspondence covering both theory and routine. The larger part deals with the principles underlying the various types of business letters and the psychology of securing attention, expressing feeling, persuading, overcoming indifference and making your letter get action. The last part covers letterheads, envelopes and enclosures, the organization of correspondence work and testing letters, materials and uses for letters. At every point theory is illustrated by concrete examples and problems are given at the end of each chapter. Index.

"Most useful in business libraries or in large collections serving business men."

Wis Lib Bul 18:251 N '22

WATSON, VIRGINIA CRUSE. With La Salle, the explorer. 366p il $3.50 Holt

22-19213

"The story of a boy who accompanies La Salle from France to the New World, is captured together with a little girl, by the Indians, has many exciting adventures before he escapes, finds La Salle in the wilderness and accompanies him on his arduous journeys until the death of the great Frenchman. The book, of course, affords opportunity for an abundance of authentic history, and any one reading it will inhale a vivid picture of La Salle and his activities in opening up America."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '22 680w

"This bit of fictionalized history should be particularly pleasing to boys, and the book will make an excellent gift."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 100w

WATTS, MARY (STANBERY) (MRS MILES TAYLOR WATTS). House of Rimmon. 378p $2 Macmillan

22-4677

From his boyhood when he began to write secretly and hid his manuscripts from an unsympathetic family Cleve Harrod had an irresistible urge to literature, and all the artist's hopeless belief in himself. His already low credit with his family was still further reduced by his failure, after his father's sudden death, to contribute his share to the family income and pride stung him into taking a job in a bakery. This was the beginning of a succession of uncongenial employments, but all the while he was nursing his talent and quietly writing poetry and plays. Finally he attracted the interest of a successful author who helped him to recognition and he suddenly found himself a rising dramatist of whom much was expected. The test to which his ideals were put by a commercially-minded theatrical manager and under stress of financial need forms the developing interest of the story.

"This same story has been told in ten thousand shapes in ten thousand novels, and Mrs. Watt's latest version of it is like all the rest, with perhaps a little more padding and a little more moralizing. If Mrs. Watts wishes to convince us that she deserves a place among American novelists she must write a better novel than 'The House of Rimmon.'" E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '22 750w

Cleveland p35 My '22

"Well told in an intelligent but rather verbose manner. The story of Cleve and his downfall is an interesting and fairly plausible tale. One impression that Mrs. Watts gives is that she writes in a great hurry. Perhaps if the manuscript had mellowed in its author's desk awhile it would have been gone over more carefully, shortened and improved."

+ — Detroit News p17 My 14 '22 290w

"Like all Mrs. Watts' books it is interesting. The narrative flows smoothly, much of the character-drawing is extremely good, and the description of the first night of the play, with its carefully manipulated curtain calls, is accurately done, but the author is at fault in one important particular. So shrewd a manager as Delmar does not prefer the salacious play to the clean one for the simple reason that the former scores only in New York and is valueless on the road."

+ — Lit D p58 Je 10 '22 700w

"As Mrs. Watts is writing fiction, not biography, she must intend her book to have general bearings; and if she means it to have them she must think she has made her persons sufficiently typical and her plot sufficiently explicit. She has not done this. . . . Though it is badly built, 'The House of Rimmon' is written with a great deal of simple charm. It has gusto, it has spirit; it has a kind heartiness of observation which is perhaps Mrs. Watts's best quality." Carl Van Doren

WATTS, MARY—Continued

— + Lit R p579 Ap 15 '22 750w

"A sound, intelligent piece of work, vivid, truthful, interesting, is this new and excellent story of 'The House of Rimmon'—an excellent story, which by implication is also a most interesting criticism upon certain aspects of the theatre and the theatregoing public." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 2 '22 1950w

"The novel is thoroughly readable, but it is something more than entertaining, for it makes a fine protest against vulgar and sensual incursions into drama and fiction."

+ Outlook 131:74 My 10 '22 190w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:323 J1 '22

"One of the features of the story is the easy, natural manner in which the plot is developed. There is not an artificial or strained note in it; the spontaneity of action makes this one of the ablest books Mrs. Watts has written."

+ Springfield Republican p7a N 12 '22 500w

WATTS-DUNTON, CLARA. Home life of Swinburne. 288p il $4.50 Stokes [15s Philpot]

B or 92 Swinburne, Algernon Charles. Watts-Dunton, Theodore (Eng ed 22-23157)

"It was in 1879 that Swinburne and Theodore Watts embarked upon the venture in joint housekeeping which was to endure until the poet's death thirty years later, and which signalized one of the most curious and memorable friendships in the history of English literature. And now, for the first time, thirteen years after Swinburne's death and eight after Watts-Dunton's, there appears this intimate account [written by Watts-Dunton's young wife] of the years at The Pines, that characteristically Victorian villa in respectably suburban Putney, over which hovered the maternal solicitude of Watts-Dunton."—N Y Times

Bookm 56:215 O '22 400w

"A valuable contribution to the dissection and record of a unique personality." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 5 '22 1600w

"Mrs. Watts-Dunton, angry at suggestions about her husband's influence, picks Swinburne out of the tub of nonsense in which he has been dropped, and dips him into tubs of pink and white dyes, and asks: 'Doesn't he look nice?' If he were mildly amusing before, he is now, alternately, hilariously and pathetically ridiculous."

— Nation and Ath 31:24 Ap 1 '22 700w

New Statesman 18:732 Ap 1 '22 1800w

"Mrs. Watts-Dunton, by writing this exquisitely tender and intimate record of the daily life of Swinburne and Watts-Dunton at The Pines, has placed in her debt all lovers of English poetry. She has made no attempt either at critical evaluation or biography, but from her book emerges what is perhaps our best portrait of Swinburne as a man, preserving his boyish fascination through the advancing years. And in her book is distilled the essence of a friendship memorable always for its touching and extraordinary beauty." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 20 '22 3250w

"Except for inconsequentialities and a number of minor anecdotes of some interest there is nothing new in Mrs. Watts-Dunton's volume except the rather touching chapter recording the poet's last days. Here she does reach a certain height of poignancy, although, to be quite honest, she fumbles it through an inveterate sentimentality which makes itself manifest throughout the book." H. S. Gorman

— Outlook 132:158 S 27 '22 1450w

St Louis 20:251 O '22

"The book is a simple and unassuming account of happy days; a truthful and genuine book which could only have been written by a gentle woman with no trace of self-importance. The appreciation of the two men is finely balanced; there is no straining after impartiality or judgment; no high talk or critical posing; Mrs. Watts-Dunton sets down her memories with the simple truth, miscaled simplicity, and the characters in the story emerge human, homely and living."

+ Sat R 133:344 Ap 1 '22 750w

"This record in its shrewd artlessness is as informing and almost as entertaining as Mr. Max Beerbohm's exquisitely artful essay on what he saw at 'The Pines.'"

+ Spec 128:469 Ap 15 '22 880w

"Mrs. Watts-Dunton lived in the same house with Swinburne for some years; but it is not enough to have opportunities, one must be able to use them; and she is, unfortunately, prevented, by her manner of writing, from stating or describing anything with precision. She has a facility which fatally provides her with the wrong phrase for everything."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Mr 23 '22 600w

WAUGH, ALEC. Roland Whately. 342p $2 Macmillan

22-18782

"This novel is concerned with the life and character of a young Englishman, beginning with his last year in school, and then following him into business and detailing his success there, along with his material adventures in love and his final achievement of marriage. The story, especially the first third of it dealing with the boy's life at school, is told with much detail, but the author has shown excellent selective sense in the invention and arrangement of the detail in order to get from it the highest values for the picturing of character and for giving dramatic quality to his narrative."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '22 1000w

"Roland Whately displays that glibness of words which is proverbially a gift of the popular novel writer; but it lacks a corresponding facility of invention. . . . Roland Whately's father is a character reminiscent of Dickens: doddering, laughable, pathetic, convincing. The rest of the book, in theme and treatment, is middle class—not quite upper middle class."

— + Dial 74:209 F '23 90w

Int Bk R p61 D '22 420w

"Mr. Waugh's book harps on frustrated things. His protagonist understands very little, for his vague sense that all is vanity is confounded by his lack of knowledge as to how he should adjust to this new mental equipment. Finally he marries expeditiously above his class, and the conclusion shows a taciturn honeymoon and predicts a life soon petered out in gloom."

— + Lit R p274 D 2 '22 330w

"All the characters are vividly conceived and portrayed with both strength and delicacy. They are real creations, even those that are of slight consequence, and they stand out, strong and clear and very much alive. Not one of them is inherently interesting, however, and the hero is a good deal of a cad. The story leaves upon the reader a saddening impression of the futility of life and the despicableness of human nature, a sense of the general dreariness of things."

+ — N Y Times p25 N 12 '22 550w

"In the character of Roland Whately we seem to have come about as close to an average Englishman of the upper middle class as it is reasonable ever to expect to. We pursue the fairly even tenor of his way and see him through the few difficulties, successes and love affairs that would naturally fall to the lot of the ordinary human being. Then we leave him abruptly when he is about to become interesting. We are genuinely sorry to leave him, however, and that is something in his favor."

+ — N Y Tribune p10 N 26 '22 300w

"It is attractive without much gayety of color, to be sure, but deftly and gracefully designed."

+ Springfield Republican p7a D 17 '22 360w

WEALE, BERTRAM LENOX PUTNAM, pseud.
2 (BERTRAM LENOX SIMPSON). Indiscreet chronicle from the Pacific. 310p $3 Dodd
 327.51 Eastern question (Far East). China—
 Foreign relations. World politics. Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22

The author discusses China's domestic problems as they have been affected by world conditions and the policies of other nations. He shows how the Anglo-Japanese alliance has for a number of years meddled with Chinese affairs, both material and international, in the most disastrous way; how the United States has failed to back up her promises of good will in any substantial way; and how the Washington conference has not fulfilled any legitimate Chinese expectations. The diplomatic affairs of the other powers, especially Great Britain, are largely discussed in their indirect bearings on China, as are also the effect of the Anglo-Japanese alliance on the relations between Canada and the United States. Maps are included.

"Tangled problems, particularly those arising from China's relations with Japan, are ably discuss by Putnam Weale." I: Anderson
 + Int Bk R p52 Ja '23 1000w

"He discloses many facts in the Far Eastern political situation which have heretofore reposed in secret archives."
 + R of Rs 67:109 Ja '23 90w

WEAVER, JOHN VAN ALSTYNE, jr. Margey wins the game. 110p $1.50 Knopf

22-10015

A longish short story told in college vernacular of a pretty debutante who liked reading better than dancing and who was in danger of becoming a wall flower, thru not playing the game and putting some jazz into it. Her brother served notice upon her that he declined to act any longer as the "world's greatest rescue crew." Thus spurred to effort and with Larry Baker to give her a start, she whirled into the game, and having shown that she could play it as well as anyone she came to the surprisingly intelligent conclusion that it wasn't worth while.

"To take Mr. Weaver and his studies seriously would be foolish. 'Margey Wins the Game' is, we are told, his first book of prose. It should be his last, at least until he goes to school and learns to write, not the balderdash which he calls 'American,' but the English language." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '22 240w

"A thoroughly delightful skit."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p4 JI 23 '22 240w

"It is a clever skit expanded into a novlette, which spindles it out rather slenderly. But it is entertaining throughout."

+ — Lit R p745 Je 17 '22 290w

"It is a badly written short story dragged out to undue length. The slang vernacular in which it is written suggests nothing more than a High School sophomore trying to imitate Ring Lardner. With plot, situations, characters and prose incredibly bad it is difficult to understand why the book was ever published."

— N Y Times p18 My 14 '22 60w

"It is so brisly told that one wishes he would do something rather more interesting."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 160w

WEAVER, RAYMOND MELBOURNE. Herman Melville, mariner and mystic. 393p Il $3.50 Doran

B or 92 Melville, Herman 22-267

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

"This book is engrossing and irritating. Matters of minor importance, extraneous subjects, are treated at length. Questions that have long been asked are not satisfactorily answered. In spite of Mr. Weaver's brave endeavor, in spite of his research, sympathy, enthusiasm, Melville is still a mystery." Philip Hale

— + Atlantic's Bookshelf F '22 470w

Booklist 18:152 F '22

"Mr. Weaver has done the thing for once and all. Here we have everything that anyone can conceivably desire to know of Melville." W: McFee

+ Bookm 55:69 Mr '22 500w

Cath World 114:686 F '22 500w

"The book is never dull, and it will send its readers to Melville's own writings." E. L. Pearson

+ Ind 108:146 F 11 '22 100w

"I cannot say that Mr. Weaver's Herman Melville is a great book, or even a satisfactory book. It might so easily be much better and tell us so much more than it does. The chief point of interest is Mr. Weaver's account of Melville's neglected and unreviewed novels." J. St L. Strachey

— + Spec 128:559 My 6 '22 1400w

"Mr. Weaver has omitted nothing that can be brought to light by research. His admiration for his subject does not impair his critical faculty."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p151 Mr 9 '22 1450w

"The first adequate treatment of the topic. Mr. Weaver has on the whole done his work admirably, and the work was not easy." A. H. Quinn

+ Yale R n s 12:205 O '22 2900w

WEBB, SIDNEY, and WEBB, BEATRICE (POTTER) (MRS SIDNEY WEBB). Consumers' co-operative movement; an up-to-date critical analysis. 504p $6.50 (18s) Longmans

334 Cooperation—England 21-21769

"This addition to the series of volumes representing some thirty years' study of democratic institutions from the Socialist point of view, by Mr. and Mrs. Webb, may be regarded as analogous to their 'Industrial democracy,' on the subject of trade unionism. It contains an analysis and description and criticism of the British cooperative movement and its achievements as providing 'a means by which, in substitution for the capitalist system, the operations of industry may be (and are increasingly being) carried on under democratic control without the incentive of profit-making or the stimulus of pecuniary gain.' No part of Mrs. Webb's 'The co-operative movement in Great Britain' (1891-3) is reproduced in the present volume."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 18:176 Mr '22

Freeman 5:334 Je 11 '22 290w

"Mr. and Mrs. Webb will probably not increase their following among the Socialists by this work. They may make some converts to socialism. Other readers will remain unconvinced." R: S. Meriam

— Lit R p525 Mr 25 '22 720w

"Not easy to read. It consists of a vast agglomeration of details, collected and presented with careful scholarship, but not often with dash or inspiration. But out of their work emerges a sense of reality, a sense of dependability, and often a true insight which frequently is not to be found among their smarter critics." G: Soule

+ — Nation 114:599 My 17 '22 1400w

Nation and Ath 30:832 Mr 4 '22 1350w

"All the qualities that have made Mr. and Mrs. Webb the first of English publicists have gone to the making of this book. There is the same breadth of view, the same inexhaustible patience in investigation, the same profound command of the facts, that have given their studies of trade unionism a permanent place in English literature. They have an epic story to tell; but the great virtue of their book is that, while entirely admirable as a description of a very complex system of federal institutions, it has a most suggestive analysis of future possibilities." H. J. Laski

+ New Repub 31:80 Je 14 '22 980w

"Mr. and Mrs. Webb are scientists; they approach the problems of industry and government and society through analysis; they build a theory of what a thing might or ought to be upon an analysis of what things actually are. Mr. and Mrs. Webb's science is good and their analysis imaginative, because, when they have passed Trade Unionism or Local Government, or State Socialism, through the machine of their investigation, something fundamental and essentially constructive emerges." L. S. W.

WEBB, S. and WEBB, B.—Continued

+ New Statesman 18:452 Ja 21 '22 950w
+ Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:156 Ap '22
+ St Louis 20:121 Je '22

"Their book is a fine practical contribution to the advancement of co-operation."

+ Sat R 133:sup7 Ja 7 '22 1050w

"To this new work the authors have brought their well known methods; painstaking historical research, accumulation and analysis of all available fact data, including not only the movement itself but also the influences at work upon it and those radiating from it; a courageous yet sympathetic diagnosis of defects and shortcomings; and, on the basis of all this, a conservative study of trends and imaginative forecast." Bruno Lasker

+ Survey 47:769 F 11 '22 1100w

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p829 D 8 '21 110w

WEBB, SIDNEY, and WEBB, BEATRICE (POTTER) (MRS SIDNEY WEBB). English prisons under local government; with preface by Bernard Shaw. (Works on local government ser.) 261p $5 (15s) Longmans

365 Prisons—Great Britain 22-11265

This history of prison administration in England and Wales from the seventeenth to the twentieth century is provided with a 70-page preface by Bernard Shaw which is a powerful indictment of our prison system. "Imprisonment," he says, "as it exists today and is described in this volume is a worse crime than any of those committed by its victims." Mr and Mrs Webb present an historical account of the origin and development of the English prison and show what punishment by the deprivation of personal liberty has really meant. Their case against the prison system, tho they use the historical rather than the dramatic method of presentation, is no less strong than Mr Shaw's.

"No prison administrator either in England or the United States can afford to pass by these volumes or fail to analyze his own attitude and the prevailing practice in the light of this criticism." E. S. Whiting

+ Lit R p416 Ja 27 '23 600w

"This new work of the [Webbs] is written on the sound historic lines which the distinguished authors have made so familiar to us in their books on English Local Government. The public owes a deep debt of gratitude to them for the present volume; and it should be in the hands of all judges, magistrates, and Members of Parliament."

+ Nation and Nat 131:412 Je 17 '22 1450w

"Mr. and Mrs. Webb's fascinating book will help to prepare the public mind for an immense step forward in the common-sense and humane treatment of prisoners." Robert Lynd

+ New Statesman 19:186 My 20 '22 1750w

Reviewed by Archibald Henderson

+ N Y Times p4 O 29 '22 1900w

+ Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:10 Ja '23

"There are not many gleams of sunshine in these pages. The authors did not begin their work with the intention of cheering us up, but in spite of their grey pessimism there are gleams of hope which they have not been altogether successful in repressing."

+ Sat R 133:524 My 20 '22 1400w

+ Spec 129:177 Ag 5 '22 680w

Reviewed by S. A. Queen

+ Survey 49:116 O 15 '22 500w

"It was no mean feat to condense the penal history of the last 200 years into 250 pages. There is an enormous accumulation of material in the report of the various Royal Commissions and the debates which led to alterations in the Prison Acts; but it is quite clear that nothing material has passed unread."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 25 '22 1000w

WEBSTER, HENRY KITCHELL. Joseph Greer and his daughter: 489p $2 Bobbs

22-22157

"'Joseph Greer and His Daughter,' is at once a character study and a story of 'big business.' Its scenes are laid for the most part in Chicago, and several characters from Mr. Webster's earlier books appear in the background of the narrative, whose central and dominating figure is Joseph Greer, explorer, adventurer, industrial engineer and inventor. A big man, both in physique and in character, he dwarfs all the other people in the book, his daughter Beatrice included. They are important only in their relations to him and his affairs, and these relations are most deliberately and at times minutely detailed."—N Y Times

+ Booklist 19:126 Ja '23

"Joe is a figure of decision, vividness, and power. His battle against the conventions of society and business, and against the complexities of his own thoroughly bull-like emotions, is a story as intricate and as readable as that of the vagaries of his amazing daughter. Henry Kitchell Webster has never constructed his social fabric with such skill as he does in this latest novel." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:622 Ja '23 320w

"For those that like a tale composed in equal proportions of low finance and high society as both are supposed to exist in Chicago, the story is above the average grist-mill standard."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 13 '22 240w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:354 D 9 '22 300w

"A keen presentation of two powerful personalities, done richly against a varied background." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p70 D '22 40w

"One has the impression that, had he known definitely where he was going, the mist that overspreads certain parts of the book would have been dispersed by sunlight and Mr. Webster would have written a more vivid and vital book in perhaps 250 pages than he has given us in something like 500." S. A. Coblenz

+ — Lit R p260 D 2 '22 660w

"It is a very interesting novel, and its business side is presented with a clarity which makes it perfectly intelligible even to those who know little or nothing of the mysteries of company organizing."

+ N Y Times p10 N 5 '22 1150w

"It is one of Mr. Webster's more serious efforts. But too often it slides off into being just a good story. There is no reason why it should not be both, of course; the pity is that it comes out as not quite either." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p10 N 5 '22 1650w

+ Wis Lib Bul 19:26 Ja '23

WEIGLE, LUTHER ALLAN. Training of children in the Christian family. 224p $1.50 Pilgrim press

173 Children—Management and training. Religious education 22-8972

A book for parents which deals with principles and ideals rather than with problems or cases. Beginning with a discussion of the functions of the family, the author, who is Horace Bushnell professor of Christian nurture at Yale university, goes on to consider some of the perplexing conditions which make it so hard in these days to maintain a Christian home and to bring up children wisely. He then takes up, one by one, the fundamental problems of parents who seek to promote the all-round welfare of their children—physical, mental, moral, social, and religious. Each chapter is followed by questions for discussion and suggestions for further reading.

"The Christianity of the book is fine and sincere, and for those who are Christian, and wish their children to be, it contains much sound guidance." Ruth Hale

+ Bookm 55:530 J1 '22 60w

Cleveland p72 S '22

J Religion 2:559 S '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:468 N '22

"The book sets forth problems in a form that is useful for parents' and teachers' discussions."

+ Survey 48:123 Ap 22 '22 50w

WEIK, JESSE WILLIAM. Real Lincoln; a portrait. 323p il $4 Houghton

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 22-20443

The author, who collaborated with Herndon. Lincoln's law partner, in writing one of the most important biographies of Lincoln, now supplements that biography by bringing together new material which he has gathered since its publication, chiefly from the recollections of people who knew Lincoln personally. He brings out especially his human side, his early years, his social and home life, his attitude toward women, his judgment of men, his personal characteristics and appearance as described by his neighbors. There are four chapters on his career as a lawyer, and two on his development as a political leader prior to his first election to the presidency, with which the book closes. The illustrations include numerous portraits. Index.

Booklist 19:157 F '23

"An interesting study of a more human being than the category of virtues which makes up the Lincoln of school-book tradition."

+ Bookm 55:771 F '23 100w

"The fibre of Mr. Weik's book is admirable." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 30 '22 400w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 109:274 N 11 '22 110w

"One compares it involuntarily with Charnwood's and finds it unexpectedly sustaining that high test." A. W. Vernon

+ New Repub 33:300 F 7 '23 270w

"The author reveals many new facts and incidents and throws fresh light on almost every phase of Lincoln's life previous to 1860. The book is often marred by verbosity in the manner of its telling, but it offers interesting and valuable contributions to our knowledge of Lincoln on his human side and in his relations with his fellows."

+ N Y Times p10 D 17 '22 2000w

"Mr. Weik's faithful pages are, to me at least, of far more absorbing interest than the smooth surfaces of such a book as Charnwood's Lincoln; they are instinct with the profound vitality of the man himself. One seems to just glimpse him disappearing around the corner of yesterday, to catch as echo of his grave, jesting tones. One feels the pressure of the atmosphere which enveloped him, the deprivations which left their marks upon him. . . . It is a book which should furnish a true test of Lincoln's admirers for if they do not care for it they do not care greatly for the real Lincoln, but only for his legendary mask." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p3 O 29 '22 1200w

R of Rs 67:220 F '23 300w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 7 '23 1700w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Mystery girl. 349p $2 (7s 6d) Lipincott

22-3498

The university town of Corinth in New England is intensely excited over the death of John Waring. He had been elected President of the University, and was engaged to a charming woman when one morning he is found dead in his study. The locked door and windows suggest suicide but Waring seems to have had every reason for wanting to live. Anita Austin, a young girl who has just lately come to Corinth, is the object of grave suspicion, but in the end she is able to explain the object of her visit to Waring's study on the fateful night. The gossipy and spiteful Miss Bascom and the Japanese Nogi lend colorful interest to the mystery

"Even if, to some ungratefully critical readers, the answer to the enigma is somewhat reminiscent of the fabled connection between a very small rodent and a 'laborious mountain,' the hunt for it is carried out with Miss Wells's customary zest and skill."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 29 '22 380w

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 Mr 26 '22 200w

"It cannot be said that the solution of it all is very satisfactory, the motive given being too weak to account for the commission of so desperate and extreme an act. The style is careless, and the book gives evidences of having been hastily written; but it has some ingenuity, and holds the reader's attention."

+ N Y Times p15 F 19 '22 360w

"Well written, intriguing, in the author's characteristic style."

+ Wis Lib Bul 18:104 Ap '22

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Vanishing of Betty Varian. 282p $1.75 Doran

"Figure to yourself a house built upon the summit of a headland which rises vertically from the rockbound coast of Maine to a height of three hundred feet, with no other means of approach save a gate through a wall and thence by a precipitous flight of steps in plain view of the world. On a sunny summer day, while a party of friends waited by the gate, ready to go on a picnic, Betty Varian ran back to the house to get her camera. All the servants were away at the circus; the house was quite empty. Betty vanished into her own front door. And she did not come out again. Her father grew tired of waiting and went after her. He also failed to reappear. The others went after him and found him dead in his own hall, shot through the heart, and of Betty not a trace. What became of Betty Varian?"—N Y Tribune

Boston Transcript p4 J1 19 '22 160w

Cleveland p92 D '22

"It is too much to ask of even the most accommodating of readers that he accept the entanglement which furnishes the basis for the crime of the story or the actions which result from it on the part of the villain. On the other hand, it must be granted that Miss Wells sustains the suspense of her tale to the end, and that she develops her plot through a succession of incidents that add to its mystery. It is interesting from start to finish, and that, perhaps, is the essential requirement of a detective story."

+ Lit R p810 J1 15 '22 190w

"It cannot be said that the solution is entirely plausible, and the tale belongs to the jigsaw puzzle type of plot story. But it is entertaining and succeeds in its two principal objects—those of holding and puzzling the reader." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p13 Je 18 '22 400w

"It is so delightfully insoluble one must forgive Miss Wells for cheating a little. But if well begun is half done, here is a 50 per cent efficient mystery story." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p5 J1 2 '22 350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:463 N '22

WELLS, GEORGE ROSS MAURICE. Youth and the open door; the relation of habit and character to success. 175p $2 Dutton

150 Psychology, Applied. Success

A book for young people, the aim of which is to apply the principles of psychology to the formation of good habits and character, to getting the most possible out of their college courses, to the choice of a vocation and the achievement of success in their careers.

WELLS, G. R. M.—Continued

St Louis 20:296 D '22

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Secret places of the heart. 287p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Cassell]

22-26494

Sir Richmond Hardy, man of affairs and head of the British fuel commission, consults Dr Martineau, a celebrated psychiatrist, about his unravelled nerves. Desiring to psychoanalyze his patient, the doctor suggests a three weeks' motor trip together. The book consists largely of a series of conversations, in which Sir Richmond opens up the secret places of his heart, much of the talk being about women, who have held a large place in his life. The doctor leaves his patient, but not before he has acquired a sympathetic friend in a beautiful young American woman with whom he continues his conversations and who has a greater success than the doctor in effecting a cure. But neither story nor cure is complete. After a few days of happiness he goes back to his wife and his work, and is shortly stricken with pneumonia.

Booklist 19:370 J1 '22

"There is no denying the strength and power of some of Mr. Wells's discussion, but it is strength and power which should be differently applied. Much of the dialogue in this book is really compelling but on the other hand some will be almost appalling to one who buys the book as a story." S. L. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '22 1050w

"An extremely bad novel. Artistically, a failure. Intellectually, probably incomprehensible and possibly pernicious. Such is the net result of Mr. Wells' latest attempt to write a novel. But what else could he have expected? He attempted to do a thing artistically dishonest—he attempted to sugar-coat his propaganda with a fictional shell. The attempt has failed, as it always must fail, and as it always should fail." G. W. L.

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 J1 23 '22 780w

"No modern novel-reader will care to miss this book—or will carry away any fresh impression of Wells from it." H. W. Boynton

+ — Ind 109:24 J1 22 '22 1400w

"The at once odd and familiar effect of the book is that we don't clearly know what it is all about, and that we don't care. Or, rather, we know that it is about H. G. Wells, and that is enough." H. W. Boynton

+ Lit R p714 Je 10 '22 900w

Reviewed by Floyd Dell

Nation 114:721 Je 14 '22 3350w

"We have Mr. Wells once more as the philosopher and economist rather than the imaginative artist. Of course, other elements are thrown in—little fragments of story most cunningly placed, a minor character or two, changes of scene, one or two love passages—to beguile the reader into the belief that he is reading a novel and not a philosophic dialogue; but the fact remains that it is what his three chief persons have to say, and not their story, that is particularly important to Mr. Wells. At such moments the story rises at once to the higher plane of his imaginative work; and for these moments we are grateful. The whole book, however, is written with restraint, and contains a great deal that is wise and admirable." Forrest Reid

+ — Nation and Ath 31:348 Je 3 '22 800w

"What started out to be a novel very soon becomes another vehicle for what Mr. Wells has to say. He launches a story, manning it with ideas, who mutiny, swarm over its decks and scuttle it at last." Robert Littell

New Repub 31:80 Je 14 '22 1100w

"Sir Richmond is the same hero we have so often met in Mr. Wells's novels, the man entirely capable of being faithful to an idea, and entirely incapable of being faithful to his wife. With large plans for bringing order out of the chaos in which he believes the world at large to be plunged, he is unable to go so far as even to formulate a plan for bringing any semblance of order out of the intimate chaos of his personal life. For this situation he blames himself a little, Mother Nature more, and society most of all. The novel is interesting, as all that Mr. Wells writes is interesting, and full of ideas which tempt to discussion." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p4 My 21 '22 1250w

"There is much interesting material in the new novel, but less than there should be. The patient, Sir Richmond Hardy, has decidedly interesting possibilities . . . but it is difficult to imagine that any one could be so inept as Dr. Martineau, the character created by Wells to act as the leader of the exploring expedition into the human heart." Heywood Brown

+ — N Y World p11 Je 2 '22 920w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 131:263 Je 7 '22 580w

"This book, in theme and in treatment, is totally unworthy of its illustrious author."

— Sat R 133:583 Je 3 '22 360w

"This is plainly a spare-time novel: dictated, one presumes, as a sort of mental relaxation. For Mr. Wells as a fantastic romancer we have nothing but praise, but Mr. Wells as a prophet is distinctly behind the times."

— Spec 128:757 Je 17 '22 220w

"The Secret Places of the Heart" is merely another tract . . . not a novel. A book built on its specifications does not do what a novel can do; it is a rambling, newspaperly dissertation. Mr. Wells has become a pamphleteer." G: B. Dutton

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a My 28 '22 780w

"The book, of course, is full of Mr. Wells's peculiar eagerness and vividness. . . . But Mr. Wells has still to write the novel of ideas which he seems to promise so often. He is on his way to the creation of a new form, but hitherto he has never yet clearly grasped the problems which are set by that form."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p322 My 18 '22 1650w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Short history of the world. 455p il $4 Macmillan [15s Cassell]

909 History, Universal 22-21776

"This Short History of the World gives in the most general way an account of our present knowledge of history, shorn of elaborations and complications. From it the reader should be able to get that general view of history which is so necessary a framework for the study of a particular period or the history of a particular country. It may be found useful as a preparatory excursion before the reading of the author's much fuller and more explicit Outline of History is undertaken. But its especial end is to meet the needs of the busy general reader, too driven to study the maps and time charts of that Outline in detail, who wishes to refresh and repair his faded or fragmentary conceptions of the great adventure of mankind. It is not an abstract or condensation of that former work. . . . [but is] planned and written afresh."

—Preface

Booklist 19:154 F '23

"This is a new work covering the same ground as the 'Outline of History' and in the same spirit, but re-written and better written, and correcting many of the faults of judgment and proportion which disfigured the earlier book. Mr. Wells has digested his material in the interval and writes now with ease and mastery. The arrangement and general division of the space is quite satisfactory, and the production and illustrations are excellent." F. S. Marvin

+ Nature 110:867 D 30 '22 900w

"In not a few respects it is a better book than its remarkable predecessor. Mr. Wells has had less space, and therefore his occasionally idiosyncratic sense of proportion does not so often intervene. There is some loss here, for those passages, though often open to criticism, were lively and stimulating, but the gain in truth is great. The new book is illustrated admirably."

+ New Statesman 20:250 N 25 '22 170w

"An even better book than the famous Outline. The most comprehensive account of the great adventure of mankind. An inspiring, useful, entertaining, hope-inspiring book."

+ New Statesman 20:supxx D 2 '22 40w

"It must be admitted that Mr. Wells holds a fairly even balance and sees as clearly and as truly as can be expected of any human historian when he is surveying mankind through the perspective of centuries. When he comes down to very recent times he is so swayed by his best-loved theory of internationalism that neither his report nor his interpretation of events can be wholly trusted."

+ — N Y Times p4 N 19 '22 1750w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:33 Ja '23

"He has succeeded in producing a book which is quite as readable as the average novel, thanks to the author's flowing style and unusual powers of visualization." W. E. J. Fisher

+ Sat R 134:795 N 25 '22 120w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 7 '23 650w

"There may be mistakes of fact and of judgment in the production, the influence of the poets may have been almost forgotten, the style, direct and emphatic, may rarely soar to the height of this great argument, but if as we rise from our seats we carry into the workaday world the ideas thrown into relief with such artistic skill, then we may thank Mr. Wells for a performance of enduring value as well as of fleeting enjoyment."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p762 N 23 '22 930w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Washington and the riddle of peace. 312p $2 Macmillan [6s Collins]

341.1 Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22. Peace 22-1013

These twenty-nine articles in which Mr Wells recorded day by day his impressions of the Washington conference are reprints of articles which originally appeared in the New York World and some other American and European newspapers. The articles are not a report of the proceedings of the conference but a record of the ideas on world peace which suggested themselves to a keenly interested listener at the conference. He gives an impression of the nature of the gathering and a broad view of the issues involved. The last paper, "What a stably organized peace means for mankind," paints an unforgettable vision of the world of his desire, a world that might even now be rescued from the present wreckage.

Am Pol Sci R 16:528 Ag '22 20w

Booklist 18:216 Ap '22

Reviewed by C. Seymour

Bookm 55:229 My '22 540w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p7 F 25 '22 1500w

Cleveland p54 Ag '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:61 Ja 21 '22 220w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Wells should have marred his many pages of wisdom and suggestive comment by rather savage attacks upon the motives of France. It is one thing to assail M. Poincaré; it is another thing to indict a nation." C. A. Beard

— Nation 114:289 Mr 8 '22 1200w

"Wells is a prophet, and in the inspirational and hortatory work of the prophet he does well, in this book as always. But in this book, as always, he is a little weak on the clairvoyant side. He may be a good enough soothsayer when he deals with the twenty-second century, but he is rather liable to error when he prophesies on the day after tomorrow."

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 12 '22 490w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:113 Mr '22

Pratt p10 autumn '22

"Few journalists would be guilty of writing in a manner so self-centered, so desultory, so completely at the mercy of the irritations or enthusiasm of the moment. And none, we think, would have been so rash as to republish these fugitive articles without abating one atom of their crudities, their hastiness, their tendency to overlap one another and their frequently mistaken adherence to the news or views of the day on which they were written."

— Sat R 133:94 Ja 28 '22 480w

"This is a most interesting, a most able, and we are sure also a well-intentioned book. Further, it is full of stimulating suggestions and wise and often original reflections. That being so, it is a very great pity that it is marred by certain serious faults."

+ — Spec 128:144 F 4 '22 1200w

"It is well to have these sparks struck from a keenly alert and human mind collected in permanent form. Those who read the articles as they appeared, will find interest in rereading them in the light of the conference's achievement. No critic of its work has offered so valuable a commentary on the ebb and flow of the emotional forces that were its realities."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 29 '22 150w

"An interesting exhibit of the historian turned newspaper reporter and, for future readers, an invaluable record of how open-faced diplomacy appeared at its birth to an exceptionally keen observer."

+ Survey 47:769 F 11 '22 50w

"Nearly all that he says is true. It was necessary that someone should say it. On the other hand, let us confess it, when read together in book form, these articles become a little wearisome. We begin to think that the note of alarm is too high pitched and that, on the other hand, the hopes he would arouse from the new world order are equally exaggerated."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p50 Ja 26 '22 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 18:131 My '22

WELLS, LOUIS RAY. Industrial history of the United States. 584p il $2 Macmillan 330.973 United States—Industries. United States—Economic conditions 22-11783

"Textbook in economic and social history for use in high school and introductory college courses. It is somewhat more brief, more elementary in diction, and more free from statistical details than books of the type of Bogart, Lippincott, and Van Metre, and much more up-to-date than the work of Miss Coman. The chronological and topical methods are combined, the various phases of economic development being considered in the colonial period, the era of transition from colonial to national life, the epoch of national consolidation, and the age of the growth of large-scale industry, American entry into a world-market, and the extinction of the frontier. The illustrations and maps, while not especially numerous, are extremely well chosen. Admirable lists of references and suggestive study questions are appended to the chapters."—Educ R

"Excellent little volume." A. C. Ford

+ Am Econ R 12:633 D '22 400w

"The book is attractively written, and it is to be hoped that it will be widely used and frequently substituted for the conventional narrative of political, military, and diplomatic episodes which forms the backbone of most high school courses in history." H. E. Barnes

+ Educ R 64:355 N '22 300w

St Louis 21:5 Ja '23

"The book is written in easy, direct style, and the subject-matter is illustrated by seventy-six well-chosen pictures and fifteen maps so that it will be found useful to high-school students for supplementary reading or textbook use." F. L. Schwass

+ School R 30:712 N '22 480w

WELLS, PERCY A., and HOOPER, JOHN. Modern cabinet work; furniture and fittings. 3d ed rev 386p il $9 Lippincott
694 Cabinet work

Third edition, revised, of a very comprehensive work, in which the practice of cabinet-making in all its applications is illustrated step by step. Beginning with a description of tools, appliances and materials, the book treats successively the making of working drawings, joints and their applications, workshop practice and construction, the making of different types of furniture, veneering, marquetry and inlay, setting out and foremen's work. Notes on historic styles of furniture are included, and chapters on cabinet brasswork, panelling, special furniture, and on woods, English, foreign and colonial. There are 53 double-page and photographic plates in addition to the many drawings in the text. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

WESEEN, MAURICE HARLEY. Everyday uses of English. 447p $2 Crowell
808 English language—Business English.
Commercial correspondence 22-14063

A very practical book on business English. Nearly half the volume is given to the discussion of the business letter, its mechanical make-up and an analysis of its various types—letters of inquiry and reply, orders and acknowledgments, complaint and adjustment, sales letters, etc. This is followed by a chapter on the preparation of business reports. The rest of the book is devoted to the elements out of which all composition of whatever nature is constructed—words, construction of sentences and paragraphs, spelling, punctuation and the preparation of a manuscript. Suggested problems and exercises are added.

"The latter half of the book is distinctly valuable. The English is clear and direct, and the book is well suited for use without a teacher."

+ Daily News Rec p11 Je 30 '22 330w

"A thorough, useful, and authoritative treatment. The style of its longer articles is vivid and entertaining, frequently epigrammatic. Its chapters on business reports, the sentence, and the paragraph contain some new material of value."

+ Lit R p795 Jl 8 '22 190w

"An exceedingly practical treatise."

+ R of Rs 67:223 F '23 170w

St Louis 20:243 O '22

Reviewed by R. L. Lyman

School R 30:634 O '22 150w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 12 '22 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Je 15 '22 300w

Wis Lib Bul 18:251 N '22

WEST, SIR ALGERNON EDWARD. Private diaries; ed. by Horace G. Hutchinson. 381p $7 Dutton [18s Murray]

B or 92 Gladstone, William Ewart. Great Britain—Politics and government

(Eng ed 22-20456)

Sir Algernon West was Mr Gladstone's secretary during the premier's fourth and last administration, 1892-94, with which period the diaries are chiefly concerned. With their almost daily entries they cover the entire political history of the period with great minuteness. Sir Algernon acted as a "shock absorber in the rude contacts" between the aged chief, then eighty-two, and his party followers. We are shown behind the scenes when a new Premier is forming his ministry, the conflicts and irritations between cabinet members, the fate of important bills and all the trials of a prime minister's life. Of the notabilities who formed Mr Gladstone's cabinet the three most frequently mentioned are Lord Rosebery, Sir William Harcourt and John Morley. One of the interested lookers-on at the political game was Margot Tennant, just before her marriage to Herbert Asquith, whose comments on men and affairs the diarist quotes freely.

Am Pol Sci R 17:147 F '23 90w

Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '22 750w

"West's Diaries are chiefly interesting as a picture of the day-to-day troubles that beset a group of men, many of whom combined powerful intellects with difficult temperaments, handling sharply contentious questions, and more conscious of their embarrassments than their strength. The story of the closing months of Gladstone's Cabinet is intensely dramatic."

Nation and Ath 32:122 O 21 '22 1550w

"Sir Algernon West with his conscientious record of all the threads which were spun and woven has written a most enlightening book on the secret practice of higher politics. . . We sympathize with Sir Algernon when he exclaims: 'What a funny thing Government is!'"

R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 32:153 O 4 '22 1050w

"Sir Algernon West's Private Diaries is a delightful book because, while mingling with greater men than himself, the writer always remains a real character and puts up no defences against our knowledge of his little vanities and little interests. Sir Algernon had not an ounce of pretentiousness. . . Here not only a man, but a whole tradition of English society, comes to life. No novelist would have got his atmosphere better. This atmosphere of reality is produced, not by important anecdotes, but by one tiny significant detail after another." R. L.

+ New Statesman 20:17 O 7 '22 1200w

"Students of the history of Gladstone's fourth administration will find in this volume much interesting information about what went on behind the scenes at that time, told by a man who was as close to the centre of things as any one could possibly be."

+ N Y Times p7 O 1 '22 1350w

Sat R 134:592 O 21 '22 1200w

"An inner history of Gladstone's Fourth Administration told not as in history-books by a record of facts, but as in a play by the clash of motives and temperaments. The unstudied character of the diary is a help to it here. Its entries have the value of snapshots taken on a field of battle; they bear the very accent of authenticity."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p607 S 28 '22 2250w

WEST, REBECCA, pseud. (CICELY FAIRCHILD). The Judge. 491p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

22-26985

This story of the conflict between a man's love for a girl and his love for his mother opens in Edinburgh, where seventeen-year-old Ellen Melville is typist in a lawyer's office. She is a lovable, sunny little Irish-Scot whose red hair and vivid personality light up the drab office. Richard Yaverland, a client, coming in one day, feels her light and is soon carried off his feet by love of her. During his courtship Ellen goes to visit his mother and then Marion Yaverland becomes the center of interest. She is made to think her tragic story aloud for the reader. Twice betrayed in her youth, by two men, she had been left with two sons—Richard, the child of love, and Roger, the child of lust. The horrors of her life, her jealous love of Richard, and the boys' hatred of each other make the Yaverland home on the Essex marshes a haunting and sinister place where even little Ellen's light cannot shine. The book ends in a ghastly climax, with the suicide of Marion and the murder of Roger by Richard.

"Not all the book's splendid texture—for it is splendid—can save it. . . Because the moral values are all wrong, the intended emotional effects do not 'come off.' As a novel, The Judge fails." E. P. Howes

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf F '23 330w

Booklist 19:89 D '22

Boston Transcript p6 S 6 '22 1350w

Cleveland p80 S '22

"Her writing is rich, closely packed, highly coloured, and individual. It seems impossible for her to be careless, to take the easy, faded word, or to fall short of precision. Her imagination is primarily visual, and her landscapes stand out with mineral hardness and brilliance. Her style reflects her subjects, like a metal mirror, varying with their colours, but burnishing them all to an ardent, almost truculent, loveliness." Raymond Mortimer

+ Dial 73:441 O '22 2700w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne
Int Bk R p70 D '22 20w

"In spite of the artificial gloom of the thesis and resulting dénouement, is the forerunner of some able work. One is never unaware in reading it of the author's alert and engaging personality." W. McFee

+ Lit R p83 O 7 '22 1200w

"The book enhances our admiration for Miss West's descriptive prose, and our respect for her wit; there are few living writers who can match her powers. Much of the writing in this new book is superior to anything she has previously done. . . 'The Judge,' as a novel, is a failure. . . The firmness and leisure of its opening—a level maintained in ease and confidence by the artist for a distance as long as an ordinary novel—make the lapse and inconsequence of the latter part of the volume such a puzzle that a reader is constrained to wonder over it. The story becomes a gratuitous muddle, an incredible fable false in its movements."

+ Nation and Ath 31:596 J1 29 '22 1250w

"She has the painter's deeply disinterested eye for natural beauty, and her pictures stand out in singular purity among the products of a race which, knowing so well how to describe its visible world, has so often not kept from those descriptions a meteorological or botanical smack. And these pictures are not isolated, though many of them come so quickly as to catch your breath; the whole is fine too, and reminds one of a strip of precious metal, never quite cooled." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 32:80 S 13 '22 1200w

"Here is a book which exhibits in a high degree literary power and much penetration; but the author's method resembles too much the flight of a dragon-fly, pointing for a quivering instant first in front of the past, then of the present and then back again." D. M.

+ New Statesman 20:114 O 28 '22 850w

"A brilliant piece of work, forceful, impressive, haunting with a sense of its significance. Through its pages there shines, too, the clear, unmistakable light of genius."

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 20 '22 1150w

"A powerfully moving and singularly beautiful piece of writing, which yet as a novel does not quite come off. As an evidence of the quality of a woman who has already passed her coevals and is destined to go far the book is eminently satisfying. Considered as a contribution to the modern novel it has some troublesome faults." S. R. Collins

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 29 '22 750w

"To pretend that this book, coming from its author, is anything but a disappointment would be humbug; but the level of the writing is extraordinarily high; there is much, especially in the description of natural scenery, which amazes by its sheer fecundity and skill; and, here and there, one comes upon almost thrilling moments of tenderness and insight."

+ Sat R 134:68 J1 8 '22 850w

"It is lack of development that clogs with a suspicion of tedium the great merits of Miss West's novel. . . The book, as one would expect, is full of interesting technical devices, of shrewd and often humorous observation, of accurate subjective analysis; in short, it is plainly the product of a very keen intellect—a good novel that no one is likely to mistake for creative literature."

+ Spec 129:116 J1 22 '22 680w

"The attention the book commands is the attention that one gives to strange, abnormal, yet natural and compelling types of character. The book is no tea-time diversion or volume of nightcap entertainment, but calls for concentrated reading, and repays it. Its structural technique, though adequate, is yet unmethodical and a bit inexpert. One is fully warranted, however, in putting 'The Judge' in his list of preferred books from the season's output."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a O 15 '22 260w

"One reaches the end of Book 1, with the feeling that, if this is not a great novel, it is at least a witty, acute, and agreeable one. But we were left unprepared for the milieu of horror and lust into which the story now moves. . . By the time the climax of ghastly tragedy arrives it cannot make us blink. Nothing from this goblin band would surprise us. They are all unreal, so there is no icy wind to mark their passing. They will never walk to haunt us since the cover of the book is their only tombstone."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Je 29 '22 780w

Wis Lib Bul 18:275 D '22

WETHERED, ROGER HENRY, and WETHERED, JOYCE. Golf from two sides. 197p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

796 Golf 22-8368

"This treatise on golf is the joint production of two of our most brilliant young amateurs. Consequently both know what they are writing about, and love what they know. . . Miss Wethered writes on driving and putting, whilst her brother describes the strokes made with wood or iron through the green. They both explain very clearly how they play the shots themselves, and show considerable faculty for analysing complicated physical adjustments. Mr. Wethered writes two interesting chapters on American golf and Oxford golf. Miss Wethered discusses the relative abilities of the best men and women at golf."—Sat R

"There is a great deal of golf instruction in their pages, clearly explained, but the style is sometimes heavy going."

+ Lit R p764 Je 24 '22 140w

"They know the technicalities of the game from A to Z, and their playing records establish their ability to practice what they preach. Whether, in spite of the lucidity of the book, much can be learned of a game from the printed word is a debatable point."

+ Nation and Ath 131:450 Je 24 '22 120w

"They both write very well—not perhaps so well as they play, which could hardly be expected, but their literary handicap is certainly not worse than scratch, in spite of an occasionally fluffed shot."

+ Sat R 133:470 My 6 '22 540w

"A capital book about the game. They both have ideas and express themselves exceptionally well, with the help of apt similes."

+ Spec 128:659 My 27 '22 1250w

"A capital book which is clearly the product of much hard thinking. The identity of 'I' in any particular chapter has to be discovered from internal evidence."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Ap 27 '22 880w

WEYL, HERMAN. Space—time—matter; tr. from the German by Henry L. Brose. 330p $7.50 Dutton [18s Methuen]

530.1 Einstein theory (Eng ed 22-6737)

These lectures, delivered at the Technische Hochschule in Zürich, are a complete exposition of the theory of relativity. "The theoretical equipment demanded of the reader at the outset is a minimum. Not only is the special theory of relativity dealt with exhaustively, but even Maxwell's theory and analytical geometry are developed in their main essentials. . . The setting up of the Tension Calculus—by means of which, alone, it is possible to express adequately the physical knowledge under discussion—occupies a relatively large amount of space." (Author's preface) The successive chapters deal with Euclidean space; the metrical continuum; relativity of space and time; and the general theory of relativity. Bibliography. Index.

"A handy and well-illustrated translation." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 14 '22 900w

WEYL, HERMAN—Continued

"Prof. Weyl's work is the standard treatise on the general theory of relativity. It is the most systematic and penetrating book on the subject; it is also by far the most difficult. The book is not suitable for a first introduction to the mathematical theory; but those who have already acquired some familiarity with the methods and manipulations required will find here a deeper insight and a more general view of the logical coherence of the theory than is possible in more elementary text-books." A. S. E.

+ Nature 109:634 My 20 '22 1650w

Reviewed by B. Harrow

N Y Times p7 O 29 '22 400w

"The most systematic and complete exposition of this theory which has yet appeared. Of the greatest importance to philosophers as well as to men of science for its author is throughout aware that his subject has philosophical implications, and often breaks the course of his strictly mathematical argument to refer to them."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p237 Ap 13 '22 2250w

WEYMAN, STANLEY JOHN. Ovington's bank. 481p $1.90 Longmans [7s 6d Murray]

22-21484

"The period is, roughly speaking, the decade after Waterloo, and the action centres round a small country bank at Aldersbury, the county town of Aldshire on the Welsh border, during the period of reckless speculating, culminating in a financial panic throughout the country. The general setting and the quasi-historical scenes in Aldersbury and London during the crisis leave a more enduring impression than anything in the purely fictitious portions of the book, good reading though these are. The characters are perhaps less interesting as individuals than as a cleverly-balanced group, in which Squire Griffin of Garth and Ovington the banker stand for the old order and the new, with the banker's son and Griffin's daughter as intermediaries. The central figure, so far as there is one, is the clever, unscrupulous Arthur Bourdillon, the squire's nephew and would-be son-in-law, who has entered Ovington's bank against the old man's will, and endeavors to make the best of both worlds."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 19:126 Ja '23

"As a story for the story's sake, and as a picture of English personality and the England of a hundred years ago, 'Ovington's Bank' is a masterpiece." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '22 1400w

"Apart from its romance, the story, I am told by a man of business, presents an accurate study of financial problems of organization, credit, and management, which are the same today as a century ago." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 109:351 D 9 '22 360w

"The book is interesting, the incidents follow close upon each other, and the action never drags. The author has used considerable care in sketching in the background of his period and throughout the picture is a convincing one."

+ Lit R p248 N 25 '22 300w

"Mr. Weyman has lost none of his well-known magic in the re-creating of a past age and the spinning of an absorbing story out of its activities. For it is a deeply interesting story of human passions, ambitions, hopes, desires battling with one another, wherein each character molds his own destiny, and its colorful scenes of a century ago are depicted with an authentic touch."

+ N Y Times p8 N 12 '22 680w

"If it is a little stodgy at times, why, so is life. It is not, in any event, saccharine; but more like roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, a solid slice of the past served hot." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p10 N 26 '22 660w

"I can remember only two novels that have succeeded as well as this does in making banking a thrilling theme—Charles Reade's 'Hard Cash' and Harold Frederick's 'Market Place.' But the love and jealousy part of the book are even stronger than its historic interest. The book has plot and movement in abundance." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 133:186 Ja 24 '23 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:5 Ja '23

"His story grips from the first paragraph. His characters are clearly, if not profoundly, realized. Incident follows incident with the inevitability of a soundly-constructed plot." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 134:794 N 25 '22 100w

"He achieves solidity when so often the period novel is a thing of costume, of mere decoration; his men and women are not twentieth-century folk engaged in amateur theatricals, but real people grown out of the conditions that surround them."

+ Spec 129:975 D 23 '22 350w

"The characters are all drawn with care and sympathy and succeed in rousing and holding the reader's interest."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p689 O 26 '22 350w

"Mr. Weyman spins an excellent tale of adventure and young love, a shapely tale that is busy from end to end, compactly filling its space and using its material, and rounding upon its appointed close."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 4 '23 900w

WHARTON, ANTHONY P. Joan of Overbarrow. 360p $2 Doran [7s 6d Duckworth]

22-6518

Joan, a farmer's daughter, was sent by her fond parents to a select boarding school and educated above her station. Clever and pretty, but spiritually undeveloped, she returns home out of harmony with her parents and her environment and falls to scheming for wealth and position. Thru her school connections and physical attractions she gains a social footing and the amorous attentions of Cecil Torrington, already engaged to be married to Joan's friend Marjory. Just as Joan is about to be married to Cecil's uncle, an enormously wealthy but unsavory old man, Cecil involves her in a scandal and ignobly abandons her, as do her fiancé and all her friends. Her mother casts her off. Now Joan's better nature asserts itself. She goes to London to study nursing and becomes a figure of importance in the hospitals of France where, although disfigured by shrapnel, she wins the love of a Scotch doctor.

"'Joan of Overbarrow' should not be missed by any amateur of fiction, for the greater part of it reaches a really high standard."

+ — Sat R 133:208 F 25 '22 660w

"The reader will become sufficiently interested in Joan to enjoy following her various adventures. The last chapter is, however, a little too like the concluding thrill of a cinema film not to strike a jarring note in a quiet story of country life."

+ — Spec 128:278 Mr 4 '22 70w

"Every one of Mr. Wharton's rather numerous characters is portrayed with a touch of genuine discernment, and his agreeable and effortless manner conceals a great deal of skill in narrative."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 16 '22 130w

Wis Lib Bul 18:133 My '22

WHARTON, MRS EDITH NEWBOLD (JONES). Glimpses of the moon. 364p $2 Appleton

22-14722

Nick Lansing and Susy Branch were parasites—popular, pleasure-seeking and luxury-loving, but impunctious. They decided to experiment with marriage for a while on the assurance of a year's security thru the marriage checks of their friends and country homes placed at their disposal. But something was expected in return for this largess, and in Ellie Vanderlyn's case, the required payment was that Susy should keep Ellie's absent husband deceived while she was philandering with another man. Susy was an adept at "managing" and tolerated, while not liking, this form of payment. Nick, already beginning to chafe under their condition of parasitism, revolted at this particularly flagrant piece of dirty work, of which Susy for a time kept him in ignorance, and made it the occasion for leaving her. After some mental suffering, a rather complete change of partners among their friends and narrow escapes on their own part from entering into other marriages they came together again on the basis of paying their own way, tho the method remains problematical.

Booklist 19:23 O '22

"A gaudy thing with no sincerity whatever. 'The Glimpses of the Moon' is a puppet show. Every little figure in it is jerked about with visible wires." Ruth Hale

— Bookm 56:98 S '22 280w

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 9 '22 850w

"We feel, for once in Mrs Wharton's work, cheated and unhappy. . . In her failure to suggest the richness of life, and in her refusal to render the passion of love, Mrs Wharton has left her work empty. The bowl is chastely proportioned and cunningly wrought; but it brims over with no rich liquor. Instead there is the watered wine of her plot." Gilbert Seldes

— + Dial 73:343 S '22 1700w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 109:79 Ag 19 '22 1000w

"The author has done nothing better than this since 'The House of Mirth,' to which it makes a fitting pendant, written with all her customary distinction and instinct with life and interest."

+ Lit D p53 S 23 '22 980w

"This new novel is less important than 'The Age of Innocence,' in so far as it is not epical, not symbolic as that was of an age of moral culture in America. It is not so amusing, nor so picturesque. But its theme is sharper and simpler. Indeed, the book is, one way, just a moral problem, nicely conceived, beautifully balanced, skilfully developed, full of withering satire, and yet conceived in a tenderness which for Mrs. Wharton seems to me to be new." H: S. Canby

+ — Lit R p883 Ag 19 '22 1650w

"Mrs. Wharton here handles a theme which ninety-nine novelists out of a hundred would have handled as merely another proof that morals are reformed by love. She is, as usual, the one out of the hundred who always remembers to be intelligent—indeed, she writes as if she had never felt the temptation to be anything else. She has her accustomed touches of social caricature; her children do not entirely convince; she impinges upon farce in her last two chapters; yet to all who read with their brains her new book must be an excitement and a delight. Without rushing it never flags; it cuts without drawing unnecessary blood; it convinces with no hint of argument. It is lucid, balanced, aware, easy, alive." Carl Van Doren

+ — Nation 115:128 Ag 2 '22 640w

Reviewed by J. M. Murry

Nation and Ath 32:164 O 28 '22 580w

New Repub 31:365 Ag 23 '22 200w

"For all its perpetual, vigilant competence, the book is a dead thing. It is as well done as it possibly could be; but it is not worth doing." Rebecca West

— + New Statesman 19:588 S 2 '22 1350w

"I can think of no American novel, written within the last few years, and dealing with contemporary life, to compare with it. And not only does Mrs. Wharton write better than any one else, but she knows how to unfold a more exciting tale." K. F. Gerould

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 23 '22 2150w

"Mrs. Wharton sees that the valves are set, the bunkers stoked and the engine oiled; but we are no more conscious of her personal contribution to the story's progress than we are of the engineer's personal contribution to the progress of an express train we see fitting by at a distance on a summer evening. The odd thing about it is that we are likely to be as little concerned personally, with Mrs. Wharton's characters as she is herself. We are likely to think they are vague and distant people going somewhere on a train instead of flesh and blood persons having real tragedies of their emotions." Burton Rascoe

— N Y Tribune p5 Jl 23 '22 1200w

"Even Mrs. Wharton has not sufficient skill in writing to make the doings of so dowdy a cast of characters enthralling. There is hardly one in the lot who would not be perfectly at home if he chanced to step into the pages of something by Robert W. Chambers. Nor is stupidity the only charge which we find against the folk of the new novel. Nick Lansing seems to us the most consummate prig who has appeared in any recent work of fiction." Heywood Brown

— N Y World p13 Jl 27 '22 1600w

"The situation is held close in hand and the reader's interest is never allowed to drop. 'The Glimpses of the Moon' certainly sustains its author's recognized position among the leaders in American fiction." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 132:119 S 20 '22 400w

"Her merit is that, through all her skilful delineation of false standards and nightmare frivolities, she does keep her hold on the simple human needs. The core of her story is the strengthening and seasoning quality of married love." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 134:355 S 2 '22 660w

Spec 129:373 S 16 '22 1950w

"Is something more than an entertaining novel to enchant the summer days; it is a human document. Not a detail is lacking in the mise-en-scene. And in a series of chapters which might fairly be called acts of the drama, is presented a vivid, graphic transcription of one phase of contemporary life. The entire ensemble is a perfect mosaic, each piece of which fits into the scheme, and of which the relative values are held with that fine touch which characterizes Edith Wharton." Lillian Whiting

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 9 '22 1550w

"Will probably be classed among her slighter works; but it abounds in her well-known graces—a distinction of style which never deteriorates, a humorous detachment, and a power of drawing worldly men and women so that other worldly men and women can recognize them."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p566 S 7 '22 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:217 O '22

WHELOCK, JOHN HALL. Black panther; a book of poems. 97p $1.50 Scribner

811

22-18921

"Ecstasy is the precise note upon which Mr. Wheelock builds his images of the imagination. Mr. Wheelock's vision is always robed in ecstasy, the passion which burns into all the subjects discovered and captured by his vision. The miracle thus performed depends upon none of the verbal accessories of art but upon the pure essence of the spirit."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 19:77 D '22

"Perhaps Wheelock is so preoccupied with the soul of man that he occasionally loses himself in his own metaphysical raptures. But his music often sounds a spaciousness which the words only suggest. And if his exaltation sometimes stammers with its very vehemence, it is something—and, in a period of passionless virtuosity, no small thing—that it is, at least, exalted." L. Untermeyer

Bookm 56:495 D '22 220w

"Just as 'The Man Against the Sky' won for its author a general critical acceptance of his powers, so I believe, 'The Black Panther' will win a general critical acceptance of Mr. Wheelock's powers. He will emerge from this conglomerate period of song in the security of fame." W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 30 '22 1450w

WHELOCK, JOHN HALL—Continued

"Mr. Wheelock's verse is too purely intuitive. He has the imagination, but no fantasy. He appeals always to the sentiments, but to the intellect almost never. One likes or dislikes his poems, but finds it hard to judge them critically, for he buries the reader in waves of emotion that are as rhythmic as sea waves and hardly more stimulating to the intelligence."

— + Dial 74:105 Ja '23 80w

"The Black Panther' is, physically, the smallest of Wheelock's five volumes. But, irrespective of the number of pages, it is—with the exception of 'The Human Fantasy,' now, unfortunately, out of print—his largest accomplishment." L: Untermeyer

+ Lit R p240 N 25 '22 750w

"His weakness is an overdevelopment of the ecstasy, that at times threatens a mere wordlessness; coupled with a slight tendency to repetitiveness. But his contribution to current singing is a unique and vital one." Clement Wood

+ — Nation 115:sup622 D 6 '22 650w

"Mr. Wheelock is too normal, too civilized for uninged intensity. He does not even do all he might, he tries so hard for sentiment that his technique suffers. The truth is, religious poems, like juggling acts, are dangerous things; one electron this side of perfection—or ecstasy—and they either leave one cold, or worse—they become ridiculous."

— New Repub 32:343 N 22 '22 150w

"He possesses rare power for descriptive verse, whose lines hold within them more than the outer meaning, and he touches sheer beauty more frequently than any of his contemporaries here in America with whose work I am at all familiar. Readers will find this writer full of a unique music, and within that music deep feeling and high thought." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ N Y Times p6 N 5 '22 200w

"Mr. Wheelock works carefully, choosing his words as though he loved them and polishing his lines until he has perfectly transmitted to paper the picture that is in his mind."

+ Springfield Republican p7a F 4 '23 400w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. Daniel Boone. 2 wilderness scout. 308p il $1.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Boone, Daniel. Frontier and pioneer life 22-26986

In the early days of the American republic Daniel Boone was swindled out of his land by unscrupulous means and forced to leave Kentucky. The Spanish governor gave him a grant of land in Missouri, but again he lost this by failing to conform to some clause in the title. Once more Boone had to begin his wanderings and the story gives some vivid pictures of his encounters with frontiersmen and Indians. When he was eighty years old he was engaging in fur trapping as far west as the Yellowstone, and altho a comparatively poor man, this sturdy pioneer was able, by an adjustment of the Spanish grant of land, to leave something to his children.

Booklist 19:94 D '22

"Mr. White has written an inspiring book, one which any father should be glad to place in the hands of his growing son. Not only does the story of Daniel Boone throw light on the early history of our country, but it inculcates those qualities which make for real manhood."

+ Int Bk R p44 F '23 250w

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

"While Mr. White gives a clear account of Boone's adventures with frontiersmen and Indians, he emphasizes the character of this typical pioneer, a genuine American of the early years of the republic."

+ Springfield Republican p7a N 19 '22 250w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. On tiptoe: a romance of the redwoods. 265p $1.75 Doran 22-19158

"Mr White warns us that it is a case of piracy with the traditional cast of characters; the bold buccaneer, the Damsel in Distress, the rescuing hero, etc., and to these he adds, for good measure, a comic butler. The pirate, however, is an up-to-date specimen, a predatory financier. Instead of the old-time schooner, he navigates an ultra-modern touring car, which starts the story by getting stranded somewhere in the remote 'beyond' of the California forest. The afflicted damsel is the magnate's daughter threatened by the nearness of an unwelcome marriage. The rescuing knight appears, modernly, in a noisy flivver and proceeds to straighten out the situation with exemplary dispatch. He is an expert in woodcraft, and is also an inventor, having a marvellous sort of perpetual motion machine in hand. Of course the financier sees millions in this machine and immediately tries to get control of it. How he is foiled and how the heroine is safely won must be left to the reader to learn."—Lit R

Booklist 19:89 D '22

"All-in-all it is a very fascinating and entertaining yarn."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '22 290w

Cleveland p92 D '22

"The story shows Mr. White at his excellent best."

Lit R p73 S 30 '22 390w

"The outdoor setting gives Stewart Edward White ample opportunity to make use of his marvelous talent for describing life in the open, but the story itself deals chiefly with such human motives and passions as are usually found at their best, or worst, in the crowded marts of trade." I: Anderson

N Y Times p11 S 3 '22 500w

"Amusing but slight."

+ Outlook 132:344 O 25 '22 60w

Pratt p36 autumn '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 19 '22 30w

WHITE, WALTER GRAINGE. Sea gypsies of Malaya. 318p il $5 Lippincott [21s Seeley, Service]

915.9 Mergui archipelago

"An account of the nomadic Mawken people of the Mergui Archipelago with a description of their ways of living, customs, habits, boats, occupations, etc." (Subtitle) The Mawken—the name meaning literally "the Sea-drowned"—are a primitive, very backward people living almost exclusively in their boats, called Kabang, in the waters of the archipelago, having, many generations ago, been driven out of the mainland of Burma-Malaya. In view of their ultimate fate of absorption into the more dominant races of the neighborhood, the author has taken pains to study them minutely and sympathetically. Map. Index.

"The author has rendered anthropology a substantial service through this new and unprejudiced survey."

+ New Statesman 20:56 O 14 '22 350w

New Statesman 20:supxvi D 2 '22 30w

"A delightful hook, containing a fund of curious knowledge that never before has found its way into print. Photographic illustrations, twenty or more, supplement the text instructively as well as interestingly."

+ N Y Times p5 D 10 '22 960w

"His book is rather too discursive to satisfy those who want to gain definite information about the Mawken. . . . Although Mr. White has not given us a systematic work, he has given us a very readable one: his sympathetic attitude towards the people described in this volume has enabled him to write of them as friends rather than as anthropological specimens."

— + Sat R 134:722 N 11 '22 660w

"Very little has hitherto been known about these people; hence the account which Mr. White gives of them in this book is all the more welcome. . . . Mr. White's book, meritorious as it is, serves rather to whet than to satisfy the curiosity of the student of man."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p659 O 19 '22 1200w

WHITE, WILLIAM PATTERSON. Rider of Golden Bar. 391p $1.75 Little 22-854

"Introduces us to Billy Wingo. The gang of corrupt and vicious politicians who ran the affairs of Golden Bar, and Crocker county, just south of the Medicine mountains out in Wyoming, thought he would make a good sheriff. They needed one decent man to save the party ticket, so Billy was elected. But to the consternation of his electors, Billy proves neither 'easy' nor amenable to their suggestions or their bribes. He pays strict attention to enforcing the law, so that soon the crowds of cattle rustlers and crooks and murderers find themselves on the defensive and running to cover. Then begins dissension among themselves. A vicious fight, a stage holdup and a murder of which Billy's sweetheart, Hazel Walton, was accused, gives that young man plenty to do."—Springf'd Republican

"Of its 'Wild west kind,' the story is one of the most readable, not the least of its delights being that picturesque vernacular of which the author is a master." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 25 '22 500w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Ind 108:120 F 4 '22 270w

"When the characters in 'The rider' are not committing assault and battery, mayhem, or murder one has time to notice how very well done is the dialogue. Also how deftly the heroine and the near-heroine are characterized: so is the hero, Billy Wingo. William Patterson White swings a rapid moving pen; one can almost see the story on the screen."

+ — Lit R p371 Ja 21 '22 220w

N Y Times p11 Ja 22 '22 130w

"Mr. White is a skilled hand at this sort of thing, and here he has turned out a first-class slap-dash article."

+ Outlook 130:229 F 8 '22 40w

Springf'd Republican p13a Ja 15 '22 140w

Wis Lib Bul 18:74 Mr '22

WHITEHEAD, HAROLD. How to run a store. 296p $2.50 Crowell

658 Retail trade 21-17839

A practical book of retail store management dealing especially with the problems of the small store. The author, a department head of the College of business administration, Boston university, discusses buying and selling psychology, the moods and whims of customers, the power of the small specialty store, problems of store location, the ratio of expense to sales, turnover, window display, service, equipment, etc.

"This book is not only for those who run stores, but for those who enter stores and buy things. Anybody who has ever made a purchase from a shopkeeper ought to enjoy reading this book. It is full of delightful bits of information about yourself and men you deal with." F. C. Kelly

+ Lit R p397 F 4 '22 700w

Pratt p22 autumn '22

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 9 '22 120w

Wis Lib Bul 18:47 F '22 30w

WHITHAM, J. MILLS. Heretic; a study of temperament. 320p $2 Macmillan [8s 6d Allen & U.]

"The novel recounts the pilgrimage through life of Raymon Verne, whom it introduces in early boyhood and leaves in middle age. Those early years in the desolate moorland retreat where Denby Verne brought up the boy in the name of his own passion for sincerity and principle, and where his Uncle Hillary bred in him a devout admiration for Arnold Pratt, manipulative surgeon, and so anathema to the medical profession—those early years made the lad into a romantic and an idealist. Through all the years of his London experience, from the bitterness of the moment when his master and friend, Arnold Pratt, met a sordid death, through his own struggle to maintain himself as a manipulative surgeon in the face of hostility and derision, and to withstand the desperate efforts of his aunt to win him to a life of dignity and success, to the instant when he renounces recognition and retires on the threshold of fame and wealth to his remote moorland home, Raymon Verne remains the seeker for truth, the believer in the redemptive power of truth who builds his life upon his faith."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p5 J1 8 '22 800w

"The book is one to stir thought as well as an intensely interesting novel, the portrayal of a man whom nothing could swerve from his ideal in a world that has little use for ideals."

+ Lit D p58 S 23 '22 850w

"The Heretic' has qualities that make for superior fiction: it has a force, albeit a meagreness, of manner a parsimony of incident combined with a clarity of intention and a highly charged seriousness that invest it with genuine distinction." Amy Loveman

+ Lit R p754 Je 24 '22 880w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Rep 31:283 Ag 2 '22 260w

"One finds in it keen searching of the human soul, much probing after the deepest motives of conduct, and also love and understanding of the wide silences of the moor, ability to describe them impressively and appreciation of their influence upon those who live with them. But the most notable feature of the novel is its portrayal of character. Its important personages stand out as clear, definite and detailed as an etching."

+ N Y Times p18 25 '22 550w

WHITMAN, STEPHEN FRENCH. Sacrifice. 338p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton 22-4241

"A novel which introduces the Enoch Arden motif with a famous African explorer and a brilliant and musical girl of New York society for chief characters. There are elements of a fine drama at the end, in Lilla Delliiver's plunge from New York into the African jungle; but the pretentious wordiness of the author's style goes far to smother the life out of the whole story."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 1 '22 360w

"Its matter and manner are remote from the chatty and competent style of the current journalistic novel. It is as consciously atmospheric and stylistic as the work of the by no means unrecognized minority, Conrad and Cabell, Hergesheimer and Hewlett." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 108:562 Je 24 '22 750w

"A book by one of the most sensitive of American novelists. It is done in a certain mood, and is successful in producing the effect it is after."

+ Lit D p54 Je 10 '22 1200w

"A brilliantly written story, which embraces a wide range of scene and action, and is equally convincing whether picturing smart and studio life in New York or perilous existence in the trackless jungles of Africa. The plot is strong and absorbing, but the author does not depend alone on that."

+ N Y Times p16 My 28 '22 90w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p310 My 11 '22 50w

WHITTINGHAM, GEORGE NAPIER. Home of fadeless splendour; or, Palestine of today; with a foreword by Sir Arthur Wigram Money. 360p il $10 Dutton [24s Hutchinson] 915.69 Palestine—Description and travel 22-10867

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

"There is no book in English that we would recommend more highly to the prospective pilgrim."

+ Cath World 115:250 My '22 480w

WHITTINGHAM, G. N.—Continued

"The book would gain by revision and compression. It has too many unimportant details, and it is overloaded with quotations. It gives much useful information on Palestine, both past and present; it tells the traveller where to lodge and what to see, and—speaking from our own experience—the author's advice is both sound and helpful."

+ — Lit R p536 Mr 25 '22 520w

"He is a candid traveller as well as a pious one. He is quite uncritical about the traditions, and accepts the usual sites as the true ones."

+ New Statesman 18:686 Mr 18 '22 200w

WICKHAM, HARVEY. Scarlet X. 315p $1.50
Clode

22-5606

"A young girl in quest of her lost father, with her ship-companions, an amateur detective, an ornithologist, a Spaniard, and a rascally sea-captain, all find excitement in plenty on a South Sea island where the remnant of a pirate colony guard the mystery of the 'scarlet X.' Combines a well handled mystery plot with a tale of South Sea adventure."—Cleveland

Booklist 18:335 Je '22

"This is a three-ring circus of a tale. The reader must watch sharply in order to keep an eye on all the acts at once. If the denouement seems a trifle tame, at least the events leading to it have held due amount of excitement."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '22 290w
Cleveland p86 N '22

"The story depends upon its multiplicity of incident rather than on any well worked out plot to create its mystery and to hold the attention of the reader. In fact, the number of incidents is so great that not only does the author create the impression of mystery, but confuses the reader as well—the final summing up not even making everything clear. In the matter of description much the same is true—a great deal of detail, but little organization, and little of that delicacy of touch so essential to the drawing of a vivid picture."

+ — Lit R p586 Ap 15 '22 250w

WIDDEMER, MARGARET. Minister of grace. 286p $1.75 Harcourt

22-16974

Short stories in each of which Dr Andrew Blanton, an elderly Episcopal minister, appears. His kindly whimsicality, gained in his long years of dealing with all sorts of problems, goes far to help the younger generation in their difficulties. Contents: Of the clan of God; As one having authority; Wild woodland; A moment of revolt; "Noblesse oblige;" That other Eileen; Adjustment; The little queens of death; Powers of darkness.

Booklist 19:126 Ja '23

"It is not all told so significant a book as 'The Boardwalk' for clearly defined reasons. By her subject matter she has limited her range of vision to a very narrow field." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '22 950w
Cleveland p92 D '22

"There are one or two other stories in the book which is an exceedingly pleasant volume, written with humor and appreciation."

+ Lit D p66 N 4 '22 550w

"Interesting bits of human life in themselves, but they acquire an added attraction from the presence of Dr. Blanton's unworldly figure. Sometimes his presence in the story seems rather forced, and it is evident that the author has dragged him in for the purpose of making him the central thread of the whole collection."

+ — N Y Times p20 S 24 '22 520w

"Margaret Widdemer has a very graceful knack of handling words; she gets her effects serenely and without strain. A pleasant volume for odd moments." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p6 S 17 '22 150w

Pratt p37 autumn '22

"The simple, leisurely development of the situations makes the stories very satisfying in their naturalness. They have poetic feeling, and a true sense of romance in the actual."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 21 '23 260w

Wis Lib Bul 18:255 N '22

WIDDEMER, MARGARET. Tree with a bird in it: a symposium of contemporary American poets on being shown a pear-tree on which sat a grackle. 102p il $1.50 Harcourt

811 Parodies 22-20553

Forty-six American poets are represented in this ostensible symposium and parodied according to the author's whimsical expectations of their reactions to seeing a grackle in a tree. The illustrations by William Saphier are in keeping with the poems.

"There is much skill and cleverness, deep familiarity with our best, and a kindly, keen sense of satire in this fun making book."

+ Bookm 56:769 F '23 180w

"A very distinctive performance of wit and humor and parody. . . Many besides the poets themselves will find this book very interesting and appealing." W: S. Braithwaite

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 25 '22 1500w

"Margaret Widdemer has written an excellent jeu d'esprit."

+ Ind 109:284 N 11 '22 50w

"The preface is bad, the parodies are for the most part good." Milton Raison

+ — N Y Tribune p29 D 3 '22 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 31 '22 300w

WILDE, PERCIVAL. Eight comedies for little theatres. 178p $1.50 Little

812 22-11316

Amusing short plays, easily acted by amateurs. Contents: The sequel; The previous engagement; The dyspeptic ogre; In the net; A wonderful woman; Catesby; His return; Embryo.

Booklist' 19:13 O '22

Cleveland p68 S '22

"Mr. Percival Wilde is neither observing life nor making observations upon it; he is scarcely concerned with life at all. He seems to have striven only to be clever, amusing, ingenious, various, unconventional. Surprise is the emotion to which he most frequently appeals. They have about as much to do with the drama as does the contortionist of the vaudeville stage. Indeed they are really exercises in technique, studies in dexterity, rather than plays." R. A. P.

Freeman 6:21 S 13 '22 170w

"We get pathos, humor, wit, imagination, sentiment, and satire, all deftly manipulated in the service of the pièce bienfait. For always with this writer one feels the sure handling of the technician and that sense of theatre which is born, not made." R: Burton

+ Lit R p819 Jl 22 '22 600w

"From a dramatic point of view they are well conceived, and the ease and naturalness of the dialogue render them peculiarly adapted for reading purposes. Mr. Wilde is always amusing and nearly always clever, but he is in no sense of the word a distinguished literary craftsman."

+ — N Y Times p13 D 17 '22 160w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 132:620 D 6 '22 190w

St Louis 20:220 S '22

"The level of these little plays is far above the average. They are contrived with deft and expert craft, they are all actable, and they can all be counted on for a certain effectiveness. Their content is very slight indeed but nearly always suggestive."

+ Theatre Arts M 6:347 O '22 100w

"Clever short plays, interesting to read and suitable for production before sophisticated audiences."

+ Wis Lib Bul 18:216 O '22

WILEY, HUGH. Jade; and other stories. 245p
$2.50 Knopf

21-20188

This collection of short stories have Chinatown of San Francisco for their background. They all impute to the Chinaman a mixture of refinement, loyalty in friendship and religious sentiment with cold-blooded cruelty and unscrupulous criminality. In "Jade" Sun Kee proves his friendship for Lingo Riley, the Irish hack driver, by murdering Riley's impossible wife for him and sealing her body up in a bronze vase, in such a way as to leave no trace. Then he himself departs for China leaving to Riley his jeweller shop with house and furnishings.

Booklist 18:242 Ap '22

"In these vivid sketches, Mr. Wiley recreates [the San Francisco of before the fire] for us in all its contrasting color and sombreness, its secrecy and flaunting vice, its outward squalor and hidden splendor, its baffling combinations of Oriental cowardice and bravery, of Oriental treachery and honor." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 18 '22 600w

"They are well sustained, and the exotic atmosphere of China creeps, like strange incense, through the stories. Some of these tales are tragic in the extreme. It is the sort of book that a man will revel in."

+ N Y Times p32 D 25 '21 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p326 My 18 '22 100w

Wis Lib Bul 18:74 Mr '22

WILEY, HUGH. Lady Luck. 223p $2.50 Knopf
21-20187

The Wildcat, colored overseas veteran and adventurer, with his mascot goat Lily follows the trail of Lady Luck from Memphis to San Francisco, mixing in every "ruckus" that comes his way. Losing Lily at one stage his troubles begin, but Lily returns and Lady Luck with her. The story leaves him headed homeward for Memphis, his pockets, for the moment, lined with bank notes.

Booklist 18:242 Ap '22

"Set together as a novel, the series of tales holds up well because each one has its whirling centre of laughter. Mr. Wiley knows how to plant his big scenes so that one reads unprotestingly through certain excessive lengths: which, since there is no advertising at the back of the book, might well have been condensed."

+ Dial 72:216 F '22 100w

"An extremely laughable tale of negro life. Mr. Wiley jumps into immediate rank with Octavus Roy Cohen as the book unfolds, for he employs the same type of dialogue, that in which the English language is twisted in a convulsing manner out of its due perspective."

+ N Y Times p32 D 25 '21 70w

Springf'd Republican p11a D 25 '21 80w

WILEY, HUGH. Lily. 278p $2 Knopf
22-21801

The story continues the adventures of the cheerful Wildcat and his mascot goat Lily, following their ups and downs of luck all the way from San Francisco back to the Wildcat's white folks in Memphis.

"Lily and the Wildcat have grown too familiar to us and, with the familiarity has come—no, not contempt, for they will always bring a smile—but a weariness and a sorrow and a wish that Wiley hadn't."

— + Boston Transcript p4 N 8 '22 260w

"Mr. Wiley's negro comedians have the advantage over most of their competitors in that amply filled field of fiction that they are innocent of burnt cork. They are exaggerated, sometimes to the point of travesty, but they remain genuinely colored persons, not white men masquerading. And they are undeniably amusing, though there is a certain sameness in their repeated misadventures that renders too steady reading of them cloying."

+ Lit R p204 N 11 '22 290w

"Whether the story is true to life or not, it cannot be denied that 'Lily' is a very amusing book."

+ N Y Times p23 N 5 '22 400w

"Parades a rich and rare vocabulary." A. D. Douglas

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 5 '22 940w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 23 '22 200w

WILKINSON, MRS MARGUERITE OGDEN (BIGELOW). Dingbat of Arcady. 188p $1.75 Macmillan

818

22-5815

Mrs Wilkinson describes in this book a journey in a flat-bottomed boat down the Willamette river in Oregon and camping trips by boat, bicycle and Ford in this country and England. The adventures are slight, but the account of them is written with zest and enthusiasm and the trace of the poet is often observable in the simple narrative of experiences.

Booklist 18:325 Je '22

"One of the freshest travel books I've ever read. I don't recommend it to those who have forgotten that they ever liked to tramp the woods and fields. It is filled with the gospel of out of door living, which Mrs. Wilkinson has expressed with simplicity and not too much lyricism." J. F.

+ Bookm 55:300 My '22 420w

"Even if there are many who would hesitate to follow Mrs. Wilkinson's example in her manner of peregrination, none will deny the pleasure felt in reading her charming racy narrative of adventures in sun and wind and rain."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '22 300w
Cleveland p71 S '22

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Ind 108:374 Ap 15 '22 50w

"Mrs. Wilkinson has put something of poetry into these prose sketches: she has sensed the beautiful and the picturesque where others might observe only the commonplace; she has described from a new point of view camping experiences such as countless others have undergone without being able to appreciate or to depict so well as she. Woven throughout the tale are fascinating details of encounters and conversations with quaint rustic characters; and these add a human background that gives color and balance to the book."

+ Lit R p611 Ap 22 '22 180w

"Naive, pleasant chronicle. The book of their travels is fresh and sweet." Carl Van Doren

+ Nation 115:sup377 O 11 '22 160w

N Y Tribune p8 O 15 '22 300w

Outlook 131:172 My 24 '22 60w

St Louis 20:219 S '22

Springf'd Republican p7a My 14 '22 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p787 N 30 '22 30w

WILL, ALLEN SINCLAIR. Life of Cardinal Gibbons, archbishop of Baltimore. 2v 1145p il $10 Dutton

B or 92 Gibbons, James, cardinal 22-23133

This life of Cardinal Gibbons is the result of conversations between himself and the author, held for the purpose of the biography and extending over a period of five years. They are supplemented by other data obtained from the Cardinal's private journal, from the archives of the archdiocese of Baltimore, and from many of his letters. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 19:157 F '23

Reviewed by J. T. Williams, Jr.

Boston Transcript p3 F 3 '23 2650w

"Dr. Will's biography is the story of a great American as well as a great churchman told with many intimate touches born only of a close friendship. It is also a very interesting narrative of a phase of the development of American political ideals which gives it a permanent historical value." J. E. Murphy

WILL, ALLEN SINCLAIR—Continued
+ Lit R p412 Ja 27 '23 1550w

"The biography is pleasantly written: the tone is one of such unrelieved eulogy as to suggest hagiography and to lose much human interest; the flavor is a piquant blend of geniality and gravity. There are a few good illustrations." J. Cavanaugh
+ — Nation 116:154 F 7 '23 1100w

"An adequate life." M. F. Egan
+ N Y Times p7 D 10 '22 2650w

"It is an authorized work, Mr. Will having spent much time with Cardinal Gibbons, hearing from his lips his own story of his life, and having been allowed to read his private journal, covering many years of his services and to study the archives of the archdiocese of Baltimore."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 16 '22 100w

WILLIAM II, emperor of Germany (abdicated 1918). Kaiser's memoirs (Eng title Comparative history, 1878-1914). 366p $3.50 Harper [8s 6d Hutchinsons]

B or 92 Europe—History—1871-. European war, 1914-1919—Diplomatic history. European war, 1914-1919—Germany 22-21224

The book is the ex-Kaiser's personal review of his career as emperor from 1888 to the end of the war and his abdication in 1918. He views the political conditions in Europe during the chancellorships of Bismark, Caprivi, Hohenlohe, Bülow and Bethmann; his relations with his co-workers in the administration; his attitude toward science and art, the church, the army and the navy; and the conditions that preceded the outbreak of the war. The book is thruout an attempt to justify himself and his country. Comparatively little is said of the war while in progress, but there is a brief chapter on its end and his abdication. A concluding chapter sums up the causes of the war, in the writer's estimation, and absolves from guilt himself and Germany. The translation into English is by Thomas R. Ybarra.

"A weak apology and a still weaker appeal to the German people. As for military talents, the book gives us glimpses of the petty drill master but not a word as to the grand strategy of war or even the tactics of the battle front. A self-taken photograph appears, however, of one made powerful by inheritance who possessed just enough brain to lead him to interfere in every activity of the Empire and materially aid in its destruction. Disappointing the volume is in its omissions, but nevertheless of startling interest, because of the writer's great position. What would we not give today for the personal narratives of Attila, Alexander the Great, and Tamerlane?" J. W. Gerard
— Bookm 56:341 N '22 1450w

Boston Transcript p8 D 13 '22 1050w
Cleveland p95 D '22

"While the 'Memoirs' have little historical value, they establish the fact that the Kaiser was as stupid as any other politician. Even his attempt to present the case of the German Government in the matter of war-guilt betrays gross ignorance and lack of historical resource. A number of dispassionate persons have made out a better case for Germany than the Kaiser."
— Freeman 6:246 N 22 '22 1150w

"Prejudice or dislike or positive hatred ought not to prevent the student of psychology and of history from reading this precious volume. It is enlightening; it is a masterpiece of exterior and interior decorating. It does not contain one single dull page, and it has been well translated. It reads like a romance; and it has all the qualities that one might expect from a practised writer of fiction." M. F. Egan
— Int Bk R p20 D '22 2300w

"In spite of his conviction of intellectuality, his memoirs are childish and dull. He wrote them apparently, as Napoleon wrote his, to defend himself and to help restore his dynasty. His paragraphs describing the outbreak of the war and his own innocent ignorance of what was going on—when those paragraphs are read in the light of the state documents since published by the German Government with annotations in his handwriting—make a piece of barefaced royal mendacity beside which Napoleon's specious memoirs in exile are the mild hypocrisies of a bourgeois imposter." Harvey O'Higgins

— Lit R p221 N 18 '22 1650w

Reviewed by L. S. Gannett
Nation 115:sup632 D 6 '22 600w

"There is nothing to justify the description of the book as the ex-Emperor's defence. It has no historic significance whatever."
— Nation and Ath 32:165 O 28 '22 500w

"This book is an impertinence. In our judgment it bears no resemblance whatever to a defence, and its only significance is to make us wonder whether the air of Holland has produced softening of the brain in the august exile."
— New Statesman 19:668 S 23 '22 380w

New Statesman 20:276 D 2 '22 650w

"Page after page of snivel and drivel, which is not only nauseating but provocative of a combination of disagreeable bodily sensations and spiritual depression that no words can convey. The naïve way in which he recounts the beautiful that he did in life is not so suggestive of a lack of mental equilibrium as of a shortage of mental equipment." Joseph Collins
— N Y Times p1 N 5 '22 3950w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p12 N 12 '22 1300w

R of Rs 66:670 D '22 110w

St Louis 21:16 Ja '23

"The Crown Prince had a much better run for his money than will ever fall to the lot of the ex-Kaiser if the book before us is the best that he can do. Regarded as an attempt to impress the world with 'the eloquence of facts,' the book is pathetic."
— Spec 129:308 S 2 '22 700w

"On almost every page the ex-Kaiser proves what a ridiculous person he is and was. While we read the book we felt rather as though we were talking to a rich person of considerably less than average intellect who, thanks to his wealth, had travelled about the world, picked up some languages and acquired a great deal of miscellaneous information about men and things, but had entirely failed to arrange his knowledge in any kind of useful sequence."
— Spec 129:sup793 D 2 '22 1750w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p546 Ag 24 '22 50w

WILLIAMS, BEN AMES. Black Pawl. 177p $2 Dutton [6s Mills & B.]

22-20880

A grim story the whole action of which takes place on board a small whaling vessel. Black Pawl is captain and his son Red Pawl first mate. They are both strong, brutal men, but Black Pawl has traits of character which draw men to him while his son is everywhere disliked and avoided. Between father and son there has always been a strange enmity. The drama is intensified by the addition to the ship's company of a missionary and a young woman who is his charge. Ruth Lytton proves to be a link with Black Pawl's tragic past and with a great wrong done him years before for which he had taken his revenge. Red Pawl is his father's penance whom he bore "like a load of sins about his neck." Passions so naked lead to more than one scene of raw brutality and culminate in a tragic dénouement in which Black Pawl pays the price for his own sins and his son's.

Booklist 19:126 Ja '23

"There is a touch of sublimity in this book, a trace of the sombre grandeur of 'Lord Jim.' The author's purpose, no doubt, was to produce a popular romance, and in this he has succeeded.

But it is a popular romance of a very superior sort, a character study worth more than an ephemeral vogue."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 D 10 '22 330w

"Brief, vividly told, it is a high achievement for Mr. Williams in a field which he has made his own."

+ Lit R p134 O 21 '22 230w

"Ben Ames Williams has chosen a theme such as might have appealed to one of the old Greek dramatists, and has handled it with a skill that entitles him to high rank among the novelists of today."

+ N Y Times sec7:6 O 8 '22 400w

"Just as we have a vague feeling that we've seen the story screened, we have a vague feeling that we've read worse books. But we can't exactly remember when, nor why." Milton Raison

— N Y Tribune p12 N 19 '22 330w

Spec 128:405 Ap 1 '22 60w

"Substantially and well done, yet it has unsatisfactory spots. The characters are obviously not the best-seller sort, but it is not until the closing chapters that they assume the definition they have been aiming toward throughout the book. In so doing they present Mr. Williams with a problem that might very well have ruined the whole story."

+ — Springfield Republican p6a D 3 '22 250w

"A story kept well within the comparatively short scope which suits it best."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 23 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 19:25 Ja '23

WILLIAMS, CLEMENT CLARENCE. Design of masonry structures and foundations. 555p il $5 McGraw

693 Masonry. Foundations 22-13989

"Presupposing a knowledge of mechanics, the author presents the theory of designing various structures. Gives considerable attention to architectural features."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:564 D '22

WILLIAMS, JAMES MICKEL. Principles of social psychology as developed in a study of economic and social conflict. 459p $5 Knopf

301 Social psychology. Social sciences 22-15731

The object of the book is the analysis of certain psychological processes that have their roots in instincts and, especially, the analysis of economic and social conflict. Instinctive tendencies, more or less modified by experience, give rise to dispositions. Book I is devoted to the description of these instinctive dispositions and the other six books to their functioning in social organization. They treat successively of the conflicting interests in economic, political, professional, family, cultural and educational relations; and of the social reactions of suppressed impulses. Bibliography, index of subjects and index of authors.

Am Pol Sci R 16:715 N '22 180w

Booklist 19:110 Ja '23

Boston Transcript p5 S 2 '22 980w

Reviewed by Herman Simpson

Freeman 6:283 N 29 '22 2200w

"The author has woven into a very readable book most of the vital social literature of recent times, while his treatment shows an intimate acquaintance with the problems he discusses. The sincerity of his work is attested to by the fact that his insistence on the profundity of the issues involved is not dependent on nor accentuated by muddled thinking or sophisticated terminology." C. F. T.

+ Int J Ethics 33:225 Ja '23 220w

"His book is not a treatise on the principles of social psychology. It is truthfully described in his sub-title as a study of economic and social conflict. It is an acute, learned, wide ranging, fearless and formidable volley of sociologicalings, and I shall be greatly surprised if we do not presently discover that it has blown a big hole through the crust of our prejudices."

F. H. Giddings

+ — Lit R p414 Ja 27 '23 800w

"Readers who are not familiar with the functioning of our social institutions, and particularly the unsophisticated, will learn much from these pages about the operation of human motives in our social organizations. The pages are rich in penetrating comment. Such readers will be wiser because of the exposure of the power and prevalence of selfishness and they will appreciate the high value of sympathy and intelligence. But they will not, I think, make a comprehensive acquaintance with the major problems and principles of social psychology." W. F. Ogburn

+ — Nation 115:212 Ag 30 '22 1100w

"The valuable feature of the volume lies in its presentation of the most enlightened views of modern students of these questions."

+ — New Repub 32:341 N 22 '22 170w

"The book, despite its carefully arranged information and often acute observations, is spoiled by what we can only describe as the grotesque theory of the mind as an autonomous power." Austin Hay

+ — N Y Times p5 O 8 '22 450w

"Professor Williams' book is a substantial contribution to social psychology. Some of the chapters are masterly; the one on Congeniality should take its place with James' famous chapter on Habit." D. S. Wechsler

+ Survey 49:660 F 15 '23 800w

WILLIAMS, JESSE FEIRING. Personal hygiene applied. 412p il $2.50 Saunders

613 Hygiene 22-15303

The author, who is associate professor of physical education at Teachers College, Columbia University, has planned his book primarily for college students, but it is more than a textbook of hygiene. It aims to show that "health is more than perfect bodily functions"—that it has meaning only in relation to other and higher values. The first five chapters set forth this aspect of health—its meaning in terms of life, its relation to intelligence and to ideals. The remaining chapters provide a systematic treatment of hygiene from its scientific side.

WILLIAMS, JOHN HARVEY. Yosemite and its high Sierra: 2d ed., rev. and greatly enl. 193p il $3; pa $2 The author, 604 Mission st, San Francisco

917.94 Yosemite national park 21-12277

"For this new edition the author has rewritten most of the former volume in order to bring it up to date with regard to the changes that have been made in the facilities for visiting the park, and other important matter has been added. There are many new illustrations from photographs, a frontispiece in color and two new maps, one a road map showing approaches to the park and the other a new map of the park showing roads, trails and landmarks, both of which will make the volume particularly useful to automobilists. The park in general, the Yosemite Valley, the high Sierra region, the Hetch-Hetchy Valley, the meadows and grand cañon of the Tuolumne, the forest growths, are all considered at length. A feature making it especially useful for tourists is the section devoted to condensed information about roads, trails, camp life and other means of entertainment, guide service, Yosemite lectures and other matters of practical consequence."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Margaret Armstrong

Lit R p10 J1 23 '21 180w

"It is a very beautiful book, having over 250 halftone illustrations from photographs, many of them of full-page size, some showing wide, impressive views and other interesting detail. The narrative is well written, with a judicious mixture of description carrying the reader rapidly along road or trail, and of historic, scientific or practical information."

+ N Y Times p27 Ja 29 '22 340w

WILLIAMS, J. H.—Continued

"The next best thing to a visit to the park is to read this book and study its photographs. The text is a good description of the park, its beauties, wonders and needs; but the text is dwarfed by the illustrations. Fifty of these are full-page photographs, and the whole collection forms a scenic presentation of Yosemite, its valleys and uplands, its crags and waterfalls, its big trees and baby bears, which leaves nothing to be desired."

+ Springf'd Republican N 20 '21 340w

WILLIAMS, SIDNEY CLARK. Body in the blue room. 318p il $1.75 Penn

22-3699

"One of the feminine guests staying at an American country house is found dead in her room. The circumstances are mysterious and no one knows very much about the lady. It turns out that she has led a queer life and has some more than queer associates, who arrive and depart unceremoniously in an aeroplane, as ordinary people do in a motor car, and generally carry on in a very singular fashion. After many complications and two or three more violent deaths the truth comes out. The lady was murdered half accidentally, not by her queer associates, but through her connexion with them; the reader must find out how and by whom."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Unfortunately Mr. Williams has been more anxious to mystify us than he has to have his characters act humanly and sensibly."

— Boston Transcript p6 Mr 18 '22 400w

"The author's handling of his material shows ingenuity and freshness in some of his incidents and those who like stories of mysterious crime and its unravelment will find his novel full of excitement."

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 26 '22 620w

Springf'd Republican p15a Ap 23 '22 150w

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Ap 20 '22 150w

WILLIAMS, TALCOTT. Newspaperman. (Vocational ser.) 209p $1.25 Scribner

070 Journalists 22-6192

This volume in the Vocational series is written by the former director of the School of Journalism, Columbia university, himself for many years a journalist. He discusses the qualifications of a newspaper man, his responsibilities to the public, personal equipment, professional training, earnings and opportunities.

"While the book was evidently prepared to aid young men in the choice of a life work, it can be read by executives who want to know more about the editing and making of newspapers. For those interested in the production of newspapers for industrial plants, the book contains many helpful suggestions, and might well be ordered for the plant library." J. M. Lee

+ Administration 4:618 N '22 500w

Booklist 18:306 Je '22

"Dr. Williams writes fluently and pleasantly of the calling of a newspaper man. He gives little specific information on news organizations or practice. At times his sermonic fluency tires, but the volume is short and soon finished."

+ — Lit R p611 Ap 22 '22 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:262 Je '22

Pratt p6 autumn '22

R of Rs 67:224 F '23 80w

St Louis 20:203 S '22

"Dr. Williams discusses the various aspects of journalism with insight and no little pungency of opinion."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 18 '22 190w

WILLIAMS, VALENTINE (DOUGLAS VALENTINE, pseud.). Yellow streak. 341p $2 Houghton

22-8943

The guests at Harkings, Hartley Parrish's country place are shocked on finding the dead body of their host in the library. Not much is known of Parrish's former life or forebears, so his engagement to Mary Trevert is not altogether a popular one. Robin Greve, a rising young barrister is in love with Mary, and he tries to persuade her to give Parrish up on the very day that the latter is murdered. Suspicion hovers around Greve for a while, but slowly clues point in a very opposite direction and for the solution of the mystery the central figures in the book have to journey to Holland, where much is disclosed of Parrish's life and source of wealth when Jeekes, his secretary writes a detailed confession.

Booklist 18:335 Je '22

"In spite of its rapid march its hairbreadth escapes and the general breathless excitement which accompanies its episodes, the story is told reasonably and with a logic of development which comes very close to the standard of Mr. Oppenheim at his best."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '22 200w

"Frankly a detective story and nothing else; but it is a reasonably good one of its kind."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 S 3 '22 270w

"The story is interesting and none the less so because it is less sensational than many of its kind. The mystery slowly unfolds, and when the author has finished telling his story, he stops."

+ Lit D p58 Je 10 '22 700w

Nation and Ath 131:446 Je 24 '22 140w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:323 Ji '22

Sat R 133:583 Je 3 '22 200w

Spec 129:23 Ji 1 '22 60w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 21 '22 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 25 '22 350w

WILLIAMS, WHITING. Full up and fed up. 324p il $2.50 Scribner [12s 6d Allen & U.]

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain 21-20731

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Daily News Rec p14 Je 26 '22 700w

"This is an excellent book of first-hand observation on the British workers. . . It is a pity that Mr. Williams does not reinforce his bright gift by reading. He trusts utterly to his sensitiveness for impressions, and leaves his background of preparedness thin. The result is a series of inaccuracies which weaken the book for students and disturb one's sense of the responsibility of the writer." Arthur Gleason

+ — Lit R p486 Mr 11 '22 580w

"His conclusions are the commonplaces of the literature of the labor movement, but with the fresh bloom of personal discovery upon them."

+ — Nation 114:401 Ap 5 '22 400w

Spec 128:242 F 25 '22 1750w

"Mr. Williams is an unusually close and sensitive observer—indeed almost a mimic—and we can feel confident that he has not colored his impressions. As far as it is possible to do so, one actually feels that one is talking to Mr. Williams' many workmen friends. The only fault one might suggest is that the book is possibly a little diffuse, and that evidently there has been but slight attempt at selection or condensation of material." S. A. Lewisohn

+ Survey 47:735 F 4 '22 1000w

WILLIAMS, WHITING. Horny hands and hampered elbows; the worker's mind in western Europe. 285p il $2.50 Scribner

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Europe. Europe—Social conditions 22-23079

The book is a complement to two previous books by the author, one giving his experiences as a laborer in America and the other in England. In the present volume the author recounts his efforts to get close to the life and work of the unskilled common laborer of France in the basic industries of iron, steel and coal.

His object is to furnish some contributing information towards solving the problems of western Europe and the world.

Booklist 19:148 F '23

"Whiting Williams is a sentimental traveler among the masses. He treats the working man as a phenomenon. 'Horny Hands and Hampered Elbows,' like his earlier book is good reading. But it skims the surface. As a sketchy picture of European conditions it is illuminating enough, however, and its humor serves to make alarming situations more palatable for American consumption."

+ — Bookm 56:772 F '23 70w

"The significance of the volume comes in the personal observations of the author: the deductions savor of the journalistic." R. D. W.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '22 850w

N Y Times p21 Ja 21 '23 720w

"The author undoubtedly has a gift for discerning the point of view of the unskilled laborer, his findings on this subject should be valuable reading for years to come. Some of the material included, however, is only disjointed journalism."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 D 1 '22 600w

WILLIAMSON, GEORGE CHARLES. Behind my library door. 208p il $3 Dutton [10s 6d Selwyn & B.]

704 Collectors and collecting. Art

The author, who has written many books on art and artists, is known in this country especially for the superb catalogs he made of the J. Pierpont Morgan collections. The sixteen essays in the present volume, beginning with Ouida and ending with Swinburne, deal with books and authors, miniatures, clocks and watches. There are chapters on Jean Petitot and his enamels, Alexander Cooper and the miniatures he painted for Queen Christina of Sweden, on John Locke's pocket book, the Morgan catalogs, early editions of Bradshaw, horological literature, old Quaker watchmakers, some American book clubs, and old French court calendars.

Ind 109:284 N 11 '22 40w

"It makes pleasant reading. For besides being a connoisseur of rare qualities Dr. Williamson is a skillful and careful literary artist."

+ Lit R p226 N 18 '22 280w

"A book without coherence other than the placid flow which Dr. Williamson's recondite scholarship gives it. It is when he deals with subjects of little intrinsic interest from the wider point of view, and makes them readable by virtue simply of his own treatment, that the author gives to the publication of his book the justification it possesses. And when he deals with miniatures and miniature painters, or with odd departments of specialised literature, he exerts something distantly related to fascination."

+ — New Statesman 18:482 Ja 28 '22 550w

"A somewhat unique and entertaining volume that should appeal to lovers of odd information and people with the collector's instinct. It may be dipped into anywhere, for there is no system in the placing of articles; that would be an impossible task. Dr. Williamson writes in a facile, though undistinguished, manner. The value of the book lies in his material."

+ N Y Times p18 D 24 '22 400w

"Pleasant topics of which Dr. Williamson knows much."

+ Spec 127:755 D 3 '21 150w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 11 '22 120w

WILLIS, HENRY PARKER, and EDWARDS, GEORGE WILLIAM. Banking and business. 573p $3.50 Harper

332.1 Banks and banking 22-2021

The present volume embodies material which has for some years past been in use in the School of business of Columbia university in the form of outlined mimeographed notes.

Part one gives a descriptive survey of the entire field of money and banking. Part two introduces the student to the current organization and business practice of commercial banks. Part three is devoted to the investment bank, savings institutions and trust companies. Part four gives a descriptive outline of banking in various aspects, such as banking abroad, the evolution of the American system, the organization and operation of the Federal reserve system, the relation of banking to government and its general economic significance. There are various appendixes and an index.

Reviewed by J. D. Magee

Administration 3:505 Ap '22 4500w

Reviewed by G. W. Dowrie

Am Econ R 12:514 S '22 600w

Reviewed by C. T. Murchison

Educ R 64:170 S '22 400w

"The material is well prepared for the purpose, and is easily read by the class of students for whom it was designed. If it is the purpose of a course to acquaint the students with the general nature of a commercial bank, this book could be used successfully." W. F. Mitchell

+ J Pol Econ 30:595 Ag '22 420w

Lit R p472 Mr 4 '22 150w

St Louis 20:295 D '22

"A careful and comprehensive survey of American banking well adapted for the use of the student or the young business man. The work affords no new or classic statement of banking principles, but it is an admirable presentation of concrete business practice."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 14 '22 80w

Wis Lib Bul 18:271 D '22

WILLOUGHBY, BARRETT. Where the sun swings north. 355p $1.90 Putnam

22-20174

A prospector and his family, consisting of his wife, young son, and sister-in-law, cruising in a schooner, landed at the Alaska fur and trading post at Katleen. There they were lured by the wicked chief of the post, Paul Kilbuck, who had designs on Mrs. Boreland, to go to the deserted reef-bound island of Kon Klayu in search of gold. With only two men beside themselves — Kayak Bill, an old trader, and Gregg Harlan, a young candidate for delirium tremens, the family was marooned on the island for a year with scanty stores, while Kilbuck withheld the schooner and promised succor. Their struggle for existence in a wild climate makes a story of the Robinson Crusoe type, enriched by a romance between the now thoroughly cured Harlan and the girl Jean.

Booklist 19:126 Ja '23

"Mr. Willoughby's well-drawn characters have many thrilling adventures amidst surroundings that are graphically described by a native-born Alaskan."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '22 220w

Cleveland p92 D '22

"There are genuine freshness and sincerity in this tale of Alaska. The plot is handled well enough, but is no more than the usual thing."

+ — Lit R p163 O 28 '22 120w

"The story is a vivid and very interesting picture of life at a trading company's post on the coast, and, later, on a little uninhabited island ninety miles off shore. And secondly, it is a good story, with plenty of action and incident and emotional appeal and with interest kept at high pitch because the author, with excellent craftsmanship, keeps the reader uncertain as to how the successive incidents and the story itself are going to turn out."

+ N Y Times p12 O 29 '22 550w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p10 O 29 '22 330w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p786 N 30 '22 10w

WILLOUGHBY, WESTEL WOODBURY. China at the conference; a report. 419p $3 Johns Hopkins

327.51 China—Foreign relations. Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22. Eastern question (Far East). Shantung, China 22-10250

"Professor Willoughby's book is offered merely as a 'report' of affairs Chinese at the recent Washington Conference. It deals exclusively with the matters in which China was directly concerned. The Siberian question is referred to only once. The method is to bring together from the records, chiefly from the published documents and communiqués, the salient points in the proposals, discussions, and decisions on every topic from tariff autonomy to the Twenty-one Demands. The volume is a digest and a handbook in which the reader will find topically classified a large amount of information which otherwise can be obtained only by much search and study. Not the least important of Professor Willoughby's documentary material is a digest of the preliminary correspondence in which the author hints at the evidence that the origin of the Conference was in London rather than in Washington. China at the Conference is, however, more than a report. It is an interpretation."—Am Hist R

"Professor Willoughby has given a dispassionate, severely restrained, and documented interpretation of the exact status of China at the beginning of the Conference, its contentions, its defeats, and its achievements. China at the Conference is not propaganda. It does not therefore belong in the class with almost everything which in the last few years has been written on the East, but the book does contain all that is legitimate in propaganda—a cold, judicial, even critical, setting-forth of the facts." Tyler Dennett

+ Am Hist R 27:793 J1 '22 600w

"Leaves nothing to be desired in the arrangement and presentation of the subject." W. W. McLaren

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:506 Ag '22 150w

Boston Transcript p7 My 31 '22 880w

"An objective, precise and rather cold documentary report, stating fully and weighing carefully the facts of the case. It is far from lacking force and vigor, but these qualities grow out of an appearance of studied repression rather than of aggression." G. E. Porter

+ Lit R p854 Ag 5 '22 550w

New Statesman 20:118 O 28 '22 280w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:547 D '22

"Although not official in character, it is an indispensable account and summary of what was done at Washington."

+ R of Rs 66:109 J1 '22 120w

St Louis 20:207 S '22

The Times [London] Lit Sup p347 My 25 '22 100w

Reviewed by F. W. Williams

Yale R n s 12:203 O '22 220w

WILLOUGHBY, WESTEL WOODBURY, and ROGERS, LINDSAY. Introduction to the problem of government. 545p $3 Doubleday

320 Political science 21-21088

"Deals with political theory and practice in the light of the world's experience. The book is not a systematic treatise in the ordinary sense; it does not purport to include the whole range of governmental activity. As its title implies, it is an 'Introduction' to the general problem of governing a free people. The authors have singled out practically all the great questions of government which are engaging the public interest today. It is a book for the live teacher and student of contemporary affairs—not for the antiquarian or the delver into origins. The twenty-four chapters are devoted to the most essential features of political life and governmental methods. Little unnecessary detail finds its way into the text, but the great principles of government are given adequate treatment."—Am Pol Sci R

"This is one of the most notable among recent books on the general problems of political science and government. . . The numerous illustrations from American experience make the work acceptable to the American student, but the text is also fortified at every point by illustrations from British governmental experience as well." J. E. Harley

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:133 F '22 500w

WILLS, RIDLEY. Hoax. 297p $2 Doran

22-14721

The story of Eugene Bennett from his eighteenth to his twenty-seventh year is told in a mood of amused detachment by his father, who was thru all his friend and confidant. Brilliant almost to the point of genius, impressionable, Eugene was from his earliest childhood a "weaver of colorful fabrics of the imagination" and possessed of a sense of humor which prevented him from taking himself or anybody else seriously. The story is chiefly concerned with his affairs of the heart, especially with his vacillations between two girls. After repeated and most sudden changes of heart he comes back finally to his first love and the book leaves him on the eve of marriage, without inspiring the reader with any confidence that it will indeed take place.

"As a really human, likeable and plausible trifter Eugene is a genuinely believable character sketch. Somehow we do not accept him as a literary character quite so easily."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 9 '22 520w

"He can write. His style is excellent, and although the narrative drags a little at the middle and would profit by some condensation it is a well made tale, moving smoothly and in orderly fashion to a well prepared dénouement."

+ Lit R p795 J1 8 '22 550w

New Repub 32:76 S 13 '22 50w

"The book is handled in a delightful style, and the story told in such a manner as to hold the reader through to the last word. Nowhere does the reader really know just what to expect. An unusually interesting book."

+ N Y Times p13 My 28 '22 470w

"The book is frank and engaging."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a J1 23 '22 220w

Wis Lib Bul 18:219 O '22

WILLSIE, HONORE (MCCUE) (MRS HENRY ELMER WILLSIE). Judith of the godless valley. 354p $2 Stokes

22-16760

The inhabitants of Lost Chief, in the Western cattle country, were descendants of New England ancestors, but three generations removed, and time and the ease of gaining a living in the rich valley had reduced their morals to a minimum. Douglas Spencer and Judith, his foster sister, had finer instincts than most of the young people of the valley, but they were hampered by the lax morals of those around them. When a minister came to Lost Chief, determined to preach a sermon, Douglas was the leader of the mob which drove him out of town. Years later, driven by a loneliness he could not define, Douglas brought the same minister back to Lost Chief and built a chapel for him. But in his absence the chapel was burned and the minister kidnapped. Then Douglas and Judith decided the only way to help Lost Chief was by themselves showing a living example of decency, and together they set out on their hazardous task.

"With characteristic skill Mrs Willsie again weaves into a somewhat worn fabric threads of so vivid a color and combines them so ingeniously that the result has the grateful effect of rejuvenation if not of renascence."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 30 '22 650w

"A story of the West which is not like any of the usual kinds of thing. It has an idea in place of the usual perfunctory layout, and its performance is by no means machine work. . . . Whether in its realistic or its romantic aspects, it is a tale infinitely removed from the idle and perfunctory yarns that merely use the husk of wild-western tradition to spin their flimsy webs in." H. W. Boynton
+ Ind 109:138 S 16 '22 100w

"As a tale of love and action, the story is a success; as a document in support of religion, it lacks direction and force. The style, though restrained, is as invigorating as the country which it describes so well."
+ Lit R p74 S 30 '22 270w

"In honesty it must be said that the author's treatment of her very important subject is distinctly superficial. Throughout, the book fails to carry conviction. Its incidents and its characters alike seem machine made, though with a considerable degree of skill. One feels that the novel is not this writer's natural mode of expression, that she would be far more at ease in one which made less demand upon the creative imagination. She has a theory to illustrate, rather than a story to tell or a picture or a criticism of life to set before the reader."
L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p28 Ag 27 '22 950w

"The tale is pretty well loaded with morals, and at times the characters spout terrific platitudes and indulge in wall-motto quotations; but it all moves at a canter. One must sadly admit the West has beaten Mrs. Willsie herself, considering her simply as a writer. This is her fifth or sixth novel, and she is no nearer to achieving a style than she was with her first." W. Harris
+ N Y Tribune p4 Ag 27 '22 580w

WILSON, CHARLOTTE, pseud. See Baker, K.

WILSON, HARRY LEON. Merton of the movies. 335p $1.75 Doubleday

22-10017

The experiences of a young man who leaves a country grocery store to go into the moving picture business. He studies the "movie art" thru a correspondence course and after a while he manages to save enough to go to Hollywood where he haunts the picture companies. He is undaunted by continual rebuffs and his promise as an actor is finally recognized by "Flip" Montague who trains him in a way very contrary to his ideals. The methods of the producers are told with humor and the climax is both amusing and dramatic when Merton sees himself on the screen in his first picture.

Booklist 18:335 Je '22

"It is human and wise and tolerant. Its moving picture atmosphere is well done and not so detailed as to become, except very occasionally, wearisome. Wilson has done a fine picture of the inner mind of a large class of America. On many grounds it is a good book. If it were not so obviously dated it might be a great book."

+ Bookm 55:415 Je '22 210w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
Dial 73:106 Jl '22 700w

Lit D p48 Jl 15 '22 1450w

"Mr. Wilson, it is true, is not exactly an obscure or neglected writer; but he is a much greater writer than his appreciative public has yet been led to acknowledge and believe. He has given us 'something better and finer' than perhaps he himself even knows. He has given us that rarest of rare things—a masterpiece of humor and hidden pathos. For Mr. Wilson, too, like all true humorists, is a 'tragic comedian.'" L. W. Dodd
+ Lit R p699 Je 3 '22 880w

"To keep his half trag-comedian in character must have been a difficult job, but Mr. Wilson has done it with great skill and ease. Mr. Wilson's painting in of Merton Gill, a character which offers so many rich possibilities for violent colors and broad burlesque, has restrained him within limits. Flip Montague is also extremely well-done, and Mr. Wilson avoids, neatly and humanly, the many pitfalls of what would be less workmanlike hands have been an unreal love-story." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 30:382 My 24 '22 1250w

"Merton is a triumph, artist, fool, likeable boy, baby, hero all in one, and the girl is quite as great a success. She is a genuine innocent, fresh, wise beyond time itself, fit to meet any emergency, chock full of delicious fun and spirit. And here is a treatment of Hollywood and the world of the movies that is different from anything else written yet." Hildegarde Hawthorne
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 16 '22 1050w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:324 Jl '22

"There are some delightful character-sketches; and Mr. Wilson is to be congratulated on a very pretty piece of work which should appeal to all those whose interest in the cinema is more than screen-deep."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 21 '22 350w

Wis Lib Bul 18:187 Jl '22

WILSON, VIOLET A. Queen Elizabeth's maids of honour and ladies of the privy chamber 244p il $6 Dutton [15s Lane]

942.05 Elizabeth, queen of England. Great Britain—Court and courtiers

(Eng ed 22-9493)

"Among the girls who at one time or another during Elizabeth's long reign served among her maids were her cousins, Lady Catherine Grey, next in line of succession to the throne; her sister, Lady Mary, and the Ladies Kate and Philadelphia Carey, Lettice and Cecilia Knollys, and Mary Howard; Mary Sidney, sister of the famous Sir Philip; Mary Fitton, who, it has been suggested, might be the 'Dark Lady' of Shakespeare's Sonnets, and Frances Radcliffe, Ann Russell and Elizabeth Hastings. Of these and many others Miss Wilson tells the life story, picturing their years at Court and the spectacular and human phases of the great events they witnessed, as well as the intrigues and the romances of which they were a part. The dozen illustrations add greatly to the interest of the book, as they all come from usually inaccessible private collections. One of them, of particular interest, is from a contemporary painting showing Elizabeth dancing with the Earl of Leicester."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p4 N 11 '22 700w

"One of the chief merits of this graphically painted sketch of the circle around the Virgin Queen is that it is well documented. It is amusing; it makes one sad at times, for it is so pathetically human; it is a little candle, well-trimmed, illuminating corners of the corridor of history." M. F. Egan
+ Freeman 6:211 N 8 '22 2250w

"Miss Wilson has unrolled a vivid picture of the lives of the maids of honor. Her style, however, lacks all sophistication. It flows with the garrulous confidence of a shining brook; and often Miss Wilson refers (without foot-notes) to small daily Elizabethan events which neither she nor any one else can possibly chronicle as occurring in just that fashion."

+ Lit R p130 O 21 '22 330w

"Industrious compilations are as waxworks shows compared with drama, even when the fortunes of Elizabeth Vernon and Ann Russell are eked out with descriptions of progresses and pageants. Matters are hardly improved by the uncritical adoption of stories that are regarded as apocryphal by Sir Sidney Lee and other authorities on the reign."

+ New Statesman 18:540 F 11 '22 760w

"The author has a keen sense of emotional and dramatic values and she understands the literary worth of Court pageantry as background and setting. In addition she writes with full modern regard for realism and truth and with a sense of humor for human foibles. The combination insures a very entertaining volume, and one valuable for the ordinary reader."

WILSON, VIOLET A.—Continued
er because she has been at pains to gather from authoritative sources not only her outstanding historical facts but all the little details."
+ N Y Times p7 S 24 '22 1950w

"Miss Wilson has chosen an attractive subject, and studied it with laudable industry. She has explored all kinds of sources for details directly or indirectly illustrative, and has not scrupled to supplement these researches by allowing sometimes a free rein to her imagination. Yet the book is less brilliant than its theme, and seldom leaves us a vivid or clear-cut impression."

+ — Sat R 133:181 F 18 '22 400w

"Light and vivacious book. Whether Miss Violet Wilson has absolute authority for all the entertaining stories she tells may be doubted, but perhaps it is sufficient that they should be entertaining and give us an extraordinary vivid picture of the Court life of the day."

+ Spec 128:400 Ap 1 '22 1450w

"She has read widely among the authorities for the period, good as well as bad, and has not failed to avail herself of the opportunities they afford. She has the gift of the story-teller and has produced a picture of Elizabeth and her Court which is fitted both to interest and to amuse readers who are not critical in their demand for historical accuracy. The fault of the book, indeed, is that she is too good a story-teller and refuses to spoil her story by preferring fact to fiction."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 16 '22 350w

WINCHESTER, CALEB THOMAS. Old castle; and other essays. 395p $3 Macmillan

$20.4 English literature—History and criticism 22-22714

The late professor of English literature in Wesleyan university was a great teacher who had the power of passing on to his students and hearers some of his own passionate love of literature. All of the essays here brought together are devoted to themes and figures in English literature except the first paper which is concerned with Ludlow castle and its associations, and the last one, on a "New England mystic," Bronson Alcott. Contents: Introd. by Henry W. Nevins; An old castle; As you like it; Antony and Cleopatra; The winter's tale; Shakespeare the man; The literature of the age of Queen Anne; General characteristics of the age; The literature of the age of Queen Anne; Politics, parties, and persons; The life of Jonathan Swift; Robert Burns; John Ruskin; Browning; General characteristics; Art, love, and religion in the poetry of Robert Browning; Arthur Hugh Clough; A New England mystic.

"Is with certain slight reservations, a delight to read from beginning to end." H. S. Gorman
+ Int Bk R p50 F '23 350w

"His judgments are not only eminently readable but full of quiet humor, shrewd observation of character, felicity of critical phrase, and a mellow tolerance which never includes tolerance of literary mediocrity. Such a teacher and writer is a kind of combination of Thomas Arnold and William Hazlitt, with a little of Charles Lamb thrown in. To those students who knew him, Professor Winchester was a source of that true education which is inspiration and incentive." H. T. Baker

+ Nation 116:74 Ja 17 '23 850w

"Professor Winchester is an idealist in philosophy, a Christian in religion, a moralist in his view of life. He asks of literature that it supply us not only with beauty but with incentives to virtue and faith. . . This volume of essays offers a body of criticism that surveys life as well as literature. It looks at life through books, and it finds much open to censure and correction, but it also finds in the works of our race and the literature of our tongue both beauty and significance, an assurance of the dignity of man's past and of faith in his future." A. H. Thorndike

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 7 '23 2100w

WINDELBAND, WILHELM. Introduction to philosophy; tr. by Joseph McCabe. 365p $4 Holt [21s Unwin]

109 Philosophy (Eng ed A22-118)

The book is not an introduction to a special philosophical system, but a critical inquiry into the possible forms of a philosophic view of life. It provides a general view of philosophical problems and explains the tendencies of the various attempts to solve them. The author divides his subject into problems of knowledge and problems of life, questions of being and questions of value.

Booklist 18:347 Jl '22

"It has a simple title and, on account of its moderate size, an ingenious air. It is in reality a most difficult work, and fit only for those who have already received a thorough grounding in philosophy."

Cath World 116:110 O '22 520w

"If the book will be found easier reading by those who already have expertness in philosophy than by novices, the fault does not lie with Windelband, but with the subject matter. He rarely loses sense of the connection of even highly technical problems and theories with predicaments of common experience. If the reader does not grasp the connection on sight it is because philosophy is itself just an insight into this connection, so that the one who fully apprehends even the clear and orderly statements of Windelband is well on his own way to being something of a master of philosophy. The translation is worthy of the book." J. Dewey

+ Lit R p821 Jl 22 '22 1700w

"Professor Windelband's book has the great merits which have made German philosophy so preeminent—accurate and wide historical knowledge, a generous sweep of ideas, sympathy with the intellectual puzzles and predicaments which disturb man's inner life and, above all, a wholesome disregard for that worldliness or narrow practicality which would put unimaginative perpetual motion above the profound experience of contemplation. But these qualities, alas, carry with them the characteristic defects of pompous artificiality, undue respect for conventional judgments, pretended absolute certainty in matters which are most problematic, and a fatal disinclination to entertain serious doubt directed against the self-styled critical philosophy." M. R. Cohen

+ — New Repub 32:341 N 22 '22 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:536 D '22

WINGFIELD-STRATFORD, ESME CECIL. Facing reality. 240p $2.50 Doran [10s 6d Hutchinson]

301 Civilization. Social reform 22-15477

The author describes the book in his introduction as an attempt to show the danger in which our civilization stands owing to its neglect of reality. We have not made or even seriously attempted to make any mental and social advance to correspond with our mechanical advance. Our mental habits are inherited from a state of civilization long out of date. Our methods of thought are slovenly. We have failed to seek or see the facts of life. We have lost our vision and see only conventions, symbols and formulas. The remedy the author finds within ourselves. Systems of social reform are worthless. The whole man must be changed. The problem is thus one of religion, but we must get the truth in religion even if we have to break down church walls to attain it. The book traces the results of our turning away from truth, in creative art, in politics, in the social system, and finally, in religion.

Bookm 56:107 S '22 130w

"A somewhat disappointing and tiresome book." H. L. S.

— Freeman 6:454 Ja 17 '23 300w

Lit R p136 O 21 '22 160w

"All these faults are no doubt very reprehensible, and it might be very edifying to be told of them for the first time. But they are faults of which most of us have long been conscious, so that instead of startling us with his catalogue of seventy and seven deadly sins, the author merely astonishes us at the weakness of his case. If this is the worst that can be said, we feel, things are not so bad after all."

— Sat R 133:205 F 25 '22 720w

"His faculty for raising veals with his lash is remarkable and some of his denunciatory passages have almost the power of Swift. The book is most amusing and well written, and the final chapters, in which we are allowed to hope, have a good deal of eloquence."

+ — Spec 128:530 Ap 29 '22 600w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 28 '22 480w

"Our complaint against Mr. Wingfield-Stratford's eloquent denunciation is that they do not help us to 'face reality' or discover what reality is. Yet the impression left on the mind by this book is not wholly and merely unfavourable. Mr. Wingfield-Stratford says many things which are true and worth saying. But he says more which are superficial or unjust. It is a pity."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 9 '22 700w

WINSLOW, LEON LOYAL. Elementary industrial arts. 335p il $1.20 Macmillan

670 Industrial arts 22-5707

Contents: Bookmaking; Papermaking; The manufacture of baskets and boxes; Brick and tile; The pottery industry; Cement and concrete; The textile industries; Copper; Iron and steel; The soap industry; The glass industry; Wood and woodworking.

J Home Econ 14:401 Ag '22 210w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:316 Jl '22

Pratt p16 autumn '22

WISE, STEPHEN SAMUEL. Child versus parent. 139p $1.25 (6s) Macmillan

173 Parents. Children—Management and training 22-6327

The rabbi of the Free synagogue, New York city, in this thoughtful discussion of the irrepressible conflict in the home dwells more upon the responsibilities and shortcomings of parents than upon the undutifulness of children. He believes that much of the clashing that takes place between the two generations in the home is the outcome of the instinctive protest of the children against unfit parents, and that school and church are overburdened with tasks and responsibilities which rightly belong to the home. He makes a strong plea for mutual respect between parent and child, for the democracy of the home, and for its graces—courtesy, consideration, comradeship.

Booklist 18:317 Jl '22

Boston Transcript p7 Je 10 '22 270w

Cleveland p52 Ag '22

Reviewed by Agnes de Lima

New Repub 31:168 Jl 5 '22 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:326 Jl '22

St Louis 20:203 S '22

"The book is evidently addressed primarily to the Jews, but the value of its message, the brilliance of its suggestion is for all races and creeds."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 5 '22 340w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Jl 6 '22 210w

Wis Lib Bul 18:250 X '22

WISTER, OWEN. Neighbors henceforth. 441p $2 (7s 6d) Macmillan

940.3 Reconstruction (European war)—France. France—Description and travel 22-19310

In the finale of his trilogy, Mr Wister continues the emotional appeal which he made in the first two volumes, "The Pentecost of calamity" and "A straight deal." (Book Review Digest, 1915, 1920) In the third volume he follows "in the footsteps of the Hun" thru devastated France, the first time, just after the Armistice, and again, two years later, after a return to America where he found a growing coldness toward France. He tries once more to make vivid the plight of France, to show a cruel, unconverted and rapidly recovering Germany and the need of American participation in the affairs of Europe.

Boston Transcript p8 D 16 '22 650w

"Owen Wister has written a timely book, a thoughtful book, and a book which ought to be widely read. May it help in the laborious undertaking of whipping America back into some appreciation of her duties among the nations!"

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 D 31 '22 720w

"Wister is a wise and far-seeing writer, and the point he makes is eminently worth while. The book is as colorful as any of his loved cowboy stories, it burns with the flame of true patriotism and it holds a lesson of vital importance." Hildegard Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p37 D '22 90w

"It is partly because Mr. Wister has his full share of our humor and an even fuller share of our shrewdness that this book of his is one which thousands of Americans will read to acquire a better understanding of themselves." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p12 Ja '23 1900w

"It is wholesome doctrine, eloquently presented, and full of suggestiveness even for such readers as may not be wholly in agreement with the author."

+ Lit R p372 Ja 6 '23 360w

"Depressing and amusing. Mr. Wister went here and there like Diogenes trying, however, not so much to find an honest man as any man who would give him a piece of silver remnant with which to line his dark cloud. And he found them, a Tommy here, a Dough-boy there, a Poilu in a third place, a major, a peasant, a sanctimonious hypocrite, an apocryph of being pieced together to make the loveliest of quilts to cover the nakedness of ten thousand lies." Edwin Seaver

— Nation 115:sup642 D 6 '22 1000w

"It is the basest war propaganda, slightly perfumed; a few fig-leaves of 'culture' scattered here and there on an otherwise unadorned monster. Mr. Wister has developed his gullibility and excitability as if they were talents; they have become deformities." Glenway Westcott

— New Repub 33:206 Ja 17 '23 420w

"Harmless in itself perhaps, but it reflects a specious habit of mind, more dangerous even than the cold sharp edge of native French logic." H. M.

— New Statesman 20:520 F 3 '23 1000w

N Y Times p8 Ja 7 '23 1150w

"Mr. Wister writes with strong feeling and an acute sense of character and human passion about American, French, and English soldiers in the Great War. He segregates individuals and makes them talk and act as real men, not like tin-hatted gods or moral idealists. Incident and talk are selected so as to throw out the reality of the fighting men who certainly should and must henceforth be neighbors."

+ Outlook 132:674 D 13 '22 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:31 Ja '23

"This admirable volume of the variety and fullness of which we can give but the faintest idea, should be read by everyone who desires to see peace and goodwill continue between the great western protagonists. It is in the highest degree a salutary contribution to a class of literature which, for the moment, unfortunately appeals to a fatigued audience, but must inevitably arrest future attention."

+ Sat R 134:886 D 9 '22 600w

"Commendable for simplicity, directness, concreteness, and intense sincerity. This may be admitted even by those who do not accept his conclusions."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 17 '23 270w

WISTER, OWEN—Continued

"The appeal of Mr Wister is to emotion rather than to reason. But because he is so obviously in earnest, because we recognize, behind not only the fine passages but those which appear stilted and over-mannered, the working of a noble and generous mind, he succeeds in moving us and winning our sympathies."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p656 O 19 '22 800w

WITHINGTON, ROBERT. In occupied Belgium. 173p il $1.50 Cornhill

940.349 Belgium—German occupation, 1914-1918 21-17281

The author of this little book spent ten months with the Belgians as member of the Commission for relief in Belgium. The book, which is written in the manner of a diary or of letters home, records experiences and describes without bitterness incidents connected with his work. A chapter by Prentiss N. Gray is added, describing the winding up of the affairs of the commission after the declaration of war between the United States and Germany.

"Simple, sincere, unpretentious and lacking in bitterness, it is a story in which one may profitably invest a spare hour or two, even now, when all seems to have been written about Belgium in her stricken days that needs to be written. There is a photographic quality in these short sketches that the author of many a more ambitious book might envy."

+ Advocate of Peace Mr '22 90w

"The feat of describing without any bitterness, and yet not at all without sympathy, the most revolting tragedy of the most revolting war, he has achieved."

+ Lit R p293 D 17 '21 190w

"The pages of this modest little book are full of color, incident and novel combination—the author knows how to hold his reader. One gets a very clear idea of who and what a wartime German is. These lively details are very persuasive and very convincing."

+ N Y Herald F 5 '22 260w

"Of especial interest because it deals with one of the brightest elements of the cataclysm—the work of the American commission for relief in Belgium."

+ Spring'd Republican p15a My 7 '22 220w

WODEHOUSE, PELHAM GRENVILLE. Three men and a maid. 304p $1.75 Doran

22-8940

Wilhelmina Bennett is the maid in the story whose bewitching red hair has turned the heads of three young men. It is as easy for her to fall out of love as in love, so she leads them all a dance. But more than she, it is Sam Marlowe, the maddest, most determined, and most resourceful of her lovers, who makes things happen. The story is an orgy of mad-cap happenings until Sam, attired in a medieval helmet, carries off his "Billie" in her own motor—headed for a church.

Booklist 18:370 Jl '22

"It is only fair to Mr. Wodehouse to say that his latest book is not up to the level of his others. Nevertheless it has quite as many clever lines, here and there, and quite as many amusing situations, as most books." J. W. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 My 31 '22 1200w

Cleveland p51 Ag '22

"You've got to like nonsense to like this book, because it is largely nonsense, but delectable nonsense. Somehow you think of the story in the guise of a movie, tho there is no movie we ever saw that was half as funny."

+ Lit D p53 Jl 15 '22 1000w

"A light-hearted, seemingly effortless, rollicking story which one chuckles over from beginning to end and closes with a desire to proclaim its merits aloud, that, others may be induced to share one's mirth."

+ N Y Times p14 My 14 '22 600w

Wis Lib Bul 18:219 O '22

WOLFF, JETTA SOPHIA. Historic Paris. 365p il $2.50 Dodd [10s 6d Lane]

914.436 Paris—Description 22-7429

"Miss Wolff surveys Paris methodically and concisely, noting in each successive district any building of architectural or historic interest and explaining the allusions in the place-names. She begins, of course, with the Louvre, the Tuileries, and the Palais Royal, and goes on to the Halles, the Palais de Justice, Notre Dame, and the Hotel de Ville. Then she works her way through one arrondissement after another, not forgetting the newer quarters until she arrives at Père-Lachaise. In her concluding chapters she describes the boulevards, the river-side, and the bridges. There are a number of attractive and interesting pen-and-ink sketches of buildings, many of them wholly unfamiliar, and there is a small map. Miss Wolff gives two indexes, of persons and of streets."—Spec

"Miss Wolff's book is capably arranged both for reading and reference purposes, and through its pages are scattered a series of drawings that visualize the old-worldliness, the picturesqueness and the antique savor of Paris the old and the new." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 1 '22 470w

Cleveland p95 D '22

"It is wisely planned. There is a sufficient smattering of allusion, gossip, and fascinating fact to give one a very real sense of that accumulated wealth of association with genius and with greatness which no other modern city can equal. Of its kind it is the most convenient book yet published in English."

+ Lit R p648 My 6 '22 180w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

N Y Times p16 Jl 9 '22 150w

"In this volume we have a very careful, painstaking account of much that goes to make Paris interesting on the historic side. The volume is valuable as a reference book. If its text could have been expanded, it might also have been delightful as a book for general reading."

+ Outlook 130:558 Ap 5 '22 50w

St Louis 20:274 N '22

"Miss Wolff has an extensive and peculiar knowledge of Paris. Few Parisians could rival her, and the Englishman who can find his way about Paris and thinks that he knows the city fairly well will be astonished to discover how ignorant he is, compared to her."

+ Spec 127:339 S 10 '21 270w

"The very magnitude of her subject has forced Miss Wolff to a severe compression which makes her book one to be followed on the ground rather than to be read for pure pleasure. It is a very practical guide book without any literary trimmings, which should provide many agreeable walks, especially in that rich district which lies between the northern line of the Grands Boulevards and the Seine."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p558 S 1 '21 450w

WOMAN OF NO IMPORTANCE, pseud. See Menzies, A. C.

WOOD, BERTHA M. Foods of the foreign-born in relation to health; with a foreword by Michael M. Davis, jr. 98p $1.25 Whitcomb & Barrows

641 Cookery. Food 22-5806

The purpose of this study is to compare the food of other peoples with that of the Americans in relation to health. A brief account is given for several important nationalities or race groups—Mexicans, Portuguese, Italians, Hungarians, Poles, peoples of the Near East, and Jews—of the conditions and dietary habits of the people in their own country, and then of their food problems here. Reference is made to some diseases in which diet is a factor and which are most frequently noted among the group by physicians, nurses, and social workers. For each nationality a few of their favorite recipes are given. These recipes are all made from our American raw materials and may suggest to American housekeepers some new and interesting dishes. Portions of this book have been previously published in Michael M. Davis's "Immigrant health and the community." (Book Review Digest, 1921)

Cleveland p61 Ag '22

"Many of the recipes are of elaborate dishes which would consume much time and better equipment than the households of most immigrants contain. The book would perhaps be more valuable if greater space were given to the simpler dishes. The latter are, however, not entirely neglected, and examples can be found for each nationality. A special valuable feature of the book is the compilation of diets adapted to each nationality, and recipes for such diseases as diabetes, tuberculosis, and nephritis." Florence Nesbitt

— + J Home Econ 14:509 O '22 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:493 N '22

Pratt p21 winter '23

Public Health Nurse p267 My '22 %col

"The foreign-born can teach the American housewife many things—especially in the more economical use of products and the substitution of cheaper for more expensive articles. Miss Wood also stresses the good psychological effect of cooperation in the working out of diets between the immigrant woman and the American public health worker." Ruth Metzger

Survey 48:88 Ap 15 '22 370w

WOOD, CLEMENT. Nigger; a novel. 232p $2 Dutton

22-20876

"From the moment that Jake, the nigger boy, sits up in bed listening to the baying of bloodhounds until Jake, the old grandfather, sinks into slumber dreaming of the bullfrogs of his youth, 'Nigger' is the description of a long and futile search—the search of a family for emancipation. . . . In order to cover the various aspects of the problem Mr. Wood differentiates the various members of Jake's family. Jake himself stands always as the symbol of the old Southern negro who reached maturity during slave days. Two of his sons are hard workers; although educated and fit for office work they can get nothing in Birmingham but labor in the rolling mills. Another son becomes the typical, overdriven, vicious negro who eventually lands in the chain gang. One daughter is so white that she attempts to pass herself off as a white woman. Another daughter takes to the streets. And so it goes until most types of Southern negro are vividly outlined for the reader."—N Y Times

"Clement Wood is not yet a novelist, nor does he show any signs of becoming one in this long story of his. He must learn that a novel must have some form, some technique; it cannot be simply a string of episodes, loosely connected, with no emphasis, no climaxes, no real body to it." J: V. A. Weaver

— Bookm 56:492 D '22 220w

"It is the epic of emancipation written from the viewpoint of the Southern negro, a marvelously vivid, human document which shocks us with its significance." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 22 '22 1000w

"It is difficult to say why this book falls short of greatness: perhaps because it treats an epic subject too sketchily. But it is a tale so engrossing that the reader becomes a passionate participant; and it stays in his mind with ever-increasing vividness, compelling thought, and taking on the aspect of life he has known."

+ Dial 73:680 D '22 120w

"Clement Wood has written in 'Nigger' a novel of brilliance and power. But for the background he has simply squirted India ink all over his composition." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p2 F 1 '23 1250w

Reviewed by Hubert Harrison

N Y Tribune p11 N 12 '22 300w

"Mr Wood knows his Alabama and he is unsparing upon the white people who countenance social wrong. At the same time, while he is sympathetic in his point of view, his very title will not awaken enthusiasm among the Negro people any more than it did as the name of Mr Sheldon's play of some years ago. There is, moreover, something in the literary method of the book that, for want of a better word, might be termed sketchy." B: Brawley

+ Springfld Republican p7a N 12 '22 600w

WOOD, GE-ZAY. Shantung question. 372p $5 (20s) Revell

327 51 Shantung, China. China—Foreign relations 22-18124

"This is one of the series of able and scholarly studies in Far Eastern diplomacy which have recently been made by a group of young Chinese publicists whose education has been chiefly received in the United States. Mr. Wood, who holds degrees from both Yale and Harvard, was a member of the Chinese Delegation to the Washington Conference. This volume, with its documentary appendices, constitutes a complete record of the Shantung episode in diplomacy, from the Chinese standpoint."—R of Rs

"Naturally there is a strong bias toward the Chinese side of the case; that, once recognized, is part of its value as a semi-official statement. There are passages and discussions which are beside the mark; but as a careful history of the Shantung problem this volume will deservedly rank high." A. L. P. D.

+ Am Hist R 28:342 Ja '23 420w

Am Pol Sci R 16:723 N '22 70w

Bookm 56:360 N '22 120w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 26 '22 620w

"The book is lucid and exhaustive. Mr. Wood at times, however, loses his judicial poise by drawing inferences of a controversial nature; a better effect could have been gained by giving the reader's judgment an opportunity to react to the facts. The American public is fortunate in having this additional evidence for understanding the problems of the Pacific and the Orient."

+ Int J Ethics 33:115 O '22 240w

"Mr. Wood writes with creditable restraint." H: C. Emery

+ Lit R p263 D 2 '22 720w

"He states the facts fully and accurately, and he quotes the relevant documents. Anyone who wants to understand the Shantung question and the wider problem created by Japan's penetration of China will find this statement of the Chinese case interesting and valuable." L. S. W.

+ New Statesman 19:664 S 23 '22 100w

R of Rs 66:223 Ag '22 100w

"Mr. Ge-Zay Wood has done useful service in making a comprehensive collection of the documents relating to the Shantung case. But, like all partisans, Mr. Wood overpaints his picture in some places and underpaints it in others."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 20 '22 1250w

WOODS, MARGARET LOUISA (BRADLEY) (MRS. H. G. WOODS). Return, and other poems. 131p $2 Dodd [6s Lane]

821

22-16969

The writer of these poems holds a distinct place among modern English poets but is not well known in America. There are fourteen poems in the volume, including a group of war poems and a long dramatic poem in four scenes, entitled "The death of Edward III."

"Undoubtedly these are wretched rhymes. But Margaret Woods, whose lyrics testify to the purity and education of her ear, has chosen to make use of them only after serious deliberation." Fillmore Hyde

+ Lit R p531 Mr 25 '22 450w

"She brings to all her work a fine magic, an exalted utterance that is peculiarly individual. There is a depth of feeling in her poetry and a clear imaginative passion that never runs out of hand. It is an inspired and lofty philosophy that Mrs. Woods expresses, a great faith in the lucent mysteries beyond life."

WOODS, M. L.—Continued

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 26 '22 430w

"In none of her earlier poems has Mrs. Woods exhibited with such virtuosity her command over blank verse [as in 'The Death of Edward III.']. Now it is pliant like a twig, now firm as a thick bough. But all her technical accomplishment would have counted for little grace in this recreation of an olden tragedy if her sense of characterization had not been so just. Whether it be Alice Perrers stripping his jewellery from the body of Edward or the peasants who stand cockish and dazed at the door of the death-chamber, the veracity and the music of Mrs. Woods are equally irreproachable."

+ Sat R 132:462 O 15 '21 250w

"Mrs. Woods belongs decisively to the older school of writers and, amid the smoothness and scholarly polish of that school, her realism and occasional complete throwing off of sentimentality are exceedingly startling. She has a great faculty for writing good lines and phrases."

+ Spec 127:751 D 3 '21 260w

"Mrs. Woods's high mastery of the technique of her art has not prevented 'The Return' from affecting us principally with a sense of the difficulty of its theme. Death when it is approached in a spirit of speculation cannot but be a forbidding subject; but, although Mrs. Woods's speculation presupposes faith, her faith and speculation both have a timidity and a determination to overcome timidity, which rob her poem as a whole of the consoling and strengthening influence it might have had and which in certain passages, it has in spite of them."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 6 '21 850w

WOODS, ROBERT ARCHEY, and KENNEDY, ALBERT JOSEPH. Settlement horizon: a national estimate. 499p $3 Russell Sage Foundation

331.85 Social settlements. United States—
Social conditions 22-16249

Robert A. Woods has recently completed thirty years of service as head of the South End House, Boston, and Mr Kennedy has been associated with him in the work for half that time. For twelve years past they have been making a systematic study of settlement work thruout the country and have visited most of the American settlement houses. Their book provides a survey of the origins and growth of the settlement movement, and the various forms which it has taken, its educational aspects, its relation to the labor movement, to municipal reform and to neighborhood community life. The book is at once a history, a practical handbook and an interpretation. Bibliography. Index.

"The presentation of the material is generally well done. There is some repetition, however, and some puzzling and vague generalizations. Those interested in the problems of the American city, and especially students of municipal politics, will benefit from studying this account of a movement which, despite its admitted inadequacies, continues to reveal its inherent power and value." J: M. Gaus

+ — Am Pol Sci R 17:135 F '23 650w
Booklist 19:70 D '22

"A volume which, with its ample bibliography, well nigh exhausts the subject, and is likely to remain the authoritative and standard treatment of it for many years to come. Far ranging in the special topics covered, the work displays that humanitarian spirit tempered by practical wisdom on which all progress in individual and social welfare must depend. Informing as a retrospect satisfying as a survey of present conditions, it looks forward to the future with hopeful suggestions that will be an inspiration for social workers everywhere." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 4 '22 1050w

"This substantial volume is much more than an account of the settlement movement. It is an outline and interpretation of the changing social, economic, racial and moral conditions of urban life during the past four decades. Even the reader who has thought himself familiar in a general way with the life and work of the settlement will be likely to have his vision enlarged by this comprehensive and philosophical survey of its manifold points of contact with the great process of urban growth." J. H. Tufts

+ Int J Ethics 33:221 Ja '23 900w

"An extremely interesting and comprehensive treatment of the settlement. This study was initiated at the suggestion of a representative group of fellow-workers, and the result is a description of settlement activities and a much-needed statement of the principles behind the movement. With an extensive Appendix the volume constitutes almost an encyclopedia on the American settlement." W. A. Pettit

+ Nation 115:506 N 8 '22 230w

"The book is the valuable contribution to social experience for which we habitually look to English writers on contemporary industrial and social life. It is quite free from jargon—better than that, it is written vividly with something of the sustained charm to which Miss Adams and other interpreters of the settlements and their neighborhoods have long accustomed the reader. So timely, important, and careful a volume will be a permanent book for reference and a textbook for students and social workers." L. D. Wald

+ New Repub 33:326 F 14 '23 1500w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:540 D '22
Pratt p12 winter '23

WOODSON, CARTER GODWIN. Negro in our history. 393p il $2 Associated publishers, inc., 1216 You St., N.W. Washington, D.C.
326 Negroes—History. Slavery in the United States 22-14504

Intended for use as a textbook for upper grade and high school students as well as for the general reader, this book is a survey of the achievements of the race from the earliest time in Africa to the present day in America. The author discusses the enslavement of the race at home and abroad, the sort of bondage experienced, the economic aspect of slavery, early efforts toward emancipation, colonization, the abolition movement, the Civil war and reconstruction, the achievements of the race in freedom, the part of the Negro in the World war, and the struggle for social justice. Among the illustrations are many portraits of Negroes and friends of Negroes. Index.

"The general reader desirous of knowing the leading facts of negro life and history in the United States will find this volume of great interest and value."

+ Am Pol Sci R 16:727 N '22 80w
Booklist 19:110 Ja '23

"It is unfortunate that Dr. Woodson's style is cramped and slovenly, but the interest of his subject matter in the volume now before us is so compelling that it enables us to overlook this primal defect." Hubert Harrison

+ — N Y Tribune p18 Ja 7 '23 420w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:540 D '22
Spring'd Republican p8 Jl 15 '22 180w
Survey 49:119 O 15 '22 20w

WOODWORTH, ROBERT SESSIONS. Psychology: a study of mental life. 580p il $2.50 Holt [8s 6d Methuen]

150 Psychology 21-15412

The author is professor of psychology in Columbia university and the material in this textbook has already stood the test of use in college classes. It is intended primarily for the beginner in psychology, the exercises given at the end of each chapter affording opportunity to the student to work over the material and make it his own, but as a representation of the present state of a very active science the book will be of interest to the general reader.

Many diagrams add to the ease of its use and lists of references for further reading are appended to each chapter.

Boston Transcript p7 N 19 '21 650w

"Thoroughly modern, strictly up-to-date book on this subject. It is, in many respects, a model text-book. The student will appreciate the clearness of diction, the simplicity of style, absence of unnecessary technical terminology. Drawings and diagrams are numerous, carefully made and clear; they will be of great help to the reader."

+ Cath World 116:424 D '22 240w

"The author's style, which is particularly vivid and readable, is well adapted to the beginning class. The examples and illustrations are well chosen, and the exercises at the end of the chapters are stimulating. The book also deserves commendation for its selection and emphasis of topics from the large mass of material which is now available for a general text."

+ EI School J 22:234 N '21 450w

"Professor Woodworth is best in his fundamental chapters, such as those on native and acquired traits, emotion, the feelings, and sensation. He does not carry the reader along with him quite so convincingly in the more synthetic chapters. Perhaps the strangest thing about the book is its failure to explain fully the nature of thought." E: Sapir

+ Freeman 5:619 S 6 '22 1100w

"In an unusual degree it avoids technical terms and uses the language of every day and of general literature. Such recent material as that of Freud is given its place, but in sane perspective. It deserves, and will undoubtedly have, wide use."

+ Int J Ethics 32:341 Ap '22 100w

"The book should be a very useful text. The style is simple, usually colloquial, sometimes even slangy. It should offer no difficulty to the student except in a few places, and should please him, unless he feels occasionally that he is being written down to. At times it seems to the reviewer that more content might have been substituted for the illustration and elaboration that abound, but this is largely a matter of opinion, to be tested by use." W. B. Pillsbury

+ J Philos 19:446 Ag 3 '22 650w

"The Woodworth contribution is a notable one, distinctive in its accomplishment, intelligible in its failings; the most regrettable of which is the over prominence of the content of psychology and the under emphasis of the 'all together,' the integration of principles by the understanding of which the psychological student, however limited his vision, can alone hope to see his world sanely and to see it whole. But the final word for the volume should be one of welcome and commendation from class room and library shelf and reading list." Joseph Jastrow

+ Lit R p701 Je 3 '22 1100w
St Louis 20:204 S '22

"The book is an agreeable, judicial and admirably informing presentation of the present state of our knowledge in regard to our mental mechanisms."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 13 '22 520w
Wis Lib Bul 18:129 My '22

WOOLLCOTT, ALEXANDER. Mr Dickens goes to the play. 239p il $2.50 Putnam

B or 92 Dickens, Charles. Theater 22-19738

"In the pages that follow are assembled most of what Dickens wrote about the theatre in his books and much of what he wrote in his letters—together with some stray clippings from fugitive papers and a sample of his playwriting. Also an account of the plays which, to his great pain, they made from his novels and some study of the suppressed actor in him which kept cropping out to upset his orderly life and distress his orderly friends. It is the theatre of his day and ours, recorded from the stalls, from the pit, from the wings and from what he himself once called 'the yellow eye of an actor.' Implicit in that record is some of the best dramatic criticism in the language."—page 10

Booklist 19:113 Ja '23

"A delectable potpourri. Mr. Woolcott's own essays in the book are informative and altogether pleasing, and his selection of Dickens anecdote and quotation is skilful." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:339 N '22 260w

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '22 2000w

Dial 74:104 Ja '23 80w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Hawthorne

Int Bk R p38 D '22 50w

"A book that every lover of the great Victorian novelist will wish to add to the collection on his shelves. This material has been carefully culled and piously arranged, and the resultant book is pleasant to read and handy to have around." Clayton Hamilton

+ Lit R p288 D 9 '22 1200w

N Y Times p4 D 3 '22 900w

"In spite of Mr. Woolcott's engaging theories the unregenerate modern continues to find Dickens more theatrical than dramatic. None the less, we are very grateful to Mr. Woolcott not only for the exhumed letters, but even more for the lucid style in which his theories however curious, are clothed." A. D. Douglas

+ N Y Tribune p11 O 15 '22 900w

R of Rs 66:560 N '22 120w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 11 '22 450w

"A delightful book about a man who by the very nature of his genius is himself one of the most interesting comments on the theatre that we have in English. Mr. Woolcott has done his task with tact and charm and inexhaustible gusto and spirit."

+ Theatre Arts M 7:83 Ja '23 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p825 D 7 '22 140w

Wis Lib Bul 19:24 Ja '23

WOOLLCOTT, ALEXANDER. Shouts and murmurs; echoes of a thousand and one first nights. 264p $2 Century

792 Theater—United States. American drama
—History and criticism 22-19022

The dramatic critic of the New York Times goes behind the scenes of some of the successful plays of the last few years and talks about their authors and actors, as well as of the plays themselves. He tells of the "First year" and its author, of Gilda Varesi and the play she wrote and starred in, of Eugene O'Neill and his successes, of Peter Pan and Maude Adams, of Frank Tinney, of the Guitrys, and of Chauve-Souris. Altogether it is a collection of dramatic, sometimes touching stories, of artists' dreams, successes and failures.

Booklist 19:73 D '22

"Is fresh, original, and informed. It is more readable than most books about the stage; it is current, humorous, and wise, though opinionated." J. F.

+ Bookm 56:339 N '22 120w

"Entertaining stuff admirably done." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p38 D '22 50w

"Mr. Woolcott writes entertainingly, with ample insight and abundant zest. It is not always possible to agree with Mr. Woolcott's opinions. But, for the most part, one may read these 'shouts and murmurs' without any desire to halt the author and shout back. Enjoyment is one of the most contagious, as well as one of the most healthy, of emotions, and Mr. Woolcott so enjoys the theatre and all its ways, and writes about it at once so briskly and so lovingly that his book at nearly every moment is a charmingly companionable volume." Clayton Hamilton

+ Lit R p288 D 9 '22 550w

"I read this book—with unqualified enjoyment—from cover to cover in less than two hours. I state that as a tribute to the rapidity

WOOLLCOTT, ALEXANDER—Continued
of the narrative, the sustained interest and amusement of the contents, and the happy anecdotal tone of the author." Burton Rascoe

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 1 '22 500w

R of Rs 67:111 Ja '23 130w

"The amount of allusion in it, of anecdote, personal impression and event is extraordinary."

+ Theatre Arts M 7:83 Ja '23 80w

Wis Lib Bul 18:272 D '22

WOOLSTON, HOWARD BROWN. Prostitution in the United States. (Bur. of social hygiene publications) v 1 360p $2.50 Century 176.5 Prostitution 21-18422

The book is the first of two volumes which will cover the subject from the earliest colonial times to date. The present volume brings it to the entrance of the United States into the World war, the developments at that time having been so fruitful both of information as to existing conditions and of new experiences in dealing with them that an entire volume will be devoted to that brief period. The work is produced under the auspices of the Bureau of social hygiene, and is the result: first, of examination and comparison of existing works, official reports and records, etc.; second, of field work carried on by trained experts over a large part of our territory and for several years. Thirty specified cities were studied at first hand.

Booklist 18:308 Je '22

"It does not present much that is new to those who are familiar with Kneeland's volume on New York and the Report of the Vice Commission of Chicago, except in the way of more recent data and a broader area of observation, but it is useful in this respect."

+ Int J Ethics 32:233 Ja '22 150w

"The book is informing, and although it makes no especially original contribution to the subject so far as students of sociology and social workers are concerned, it is a helpful summary of the various elements entering into an examination of this social problem."

Lit R p497 Mr 11 '22 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:330 J1 '22

"Tells little that is new, save perhaps in the way of comment, but it condenses and more or less satisfactorily arranges a large amount of information from various authoritative sources."

Springf'd Republican p11a D 1 '21 190w

Reviewed by F. H. Whittin

Survey 47:638 Ja 25 '22 780w

WORKER, JOSEPH G., and PEEBLES, THOMAS A. Mechanical stokers; including the theory of combustion of coal. 258p il $3 McGraw

621.1836 Stokers, Mechanical 22-8368

"Presents a careful study of the combustion characteristics of various coals, together with factors governing the selection of stokers, their installation and operation. Describes the stoker equipment of seventeen modern steam-power stations. Based on extensive experience, and constitutes the most comprehensive work available on the subject."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y P L New Tech Bks 7:40 J1 '22

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:416 O '22

WORLD METRIC STANDARDIZATION COUN.

CIL. World metric standardization; comp. by Aubrey Drury, and others. 524p il $5 The council, 681 Market st., San Francisco

389 Metric system 22-10566

The book is chiefly a collection of testimonials from important societies and experts all over the world in favor of universal adoption of the metric units of weights and measures—meters, liters and grams. The testimonials are prefaced by an account of the organized movement for metric standardization and followed by six selected articles on the adoption of the metric system, by such authorities as A. E.

Kennelly, Harry Alicock and others. A fifty-six page bibliography is included and there is an index.

Boston Transcript p1 J1 22 '22 800w

"It is a collection of documents rather than a continuous text, but a valuable one for those seeking information on this long proposed and frequently almost-adopted change."

+ Cath World 116:571 Ja '23 160w

"The book is probably the most complete ever written upon the subject; it is written from the standpoint of national and world affairs and is not entirely technical." Sybil Woodruff

+ J Home Econ 15:38 Ja '23 400w

WRIGHT, QUINCY. Control of American foreign relations. 412p $3.25 Macmillan

327.73 United States—Foreign relations. United States—Constitutional law. International law and relations 22-15757

"The author analyzes, from the point of view of constitutional and international law, the powers of the American government and people in making treaties, making war, recognizing foreign governments and adding to American territory. He examines the treaty of Versailles with especial reference to questions connected with the League of Nations, discusses the treaties that resulted from the recent Washington conference, and concludes with some constructive suggestions for improving our method of conducting American foreign relations."—Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by J. Dickinson

Am Pol Sci R 17:122 F '23 650w

Booklist 19:110 Ja '23

"A deep, learned treatise. Every point from which American foreign affairs can be looked upon has been treated in this book. There is a finely tabulated analytic table of contents, an adequate index and an admirable table of cases on the subject matter, which have been legally decided."

+ Boston Transcript p9 S 9 '22 400w

Spec 129:564 O 21 '22 150w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 12 '22 120w

"It is safe to say that not until there are innovations in our theory of constitutional limitations will Prof Wright's work become out of date. His conclusions are in no way new or startling—as indeed, they could not well be with so broad a survey of the gradual development of our 'constitutional understandings' in foreign relations."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 N 10 '22 420w

WRIGHT, RICHARDSON LITTLE. Truly rural. 219p $2 Houghton

818 Country life 22-9373

The editor of House and Garden tells how a young man and his wife bought a lovely old country house and with great zest set about its rejuvenation. The garden receives more attention, perhaps, than the house, though there is a description of the butter-yellow and delphinium-blue kitchen, the dining room hung with every variety of light, and the make-up shelf by the front door where the guests may stop on the way to the dining room to powder or rouge or straighten an eyebrow. There is a delightful chapter on breakfasts, and one or closets and books. These lovers of the country life in computing the interest on their investment "balance their books with flowers and charge off something against horizons and green meadows, against the baked warmth of noonday and the cool of rain, against sunsets and drifting clouds and the wind through the cedars."

Booklist 18:354 J1 '22

Boston Transcript p9 Ap 22 '22 480w

Cleveland p79 S '22

"Mr. Wright has told the story of their enterprise in this volume with a wealth of wholesome humor and an abundance of allusions to art, literature, and philosophy, and with rare satisfaction to anybody, whether he is thinking of moving out of town or staying in forever. Widely read, the book should do much to make the courageous move and to keep the faint-hearted where they belong—in the kitchenette with its adjoining cubby-holes."

+ Lit R p568 Ap 8 '22 160w

Nation 115:22 J1 5 '22 30w

"He has the chimney-corner leisureliness of the old essayists on which his admirable style, it is good to feel throughout, has been richly nurtured. Delightfully told, with many interludes of very human humor, little character sketches and bookish reminiscence." R: Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p9 Je 18 '22 850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:363 J1 '22

Pratt p27 autumn '22

R of Rs 65:558 My '22 50w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ag 21 '22 360w

Wis Lib Bul 18:155 Je '22

WRIGHT, WILLIAM KELLEY. Student's philosophy of religion. 472p $3.75 Macmillan 201 Religion 22-4841

"The purpose of this book is to furnish college undergraduates and general readers with the necessary data—facts and arguments—on which they will be able to work out their own philosophy of religion." (Preface) It is the outgrowth of lecture courses given at Cornell university from 1913 to 1916. Part one endeavors to trace the course and development of religion thru human history. Part two reports some things that psychologists have learned from a study of the religious experiences of persons of our own time, which will throw light on religious experiences in general and on the nature and efficacy of religious awakenings, prayer and mystical states. Part three takes up the question of the truth of religion and considers in successive chapters: Mechanism and teleology; Evidence of God; The nature of God and the problem of evil; God and human freedom; Immortality. References are appended to each chapter and there are notes and an index.

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 22 '22 1000w

"The book deserves wide reading by all classes of thoughtful people. It is an impressive indication of the tendency of the best current science and reflection concerning these questions in which the age is becoming deeply interested." E. S. Ames

+ Int J Ethics 32:448 J1 '22 840w

J Religion 2:330 My '22 50w

"Professor Wright steers a skillful pedagogical course. The reader is challenged to think for himself. Wright nowhere seeks surreptitiously to acquire merit for his own views under the guise of an 'it is generally held' or 'the modern view is,' but he honestly and plainly labels them as 'the author's opinions.'" E. S. Brightman

+ J Religion 2:437 J1 '22 780w

"It would have been more accurate if he had entitled his book a study in the philosophy of religion in so far as it may lead to a liberal Christianity. Nevertheless, if the student can make the necessary allowance, it is a useful, excellently made book. It is a very readable volume and should be highly stimulating to the qualified student."

+ Lit R p812 J1 15 '22 560w

"An ambitious program which is carried out in readable fashion by a man who shows himself competent in summarizing and interpreting other men's ideas."

+ Nation 114:700 Je 7 '22 100w

Reviewed by Lyman Abbott

Outlook 131:464 Je 12 '22 550w

WRIGLEY, M. JACKSON. Film: with a foreword by Sir Gilbert Parker, and an introd. by Walter A. Briscoe. (Coptic ser.) 124p $1.50 Wilson, H. W.

778 Moving pictures

A study of the educational value of moving pictures and of the possibilities which lie in the combined efforts of school, library and moving pictures. It also studies the moral influence of the film, its use in commercial and library advertising and concludes with a chapter on film production.

WYLIE, IDA ALENA ROSS. Dark house. 275p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Cassell]

22-9051

Reared in a house of harsh words and misunderstandings, Robert Stonehouse resolves to make something of himself, and by sheer courage and indomitable willpower he establishes himself as a doctor, the profession of his father, who had made no use of his life. Christine, Robert's devoted guardian, who shares all his battles and struggles to provide the necessary funds for his schooling, dies and then Robert's world seems blacker than ever. Finally the sombre horizon seems to clear and Robert finds love and understanding in the devotion of Francey Wilmot, a playmate of the sad days of his boyhood.

Booklist 18:370 J1 '22

"The story as a whole is disconcerting and far from plausible. With its striking characters it would have been much more effective had the novelist told us more about them and left less to the imagination of the reader." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '22 880w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Ind 108:491 My 27 '22 140w

"The author is at all times faithful in her delineation, and in spite of numerous opportunities for sentimentalism, she never becomes sentimental. The first part of the book is somewhat better than the latter part." S. A. Coblentz

+ Lit R p683 My 27 '22 520w

"Miss Wylie's latest book is a fascinating picture of environment reacting upon character. It is also individualism lifted to the nth power, for it draws a tight circle round a scant half dozen human beings in whose centre stands Robert Stonehouse."

N Y Times p13 My 21 '22 670w

Spec 128:533 Ap 29 '22 60w

"Good reading and good fiction. A novel gratifying without selfconsciousness or straining for effect."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Je 18 '22 170w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Ap 20 '22 420w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

X

XENIDES, J. P. Greeks in America; with an introd. by Charles Hatch Sears. 160p $1 Doran 325.7 Greeks in the United States 22-19807

The book is volume five in the racial studies of the New Americans series issued under the auspices of the Interchurch world movement. The first chapter, devoted to the European background of the American Greek, sketches the present political, economic, social and religious conditions of Greece in their relation to emigration. The four remaining chapters describe the Greeks in America from every aspect. Map; list of Greek newspapers in the United States; bibliography; index.

Booklist 19:108 Ja '23

"For the purposes of the lay student this little handbook represents a brief but zealous survey, with only a shade of condescension toward other Americanizing agencies outside the church."

+ Bookm 56:644 Ja '23 50w

J Religion 2:659 N '22 30w

Reviewed by E. H. Bierstadt

New Repub 33:231 Ja 24 '23 320w

XENIDES, J. P.—Continued

Pratt p9 winter '23

"Practical handbook which will prove useful to ministers, social workers, doctors and others who want to understand better their foreign-born neighbors without having time to study more important tomes on their backgrounds and modes of thought."

+ Survey 48:629 Ag 15 '22 40w

Y

YALE record book of verse. 106p $1.50 Yale univ. press

811.08 American poetry—Collections

22-10117

"The Yale Record Book of Verse, 1872-1922," is just what its title implies, a collection of poems, practically all of them light, from the files of The Yale Record. They have been chosen and edited by Francis W. Bronson, Thomas Caldecot Chubb and Cyril Hume. William Lyon Phelps has written a short foreword to the volume."—N Y Times

Lit R p692 My 27 '22 110w

N Y Times p19 My 14 '22 60w

"Undergraduates are at their best when writing humorous verse. When they try their hand at serious stuff they usually let loose too much anguish. This book contains none of that anguish, and is therefore delightful from start to finish. It is certainly among the best of humorous verse anthologies." Milton Raison

+ N Y Tribune p5 J1 23 '22 280w

"The best verse in this volume is written by students who have since become well known as professional poets—Brian Hooker and the Benets. But the other metrical conceits, both pretty and witty, that go to make up the book exhibit one and all the fundamental humor of youth. The collection is valuable chiefly as a contribution to the history of fun at Yale."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 25 '22 210w

YATES, MAY. George Gissing: an appreciation (Manchester Univ. publications. English ser.) 109p $2 (6s) Longmans

B or 92 Gissing, George

"Miss May Yates has written a careful little volume which is not quite a portrait of the man himself and not quite an essay on his work. Her volume of a hundred pages has the air of a note-book, very scrupulously kept, of reflections in the course of reading all that Gissing wrote and all that has been written about him, with every reference recorded and verified in scholarly style. From her tidy and well-filled note-book she might develop an essay that would set both Gissing and his fiction in the clear, calm light which has hitherto been denied them."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Miss Yates's study of George Gissing, a compact little book, tells me much about Gissing's work that I did not know, makes me itch to read over again the books of his that I have read, and to become acquainted at once with those that I have missed." J. Macy

+ Nation 115:sup620 D 6 '22 400w

"Miss Yates's appreciation is a sound and thorough piece of work. The subject is obviously sympathetic to her, but she never loses the critical sense and sees it in a right perspective."

+ Sat R 134:550 O 14 '22 550w

"For a portrait it falls short upon the biographical side; Miss Yates barely alludes to the bitter facts of Gissing's early life—facts which counted so heavily throughout his history that his likeness cannot possibly be drawn without them. As a critical essay, on the other hand, the volume does not bear directly enough upon Gissing's fiction, its quality and character: Miss Yates seems more concerned to illustrate the nature of Gissing from his novels, to treat them as documents, than to confront the question of his talent as a novelist."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p645 O 12 '22 1500w

YATES, RAYMOND FRANCIS, and PACENT, LOUIS GERARD. Complete radio book. 330p il 92 Century

654.6 Radio communication 22-11532

The book attempts to outline the practical, commercial and romantic sides of radio telephone and telegraph communication for the layman. After an opening chapter on ancient and modern devices of communicating at a distance, radio instruments and their operation are described in simple language and the manifold and world-wide uses of radio communication are sketched. There is a chapter on who's who in radio and one of questions and answers, such as the radio editor of a newspaper is daily called upon to deal with. Index.

Booklist 19:72 D '22

"Here we have the magic touch of romance, tragedy, history, scientific facts all woven together in a highly interesting and instructive style." Pierre Boucheron

+ Bookm 55:639 Ag '22 160w

"Their presentation is sufficiently popular to capture those interested, and generally more enlightening and readable than we have found many a daily column in a newspaper."

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 26 '22 200w

Cleveland p77 S '22

"Thoroughly readable and reliable." Dudley Nichols

+ Lit R p741 Je 17 '22 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:497 N '22

Pratt p18 autumn '22

St Louis 20:213 S '22

"The amateur who meditates rigging up an aerial will certainly be stimulated by the perusal of the book."

+ Sat R 134:595 O 21 '22 250w

"Less a handbook of the radio telephone than a brightly-written survey of electrical communication. The book is instructive in the best sense, for it presents in simple and entertaining language a historical sketch and a statement of principles."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 4 '22 170w

"It is really an admirable presentment of a subject of which popular descriptions are apt to bristle with unexplained or over-explained technical terms. The book is excellent."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p619 S 28 '22 150w

Wis Lib Bul 18:181 J1 '22

YEATS, WILLIAM BUTLER. Four plays for dancers. 138p il $2 (10s 6d) Macmillan

822 21-18633

For descriptive note see Annual for 1921.

Booklist 18:230 Ap '22

Cleveland p68 S '22

"These plays have not the dramatic conclusiveness that is insisted upon in the plays of our tradition. But the plays have an amazing dramatic suggestiveness that the acting with the masks, the dancing, and the music must undoubtedly heighten." Padraic Colum

+ Dial 72:302 Mr '22 980w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson, jr.

Freeman 5:68 Mr 29 '22 1100w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop

Lit R p465 Mr 4 '22 950w

"The masks by Edmond Dulac and the music by Walter Morse Rummel are effective in their abstract-concrete way, as are the plays themselves, which are entirely characteristic of the other-worldly, now very weary Mr. Yeats."

+ Nation 114:573 My 10 '22 110w

"This new art of his cannot live except under glass and artificial rays, nor can the rare bloom flush the hearts of common men. Therefore it will perish, as all such experiments must and deserve to perish—when the gardeners leave. These four plays appear to us, indeed, as no more than rich, ornamental exotics draped about a few songs of an enchanted beauty."

— Nation and Ath 30:730 F 11 '22 420w

"Of all the very recent dramatic writing known to me, the work that looks forward most to the increasing trend in the theatre toward an art more purely presentational and more poetic." S. Y.

+ New Repub 30:84 Mr 15 '22 270w

N Y Times p11 Ja 20 '22 200w

"It is the remarkable atmosphere of each play in its entirety that makes each effort a distinguished composition. They are compact with poetry, suffused with a strange, trance-like magic that renders these figures characters out of time." H. S. Gorman

+ Outlook 130:656 Ap 19 '22 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:237 Mr '22

Spring'd Republican p12 Mr 8 '22 500w

Reviewed by O. W. Firkins

Yale R n s 12:193 O '22 200w

YOUNG, ELIZABETH GUION (BALDWIN SEARS, pseud.). Homestead ranch. 296p $1.75 Appleton

22-4921

A pleasant story of the western prairies. There are many humorous tales of the ranchers and cowboys, and Bob and Harriet Holliday after leaving their Connecticut home overcome many difficulties not only with the land but also with a big sheep owner who envies their fast developing acres. Romance is woven into the tale by the love of the forest ranger, Chris Garnett, for Harriet. By the stalwart efforts of Bob and Garnett, Homestead Ranch is finally bought and paid for.

Booklist 18:335 Je '22

"A pleasant, vigorous, refreshing tale, written by one who as a homesteader herself knows what she is about and imparts to this knowledge a freshness and sincerity."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 6 '22 180w

Cleveland p86 N '22

"In spite of a wooden style, in spite of some clues which lead nowhere and others which are developed out of all proportion to their relative importance, in spite of bumpy and intruding interludes, the book carries a curious sense of reality. It is as though the author had gone through all the trials and tragedies of homesteading, and then, secure in the knowledge of her ability to conquer difficulties, had sat down to make a book of her experiences."

+ — Lit R p627 Ap 29 '22 180w

N Y Times p9 Ap 30 '22 40w

Wis Lib Bul 18:157 Je '22

YOUNG, FLORENCE ETHEL MILLS. Stronger influence. 320p $1.75 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

The story is illustrative of the difference between passionate love due to natural affinity and the love born of friendship and maternal instinct. Esmé Lester was in no doubt about the stronger hold of the first when she married Paul Hallam instead of staid, reliable George Sinclair, altho she was well aware of Paul's besetting weakness, drink. After three years of freedom and happiness the old enemy renewed his clutches upon Paul and, determined to wrestle with him alone, he lost himself to Esmé and their world. Strong evidences pointed to his death. The war intervened and George, renewing his courtship, became Esmé's second husband and the father of her baby. With Paul's return the old love reasserted its hold upon Esmé and George proved the quality of his by helping her to make a free choice.

"The novel is above the average, for the style is good and the story told with a real sincerity."

+ Lit R p924 S 2 '22 60w

"The prose of 'The Stronger Influence' is at times fairly distinguished, and the reader will have no difficulty in making his way through the story. But it is a tale which, in this decade of unusual novels, will be soon forgotten for better things."

— + N Y Times p15 Ag 13 '22 550w

"The idea is big enough for the length of the book, but the problem is stated so baldly it seems almost mathematical and lacks human appeal. It is almost a good novel." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p5 Ag 6 '22 250w

Sat R 133:527 My 20 '22 450w

Spring'd Republican p7a O 1 '22 130w

"All her people are admirably natural, and though the chief interest is really in their situation rather than in themselves, they are not inadequate to the parts they have to play."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p345 My 25 '22 230w

YOUNG, FRANCIS BRETT. Red knight; a romance. 347p $2 Dutton

22-17150

Robert Bryden, early an orphan, was reared in England by an aunt and uncle who took pains to obliterate every trace of his maternal Italian ancestry. Nevertheless his mother's countrymen and her native land attract him irresistibly. In a London café he contracts a close friendship with Enrico Massa, a strange idealist, pacifist and Marxian socialist. When after the war the news spreads that Massa has led a revolution in Trinacria and has become the dictator of a communist republic, Robert finds ways and means to go there and become one of Massa's secret service agents. In that capacity he meets and falls violently in love with a beautiful girl on whose family he is supposed to spy. In a crisis when he faces the dilemma of either betraying his beloved or killing his friend and leader, he chooses to shoot himself.

Booklist 19:55 N '22

Boston Transcript p3 S 16 '22 800w

Cleveland p86 N '22

"His stark terminating tragedy is the most romantic of gestures. But he is also the more thoroughgoing novelist on this occasion. His story is built carefully, completely. It has body and bones." W. R. Benet

+ Lit R p103 O 14 '22 700w

Nation 115:286 S 20 '22 60w

"It remains a compelling and interesting story admirably told, and into it has gone a considerable measure of felicitous artistic ability." L. R. Morris

+ N Y Times p28 Ag 20 '22 950w

"The story is on original lines, and is not only exciting in its plot and incident, but singular in its study of a character torn between conflicting impulses."

+ Outlook 132:341 O 25 '22 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:5 Ja '23

Spring'd Republican p7a S 24 '22 390w

YOUNGHUSBAND, SIR FRANCIS EDWARD. Heart of nature, or 'The quest for natural beauty. 235p $5 Dutton

915.4 Nature. Himalaya mountains
(Eng ed 22-846)

The author's conception of nature is pantheistic. He sees in it not something static, determined once and for all, but rather "a great event forever happening," a spiritual activity forever reaching out towards perfection. It is this soul of nature to which the human spirit responds and beauty is born of understanding and coming into harmony with it. The book is an attempt to show how more beauty in nature may be discovered. In describing the natural beauties he has witnessed all over the world, but especially in India, Tibet and the Valley of Kashmir, the author's appeal is always to the naturalist-artist, who can communicate what he has seen and felt to others and point out to them the underlying unity between the processes of nature and those of the human personality.

YOUNGHUSBAND, SIR F. E.—Continued

Boston Transcript p7 Ag 19 '22 1250w

Freeman 5:622 S 6 '22 250w

Ind 109:48 Ag 5 '22 200w

"It comes so sincerely and burningly from the heart of a great man to the heart of a bleeding world to-day that it might do us well to pause and read and ponder its philosophy. It is always easier to scoff than to understand. Here is a man who perhaps understands more than we do; let us at least not be scoffers." E. G. Hamlin

Lit R p25 S 16 '22 1000w

"Always keeping to this golden thread of the kindred identity of something in nature and something in ourselves which rush to greet one another always, Sir Francis has portrayed in vivid and emotional prose the natural beauty of India and the Himalayas."

+ N Y Times p28 D 24 '22 1300w

Pratt p15 winter '23

Z

ZAHM, JOHN AUGUSTINE (H. J. MOZANS, pseud.). From Berlin to Bagdad and Babylon. 528p $5 (21s) Appleton

915-6 Asia, Western—Civilization. Asia, Western—Description and travel 22-23380

The author made the journey not as a tourist but as a student. He is interested not only in the present social, economic, religious and intellectual conditions of the countries thru which he passed but in their histories and civilizations. It is a leisurely trip in which are blended the author's observations and impressions, with valuable bits of history and legendary lore and with some fair and open-minded statements of conditions that have been and are. Among these last are his analysis of Mohammedanism, and the history of the Bagdad railway. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 19:155 F '23

"The volume has an element of fascination that one cannot resist once he has begun to read."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 23 '22 420w

"One could exhaust the superlatives in praising this book and still leave its qualities untouched. There is not a dull page in it—yet it contains a liberal education."

+ Cath World 116:708 F '23 400w

Reviewed by Hildegard Hawthorne

Int Bk R p35 D '22 50w

"The great charm of the book lies in the countless clues and starting points it offers for further reading, or a springboard for soaring fancy. It is the fruit of a lifetime of study and of a nobly ingenuous personality." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p23 D 24 '22 1650w

"Because he is one of the most learned travelers of our time, Dr. Zahm's books are far more than transient records of fleeting impressions. Every country that he visits is viewed from the scholar's eyes."

+ R of Rs 67:109 Ja '23 100w

Spring'd Republican p16 F 9 '23 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p863 D 21 '22 300w

ZIA, MUFTY-ZADE K., bey. Speaking of the Turks. 271p $1.75 Duffield

914.96 Turkey 22-22709

The writer, son of the Turkish ambassador to England, has lived for ten years in the United States and is married to an American woman.

He describes his people as they are today, the modern emancipated Turkish women, business conditions in Constantinople, the state of education and art and Turkish nationalism. He writes as a patriotic Turk, believing in his country and his people.

"His experience in this country and his personal associations have been such as to give him a less partisan attitude, and a very judicial and tolerant position. If at times he lapses into a glorification of the Turk, as a nation and as individuals, he does it with restraint and good judgment." J. S. B.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '22 980w

"This book presents only the pleasanter aspects of present-day Turkey, leaving untouched the uglier facts and problems, such as the nation's treatment of the Greeks and Armenians. The author, however, writes with charm and sincerity, and his whole book is tingling with the new enthusiasm which the Nationalist victories have brought to the younger generation in Turkey." E. L. Shuman

+ — Int Bk R p44 Ja '23 1050w

"It will not do to say that he has succeeded completely. But his book, in its clear and earnest enthusiasm, its polite moderation of phrase and humor of outlook, may be vigorously advanced as a genuine preliminary document." W: McFee

+ Lit R p263 D 2 '22 780w

Reviewed by F. H. Snow

N Y Times p13 Ja 7 '23 1700w

"Absolutely just, fair and truthful." Achmed Abdullah

+ N Y Tribune p21 Ja 7 '23 1600w

R of Rs 66:671 D '22 60w

"Written by one familiar not only with his nation but with general conditions in Europe and in America."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 N 4 '22 50w

"Of course Zia Bey is writing to 'sell' us Turkey and one must be on guard against persuasive salesmen, of whom Zia Bey is one. But he certainly deserves a hearing, and no harm will result from giving him a small order. He is carrying a very select and exclusive line, which is good as far as it goes."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a F 4 '23 1250w

ZIMMERN, ALFRED ECKHARD. Europe in convalescence. 237p $2.50 Putnam [5s Mills & B.]

940.5 Reconstruction (European war). Europe—Economic conditions 22-10715

The book is a survey and a critical examination of the European situation from prewar conditions to the present and is divided into three parts: The upheaval; The settlement; and The outlook. The first reviews the havoc wrought by the war in the political and economic field of ideas. The second retraces the various steps by which the Peace conference achieved its complete failure, a failure for which the British premier is held largely responsible. In part three the political outlook for the future of Europe is shown to depend on the establishment of relations of mutual confidence between Britain, France, and Germany. Here again the sins of omission fall preponderately to Britain while the case of France—actuated by fear, indignation and suspicion—is treated sympathetically. The political psychology of Germany is analysed as a dangerous mixture of guilt, defeat and just grievances. In the economic outlook the financial and commercial difficulties now facing Europe are outlined and some lines of advance indicated. The appendices contain extracts from documents, speeches and articles.

Am Pol Sci R 16:720 N '22 140w

Booklist 19:16 O '22

"It is a masterly conducting of a clinic, detailed and far reaching. There is even a grim humor about it here and there, though the marshaled facts are anything but comic."

Bookm 55:647 Ag '22 100w

"Mr. Zimmern puts his phrases forcibly and displays a broad and deep study of the most intricate problems which have ever vexed the world." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 7 '22 1100w

"It is a debatable point whether Mr. Zimmern has not been a bit too hard on England and a bit too easy on France. But there can be no debate on the question that in his analysis of the general situation in Europe he has presented us with an invaluable corrective to a good deal of reckless thinking." Simeon Strunsky

+ — Lit R p773 Jl 1 '22 1500w

"Mr. Zimmern is a disappointed idealist, whose disappointment, however, has not become despair. His discussion of the present discontents in Europe is clever and stimulating. And it is all the more interesting because Mr. Zimmern is of that rare kind among the apostles of reconstruction that mumbles no shibboleths and swears allegiance to no party. He avoids the vagueness of the pure internationalist and the crudities of the pure nationalist."

+ New Statesman 19:244 Je 3 '22 880w

Reviewed by T. L. Masson

N Y Times p6 O 29 '22 980w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 27:603 D '22

"Mr. Zimmern pours the vials of his wrath not only upon the Prime Minister but upon the British people, and by the very intemperance of his language weakens his plea for a better understanding with France as the basis of a European revival. Even the humble Englishman will feel inclined to resent such lectures from one who seems to pride himself on being a cosmopolitan. Mr. Zimmern's methods of argument only inflame the controversy that has lasted too long."

— Spec 128:375 Mr 25 '22 470w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 29 '22 60w

"The author is intensely honest and unusually candid in the statement of his convictions, and speaks with the authority of knowledge. His conclusions cannot be neglected in the study of post-war Europe."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 16 '22 450w

"This book is, on the whole, as thoughtful, as well-informed, and as interesting as will be expected by readers of 'Nationality and Government' and Mr. Zimmern's other books. It has some serious faults, as will be seen presently. But nobody can fail to learn things worth learning from it, though it is not so just as it is interesting."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Mr 16 '22 1750w

ZWEIG, STEFAN. Jeremiah; a drama in nine scenes; tr. from the author's revised German text by Eden and Cedar Paul. 336p $2.50 Seltzer

832 Jeremiah, the prophet—Drama

22-23316

The drama depicts the fall of Jerusalem, foreseen by Jeremiah, whose prophecies are unheeded. The reactions of the multitudes to the visions of Jeremiah and to the war rumors are the counterpart of our own war experiences. Jeremiah, spurned by all, his warnings unheeded, remains true to his divine leadings and to his God. But when, after the final disaster, having called in vain on God for guidance, he renounces his allegiance to Him, the victorious Chaldeans come to do him homage and offer him high honor in the service of Nebuchadnezzar. Then his gift of prophecy returns to him. He now foresees the downfall of the victors and, convincing his own people of the spiritual significance of their faith in an invincible Jerusalem, he becomes their leader.

"The drama moves slowly, but with dignity; it has several high moments, suggestions of plastic beauty. In it, on the whole, the word is more powerful than the deed." I. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '22 780w

"A drama of authentic grandeur and beauty. One feature remarkable in a play conceived upon such a scale is that the sense of the theatre is never lost or overpowered, 'Jeremiah' is for the stage. The translation, on the whole, is admirably done."

+ N Y Times p17 D 24 '22 1200w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p17 Ja 14 '23 600w

List of Documents for Use in the Smaller Libraries

Compiled by

MARY E. FURBECK,

Economics Division, New York Public Library

Ability tests

Educational measurements; a selected bibliography of standard tests with suggestions for their use. J. C. Morrison. (New York University of the State of New York. Bul. 734) 27p pa '21 University of the State of New York, Albany, N.Y.

Accident prevention

A program of education in accident prevention, with methods and results. E. G. Payne. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 32) 54p pa '22

Program of education in accident prevention, with methods and results. E. G. Payne. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 32) 54p pa '22

Adult education

Course of study and syllabus; English and citizenship classes for foreign-born adults, evening elementary schools. (New York (city) Board of education) 62p pa '22 Board of Education, Park Av and 59th St, New York City

Agricultural clubs

Status and results of boys' and girls' club work, Northern and Western states, 1920. G. E. Farrell. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department circular 192) 36p pa '21

Agriculture

Agriculture; summary of the census of agriculture for the United States, 1919 and 1920. (U.S. Census bur. 14th census, 1920) 76p pa '22

Seedtime and harvest; a graphic summary of seasonal work on farm crops. O. E. Baker and others. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 183) 53p pa '22

Yearbook, 1921. (U.S. Agriculture dept.) 855p '22

Bibliography

Index to the yearbooks, 1911-15. (U.S. Agriculture dept.) 178p pa '22

Nebraska

Agricultural statistics of Nebraska, for the year 1922. (Nebraska. Bur. of markets and marketing. Bul. 123) 122p pa '22 State Department of Agriculture, Lincoln, Nebraska

Americanization

Selected bibliography of texts and references in immigrant education. C. A. Whipple. (New York (state) Univ. Bul. 743) 12p pa '21 State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Suggestions for securing and holding attendance of foreign-born adults upon public-school English and citizenship classes. (U.S. Naturalization bur.) 30p pa '22

Australia

Australia; a commercial and industrial handbook. A. W. Ferrin. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Special agents' ser. 216) 162p '22 75c

Bees

Beekeeping in the buckwheat region. E. F. Phillips and G. S. Demuth. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1216) 26p pa '22

Beekeeping in the clover region. E. F. Phillips and G. S. Demuth. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1215) 27p pa '22

Beekeeping in the tulip-tree region. E. F. Phillips & G. S. Demuth. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1222)

Boll weevil

The boll-weevil problem; methods of reducing damage. W. D. Hunter and B. R. Coad. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1262) 31p pa '22

Dispersion of the boll weevil in 1921. B. R. Coad and others. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department circular 210) 4p pa '22

Books and reading

Best books of 1921, selected for a small public library. (New York. State Library. Bibliography bul. 72) 57p pa '22 State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Books for the blind

List of books in the Library for the blind, 1919-21; supplement to Bibliography bul. 63. (New York (State) University. Bul. 737) 67p pa '22 State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Building statistics

Building operations in representative cities, 1920. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 295) 49p pa '22

Canada

Canada; descriptive atlas. (Canada. Dept. of immigration and colonization) 80p '22 Dept. of Immigration and colonization, Ottawa, Canada

Canals

History of the barge canal of New York State. N. E. Whitford. (New York (state) State engineer and surveyor. Annual report, 1921. Supplement) 610p '22 State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Cattle

Feeding dairy cattle. M. H. Keeney. (New Jersey. Agricultural experiment station. Circular 127) 38p pa '21 New Jersey agricultural experiment stations. New Brunswick, N.J.

Cattle tick

How to get the last tick; observations resulting from active field experience in tick eradication. W. M. McKellar. (U.S. Agriculture dept.) 20p pa '22

Census

United States; composition and characteristics of the population. (U.S. Census bur. 14th Census.) 42p pa '21

United States

Dwellings and families. (U.S. Census bureau. 14th Census. Population; 1920) 14p pa '22

Child labor

The working children of Boston; a study of child labor under a modern system of legal regulation. H. S. Woodbury. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 89) 374p pa '22

Child welfare

Directory of local child-health agencies in the United States. (U.S. Children's bur. Bureau pub. 108) 340p pa '22

Children

Bibliography

Books on the education of early childhood. (U.S. Education bur. Kindergarten circular 7) 15p pa '21

Care and hygiene

Directory of local child-health agencies in the United States. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 108) 340p pa '22

Children—Continued

Bibliography

- Child care and child welfare; outlines for study. (U.S. Federal board for vocational education. Bul. 65) 502p pa '21
- China
Labor and industrial conditions in China. Julian Arnold and W. H. Gale. (U.S. Commerce dept. Trade information bul. 75) 17p pa '22
- Citizenship
Studies in citizenship for recruits. (U.S. Adjutant general's office. U.S. army training manual no. 1) 143p '22
Teachers' handbook on citizenship, naturalization and the voting system. (New York State. Division of vocational and extension education.) 37p pa '21 University of the State of New York, Albany, N.Y.
- Civics
Syllabus in civics, ninth grade or first year high school. (New York (State) University. Bul. 739) 34p pa '22 State Library, Albany, N.Y.
- Clothes moths
Red cedar chests as protectors against moth damage. E. A. Back and Frank Rabak. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Bul. 1051) 14p pa '22
- Coal miners
Hours and earnings in anthracite and bituminous coal mining; anthracite, Ja 1922; bituminous, winter of 1921-22. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 316) 63p pa '22
- Colleges and universities
Higher education in Australia and New Zealand. C. F. Thwing. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 25) 44p pa '22
Philanthropy in the history of American higher education. J. B. Sears. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 26) 112p pa '22
- Commerce
Export trade of the United States and Germany; comparative figures for 1913, 1920 and 1921. (U.S. Bur. of foreign and domestic commerce. Trade information bul. 21) 17p pa '22
- Periodicals
Foreign periodicals on trade and economic conditions. E. M. Crampton. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Miscellaneous ser. 114) 33p pa '22
- United States
Foreign trade of the United States for the fiscal year 1921-22. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 59) 25p pa '22
U.S. trade with Latin America in 1921. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade and economic review for 1921, no.9) 53p pa '22
Volume of United States trade, 1921, by ports of origin and destination. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Miscellaneous ser. 112) 57p pa '22
Compiled by Records and Information Section, Statistical Division, United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation
- Commerce, Foreign
Catalog of Bureau publications; a review of information available to manufacturers and exporters in bulletins issued by the Bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, May 1, 1922. (U.S. Bur. of Foreign and domestic commerce) 55p pa '22
Training for foreign service. G. L. Swiggett. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1921, no. 27) 154p pa '22
- Community buildings
Uses of rural community buildings. W. C. Nason. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1271) 32p pa '22
- Concrete
Plain concrete for farm use. T. A. H. Miller. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1279) 27p pa '22

Continuation schools

Part-time and continuation schools abroad; reprints. (California. University. Division of vocational educational. Bul. 6) 48p pa '21 University of California, Berkeley, Cal.

Cooperation

Legal phases of cooperative associations. L. S. Hulbert. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Bul. 1106) 74p pa '22

Country life

Locating the rural community. Dwight Sanderson. (New York State college of agriculture. Cornell reading course for the farm. Lesson 158) 24p pa '20 Cornell farm study courses, College of agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Cranberries

Cranberries; 25 ways of preparing for table. L. W. Hunt (Washington (State) State college. Extension service bul. 74) 11p pa '21 State College of Washington, Pullman, Wash.

Crop insurance

Crop insurance: risks, losses and principles of protection. V. N. Valgren. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department bul. 1043) 27p pa '22

Czechoslovakia

Commerce and finance in Czechoslovakia. V. A. Geringer and E. P. Herman. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 53) 21p pa '22

Disarmament

Armament conference treaties; treaties and resolutions approved and adopted by the Conference on limitation of armament, submitted by the President of the United States to the Senate for advice and consent to their ratification. (U.S. Congress 67:2. Senate document 124) 44p pa '22

Drama

Plays for the country theatre. A. M. Drummond. (New York State. College of agriculture. Extension bul. 53) 82p pa '22 State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

A study course in modern drama; program for women's clubs. E. A. Lay (North Carolina. University Extension leaflet, v 4 no 7) 58p '21 50 cents. Bureau of extension, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N.C.

Dressmaking

The paper dress form. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department circular 207) 10p pa '22
Use and alteration of commercial patterns. H. K. Robson. (Washington. State college. Extension service. Bul. 78) 10p pa '22
State College of Washington, Pullman, Wash.

Education

Educational directory, 1921-1922. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1921, no. 48) 142p pa '22
Statistics of state universities and state colleges for the year ended June 30, 1921. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1921, no. 53) 14p pa '22

Employment

Course of employment in New York State from 1914 to 1921. (New York (State) Labor dept. Special bul. 113) 136p pa '22 N.Y. State Library

Farm animals

Farm animals; cattle, swine and chickens: farms reporting, number on hand, and farms not reporting, 1920; calves, pigs, and chickens raised, and eggs produced, 1919. (U.S. Census bur. 14th census: Agriculture bul.) 98p pa '22

Farm labor

Harvest labor problems in the wheat belt. D. D. Lescohier. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Bul. 1020) 35p pa '22

Farm life

National influence of a single farm community; a story of the flow into national life of migration from the farms. E. F. Hoag. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Bul. 984) 55p pa '21

Farm machinery

Manufacture and sale of farm equipment in 1920; a summary of reports from 583 manufacturers. H. R. Tolley and others. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 212) 11p pa '22

Farm tenure

Renting dairy farms. H. A. Turner. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1272) 24p pa '22

Fertilizers.

Green manuring. C. V. Piper and A. J. Pieters. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1250) 45p pa '22

Fisheries

Fishery industries of the United States: report prepared for the Commission of the United States of America to the Brazil centennial exposition. Lewis Radcliffe. (U.S. Commerce dept.) 10p pa '22

FranceCommerce

• Franco-German trade. D. S. Green. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 23) 18p pa '22

Fur animals

Laws relating to fur animals, 1922. G. A. Lawyer and F. L. Ernschaw. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1293) 30p pa '22

Fur farming

Fox ranching in Canada. J. A. Allen and J. E. Smith. (Canada. Agriculture dept. Bul. 12, n.s.) 39p pa '22 Minister of agriculture, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada

Game

Game as a national resource. T. S. Palmer. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department bul. 1049) 48p pa '22

Game laws

Game laws for 1922; a summary of the provisions of federal, state, and provincial statutes. G. A. Lawyer and F. L. Ernschaw. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1288) 80p pa '22

Gardening.

Home gardening in South Carolina. C. C. Newman. (South Carolina. Clemson agricultural college. Extension bul. 42, rev.) 40p pa '22 Clemson Agricultural College, Clemson College, S. C.

Gardens

Permanent fruit and vegetable gardens. W. R. Beattie and C. P. Close. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1242) 22p pa '21

GermanyEconomic conditions

Internal value of the German mark. E. C. Herring. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Commerce reports. Suppl.) 7p pa '22

Grapes

Grape culture. F. P. Cullinan. (Indiana. Purdue University. Dept. of agricultural extension. Extension bul. 102) 12p pa '22 Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.

Grocery stores

Self-service in the retailing of food products. F. E. Chaffee and McFall Kerbey. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Bul. 1044) 52p pa '22

Gulls

Gulls: how to control and reclaim them. C. E. Ramser. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1234) 44p pa '22

Harness

Harness repairing. F. G. Behrends. (New York State college of agriculture. Cornell reading course for the farm. Lesson 160) 43p pa '21 Cornell farm study courses, College of agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

High schools

High-school building and grounds. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 23) 49p pa '22

A report of the Commission on the reorganization of secondary education, appointed by the National Education Association

Holidays

Arbor and bird day manual for May, 1922. (Connecticut. Board of education. School document, no. 2, 1922) 23p pa '22 State Board of Education, Hartford, Conn.

Homes for teachers

The district owned or controlled teacher's home. J. C. Muerman. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 16) 19p pa '22

Hotbeds

Hotbeds and cold frames. (Kentucky. College of agriculture. Extension division. Circ. 120) 16p pa '22 College of agriculture, Lexington, Ky.

Housing

New York (State) Joint legislative committee on housing. Intermediate report. (Legal doc. 1922, no. 60) 257p '22 State library, Albany, N.Y.

Report of the "Lockwood Committee."

Illegitimacy

Illegitimacy laws of the United States, passed during the years 1919 to 1922, inclusive. (U.S. Children's bur.) 35p pa '22

Industrial research

Personnel research agencies; a guide to organized research in employment management, industrial relations, training, and working conditions. J. D. Thompson. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 239) 207p pa '21

Irrigation

Practical information for beginners in irrigation. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 864) 44p pa '22 Second rev. March, 1922

Janitors

The school janitor; a study of the functions and administration of school janitor service. J. A. Garber. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1922, no. 24) 55p pa '22

Juvenile delinquents

Practical value of scientific study of juvenile delinquents. Wm. Healy. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 96) 31p pa '22

Labor disputes

Use of federal power in settlement of railway labor disputes. C. O. Fisher. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 303) 121p pa '22

Labor legislation

Labor legislation of 1920. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 292) 152p pa '22

Labor legislation of 1921. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 308) 328p pa '22

Land settlement

Farm lands available for settlement. B. Henderson. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1271) 51p pa '22

Live-stock

The live-stock industry in South America. L. B. Burk and E. Z. Russell. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 228) 35p pa '22

Utility value of pure-bred live stock. D. S. Burch. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 235) 22p pa '22

Lumber industry

Forest resources, lumber industry and lumber export trade of Norway. A. H. Oxholm. (U.S. Bur. of foreign and domestic commerce. Special agents ser. 211) 136p pa '22

Manufactures.United States

Summary of Census of manufactures, by industries, for the United States, 1919. (U.S. Census bur.) 43p pa '22

Compiled for the use of the Committee on Finance, United States Senate.

Meat

Food animals and meat consumption in the United States. John Roberts. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 241) 19p pa '22

Milk

How to have a successful milk campaign. (Wisconsin. College of agriculture. Extension service. Circular 140) 32p pa '21 University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Milk and our school children. B. C. Reaney. (U.S. Education bur. Health education, no. 11) 31p pa '22

- Why and how to use milk. H. G. Campbell. (Canada. Dairy and cold storage branch) 31p pa '22 Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Canada
- Mosquitoes
Mosquito manual, for use in New Jersey schools. (New Jersey. Agricultural experiment station. Circ. 130) 16p pa '22 Agricultural experiment stations, New Brunswick, N.J.
- Remedies and preventives against mosquitoes. L. O. Howard. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 444) 14p pa '22
Reprint with changes of a 1911 bulletin.
- Moving pictures
Motion pictures of the U.S. Department of agriculture. F. W. Perkins. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 233) 13p pa '22
- National Forests
The national forests of New Mexico. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 240) 21p pa '22
- National War Labor Board
National War Labor Board; a history of its formation and activities, together with its awards and the documents of importance in the record of its development. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 287) 334p pa '22
- Naval Academy, Annapolis
Regulations governing admission of candidates into Naval academy as midshipmen, April 1922. (U.S. Navigation bur.) 27p pa '22
- Negroes
Extension work among negroes, 1920. W. B. Mercler. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department circular 190) 24p pa '21
- Negro women in industry. E. L. Shields. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 20) 65p pa '22
- Nutrition
Malnutrition and school feeding. J. C. Gebhart. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1921, no. 37) 39p pa '22
- Occupations
Comparative occupation statistics for the United States. (U.S. Census bur. 14th census, 1920. Bul.) 11p pa '22
- Office management
Office administration for organizations supervising the health of mothers, infants and children of preschool age, with special reference to public health nursing agencies. E. B. Hunter. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 101) 216p pa '22
- Olives
Olive growing in the southwestern United States. C. F. Kinman. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1249) 43p pa '22
- Pageants
The historical pageant in the rural community. A. F. Halsey. (New York State. College of agriculture. Extension bul. 54) 26p pa '22
State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Part-time schools
Part-time schools; a survey of experience in the United States and foreign countries, with recommendations. H. B. Smith. (U.S. Federal board for vocational education. Bul. 73) 462p pa '22
- Poultry
Poultry management. G. A. Bell. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 287) 38p pa '21
- Prices
Wholesale prices, 1890 to 1920. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 296) 247p pa '22
- Public health service
The United States public health service; information for persons desiring to enter the regular corps of the service. (U.S. Public health service. Reprint 719) 12p pa '22
- Public markets
Open types of public markets. McFall Kerbey. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department bul. 1002) 18p pa '21
- Radiotelephony.
Construction and operation of simple home-made radio receiving outfit. (U.S. Standards bur. Circ. 120) 16p pa '22
- Rehabilitation
Vocational rehabilitation in rural communities. Clarence Henry. (U.S. Federal board for vocational education. Bul. 72) 13p pa '22
Bulletin prepared for information of county agricultural agents, agricultural teachers, extension workers, and other agencies devoted to rural progress.
- Reindeer
Reindeer in Alaska. Seymour Hadwen and L. J. Palmer. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1089) 74p pa '22
- Roads
Portland cement concrete roads. J. T. Voshell and R. E. Tomis. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1077) 67p pa '22
- Rural schools
Modern equipment for one-teacher schools. M. C. Newbury. (U. S. Education bur. Rural school leaflet 3) 11p pa '22
- Russia
Condition of industries in Soviet Russia. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 55) 21p pa '22
Translated from the Bolshevik newspaper, Economic Life.
- Schoolhouses and grounds
School grounds and play. H. S. Curtiss. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1921, no. 45) 31p pa '22
- Sewage disposal
Sewage disposal for rural homes. H. W. Riley and J. C. McCurdy. (New York State. College of agriculture. Extension bul. 48) 30p pa '22
State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Sewerage
Sewage and sewerage of farm homes. G. M. Warren. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1227) 55p pa '22
- Sewers, sewage, sewerage and drainage: information for town officials and others responsible for the proper layout and construction of pipe sewers and drains; especially for the betterment of villages or neighborhood districts. (New Hampshire. Board of health. Special bul.) 32p pa '21
State board of health, Concord, N.H.
- Shell-fish
Shell-fish resources of the northwest coast of the United States. C. H. Edmonson. (U.S. Fisheries bur. Document 920) 21p pa '22
- Sunflowers
Sunflowers; their culture and use. A. F. Vass. (Wyoming. Agricultural experiment station. Bul. 129) 30p pa '21
Director of experiment station, Laramie, Wyoming
- Tomatoes
Tomatoes for canning and manufacturing. J. H. Beattie. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1233) 20p pa '21
- Tractors
Choosing a tractor (for a corn-belt farm). L. A. Reynoldson and H. R. Tolley. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1300) 12p pa '22
- Tree surgery
Tree surgery. J. F. Collins. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1178) 32p pa '22
- Tuberculosis.
Getting well: some things worth knowing about tuberculosis. Nathan Barlow, ed. (U.S. Public health service. Miscellaneous pub. 28) 25p pa '22
Written especially for the use of patients in hospitals operated by the United States Public Health Service.
- Unemployment
Industrial unemployment, a statistical study of its extent and causes. E. S. Bradford. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 310) 52p pa '22
- United States
Bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. Appointments to positions at home and abroad in the Bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur.) 23p pa '22

United States—Continued

Bureau of labor statistics

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor; its history, activities, and organization. G. A. Weber. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 319) 64p pa '22

Commerce

Trade of the United States with the world, 1919-1920: Imports of merchandise into the United States by countries and principal articles during the calendar years 1919 and 1920. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Misc. ser. 109) 129p pa '22

Trade of the United States with the world, 1920-1921: pt. 1, Imports. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Misc. ser. 115) 130p pa '22

Statistics

Statistical abstract of the United States, 1921. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur.) 912p pa '22

United States. State, department of Short account of the Department of state of the United States. (U.S. State dept.) 76p pa '22

Vegetables

Preparation of vegetables for table. Maria Parloa. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 256) 46p pa '22

Reprint of a 1906 bulletin.

Venezuela

Venezuela; a commercial and industrial handbook, with a chapter on the Dutch West Indies. P. L. Bell. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Special agents' ser. 212) 472p '22

Water supply

The farm water supply. Pt. 1 Simple water systems and plumbing. F. G. Behrends. (New York State. College of agriculture. Extension bul. 50) 75p pa '22

State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Weeds

Nineteen noxious weeds of Indiana; description, eradication and control of the nineteen weeds designated as noxious in the Indiana seed law. A. A. Hansen. (Purdue Univ. Agricultural experiment station. Circ. 106) 32p pa '22 Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.

Women

Legislation

State laws affecting working women. M. J. Gordon. (U.S. Women's bureau. Bul. 16) 51p pa '21

Women in industry

The family status of breadwinning women; a study of material in the census schedules of a selected locality. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 23) 43p pa '22

Occupational progress of women; an interpretation of census statistics of women in gainful occupations. M. V. Dempsey. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 27) 37p pa '22

Women in Rhode Island industries; a study of hours, wages, and working conditions. M. V. Robinson. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 21) 73p pa '22

Women who work. (New York (State) Labor dept. Special bul. 110) 40p pa '22 State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Wood

Wood-using industries of New York. R. V. Reynolds and R. J. Hoyle. (New York State college of forestry. Technical publ. 14) 231p pa '21 State college of forestry, Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y.

The Senate and House documents and reports are issued in limited editions, and unless otherwise indicated may be obtained only through members of Congress. Librarians should make application to their own representatives in Washington.

The Department of Agriculture's supply of the Current number of Farmers' Bulletins is ordinarily sufficient to make it possible to send them free to all applicants. They are also for sale at 5 cents per copy [by the Superintendent of Documents].

The Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., is authorized to sell at cost of paper and printing any United States public document in his charge, the distribution of which is not otherwise provided for. Publications cannot be supplied free to individuals nor forwarded in advance of payment.

Subject, Title and Pseudonym Index

To Author Entries, March, 1922—February, 1923

A B C's of business. McKee, H. S. (F '23)
 Aaron's rod. Lawrence, D. H. (Ag '22)
 Abbé Pierre. Hudson, J. W. (Je '22)
 Abdication. Candler, E. (O '22)
 Above suspicion. Ostrander, I. E. (F '23)
 Abroad with Mark Twain and Eugene Field.
 Fischer, H. W. (Jl '22)

Accidents, Industrial

Fisher, B. Mental causes of accidents. (Ja '23)

Accounting

Borsodi, R. New accounting. (O '22)
 Cole, W. M., and Geddes, A. E. Fundamentals of accounting. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 McKinsey, J. O. Budgetary control. (F '23)
 Walter, F. W., ed. Retail charge account. (Jl '22)

Achad Ha-Am, pseud. See Ginzberg, A. (Jl '22)

Across America by motor cycle. Shepherd, C. K. (Ja '23)

Actors and actresses

Drew, J. My years on the stage. (Ja '23)
 Pearson, H. Modern men and mummies. (Mr '22)

Thaler, A. Shakespere to Sheridan. (S '22)
 Admirals of the Caribbean. Hart, F. R. (O '22)
 Adrienne Toner. Sedgwick, A. D. (My '22)
 Adventure of living. Strachey, J. St L. (D '22)
 Adventures in angling. Heilner, V. (Ag '22)
 Adventures in Bolivia. Prodgers, C. H. (D '22)
 Adventures in idealism. Sabsovich, K. (Jl '22)
 Adventures of a tropical tramp. Foster, H. L. (Ap '22)
 Adventures of Maya the bee. Bonsels, W. (D '22)

Advertising

Aughinbaugh, W. E. Advertising for trade in Latin-America. (Mr, Je '22)
 Calkins, E. E. Advertising man. (My '22)
 Craik's market data book, and directory of class, trade and technical publications. (F '23)

Advertising for trade in Latin-America. Aughinbaugh, W. E. (Mr, Je '22)
 Advertising man. Calkins, E. E. (My '22)

Aeronautics

Luckiesh, M. Book of the sky. (O '22)

Voyages

Smith, R. M. 14,000 miles through the air. (My '22)

Aesthetics

Bell, C. Since Cézanne. (Ag '22)
 Afoot in England. Hudson, W. H. (Jl '22)

Africa

Description and travel

Campbell, D. In the heart of Bantuland. (Ag '22)

Native races.

Claridge, G. C. Wild bush tribes of tropical Africa. (Je '22)
 Roscoe, J. Twenty-five years in East Africa. (Ap '22)

Africa, Central

Buchanan, A. Exploration of Afr. (N '22)

Description and travel

Vanden Bergh, L. J. On the trail of the pigmies. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Africa, East

Description and travel

Roscoe, J. Twenty-five years in East Africa. (Ap '22)

Africa, North

Description and travel

Scott, A. M. Barbary. (S '22)

Africa, West

Description and travel

Claridge, G. C. Wild bush tribes of tropical Africa. (Je '22)

After the war. Repington, C. à C. (Ap '22)

Afterglow. Thomson, E. (S '22)

Agricultural bloc. Capper, A. (F '23)

Agriculture

Pratt, A. D. Homesteader's portfolio. (F '23)

Economic aspects

Capper, A. Agricultural bloc. (F '23)

Aikman, Henry G., pseud. See Armstrong, H. H. (O '22)

Alarums and excursions. Agate, J. E. (N '22)

Alexandra Feodorovna, ex-czarina of Russia

Dehn, L. Real tsaritsa. (O '22)

Algeria

Ward, E. Three travellers in North Africa (F '23)

Description and travel

Hilton-Simpson, M. W. Among the hill folk of Algeria. (Mr, Je '22)

Scott, A. M. Barbary. (S '22)

All about coffee. Ukers, W. H. (F '23)

All in a life-time. Morgenthau, H. (D '22)

Allusions

Hyamson, A. M. Dictionary of English phrases. (My '22)

Alone. Douglas, N. (N '22)

Alpine ski-ing at all heights and seasons.

Lunn, A. (Ap '22)

Altar steps. Mackenzie, C. (O '22)

Aluminum

Grard, C. A. M. Aluminium and its alloys. (Ag '22)

Aluminium and its alloys. Grard, C. A. M. (Ag '22)

Amateur radio. Grainger, M. J. (Ja '23)

Amateur's book of the dahlia. Stout, H. M. (My '22)

Amazing inheritance. Sterrett, F. R. (N '22)

America. Gould, C. W. (D '22)

America and the balance sheet of Europe. Bass, J. F., and Moulton, H. G. (Mr '22)

America faces the future. Drake, D. (My '22)

America vs. Europe in industry. Farnham, D. T. (Ap, Je '22)

American citizens and their government. Colegrove, K. W. (My '22)

American diplomat in China. Reinsch, P. S. (Ap '22)

American drama

Collections

Cohen, H. L., ed. Longer plays by modern authors (American). (O '22)

Shay, F., ed. Contemporary one act plays. (D '22)

History and criticism

Woolcott, A. Shouts and murmurs. (D '22)

American essays

Bibliography

Horton, M. L. Viewpoints in essays. (N '22)

American fiction

History and criticism

Van Doren, C. C. Contemporary American novelists. (Je '22)

American fuels. Bacon, R. F., and Hamor, W. A. (Ja '23)
 American Indian life. Parsons, E. C., ed. (Ag '22)
 American individualism. Hoover, H. (Ja '23)
 American literature

Bibliography

Manly, J. M., and Rickert, E. Contemporary American literature. (O '22)

Collections

Stauffer, R. E., ed. American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. (Jl '22)

History and criticism

Cambridge history of American literature. Short history of American literature. (S '22)
 Overton, G. M. When winter comes to Main street. (Ja '23)
 Pattee, F. L. Side-lights on American literature. (Ja '23)
 Sherman, S. P. Americans. (F '23)
 American party system. Merriam, C. E. (N '22)

American poetry

Collections

American poetry. (N '22)
 Braithwaite, W. S. B., ed. Anthology of magazine verse for 1921. (Mr '22)
 Davis, L. P., comp. Anthology of newspaper verse for 1921. (N '22)
 Farrar, J. C., comp. Bookman anthology of verse. (F '23)
 Yale record book of verse. (D '22)

History and criticism

Maynard, T. Our best poets. (F '23)
 Parsons, M. P. New poetry. (My '22)
 American portraits. Bradford, G. (Ap '22)
 American railroad problem. Sharfman, I. L. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual) American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. Stauffer, R. E., ed. (Jl '22)

Americanization

Bierstadt, E. H. Aspects of Americanization. (S '22)
 Gavit, J. P. Americans by choice. (O '22)
 Stauffer, R. E., ed. American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. (Jl '22)
 Americans. Sherman, S. P. (F '23)
 Americans by choice. Gavit, J. P. (O '22)
 Americans in eastern Asia. Dennett, T. (F '23)
 America's stake in Europe. Fahs, C. H. (Mr '22)

Among primitive peoples in Borneo. Evans, I. H. N. (Ag '22)
 Among the hill folk of Algeria. Hilton-Simpson, M. W. (Mr, Je '22)
 Amouretta landscape. Adams, A. (Jl '22)
 Analysis of mind. Russell, B. A. W. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual) Ancient tales from many lands. Fleming, R. M. (O '22)
 Andrew Marvell. Bagguley, W. H., ed. (Ja '23)

Anecdotes

Mosher, M. D., comp. More toasts. (F '23)
 Angel of terror. Wallace, E. (Ag '22)
 Angels and ministers. Housman, L. (Mr '22)
 Anglo-Saxon poetry

Collections

Spaeth, J. D. E. Old English poetry. (O '22)
 Animals

Habits and behavior

Hornaday, W. T. Minds and manners of wild animals. (Jl '22)
 Kidd, B. Philosopher with nature. (Mr '22)
 Mills, E. A. Watched by wild animals. (Ag '22)
 Scoville, S. Wild folk. (Je '22)
 Animals, Stories and legends of
 Squier, E.-L. Wild heart. (Jl '22)

Anker, Jens, pseud. See Hansen, R. (S '22)
 Ann and her mother. Douglas, O. E. (D '22)
 Anne Severn and the Fieldings. Sinclair, M. (Ja '23)

Antarctic regions

Ponting, H. G. Great white south. (Ag '22)
 Anthology of Irish verse. Colum, P., ed. (My '22)

Anthology of Italian poems. Lucchi, L. de'. (F '23)

Anthology of magazine verse for 1921. Braithwaite, W. S. B., ed. (Mr '22)

Anthology of newspaper verse for 1921. Davis, F. P. (N '22)

Anthony, H., pseud. See Shands, H. A. (Je '22)

Anthropogeography

Von Engel, O. D. Inheriting the earth. (Ag '22)

Anthropology

Armitage, F. P. Diet and race. (O '22)
 Goldenweiser, A. A. Early civilization. (D '22)

Antiques

Gade, F. Collecting antiques for pleasure and profit. (Ap '22)
 Apology and polemic in the New Testament. Heffern, A. D. (Ja '23)

Apparitions

Flammarion, C. Death and its mystery; at the moment of death. (Jl '22)

Apple

Bailey, L. H. Apple-tree. (Ap '22)
 Apple-tree. Bailey, L. H. (Ap '22)

Applications for positions

Fletcher, W. L. How to get the job you want. (Mr '22)
 Applied business correspondence. Watson, H. (O '22)

Arabia

History

Hogarth, D. G. Arabia. (D '22)
 Arabia. Hogarth, D. G. (D '22)
 Arabic thought and its place in history. O'Leary, D. E. (Jl '22)

Arbitration, Industrial

Amalgamated clothing workers of America. Clothing workers of Chicago. (O '22)
 Askwith, G. R. A. Industrial problems and disputes. (Ap '22)

Architecture

History

Hamlin, A. D. F. Text-book of the history of architecture. (Je '22)

United States

Moore, C. Daniel H. Burnham, architect. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Architecture, Domestic

Churchill, A. L., and Wickenden, L. House-owner's book. (S '22)
 Foster, W. A., and Carter, D. G. Farm buildings. (Ag '22)
 Townsend, R. T., ed. Country Life book of building and decoration. (My '22)

England

Quennell, M., and C. H. B. History of everyday things in England. (O '22)

Arctic regions

Stefánsson, V. Hunters of the great north. (Ja '23)
 Stefánsson, V. Northward course of empire. (N '22)

Argentina

Denis, P. Argentine republic. (F '23)
 Argentine republic. Denis, P. (F '23)
 Argonauts of the western Pacific. Malinowski, B. (N '22)
 Ariel. Rodó, J. E. (D '22)

Arizona

History

Becholdt, F. R. When the West was young. (N '22)

Armies

Hamilton, I. S. M. Soul and body of an army. (Mr '22)

Around the world in ten days. Fraser, C. C. (O '22)

Art
Williamson, G. C: Behind my library door. (D '22)

History

Faure, E. History of art. (O '22)

Art, Greek

Carpenter, R. Esthetic basis of Greek art of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C. (F '23)

Art and religion

Vogt, V. Art and religion. (Jl '22)

Art of preaching. Brown, C. R. (Ja '23)

Art of the player-piano. Grew, S. (Je '22)

Asben

Buchanan, A. Exploration of Afr. (N '22)

Ascent. Rumsey, F. (O '22)

Ashton, Winifred. See Dane, C., pseud. (Mr '22)

Asia, Western

Civilization

Zahm, J. A. From Berlin to Bagdad and Babylon. (F '23)

Description and travel

Zahm, J. A. From Berlin to Bagdad and Babylon. (F '23)

Asia at the crossroads. Powell, E. A. (My '22)

Aspects and impressions. Gosse, E. W. (Jl '22)

Aspects of Americanization. Bierstadt, E. H. (S '22)

Asquith, Margot (Tennant) (Mrs Herbert Henry Asquith)

Asquith, M. Margot Asquith. (F '23)

Assets of the ideal city. Fassett, C. M. (Jl '22)

Assorted chocolates. Cohen, O. R. (D '22)

Astronomy

Hale, G. E. New heavens. (Ag '22)

Johnson, G. Sky movies. (O '22)

Poor, C. L. Gravitation versus relativity. (F '23)

At sea with Joseph Conrad. Sutherland, J. G. (N '22)

At sight of gold. Lombardi, C. (O '22)

At the crossroads. Comstock, H. (Ag '22)

Atlantic states

Description and travel

Faris, J. T. Seeing the Eastern states. (Ja '23)

Atolls of the sun. O'Brien, F. (N '22)

Atomic theories. Loring, F. H. (My '22)

Atomic theory

Loring, F. H. Atomic theories. (My '22)

Attic dreamer. Monahan, M. (F '23)

Auction bridge

Denison, E. E. Play of auction hands. (My '22)

Irwin, F. Complete auction player. (Jl '22)

Audel's engineers and mechanics guide. Graham, F. D. (N '22)

Aurès mountains

Hilton-Simpson, M. W. Among the hill folk of Algeria. (Mr, Je '22)

Australia

Description and travel

Doyle, A. C. Wanderings of a spiritualist. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Austria-Hungary

History

Margutti, A. A. V. Emperor Francis Joseph and his times. (Je '22)

Authors

Hind, C. L. More authors and I. (N '22)

Overton, G. M. When winter comes to Main street. (Ja '23)

Pearson, H. Modern men and mummies. (Mr '22)

Strachey, L. Books and characters. (Ag '22)

Ticknor, C. Glimpses of authors. (D '22)

Authors, English

Ervine, St J. E. Some impressions of my elders. (F '23)

Authorship

Holliday, R. C., and Van Rensselaer, A. Business of writing. (F '23)

Autobiography of Countess Tolstoy. Tolstoy, S. A. (D '22)

Automobiles

Design and construction

Forbes, K. Principles of automobile body design. (Ja '23)

Repairing

Good, A. A. Ford car, truck and tractor repair. (N '22)

Babbitt, Lewis, S. (O '22)

Babel, Cournos, J. (O '22)

Backsliders. Lindsey, W. (My '22)

Balance. Orcutt, W. D. (Je '22)

Balance sheet of sovietism. Brasol, B. L. (Ja '23)

Balkan peninsula

History

Schevill, F. History of the Balkan peninsula. (O '22)

Balkan states

Panaretoff, S. Near Eastern affairs and conditions. (Je '22)

Thomson, C. B. Old Europe's suicide. (Je '22)

Ballad of the Royal Ann. Garstin, C. (D '22)

Ballads of Marko Kraljević. Low, D. H., tr. (D '22)

Balloons. Bibesco, E. (F '23)

Banking and business. Willis, H. P., and Edwards, G. W. (Mr '22)

Banks and banking

Willis, H. P., and Edwards, G. W. Banking and business. (Mr '22)

New York (city)

Lanier, H. W. Century of banking in New York. (Ap '22)

Baptists

Rosenberger, J. L. Through three centuries. (My '22)

Barbara Justice. Patrick, D., pseud. (Ag '22)

Barbary. Scott, A. M. (S '22)

Barcarole of James Smith. Gorman, H. S. (D '22)

Bards and bardism

Tinker, C. B. Nature's simple plan. (O '22)

Bars and shadows. Chaplin, R. (F '23)

Barton, Clara

Barton, W. E. Life of Clara Barton. (Mr, Je '22)

Batouala. Maran, R. (S '22)

Battles and enchantments. O'Connor, N. J. (D '22)

Be your own decorator. Burbank, E. (F '23)

Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of

Bailey, J. Some political ideas and persons. (Ag '22)

Bearings and bearing metals. (Ja '23)

Bearings (machinery)

Bearings and bearing metals. (Ja '23)

Beasts, men and gods. Ossendowski, F. (N '22)

Beautiful and damned. Fitzgerald, F. S. K. (Ap '22)

Beerbohm, Max

Lynch, B. Max Beerbohm in perspective. (Ap '22)

Beetles

Fabre, J. H. C. More beetles. (My '22)

Behind my library door. Williamson, G. C: (D '22)

Behind the mirrors. Gilbert, C. W. (S '22)

Belgium

German occupation, 1914-1918

Withington, R. In occupied Belgium. (Ap '22)

Belief in Christ. Gore, C: (F '23)

Belief in God. Gore, C: (Ap '22)

Bennett, H. S. Pastons and their England. (S '22)

Bennett Malln. Singmaster, E. (Ag '22)
Bennett-Thompson, Lillian. See Thompson, L. B. (Ap '22)

Berbers

Hilton-Simpson, M. W. Among the hill folk of Algeria. (Mr, Je '22)
 Best laid schemes. Nicholson, M. (Jl '22)
 Best plays of 1920-1921. Mantle, B., ed. (Jl '22)
 Best short stories of 1921. O'Brien, E. J. H., ed. (Mr '22)
 Better business libraries. Krause, L. B. (O '22)
 Beyond rope and fence. Grew, D. (N '22)
 Beyond Shanghai. Speakman, H. (S '22)
Bible. Whole

Antiquities

Peters, J. P. Bible and spade. (F '23)

Criticism, interpretation, etc.

Peake, A. S. Nature of Scripture. (F '23)

Bible. Old Testament

Biography

Phelps, W. L. Human nature in the Bible. (F '23)

History, Literary

Bewer, J. A. Literature of the Old Testament in its historical development. (F '23)

Texts

Bible. Old Testament. Modern reader's Bible for schools. (My '22)

Parts of the old Testament

Psalms

Peters, J. P. Psalms as liturgies. (N '22)
 Smith, J. M. P. Religion of the Psalms. (F '23)

Song of Solomon

Jastrow, M., jr. Song of songs. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Bible. New Testament

Heffern, A. D. Apology and polemic in the New Testament. (Ja '23)

History

Wade, G. W. New Testament history. (N '22)

History, Literary

Symes, J. E. Evolution of the New Testament. (Jl '22)

Bible and spade. Peters, J. P. (F '23)

Bickerstaffe-Drew, Francis Browning Drew.

See Ayscough, J., pseud. (S. O '22)

Big laurel. Bartlett, F. O. (D '22)

Big Peter. Marshall, A. (Ap '22)

Bill Johnston's joy book. Johnston, W. T., ed. (S '22)

Bill the bachelor. Mackail, D. G. (N '22)

Biography

Strachey, L. Books and characters. (Ag '22)

Biology

Curtis, W. G. Science and human affairs. (Ag '22)

Seers, A. W. Earth and its life. (O '22)

Smallwood, W. M. Man,—the animal. (Mr '22)

Biology of death. Pearl, R. (Ja '23)

Bird-nest boarding house. Reed, V. (Ja '23)

Birds

Myers, H. W. Western birds. (F '23)

Economic value

Hartley, G. I. Importance of bird life. (N '22)

Habits and behavior

Knight, C. W. R. Wild life in the tree tops. (S '22)

Massingham, H. J. Some birds of the countryside. (S '22)

Birkbeck, William John

Birkbeck, W. J. Life and letters of W. J. Birkbeck. (Ja '23)

Birth control

Sanger, M. H. Pivot of civilization. (N '22)

Sutherland, H. G. Birth control. (Ja '23)

Birthright. Strihling, T. S. (My '22)

Bittermeads mystery. Punshon, E. R. (O '22)

Black Caesar's clan. Terhune, A. P. (Ja '23)

Black gold. Terhune, A. P. (Ap '22)

Black oxen. Atherton, G. F. (F '23)

Black panther. Wheelock, J. H. (N '22)

Black Pawl. Williams, B. A. (D '22)

Black wolf pack. Beard, D. C. (D '22)

Blocking of Zeebrugge. Carpenter, A. F. B. (Jl '22)

Blood ship. Springer, N. (Ja '23)

Blue circle. Jordan, E. G. (Jl '22)

Bob's Hill trails. Burton, C. P. (My '22)

Body in the blue room. Williams, S. C. (Jl '22)

Bolivia

Description and travel

Guise, A. V. L. Six years in Bolivia. (D '22)

Portman, L. Three asses in Bolivia. (N '22)

Prodgers, C. H. Adventures in Bolivia. (D '22)

Bolshevism

Stoddard, T. L. Revolt against civilization. (Ag, N '22)

Russia

Brasol, B. L. Balance sheet of sovietism. (Ja '23)

Kehler, H. Red garden. (Ja '23)

Bonaparte, Charles Joseph

Bishop, J. B. Charles Joseph Bonaparte. (F '23)

Bonds

Lunt, E. C. Surety bonds. (F '23)

Book about myself. Dreiser, T. (F '23)

Book of American Negro poetry. Johnson, J. W., ed. (My '22)

Book of masks. Gourmont, R. de. (My '22)

Book of noble dogs. Ross, E. (Ja '23)

Book of the Grenvilles. Newbolt, H. J. (Mr '22)

Book of the pike. Smith, O. W. (D '22)

Book of the sky. Luckiesh, M. (O '22)

Book of Washington. Shackleton, R. (F '23)

Book of wireless telegraph and telephone. Collins, A. F. (O '22)

Book of women's verse. Squire, J. C., ed. (Je '22)

Bookkeeping

Borsodi, R. New accounting. (O '22)

Bookman anthology of verse. Farrar, J. C. (F '23)

Books and characters. Strachey, G. L. (Ag '22)

Books and reading

Egan, M. F. Confessions of a book-lover. (N '22)

Keller, H. R., ed. Readers' digest of books. (S '22)

Orange, A. R. Readers and writers. (Je '22)

Squire, J. C. Books in general. (Ap '22)

Van Dyke, H. Companionable books. (F '23)

Books for boys and girls. See Children's literature

Books in general. Squire, J. C. (Ap '22)

Boone, Daniel

White, S. E. Daniel Boone, wilderness scout. (F '23)

Borneo

Evans, I. H. N. Among primitive peoples in Borneo. (Ag '22)

Boston

History

Lawrence, R. M. Old Park street and its vicinity. (Jl '22)

Boswell, James

Tinker, C. B. Young Boswell. (My '22)

Botany

China

Farrer, R. J. Rainbow bridge. (My '22)

Botany, Medical

Rohde, E. S. Old English herbals. (Ja '23)

Box of God. Sarett, L. R. (F '23)

The boy grew older. Broun, H. C. (N '22)

Boys of the ages. Scales, L. W. (S '22)

The Bracegirdle. Jenkins, B. A. (My '22)

Bradford, F. C. See Gardner, V. R., and others.

Fundamentals of fruit production. (N '22)

- Bradley, Katherine Harris. See Field, M., pseud. (N '22)
- Brazilian literature
 Goldberg, I. Brazilian literature. (D '22)
 Brazilian tales. Goldberg, I., comp. and tr. (F '23)
- Breaking point. Rinehart, M. R. (S '22)
- Breath of life. Tuckerman, A. (D '22)
- Breath of scandal. Balmer, E. (O '22)
- Bridge. Pickthall, M. L. C. (Mr '22)
- Bright messenger. Blackwood, A. (Je '22)
- Bright shawl. Hergesheimer, J. (N '22)
- British empire and world peace. Rowell, N. W. (N '22)
- British history in the nineteenth century. Trevelyan, G. M. (S '22)
- Broaching practice. Hammond, E. K. (Ja '23)
- Broken barriers. Nicholson, M. (N '22)
- Broken stowage. Bone, D. W. (Ag '22)
- Brown, Ford Madox
 Soskice, J. M. Chapters from childhood. (Mr '22)
- Buddhism
 McGovern, W. M. Introduction to Mahāyāna Buddhism. (Ap '22)
- Budget
 McKinsey, J. O. Budgetary control. (F '23)
 Budgetary control. McKinsey, J. O. (F '23)
- Building
 Churchill, A. L., and Wickenden, L. House-owner's book. (S '22)
- Estimates
 Arthur, W. New building estimators' hand-book. (Ja '23)
- Building materials
 Batson, R. G. C., and Hyde, J. H. Mechanical testing. (Ja '23)
 Pulver, H. E. Materials of construction. (Ja '23)
- Building of an army. Dickinson, J. M. (S '22)
- Buried cities. Hall, J. (D '22)
- Burnham, Daniel Hudson
 Moore, C. Daniel H. Burnham, architect. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Burning bush. Baker, K. (Ja '23)
- Burning liquid fuel. Best, W. N. (Ag '22)
- Burroughs, John
 Burroughs, J. My boyhood. (Ap '22)
 Johnson, C. John Burroughs talks. (O '22)
- Business
 McKee, H. S. A B C's of business. (F '23)
- Business administration. Marshall, L. C. (Mr '22)
- Business conditions
 Hamilton, W. P. Stock market barometer. (S '22)
- Business education
 Lyon, L. S. Education for business. (F '23)
- Business libraries
 Krause, L. B. Better business libraries. (O '22)
- Business management
 Ford, H. My life and work. (D '22)
 Marshall, L. C. Business administration. (Mr '22)
- Business of writing. Holliday, R. C., and Van Rensselaer, A. (F '23)
- Buying goods. Bull, A. E. (Jl '22)
- Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron
 Byron, G. G. N. B. Lord Byron's correspondence. (My '22)
- Cambridge history of India. Rapson, E. J., ed. (F '23)
- The Camomile. Carswell, C. (Jl '22)
- Campbell, Mrs Patrick (Beatrice Stella Cornwallis-West)
 Campbell, Mrs P. My life and some letters. (D '22)
- Camping
 Fordyce, C. P. Trall craft. (D '22)
 Van Dyke, J. C. Open spaces. (Je '22)
- Canada
Description and travel
 Longstreth, T. M. Laurentians. (Jl '22)
Politics and government
 Skelton, O. D. Life and letters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. (Mr, Je '22)
- Cannibal-land. Johnson, M. E. (S '22)
- Canyon of the fools. Hallet, R. M. (Je '22)
- Cappy Ricks retires. Kyne, P. B. (O '22)
- Captain Blood. Sabatini, R. (O '22)
- Captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer. Spears, J. R. (S '22)
- Captain Pott's minister. Cooper, F. L. (F '23)
- Captain Sazarac. Jackson, C. T. (O '22)
- Captive herd. Atkin, G. M. (N '22)
- Caravans by night. Hervey, A. (My '22)
- Caribbean sea
 Hart, F. R. Admirals of the Caribbean. (O '22)
- Caricatures and cartoons
 Beerbohm, M. Survey. (Ap '22)
 Funch, London. Lloyd George. (Jl '22)
 Rogers, W. A. World worth while. (D '22)
- Carleton, William, pseud. See Bartlett, F. O. (D '22)
- Carnac's folly. Parker, G. (N '22)
- Carolina chansons. Heywood, Du B., and Allen, H. (F '23)
- Carols
 Phillips, W. J. Carols. (Ap '22)
- Carpenter and His kingdom. Irvine, A. F. (Je '22)
- Carroll, John
 Guilday, P. Life and times of John Carroll. (F '23)
- Caruso, Enrico
 Fucito, S., and Beyer, B. J. Caruso and the art of singing. (Ap '22)
 Key, P. Van R., and Zirato, B. Enrico Caruso. (F '23)
- Marafioti, P. M. Caruso's method of voice production. (Ag '22)
- Caruso and the art of singing. Fucito, S., and Beyer, B. J. (Ap '22)
- Caruso's method of voice production. Marafioti, P. M. (Ag '22)
- Case and the girl. Farrish, R. (Je '22)
- Case of Sir Edward Talbot. Taubman-Goldie, V. F. (S '22)
- Castles in the air. Orczy, E. (My '22)
- Cataloging
 Fellows, J. D. Cataloging rules with explanations and illustrations. (Jl '22)
- Cataloging rules with explanations and illustrations. Fellows, J. D. (Jl '22)
- Caterers and catering
 Bradley, A. Cooking for profit. (Ja '23)
- The cathedral. Walpole, H. (D '22)
- Catherine de Médicis. Van Dyke, P. (F '23)
- Catherine de Médicis, queen consort of Henry II, King of France
 Van Dyke, P. Catherine de Médicis. (F '23)
- Catholic church in America
 Guilday, P. Life and times of John Carroll. (F '23)
- Catholic spirit in modern English literature. Shuster G. N. (S '22)
- Cats, Stories of
 Fleuron, S. Kittens. (Mr '22)
- Cat's paw. Lincoln, N. S. (N '22)
- Catty Atkins, sailorman. Kelland, C. B. (Je '22)
- Causes and cures for the social unrest. Finney, R. L. (O '22)
- Causes of the war of independence. Van Tyne, C. H. (N '22)
- Cave woman. Richardson, N. (D '22)
- Caveman within us. Fielding, W. J. (F '23)
- Cabinet work
 Wells, P. A., and Hooper, J. Modern cabinet work. (F '23)
- Calculations of quantitative chemical analysis. Hamilton, L. F., and Simpson, S. G. (Ja '23)
- California
History
 Chapman, C. E. History of California. (S '22)
 Cleland, R. G. History of California. (D '22)
- Call of the mountains. Jeffers, L. (N '22)

Central AmericaDescription and travel

- Cunningham, E. Gypsying through Central America. (D '22)
 Century of banking in New York. Lanier, H. W. (Ap '22)
 Certain people of importance. Norris, K. (O '22)

Cézanne, Paul

- Bell, C. Since Cézanne. (Ag '22)
 The chain. Towne, C. H. (O '22)

Chain stores

- Hayward, W. S., and White, P. Chain stores. (F '23)

- Chanting wheels. Hutchinson, H. (My '22)
 Chaos or cosmos? Heermance, E. L. (O '22)
 Chapters from childhood. Soskice, J. M. (M '22)

- Chapters on the history of the Southern Pacific railroad. Daggett, S. (Ap '22)

Character

- Fosbroke, G. E. Character revelations of mind and body. (O '22)
 Hollingworth, H. L. Judging human character. (D '22)
 Character problems in Shakespeare's plays. Schücking, L. L. (D '22)
 Character revelations of mind and body. Fosbroke, G. E. (O '22)

CharitiesMassachusetts

- Kelso, R. W. History of public poor relief in Massachusetts, 1620-1920. (Ja '23)
 Charles Joseph Bonaparte. Bishop, J. B. (F '23)
 Charles Rex. Dell, E. M. (O '22)
 Charm of the Middle kingdom. Marsh, J. R. (Ja '23)

Charms

- Kozminsky, I. Magic and science of jewels and stones. (Ap '22)
 Chasing and racing. Cox H. E: de F. (N '22)

Chekhov, Anton Pavlovich

- Gorki, M., pseud., and others. Reminiscences of Anton Chekhov. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Chemical engineering

- Liddell, D. M., ed. Handbook of chemical engineering. (Ja '23)

Chemistry

- Fabre, J. H. C. Wonder book of chemistry. (O '22)
 Gruener, H. W. Chemistry. (D '22)

Chemistry, AnalyticQuantitative

- Hamilton, L. F., and Simpson, S. G. Calculations of quantitative chemical analysis. (Ja '23)

Chemistry, Inorganic

- Lowry, T. M. Inorganic chemistry. (Ja '23)

Chemistry, Physical and theoretical

- Stewart, A. W. Some physico-chemical themes. (Ja '23)
 Chemistry and technology of gelatin and glue. Bogue, R. H. (Ja '23)
 Chemistry of combustion. Friend, J. A. N. (F '23)

- Chemistry of the non-benzenoid hydrocarbons. Brooks, B. T. (F '23)

ChicagoBiography

- Goodspeed, T. W. University of Chicago biographical sketches. (O '22)

Social conditions

- Chicago commission on race relations. Negro in Chicago. (D '22)

Chicago university

- Goodspeed, T. W. University of Chicago biographical sketches. (O '22)
 Chico, Blanchard, L. M. (O '22)
 Child and his school. Hartman, G. (Ap, Je '22)
 Child and the home. Liber, B. (F '23)

Child study

- Baker, E. D. Parenthood and child nurture. (Jl '22)

- Child training. Patri, A. (F '23)

- Child versus parent. Wise, S. S: (My '22)

Child welfare

- National child labor committee. Rural child welfare. (Ag, N '22)

Children

- Sheringham, H. T. Ourselves when young. (Ap, Je '22)

Care and hygiene

- Chapin, H: D. Heredity and child culture. (F '23)
 Emerson, W: R. P. Nutrition and growth in children. (My '22)
 Maccarthy, F. H. Healthy child from two to seven. (D '22)

Charities, protection, etc.

- Kelso, R. W. History of public poor relief in Massachusetts, 1620-1920. (Ja '23)

Management and training

- Baker, E. D. Parenthood and child nurture. (Jl '22)
 Harrison, E. Unseen side of child life. (Mr '22)
 Liber, B. Child and the home. (F '23)
 Maccarthy, F. H. Healthy child from two to seven. (D '22)
 Patri, A. Child training. (F '23)
 Saywell, E. Growing girl. (N '22)
 Scott, M. Meeting your child's problems. (Je '22)
 Weigle, L. A. Training of children in the Christian family. (O '22)
 Wise, S. S: Child versus parent. (My '22)

Nutrition

- Bureau of educational experiments, New York. Health education and the nutrition class. (Jl '22)
 Emerson, W: R. P. Nutrition and growth in children. (My '22)
 Holt, L. E. Food, health and growth. (S '22)
 Maccarthy, F. H. Healthy child from two to seven. (D '22)
 Children of the market place. Masters, E. L. (My '22)
 Children of transgression. Tyler, G. V. (Jl '22)
 Children who followed the piper. Colum, P. (N '22)

Children's literature

- Abbot, W. J: Philip Derby, reporter. (D '22)
 Abbott, E. H. Fairy prince. (F '23)
 Adams, K. Wisp. (D '22)
 Aldon, A. Hill of adventure. (O '22)
 Ashmun, M. E. Including mother. (Ja '23)
 Babbitt, E. C. More Jataka tales. (Je '22)
 Baker, O. Dusty Star. (Ja '23)
 Barbour, R. H: Right end Emerson. (O '22)
 Barbour, R. H: Turner twins. (O '22)
 Barbour, R. H., and Holt, H. P. Over two seas. (S '22)
 Bassett, S. W. Ted and the telephone. (S '22)
 Bayliss, C. Treasury of Eskimo tales. (O '22)
 Beard, A. E. S. Our foreign-born citizens. (O '22)
 Beard, D. C. Black wolf pack. (D '22)
 Blanchard, L. M. Chico. (O '22)
 Bonsels, W. Adventures of Maya the bee. (D '22)
 Bowen, W: Solario the tailor. (N '22)
 Brown, E. A. Chinese kitten. (O '22)
 Burton, C: P. Bob's Hill trails. (My '22)
 Canfield, F. A. Hop pickers. (O '22)
 Cheyney, E: G. Scott Burton and the timber thieves. (Je '22)
 Colum, P. Children who followed the piper. (N '22)
 Crownfield, G. Shadow witch. (O '22)
 Crump, I. Og, son of fire. (O '22)
 De Huff, E. W. Taytay's tales. (O '22)
 Dix, B. M. Turned-about girls. (N '22)
 Erskine, L. Y. Renfrew of the Royal Mounted. (Je '22)
 Evison, M. Peggy Pretend. (Je '22)
 Fraser, C. C. Around the world in ten days. (O '22)

- Gray, J. Newcomer in Penny lane. (O '22)
 Gray, J. Other Miller girl. (Jl '22)
 Gregor, E. R. Spotted Deer. (Je '22)
 Hall, J. Buried cities. (D '22)
 Holland, R. S. Lafayette for young Americans. (O '22)
 Hornibrook, I. K. Drake and the adventurer's cup. (S '22)
 Hume, E. Judy of York Hill. (O '22)
 Ives, S. N. Dog heroes of many lands. (O '22)
 Kelland, C. B. Catty Atkin, sailorman. (Je '22)
 Kempton, K. Phantom gold. (O '22)
 Knipe, E. B., and A. A. Flower of fortune. (O '22)
 Lamprey, L. Days of the colonists. (N '22)
 Lofting, H. Voyages of Doctor Dolittle. (N '22)
 McFee, I. N. Secrets of the stars. (O '22)
 Osgood, H. O. Mildred, Tom and Old Salt. (O '22)
 Outdoor stories. (O '22)
 Pollock, F. L. Woods rider. (O '22)
 Price, E. B. Fortune of the Indies. (O '22)
 Reed, V. Bird-nest boarding house. (Ja '23)
 Rolt-Wheeler, F. W. Wreck-hunters. (S '22)
 Ross, E. Book of noble dogs. (Ja '23)
 Scales, L. W. Boys of the ages. (S '22)
 Schultz, J. W. Seizer of eagles. (S '22)
 Schultz, J. W. Trail of the Spanish horse. (O '22)
 Seaman, A. H. Mystery at Number Six. (N '22)
 Seers, A. W. Earth and its life. (O '22)
 Silvers, E. R. Ned Beals, freshman. (Jl '22)
 Slaughter, G. E. Shakespeare and the heart of a child. (Ja '23)
 Smith, E. S., comp. More mystery tales for boys and girls. (N '22)
 Tomlinson, F. G. Princeton boy in the Revolution. (N '22)
 Turpin, E. H. L. Whistling Jimps. (O '22)
 Verrill, A. H. Deep sea hunters. (Jl '22)
 Verrill, A. H. Radio detectives. (O '22)
 Wade, M. H. Real Americans. (N '22)
 Watson, V. C. With La Salle, the explorer. (N '22)

Bibliography

- National education association of the United States. Library department. Graded list of books for children. (O '22)
Children's plays
 Lord, K. Plays for school and camp. (S '22)
 Melgs, C. Helga and the white peacock. (O '22)
 Stapp, E. B., and Cameron, E. Happyland's fairy grotto plays. (O '22)
Children's poetry
 Davis, M. G. Girl's book of verse. (D '22)
 Teasdale, S., comp. Rainbow gold. (N '22)
Chile
 Elliott, L. E. Chile today and tomorrow. (Ja '23)
 Chile today and tomorrow. Elliott, L. E. (Ja '23)
Chimay, Emilie Louise Marie Françoise Josephine (De Pellapra) princesse de
 Chimay, E. L. M. F. J. Daughter of Napoleon. (S '22)
China
 High, S. H. China's place in the sun. (Mr '22)
 Powell, E. A. Asia at the crossroads. (My '22)
 Russell, B. A. W. Problem of China. (D '22)

Description and travel

- Farrer, R. J. Rainbow bridge. (My '22)
 Marsh, J. R. Charm of the Middle kingdom. (Ja '23)
 Maugham, W. S. On a Chinese screen. (Ja '23)
 Speakman, H. Beyond Shanghai. (S '22)

Foreign relations

- Dennett, T. Americans in eastern Asia. (F '23)
 Kawakami, K. K. Japan's Pacific policy. (S '22)
 Reinsch, P. S. American diplomat in China. (Ap '22)

- Tyau, M. T. Z. China awakened. (Mr '22)
 Weale, B. L. P., pseud. Indiscreet chronicle from the Pacific. (F '23)
 Willoughby, W. W. China at the conference. (O '22)
 Wood, G.-Z. Shantung question. (O '22)

Industries and resources

- Sun Yat-sen. International development of China. (F '23)

Politics and government

- Reinsch, P. S. American diplomat in China. (Ap '22)

Social life and customs

- Tyau, M. T. Z. China awakened. (Mr '22)
 China at the conference. Willoughby, W. W. (O '22)
 China awakened. Tyau, M. T. Z. (Mr '22)
 China's place in the sun. High, S. H. (Mr '22)
 Chinese kitten. Brown, E. A. (O '22)

Chinese poetry

- Li Po. Works of Li Po. (F '23)

- Chipperfield, Robert Orr, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (S, N '22)

Christian science

- Bellwald, A. M. Christian science and the Catholic faith. (S '22)
 Christian science and the Catholic faith. Bellward, A. M. (S '22)
 Christian work as a vocation. Tweedy, H. H., and others. (Jl '22)

Christianity

- Abbott, L. What Christianity means to me. (Jl '22)
 Bell, E. I. Good news. (S '22)
 Cross, G. Creative Christianity. (My '22)
 Fosdick, H. E. Christianity and progress. (D '22)
 Gore, C. Belief in God. (Ap '22)
 Roberts, R. What's best worth saying. (F '23)
 Vedder, H. C. Fundamentals of Christianity. (Ap '22)

Evidences

- Heffern, A. D. Apology and polemic in the New Testament. (Ja '23)
 Christianity and progress. Fosdick, H. E. (D '22)
 Chronicles of Chicora Wood. Pringle, E. W. (Jl '22)

Church

- Babson, R. W. Future of the churches. (Jl '22)
 Brown, C. R. Honor of the church. (S '22)
 Brown, W. A. Church in America. (Ja '23)
 Holmes, J. H. New churches for old. (My '22)
 Parks, L. Crisis of the churches. (Ap '22)

Church and state

- Ryan, J. A., and Millar, M. F. X. State and the church. (O '22)

Church architecture

- Vogt, V. Art and religion. (Jl '22)

Church history

Primitive and early

- Heffern, A. D. Apology and polemic in the New Testament. (Ja '23)
 Church in America. Brown, W. A. (Ja '23)
Church of England

Clergy

- Painted windows. (Ap '22)

Church unity

- Parks, L. Crisis of the churches. (Ap '22)

Cities and towns

- Fassett, C. M. Assets of the ideal city. (Jl '22)

Citizenship

- Reed, T. H. Loyal citizenship. (Ag '22)

Citizenship, Education for

- Snedden, D. S. Civic education. (F '23)
 City in the clouds. Gull, C. A. E. R. (My '22)

Civil engineering

- Swain, G. F. Young man and civil engineering. (Jl '22)

Civil service

United States

Mayers, L.: Federal service. (Je '22)

Civil service reform

Procter, A. W. Principles of public personnel administration. (Mr '22)

Civilization

Cram, R. A. Towards the great peace. (My '22)

Goldenweiser, A. A. Early civilization. (D '22)

Gould, C. W. America. (D '22)

Hearnshaw, F. J. C., ed. Mediæval contributions to modern civilization. (Ap, Je '22)

Heermance, E. L. Chaos or cosmos? (O '22)

McCabe, J. Evolution of civilization. (Ap '22)

Marvin, F. S., ed. Western races and the world. (Ja '23)

Stoddard, T. L. Revolt against civilization. (Ag, N '22)

Tinker, C. B. Nature's simple plan. (O '22)

Wingfield-Stratton, E. C. Facing reality. (Ag '22)

Civilization, Oriental

Rihbany, A. M. Wise men from the east and from the west. (F '23)

Civilization in the United States. Stearns, H. E., ed. (Mr '22)

Clair de lune. Pryde, A., pseud. (D '22)

The clash. Jameson, S. (S '22)

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud.)

Fischer, H. W. Abroad with Mark Twain and Eugene Field. (Jl '22)

Cleveland, Grover

Hugins, R. Grover Cleveland. (F '23)

Cleveland

Social conditions

Cleveland foundation. Criminal justice in Cleveland. (F '23)

Clifford, Nathan

Clifford, P. G. Nathan Clifford, democrat. (F '23)

Climate

Kendrew, W. G. Climates of the continents. (Ja '23)

Climates of the continents. Kendrew, W. G. (Ja '23)

Clio. France, A., pseud. (N '22)

Cloister and other poems. O'Donnell, C. L. (Ja '23)

Clothing trade

Amalgamated clothing workers of America. Clothing workers of Chicago. (O '22)

Clothing workers of Chicago. Amalgamated clothing workers of America. (O '22)

Clouds

Luckiesh, M. Book of the sky. (O '22)

Coal

Gibson, C. R. Romance of coal. (F '23)

Moore, E. S. Coal. (Ag '22)

Coal industry

Bruère, R. W. Coming of coal. (Jl '22)

Coal miners

Archbald, H. Four hour day in coal. (My '22)

Bloch, L.: Coal miners' insecurity. (My '22)

Coal miners' insecurity. Bloch, L.: (My '22)

Coal mines and mining

Shurick, A. T.: Coal mining costs. (Ja '23)

Coal mining costs. Shurick, A. T.: (Ja '23)

Coasts of romance. Garstin, C. (D '22)

Coffee

Ukers, W. H. All about coffee. (F '23)

Coleman, McAlister. See McAlister, F. A., pseud. (F '23)

Collected papers on the psychology of phantasy. Long, C. E. (Mr '22)

Collected parodies. Squire, J. C. (Ap '22)

Collected poems. Robinson, E. A. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Collected poems, 1907-1922. Erskine, J.: (F '23)

Collecting antiques for pleasure and profit. Gade, F. (Ap '22)

Collectors and collecting

Carriack, A. Van L. Next-to-nothing house. (Ja '23)

Gade, F. Collecting antiques for pleasure and profit. (Ap '22)

Willamson, G. C.: Behind my library door. (D '22)

Colleges and universities

United States

Caulley, M. J. G. Universities and scientific life in the United States. (O '22)

Colombia

History

Cunninghame Graham, R. G. B. Conquest of New Granada. (O '22)

Columbus, Christopher

Fiction

Johnston, M. 1492. (D '22)

Colver, Charles Kendrick

Rosenberger, J. L. Through three centuries. (My '22)

Colver, Nathaniel

Rosenberger, J. L. Through three centuries. (My '22)

Colver, Susan Esther

Rosenberger, J. L. Through three centuries. (My '22)

Combustion

Best, W.: Burning liquid fuel. (S '22)

Friend, J. A. N. Chemistry of combustion. (F '23)

Coming of coal. Bruère, R. W. (Jl '22)

Coming of the fairies. Doyle, A. C. (Ja '23)

Command. McFee, W.: (D '22)

Commerce

Taussig, F. W.: comp. Selected readings in international trade and tariff problems. (Je '22)

Commercial correspondence

Bonney, L. E., and Cole, C. P. Handbook for business letter writers. (Ja '23)

Dolch, E. W.: Manual of business letter writing. (S '22)

Stoll, A. Making the letter pay. (O '22)

Watson, H. Applied business correspondence. (O '22)

Weseen, M. H. Everyday uses of English. (N '22)

Commercial law

Schaub, L. F., and Isaacs, N. Law in business problems. (Ag '22)

Spencer, W. H. Law and business. (O '22)

Common law

Pound, R. Spirit of the common law. (Mr '22)

Communication with the next world. Stead, E. W., ed. (F '23)

Community. Lindeman, E. C. (Mr '22)

Community centers

Rainwater, C. E. Play movement in the United States. (Mr '22)

Community church

Holmes, J. H. New churches for old. (My '22)

Community life

Lindeman, E. C. Community. (Mr '22)

McClenahan, B. A. Organizing the community. (Ja '23)

Sanderson, E. D. Farmer and his community. (F '23)

Community life and civic problems. Hill, H. C. (My '22)

Companionable books. Van Dyke, H.: (F '23)

Comparative history, 1878-1914. Eng title of Kaiser's memoirs. William II. (D '22)

Complete auction player. Irwin, F.: (Jl '22)

Complete radio book. Yates, R. F., and Pacent, L.: G. (Jl '22)

Condensers (steam)

Royds, R. Heat transmission in boilers, condensers and evaporators. (Ja '23)

Conduct of American foreign relations. Mathews, J. M. (N '22)

Conduct of life

Drury, S.: S. Thoughts of youth. (F '23)

Conference on the limitation of armaments, Washington, 1921-22

Buell, R. L. Washington conference. (Ag, N '22)

- Kawakami, K. K. Japan's Pacific policy. (S '22)
- Sullivan, M. Great adventure at Washington. (Jl '22)
- Tarbell, L. M. Peacemakers. (S '22)
- Weale, L. L. P., pseud. Indiscreet chronicle from the Pacific. (F '23)
- Wells, H. G. Washington and the riddle of peace. (Mr '22)
- Willoughby, W. W. China at the conference. (O '22)
- Confessions of a book-lover. Egan, M. F. (N '22)
- Confessions of a well-meaning woman. McKenna, S. (S '22)
- Conflict. Kelland, C. B. (My '22)
- Conn of the coral seas. Grimshaw, B. E. (Mr '22)
- Conquest. Dye, E. (D '22)
- Conquest of New Granada. Cunninghame Graham, R. G. B. (O '22)
- Conrad, Joseph
Sutherland, J. G. At sea with Joseph Conrad. (N '22)
- Consciousness
Ouspensky, P. D. Tertium organum. (D '22)
- Consolation. Bacon, A. (Je '22)
- Constitution of the United States. Norton, T. J. (N '22)
- Constitutions
McBain, H. L., and Rogers, L. New constitutions of Europe. (F '23)
- Construction of radio phone and telegraph receivers for beginners. Sleeper, M. B. (Je '22)
- Consumers' cooperative movement. Webb, S. and B. (Mr '22)
- Consumers' co-operative societies. Gide, C. (Ja '23)
- Contemporary American literature. Manly, J. M., and Rickert, E. (O '22)
- Contemporary American novelists. Van Doren, C. C. (Je '22)
- Contemporary one-act plays. Lewis, B. R. (S '22)
- Contemporary one act plays. Shay, F., ed. (D '22)
- Continental stagecraft. Macgowan, K., and Jones, R. E. (F '23)
- Continuous wave wireless telegraphy. Mittell, B. E. G. (My '22)
- Control of American foreign relations. Wright, Q. (Ja '23)
- Cook, Sir Edward Tyas
Mills, J. S. Sir Edward Cook. (D '22)
- Cookery
Bradley, A. Cooking for profit. (Ja '23)
- Gurney, L. M. Things mother used to make. (Ap '22)
- Hamilton, D. M. Primer of cooking. (Ap '22)
- MacSheridan, C., comp. Stag cook book. (F '23)
- Richards, L., and Treat, N. Quantity cookery. (Jl '22)
- Wood, B. M. Foods of the foreign-born in relation to health. (My '22)
- Cooking for profit. Bradley, A. (Ja '23)
- Cook's wedding. Chekhov, A. P. (My '22)
- Coomer All. Hurst, S. B. H. (Mr '22)
- Cooper, Emma Edith. See Field, M., pseud. (N '22)
- Cooper, James Fenimore
Cooper, J. F. Correspondence of James Fenimore Cooper. (F '23)
- Cooperation
Gide, C. Consumers' co-operative societies. (Ja '23)
- England
- Webb, S. and B. Consumers' cooperative movement. (Mr '22)
- Copartnership
Bowie, T. A. Sharing profits with employees. (My '22)
- Copper Streak Trall. Rhodes, E. M. (Ag '22)
- Copplestone, Bennett, pseud. See Kitchin, F. H. (Ja '23)
- Corner in William. Kilbourne, F. (Ja '23)
- Corner-stone of Philippine independence. Harrison, F. B. (Mr '22)
- Cornish penny. Cade, C. T. (Ap '22)
- Corpolence
Copeland, R. S. Over weight? (S '22)
- Putnam, N. Tomorrow we diet. (Ag '22)
- Correspondence of James Fenimore Cooper. Cooper, J. F. (F '23)
- Corsica
Tinker, C. B. Nature's simple plan. (O '22)
- Cortlands of Washington Square. Fairbank, J. (D '22)
- Cost accounting
Basset, W. R., and Heywood, J. Production engineering and cost keeping for machine shops. (Ja '23)
- Costume
Quennell, M., and C. H. B. History of everyday things in England. (O '22)
- Cotswold characters. Drinkwater, J. (F '23)
- Cotton broker. Owen, J. (Mr '22)
- Coué, Emile
Brooks, C. H. Practice of autosuggestion. (S '22)
- Macnaghten, H. Emile Coué. (F '23)
- Count Morin, deputy. France, A., pseud. (F '23)
- Country beyond. Curwood, J. O. (O '22)
- Country life
Groves, E. R. Rural mind and social welfare. (D '22)
- McClenahan, B. A. Organizing the community. (Ja '23)
- MacGarr, L. Rural community. (D '22)
- National child labor committee. Rural child welfare. (Ag, N '22)
- Sanderson, E. D. Farmer and his community. (F '23)
- Wright, R. I. Truly rural. (My '22)
- Country Life book of building and decorating. Townsend, R. T., ed. (My '22)
- Courage
Barrie, J. M. Courage. (N '22)
- Poetry
- Frothingham, R., ed. Songs of challenge. (O '22)
- Courtesy
Bailey, M. E. Value of good manners. (Jl '22)
- Everyday manners for American boys and girls. (O '22)
- Courts and courtiers
Metternich-Winneburg, P. C. M. W. Days that are no more. (Jl '22)
- Covered wagon. Hough, E. (Ag '22)
- The cow. Van Wagenen, J. (F '23)
- The cowboy. Rollins, P. A. (Je '22)
- Cowboys
Rollins, P. A. The cowboy (Je '22)
- Cows
Van Wagenen, J. The cow. (F '23)
- Craft of fiction. Lubbock, P. (Mr '22)
- Crain's market data book, and directory of class, trade and technical publications. (F '23)
- Creative Christ. Drown, E. S. (My '22)
- Creative Christianity. Cross, G. (My '22)
- Creative music for children. Coleman, S. N. (Ag '22)
- Creative unity. Tagore, R. (Jl '22)
- Credit
Walter, F. W., ed. Retail charge account. (Jl '22)
- Creeds or no creeds? Harris, C. (O '22)
- Crime. Darrow, C. S. (N '22)
- Crime and criminals
Cleveland foundation. Criminal justice in Cleveland. (F '23)
- Darrow, C. S. Crime. (N '22)
- Gordon, M. D. Penal discipline. (F '23)
- In the clutch of circumstance. (S '22)
- Tannenbaum, F. Wall shadows. (Jl '22)
- Criminal justice in Cleveland. Cleveland foundation. (F '23)
- Criminal procedure
Chandler, G. F. Policemen's art. (Ja '23)
- Cleveland foundation. Criminal justice in Cleveland. (F '23)
- Crisis of the churches. Parks, L. (Ap '22)
- Critic and the drama. Nathan, G. J. (Mr '22)
- Critical fable. (N '22)
- Critical game. Macy, J. A. (D '22)

Croatian literature

Stanoyevich, M. S. Early Yugoslav literature (1000-1800). (Jl '22)

Croce, Benedetto

Piccoli, R. Benedetto Croce. (My '22)

Crome yellow. Huxley, A. L. (Mr '22)

Crops

Bailey, L. H., ed. Cyclopaedia of farm crops. (My '22)

Cross currents in Europe to-day. Beard, C: A. (F '23)

Cruise of the Hippocampus. Loomis, A. F. (O '22)

Cryder. Shedd, G: C. (D '22)

Crystal coffin. Rostand, M. (Ag '22)

Cuckoo's nest. Joep-Slade, C. (D '22)

Cyclopaedia of farm animals. Bailey, L. H., ed. (My '22)

Cyclopaedia of farm crops. Bailey, L. H., ed. (My '22)

Cytherea. Hergeshelmer, J. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Czecho-Slovaks in America. Miller, K. D. (Je '22)

Daggett, H: See Gardner, V: R., and others. Fundamentals of fruit production. (N '22)

Dahlias

Stout, H. M. Amateur's book of the dahlia. (My '22)

Dairy products

Bailey, L. H., ed. Cyclopaedia of farm animals. (My '22)

Dalmatian literature

Stanoyevich, M. S. Early Yugoslav literature (1000-1800). (Jl '22)

Dalton laboratory plan

Dewey, E. Dalton laboratory plan. (Mr '22)

Parkhurst, H. H. Education on the Dalton plan. (Ja '23)

Dancers

Parker, H: T. Eighth notes. (Ja '23)

Dancers in the dark. Speare, D. (My '22)

Dancing fakir. Eyton, J: S. (Ja '23)

Daniel Boone, wilderness scout. White, S. E: (F '23)

Dante Alighieri

Croce, B. Poetry of Dante. (My '22)

Page, T: N. Dante and his influence. (F '23)

Dante and his influence. Page, T: N. (F '23)

Dark house. Wylie, I. A. R. (Jl '22)

Da Silva's widow. Harrison, M. St L. (Ag '22)

Daughter of Napoleon. Chimay, E. L. M. F. J. (S '22)

Daughter of the sands. Everard, F. (N '22)

Daughters of fire. Gérard de Nerval. (Ja '23)

David, king of IsraelFiction

Strachey, M. David, the son of Jesse. (My '22)

David, the son of Jesse. Strachey, M. (My '22)

Day of the beast. Grey, Z. (O '22)

Days of the colonists. Lamprey, L. (N '22)

Days that are no more. Metternich-Winneburg, P. C. M. W. (Jl '22)

Deadlines. Smith, H: J. (F '23)

Dear Brutus. Barrie, J. M. (F '23)

Death

Bacon, A. Consolation. (Je '22)

Flammarion, C. Death and its mystery; at the moment of death. (Jl '22)

Pearl, R. Biology of death. (Ja '23)

Death and its mystery; at the moment of death. Flammarion, C. (Jl '22)

Death Valley, California

Perkins, E. White heart of Mojave. (F '23)

Debating

Phelps, E. M., ed. University debaters' annual. (N '22)

Sheffield, A. D. Joining in public discussion. (S '22)

Debts, Public

Mountsier, R. Our eleven billion dollars. (O '22)

Decadence. Gourmont, R. de. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

December love. Hichens, R. S. (N '22)

Declaration of independence

Becker, C. L. Declaration of independence. (O '22)

Decoration and ornament

Cole, H. Heraldry and floral forms as used in decoration. (Ja '23)

Deep sea hunters. Verrill, A. H. (Jl '22)

Defective and delinquent classes

Cotton, H: A. Defective, delinquent, and insane. (Ag '22)

Southard, E. E., and Jarrett, M. C. Kingdom of evils. (F '23)

Defective, delinquent, and insane. Cotton, H: A. (Ag '22)

Definitions. Canby, H: S. (O '22)

Degeneration

Stoddard, T. L. Revolt against civilization. (Ag, N '22)

Degeneration in the great French masters. Carrière, J. (F '23)

Dehan, Richard, pseud. See Graves, C. I. M. (D '22)

Delafield, E. M., pseud. See De La Pasture, E. E. M. (Ap, Je '22)

DelawareDescription and travel

Vallandigham, E: N. Delaware and the Eastern Shore. (Ja '23)

Delaware and the Eastern Shore. Vallandigham, E: N. (Ja '23)

Democracy

Hearnshaw, F. J: C. Democracy and the British empire. (Je '22)

Rodó, J. E. Ariel. (D '22)

Democracy and the British empire. Hearnshaw, F. J: C. (Je '22)

De Morgan, Evelyn (Pickering) (Mrs William Frend De Morgan)

Stirling, A. M. W. William De Morgan and his wife. (S '22)

De Morgan, William Frend

Stirling, A. M. W. William De Morgan and his wife. (S '22)

Department stores

Hungerford, E: Romance of a great store. (Ap '22)

Desert dust. Sabin, E. L. (Ag '22)

Design, Decorative

Cole, H. Heraldry and floral forms as used in decoration. (Ja '23)

Design of masonry structures and foundations. Williams, C. C. (Ja '23)

Detour. Davis, O. (Jl '22)

Developing mental power. Stratton, G: M. (My '22)

Development of the British Empire. Robinson, J. H. (Ja '23)

Devil drives. Savi, E. W. (Mr '22)

Dickens, Charles

Matz, B. W. Dickensian inns and taverns. (F '23)

Woollcott, A. Mr Dickens goes to the play. (D '22)

Dickensian inns and taverns. Matz, B. W. (F '23)

Dictionary of applied physics. Glazebrook, R: T., ed. (Ja '23)

Dictionary of classified quotations. Benham, W: G., comp. (Je '22)

Dictionary of English phrases. Hyamson, A. M. (My '22)

Diet

Armitage, F. P. Diet and race. (O '22)

Copeland, R. S: Over weight? (S '22)

Plimmer, V. G., and R. H: A. Vitamins and the choice of food. (Ag '22)

Putnam, N. Tomorrow we diet. (Ag '22)

Diet and race. Armitage, F. P. (O '22)

Dillingham, Robert Barclay, pseud. See Foulke, W: D. (Ja '23)

Dingbat of Arcady. Wilkinson, M. O. (My '22)

Diplomacy

Gibbons, H. A. Introduction to world politics. (O '22)

Reinsch, P. S: Secret diplomacy. (Mr '22)

Disarmament

Tarbell, I. M. Peacemakers. (S '22)

Disenchantment. Montague, C. E. (D '22)
 Ditte: towards the stars. Nexö, M. A. (D '22)
 Doctrine of sin. Moxon, R. S. (N '22)
 Dog heroes of many lands. Ives, S. N. (O '22)

DogsLegends and stories

Derieux, S. A. Frank of Freedom hill. (Ag '22)
 Ives, S. N. Dog heroes of many lands. (O '22)
 Ross, E. Book of noble dogs. (Ja '23)
 Terhune, A. P. Further adventures of Lad. (S '22)

Domestic animals

Bailey, L. H., ed. Cyclopedia of farm animals. (My '22)

Domestic finance

Lord, I. E. Getting your money's worth. (Ap '22)
 Dominie in doubt. Neill, A. S. (S '22)
 Don Rodriguez. Dunsany, E. J. M. D. P. (O '22)
 Doom trail. Smith, A. D. H. (Je '22)
 Doors of the night. Packard, F. L. (Je '22)

Dorsetshire, England

Darton, F. J. H. Soul of Dorset. (D '22)
 Hopkins, R. T. Thomas Hardy's Dorset. (Ag '22)

Dostoevskii, Fedor Mikhailovich

Dostoevskii, A. Fyodor Dostoyevsky. (Mr '22)
 Double crossed. Newton, W. D. (Je '22)
 Doubting Castle. Chipp, E. (N '22)
 Down-again-Derry. De La Mare, W. J. (Jl '22)
 Down the river. Brink, R. W. (N '22)
 Down the Yellowstone. Freeman, L. R. (Ja '23)
 Dragon in shallow waters. Nicolson, V. M. (Mr '22)

Drake, Sir Francis

Hart, F. R. Admirals of the Caribbean. (O '22)
 Drake and the adventurer's cup. Hornibrook, I. K. (S '22)

Drama

Darlington, W. A. Through the fourth wall. (N '22)
 Lewisohn, L. Drama and the stage. (My '22)
 Nathan, G. J. Critic and the drama. (Mr '22)
 Drama and the stage. Lewisohn, L. (My '22)

Dramas

Andrejeff, L. N. Waltz of the dogs. (D '22)
 Barrie, J. M. Dear Brutus. (F '23)
 Bennett, A. Love match. (Jl '22)
 Bottomley, G. Gruach and Britain's daughter. (S '22)
 Brooks, C. S. Frightful plays. (N '22)
 Dane, C. pseud. Will Shakespeare. (Mr '22)
 Dargan, O. T. and Peterson, F. Flutter of the goldleaf. (Ap '22)
 Davis, O. Detour. (Jl '22)
 Dell, F. King Arthur's socks. (D '22)
 Dickinson, G. L. Magic flute. (Mr '22)
 Dunsany, E. J. M. D. P. If. (Ap '22)
 Ervine, St. J. G. The ship. (Ag, N '22)
 Flecker, J. E. Hassan. (Ja '23)
 Galsworthy, J. Family man. (Jl '22)
 Galsworthy, J. Loyalties. (N '22)
 Gibson, W. W. Krindlesyke. (D '22)
 Gregory, I. A. Image. (Ap '22)
 Housman, L. Angels and ministers. (Mr '22)
 Mackay, C. D. A. Franklin. (Ag '22)
 Marks, J. A. Sun chaser. (F '23)
 Masfield, J. Esther and Berenice. (Mr '22)
 Milne, A. A. Second plays. (F '23)
 Milne, A. A. Three plays. (O '22)
 Nichols, R. M. B. Guilty souls. (O '22)
 O'Dea, M. Red Bud women. (D '22)
 O'Neill, E. G. Hairy ape; Anna Christie; First man. (O '22)
 Peabody, J. P. Portrait of Mrs W. (Je '22)
 Pirandello, L. Three plays. (Ja '23)
 Reid, E. G. Florence Nightingale. (F '23)
 Walker, S. Portmanteau adaptations. (Ap '22)
 Wilde, P. Eight comedies for little theatres. (N '22)
 Yeats, W. B. Four plays for dancers. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Zweig, S. Jeremiah. (D '23)

Collections

Clark, B. H., comp. Representative one-act plays by British and Irish authors. (F '23)
 Cohen, H. L., ed. Longer plays by modern authors (American). (O '22)
 Eliot, S. A., ed. Little theater classics. (Ag '22)
 47 workshop. Plays of the 47 workshop. (Ja '23)
 Lewis, B. R. Contemporary one-act plays. (S '22)
 Mantle, B., ed. Best plays of 1920-1921. (Jl '22)
 Moses, M. J., ed. Representative one-act plays by continental authors. (Ja '23)
 Shay, F., ed. Contemporary one act plays. (D '22)
 Shay, F., ed. Treasury of plays for women. (D '22)

Dramatic criticism

Nathan, G. J. Critic and the drama. (Mr '22)
 Dramatic legends. Colum, P. (D '22)
 Dramatic theory and practice in France. Jourdain, E. F. (Je '22)
 Dreams and a sword. Addison, M. C. (O '22)
 Dreiser, Theodore
 Dreiser, T. Book about myself. (F '23)
 Drilling and boring machinery
 Hammond, E. K. Broaching practice. (Ja '23)
 The driver. Garrett, G. (Ja '23)

Drugs

Fuller, H. C. Story of drugs. (Jl '22)
 Dry points. Hoyt, H. M. (My '22)
 Dust flower. King, B. (D '22)
 Dust of desire. Peterson, M. (D '22)
 Dust of the desert. Ritchie, R. W. (N '22)
 Dusty Star. Baker, O. (Ja '23)

Eagle, Solomon, pseud. See Squire, J. C. (Mr, Ap, Je '22)

Earlham. Lubbock, P. (Ja '23)
 Early American portrait painters in miniature. Bolton, T. (Mr '22)
 Early civilization. Goldenweiser, A. A. (D '22)
 Early Italian painters. Peers, G. K. (Je '22)
 Early Yugoslav literature (1000-1800). Stanoyevich, M. S. (Jl '22)
 Earth and its life. Seers, A. W. (O '22)

East and West

Rihbany, A. M. Wise men from the east and from the west. (F '23)

Eastern question (Balkan)

Panaretoff, S. Near Eastern affairs and conditions. (Je '22)

Eastern question (Far East)

Buell, R. L. Washington conference. (Ag, N '22)
 Dennett, T. Americans in eastern Asia. (F '23)
 Golovin, H. Problem of the Pacific in the twentieth century. (F '23)
 Greenble, S. Pacific triangle. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Hunt, F. Rising temper of the East. (Ag '22)
 Kawakami, K. K. Japan's Pacific policy. (S '22)
 Pasvolosky, L. Russia in the Far East. (Mr '22)
 Powell, E. A. Asia at the crossroads. (My '22)
 Russell, B. A. W. Problem of China. (D '22)
 Weale, E. J. P., pseud. Indiscreet chronicle from the Pacific. (F '23)
 Willoughby, W. W. China at the conference. (O '22)
 Economic basis of politics. Beard, C. A. (Je '22)
Economic conditions
 Gras, N. S. B. Introduction to economic history. (D '22)
 Economic history of Ireland from the Union to the famine. O'Brien, G. A. T. (Je '22)
Economic policy
 Gras, N. S. B. Introduction to economic history. (D '22)

Economics

- Birk, L. V. Theory of marginal value. (N '22)
 Edie, L. D. Principles of the new economics. (Je '22)
 Henderson, H. D. Supply and demand. (S '22)
 Lapp, J. A. Economics and the community. (N '22)
 McKee, H. S. A B C's of business. (F '23)
 Economics and the community. Lapp, J. A. (N '22)
 Economics of petroleum. Pogue, J. E. (Ag '22)
 Edgar A. Poe. Robertson, J. W. (F '23)

Education

- Adams, J. Modern developments in educational practice. (Ja '23)
 Emerton, E. Learning and living. (Mr '22)
 Garnett, J. C. M. Education and world citizenship. (Mr '22)
 Gentile, G. Reform of education. (O '22)
 Sharp, D. L. Education in a democracy. (Ja '23)
 Snedden, D. S. Educational sociology. (F '23)

History

- Reisner, E. H. Nationalism and education since 1789. (D '22)

United States

- Book, W. F. Intelligence of high school seniors. (F '23)

South

- Knight, E. W. Public education in the South. (S '22)

Education, Elementary

- Hartman, G. Child and his school. (Ap, Je '22)
 Education and world citizenship. Garnett, J. C. M. (Mr '22)
 Education for business. Lyon, L. S. (F '23)
 Education in a democracy. Sharp, D. L. (Ja '23)

Education of children

- Holmes, E. G. A. Give me the young. (Jl '22)
 Neill, A. S. Dominie in doubt. (S '22)
 Education on the Dalton plan. Parkhurst, H. H. (Ja '23)

Educational measurements

- McCall, W. A. How to measure in education. (Jl '22)
 Educational sociology. Snedden, D. S. (F '23)

Educational surveys

- Book, W. F. Intelligence of high school seniors. (F '23)
 Edward MacDowell. Porte, J. F. (Ja '23)

Efficiency, Industrial

- Clark, W. Gantt chart. (S '22)
 Farnham, D. T. America vs. Europe in industry. (Ap, Je '22)

Efficient salesmanship. Shrubsall, F. W. (Ag '22)

- Egholm and his God. Buchholtz, J. (Jl '22)

Egypt

- Ruffer, M. A. Studies in the palaeopathology of Egypt. (Mr '22)

History

- Blunt, W. S. Secret history of the English occupation. (Ja '23)
 Eight comedies for little theatres. Wilde, P. (N '22)
 Eighth notes. Parker, H. T. (Ja '23)

Einstein, Albert

- Moszkowski, A. Einstein, the searcher. (Mr '22)
 Einstein and the universe. Nordmann, C. (N '22)
 Einstein the searcher. Moszkowski, A. (Mr '22)

Einstein theory

- Dingle, H. Relativity for all. (D '22)
 Haldane, R. B. H. Philosophy of humanism. (N '22)
 Moszkowski, A. Einstein the searcher. (Mr '22)
 Nordmann, C. Einstein and the universe. (N '22)

- Poor, C. L. Gravitation versus relativity. (F '23)
 Schmidt, H. Relativity and the universe. (S '22)
 Thirring, J. H. Ideas of Einstein's theory. (Ag, N '22)
 Weyl, H. Space—time—matter. (F '23)

Electric apparatus and appliances

- How to make things electrical. (Jl '22)

Electric engineering

- Standard handbook for electrical engineers. (Ja '23)
 Starling, S. G. Electricity. (Ag, N '22)
 Timbie, W. H., and Bush, V. Principles of electric engineering. (N '22)
 Electricity. Starling, S. G. (Ag, N '22)
 Electro-metallurgy of steel. Gow, C. C. (Ja '23)

Electrons

- Mills, J. Within the atom. (Mr '22)
 Elementary hydraulics for technical students. Lea, F. C. (F '23)
 Elementary industrial arts. Winslow, L. L. (Ag '22)

- Elements of lettering. Goudy, F. W. (F '23)
 Elements of social justice. Hobhouse, L. T. (O '22)

- Elinor Colhouse. Hudson, S. (Ap '22)

Elizabeth, queen of England

- Chamberlin, F. C. Private character of Queen Elizabeth. (Jl '22)
 Wilson, V. A. Queen Elizabeth's maids of honour. (N '22)
 Ella keeps house. Champion, J. (My '22)

Embroidery

- Head, R. E. Lace and embroidery collector. (Mr '22)

Emerson, Ralph Waldo

- Burroughs, J. Last harvest. (O '22)
 Emile Coué. Macnaghten, H. (F '23)
 Eminent Europeans. Bagger, E. S. (Ja '23)
 Emmett Lawler. Tully, J. (Ap '22)

Employers' associations

- Bonnett, C. E. Employers' associations in the United States. (Je '22)
 Employers' associations in the United States. Bonnett, C. E. (Je '22)

Employment management

- Edie, L. D., comp. Practical psychology for business executives. (O '22)
 Marshall, L. C. Business administration. (Mr '22)
 Mayers, L. Federal service. (Je '22)
 Procter, A. W. Principles of public personnel administration. (Mr '22)
 Rowntree, B. S. Human factor in business. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Employment systems

- Hollingworth, H. I. Judging human character. (D '22)
 Enchanted April. Armin, M. A. (F '23)
 Engineering steels. Aitchison, L. (N '22)

Engineers

- Swain, G. F. Young man and civil engineering. (Jl '22)

Engines

- Graham, F. D. Audel's engineers and mechanics guide. (N '22)

England

- England. (O '22)

Biography

- Painted windows. (Ap '22)

Description and travel

- Hudson, W. H. Afoot in England. (Jl '22)
 Matz, B. W. Dickensian inns and taverns. (F '23)

Politics and government

- Masterman, C. F. G. How England is governed. (S '22)

Relations (general) with France

- Tout, T. F. France and England. (F '23)

Social life and customs

- Bennett, H. S. Pastons and their England. (S '22)
 Quennell, M., and C. H. B. History of everyday things in England. (O '22)

England, my England. Lawrence, D. H. (Ja '23)
 England under the Lancastrians. Flemming, J. H. (Ap '22)
 English and American philosophy since 1800. Rogers, A. K. (Ag '22)
 English drama

Collections

Clark, B. H. comp. Representative one-act plays by British and Irish authors. (F '23)

History and criticism

Thaler, A. Shakespeare to Sheridan. (S '22)

English essays

Bibliography

Horton, M. L. Viewpoints in essays. (N '22)
 English language

Business English

Weseen, M. H. Everyday uses of English. (N '22)

Terms and phrases

Hyamson, A. M. Dictionary of English phrases. (My '22)

Versification

Baum, P. F. Principles of English versification. (F '23)

English literature

Garnett, E. Friday nights. (Jl '22)
 Orage, A. R. Readers and writers. (Je '22)
 Quiller-Couch, A. T. Studies in literature; second series. (Ja '23)
 Squire, J. C. Books in general. (Ap '22)
 Strachey, L. Books and characters. (Ag '22)

Catholic authors

Shuster, G. N. Catholic spirit in modern English literature. (S '22)

History and criticism

Coleridge, S. Glory of English prose. (D '22)
 Inge, W. R. Victorian age. (O '22)
 Overton, G. M. When winter comes to Main street. (Ja '23)
 Shuster, G. N. Catholic spirit in modern English literature. (S '22)
 Van Dyke, H. Companionable books. (F '23)
 Winchester, C. T. Old castle. (F '23)

English poetry

Graves, R. On English poetry. (Jl '22)
 Hearn, L. Pre-Raphaelite and other poets. (D '22)

Collections

Cohen, H. L. Lyric forms from France. (F '23)
 Davis, M. G. Girl's book of verse. (D '22)
 Drinkwater, J., comp. Way of poetry. (D '22)
 Frothingham, R., ed. Songs of challenge. (O '22)
 Fuess, C. M., and Stearns, H. C., comps. Little book of society verse. (S '22)
 Le Gallienne, R., ed. Le Gallienne book of English verse. (My '22)
 Leonard, S. A., comp. Poems of the war and the peace. (Ap '22)
 Squire, J. C., ed. Book of women's verse. (Je '22)
 Teasdale, S., comp. Rainbow gold. (N '22)

History and criticism

Maynard, T. Our best poets. (F '23)
 Parsons, M. P. New poetry. (My '22)

Irish authors

Colum, P., ed. Anthology of Irish verse. (My '22)

English prisons today. Hobhouse, S., and Brockway, A. F., eds. (O '22)
 English prisons under local government. Webb, S. and B. (S '22)

Engraving

Pilsworth, E. S. Process engraving. (Je '22)
 Enormous room. Cummings, E. E. (Je '22)
 Enrico Caruso. Key, P. Van R., and Zirato, B. (F '23)
 Escape. Jeffery, J. E. (N '22)

Eskimos

Rasmussen, K. J. V. Greenland along the Polar sea. (My '22)
 Stefánsson, V. Hunters of the great north. (Ja '23)

Essays

Agate, J. E. Alarums and excursions. (N '22)
 Bailey, J. Some political ideas and persons. (Ag '22)
 Birkenhead, F. E. S. Points of view. (F '23)
 Black, A. Latest thing. (Mr, Je '22)
 Broun, H. C. Pieces of hate. (S '22)
 Burroughs, J. Last harvest. (O '22)
 Canby, H. S. Definitions. (O '22)
 Drinkwater, J. Cotswold characters. (F '23)
 Eaton, W. P. Penguin persons & peppermints. (O '22)
 France, A., pseud. On life and letters. (S '22)
 Garnett, E. Friday nights. (Jl '22)
 Goethe, J. W. von. Goethe's literary essays. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Gosse, E. W. Aspects and impressions. (Jl '22)
 Gourmont, R. de. Decadence. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Gwynn, S. L. Garden wisdom. (Je '22)
 Harrison, F. Novissima verba. (Ap '22)
 Hewlett, M. H. Wiltshire essays. (O '22)
 Heydrick, B. A., ed. Types of the essay. (O '22)
 Hind, C. L. More authors and I. (N '22)
 Inge, W. R. Outspoken essays; second series. (D '22)
 Lucas, E. V. Giving and receiving. (Ja '23)
 Lynd, R. Pleasures of ignorance. (Ap '22)
 Matthews, B. Tocsin of revolt. (N '22)
 Mencken, H. L. Prejudices; third series. (D '22)
 Meynell, A. C. Second person singular. (My '22)
 Milne, A. A. Sunny side. (F '23)
 Monahan, M. Attic dreamer. (F '23)
 Murray, G. Tradition and progress. (Mr '22)
 Noguchi, Y. Through the Torii. (Ag '22)
 Osborn, E. B. Literature and life. (O '22)
 Papini, G. Four and twenty minds. (O '22)
 Quiller-Couch, A. T. Studies in literature; second series. (Ja '23)
 Rhys, E., ed. Modern English essays, 1870-1920. (Ja '23)
 Saintsbury, G. E. B. Scrap book. (F '23)
 Santayana, G. Soliloquies in England. (Ag '22)
 Smith, F. M., comp. Essays and studies. (S '22)
 Smyth, E. M. Streaks of life. (My '22)
 Strachey, L. Books and characters. (Ag '22)
 Tagore, R. Creative unity. (Jl '22)
 Tomlinson, H. M. Waiting for daylight. (Ag '22)
 Williamson, G. C. Behind my library door. (D '22)
 Essays and addresses. Eng title of 'Tradition and progress. Murray, G. (Mr '22)
 Essays and studies. Smith, F. M., comp. (S '22)
 Essentials in the theory of framed structures. Ellis, C. A. (Ag '22)
 Esther and Berenice. Masfield, J. (Mr '22)
 Esthetic basis of Greek art of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C. Carpenter, R. (F '23)
 Esthetics
 Carpenter, R. Esthetic basis of Greek art of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C. (F '23)
 Piccoli, R. Benedetto Croce. (My '22)
 Ethel opens the door. Fox, D. (Mr '22)
 Ethical culture movement
 Jacobs, L. Three types of practical ethical movements of the past half century. (Jl '22)
 Ethics
 Fullerton, G. S. Handbook of ethical theory. (D '22)
 Laing, R. M. Study in moral problems. (F '23)
 History
 Jacobs, L. Three types of practical ethical movements of the past half century. (Jl '22)
 Study and teaching
 Cox, G. C. Public conscience. (Ja '23)

EthnologyNew Guinea

Alder, W. F. Isle of vanishing men. (Ap '22)

Etiquet

Everyday manners for American boys and girls. (O '22)

Eucken, Rudolf Christof

Eucken, R. C. Rudolf Eucken. (Mr '22)

Euclid's outline of sex. Birdwood, W. D., pseud. (Ja '23)

EuropeBiography

Bagger, E. S. Eminent Europeans. (Ja '23)

Description and travel

Chaplin, C. S. My trip abroad. (Ap '22)

Graham, S. Europe—whither bound? (Mr '22)

Newbigin, M. I. Frequented ways. (N '22)

Economic conditions

Bass, J. F., and Moulton, H. G. America and the balance sheet of Europe. (Mr '22)

Beard, C. A. Cross currents in Europe to-day. (F '23)

Keynes, J. M. Revision of the treaty. (Mr '22)

Mountsier, R. Our eleven billion dollars. (O '22)

Vanderlip, F. A. What next in Europe? (Mr '22)

Zimmern, A. E. Europe in convalescence. (Jl '22)

History

Beard, C. A. Cross currents in Europe to-day. (F '23)

Fueter, E. World history, 1814-1920. (Ja '23)

Marriott, J. A. R. Europe and beyond. (N '22)

Thomson, C. B. Old Europe's suicide. (Je '22)

1871-

William II. Kaiser's memoirs. (D '22)

Politics and government

Guest, L. H. Struggle for power in Europe, 1917-1921. (Ap '22)

Korff, S. A. Russia's foreign relations during the last half century. (Ap '22)

McBain, H. L., and Rogers, L. New constitutions of Europe. (F '23)

Repington, C. A. C. After the war. (Ap '22)

Sherrill, C. H. Prime ministers and presidents. (Ap '22)

Social conditions

Roberts, K. L. Why Europe leaves home. (Jl '22)

Williams, W. Horny hands and hampered elbows. (F '23)

Europe and beyond. Marriott, J. A. R. (N '22)

Europe in convalescence. Zimmern, A. E. (Jl '22)

Europe—whither bound? Graham, S. (Mr '22)

European war, 1914-1919

Buchan, J. History of the great war. (D '22)

Lyon, L. Pomp of power. (N '22)

Thomson, C. B. Old Europe's suicide. (Je '22)

Aerial operations

Raleigh W. A. War in the air. (D '22)

Campaigns and battlesEastern front

Knox, A. W. F. With the Russian army, 1914-1917. (Mr '22)

Causes

Nock, A. J. Myth of a guilty nation. (S '22)

Diplomatic history

Beard, C. A. Cross currents in Europe to-day. (F '23)

Nock, A. J. Myth of a guilty nation. (S '22)

William II. Kaiser's memoirs. (D '22)

Finance

Friedman, E. M. International finance and its reorganization. (Mr '22)

Mountsier, R. Our eleven billion dollars. (O '22)

Hospitals, charities, etc

Abraham, J. J. My Balkan log. (O '22)

Forbes, A. S. B. Memories and base details. (Ag '22)

Van Schaick, J., jr. Little corner never conquered. (S '22)

Jews

Levinger, L. J. Jewish chaplain in France. (Ap '22)

Naval operations

Carpenter, A. F. B. Blocking of Zeebrugge. (Jl '22)

Daniels, J. Our navy at war. (Ag '22)

Peace and mediation

Addams, J. Peace and bread in time of war. (Ap '22)

Personal narratives

Scott, F. G. Great war as I saw it. (D '22)

Poetry

Leonard, S. A., comp. Poems of the war and the peace. (Ap '22)

Prisoners and prisons

Cummings, E. E. Enormous room. (Je '22)

Religious and social work

Levinger, L. J. Jewish chaplain in France. (Ap '22)

Reparations

Nitti, F. S. Wreck of Europe. (D '22)

Treaties

Nitti, F. S. Wreck of Europe. (D '22)

Belgium

Van Schaick, J., jr. Little corner never conquered. (S '22)

Germany

Frederick William, formerly crown prince of Prussia. Memoirs. (Ag '22)

Nock, A. J. Myth of a guilty nation. (S '22)

William II. Kaiser's memoirs. (D '22)

Great Britain

Montague, C. E. Disenchantment. (D '22)

Italy

Mowrer, E. A. Immortal Italy. (Ag '22)

Russia

Knox, A. W. F. With the Russian army, 1914-1917. (Mr '22)

Serbia

Abraham, J. J. My Balkan log. (O '22)

Turkey

Djermal, A. Memories of a Turkish statesman, 1913-1919. (F '23)

United States

Daniels, J. Our navy at war. (Ag '22)

Dickinson, J. M. Building of an army. (S '22)

Hendrick, B. J. Life and letters of Walter H. Page. (N '22)

Lane, F. K. Letters of Franklin K. Lane. (D '22)

Turner, J. K. Shall it be again? (D '22)

Evaporating appliances

Royds, R. Heat transmission in boilers, condensers and evaporators. (Ja '23)

Evening and continuation schools

Stewart, C. Moonlight schools for the emancipation of adult illiterates. (D '22)

Evening post, New York

Nevins, A. Evening post. (F '23)

Everest, Mount

Howard-Bury, C. K., and others. Mount Everest. (Ag '22)

Everlasting whisper. Gregory, J.

Everyday life in the old stone age. Quennell, M., and C. H. B. (Jl '22)

Everyday manners for American boys and girls. (O '22)
 Everyday uses of English. Weseen, M. H. (N '22)
 Evil shepherd. Oppenheim, E. P. (Ja '23)

Evolution

Bryan, W. J. In His image. (My '22)
 Hutchinson, H. G. Fortnightly club. (Ag '22)
 Sellars, R. W. Evolutionary naturalism. (D '22)
 Evolution of civilization. McCabe, J. (Ap '22)
 Evolution of modern medicine. Osler, W. (My '22)
 Evolution of the New Testament. Symes, J. E. (Jl '22)
 Evolutionary naturalism. Sellars, R. W. (D '22)
 Exemplary theatre. Barker, H. G. (Jl '22)

Exercise

Lee, G. S. Invisible exercise. (S '22)
 Exploration of Air. Buchanan, A. (N '22)
 Explorers of the dawn. De la Roche, M. (Ap '22)
 Eyes of love. Harris, C. M. (S '22)

Fables

Strong, C. A. Wisdom of the beasts. (Ag '22)
 Facing old age. Epstein, A. (Je '22)
 Facing reality. Wingfield-Stratton, E. C. (Ag '22)
 Factory administration in practice. Hiscox, W. J. (Ap '22)

Factory management

Clark, W. Gantt chart. (S '22)
 Farquhar, H. H. Factory storeskeeping. (Ja '23)
 Hiscox, W. J. Factory administration in practice. (Ap '22)
 Factory storeskeeping. Farquhar, H. H. (Ja '23)
 Fair Harbor. Lincoln, J. C. (D '22)
 Fair rewards. Beer, T. (Ap, Je '22)
 Fairfield, Cicely. See West, R., pseud. (O '22)
 Fairies
 Doyle, A. C. Coming of the fairies. (Ja '23)
 Fairy prince. Abbott, E. H. (F '23)

Fairy tales

Bowen, W. Solario the tailor. (N '22)
 Colum, P. Children who followed the piper. (N '22)
 Sandburg, C. Rootabaga stories. (Ja '23)

Faith

Gore, C. Belief in God. (Ap '22)
 Jones, H. Faith that enquires. (My '22)
 Faith that enquires. Jones, H. (My '22)
 Fall of Mary Stuart. Mumby, F. A. (Ap '22)
 Family man. Galsworthy, J. (Jl '22)
 Fantasia of the unconscious. Lawrence, D. H. (F '23)

Far East. See Eastern question (Far East)
 Far-off things. Machen, A. (F '23)

Farm buildings

Foster, W. A., and Carter, D. G. Farm buildings. (Ag '22)

Farm life

Pratt, A. D. Homesteader's portfolio. (F '23)

Farm produce

Bailey, L. H., ed. Cyclopedia of farm crops. (My '22)
 Farmer and his community. Sanderson, E. D. (F '23)

Farquhar, Arthur B.

Farquhar, A. B. First million the hardest. (Jl '22)

Federal income tax problems—1922. Rossmoore, E. E. (Ag '22)
 Federal service. Mayers, L. (Je '22)

Fiction (books about)

Lubbock, P. Craft of fiction. (Mr '22)
 Slosson, E. E., and Downey, J. E. Plots and personalities. (Ag '22)

Technique

Hoffman, A. S. Fundamentals of fiction writing. (F '23)

Fiction (classified by subject)

Adolescence

Björkman, E. A. Soul of a child. (Ap '22)
 Dalrymple, L. Fool's hill. (D '22)
 Ellis, H. Kanga Creek. (N '22)
 Johnson, O. M. Skippy Bedelle. (Ja '23)
 Kilbourne, F. Corner in William. (Ja '23)

Adventure

Anderson, R. G. Isle of seven moons. (Ag '22)
 Bailey, H. C. His serene highness. (My '22)
 Bridges, R. Rogues' haven. (F '23)
 Brunner, E. B. Personal touch. (S '22)
 Chamberlain, G. A. Rackhouse. (Ja '23)
 Chambers, R. W. Flaming jewel. (S '22)
 Cheyney, E. G. Scott Burton and the timber thieves. (Je '22)
 Cooper, C. R. White desert. (Ap '22)
 Daniel, H. In the favour of the king. (Jl '22)
 Erskine, L. Y. Renfrew of the Royal Mounted. (My '22)
 Friel, A. O. Pathless trail. (Je '22)
 Haggard, H. R. Virgin of the sun. (Jl '22)
 Hallet, R. M. Canyon of the fools. (Je '22)
 Jackson, C. T. Captain Sazarac. (O '22)
 Jepson, S. Qualified adventurer. (S '22)
 Jewell, E. A. White Kami. (Je '22)
 Kelland, C. B. Catty Atkins, sailorman. (Je '22)
 Kitchin, F. H. Treasure of Golden Cap. (Ja '23)
 Lynde, F. Pirates' hope. (Jl '22)
 Marsh, G. Whelps of the wolf. (Ja '23)
 Marshall, E. Heart of little Shikara. (D '22)
 Marshall, E. Sky line of spruce. (O '22)
 Mills, L. Green goddess. (N '22)
 Newton, W. D. Double crossed. (Je '22)
 Parrish, R. Gift of the desert. (N '22)
 Pendexter, H. Virginia scout. (N '22)
 Raine, W. M. Fighting edge. (D '22)
 Raine, W. M. Man-size. (Jl '22)
 Ritchie, R. W. Dust of the desert. (N '22)
 Rowland, H. C. Hironelle. (Ja '23)
 Sabatini, R. Captain Blood. (O '22)
 Springer, N. Blood ship. (Ja '23)
 Stacpoole, H. De V. S. Vanderdecken. (Ja '23)
 Sterrett, F. R. Amazing inheritance. (N '22)
 Stilson, C. B., and Beahan, C. Island God forgot. (N '22)
 Terhune, A. P. Black gold. (Ap '22)
 Tuckerman, A. Breath of life. (D '22)
 White, W. P. Rider of Golden Bar. (Mr '22)
 Wickham, H. Scarlet X. (Ja '23)

Animal stories

Derieux, S. A. Frank of Freedom hill. (Ag '22)
 Grew, D. Beyond rope and fence. (N '22)
 Marshall, E. Heart of little Shikara. (D '22)
 Squier, E.-L. Wild heart. (Jl '22)
 Terhune, A. P. Further adventures of Lad. (S '22)
 Terhune, A. P. His dog. (Je '22)

Artist life

Caine, W. Mendoza and a little lady. (Ap '22)
 Ogden, H. V. C. Then came Molly. (S '22)
 Van Vechten, C. Peter Whiffle. (Je '22)

Biblical stories

Deamer, D. Revelation. (Je '22)
 Strachey, M. David, the son of Jesse. (My '22)

Business

Gariett, G. The driver. (Ja '23)

Character studies

Atkin, G. M. Captive herd. (N '22)
 Blaker, R. Voice in the wilderness. (N '22)
 Brown, A. Old Crow. (D '22)
 Coxon, M. Torquil's success. (Ap '22)
 De La Pasture, E. E. M. Optimist. (D '22)
 Fyfe, H. H. Widow's cruise. (My '22)
 Hichens, R. S. December love. (N '22)
 Hutchings, E. G. Indian summer. (S '22)
 Hutchinson, V. Sea wrack. (O '22)
 Jameson, S. The clash. (S '22)
 Jeffery, J. E. Escape. (N '22)

Fiction—Character studies—Continued

- Jones, E. B. C. Slings captives. (O '22)
 Kaye-Smith, S. Joanna Godden. (Mr '22)
 Larminie, M. R. Search. (Je '22)
 McFee, W. Command. (D '22)
 McKenna, S. Confessions of a well-meaning woman. (S '22)
 McKenna, S. Secret victory. (Ap '22)
 Mander, J. Strange attraction. (Ja '23)
 Merwin, S. Goldie Green. (Je '22)
 Nexö, M. A. Ditte: towards the stars. (D '22)
 O'Higgins, H. J. Some distinguished Americans. (D '22)
 Owen, J. Cotton broker. (Mr '22)
 Richardson, N. Cave woman. (D '22)
 Richberg, D. R. Man of purpose. (D '22)
 Richmond, G. L. Foursquare. (N '22)
 Rumsey, F. Ascent. (O '22)
 Sedgwick, A. D. Adrienne Toner. (My '22)
 Seymour, B. K. Intrusion. (Je '22)
 Singmaster, E. Bennett Malin. (Ag '22)
 Stern, G. B. The room. (N '22)
 Street, J. L. Rita Coventry. (N '22)
 Tully, J. Emmet Lawler. (Ap '22)
 Waldron, W. Road to the world. (Ag '22)
 Walpole, H. The cathedral. (D '22)
 Washburn, C. C. Lonely warrior. (Mr '22)
 Watts, M. S. House of Rimmon. (My '22)
 Waugh, A. Roland Whately. (Ja '23)
 Webster, H. K. Joseph Greer and his daughter. (F '23)
 Wharton, A. Joan of Overbarrow. (Ap '22)
 Wills, R. Hoax. (Ag '22)
 Wylie, I. A. R. Dark house. (Jl '22)

Cheerful stories

- Arnini, M. A. Enchanted April. (F '23)
 Buckrose, J. E., pseud. Knight among ladies. (N '22)
 Champion, J. Ella keeps house. (My '22)
 Evison, M. Peggy Pretend. (Je '22)
 Ford, S. Trilby May crashes in. (N '22)
 Forman, H. J. Man who lived in a shoe. (N '22)
 Gowing, S. Joy of living. (Mr '22)
 Jope-Slade, C. Cuckoo's nest. (D '22)
 Mackail, D. Bill the bachelor. (N '22)
 Mitchell, R. C. Jane journeys on. (Jl '22)
 Onions, B. Subconscious courtship. (D '22)
 Onions, B. Wrong Mr Right. (My '22)
 Porter, H. E. Rope. (Ja '23)
 Smith, G. A. There goes the groom. (Ag '22)
 Watanna, O., pseud. Sunny-San. (Ag '22)
 Weaver, J. V. A., jr. Margey wins the game. (Ag '22)
 Wodehouse, P. G. Three men and a maid. (Ag '22)

Children, Stories about

- Broun, H. C. The boy grew older. (N '22)
 De La Pasture, E. E. M. Humbug. (Ap, Je '22)
 De La Roche, M. Explorers of the dawn. (Ap '22)
 Gates, E. Rich little poor boy. (Ap '22)
 MacHarg, W. B. Peewee. (O '22)

Convent life

- O'Donovan, G. Vocations. (My '22)

Crime and criminals

- Chesterton, G. K. Man who knew too much. (Ja '23)
 Wallace, E. Angel of terror. (Ag '22)

Divorce

- Ashmun, M. E. Support. (F '23)

Education

- De La Pasture, E. E. M. Humbug. (Ap, Je '22)

European war

- Cather, W. S. One of ours. (O '22)
 Dos Passos, J. R., jr. One man's initiation—1917. (Ag '22)
 Ewart, W. Way of revelation. (Mr '22)
 Harrison, H. S. Saint Teresa. (Ap '22)
 House on Charles street. (Ap '22)
 Maurois, A. General Bramble. (Jl '22)
 Raymond, E. Tell England. (S '22)
 Washburn, C. C. Lonely warrior. (Mr '22)

Family life

- Beresford, J. D. Prisoners of Hartling. (Ap '22)
 Maxwell, W. B. Little more. (Mr '22)
 Norris, K. Certain people of importance. (O '22)

Fantasies

- De La Mare, W. J. Memoirs of a midget. (Ap, Je '22)
 Farjeon, E. Martin Pippin in the apple orchard. (O '22)
 Milne, A. A. Once on a time. (D '22)
 Morley, C. D. Where the blue begins. (N '22)
 Phillpotts, E. Pan and the twins. (Mr '22)

Frontier and pioneer life

- Hough, E. Covered wagon. (Ag '22)

Fur trade

- Smith, A. D. H. Doom trail. (Je '22)

Ghost stories

- Saltus, E. E. Ghost girl. (O '22)
 Scott, C. A. D.- Haunting. (Je '22)

Historical novelsAmerica

- Johnston, M. 1492. (D '22)

Canada

- Smith, A. D. H. Doom trail. (Je '22)

England

- Jenkins, B. A. The Bracegirdle. (My '22)
 Johnston, M. Silver cross. (Ap '22)

France

- Aminoff, L. Love. (O '22)
 Orczy, E. Castles in the air. (My '22)

Russia

- Underwood, E. W. The penitent. (D '22)

United States

- Bachelor, I. A. In the days of Poor Richard. (S '22)
 Dye, E. Conquest. (D '22)
 Fairbank, J. Cortlandts of Washington Square. (D '22)
 Hough, E. Covered wagon. (Ag '22)
 Masters, E. L. Children of the market place. (My '22)

Horse-racing

- Beaumont, G. Riders up! (D '22)

Humor and satire

- Alington, C. A. Through the shadows. (Jl '22)
 Belloc, H. Mercy of Allah. (Ag '22)
 Bennett, A. Mr. Frohack. (Ap, Je '22)
 Benson, E. F. Miss Mapp. (F '23)
 Bergengren, R. Gentlemen all and merry companions. (F '23)
 Connell, R. Sin of Monsieur Pettipon. (S '22)
 Gayton, B. Gland stealers. (Ja '23)
 Hannay, J. O. Lady Bountiful. (Je '22)
 McCutcheon, G. B. Yollop. (Ap '22)
 Milne, A. A. Mr Pim. (Ap '22)
 Morley, C. D. Where the blue begins. (N '22)
 Noland, S. C. Sam Blick's diary. (Ja '23)
 Panzini, A. Wanted—a wife. (D '22)
 Tarkington, B. Gentle Julia. (Je '22)
 Toohey, J. P. Fresh every hour. (Je '22)
 Wiley, H. Lady Luck. (Mr '22)
 Wiley, H. Lily. (D '22)

Industrial conditions

- Brighouse, H. Hepplestaill's. (Je '22)
 Hutchinson, H. Chanting wheels. (My '22)

Letters (stories in letter form)

- Anderson, I. W. Polly the pagan. (D '22)
 Macaulay, F. C. Jack and I in Lotus Land. (D '22)
 Stone, G. Z. Letters to a djinn. (N '22)

Locality, Novels ofAfrica

- Readle, C. Witch doctors. (O '22)
 Everard, F. Daughter of the sands. (N '22)

Keable, R. Mother of all living. (O '22)
 Loti, P., pseud. Sahara. (O '22)
 Maran, R. Batouala. (S '22)
 Peterson, M. Dust of desire. (D '22)

Alaska

Hendryx, J. B. Snowdrift. (Ap '22)
 Mikkelsen, E. Frozen justice. (D '22)
 Rutzebeck, H. My Alaskan idyll. (S '22)
 Willoughby, B. Where the sun swings north.
 (D '22)

Arizona

Parrish, R. Gift of the desert. (N '22)

Boston

Swasey, R. Kendall's sister. (Ap '22)

California

Drago, H. S. Suzanna. (F '23)
 Grey, Z. Wanderer of the wasteland. (F '23)
 White, S. E. On tiptoe. (D '22)

Canada

Bindloss, H. Man from the wilds. (Mr '22)
 Binns, O. Lady of North Star. (Ap '22)
 Curwood, J. O. Country beyond. (O '22)
 Jenkins, C. C. Timber pirate. (F '23)
 McClung, N. L. Purple Springs. (Ap '22)
 Sinclair, B. W. Hidden places. (Mr '22)
 Stringer, A. J. A. Prairie child. (Jl '23)

Cape Cod

Cooper, J. A. Sheila of Big Wreck Cove. (Jl '22)
 Lincoln, J. C. Fair Harbor. (D '22)

Ceylon

Burr, A. J. Three fires. (N '22)

Colorado

Cooper, C. R. White desert. (Ap '22)

Constantinople

Nicolson, H. G. Sweet waters. (Mr '22)

Cuba

Hergesheimer, J. Bright shawl. (N '22)

England

Burnett, F. Head of the house of Coombe.
 (Mr '22)

Burnett, F. H. Robin. (S '22)
 Galsworthy, J. Forsyte saga. (My '22)
 Seymour, B. K. Intrusion. (Je '22)

England (Oxford)

Nichols, B. Patchwork. (My '22)

England (provincial and rural)

Barrington, E. J. St Luke of the nineteenth century. (F '23)
 Benson, E. F. Miss Mapp. (F '23)
 Beresford, J. D. Prisoners of Hartling. (Ap '22)
 Blaker, R. Voice in the wilderness. (N '22)
 Buckrose, J. E., pseud. Knight among ladies.
 (N '22)
 Dart, E. Sareel. (Ag '22)
 Holland, B. T. Vagrant tune. (S '22)
 Huxley, A. L. Crome yellow. (Mr '22)
 Hutchinson, V. Sea wrack. (O '22)
 Kaye-Smith, S. Joanna Godden. (Mr '22)
 Kaye-Smith, S. Tramping Methodist. (D '22)
 Lyons, A. M. N. Market bundle. (N '22)
 Marshall, A. Big Peter. (Ap '22)
 Marshall, A. Pippin. (D '22)
 Ollivant, A. One woman. (Ap '22)
 Patrick, D., pseud. Barbara Justice. (Ag '22)
 Pryde, A., pseud. Ordeal of honor. (Mr '22)
 Return of Alfred. (S '22)
 Weyman, S. J. Ovington's bank. (D '22)

Far East

Hurst, S: B. H. Coomer Ali. (Mr '22)

France

Bordeaux, H. House that died. (Ja '23)
 Deeping, W. House of adventure. (S '22)
 Escholier, R. Illusion. (Je '22)
 Hudson, J. W. Abbé Pierre. (Je '22)
 Orzy, E. M. Nicolette. (O '22)
 Pérochon, E. Nêne. (Ap '22)

Germany

Mann, H. Patrioteer. (S '22)

Hungary

Tormay, C. The old house. (O '22)

Iceland

Gunnarsson, G. Guest the One-eyed. (Je '22)

India

Candler, E. Abdication. (O '22)
 Hervey, A. Caravans by night. (My '22)
 Minney, R. J. Maki. (Je '22)
 Rohmer, S., pseud. Fire-Tongue. (Mr '22)
 Savi, E. W. Devil drives. (Mr '22)

Indiana

Anderson, D. Red lock. (Ja '23)
 McCutcheon, G. B. Viola Gwyn. (N '22)

Ireland

Caven, S. Pair of idols. (Jl '22)
 Corkery, D. Hounds of Banba. (Ag '22)
 Thurston, E. T. The miracle. (F '23)

Italy

Arnim, M. A. Enchanted April. (F '23)

Japan

Paris, J., pseud. Kimono. (My '22)

Kentucky

Grey, K. A little heaven. (S '22)
 Post, M. D. Mountain school-teacher. (N '22)

Labrador

Cullum, R. Man in the twilight. (O '22)

Long Island

Cooper, F. L. Captain Pott's minister. (F '23)

Louisiana

Henshaw, N. G. Inheritance of Jean Trouvé.
 (My '22)

Maine

Blanchard, G. Island cure. (Ag '22)
 Day, H. F. Joan of Arc of the north woods.
 (F '23)

Rideout, H. M. Winter bell. (Ag '22)

Maryland

Kerr, S. One thing is certain. (O '22)

Massachusetts

Sears, C. E. Romance of Fiddler's Green.
 (My '22)

Mexico

Ritchie, R. W. Dust of the desert. (N '22)

Nevada

Drago, H. S., and Noel, J. Whispering sage.
 (F '23)

New England

Gerould, K. Lost Valley. (Mr '22)
 Hildebrand, A. S. Parlor begat Amos. (Ap '22)

New Orleans

Olmstead, F. Madame Valcour's lodger. (Jl '22)

New York (city)

Atherton, G. F. Black oxen. (F '23)
 Child, R. W. Hands of Nara. (Ap '22)
 Fairbank, J. Cortlandts of Washington Square. (D '22)
 Towne, C. H. The chain. (O '22)

New York (city) (East Side)

Adams, S: H. From a bench in our square.
 (F '23)

Grendon, F. Love chase. (O '22)

North Carolina

Bartlett, F: O. Big laurel. (D '22)

Norway

Bojer, J. God and woman. (Mr '22)

Ohio

Stewart, C: D. Valley waters. (F '23)

Fiction—Locality. Novels of—Continued

Quebec

Parker, G. Carnac's folly. (N '22)

San Francisco

Atherton, G. F. Sleeping fires. (Mr '22)

Wiley, H. Jade. (Mr '22)

Scotland

Carswell, C. The canomile. (Jl '22)

Douglas, O. E. Ann and her mother. (D '22)

Laing, J. Wintergreen. (N '22)

South America

Friel, A. O. Pathless trail. (Je '22)

South Carolina

Fuller, M. One world at a time. (N '22)

South seas

Bruun, L. V. Promised isle. (S '22)

Bruun, L. Van Zanten's happy days. (Ap. Je '22)

Grimshaw, B. E. Conn of the coral seas. (Mr '22)

MacGrath, H. Ragged edge. (Mr '22)

Stock, R. South of the line. (F '23)

Spain

Baroja y Nessi, P. The quest. (Ja '23)

Texas

Beach, R. E. Flowing gold. (N '22)

United States

Lewis, S. Babbitt. (O '22)

United States (Great Lakes)

Pickthall, M. L. C. Bridge. (Mr '22)

United States (northwestern)

Bindloss, H. Northwest! (O '22)

United States (southern)

Glasgow, E. A. G. One man in his time. (Jl '22)

United States (southwestern)

Ames, J. B. Shoe-Bar Stratton. (Ag '22)

Hallet, R. M. Canyon of the fools. (Je '22)

Oyen, H.: Tarrant of Tin Spout. (Jl '22)

Rhodes, E. M. Copper Streak Trail. (Ag '22)

United States (western)

Bower, B. M., pseud. Trail of the white mule. (N '22)

Cather, W. One of ours. (O '22)

Evarts, H. G.: Settling of the sage. (My '22)

Gregory, J. Everlasting whisper. (Mr '22)

Grey, Z. To the last man. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Hankins, A. P. Heritage of the hills. (My '22)

Marshall, E. Shepherds of the wild. (My '22)

Ostrander, I. E. Two-gun Sue. (S '22)

Quick, H. Vandemark's folly. (Mr '22)

Raine, W. M. Fighting edge. (D '22)

Sabin, E. L. Desert dust. (Ag '22)

White, W.: P. Rider of Golden Bar. (Mr '22)

Willis, H. Judith of the goddess valley. (O '22)

Young, E. G. Homestead ranch. (Jl '22)

Virginia

Tyler, G. V. Children of transgression. (Jl '22)

Wales

Gibbon, M. M. Pharisees. (Ap '22)

Washington (state)

Shedd, G. C. Cryder. (D '22)

Love stories

Bassett, S. W. Granite and clay. (N '22)

Burnett, F. H. Robin. (S '22)

Calthrop, D. C. Tremendous adventures. (D '22)

Dell, E. M. Charles Rex. (O '22)

Hall, A. B. Heart's justice. (Ja '23)

Harris, C. M. Eyes of love. (S '22)

Jewell, E. A. Moth decides. (D '22)

King, B. Dust flower. (D '22)

McCarter, M. Homeland. (O '22)

Maxwell, W.: B. Spinster of this parish. (O '22)

Oemler, M. Two shall be born. (N '22)

Reynolds, G. M. Judgment of Charis. (O '22)

Marriage

Deland, M. W. Vehement flame. (Jl '22)

Fitzgerald, F. S. K. Beautiful and damned. (Ap '22)

Frankau, G. Love story of Aliette Brunton. (Jl '22)

Fyfe, H.: H. Fruit of the tree. (O '22)

Holding, E. S. Unlit lamp. (D '22)

Hudson, S. Elinor Colhouse. (Ap '22)

Kerr, S. One thing is certain. (O '22)

MacConnell, S. W. One. (Mr '22)

Mander, J. Strange attraction. (Ja '23)

Turner, J.: H. Where your treasure is—. (Jl '22)

Ministers of the gospel

Widdemer, M. Ministers of grace. (N '22)

Mormons

Benoit, P. Salt Lake. (Je '22)

Mountaineers

Bindloss, H. Northwest! (O '22)

Moving pictures

Putnam, N. Laughter limited. (D '22)

Vance, L.: J. Linda Lee incorporated. (Jl '22)

Wilson, H. L. Merton of the movies. (Jl '22)

Musicians

Hutchinson, H. Chanting wheels. (My '22)

Paul, E. H. Indelible. (Ag '22)

Pryde, A., pseud. Clair de Lune. (D '22)

Mystery stories

Angellotti, M. P. Three black bags. (N '22)

Benét, W.: R. First person singular. (Jl '22)

Binns, O. Lady of North Star. (Ap '22)

Boyle, C. N. What became of Mr Desniond. (O '22)

Bridges, V. Greensea Island. (Ap '22)

Cade, C. T. Cornish penny. (Ap '22)

Carlyle, A. Fugitive millionaire. (N '22)

Chesterton, G. K. Man who knew too much. (Ja '23)

Christie, A. Secret adversary. (S '22)

Cohen, O. R. Midnight. (Mr '22)

Dawson, C. W.: Vanishing point. (Je '22)

Dejeans, E. Romance of a million dollars. (N '22)

Dutton, C.: J. Out of the darkness. (Ap '22)

Fletcher, J. S. Middle of things. (D '22)

Fletcher, J. S. Ravensdene court. (Ag '22)

Fletcher, J. S. Rayner-Slade amalgamation. (My '22)

Fletcher, J. S. Scarhaven Keep. (Mr '22)

Fox, D.: Ethel opens the door. (Mr '22)

Gartland, H. House of cards. (Mr '22)

Gaul, A. Five nights at the Five Pines. (N '22)

Gull, C. A. E.: R. City in the clouds. (My '22)

Hansen, R. Two dead men. (S '22)

Harvey, M. Mystery of the hidden room. (Ja '23)

Hervey, A. Caravans by night. (My '22)

Hext, H., pseud. Number 87. (Je '22)

Johnston, W.: Tragedy at the Beach club. (My '22)

Jordan, E. G. Blue circle. (Jl '22)

Kelland, C. B. Conflict. (My '22)

Lauriston, V.: Twenty-first burr. (Ja '23)

Lee, J. Mysterious office. (Ja '23)

Le Queux, W.: T. Golden face. (N '22)

Le Queux, W.: T. Secret telephone. (O '22)

Le Queux, W.: T. Stretton street affair. (Je '22)

Lincoln, N. S. Cat's paw. (N '22)

Lock, G. E. Red cavalier. (F '23)

Lowndes, M. A. What Timmy did. (My '22)

MacGowan, A., and Newberry, P. Million-dollar suitcase. (My '22)

Martin, A. Kastle Kraggs. (Ja '23)

Milne, A. A. Red House mystery. (My '22)

Oppenheim, E.: P. Evil shepherd. (Ja '23)

Ostrander, I. E. Above suspicion. (F '23)
 Ostrander, I. E. McCarty incog. (F '23)
 Ostrander, I. E. Tattooed arm. (N '22)
 Packard, F. L. Doors of the night. (Je '22)
 Parrish, R. Case and the girl. (Je '22)
 Pertwee, R. Men of affairs. (Ag '22)
 Phillipotts, E. Red Redmaynes. (Ja '23)
 Porter, R. N. Rest Hollow mystery. (N '22)
 Prosper, J. Gold-Killer. (Ag '22)
 Pryde, A., pseud., and Weekes, R. K. Purple pearl. (Ap '22)
 Punshon, E. R. Bittermeads mystery. (O '22)
 Rees, A. J. Moon rock. (My '22)
 Regis, J. No. 13 Toroni. (Ja '23)
 Rohmer, S., pseud. Fire-Tongue. (Mr '22)
 Sutphen, W. G. Van T. In jeopardy. (N '22)
 Taubman-Goldie, V. F. Case of Sir Edward Talbot. (S '22)
 Terhune, A. P. Black gold. (Ap '22)
 Terhune, A. P. Black Caesar's clan. (Ja '23)
 Thayer, L. Q. E. D. (Je '22)
 Thorne, P. and M. Secret toll. (S '22)
 Tyson, J. A. Scarlet tanager. (Je '22)
 Wells, C. Mystery girl. (Je '22)
 Wells, C. Vanishing of Betty Varian. (S '22)
 Wickham, H. Scarlet X. (Ja '23)
 Williams, S. C. Body in the blue room. (Jl '22)
 Williams, V. Yellow streak. (Jl '22)

Mysticism

Beck, L. A. Key of dreams. (F '23)

Negro problem

Shands, H. A. White and black. (Je '22)
 Stribling, T. S. Birthright. (My '22)
 Wood, C. Nigger. (D '22)

Negro stories

Cobb, I. S. J. Poindexter, colored. (S '22)
 Cohen, O. R. Assorted chocolates. (D '22)
 Wiley, H. Lady Luck. (Mr '22)
 Wiley, H. Lily. (D '22)

Old age

Andrews, N. Finding youth. (Je '22)

Politics

Banning, M. C. Spellbinders. (N '22)
 Masters, E. L. Children of the market place. (My '22)
 Thompson, L. B., and Hubbard, G. Without compromise. (Ap '22)

Prehistoric times

Roberts, C. G. D. In the morning of time. (My '22)

Prophecies (novels of the future)

Oppenheim, E. P. Great Prince Shan. (Ap '22)

Psychoanalysis

Barker, E. Fielding Sargent. (D '22)
 O'Higgins, H. J. Some distinguished Americans. (D '22)
 Wells, H. G. Secret places of the heart. (Jl '22)

Psychological novels

Armstrong, H. H. For richer, for poorer. (O '22)
 Atherton, G. F. Black oxen. (F '23)
 Aumonier, S. Heartbeat. (S '22)
 Bellamy, F. R. Flash of gold. (N '22)
 Benson, E. F. Peter. (Ag '22)
 Blackwood, A. Bright messenger. (Je '22)
 Brown, A. Old Crow. (D '22)
 Bryant, M. Richard. (D '22)
 Buckrose, J. E., pseud. Privet hedge. (Ap '22)
 Chipp, E. Doubting Castle. (N '22)
 Deland, M. M. Vehement flame. (Je '22)
 Dennis, G. Mary Lee. (O '22)
 Dodd, L. W. Lilia Chenoworth. (My '22)
 Fisher, D. C. Rough-hewn. (N '22)
 Forster, E. M. Longest journey. (Je '22)
 Frank, W. D. Rahab. (My '22)
 Gibbon, M. M. Pharisees. (Ap '22)
 Hauptmann, G. Phantom. (F '23)
 Hecht, B. Gargoyles. (O '22)
 Hull, H. R. The quest. (Ja '23)

Lawrence, D. H. Aaron's rod. (Ag '22)
 Murry, J. M. Still life. (D '22)
 Murry, J. M. Things we are. (N '22)
 Nicolson, V. M. Dragon in shallow waters. (Mr '22)
 Palmer, J. Happy fool. (O '22)
 Poole, E. Millions. (O '22)
 Rinehart, M. R. Breaking point. (S '22)
 Rostand, M. Crystal coffin. (Ag '22)
 Rumsey, F. Ascent. (O '22)
 Scott, E. Narcissus. (Ag, N '22)
 Sinclair, M. Anne Severn and the Fieldings. (Ja '23)
 Sinclair, M. Life and death of Harriett Frean. (Mr '22)
 Swinnerton, F. Three lovers. (N '22)
 Tremaine, H. Tribal god. (Mr '22)
 West, R. The judge. (O '22)
 Whitham, J. M. Heretic. (S '22)
 Whitman, S. F. Sacrifice. (Jl '22)

Religion

Kaye-Smith, S. Tramping Methodist. (D '22)
 Lindsey, W. Backsliders. (My '22)

Religious psychology

Dennis, G. Mary Lee. (O '22)
 Mackenzie, C. Altar steps. (O '22)
 Walpole, H. The cathedral. (D '22)

Roman Catholic faith

Ayscough, J. pseud. Mariquita. (O '22)
 Borden, L. P. Gates of Olivet. (Ja '23)
 O'Donovan, G. Vocations. (My '22)
 Scott, M. J. Mother Machree. (F '23)

Romance

Bailey, H. C. His Serene Highness. (My '22)
 Beck, L. A. Key of dreams. (F '23)
 Broster, D. K. Yellow poppy. (Jl '22)
 Byrne, D. Wind bloweth. (N '22)
 Chapin, M. L. Stone in the path. (F '23)
 Child, R. W. Hands of Nara. (Ap '22)
 Crawford, J. I walked in Arden. (Jl '22)
 Drago, H. S. Suzanna. (F '23)
 Dunsany, E. J. M. D. P. Don Rodriguez. (O '22)
 Farnol, J. Peregrine's progress. (N '22)
 Fraser, C. M'lord o' the white road. (N '22)
 Graves, C. I. M. The just steward. (D '22)
 Johnston, M. Silver cross. (Ap '22)
 Locke, W. J. Tale of Triona. (N '22)
 Lombardi, C. At sight of gold. (O '22)
 McCutcheon, G. B. Viola Gwyn. (N '22)
 MacGrath, H. Ragged edge. (Mr '22)
 Marquand, J. P. Unspeakable gentleman. (Ag '22)
 Maxwell, W. B. Spinster of this parish. (O '22)
 Orczy, E. M. Nicolette. (O '22)
 Overton, J. My lady April. (N '22)
 Rowland, H. C. Hirondelle. (Ja '23)
 Springer, N. Blood ship. (Ja '23)
 Sterrett, F. R. Amazing inheritance. (N '22)
 Stevenson, B. E. Kingmakers. (Ja '23)
 Van Vorst, M. Queen of Karmania. (Ag '22)
 Young, F. B. Red knight. (O '22)

School and college life

Leslie, S. Oppidan. (My '22)
 Lewis, W. Tutors' lane. (N '22)
 Nichols, B. Patchwork. (My '22)
 Raymond, E. Tell England. (S '22)
 Silvers, E. R. Ned Beals, freshman. (Jl '22)

Sea stories

Bone, D. W. Broken stowage. (Ag '22)
 Colcord, L. R. Instrument of the gods. (I '22)
 Connolly, J. B. Tide rips. (Je '22)
 Goulding, E. Fury. (F '23)
 Hopkins, W. J. She blows! and sparm at that! (My '22)
 Howard, F. M. Happy rascals. (Ag '22)
 Minnigerode, M. Oh, Susanna! (Ap '22)
 Williams, B. A. Black Pawl. (D '22)

Sex problems

Hergesheimer, J. Cytherea. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Fiction—Continued

Shakers

- Sears, C. E. Romance of Fiddler's Green. (My '22)

Short stories

- Adams, A. Amouretta landscape. (Jl '22)
 Adams, S. H. From a bench in our square. (F '23)
 Beaumont, G. Riders up! (D '22)
 Beck, L. A. Ninth vibration. (Ag '22)
 Bergengren, R. Gentlemen all and merry companions. (F '23)
 Bibesco, E. Balloons. (F '23)
 Bibesco, E. I have only myself to blame. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Bone, D. W. Broken stowage. (Ag '22)
 Chekhov, A. P. Cook's wedding. (My '22)
 Chesterton, G. K. Man who knew too much. (Ja '23)
 Cobb, I. S. Sundry accounts. (Jl '22)
 Cohen, O. R. Assorted chocolates. (D '22)
 Colcord, L. R. Instrument of the gods. (D '22)
 Connell, R. Sin of Monsieur Pettipon. (S '22)
 Connolly, J. B. Tide rips. (Je '22)
 Corkery, D. Hounds of Banba. (Ag '22)
 Dell, E. M. Odds. (Jl '22)
 Eytton, J. S. Dancing fakir. (Ja '23)
 Ferber, E. Gigolo. (D '22)
 Fitzgerald, F. S. K. Tales of the jazz age (D '22)
 Gerould, K. F. Valiant dust. (Ja '23)
 Goldberg, I., comp. and tr. Brazilian tales. (F '23)
 Hannay, J. O. Lady Bountiful. (Je '22)
 Harrison, M. St L. Da Silva's widow. (Ag '22)
 Hurst, F. Vertical city. (Ap '22)
 Huxley, A. Mortal coils. (Ag '22)
 Kinross, A. Truth about Vignolles. (Jl '22)
 Lawrence, D. H. England, my England. (Ja '23)
 Lyons, A. M. N. Market bundle. (N '22)
 Machen, A. House of souls. (Jl '22)
 Macklin, A. E., comp. and tr. Twenty-nine tales from the French. (Ap '22)
 Mansfield, K. Garden party. (Jl '22)
 Marquis, D. Revolt of the oyster. (F '23)
 Marshall, E. Heart of little Shikara. (D '22)
 Merrick, L. To tell you the truth (Ja '23)
 New Decameron: third volume. (F '23)
 Nicholson, M. Best laid schemes. (Jl '22)
 O'Brien, E. J. H., ed. Best short stories of 1921. (Mr '22)
 Popović, P. Jugo-Slav stories. (Mr '22)
 Robinson, F. A. Mastered men. (Je '22)
 Rohmer, S., pseud. Tales of Chinatown. (N '22)
 Stock, R. South of the line. (F '23)
 Tilden, W. T. It's all in the game. (My '22)
 Widmer, M. Minister of grace. (N '22)
 Wiley, H. Jade. (Mr '22)

Social conditions and problems

- Balmer, E. Breath of scandal. (O '22)
 Bottomé, P. Kingfisher. (Je '22)
 Cournos, J. Babel. (O '22)
 Grey, Z. Day of the beast. (O '22)
 Hutchinson, A. S. M. This freedom. (O '22)
 McAlister, F. A., pseud. Last mile. (F '23)
 Nicholson, M. Broken barriers. (N '22)
 Norris, K. Certain people of importance. (O '22)
 Orcutt, W. D. Balance. (Je '22)
 Patten, S. N. Mud Hollow. (O '22)
 Sinclair, U. They call me carpenter. (D '22)
 Tobenkin, E. The road. (Mr '22)

Society novels

- George, W. L. Her unwelcome husband. (O '22)
 McKenna, S. Secret victory. (Ap '22)
 Wharton, E. N. Glimpses of the moon. (S '22)

Sports and recreation

- Pearce, C. E. Queen of the paddock. (Ap '22)
 Tilden, W. T. It's all in the game. (My '22)

Supernatural phenomena

- Barnett, A. Man on the other side. (Ag '22)
 Beck, L. A. Ninth vibration. (Ag '22)
 Frazer, E. Secret partner. (S '22)
 Lee, J. B. Uncle Bijah's ghost. (Je '22)
 Machen, A. House of souls. (Jl '22)

Theater and stage life

- Aumonier, S. Heartbeat. (S '22)
 Beer, T. Fair rewards. (Ap, Je '22)
 Bernhardt, S. Idol of Paris. (Jl '22)
 Curtiss, P. E. Mummies in mufti. (Ja '23)

Translated stories

Danish

- Bruun, L. Van Zanten's happy days. (Ap, Je '22)
 Buchholtz, J. Egholm and his God. (Jl '22)
 Buchholtz, J. Miracles of Clara van Haag. (O '22)
 Gunnarsson, G. Guest the One-eyed. (Je '22)
 Hansen, R. Two dead men. (S '22)
 Mikkelsen, E. Frozen justice. (D '22)
 Nexø, M. A. Ditte: towards the stars. (D '22)

French

- Benoit, P. Salt Lake. (Je '22)
 Bordeaux, H. House that died. (Ja '23)
 Escholler, R. Illusion. (Je '22)
 France, A., pseud. Count Morlin, deputy. (F '23)
 France, A., pseud. Marguerite. (F '23)
 Gérard de Nerval. Daughters of fire. (Ja '23)
 Loti, P., pseud. Sahara. (O '22)
 Macklin, A. E., comp. and tr. Twenty-nine tales from the French. (Ap '22)
 Maran, R. Batouala. (S '22)
 Proust, M. Swann's way. (Ja '23)
 Ramuz, C. F. Reign of the evil one. (F '23)
 Rolland, R. Pierre and Luce. (Je '22)
 Rostand, H. Crystal coffin. (Ag '22)

German

- Mann, H. Patrioteer. (S '22)
 Wassermann, J. Goose man. (Ja '23)

Hungarian

- Tormay, C. The old house. (O '22)

Italian

- Panzini, A. Wanted—a wife. (D '22)
 Tozzi, F. Three crosses. (Mr '22)

Norwegian

- Bojer, J. God and woman. (Mr '22)
 Hamsun, K. Wanderers. (Ap '22)

Portuguese

- Goldberg, I., comp. and tr. Brazilian tales. (F '23)

Russian

- Chekhov, A. P. Cook's wedding. (My '22)

Serbian

- Popović, P. Jugo-Slav stories. (Mr '22)

Spanish

- Baroja y Nessi, P. The quest. (Ja '23)

Swedish

- Lagerlöf, S. O. L. Outcast. (Ap '22)

Unclassified

- Atkey, B. Winnie O'Wynn and the wolves. (Mr '22)
 Baring, M. Overlooked. (D '22)
 Begbie, H. Ways of laughter. (Ap '22)
 Bennett, A. Lilian. (D '22)
 Burt, K. Q. (Jl '22)
 Camp, C. W. Hidden road. (Ag '22)
 Chambrun, C. Playing with souls. (N '22)
 Comstock, H. At the crossroads. (Ag '22)
 Davey, H. N. Guinea girl. (Je '22)
 Gabriel, G. W. Jiminy. (Ag '22)
 Glyn, E. Man and maid. (Ag '22)
 Haines, A. C. Flower of the world. (N '22)
 Hamilton, C. Rustle of silk. (Jl '22)
 Johnston, H. H. Veneerings. (My '22)
 Kyne, P. B. Cappy Ricks retires. (O '22)
 Laing, J. Wintergreen. (N '22)

- Looms, G.: Stubble. (N '22)
 Merrel, C.: Love—and Diana. (Ag '22)
 Norris, K.: Lucretia Lombard. (My '22)
 Onions, O.: Tower of oblivion. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Pedler, M.: Moon out of reach. (Ag '23)
 Roche, A. S.: More honorable man. (Ja '23)
 Snaith, J. C.: The Van Room. (O '22)
 Thomson, E.: Afterglow. (S '22)
 Troubridge, L.: His Grace gives notice. (S '22)
 Young, F. E. M.: Stronger influence. (O '22)
- Women
- Banning, M. C.: Spellbinders. (N '22)
 Boyd, W.: Love legend. (D '22)
 Hutchinson, A. S. M.: This freedom. (O '22)
 Keable, R.: Mother of all living. (O '22)
 Sinclair, M.: Life and death of Harriett Freen. (Mr '22)
- Young people
- Benét, S. V.: Young people's pride. (O '22)
 Boyd, W.: Love legend. (D '22)
 Dalrymple, L.: Fool's hill. (D '22)
 Fitzgerald, F. S. K.: Beautiful and damned. (Ap '22)
 Fitzgerald, F. S. K.: Tales of the jazz age. (D '22)
 Gibbs, G. F.: House of Mohun. (S '22)
 Huxley, A. L.: Crome yellow. (Mr '22)
 Speare, D.: Dancers in the dark. (My '22)
 Tarkington, B.: Gentle Julia. (Je '22)
 Taylor, K. H.: Modern trio in an old town. (N '22)
 Tuckerman, A.: Breath of life. (D '22)
- Field, Eugene
 Fischer, H. W.: Abroad with Mark Twain and Eugene Field. (Jl '22)
- Field, Michael, pseud. (Katherine Harris Bradley, and Emma Edith Cooper)
 Sturgeon, M. C.: Michael Field. (N '22)
 Fielding Sargent, Barker, E. (D '22)
- Fields, Annie (Adams) (Mrs James Thomas Fields)
 Howe, M. A. de W.: Memories of a hostess. (N '22)
 Fifty-one years of Victorian life. Jersey, M. E. (F '23)
 Fighting edge. Raine, W. M. (D '22)
- Fiji Islands
 Brewster, A. B.: Hill tribes of Fiji. (Ja '23)
 Film. Wrigley, M. J. (Je '22)
- Finance
- Great Britain
- Porritt, E.: Fiscal and diplomatic freedom of the British oversea dominions. (F '23)
- United States
- National bureau of economic research. Income in the United States. (Mr '22)
- Finance, International
- Friedman, E. M.: International finance and its reorganization. (Mr '22)
 Finding youth. Andrews, G. N. (Je '22)
 Fire bird. Porter, G. S. (S '22)
 Fire-Tongue. Rohmer, S., pseud. (Mr '22)
 First million the hardest. Farquhar, A. B. (Jl '22)
 First person singular. Benét, W. R. (Jl '22)
 Fiscal and diplomatic freedom of the British oversea dominions. Porritt, E. (F '23)
- Fisheries
 Howell, G. C. L.: Ocean research and the great fisheries. (Jl '22)
- Fishing
 Hellner, V.: Adventures in angling. (Ag '22)
 Moore, P. H.: With gun and rod in Canada. (O '22)
 Smith, O. W.: Book of the pike. (D '22)
 Van Dyke, J. C.: Open spaces. (Je '22)
- Poetry
- Morris, J., and Adams, St C., comps.: Songs for fishermen. (F '23)
 Five nights at the Five Pines. Gaul, A. (N '22)
 Flaming Jewel. Chambers, R. W. (S '22)
 Flash of gold. Bellamy, F. R. (N '22)
- Flaubert, Gustave
 Sand, G.; pseud., and Flaubert, G.: George Sand-Gustave Flaubert letters. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Flight
- Thomson, J.: A. Haunts of life. (Je '22)
 Florence Nightingale. Reid, E. G. (F '23)
 Flower of fortune. Knipe, E. B., and A. A. (O '22)
 Flower of the world. Haines, A. C. (N '22)
- Flowers
- Waterfield, M.: Garden colour. (D '22)
- Flowers in poetry
- Singleton, F.: Shakespeare garden. (D '22)
 Flowing gold. Beach, R. E. (N '22)
 Flutter of the goldleaf. Dargan, O. T., and Peterson, F. (Ap '22)
- Fogazzaro, Antonio
 Gallarati-Scotti, T.: Life of Antonio Fogazzaro. (F '23)
- Folklore
- Fleming, R. M.: Ancient tales from many lands. (O '22)
- Azores
- Eells, E. S.: Islands of magic. (Ja '23)
- India
- Babbitt, E. C.: More Jataka tales. (Je '22)
- South Carolina
- Heywood, Du B., and Allen, H.: Carolina chansons. (F '23)
- Folklore, Irish
- O'Connor, N. J.: Battles and enchantments. (D '22)
- Food
- Bailey, E. H.: S., and H. S.: Food products from afar. (N '22)
 Holt, L. E.: Food, health and growth. (S '22)
 Wood, B. M.: Foods of the foreign-born in relation to health. (My '22)
 Food, health and growth. Holt, L. E. (S '22)
 Food products from afar. Bailey, E. H.: S., and H. S. (N '22)
 Foods of the foreign-born in relation to health. Wood, B. M. (My '22)
 Fool's hill. Dalrymple, L. (D '22)
- Football
- Haughton, P. D.: Football and how to watch it. (Ja '23)
 Football and how to watch it. Haughton, P. D. (Ja '23)
 For richer, for poorer. Armstrong, H. H. (O '22)
- Ford, Henry
 Bushnell, S. T.: Truth about Henry Ford. (Ag '22)
 Ford, H.: My life and work. (D '22)
 Ford car, truck and tractor repair. Good, A. A. (N '22)
- Foreign exchange
- Cassel, G.: Money and foreign exchange after 1914. (Ja '23)
 Furniss, E. S.: Foreign exchange. (Ag '22)
 Robertson, D. H.: Money. (Jl '22)
 Foreign exchange. Furniss, E. S. (Ag '22)
- Foreign language press
- Park, R. E.: Immigrant press and its control. (Mr '22)
- Foreign trade
- Aughinbaugh, W. E.: Advertising for trade in Latin-America. (Mr, Je '22)
 Cooper, C. S.: Foreign trade markets and methods. (Ap '22)
 Foreign trade markets and methods. Cooper, C. S. (Ap '22)
 Foreman and his job. Allen, C. R. (Mr '22)
- Foremen
- Allen, C. R.: Foreman and his job. (Mr '22)
 Forsythe saga. Galsworthy, J. (My '22)
 Fortnightly club. Hutchinson, H. G. (Ag '22)
 Fortune of the Indies. Price, E. B. (O '22)
 Foster mother. Eng title of Nène. Pérochon, E. (Ap '22)
- Fouquet, Nicholas
 France, A., pseud. Clio. (N '22)

Foundations

- Williams, C. C. Design of masonry structures and foundations. (Ja '23)
 Foundations of American nationality. Greene, E. G. (O '22)
 Foundations of Japan. Robertson Scott, J. W. (Je '22)

Founding

- Foundry, The. Foundrymen's handbook. (Ja '23)
 Foundrymen's handbook. Foundry, The. (Ja '23)
 Four and twenty minds. Papini, G. (O '23)
 Four hour day in coal. Archbald, H. (My '22)
 Four plays for dancers. Yeats, W. B. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual) Foursquare. Richmond, G. L. (N '22)
 1492. Johnston, M. (D '22)
 14,000 miles through the air. Smith, R. M. (My '22)

Fourth dimension

- Ouspensky, P. D. Tertium organum. (D '22)

FranceDescription and travel

- Wister, O. Neighbors henceforth. (Ja '23)

Economic conditions

- MacDonald, W. Reconstruction in France. (S '22)

History*House of Valois, 1328-1589*

- Bridge, J. S. C. History of France from the death of Louis XI. (Ja '23)

Revolution, 1789-1799

- Allen, G. H. French révolution. (F '23)
 La Tour du Pin de Gouvernet, H. L. Recollections of the revolution and the empire. (Mr '22)
 Stephens, W. Women of the French revolution. (D '22)

Consulate and empire, 1799-1815

- La Tour du Pin de Gouvernet, H. L. Recollections of the revolution and the empire. (Mr '22)

Second empire, 1852-1870

- Guedalla, P. Second empire. (D '22)

Third republic, 1870

- Stannard, H. Gambetta and the foundation of the third republic. (D '22)

Politics and government

- Lyon, L. Pomp of power. (N '22)

Relations (general) with England

- Tout, T. F. France and England. (F '23)
 France, Anatole, pseud., (Jacques Anatole Thibault)
 France, A. pseud. Opinions of Anatole France. (S '22)
 France and England. Tout, T. F. (F '23)
 Francis Joseph I, emperor of Austria
 Margutti, A. A. V. Emperor Francis Joseph and his times. (Je '22)
 Frank of Freedom hill. Derieux, S. A. (Ag '22)
 Franklin. Mackay, C. D'A. (Ag '22)
 Franklin, Benjamin

Drama

- Mackay, C. D'A. Franklin. (Ag '22)

Free speechBibliography

- Schroeder, T. A. Free speech bibliography. (My '22)
 Free speech bibliography. Schroeder, T. A. (My '22)
 Free trade and protection
 Taussig, F. W., comp. Selected readings in international trade and tariff problems. (Je '22)

Freight and freightage

- Loree, L. F. Railroad freight transportation. (Ja '23)

French drama

- Jourdain, E. F. Dramatic theory and practice in France. (Je '22)

French literature

- France, A., pseud. On life and letters. (S '22)
 Strachey, L. Books and characters. (Ag '22)

History and criticism

- Carrère, J. Degeneration in the great French masters. (F '23)
 Finch, M. B., and Peers, E. A. Origins of French romanticism. (Mr '22)
 Gourmont, R. de. Book of masks. (My '22)
 French pictures and their painters. Bryant, L. M. (Ja '23)

French poetry

- Cohen, H. L. Lyric forms from France. (F '23)
 French revolution. Allen, G. H. (F '23)
 Frequented ways. Newbigin, M. I. (N '22)
 Fresh every hour. Toohey, J. P. (Je '22)
 Friday nights. Garnett, E. (Jl '22)

Friends, Society of

- Jones, R. M. Later periods of Quakerism. (Jl '22)

Frightful plays. Brooks, C. S. (N '22)

- From a bench in our square. Adams, S. H. (F '23)

- From Berlin to Bagdad and Babylon. Zahm, J. A. (F '23)

- From Gladstone to Lloyd George. Mackintosh, A. (S '22)

- From Harrison to Harding. Dunn, A. W. (N '22)

- From seven to seventy. Simmons, E. (F '23)
 From the life. Eng title of Some distinguished Americans. O'Higgins, H. J. (D '22)

- Frontiers of the after life. Randall, C. C. (F '23)

- Frozen justice. Milkelsen, E. (D '22)

Fruit culture

- Gardner, V. R., and others. Fundamentals of fruit production. (N '22)
 Fruit of the tree. Fyfe, H. H. (O '22)

Fuel

- Bacon, R. F., and Hamor, W. A. American fuels. (Ja '23)

- Fugitive millionaire. Carlyle, A. (N '22)
 Full up and fed up. Williams, W. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Fundamental conceptions of psychoanalysis.

- Brill, A. A. (Mr '22)

- Fundamentals of accounting. Cole, W. M., and Geddes, A. E. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- Fundamentals of Christianity. Vedder, H. C. (Ap '22)

- Fundamentals of fiction writing. Hoffman, A. S. (F '23)

- Fundamentals of fruit production. Gardner, V. R., and others. (N '22)

- Furness, Horace Howard

- Furness, H. H. Letters. (N '22)

Furniture

- Carrick, A. Van L. Next-to-nothing house. (Ja '23)

- Cornelius, C. O. Furniture masterpieces of Duncan Phyfe. (F '23)

- Gade, F. Collecting antiques for pleasure and profit. (Ap '22)

- Holloway, E. S. Practical book of furnishing the small house and apartment. (Ja '23)

- Furniture masterpieces of Duncan Phyfe. Cornelius, C. O. (F '23)

- Further adventures of Lad. Terhune, A. P. (S '22)

- Fury. Goulding, E. (F '23)

- Future of the churches. Babson, R. W. (Jl '22)

- Gambetta, Léon Michel

- Stannard, H. Gambetta and the foundation of the third republic. (D '22)

- Gambetta and the foundation of the third republic. Stannard, H. (D '22)

- Game and game birds

- Hawker, P. Instructions to young sportsmen. (D '22)

- Games

- Gelster, E. It is to laugh. (My '22)

Gantt chart. Clark, W. (S '22)
 Garden colour. Waterfield, M. (D '22)
 Garden of the West. Driscoll, L. (N '22)
 Garden party. Mansfield, K. (Jl '22)
 Garden wisdom. Gwynn, S. L. (Je '22)

Gardening

Finck, H. T. Gardening with brains. (Mr, Je '22)
 Gardening. Stout, A. B. (Je '22)
 Gardening with brains. Finck, H. T. (Mr, Je '22)

Gardens

Singleton, E. Shakespeare garden. (D '22)
 Waterfield, M. Garden colour. (D '22)
 Gargoyles. Hecht, B. (O '22)
 Gas chemists handbook. American gas association. Technical section. (Ja '23)

Gases

Analysis

American gas association. Technical section. Gas chemists handbook. (Ja '23)
 Gate of cedar. Morse, K. (Je '22)
 Gates of Olivet. Borden, L. F. (Ja '23)

Gauguin, Paul

Gauguin, P. Letters to Georges Daniel de Monfried. (Ag, N '22)

Gelatin

Bogue, R. H. Chemistry and technology of gelatin and glue. (Ja '23)

Gems

Kozminsky, I. Magic and science of jewels and stones. (Ap '22)
 General Bramble. Maurois, A. (Jl '22)
 General economic geology. Emmons, W. H. (Ag '22)
 General Robert E. Lee after Appomattox. Riley, F. L., ed. (Je '22)

Genoa conference, 1922

Mills, J. S. Genoa conference. (D '22)
 Gentle Julia. Tarkington, B. (Je '22)
 Gentlemen all and merry companions. Bergen-gren, R. (F '23)

Geographical myths

Babcock, W. H. Legendary islands of the Atlantic. (D '22)

Geography

History

Stevenson, E. L. Terrestrial and celestial globes. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Geography, Medieval

Babcock, W. H. Legendary islands of the Atlantic. (D '22)

Geology, Economic

Emmons, W. H. General economic geology. (Ag '22)

George Gissing. Yates, M. (Ja '23)

George Sand-Gustave Flaubert letters. Sand, G., pseud., and Flaubert, G. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

George Washington. Thayer, W. R. (D '22)

German drama

Manthey-Zorn, O. Germany in travail. (N '22)

Germany

Constitution

Brunet, R. New German constitution. (Jl '22)

Description and travel

Fraprie, F. R. Spell of the Rhine. (Jl '22)

Economic conditions

Brinckmeyer, H. Hugo Stinnes. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Foreign relations

Eckardstein, H. Ten years at the court of St James'. (Je '22)

Intellectual life

Manthey-Zorn, O. Germany in travail. (N '22)

Politics and government

Brunet, R. New German constitution. (Jl '22)

Germany and the western empire. Cambridge mediaeval history. (S '22)

Germany in travail. Manthey-Zorn, O. (N '22)
 Getting your money's worth. Lord, I. E. (Ap '22)

Getting your name in print. McCauley, H. S. (F '23)

Ghost girl. Saltus, E. E. (O '22)

Gibbons, James, cardinal
 Will, A. S. Life of Cardinal Gibbons. (F '23)

Gift of the desert. Parrish, R. (N '22)

Gigolo. Ferber, E. (D '22)

Gild socialism

Carpenter, N. Guild socialism. (Ja '23)

Gilds

Penty, A. J. Post-industrialism. (N '22)

Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina. Pyne, Z. K. (O '22)

Gipsies

Brown, I. Nights and days on the gypsy trail. (Ja '23)

Girls

Saywell, E. Growing girl. (N '22)

Girl's book of verse. Davis, M. G. (D '22)

Gissing, George

Yates, M. George Gissing. (Ja '23)

Give me the young. Holmes, E. G. A. (Jl '22)

Giving and receiving. Lucas, E. V. (Ja '23)

Gladstone, William Ewart

West, A. E. Private diaries. (D '22)

Glance toward Shakespeare. Chapman, J. J. (Je '22)

Gland stealers. Gayton, B. (Ja '23)

Glands, Ductless

Harrow, B. Glands in health and disease. (Ag '22)

Glands in health and disease. Harrow, B. (Ag '22)

Glimpses of authors. Ticknor, C. (D '22)

Glimpses of the moon. Wharton, E. N. (S '22)

Globes

Stevenson, E. L. Terrestrial and celestial globes. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Glory of English prose. Coleridge, S. (D '22)

Glue

Bogue, R. H. Chemistry and technology of gelatin and glue. (Ja '23)

God

Beckwith, C. A. Idea of God. (Ja '23)

Gore, C. Belief in God. (Ap '22)

Maeterlinck, M. Great secret. (Jl '22)

God and woman. Bojer, J. (Mr '22)

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von

Goethe, J. W. von. Goethe's literary essays. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Goethe's literary essays. Goethe, J. W. von. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Gold-Killer. Prosper, J. (Ag '22)

Golden face. Le Queux, W. T. (N '22)

Goldie, Valentine Francis Taubman-. See Taubman-Goldie, V. F. (S '22)

Goldie Green. Merwin, S. (Je '22)

Golf

Leitch, C. Golf. (F '23)

Wethered, R. H., and J. Golf from two sides. (D '22)

Golf from two sides. Wethered, R. H., and J. (D '22)

Good news. Bell, B. I. (S '22)

Goose man. Wassermann, J. (Ja '23)

Government employees

Procter, A. W. Principles of public personnel administration. (Mr '22)

Government ownership

Hobson, J. A. Incentives in the new industrial order. (F '23)

Goya as a portrait painter. Beruete y Moret, A. de. (F '23)

Goya y Lucientes, Francisco José de

Beruete y Moret, A. de. Goya as a portrait painter. (F '23)

Graded list of books for children. National education association of the United States. Library department. (O '22)

Grafton, Henry Fitzroy, 1st duke of

Fitzroy, A. W. Henry, duke of Grafton. (Jl '22)

Granite and alabaster. Holden, R. (F '23)

Granite and clay. Bassett, S. W. (N '22)

Grant, Allan, pseud. See Smith, A. D. H. (Je '22)

Grant Douglas, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (S, N '22)

Graphic methods

Clarke, W. Gantt chart. (S '22)

Graphology

French, W. L. Psychology of handwriting. (F '23)

Gravitation

Poor, C. L. Gravitation versus relativity. (F '23)

Gravitation versus relativity. Poor, C. L. (F '23)

Grayson, David, pseud. See Baker, R. S. (D '22)

Great adventure at Washington. Sullivan, M. (Jl '22)

Great Britain

Civilization

Fitzpatrick, B. Ireland and the making of Britain. (Mr '22)

Colonies and dominions

Adams, R. G. Political ideas of the American revolution. (Ja '23)

Hearnshaw, F. J. C. Democracy and the British empire. (Je '22)

Robinson, J. H. Development of the British Empire. (Ja '23)

Commercial policy

Porritt, E. Fiscal and diplomatic freedom of the British oversea dominions. (F '23)

Court and courtiers

Eckardstein, H. Ten years at the court of St. James'. (Je '22)

Wilson, V. A. Queen Elizabeth's maids of honour. (N '22)

Foreign relations

Eckardstein, H. Ten years at the court of St. James'. (Je '22)

Rowell, N. W. British empire and world peace. (N '22)

United States

Newton, J. F. Preaching in London. (N '22)

History

Robinson, J. H. Development of the British Empire. (Ja '23)

Lancaster and York, 1399-1485

Bennett, H. S. Pastors and their England. (S '22)

Flemming, J. H. England under the Lancastrians. (Ap '22)

Tudors, 1485-1603

Mumby, F. A. Fall of Mary Stuart. (Ap '22)

19th century

Inge, W. R. Victorian age. (O '22)

Trevelyan, G. M. British history in the nineteenth century. (S '22)

Parliament

Lucy, H. Lords and commoners. (S '22)

Mackintosh, A. From Gladstone to Lloyd George. (S '22)

House of commons

Belloc, H. House of commons and monarchy. (Mr '22)

Politics and government

Bailey, J. Some political ideas and persons. (Ag '22)

Hearnshaw, F. J. C. Democracy and the British empire. (Je '22)

Lyon, L. Pomp of power. (N '22)

Mackintosh, A. From Gladstone to Lloyd George. (S '22)

West, A. E. Private diaries. (D '22)

Great Lakes region

Downing, E. R. Naturalist in the Great Lakes region. (Ag '22)

Great Prince Shan. Oppenheim, E. P. (Ap '22)

Great secret. Maeterlinck, M. (Jl '22)

Great war as I saw it. Scott, F. G. (D '22)

Great white south. Ponting, H. G. (Ag '22)

Greater Roumania. Clark, C. U. (Mr '22)

Greece

Civilization

Livingstone, R. W., ed. Legacy of Greece. (O '22)

History

Botsford, G. W. Hellenic history. (O '22)

James, H. R. Our Hellenic heritage. (Ap '22)

Greek literature

History

Powell, J. U., and Barber, E. A., eds. New chapters in the history of Greek literature. (F '23)

Greek poetry

Collections

Leaf, W., tr. Little poems from the Greek. (Ag '22)

Greek vase-painting. Buschor, E. (Mr '22)

Greeks in America. Xenides, J. P. (N '22)

Greeks in the United States

Xenides, J. P. Greeks in America. (N '22)

Green goddess. Miln, L. (N '22)

Greenland

Rasmussen, K. J. V. Greenland along the Polar sea. (My '22)

Greenland along the Polar sea. Rasmussen, K. J. V. (My '22)

Greensea Island. Bridges, V. (Ap '22)

Grenville family

Fiction

Newbolt, H. J. Book of the Grenvilles. (Mr '22)

Grey riders. Van de Water, F. F. (Ja '23)

Grover Cleveland. Hugins, R. (F '23)

Growing girl. Saywell, E. (N '22)

Growth

Emerson, W. R. P. Nutrition and growth in children. (My '22)

Gruach and Britain's daughter. Bottomley, G. (S '22)

Guest the One-eyed. Gunnarsson, G. (Je '22)

Guild socialism. Carpenter, N. (Ja '23)

Guilt souls. Nichols, R. M. B. (O '22)

Guinea girl. Davey, H. N. (Je '22)

Gurney family

Lubbock, P. Earlham. (Ja '23)

Gypsying through Central America. Cunningham, E. (D '22)

Habit

Dewey, J. Human nature and conduct. (Ap '22)

Hairy ape; Anna Christie; First man. O'Neill, E. G. (O '22)

Half century of naval service. Schroeder, S. (Jl '22)

Hall, Holworthy, pseud. See Porter, H. E. (Ja '23)

Halsey, Frank Davis. See McAlister, F. A., pseud. (F '23)

Hamsun, Knut

Larsen, H. A. Knut Hamsun. (Ja '23)

Handbook for business letter writers. Bonney, L. E., and Cole, C. P. (Ja '23)

Handbook of chemical engineering. Liddell, D. M., ed. (Ja '23)

Handbook of ethical theory. Fullerton, G. S. (D '22)

Handbook of municipal government. Fassett, C. M. (Jl '22)

Hands of Nara. Child, R. W. (Ap '22)

Happy fool. Palmer, J. (O '22)

Happy rascals. Howard, F. M. (Ag '22)

Happyland's fairy grotto plays. Stapp, E. B., and Cameron, E. (O '22)

Hardy, Thomas

Beach, J. W. Technique of Thomas Hardy. (Ja '23)

Chew, S. C. Thomas Hardy, poet and novelist. (Ag '22)

Hopkins, R. T. Thomas Hardy's Dorset. (Ag '22)

Harlem shadows. McKay, C. (Jl '22)

Harriman, Edward Henry
 Kennan, G.: E. H. Harriman. (Je '22)

Hassan, Flecker, J. E. (Ja '23)

Haunting. Scott, C. A. D.- (Je '22)

Haunts of life. Thomson, J. A. (Je '22)

Hawaiian islands
 Greenbie, S.: Pacific triangle. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Hazlitt, William
 Howe, P. P.: Life of William Hazlitt. (Ja '23)

He knew Lincoln. Tarbell, I. M. (Jl '22)

Head of the house of Coombe. Burnett, F. (Mr '22)

Health education and the nutrition class. Bureau of educational experiments, New York. (Jl '22)

Health service in industry. Clark, W.: I. (N '22)

Healthy child from two to seven. Maccarthy, F. H. (D '22)

Heart of little Shikara. Marshall, E. (D '22)

Heart of nature. Younghusband, F. (O '22)

Heartbeat. Aumonier, S. (S '22)

Heart's justice. Hall, A. B. (Ja '23)

Heat
Conduction
 Royds, R.: Heat transmission by radiation, conduction and convection. (Ja '23)

Royds, R.: Heat transmission in boilers, condensers and evaporators. (Ja '23)

Radiation and absorption
 Royds, R.: Heat transmission by radiation, conduction and convection. (Ja '23)

Heat transmission by radiation, conduction and convection. Royds, R. (Ja '23)

Heat transmission in boilers, condensers and evaporators. Royds, R. (Ja '23)

Heavens. Untermeyer, L. (My '22)

Helga and the white peacock. Meigs, C. (O '22)

Hellenic history. Botsford, G. W. (O '22)

Henry VI, king of England
 Christie, M. E.: Henry VI. (My '22)

Henry, duke of Grafton. Fitzroy, A. W. (Jl '22)

Hepplestall's. Brighthouse, H. (Je '22)

Her unwelcome husband. George, W. L. (O '22)

Heraldry
 Cole, H.: Heraldry and floral forms as used in decoration. (Ja '23)

Heraldry and floral forms as used in decoration. Cole, H. (Ja '23)

Heredity
 Chapin, H. D.: Heredity and child culture. (F '23)

Cunningham, J. T.: Hormones and heredity. (Ja '23)

Heredity and child culture. Chapin, H. D. (F '23)

Heretic. Whitham, J. M. (S '22)

Heritage of the hills. Hankins, A. P. (My '22)

Herman Melville, mariner and mystic. Weaver, R. M. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Heywood, John
 Bolwell, R. W.: Life and works of John Heywood. (Ja '23)

Hidden places. Sinclair, B. W. (Mr '22)

Hidden road. Camp, C. W. (Ag '22)

Higginson, Henry Lee
 Perry, B.: Life and letters of Henry Lee Higginson. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Higginson, Nesta. See O'Neill, M., pseud. (My '22)

High schools
 Book, W. F.: Intelligence of high school seniors. (F '23)

Hill of adventure. Aldon, A. (O '22)

Hill tribes of Fiji. Brewster, A. E. (Ja '23)

Himalaya mountains
 Younghusband, F.: Heart of nature. (O '22)

Hirondelle. Rowland, H. C. (Ja '23)

His dog. Terhune, A. P. (Je '22)

His Grace gives notice. Troubridge, L. (S '22)

His Serene Highness. Bailey, H. C. (My '22)

His soul goes marching on. Andrews, M. R. S. (Jl '22)

Historic Paris. Wolff, J. S. (Ap '22)

History

Dictionaries

Larned, J. N.: New Larned history. (F '23)

Historiography

Shotwell, J. T.: Introduction to the history of history. (Jl '22)

Philosophy

Croce, B.: History; its theory and practice. (My '22)

History, Modern

Fueter, E.: World history, 1814-1920. (Ja '23)

History, Universal

Wells, H. G.: Short history of the world. (Ja '23)

History and nature of international relations. Walsh, E. A., ed. (D '22)

History of art. Faure, E. (O '22)

History of California. Chapman, C. E. (S '22)

History of California. Cleland, R. G. (D '22)

History of European and American sculpture. Post, C. R. (Jl '22)

History of everyday things in England. Quennell, M., and C. H. B. (O '22)

History of France from the death of Louis XI. Bridge, J. S. C. (Ja '23)

History of labour. Stone, G. (Jl '22)

History of Minnesota. Folwell, W. W. (Je '22)

History of public poor relief in Massachusetts, 1620-1920. Kelso, R. W. (Ja '23)

History of social thought. Bogardus, E. S. (My '22)

History of Switzerland. Oechsli, W. (D '22)

History of the Balkan peninsula. Schevill, F. (O '22)

History of the great war. Buchan, J. (D '22)

History of the Latin-American nations. Robertson, W. S. (N '22)

History of the United States since the Civil war. Oberholtzer, E. H. (S '22)

History of trade unionism in the United States. Perlman, S. (F '23)

Hoax. Wills, R. (Ag '22)

Hohenzollern, Frederick William Victor August. See Frederick W. V. A. (Ag '22)

Holy alliance. Cresson, W. P.: Holy alliance. (F '23)

Holy Land and Syria. Carpenter, F. G. (Ja '23)

Home economics

Hill, J. M.: Up-to-date waitress. (D '22)

Lord, I. E.: Getting your money's worth. (Ap '22)

Streeter, B.: Homemaking simplified. (S '22)

Home life of Swinburne. Watts-Dunton, C. (O '22)

Home of fadeless splendour. Whittingham, G. N. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Home radio. Verrill, A. H. (Je '22)

Homeland. McCarter, M. (O '22)

Homemaking simplified. Streeter, B. (S '22)

Homestead ranch. Young, E. G. (Jl '22)

Homesteader's portfolio. Pratt, A. D. (F '23)

Honor of the church. Brown, C. R. (S '22)

Hoosier autobiography. Foulke, W. D. (Ja '23)

Hop pickers. Canfield, F. A. (O '22)

Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus)

Showerman, G.: Horace and his influence. (F '23)

Horace and his influence. Showerman, G. (F '23)

Hormones

Cunningham, J. T.: Hormones and heredity. (Ja '23)

Hormones and heredity. Cunningham, J. T. (Ja '23)

Horny hands and hampered elbows. Williams, W. (F '23)

Horse racing

Cox, H. E.: de F. Chasing and racing. (N '22)

Horses

Legends and stories

Grew, D.: Beyond rope and fence. (N '22)

Hotels, taverns, etc.

England

Matz, B. W.: Dickensian inns and taverns. (F '23)

- Houdini's paper magic. Houdini, H. (Ag '22)
Hounds of Banba. Corkery, D. (Ag '22)
Hour of magic. Davies, W. H. (F '23)
- House decoration
Burbank, E. Be your own decorator. (F '23)
Carrick, A. Van L. Next-to-nothing house. (Ja '23)
Holloway, E. S. Practical book of furnishing the small house and apartment. (Ja '23)
Jakway, B. C. Principles of interior decoration. (Jl '22)
Townsend, R. T., ed. Country Life book of building and decoration. (My '22)
House decorations and repairs. Prebble, W. (Jl '22)
House of adventure. Deeping, W. (S '22)
House of cards. Gartland, H. (Mr '22)
House of commons and monarchy. Belloc, H. (Mr '22)
House of Mohun. Gibbs, G. F. (S '22)
House of Rimmon. Watts, M. S. (My '22)
House of souls. Machen, A. (Jl '22)
House on Charles street. (Ap '22)
House-owner's book. Churchill, A. L., and Wickenden, L. (S '22)
- House painting
Prebble, W. House decorations and repairs. (Jl '22)
House that died. Bordeaux, H. (Ja '22)
How England is governed. Masterman, C. F. G. (S '22)
How to be useful and happy from sixty to ninety. Smith, A. L. (D '22)
How to get the job you want. Fletcher, W. L. (Mr '22)
How to make commercial type radio apparatus. Sleeper, M. B. (Ja '23)
How to make things electrical. (Jl '22)
How to measure in education. McCall, W. A. (Jl '22)
How to run a store. Whitehead, H. (Ap '22)
How to sell at retail. Charters, W. W. (Ag '22)
- Howells, William Dean
Cooke, D. G. William Dean Howells. (Ja '23)
- Hugo Münsterberg. Münsterberg, M. A. A. (O '22)
Human factor in business. Rowntree, B. S. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Human factors in industry. Tipper, H. (O '22)
Human nature and conduct. Dewey, J. (Ap '22)
Human nature in the Bible. Phelps, W. L. (F '23)
- Humanism
Haldane, R. B. H. Philosophy of humanism. (N '22)
Humbug. De La Pasture, E. E. M. (Ap, Je '22)
- Humor
Adams, F. P. Overset. (Ja '23)
Ade, G. Single blessedness, and other observations. (Ja '23)
Benchley, R. C. Love conquers all. (Ja '23)
Birdwood, W. D., pseud. Euclid's outline of sex. (Ja '23)
Chappell, G. S. My northern exposure. (N '22)
Chappell, G. S. Rollo in society. (O '22)
Coward, N. Terribly intimate portraits (S '22)
Crutch, P. A., pseud. Queen of Sheba. (S '22)
Herford, O. Neither here nor there. (Ja '23)
Johnston, W. T., ed. Bill Johnston's joy book. (S '22)
Leacock, S. My discovery of England. (Ag '22)
Mosher, M. D. comp. More toasts. (F '23)
Nonsenseorship. (O '22)
Notion-counter. (D '22)
Reflections of a T. B. M. (My '22)
Stewart, D. O. Perfect behavior. (F '23)
Taylor, B. L. So-called human race. (Je '22)
- Humorists, American
Masson, T. L. Our American humorists. (F '23)
- Huneker, James Gibbons
Huneker, J. G. Letters. (D '22)
- Hunters of the great north. Stefánsson, V. (Ja '23)
- Hunting
Cox, H. E. de F. Chasing and racing. (N '22)
Grey, Z. Tales of lonely trails. (D '22)
Hawker, F. Instructions to young sportsmen. (D '22)
Van Dyke, J. C. Open spaces. (Je '22)
- Arctic regions
Stefánsson, V. Hunters of the great north. (Ja '23)
- Canada
Moore, P. H. With gun and rod in Canada. (O '22)
- Hydraulics
Lea, F. C. Elementary hydraulics for technical students. (F '23)
- Hydrocarbons
Brooks, B. T. Chemistry of the non-benzenoid hydrocarbons. (F '23)
- Hygiene
Williams, J. F. Personal hygiene applied. (O '22)
- Hymen. Aldington, H. (Mr '22)
- I have only myself to blame. Bibesco, E. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
I walked in Arden. Crawford, J. (Jl '22)
Idea of God. Beckwith, C. A. (Ja '23)
- Idealism
Sinclair, M. New idealism. (Jl '22)
Ideas of Einstein's theory. Thirring, J. H. (Ag, N '22)
Idol of Paris. Bernhardt, S. (Jl '22)
If. Dunsany, E. J. M. D. P. (Ap '22)
If winter don't. Pain, E. (D '22)
- Illiteracy
Stewart, C. Moonlight schools for the emancipation of adult illiterates. (D '22)
- Illusion. Escholer, R. (Je '22)
- Image. Gregory, I. A. (Ap '22)
- Imagination
Prescott, F. C. Poetic mind. (Jl '22)
Slosson, E. E., and Downey, J. E. Plots and personalities. (Ag '22)
- Immigrant press and its control. Park, R. E. (Mr '22)
- Immigrants in the United States
Bierstadt, E. H. Aspects of Americanization. (S '22)
Brewer, D. C. Peril of the republic. (N '22)
Park, R. E. Immigrant press and its control. (Mr '22)
Stauffer, R. E., ed. American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. (Jl '22)
- Immigration
Gould, C. W. America. (D '22)
Hourwich, I. A. Immigration and labor. (My '22)
Roberts, K. L. Why Europe leaves home. (Jl '22)
- Immigration and labor. Hourwich, I. A. (My '22)
- Immortal Italy. Mowrer, E. A. (Ag '22)
- Immortality
Lake, K. Immortality and the modern mind. (O '22)
Unanuno, M. de. Tragic sense of life. (Jl '22)
- Immortality and the modern mind. Lake, K. (O '22)
- Importance of bird life. Hartley, G. I. (N '22)
- In colors of the West. Dresbach, G. W. (D '22)
- In defense of women. Mencken, H. L. (My '22)
- In His image. Bryan, W. J. (My '22)
- In jeopardy. Sutphen, W. G. Van T. (N '22)
- In lotus-land: Japan. Ponting, H. G. (D '22)
- In occupied Belgium. Withington, R. (Ap '22)
- In the clutch of circumstance. (S '22)
- In the days of Poor Richard. Bacheller, I. A. (S '22)
- In the favour of the king. Daniel, H. (Jl '22)
- In the heart of Bantuland. Campbell, D. (Ag '22)

- In the morning of time. Roberts, C. G. D. (My '22)
- In the sky garden. Bird, S. M. (Ja '23)
- Inca land. Bingham, H. (Ja '23)
- Incarnation
Drown, E. S. Creative Christ. (My '22)
- Incas
Bingham, H. Inca land. (Ja '23)
- Incentives in the new industrial order. Hobson, J. A. (F '23)
- Including mother. Ashmun, M. E. (Ja '23)
- Income
National bureau of economic research. Income in the United States. (Mr '22)
- Income in the United States. National bureau of economic research. (Mr '22)
- Income tax
United States
Rossmore, E. E. Federal income tax problems—1922. (Ag '22)
- Indelible. Paul, E. H. (Ag '22)
- India
History
Rapson, E. J., ed. Cambridge history of India. (F '23)
- Indian paths in the great metropolis. Bolton, R. P. (O '22)
- Indian summer. Hutchings, E. G. (S '22)
- Indian trails
Bolton, R. P. Indian paths in the great metropolis. (O '22)
- Indians of North America
Parsons, E. C., ed. American Indian life. (Ag '22)
- Fiction
Gregor, E. R. Spotted Deer. (Je '22)
- Legends
De Huff, E. W. Taytay's tales. (O '22)
- Gilmore, M. R. Prairie smoke. (My '22)
- Indiscreet chronicle from the Pacific. Weale, B. L. P., pseud. (F '23)
- Indiscretions of Lady Susan. Townley, S. M. (Ja '23)
- Individualism
Blackmar, F. W. Justifiable individualism. (F '23)
- Hoover, H. American individualism. (Ja '23)
- Industrial and commercial South America. Peck, A. S. (Jl '22)
- Industrial code. Lauck, W. J., and Watts, C. S. (Ag '22)
- Industrial arts
Winslow, L. L. Elementary industrial arts. (Ag '22)
- Industrial history of the United States. Wells, L. R. (Ja '23)
- Industrial laws and legislation
Huggins, W. L. Labor and democracy. (S '22)
- Industrial management
Allen, C. R. Foreman and his job. (Mr '22)
- Farnham, D. T. America vs. Europe in industry. (Ap, Je '22)
- Fleming, A. P. M., and Brocklehurst, H. J. Introduction to the principles of industrial administration. (N '22)
- Industrial problems and disputes. Askwith, G. R. A. (Ap '22)
- Industrial relations
Clow, W. M. Quest of industrial peace. (O '22)
- Lauck, W. J., and Watts, C. S. Industrial code. (Ag '22)
- Tipper, H. Human factors in industry. (O '22)
- Industrial research
Fleming, A. P. M., and Pearce, J. G. Research in industry the basis of economic progress. (Je '22)
- Industrial revival in soviet Russia. Heller, A. A. (F '23)
- Industrial unionism in America. Savage, M. D. (D '22)
- Industry
Chenery, W. L. Industry and human welfare. (Ap '22)
- Penty, A. J. Post-industrialism. (N '22)
- Pound, A. Iron man in industry. (Jl '22)
- Stone, G. History of labour. (Jl '22)
- Industry and human welfare. Chenery, W. L. (Ap '22)
- Industry and state
Hobson, J. A. Incentives in the new industrial order. (F '23)
- Infection, Focal
Cotton, H. A. Defective, delinquent, and insane. (Ag '22)
- Inheritance of Jean Trouvé. Henshaw, N. G. (My '22)
- Inheriting the earth. Von Engel, O. D. (Ag '22)
- Inorganic chemistry. Lowry, T. M. (Ja '23)
- Insanity
Cotton, H. A. Defective, delinquent, and insane. (Ag '22)
- Insects
Habits and behavior
Bouvier, L. E. Psychic life of insects. (Ap '22)
- Instructions to young sportsmen. Hawker, P. (D '22)
- Instrument of the gods. Colcord, L. R. (D '22)
- Insurance, Social
Johnsen, J. E., comp. Selected articles on social insurance. (O '22)
- Intelligence of high school seniors. Book, W. F. (F '23)
- International development of China. Sun Yatsen. (F '23)
- International finance and its reorganization. Friedman, E. M. (Mr '22)
- International law and relations
Bryce, J. B. International relations. (Ap '22)
- Hyde, C. C. International law chiefly as interpreted and applied by the United States. (N '22)
- Reinsch, P. S. Secret diplomacy. (Mr '22)
- Walsh, E. A., ed. History and nature of international relations. (D '22)
- International law chiefly as interpreted and applied by the United States. Hyde, C. C. (N '22)
- International relations. Bryce, J. B. (Ap '22)
- Introducing irony. Bodenheilm, M. (O '22)
- Introduction to American government. Ogg, F. A., and Ray, P. O. (N '22)
- Introduction to economic history. Gras, N. S. B. (D '22)
- Introduction to Mahāyāna Buddhism. McGovern, W. M. (Ap '22)
- Introduction to philosophy. Windelband, W. (Ap '22)
- Introduction to the history of history. Shotwell, J. T. (Jl '22)
- Introduction to the principles of industrial administration. Fleming, A. P. M., and Brocklehurst, H. J. (N '22)
- Introduction to the problem of government. Willoughby, W. W., and Rogers, Lindsay (Je '22)
- Introduction to the psychology of education. Drever, J. (D '22)
- Introduction to the study of labor problems. Watkins, G. S. (F '23)
- Introduction to world politics. Gibbons, H. A. (O '22)
- Intrusion. Seymour, E. K. (Je '22)
- Invention. Fiske, B. A. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Inventions
Fiske, B. A. Invention. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Invisible exercise. Lee, G. S. (S '22)
- Ireland
Civilization
Fitzpatrick, B. Ireland and the making of Britain. (Mr '22)
- Economic conditions
O'Brien, G. A. T. Economic history of Ireland from the Union to the famine. (Je '22)
- History
Ewart, W. Journey in Ireland. (O '22)
- Fitzpatrick, B. Ireland and the making of Britain. (Mr '22)

Ireland—History—Continued

- Hackett, F. Story of the Irish nation. (Jl '22)
 Hayden, M. T., and Moonan, G.: A. Short history of the Irish people. (Mr '22)
 O'Brien, G.: A. T.: Economic history of Ireland from the Union to the famine. (Je '22)

Politics and government

- Ewart, W. Journey in Ireland. (O '22)
 Hinkson, K. Wandering years. (F '23)
 McNeill, R. Ulster's stand for union. (O '22)
 Ireland and the making of Britain. Fitzpatrick, B. (Mr '22)

Irish in England

- Fitzpatrick, B. Ireland and the making of Britain. (Mr '22)

Irish poetryCollections

- Colum, P., ed. Anthology of Irish verse. (My '22)
 Iron man in industry. Pound, A. (Jl '22)
 Iron puddler. Davis, J. J.: (N '22)
 Island cure. Blanchard, G. (Ag '22)
 Island God forgot. Stilson, C. B., and Beahan, C.: (N '22)
 Islands of magic. Eells, E. S. (Ja '23)
 Isle of seven moons. Anderson, R. G. (Ag '22)
 Isle of vanishing men. Alder, W. F. (Ap '22)
 It is to laugh. Geister, E. (My '22)
 Italian poetry

Collections

- Lucchi, L. de'. Anthology of Italian poems. (F '23)
 Italians in America. Rose, P. M. (O '22)
 Italians in the United States
 Rose, P. M. Italians in America. (O '22)
 Italy

Description and travel

- Douglas, N. Alone. (N '22)
 Haight, E. H. Italy old and new. (S '22)

Economic conditions

- Tittoni, T. Modern Italy. (D '22)

History

- Elliot, H.: G. Some revolutions and other diplomatic experiences. (Ag '22)
 Mazzini, G. Letters to an English family. (N '22)
 Mowrer, E. A. Immortal Italy. (Ag '22)

Intellectual life

- Tittoni, T. Modern Italy. (D '22)

Social conditions

- Mowrer, E. A. Immortal Italy. (Ag '22)
 Italy old and new. Haight, E. H. (S '22)
 It's all in the game. Tilden, W. T. (My '22)

- J. Poindester, colored. Cobb, I. S. (S '22)
 Jack and I in Lotus Land. Macaulay, F. C. (D '22)

Jackson, Andrew

- Bowers, C. G. Party battles of the Jackson period. (Ja '23)
 Jade. Wiley, H. (Mr '22)
 Jameson, Mrs Annie Edith [Foster]. See Buck-rose, J. E., pseud. (Ap '22)
 Jane journeys on. Mitchell, R. C. (Jl '22)

Japan

- Powell, E.: A. Asia at the crossroads. (My '22)

Description and travel

- Ponting, H. G.: In lotus-land: Japan. (D '22)
 Robertson Scott, J. W. Foundations of Japan. (Je '22)
 Street, J. L. Mysterious Japan. (Mr '22)

Foreign relations

- Dennett, T. Americans in eastern Asia. (F '23)
 Golovin, H. Problem of the Pacific in the twentieth century. (F '23)

- Kawakami, K. K. Japan's Pacific policy. (S '22)
 Kawakami, K. K., ed. What Japan thinks. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Tokutomi, I. Japanese-American relations. (Je '22)

History

- Gubbins, J. H. Making of modern Japan. (Ja '23)

Social life and customs

- Street, J. L. Mysterious Japan. (Mr '22)
 Japanese-American relations. Tokutomi, I. (Je '22)

Japanese drama

- Waley, A. Nō plays of Japan. (Je '22)

Japanese in the United States

- Kawakami, K. K. Real Japanese question. (Ap '22)
 Japan's Pacific policy. Kawakami, K. K. (S '22)
 Jeanne d'Arc
 Smith, M. C. Saint Jeanne d'Arc. (Ja '23)
 Jeremiah. Zweig, S. (F '23)
 Jeremiah, the prophet

Drama

- Zweig, S. Jeremiah. (F '23)
 Jesuits
 Campbell, T.: J. Jesuits, 1534-1921. (F '23)
 Jesuits, 1534-1921. Campbell, T.: J. (F '23)

Jesus Christ

- Drown, E.: S. Creative Christ. (My '22)
 Gore, C. Belief in Christ. (F '23)
 Irvine, A. F. Carpenter and His kingdom. (Je '22)
 Simkhovitch, V. G. Toward the understanding of Jesus. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Teaching

- Abbott, L. What Christianity means to me. (Jl '22)
 Brewster, H. S. Simple gospel. (My '22)
 Hutchins, G., and Rochester, A. Jesus Christ and the world today. (S '22)
 Vedder, H.: C. Fundamentals of Christianity. (Ap '22)
 Jesus Christ and the world today. Hutchins, G., and Rochester, A. (S '22)
 Jewish chaplain in France. Levinger, L. J. (Ap '22)

Jews

- Belloc, H. The Jews. (Je '22)
 Ginzberg, A. Ten essays on Zionism and Judaism. (Jl '22)
 Hurt, W. Truth about the Jews. (D '22)
 The Jews. Belloc, H. (Je '22)
 Jiminy. Gabriel, G. W. (Ag '22)
 Joan of Arc of the north woods. Day, H. F. (F '23)
 Joan of Overbarrow. Wharton, A. (Ap '22)
 Joanna Godden. Kaye-Smith, S. (Mr '22)
 John Burroughs talks. Johnson, C. (O '22)
 John Masefield. Hamilton, W. H. (Jl '22)
 Joining in public discussion. Sheffield, A. D. (S '22)

Jokes

- Johnston, W.: T., ed. Bill Johnston's joy book. (S '22)
 Mosher, M. D., comp. More toasts. (F '23)
 Jongleur strayed. Le Gallienne, R.: (D '22)
 Joseph Greer and his daughter. Webster, H.: K. (F '23)
 Journal. Cazenove, T. (S '22)
 Journal of a lady of quality. Schaw, J. (My '22)

Journalism

- Lord, C. S. Young man and journalism. (Ja '23)
 McCauley, H. S. Getting your name in print. (F '23)
 Smith, H.: J. Deadlines. (F '23)

Journalists

- Williams, T. Newspaperman. (My '22)
 Journey in Ireland. Ewart, W. (O '22)
 Joy of living. Gowing, S. (Mr '22)
 The judge. West, R. (O '22)
 Judging human character. Hollingworth H. L. (D '22)
 Judgment of Charls. Reynolds, G. M. (O '22)

Judith of the godless valley. Willsie, H. (O '22)

Judy of York Hill. Hume, E. (O '22)

Jugo-Slav stories. Popović, P. (Mr '22)

Junior high school idea. Van Denburg, J. K. (Ja '23)

Junior high schools. Van Denburg, J. K. Junior high school idea. (Ja '23)

Just nerves. Riggs, A. F. (F '23)

The just steward. Graves, C. I. M. (D '22)

Justifiable individualism. Blackmar, F. W. (F '23)

Juvenile literature. See Children's literature

Kaiser's memoirs. William II. (D '22)

Kanga Creek. Ellis, H. (N '22)

Kansas

History

McNeal, T. A. When Kansas was young. (D '22)

Kansas. Court of industrial relations

Huggins, W. L. Labor and democracy. (S '22)

Kansu, China

Farrer, R. J. Rainbow bridge. (My '22)

Kashmlr

Tyndale-Biscoe, C. E. Kashmlr in sunlight and shade. (Mr '22)

Kastle Kraggs. Martin, A. (Ja '23)

Kemp, Harry Hibbard

Kemp, H. H. Tramping on life. (N '22)

Kendall's sister. Swasey, R. (Ap '22)

Kent, England

Maxwell, D. Unknown Kent. (Jl '22)

Key of dreams. Beck, L. A. (F '23)

Kimmel, S. P. Leaves on the water. (F '23)

Kimono. Paris, J.; pseud. (My '22)

Kinfolks. Cobb, A. (Je '22)

King Arthur's socks. Dell, F. (D '22)

Kingdom of evils. Southard, E. E., and Jarrett, M. C. (F '23)

Kingfisher. Bottome, P. (Je '22)

Kingmakers. Stevenson, B. E. (Ja '23)

Kings and rulers

Bagger, E. S. Eminent Europeans. (Ja '23)

Kittens. Fleuron, S. (Mr '22)

Knight among ladies. Buckrose, J. E., pseud. (N '22)

Knut Hamsun. Larsen, H. A. (Ja '23)

Kongo, Belgian

Description and travel

Barns, T. A. Wonderland of the Eastern Congo. (Ja '23)

Korea

Powell, E. A. Asia at the crossroads. (My '22)

Foreign relations

Dennett, T. Americans in eastern Asia. (F '23)

Korin, Ogata

Noguchi, Y. Korin. (D '22)

Korin, Noguchi, Y. (D '22)

Krindlesyke. Glibson, W. W. (D '22)

Ku Klux klan

Fry, H. P. Modern Ku Klux klan. (Je '22)

Labor and capital

Clow, W. M. Quest of industrial peace. (O '22)

Labor and democracy. Huggins, W. L. (S '22)

Labor and laboring classes

Desmond, S. Labour. (My '22)

Pound, A. Iron man in industry. (Jl '22)

Robbins, H. Labor movement and the farmer. (Ja '23)

Watkins, G. S. Introduction to the study of labor problems. (F '23)

Williams, W. Full up and fed up. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

History

Stone, G. History of labour. (Jl '22)

Medical care

Clark, W. I. Health service in industry. (N '22)

Europe

Williams, W. Horny hands and hampered elbows. (F '23)

Great Britain

Appleton, W. A. What we want and where we are. (Ap '22)

Askwith, G. R. A. Industrial problems and disputes. (Ap '22)

United States

Chenery, W. L. Industry and human welfare. (Ap '22)

Hourwich, I. A. Immigration and labor. (My '22)

Lauck, W. J., and Watts, C. S. Industrial code. (Ag '22)

MacLean, A. M. Our neighbors. (F '23)

Labor disputes

Feis, H. Settlement of wage disputes. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Labor movement and the farmer. Robbins, H. (Ja '23)

Labor party (Great Britain)

Desmond, S. Labour. (My '22)

Labor turnover

Brissenden, P. F., and Frankel, E. Labor turnover in industry. (F '23)

Labor turnover in industry. Brissenden, P. F., and Frankel, E. (F '23)

Laboratories

Munby, A. E. Laboratories. (Ag '22)

Labour. Desmond, S. (My '22)

Lace

Head, R. E. Lace and embroidery collector. (Mr '22)

Lace and embroidery collector. Head, R. E. (Mr '22)

"The ladies!" Barrington, E. (O '22)

Lady Bountiful. Hannay, J. O. (Je '22)

Lady Luck. Wiley, H. (Mr '22)

Lady of North Star. Binns, O. (Ap '22)

Lafayette, Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert

Motier, marquis de

Holland, R. S. Lafayette for young Americans. (O '22)

Lafayette for young Americans. Holland, R. S. (O '22)

Lane, Franklin Knight

Lane, F. K. Letters of Franklin K. Lane. (D '22)

Language

Jespersen, O. Language. (Jl '22)

Sapir, E. Language. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Larger socialism. Benedict, B. (N '22 and 1921 Annual)

Last days in New Guinea. Monckton, C. A. W. (O '22)

Last harvest. Burroughs, J. (O '22)

Last mile. McAlister, F. A., pseud. (F '23)

Last poems. Housman, A. E. (Ja '23)

Late lyrics and earlier. Hardy, T. (S '22)

Later periods of Quakerism. Jones, R. M. (Jl '22)

Latest thing. Black, A. (Mr, Je '22)

Latin America

Inman, S. G. Problems in Pan Americanism. (Ap '22)

Warsaw, J. New Latin America. (N '22)

Commerce

Aughinbaugh, W. E. Advertising for trade in Latin America. (Mr, Je '22)

History

Robertson, W. S. History of the Latin-American nations. (N '22)

Laughter limited. Putnam, N. (D '22)

Laureateship. Broadus, E. K. (Jl '22)

Laurentian mountains

Longstreth, T. M. Laurentians. (Jl '22)

Laurentians. Longstreth, T. M. (Jl '22)

Laurier, Sir Wilfrid
Skelton, O. D. Life and letters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. (Mr, Je '22)

Law

Cardozo, B.: N. Nature of the judicial process. (N '22)
Hicks, F. C.: Men and books famous in the law. (Mr '22)

Philosophy

Tourtoulon, P. de. Philosophy in the development of law. (Je '22)

United States

Pound, R. Spirit of the common law. (Mr '22)
Law and business. Spencer, W.: H. (O '22)
Law in business problems. Schaub, L. F., and Isaacs, N. (Ag '22)

Lawyers

Hicks, F. C.: Men and books famous in the law. (Mr '22)
Leading American treaties. Hill, C. E.: (Mr, Je '22)

League of nations

Rowell, N. W. British empire and world peace. (N '22)

Learned institutions and societies

Caulley, M. J. G. Universities and scientific life in the United States. (O '22)
Learning and living. Emerton, E.: (Mr '22)
Leaves on the water. Kimmel, S. P. (F '23)

Lee, Robert Edward

Riley, F. L., ed. General Robert E. Lee after Appomattox. (Je '22)
Legacy of Greece. Livingstone, R. W., ed. (O '22)

Le Gallienne book of English verse. Le Gallienne, R., ed. (My '22)

Legendary islands of the Atlantic. Babcock, W. H.: (D '22)

Legislative bodies

Luce, R. Legislative procedure. (N '22)
Legislative procedure. Luce, R. (N '22)

Leigh, James Wentworth

Leigh, J. W. Other days. (Mr '22)

Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ulyanoff)
Landau-Aldanov, M. A. Lenin. (Mr '22)

Letter book. Saintsbury, G. E. B., ed. (Ap '22)

Lettering

Goudy, F. W.: Elements of lettering. (F '23)

Letters

Saintsbury, G. E. B., ed. Letter book. (Ap '22)

Letters. Furness, H. H. (N '22)
Letters. Huneker, J. G. (D '22)

Letters of Franklin K. Lane. Lane, F. K. (D '22)

Letters of a radio-engineer to his son. Mills, J.: (D '22)

Letters to a djinn. Stone, G. Z. (N '22)

Letters to an English family. Mazzini, G. (N '22)

Letters to Georges Daniel de Monfried. Gauguin, P. (Jl '22)

Liberalism, modernism and tradition. Quick, O. C. (F '23)

Liberia

Brawley, B. G. Social history of the American negro. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Life and death of Harriett Freen. Sinclair, M. (Mr '22)

Life and letters of Henry Lee Higginson. Perry, B. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Life and letters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Skelton, O. D. (Mr, Je '22)

Life and letters of W. J. Birkbeck. Birkbeck, W. J.: (Ja '23)

Life and letters of Walter H. Page. Hendrick, B. J. (N '22)

Life and times of John Carroll. Guilday, P.: (F '23)

Life and times of Juliette Récamier. Austrian, D. (N '22)

Life and works of John Heywood. Bolwell, R. W. (Ja '23)

Life of Antonio Fogazzaro. Gallarati-Scotti, T. (F '23)

Life of Cardinal Gibbons. Will, A. S. (F '23)

Life of Clara Barton. Barton, W. E. (Mr, Je '22)

Life of George Westinghouse. Prout, H.: G. (Mr '22)

Life of James Monroe. Morgan, G.: (Je '22)

Life of the spirit. Underhill, E. (D '22)

Life of the weevil. Fabre, J. H. C. (Mr '22)

Life of William Hazlitt. Howe, P. P. (Ja '23)

Lighthouses
Collins, F. A. Sentinels along our coast. (O '22)

Lilia Chenoworth. Dodd, L. W. (My '22)

Lillian. Bennett, A. (D '22)

Lily. Wiley, H. (D '22)

Lincoln, Abraham
Brown, C. R. Lincoln, the greatest man of the nineteenth century. (Ap '22)

Conwell, R. H. Why Lincoln laughed. (S '22)

Starr, J. W., jr. Lincoln's last day. (Ja '23)

Fiction

Tarbell, I. M. He knew Lincoln. (Jl '22)

Lincoln's last day. Starr, J. W., jr. (Ja '23)

Linda Lee incorporated. Vance, L. J. (Jl '22)

Lindsay, Vachel
Graham, S. Tramping with a poet in the Rockies. (Jl '22)

Liquid fuel
Best, W.: N. Burning liquid fuel (S '22)

Lisbon
Schaw, J. Journal of a lady of quality. (My '22)

Literary criticism
Canby, H.: S. Definitions. (O '22)

Macy, J.: A. Critical game. (D '22)

Literature
Canby, H.: S. Definitions. (O '22)

Garnett, E.: Friday nights. (Jl '22)

Goethe, J. W. von. Goethe's literary essays. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Gosse, E. W.: Aspects and impressions. (Jl '22)

Macy, J.: A. Critical game. (D '22)

Santayana, G.: Soliloquies in England. (Ag '22)

Dictionaries

Keller, H. R., ed. Readers' digest of books. (S '22)

History and criticism

Richardson, W.: L., and Owen, J. M. Literature of the world. (F '23)

Literature and life. Osborne, E.: B. (O '22)

Literature of the Old Testament in its historical development. Bewer, J. A. (F '23)

Literature of the world. Richardson, W.: L., and Owen, J. M. (F '23)

Little, Frances, pseud. See Macaulay, F. C. (D '22)

Little book of society verse. Fuess, C. M., and Stearns, H. C., comps. (S '22)

Little book on water supply. Garnett, W.: (D '22)

Little corner never conquered. Van Schaick, J., jr. (S '22)

Little country theater. Arvold, A. G. (F '23)

Little essays of love and virtue. Ellis, H. (My '22)

A little leaven. Grey, K. (S '22)

Little more. Maxwell, W.: B. (Mr '22)

Little poems from the Greek. Leaf, W., tr. (Ag '22)

Little theater classics. Eliot, S.: A., ed. (Ag '22)

Living frieze. Turbyfill, M. (Mr '22)

Lloyd George, David
Punch, London. Lloyd George. (Jl '22)

Raymond, E.: T. Mr Lloyd George. (Ja '23)

London

Clubs

Chancellor, E.: B. Memorials of St James's street. (N '22)

Description

Burke, T.: London spy. (Ja '23)

Chancellor, E.: B. Memorials of St James's street. (N '22)

Montizambert, E. Unnoticed London. (Je '22)

Theaters

Thaler, A. Shakespeare to Sheridan. (S '22)

(D '22)

London—Continued

Water supply

- Garnett, W.: Little book on water supply.
 London spy. Burke, T.: (Ja '23)
 Lonely warrior. Washburn, C. C.: (Mr '22)
 Longer plays by modern authors (American).
 Cohen, H. L., ed.: (O '22)
 Longest journey. Forster, E.: M.: (Je '22)
 Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth
 Longfellow, E. W.: Random memories. (S '22)
 Longshoremen
 MacElwee, R. S., and Taylor, T.: R.: Wharf management, stevedoring and storage. (My '22)
 Lord Byron's correspondence. Byron, G.: G. N.
 B.: (My '22)
 Lords and commoners. Lucy, H.: (S '22)
 Lost Valley. Gerould, K.: (Mr '22)
 Love. Aminoff, L.: (O '22)
 Love—and Diana. Merrel, C.: (Ag '22)
 Love & freindship. Austen, J.: (O '22)
 Love chase. Grendon, F.: (O '22)
 Love conquers all. Benchley, R. C.: (Ja '23)
 Love legend. Boyd, W.: (D '22)
 Love match. Bennett, A.: (Jl '22)
 Love story of Aliette Brunton. Frankau, G.:
 (Jl '22)
 Loyal citizenship. Reed, T.: H.: (Ag '22)
 Loyalties. Galsworthy, J.: (N '22)
 Lucas, Emily Beatrix Coursolles. See Jones,
 E. B. C.: (O '22)
 Lucretia Lombard. Norris, K.: (My '22)
 Lute and furrow. Dargan, O. T.: (S '22)
 Lyric forms from France. Cohen, H. L.: (F '23)

- McCarty incog. Ostrander, I. E.: (F '23)
 MacDowell, Edward Alexander
 Porte, J.: F.: Edward MacDowell. (Ja '23)
 Machen, Arthur
 Machen, A.: Far-off things. (F '23)
 Machine shops
 Basset, W.: R., and Heywood, J.: Production engineering and cost keeping for machine shops. (Ja '23)
 Greene, L. S.: School shop installation and maintenance. (Ja '23)

- Machine tools
 De Leeuw, A. L.: Metal cutting tools. (Ja
 '23)
 Dowd, A. A., and Curtis, F. W.: Tool engineering. (Ag '22)

- Machinery in industry
 Penty, A. J.: Post-industrialism. (N '22)
 Pound, A.: Iron man in industry. (Jl '22)
 Machinery of the mind. Firth, V. M.: (Ag,
 N '22)

- McKinley, William
 Rhodes, J. F.: McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, 1897-1909. (Ja '23)
 McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, 1897-
 1909. Rhodes, J. F.: (Ja '23)

- Macy, R. H., and company, New York
 Hungerford, E.: Romance of a great store.
 (Ap '22)

- Madame de Staël. Haggard, A. C.: P.: (Ag '22)
 Madame Valcour's lodger. Olmstead, F.: (Jl
 '22)

- Magic and science of jewels and stones. Kozminsky, I.: (Ap '22)
 Magic flute. Dickinson, G. L.: (Mr '22)

- Main, John, pseud. See Parsons, E. W.: (Ag '22)
 Maki, Minney, R. J.: (Je '22)

- Making of modern Japan. Gubbins, J. H.: (Ja
 '23)

- Making the letter pay. Stoll, A.: (O '22)
 Making your camera pay. Davis, F.: C.: (F '23)

- Malet, Lucas, pseud. See Harrison, M.: St L.
 (Ag '22)

- Man
 Smallwood, W.: M.: Man—the animal. (Mr '22)

- Man, Origin of Churchward, A.: Origin and evolution of the human race. (My '22)

Man, Prehistoric

- Quennell, M., and C.: H.: B.: Everyday life in the old stone age. (Jl '22)
 Seers, A.: W.: Earth and its life. (O '22)
 Man and maid. Glyn, E.: (Ag '22)
 Man and the cosmos. Leighton, J. A.: (F '23)
 Man from the wilds. Bindloss, H.: (Mr '22)
 Man in the twilight. Cullum, R.: (O '22)
 Man of purpose. Richberg, D. R.: (D '22)
 Man on the other side. Barnett, A.: (Ag '22)
 Man-size. Raine, W.: M.: (Jl '22)
 Man,—the animal. Smallwood, W.: M.: (Mr '22)
 Man who knew too much. Chesterton, G. K.:
 (Ja '23)
 Man who lived in a shoe. Forman, H.: J.:
 (N '22)

Manchester Guardian

- Mills, W.: H.: Manchester Guardian. (Je '22)
 Manual of business letter writing. Dolch, E.: W.:
 (S '22)
 Manual of the short story art. Clark, G.: (Jl
 '22)
 Manual of trees of North America. Sargent, C.:
 S.: (Ja '23)
 Marches of Wessex. Eng title of Soul of Dorset. Darton, F.: J. H.: (D '22)
 Margey wins the game. Weaver, J.: V. A., jr.:
 (Ag '22)
 Margot Asquith. Asquith, M.: (F '23)
 Marguerite. France, A., pseud.: (F '23)

Marine biology

- Howell, G.: C. L.: Ocean research and the great fisheries. (Jl '22)
 Thomson, J.: A.: Haunts of life. (Je '22)

Marine engines

- Chapman, L. B.: Marine power plant. (F '23)
 Marine power plant. Chapman, L. B.: (F '23)
 Mariquita. Ayscough, J., pseud.: (O '22)
 Market bundle. Lyons, A. M. N.: (N '22)

Marketing

- Clark, F. E.: Principles of marketing. (F '23)
 Martin Pippin in the apple orchard. Farjeon.
 E.: (O '22)

Marvell, Andrew

- Bagguley, W.: W., ed. Andrew Marvell. (Ja
 '23)

Mary Lee. Dennis, G.: (O '22)

Mary Stuart, queen of Scots

- Mumby, F. A.: Fall of Mary Stuart. (Ap '22)
 Maryland

Description and travel

- Vallandigham, E.: N.: Delaware and the Eastern Shore. (Ja '23)

Masefield, John

- Hamilton, W. H.: John Masefield. (Jl '22)

Masonry

- Williams, C. C.: Design of masonry structures and foundations. (Ja '23)
 Master-mistress. O'Neill, R. S.: (Ja '23)
 Mastered men. Robinson, F. A.: (Je '22)

Materia medica, Vegetable

- Rohde, E. S.: Old English herbals. (Ja '23)
 Materials of construction. Pulver, H. E.: (Ja
 '23)

- Mathematical philosophy. Keyser, C. J.: (Ap '22)

Mathematics

- Keyser, C. J.: Mathematical philosophy. (Ap '22)

Matter

- Mills, J.: Within the atom. (Mr '22)
 Max Beerbohm in perspective. Lynch, B.: (Ap '22)

Mazzini, Guiseppe

- Mazzini, G.: Letters to an English family.
 (N '22)

- Meade's headquarters, 1863-1865. Lyman, T.:
 (Ja '23)

Meat

- Bailey, L. H., ed.: Cyclopedia of farm animals. (My '22)

- Mechanical stokers. Worker, J. G., and Peebles, T.: A.: (N '22)

- Mechanical testing. Batson, R. G.: C., and Hyde, J. H.: (Ja '23)

- Mediæval contributions to modern civilisation.
 Hearnshaw, F. J.: C., ed.: (Ap, Je '22)

Medicine

De Kruif, P. H.: Our medicine men. (Ja '23)

History

Osler, W.: Evolution of modern medicine. (My '22)

South America

Martin, F. H.: South America from a surgeon's point of view. (D '22)
Meeting of extremes in contemporary philosophy. Bosanquet, B. (Jl '22)
Meeting your child's problems. Scott, M. (Je '22)

Melville, Herman

Weaver, R. M.: Herman Melville, mariner and mystic. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Memoirs. Frederick William, formerly crown prince of Prussia. (Ag '22)

Memoirs of a clubman. Bugin, G. B. (O '22)
Memoirs of a midget. De La Mare, W. J. (Ap, Je '22)

Memoirs of the memorable. Denham, J. (N '22)

Memorials of St James's street. Chancellor, E. B. (N '22)

Memories and base details. Forbes, A. S. B. (Ag '22)

Memories of a hostess. Howe, M. A. De W. (N '22)

Memories of a Turkish statesman, 1913-1919. Djemal, A. (F '23)

Men and books famous in the law. Hicks, F. C. (Mr '22)

Men of affairs. Pertwee, R. (Ag '22)

Mendoza and a little lady. Caine, W. (Ap '22)

Mental causes of accidents. Fisher, B. (Ja '23)

Mental healing

Bellwald, A. M.: Christian science and the Catholic faith. (S '22)

Brooks, C. H.: Practice of autosuggestion. (S '22)

Macnaghten, H.: Emile Coué. (F '23)

Mental physiology and hygiene

Lee, G. S.: Invisible exercise. (S '22)

Paton, S.: Signs of sanity and the principles of mental hygiene. (O '22)

Riggs, A. F.: Just nerves. (F '23)

Mental tests

Book, W. F.: Intelligence of high school seniors. (F '23)

Hollingsworth, H. L.: Judging human character. (D '22)

McCall, W. A.: How to measure in education. (Jl '22)

Merchant marine

Riesenbergh, F.: Standard seamanship for the merchant service. (N '22)

Mercy of Allah. Belloc, H. (Ag '22)

Mergui archipelago

White, W. G.: Sea gypsies of Malaya. (Ja '23)

Merton of the movies. Wilson, H. L. (Jl '22)

Metal cutting

De Leeuw, A. L.: Metal cutting tools. (Ja '23)

Metal cutting tools. De Leeuw, A. L. (Ja '23)

Metaphysics

Haldane, R. B. H.: Philosophy of humanism. (N '22)

Leighton, J. A.: Man and the cosmos. (F '23)

Maeterlinck, M.: Great secret. (Jl '22)

Meteorology

Luckiesh, M.: Book of the sky. (O '22)

Moore, W. L.: New air world. (F '23)

Metric system

World metric standardization council. World metric standardization. (F '23)

Mexican mind. Thompson, W. (Ap '22)

MexicoDescription and travel

Sheridan, C. C.: My American diary. (My '22)

Social life and customs

Thompson, W.: Mexican mind. (Ap '22)

Michael Field. Sturgeon, M. C. (N '22)

Middle ages

Hearnshaw, F. J. C., ed.: Mediæval contributions to modern civilization. (Ap, Je '22)

History

Cambridge mediæval history. Germany and the western empire. (S '22)

Middle classes

Corbin, J.: Return of the middle class. (F '23)

Middle of things. Fletcher, J. S. (D '22)

Middleton, Arthur, Sarsfield. See Rohmer, S., pseud. (Mr '22)

Midnight. Cohen, O. R. (Mr '22)

Mildred, Tom and Old Salt. Osgood, H.: O. (O '22)

Military art and science

Hamilton, I. S. M.: Soul and body of an army. (Mr '22)

Million-dollar suitcase. MacGowan, A., and Newberry, P. (My '22)

Millions. Poole, E. (O '22)

Minds and manners of wild animals. Hornaday, W. T. (Jl '22)

Mine surveying

Underhill, J.: Mineral land surveying. (Ja '23)

Mineral land surveying. Underhill, J. (Ja '23)

Miniature painting

Bolton, T.: Early American portrait painters in miniature. (Mr '22)

Minister of grace. Widdemer, M. (N '22)

Ministers of the gospel

Tweedy, H.: H., and others. Christian work as a vocation. (Jl '22)

MinnesotaHistory

Folwell, W.: W. History of Minnesota. (Je '22)

The miracle. Thurston, E. T. (F '23)

Miracles of Clara van Haag. Buchholtz, J. (O '22)

Miss Mapp. Benson, E.: F. (F '23)

Missionaries

Tweedy, H.: H., and others. Christian work as a vocation. (Jl '22)

Mississippi valley

Chambers, H.: E.: Mississippi valley beginnings. (F '23)

Mississippi valley beginnings. Chambers, H.: E. (F '23)

Mr Dickens goes to the play. Woolcott, A. (D '22)

Mr Lloyd George. Raymond, E. T. (Ja '23)

Mr Pim. Milne, A. A. (Ap '22)

Mr Prohack. Bennett, A. (Ap, Je '22)

Mr William Shakespeare. Bartlett, H. C. (O '22)

Mitchell, Donald Grant

Dunn, W. H.: Life of Donald G. Mitchell. (Jl '22)

M'lord o' the white road. Fraser, C. (N '22)

Modern cabinet work. Wells, P. A., and Hooper, J. (F '23)

Modern city and its government. Capes, W.: P. (Ap '22)

Modern developments in educational practice. Adams, J. (Ja '23)

Modern English essays, 1870-1920. Rhys, E., ed. (Ja '23)

Modern idea of the state. Krabbe, H. (D '22)

Modern Italy. Tittoni, T. (D '22)

Modern Ku Klux klan. Fry, H.: P. (Je '22)

Modern men and mummies. Pearson, H. (M '22)

Modern reader's Bible for schools. Bible. Old Testament. (My '22)

Modern trio in an old town. Taylor, K. H. (N '22)

Modern tunneling. Brunton, D.: W., and Davis, J. A. (Ag '22)

Modernism

Harris, C.: Creeds or no creeds? (O '22)

Modernism and the Christian faith. Faulkner, J.: A. (Mr '22)

Mohammedanism

Davis, W.: S. Short history of the Near East. (F '23)

Mohave desert, California

Perkins, E.: White heart of Mojave. (F '23)

Money

Cassel, G.: Money and foreign exchange after 1914. (Ja '23)

Robertson, D. H.: Money. (Jl '22)

Money and foreign exchange after 1914. Cassel, G. (Ja '23)

Mongolia

Description and travel

Ossendowski, F. Beasts, men and gods. (N '22)

Monroe, James

Morgan, G. Life of James Monroe. (Je '22)

Monroe doctrine

Cresson, W. P. Holy alliance. (F '23)
Moon out of reach. Pedler, M. (Ag '22)
Moon rock. Rees, A. J. (My '22)
Moonlight schools for the emancipation of adult illiterates. Stewart, C. (D '22)

Moore, George

Freeman, J. Portrait of George Moore. (S '22)

Moral education

Harrison, E. Unseen side of child life. (Mr '22)
Morals of the movie. Oberholtzer, E. P. (F '23)
More authors and I. Hind, C. L. (N '22)
More beetles. Fabre, J. H. C. (My '22)
More honorable man. Roche, A. S. (Ja '23)
More Jataka tales. Babbitt, E. C. (Je '22)
More memoirs (and some travels). Burgin, G. B. (D '22)
More mystery tales for boys and girls. Smith, E. S., comp. (N '22)
More toasts. Mosher, M. D. comp. (F '23)

Morgan, Sir Henry

Hart, F. R. Admirals of the Caribbean. (O '22)

Mormons and Mormonism

James, G. W. Utah. (Jl '22)
Martin, S. Mystery of Mormonism. (Je '22)

Morocco

Description and travel

Andrews, C. E. Old Morocco and the forbidden Atlas. (N '22)
Garstin, C. Coasts of romance. (D '22)

History

Harris, W. B. Morocco that was. (Mr '22)
Morocco that was. Harris, W. B. (Mr '22)
Mortal coils. Huxley, A. (Ag '22)
Moth decides. Jewell, E. A. (D '22)
Mother Machree. Scott, M. J. (F '23)
Mother of all living. Keable, R. (O '22)
Motion pictures for community needs. Bollman, G. and H. (My '22)
Mount Everest. Howard-Bury, C. K., and others. (Ag '22)
Mountain school-teacher. Post, M. D. (N '22)

Mountaineering

Eaton, W. P. Skyline camps. (Ja '23)
Howard-Bury, C. K., and others. Mount Everest. (Ag '22)
Jeffers, L. Call of the mountains. (N '22)
Lunn, A. Alpine ski-ing at all heights and seasons. (Ap '22)
Mountaineers. Eng title of Northwest! Bindloss, H. (O '22)
Mounted justice. Mayo, K. (Je '22)

Moving pictures

Bollman, G. and H. Motion pictures for community needs. (My '22)
Oberholtzer, E. P. Morals of the movie. (F '23)
Wrigley, M. J. Film. (Je '22)
Mozans, H. J., pseud. See Zahm, J. A. (F '23)
Mud Hollow. Patten, S. N. (O '22)
Muffy-Zade K. Zia, bey. See Zia, M.-Z. K. (Ja '23)
Munmers in mufti. Curtiss, P. E. (Ja '23)

Municipal government

Capes, W. P. Modern city and its government. (Ap '22)
Fassett, C. M. Assets of the ideal city. (Jl '22)
Fassett, C. M. Handbook of municipal government. (Jl '22)
Kimball, E. State and municipal government in the United States. (O '22)

Münsterberg, Hugo

Münsterberg, M. A. A. Hugo Münsterberg. (O '22)

Music

Turner, W. J. Music and life. (D '22)

History and criticism

Rolland, R. Musical tour through the land of the past. (Ja '23)

Instruction and study

Coleman, S. N. Creative music for children. (Ag '22)

Music. Freeman, J. (Mr, Je '22)
Music and life. Turner, W. J. (D '22)

Musical instruments

Coleman, S. N. Creative music for children. (Ag '22)
Musical tour through the land of the past. Rolland, R. (Ja '23)

Musicians

Calvé, E. My life. (Ja '23)
Brower, H. M. Story-lives of master musicians. (F '23)
Parker, H. T. Eighth notes. (Ja '23)
My Alaskan idyll. Rutzebeck, H. (S '22)
My American diary. Sheridan, C. C. (My '22)
My Balkan log. Abraham, J. J. (O '22)
My boyhood. Burroughs, J. (Ap '22)
My discovery of England. Leacock, S. B. (Ag '22)
My impressions of America. Asquith, M. (D '22)
My lady April. Overton, J. (N '22)
My life. Calvé, E. (Ja '23)
My life and some letters. Campbell, Mrs P. (D '22)
My life and work. Ford, H. (D '22)
My life in Paris fifty years ago. Stanton, A. E. (Je '22)
My life of song. Tetrizzini, L. (Jl '22)
My memories of eighty years. Depew, C. M. (Ap, Je '22)
My northern exposure. Chappell, G. S. (N '22)
My trip abroad. Chaplin, C. S. (Ap '22)
My wonderful visit. Eng title of My trip abroad. Chaplin, C. (Ap '22)
My years on the stage. Drew, J. (Ja '23)
Mysterious Japan. Street, J. L. (Mr '22)
Mysterious office. Lee, J. (Ja '23)
Mystery at Number Six. Seaman, A. H. (N '22)
Mystery girl. Wells, C. (Je '22)
Mystery of Mormonism. Martin, S. (Je '22)
Mystery of the hidden room. Harvey, M. (Ja '23)
Myth of a guilty nation. Nock, A. J. (S '22)

N. N., pseud. See Pennell, E. (Ag '22)

Napoleon I, emperor of the French

Chimay, E. L. M. F. J. Daughter of Napoleon. (S '22)
Marie Louise. Private diaries. (S '22)
St Denis, L. E. Napoleon from the Tuileries to St Helena. (F '23)

Napoleon III, emperor of the French

Guedalla, P. Second empire. (D '22)
Napoleon from the Tuileries to St Helena. St Denis, L. E. (F '23)
Narcissus. Scott, E. (Ag, N '22)
Nathan Clifford, democrat. Clifford, P. G. (F '23)

National characteristics, American

Chesterton, G. K. What I saw in America. (N '22)
Drake, D. America faces the future. (My '22)
Lewisohn, L. Up stream. (Ap, Je '22)
Stearns, H. E., ed. Civilization in the United States. (Mr '22)

National characteristics, English

England. (O '22)
Leacock, S. B. My discovery of England. (Ag '22)

National characteristics, Japanese

Street, J. L. Mysterious Japan. (Mr '22)

National characteristics, Mexican

Thompson, W. Mexican mind. (Ap '22)
Nationalism and education since 1789. Reisner, E. H. (D '22)

Nationalism and nationality

- Hunt, F. Rising temper of the East. (Ag '22)
 Von Engeln, O. D. Inheriting the earth. (Ag '22)

Natural history

- Downing, E. R. Naturalist in the Great Lakes region. (Ag '22)

Africa

- Barns, T. A. Wonderland of the Eastern Congo. (Ja '23)

- Naturalist in the Great Lakes region. Downing, E. R. (Ag '22)

Naturalization

- Gavit, J. P. Americans by choice. (O '22)

Nature

- Younghusband, F. Heart of nature. (O '22)
 Nature of Scripture. Peake, A. S. (F '23)
 Nature of the judicial process. Cardozo, B. N. (N '22)
 Nature's simple plan. Tinker, C. B. (O '22)

Navigation

- Riesenberg, F. Standard seamanship for the merchant service. (N '22)

- Near Eastern affairs and conditions. Panaretto, S. (Je '22)

- Ned Beals, freshman. Silvers, E. R. (Jl '22)
 Negro folk rhymes. Talley, T. W., comp. (Ap '22)

- Negro in Chicago. Chicago commission on race relations. (D '22)

- Negro in our history. Woodson, C. G. (O '22)

Negro poetry

- Johnson, J. W., ed. Book of American Negro poetry. (My '22)
 Negro press in the United States. Detweiler, F. G. (Ja '23)

Negro songs

- Talley, T. W., comp. Negro folk rhymes. (Ap '22)

Negroes

- Detweiler, F. G. Negro press in the United States. (Ja '23)
 Haynes, G. E. Trend of the races. (Ja '23)

History

- Brawley, B. G. Social history of the American negro. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Woodson, C. G. Negro in our history. (O '22)

Moral and social conditions

- Chicago commission on race relations. Negro in Chicago. (D '22)
 Neighbors henceforth. Wister, O. (Ja '23)
 Neither here nor there. Herford, O. (Ja '23)
 Nène. Péronon, E. (Ap '22)

Nervous systemDiseases

- Riggs, A. F. Just nerves. (F '23)
 New accounting. Borsodi, R. (O '22)
 New air world. Moore, W. L. (F '23)
 New building estimators' handbook. Arthur, W. (Ja '23)

- New chapters in the history of Greek literature. Powell, J. U., and Barber E. A., eds. (F '23)
 New churches for old. Holmes, J. H. (My '22)

- New constitutions of Europe. McBain, H. L., and Rogers, L. (F '23)
 New Decameron; third volume. (F '23)

New EnglandDescription and travel

- Paris, J. T. Seeing the Eastern states. (Ja '23)
 New German constitution. Brunet, R. (Jl '22)

New Guinea

- Malinowski, B. Argonauts of the western Pacific. (N '22)
 Monckton, C. A. W. Last days in New Guinea. (O '22)

Description and travel

- Alder, W. F. Isle of vanishing men. (Ap '22)
 New Hampshire

History

- Mayo, L. S. John Wentworth, governor of New Hampshire, 1767-1775. (Mr '22)

- New heavens. Hale, G. E. (Ag '22)

New Hebrides

- Johnson, M. E. Cannibal-land. (S '22)

- New idealism. Sinclair, M. (Jl '22)

New JerseyDescription and travel

- Cazenove, T. Journal. (S '22)
 New laboratory manual. Elhuff, L. (Ja '23)
 New Larned history. Larned, J. N. (F '23)
 New Latin America. Warsaw, J. (N '22)
 New poetry. Parsons, M. F. (My '22)
 New psychology and the teacher. Miller, H. C. (D '22)

- New Testament history. Wade, G. W. (N '22)

New thought

- Bellwald, A. M. Christian science and the Catholic faith. (S '22)
 New viewpoints in American history. Schlesinger, A. M. (N '22)

New York (city)Biography

- Lanier, H. W. Century of banking in New York. (Ap '22)

History

- Lanier, H. W. Century of banking in New York. (Ap '22)

Streets

- Bolton, R. P. Indian paths in the great metropolis. (O '22)

- Newcomer in Penny lane. Gray, J. (O '22)

- Newspaperman. Williams, T. (My '22)

NewspapersEngland

- Mills, W. H. Manchester Guardian. (Je '22)

United States

- Detweiler, F. G. Negro press in the United States. (Ja '23)

- Park, R. E. Immigrant press and its control. (Mr '22)

- Next-to-nothing house. Carrick, A. Van L. (Ja '23)

- Nicolette. Orczy, E. M. (O '22)

Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm

- Nietzsche, F. W. Selected letters. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- Nietzsche, F. W., and Wagner, R. Nietzsche-Wagner correspondence. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- Nietzsche-Wagner correspondence. Nietzsche, F. W., and Wagner, R. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Nigeria

- Langa-Langa, pseud. Up against it in Nigeria. (O '22)

- Nigger. Wood, C. (D '22)

Nightingale, FlorenceDrama

- Reid, E. G. Florence Nightingale. (F '23)

- Nights and days on the gypsy trail. Brown, I. (Ja '23)

- Ninth vibration. Beck, L. A. (Ag '22)

- Nō plays of Japan. Waley, A. (Je '22)

- Nonsenseorship. (O '22)

North CarolinaDescription and travel

- Schaw, J. Journal of a lady of quality. (My '22)

- Northward course of empire. Stefánsson, V. (N '22)

- Northwest! Bindloss, H. (O '22)

- Notion-counter. (D '22)

Novelists, American

- Van Doren, C. C. Contemporary American novelists. (Je '22)

- Novissima verba. Harrison, F. (Ap '22)

- Number 87. Hext, H., pseud. (Je '22)

- No. 13 Toront. Regis, J. (Ja '23)

- Nutrition and growth in children. Emerson, W. It. P. (My '22)

Occult sciences

Maeterlinck, M. Great secret. (Jl '22)

OccupationsDiseases and hygiene

Clark, W: I. Health service in industry. (N '22)

Ocean echoes. Mason, A. (N '22)

Ocean research and the great fisheries. Howell, G. C. L. (Jl '22)

Odds. Dell, E. M. (Jl '22)

Odes and lyrics. Alexander, H. B. (Ja '23)

Og, son of fire. Crump, I. (O '22)

Oh, Susanna! Minnigerode, M. (Ap '22)

Oil encyclopedia. Mitzakis, M. (Ja '23)

Old age

Hall, G. S. Senescence. (Ag '22)

Smith, A. L. How to be useful and happy from sixty to ninety. (D '22)

Old age pensions

Epstein, A. Facing old age. (Je '22)

Old castle. Winchester, C. T. (F '23)

Old Crow. Brown, A. (D '22)

Old England. Gilbert, B. (O '22)

Old English herbals. Rohde, E. S. (Ja '23)

Old English poetry. Spaeth, J. D. E. (O '22)

Old Europe's suicide. Thomson, C. B. (Je '22)

The old house. Tormay, C. (O '22)

Old Morocco and the forbidden Atlas. Andrews, C. E. (N '22)

Old Park street and its vicinity. Lawrence, R. M. (Jl '22)

On a Chinese screen. Maugham, W: S. (Ja '23)

On English poetry. Graves, R. (Jl '22)

On life and letters. France, A., pseud. (S '22)

On the trail of the pigmies. Vanden Bergh, L. J. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

On tiptoe. White, S. W. (D '22)

Once on a time. Milne, A. A. (D '22)

One. MacConnell, S. W. (Mr '22)

One man in his time. Glasgow, E. A. G. (Jl '22)

One man's initiation—1917. Dos Passos, J: R., jr. (Ag '22)

One of ours. Cather, W. S. (O '22)

One thing is certain. Kerr, S. (O '22)

One woman. Ollivant, A. (Ap '22)

One world at a time. Fuller, M. (N '22)

Open spaces. Van Dyke, J: C. (Je '22)

Opera, Russian

Davidson, G. Stories from the Russian operas. (F '23)

Operating of engineer's catechism of steam engineering. Gornston, M. H. (Ag '22)

Opinions of Anatole France. France, A., pseud. (S '22)

Oppidan. Leslie, S. (My '22)

Optimist. De La Pasture, E. E. M. (D '22)

Ordeal of honor. Pryde, A., pseud. (Mr '22)

Organised produce markets. Smith, J: G. (Jl '22)

Organizing the community. McClenahan, B. A. (Ja '23)

Origin and evolution of the human race. Churchward, A. (My '22)

Origins of French romanticism. Finch, M. B., and Peers, E. A. (Mr '22)

Other days. Leigh, J. W. (Mr '22)

Other Miller girl. Gray, J. (Jl '22)

Our American humorists. Masson, T: L. (F '23)

Our best poets. Maynard, T. (F '23)

Our changing Constitution. Pierson, C: W. (D '22)

Our eleven billion dollars. Mountsier, R. (O '22)

Our foreign-born citizens. Beard, A. E. S. (O '22)

Our Hellenic heritage. James, H: R. (Ap '22)

Our medicine men. De Kruif, P. H. (Ja '23)

Our navy at war. Daniels, J. (Ag '22)

Our neighbors. MacLean, A. M. (F '23)

Our railroads to-morrow. Hungerford, E: (S '22)

Our republic. Forman, S: E. (Ja '23)

Our unconscious mind and how to use it. Pierce, F: (My '22)

Ourselves when young. Sheringham, H. T. (Ap, Je '22)

Out of the darkness. Dutton, C: J. (Ap '22)

Outcast. Lagerlöf, S. O. L. (Ap '22)

Outdoor life

Van Dyke, J: C. Open spaces. (Je '22)

Outdoor stories. (O '22)

Outline of science. Thomson, J: A., ed. (O '22)

Outline of Wells. Dark, S. (Je '22)

Outlook for the Philippines. Russell, C: E: (My '22)

Outspoken essays; second series. Inge, W: R. (D '22)

Over two seas. Barbour, R. H., and Holt, H. P. (S '22)

Over weight? Copeland, R. S. (S '22)

Overlooked. Baring, M. (D '22)

Overset. Adams, F. P. (Ja '23)

Ovington's bank. Weyman, S: J. (D '22)

Pacific triangle. Greenbie, S. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Page, Walter Hines

Hendrick, B. J. Life and letters of Walter H. Page. (N '22)

Pageant of Venice. Hutton, E: (Jl '22)

Pages from the past. Ayscough, J:, pseud. (S '22)

Painted windows. (Ap '22)

Painting

Bell, C. Since Cézanne. (Ag '22)

Painting, American

Bolton, T. Early American portrait painters in miniature. (Mr '22)

Painting, Dutch

Conway, M. Van Eycks and their followers. (Jl '22)

Painting, French

Bryant, L. M. French pictures and their painters. (Ja '23)

Painting, Italian

Peers, G. K. Early Italian painters. (Je '22)

Pair of idols. Caven, S. (Jl '22)

PalestineDescription and travel

Carpenter, F. G. Holy Land and Syria. (Ja '23)

Whittingham, G: N. Home of fadeless splendour. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da

Pyne, Z. K. Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina. (O '22)

Palmer, Nathaniel Brown

Spears, J: R. Captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer. (S '22)

Pan Americanism

Inman, S: G. Problems in Pan Americanism. (Ap '22)

Pan and the twins. Phillpotts, E. (Mr '22)

PanamaDescription and travel

Verrill, A. H. Panama, past and present. (Ap '22)

Panama, past and present. Verrill, A. H. (Ap '22)

Papacy

Bell, M. I. M. Short history of the papacy. (Mr '22)

Paper work

Houdini, H. Houdini's paper magic. (Ag '22)

Parenthood and child nurture. Baker, E. D. (Jl '22)

Parents

Wise, S. S. Child versus parent. (My '22)

ParisDescription

Muirhead, F., and Monmarche, M., eds. Paris and its environs. (Ag '22)

Wolff, J. S. Historic Paris. (Ap '22)

Social life and customs

Stanton, A. E. My life in Paris fifty years ago. (Je '22)

Paris and its environs. Muirhead, F., and Monmarche, M., eds. (Ap '22)

Parliamentary practice

Luce, R. Legislative procedure. (N '22)

The parlor begat Amos. Hildebrand, A. S. (Ap '22)

Parodies

- Pain, B. If winter don't. (D '22)
 Squire, J. C. Collected parodies. (Ap '22)
 Stewart, D. O. Perfect behavior. (F '23)
 Untermeyer, L. Heavens. (My '22)
 Widdemer, M. Tree with a bird in it. (Ja '23)
 Party battles of the Jackson period. Bowers, C. G. (Ja '23)

Pasteur, Louis

- Descour, L. Pasteur and his work. (O '22)
 Pasteur and his work. Descour, L. (O '22)

Paston letters

- Bennett, H. S. Pastons and their England. (S '22)

- Pastons and their England. Bennett, H. S. (S '22)

- Patchwork. Nichols, B. (My '22)

- Pathless trail. Friel, A. O. (Je '22)

Pathology

- Ruffer, M. A. Studies in the palaeopathology of Egypt. (Mr '22)

- Patrioteer. Mann, H. (S '22)

Paul, Saint

- Vedder, H. C. Fundamentals of Christianity. (Ap '22)

Peace

- Addams, J. Peace and bread in time of war. (Ap '22)

- Rowell, N. W. British empire and world peace. (N '22)

- Wells, H. G. Washington and the riddle of peace. (Mr '22)

- Peace and bread in time of war. Addams, J. (Ap '22)

Peace conference, 1919

- Baker, R. S. Woodrow Wilson and the world settlement. (D '22)

Peace treaty, 1919

- Keynes, J. M. Revision of the treaty. (Mr '22)

- Vanderlip, F. A. What next in Europe? (Mr '22)

- Peaceless Europe. Eng title of Wreck of Europe. Nitti, F. S. (D '22)

- Peacemakers. Tarbell, I. M. (S '22)

- Peewee. MacHarg, W. B. (O '22)

- Peggy Pretend. Evison, M. (Je '22)

- Pember, Mrs Devereux. See Devereux, R., pseud. (O '22)

- Penal discipline. Gordon, M. D. (F '23)

- Penguin persons & peppermints. Eaton, W. P. (O '22)

- The penitent. Underwood, E. W. (D '22)

- Pennington, Patience, pseud. See Pringle, E. W. (Jl '22)

PennsylvaniaDescription and travel

- Cazenove, T. Journal. (S '22)

Police

- Mayo, K. Mounted police. (Je '22)

- Penology in the United States. Robinson, L. N. (Jl '22)

- People and places. Keyser, A. L. (D '22)

Pepper

- Putnam, G. G. Salem vessels and their voyages. (O '22)

- Peregrine's progress. Farnol, J. (N '22)

- Perfect behavior. Stewart, D. O. (F '23)

- Peril of the republic. Brewer, D. C. (N '22)

PersiaHistory

- Sykes, P. M. Persia. (Ja '23)

- Persia. Sykes, P. M. (Ja '23)

- Personal experiences of a cub reporter. Vanderbilt, C. (D '22)

- Personal hygiene applied. Williams, J. F. (O '22)

- Personal touch. Brunner, E. B. (S '22)

Personality

- Fielding, W. J. Caveman within us. (F '23)

Personals

- Slosson, E. E., and Downey, J. E. Plots and personalities. (Ag '22)

PeruDescription and travel

- Bingham, H. Inca land. (Ja '23)

- Dyott, G. M. Silent highways of the jungle. (D '22)

- Peter, Benson, E. F. (Ag '22)

- Peter Whiffle. Van Vechten, C. (Je '22)

Petroleum

- Mitzakis, M. Oil encyclopedia. (Ja '23)

- Pogue, J. E. Economics of petroleum. (Ag '22)

- Suman, J. R. Petroleum production methods. (Ja '23)

Petroleum as fuel

- Best, W. N. Burning liquid fuel. (S '22)

- Petroleum production methods. Suman, J. R. (Ja '23)

- Phantom. Hauptmann, G. (F '23)

- Phantom gold. Kempton, K. (O '22)

- Pharisees. Gibbon, M. M. (Ap '22)

- Philip Derby, reporter. Abbot, W. J. (D '22)

Philippine Islands

- Greenbie, S. Pacific triangle. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- Powell, E. A. Asia at the crossroads. (My '22)

- Russell, C. E. Outlook for the Philippines. (My '22)

Politics and government

- Harrison, F. B. Corner-stone of Philippine independence. (Mr '22)

- Philosopher with nature. Kidd, B. (Mr '22)

- Philosophical studies. Moore, G. E. (F '23)

Philosophy

- Bosanquet, B. Meeting of extremes in contemporary philosophy. (Jl '22)

- Hutchinson, H. G. Fortnightly club. (Ag '22)

- Moore, G. E. Philosophical studies. (F '23)

- Santayana, G. Soliloquies in England. (Ag '22)

- Windelband, W. Introduction to philosophy. (Ap '22)

Philosophy, American

- Rogers, A. K. English and American philosophy since 1800. (Ag '22)

Philosophy, Arabic

- O'Leary, D. E. Arabic thought and its place in history. (Jl '22)

Philosophy, English

- Rogers, A. K. English and American philosophy since 1800. (Ag '22)

Philosophy, French

- Gourmont, R. de. Decadence. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Philosophy, Russian

- Ouspensky, P. D. Tertium organum. (D '22)

- Philosophy in the development of law. Tourtoulon, P. de. (Je '22)

- Philosophy of humanism. Haldane, R. B. H. (N '22)

Philosophy of nature

- Sellars, R. W. Evolutionary naturalism. (D '22)

Photography, Commercial

- Davis, F. C. Making your camera pay. (F '23)

Photography of birds

- Knight, C. W. R. Wild life in the tree tops. (S '22)

Phyfe, Duncan

- Correlius, C. O. Furniture masterpieces of Duncan Phyfe. (F '23)

Physical geography

- Downing, E. R. Naturalist in the Great Lakes region. (Ag '22)

Europe

- Newbigin, M. I. Frequented ways. (N '22)

Physicians

- De Kruif, P. H. Our medicine men. (Ja '23)

PhysicsDictionaries

- Glazebrook, R. T., ed. Dictionary of applied physics. (Ja '23)

Physiognomy

- Fosbroke, G. E. Character revelations of mind and body. (O '22)

- Pieces of hate. Broun, H. C. (S '22)
 Pierre and Luce. Rolland, R. (Je '22)
- Pike
 Smith, O. W. Book of the pike. (D '22)
 Pippin, Marshall, A. (D '22)
 Pirates' hope. Lynde, F. (Jl '22)
 Pivot of civilization. Sanger, M. H. (N '22)
- Plantation life
 Pringle, E. W. Chronicles of Chicora Wood. (Jl '22)
- Play
 Rainwater, C. E. Play movement in the United States. (Mr '22)
 Play movement in the United States. Rainwater, C. E. (Mr '22)
 Play of auction hands. Denison, E. E. (My '22)
- Player-piano
 Grew, S. Art of the player-piano. (Je '22)
 Playing with souls. Chambrun, C. (N '22)
 Plays for school and camp. Lord, K. (S '22)
 Plays of the 47 workshop. 47 workshop. (Ja '23)
- Pleasures of ignorance. Lynd, R. (Ap '22)
 Plots and personalities. Slosson, E. E., and Downey, J. E. (Ag '22)
- Plots (drama, novel, etc.)
 Slosson, E. E., and Downey, J. E. Plots and personalities. (Ag '22)
- Plumbers' handbook. Dibble, S. E. (Ag '22)
- Plumbing
 Dibble, S. E. Plumbers' handbook. (Ag '22)
 Prebble, W. House decorations and repairs. (Jl '22)
- Poe, Edgar Allan.
 Robertson, J. W. Edgar A. Poe. (F '23)
 Poems: second series. Squire, J. C. (Mr '22)
 Poems and portraits. Marquis, D. (Mr '22)
 Poems 1918-21. Pound, E. L. (Mr '22)
 Poems of the soil and sea. Wagner, C. A. (F '23)
 Poems of the war and the peace. Leonard, S. A., comp. (Ap '22)
 Poetic mind. Prescott, F. C. (Jl '22)
- Poetry
 Graves, R. On English poetry. (Jl '22)
 Prescott, F. C. Poetic mind. (Jl '22)
- Poetry (individual authors)
 Addison, M. C. Dreams and a sword. (O '22)
 Aiken, C. P. Priapus and the pool. (S '22)
 Aldington, H. Hymns. (Mr '22)
 Alexander, H. B. Odes and lyrics. (Ja '23)
 Baker, K. Burning bush. (Ja '23)
 Binyon, L. Selected poems. (S '22)
 Bird, S. M. In the sky garden. (Ja '23)
 Blunden, E. The shepherd. (S '22)
 Bodenheim, M. Introducing irony. (O '22)
 Brink, R. W. Down the river. (N '22)
 Charlin, R. Bars and shadows. (F '23)
 Cobb, A. Kinfolks. (Je '22)
 Colum, P. Dramatic legends. (D '22)
 Conkling, H. Shoes of the wind. (D '22)
 Dargan, O. Lute and furrow. (S '22)
 Davis, M. G. Girl's book of verse. (D '22)
 Davies, W. H. Hour of magic. (F '23)
 De La Mare, W. J. Down-adoon-Derry. (Jl '22)
 De La Mare, W. J. The vell. (Ap '22)
 Dos Passos, J. R., jr. Pushcart at the curb. (Ja '23)
 Dresbach, G. W. In colors of the West. (D '22)
 Drinkwater, J. Seeds of time. (Ap '22)
 Driscoll, L. Garden of the West. (N '22)
 Erskine, J. Collected poems, 1907-1922. (F '23)
 Farrar, J. C. Songs for parents. (Jl '22)
 Faust, F. Village street. (N '22)
 Ficke, A. D. Sonnets of a portrait-painter. (F '23)
 Fletcher, J. G. Preludes and symphonies. (N '22)
 Fort, P. Selected poems and ballads. (Mr '22)
 Freeman, J. Music. (Mr, Je '22)
 Gale, Z. Secret way. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Garstin, C. Ballad of the Royal Ann. (D '22)
 Gate of cedar. Morse, K. (Je '22)
 Gilbert, B. Old England. (O '22)
- Gorman, H. S. Barcarole of James Smith. (D '22)
 Hardy, T. Late lyrics and earlier. (S '22)
 Heywood, Du B., and Allen, H. Carolina chansons. (F '23)
 Holden, R. Granite and alabaster. (F '23)
 Housman, A. E. Last poems. (Ja '23)
 Hoyt, H. M. Dry points. (My '22)
 Le Gallienne, R. Jongleur strayed. (D '22)
 Leonard, S. A., comp. Poems of the war and the peace. (Ap '22)
 Low, D. H., tr. Ballads of Marko Kraljević. (D '22)
 McKay, C. Harlem shadows. (Jl '22)
 Marquis, D. Poems and portraits. (Mr '22)
 Marquis, D. Sonnets to a red-haired lady. (Jl '22)
 Monro, H. Real property. (N '22)
 Morley, C. D. Translations from the Chinese. (S '22)
 Nathan, R. Youth grows old. (Je '22)
 Noyes, A. Watchers of the sky. (Je '22)
 O'Donnell, C. L. Cloister and other poems. (Ja '23)
 O'Neill, M., pseud. Songs of the glens of Antrim, and More songs of the glens of Antrim. (My '22)
 O'Neill, R. S. Master-mistress. (Ja '23)
 Porter, G. S. Fire bird. (S '22)
 Pound, E. L. Poems 1918-21. (Mr '22)
 Robinson, E. A. Collected poems. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual) Sandburg, C. Slabs of the sunburnt West. (Jl '22)
 Saret, L. R. Box of God. (F '23)
 Squire, J. C. Poems: second series. (Mr '22)
 Stillman, M. W. Wood notes. (N '22)
 Thayer, M. D. Songs of youth. (D '22)
 Turbyfill, M. Living frieze. (Mr '22)
 Vinal, H. White April. (S '22)
 Wagner, C. A. Poems of the soil and sea. (F '23)
 Wheelock, J. H. Black panther. (N '22)
 Widemer, M. Tree with a bird in it. (Ja '23)
 Woods, M. L. Return. (Ap '22)
- Poetry of Dante. Croce, B. (My '22)
- Poets laureate
 Broadus, E. K. Laureateship. (Jl '22)
 Points of view. Birkenhead, F. E. S. (F '23)
- Poland
 Devereux, R., pseud. Poland reborn. (O '22)
 Poland reborn. Devereux, R., pseud. (O '22)
 Poles in America. Fox, P. (S '22)
- Poles in the United States
 Fox, P. Poles in America. (S '22)
- Police
 Chandler, G. F. Policemen's art. (Ja '23)
 Mayo, K. Mounted police. (Je '22)
- New York (state)
 Van de Water, F. F. Grey riders. (Ja '23)
 Policemen's art. Chandler, G. F. (Ja '23)
 Political ideas of the American revolution. Adams, R. G. (Ja '23)
- Political parties
 Merriam, C. E. American party system. (N '22)
- Political science
 Beard, C. A. Economic basis of politics. (Je '22)
 Becker, C. L. Declaration of independence. (O '22)
 Exline, F. Politics. (F '23)
 Krabbe, H. Modern idea of the state. (D '22)
 Smith, B. Truismis of statecraft. (D '22)
 Willoughby, W. W., and Rogers, Lindsay. Introduction to the problem of government. (Je '22)
 Politics. Exline, F. (F '23)
- Polk, James Knox
 McCormac, E. I. James K. Polk. (Je '22)
 Polly the pagan. Anderson, I. W. (D '22)
 Pomp of power. Lyon, L. (N '22)
- Poor
 Kelso, R. W. History of public poor relief in Massachusetts, 1620-1920. (Ja '23)
 MacLean, A. M. Our neighbors. (F '23)

Poor laws

Clarke, J. J. Social administration including the poor laws. (Ja '23)

Population

Carr-Saunders, A. M. Population problem. (N '22)

Population problem. Carr-Saunders, A. M. (N '22)

Portmanteau adaptations. Walker, S. (Ap '22)

Portrait of George Moore. Freeman, J. (S '22)

Portrait of Mrs W. Peabody, J. P. (Je '22)

PortugalDescription and travel

Peixotto, E. C. Through Spain and Portugal. (Ja '23)

Portuguese literature

Bell, A. F. G. Portuguese literature. (S '22)

Post-industrialism. Penty, A. J. (N '22)

Pottery, Greek

Buschor, E. Greek vase-painting. (Mr '22)

Powell, Richard Stillman, pseud. See Barbour, R. H. (S, O '22)

Practical book of furnishing the small house and apartment. Holloway, E. S. (Ja '23)

Practical psychology for business executives. Edie, L. D., comp. (O '22)

Practical tanning. Rogers, A. (Ag '22)

Practice of autosuggestion. Brooks, C. H. (S '22)

Prairie child. Stringer, A. J. A. (Jl '22)

Prairie smoke. Gilmore, M. R. (My '22)

Prayers

Slattery, C. L. Prayers for private and family use. (N '22)

Prayers for private and family use. Slattery, C. L. (N '22)

Preaching

Brown, C. R. Art of preaching. (Ja '23)

Preaching in London. Newton, J. F. (N '22)

Precious stones

Kozminsky, I. Magic and science of jewels and stones. (Ap '22)

Prejudices; third series. Mencken, H. L. (D '22)

Preludes and symphonies. Fletcher, J. G. (N '22)

Pre-Raphaelite and other poets. Hearn, L. (D '22)

PresidentsUnited States

Dunn, A. W. From Harrison to Harding. (N '22)

Press

Lippmann, W. Public opinion. (My '22)

Priapus and the pool. Aiken, C. P. (S '22)

Prices

Birk, L. V. Theory of marginal value. (N '22)

Bowley, A. L. Prices and wages in the United Kingdom. (Ag '22)

Robertson, D. H. Money. (Jl '22)

Prices and wages in the United Kingdom. Bowley, A. L. (Ag '22)

Prime ministers

Bigham, C. Prime ministers of Britain. (O '22)

Prime ministers and presidents. Sherrill, C. H. (Ap '22)

Prime ministers of Britain. Bigham, C. (O '22)

Primer of cooking. Hamilton, D. M. (Ap '22)

Princeton boy in the Revolution. Tomlinson, P. G. (N '22)

Principles of automobile body design. Forbes, K. (Ja '23)

Principles of electric engineering. Timble, W. H. and Bush, V. (N '22)

Principles of English versification. Baum, P. F. (F '23)

Principles of interior decoration. Jakway, B. C. (Jl '22)

Principles of marketing. Clark, F. E. (F '23)

Principles of mechanical refrigeration. MacIntyre, H. J. (Ag '22)

Principles of public personnel administration. Procter, A. W. (Mr '22)

Principles of social psychology. Williams, J. M. (N '22)

Principles of the new economics. Edie, L. D. (Je '22)

Print of my remembrance. Thomas, A. (D '22)

Printing

Udpike, D. B. Printing types. (F '23)

Printing types. Udpike, D. B. (F '23)

Prior, Matthew

Legg, L. G. W. Matthew Prior. (N '22)

Prisoner of the Reds. McCullagh, F. (Je '22)

Prisoners of Hartling. Beresford, J. D. (Ap '22)

Prisons

Gordon, M. D. Penal discipline. (F '23)

Great Britain

Hobhouse, S., and Brockway, A. F., eds. English prisons today. (O '22)

Webb, S. and B. English prisons under local government. (S '22)

United States

Robinson, L. N. Penology in the United States. (Jl '22)

Tannenbaum, F. Wall shadows. (Jl '22)

Private character of Queen Elizabeth. Chamberlin, F. C. (Jl '22)

Private diaries. Marie Louise. (S '22)

Private diaries. West, A. E. (D '22)

Privet hedge. Buckrose, J. E., pseud. (Ap '22)

Prize stories of 1921. O. Henry memorial award. (My '22)

Problem of China. Russell, B. A. W. (D '22)

Problem of style. Murry, J. M. (S '22)

Problem of the Pacific in the twentieth century. Golovin, N. (F '23)

Problem of war and its solution. Grant, J. E. (O '22)

Problems in Pan Americanism. Inman, S. G. (Ap '22)

Problems of American democracy. Burch, H. R., and Patterson, S. H. (Ja '23)

Process engraving. Pilsworth, E. S. (Je '22)

Produce trade

Smith, J. G. Organised produce markets. (Jl '22)

Production engineering and cost keeping for machine shops. Basset, W. R., and Heywood, J. (Ja '23)

Profession, Choice of

McKinney, J. and Simons, A. M. Success through vocational guidance. (F '23)

Profit sharing

Bowie, J. A. Sharing profits with employees. (My '22)

Progress

Fosdick, H. E. Christianity and progress. (D '22)

Shafer, R. Progress and science. (Ja '23)

Progress and science. Shafer, R. (Ja '23)

Progress in religion to the Christian era. Glover, T. R. (Ja '23)

Prohibition

United States

Franklin, F. What prohibition has done to America. (D '22)

Promised isle. Bruun, L. V. (S '22)

Prostitution

Woolston, H. B. Prostitution in the United States. (Ap '22)

Prostitution in the United States. Woolston, H. B. (Ap '22)

Protestant Episcopal church

Parks, L. Crisis of the churches. (Ap '22)

Protestants in the United States

Brown, W. A. Church in America. (Ja '23)

Psalms as liturgies. Peters, J. P. (N '22)

Psychoanalysis in the classroom. Green, G. H. (Mr '22)

Psychic life of insects. Bouvier, L. E. (Ap '22)

Psychical research

Cornillier, P.-E. Survival of the soul. (S '22)

Flammarion, C. Death and its mystery; at the moment of death. (Jl '22)

Psychoanalysis

Baudouin, C. Studies in psychoanalysis. (Ja '23)

Bisch, L. E. Your inner self. (F '23)

- Brill, A. A. Fundamental conceptions of psychoanalysis. (Mr '22)
- Fielding, W. J. Caveman within us. (F '23)
- Firth, V. M. Machinery of the mind. (Ag, N '22)
- Forsyth, D. Technique of psychoanalysis. (O '22)
- Green, G. H. Psychoanalysis in the classroom. (Mr '22)
- Hingley, R. H. Psycho-analysis. (Ap, Je '22)
- Kolnai, A. Psychoanalysis and sociology. (Mr '22)
- Lawrence, D. H. Fantasia of the unconscious. (F '23)
- Long, C. E. Collected papers on the psychology of phantasy. (Mr '22)
- Miller, H. C. New psychology and the teacher. (D '22)
- Mitchell, T. W. Psychology of medicine. (F '23)
- Pfister, O. R. Psycho-analysis in the service of education. (N '22)
- Pierce, F. Our unconscious mind and how to use it. (My '22)
- Psychoanalysis and sociology. Kolnai, A. (Mr '22)
- Psycho-analysis in the service of education. Pfister, O. R. (N '22)
- Psychology
- Firth, V. M. Machinery of the mind. (Ag, N '22)
- Givler, R. C. Psychology. (N '22)
- Russell, B. A. W. Analysis of mind. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Woodworth, R. S. Psychology. (Ap '22)
- Psychology, Applied
- Edie, L. D., comp. Practical psychology for business executives. (O '22)
- Fisher, B. Mental causes of accidents. (Ja '23)
- Pierce, F. Our unconscious mind and how to use it. (My '22)
- Wells, G. R. M. Youth and the open door. (N '22)
- Psychology, Educational
- Drever, J. Introduction to the psychology of education. (D '22)
- Green, G. H. Psychoanalysis in the classroom. (Mr '22)
- Hartman, G. Child and his school. (Ap, Je '22)
- Miller, H. C. New psychology and the teacher. (D '22)
- Stratton, G. M. Developing mental power. (My '22)
- Psychology, Pathological
- Southard, E. E., and Jarrett, M. C. Kingdom of evils. (F '23)
- Psychology, Physiological
- Fielding, W. J. Caveman within us. (F '23)
- Psychology of handwriting. French, W. L. (F '23)
- Psychology of medicine. Mitchell, T. W. (F '23)
- Psychology of social life. Platt, C. (Jl '22)
- Psychology of society. Ginsberg, M. (N '22)
- Public conscience. Cox, G. C. (Ja '23)
- Public education in the South. Knight, E. W. (S '22)
- Public opinion
- Lippmann, W. Public opinion. (My '22)
- Public schools
- Sharp, D. L. Education in a democracy. (Ja '23)
- Public speaking
- Sheffield, A. D. Joining in public discussion. (S '22)
- Puppet show of memory. Baring, M. (O '22)
- Purchasing
- Bull, A. E. Buying goods. (Jl '22)
- Hysell, H. Science of purchasing. (Jl '22)
- Purple pearl. Pryde, A., pseud., and Weekes, R. K. (Ap '22)
- Purple Springs. McClung, N. L. (Ap '22)
- Pushcart at the curb. Dos Passos, J. R., jr. (Ja '23)
- Puzzles
- Houdini, H. Houdini's paper magic. (Ag '22)
- Q. Burt, K. (Jl '22)
- Q., pseud. See Quiller-Couch, A. T. (Ja '23)
- Q. E. D. Thayer, L. (Je '22)
- Qualified adventurer. Jepson, S. (S '22)
- Quantity cookery. Richards, L., and Treat, N. (Jl '22)
- Quantum theory
- Mills, J. Within the atom. (Mr '22)
- Quebec
- Description and travel
- Longstreth, T. M. Laurentians. (Jl '22)
- Queen Elizabeth's maids of honour. Wilson, V. A. (N '22)
- Queen of Karmania. Van Vorst, M. (Ag '22)
- Queen of Sheba. Crutch, P. A., pseud. (S '22)
- Queen of the paddock. Pearce, C. E. (Ap '22)
- The quest. Baroja y Nessi, P. (Ja '23)
- The quest. Hull, H. R. (Ja '23)
- Quest of industrial peace. Clow, W. M. (O '22)
- Quotations
- Benham, W. G., comp. Dictionary of classified quotations. (Je '22)
- Mosher, M. D., comp. More toasts. (F '23)
- Race problems
- Gould, C. W. America. (D '22)
- Marvin, F. S., ed. Western races and the world. (Ja '23)
- Rackhouse. Chamberlain, G. A. (Ja '23)
- Radio amateur's hand book. Collins, A. F. (Ag '22)
- Radio communication
- Collins, A. F. Book of wireless telegraph and telephone. (O '22)
- Collins, A. F. Radio amateur's hand book. (Ag '22)
- Ranger, R. H. Radio pathfinder. (D '22)
- Sleeper, M. B. Construction of radio phone and telegraph receivers for beginners. (Je '22)
- Sleeper, M. B. How to make commercial type radio apparatus. (Ja '23)
- Verrill, A. H. Radio for amateurs. (Jl '22)
- Yates, R. F., and Pacent, L. G. Complete radio book. (Jl '22)
- Radio telegraph
- Mittell, B. E. G. Continuous wave wireless telegraphy. (My '22)
- Radio telephone
- Cockaday, L. M. Radio-telephony for everyone. (Ag, N '22)
- Collins, A. F. Book of wireless telegraph and telephone. (O '22)
- Grainger, M. J. Amateur radio. (Ja '23)
- Hausmann, E., and others. Radio phone receiving. (O '22)
- Lescarbourea, A. C. Radio for everybody. (Jl '22)
- Mills, J. Letters of a radio-engineer to his son. (D '22)
- Verrill, A. H. Home radio. (Je '22)
- Radio detectives. Verrill, A. H. (O '22)
- Radio for amateurs. Verrill, A. H. (Jl '22)
- Radio for everybody. Lescarbourea, A. C. (Jl '22)
- Radio pathfinder. Ranger, R. H. (D '22)
- Radio phone receiving. Hausmann, E., and others. (O '22)
- Radio receiving for beginners. Snodgrass, R. T., and Camp, V. F. (Jl '22)
- Radio-telephony for everyone. Cockaday, L. M. (Ag, N '22)
- Ragged edge. MacGrath, H. (Mr '22)
- Rahab. Frank, W. D. (My '22)
- Railroad freight transportation. Loree, L. F. (Ja '23)
- Railroads
- Management
- Loree, L. F. Railroad freight transportation. (Ja '23)
- United States
- Hungerford, E. Our railroads to-morrow. (S '22)
- Sharfman, I. L. American railroad problem. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Railroads and government. Dixon, F. H. (Je '22)

Railroads and stateUnited States

- Dixon, F. H. Railroads and government. (Je '22)
- Rainbow bridge. Farrer, R. J.: (My '22)
- Rainbow gold. Teasdale, S., comp. (N '22)
- Rainsford, W.: S. Story of a varied life. (D '22)
- Ranch life
- Rollins, P. A. The cowboy. (Je '22)
- Random memories. Longfellow, E. W. (S '22)
- Raphael (Raffaello Sanzio d'Urbino)
- Lavery, F. Raphael. (O '22)
- Raphael. Lavery, F. (O '22)
- Rationalism
- Unamuno, M. de. Tragic sense of life. (Jl '22)
- Ravensdene court. Fletcher, J. S. (Ag '22)
- Rayner-Slade amalgamation. Fletcher, J. S. (My '22)
- Readers and writers. Orage, A. R.: (Je '22)
- Readers' digest of books. Keller, H. R. (S '22)
- Reading
- Stone, C. R. Silent and oral reading. (Jl '22)
- Real Americans. Wade, M. H. (N '22)
- Real Japanese question. Kawakami, K. K. (Ap '22)
- Real property. Monro, H. (N '22)
- Real tsaritsa. Dehn, L. (O '22)
- Realism
- Sinclair, M. New idealism. (Jl '22)
- Récamiér, Jeanne François Julie Adélaïde (Bernard)
- Austrian, D. Life and times of Juliette Récamier. (N '22)
- Recollections
- Ayscough, J., pseud. Pages from the past. (S '22)
- Baring, M. Puppet show of memory. (O '22)
- Burgin, G. B. Memoirs of a clubman. (O '22)
- Burgin, G. B. More memoirs (and some travels). (D '22)
- Denham, J. Memoirs of the memorable. (N '22)
- Depew, C. M. My memories of eighty years. (Ap '22)
- Drew, J.: My years on the stage. (Ja '23)
- Forbes, A. S. B. Memories and base details. (Ag '22)
- Foulke, W.: D. Hoosier autobiography. (Ja '23)
- Hinkson, K. Wandering years. (F '23)
- Howe, M. A. De W. Memories of a hostess. (N '22)
- Huneker, J. G. Letters. (D '22)
- Jersey, M. E. Fifty-one years of Victorian life. (F '23)
- Menzies, A. C. Recollections and reflections. (My '22)
- Metternich-Winneburg, P. C. M. W. Days that are no more. (Jl '22)
- Morgenthau, H.: All in a life-time. (D '22)
- Simmons, E.: From seven to seventy. (F '23)
- Strachey, J.: St L. Adventure of living. (D '22)
- Straus, O. S. Under four administrations. (F '23)
- Thomas, A.: Print of my remembrance. (D '22)
- Townley, S. M. Indiscretions of Lady Susan. (Ja '23)
- Recollections and reflections. Menzies, A. C. (My '22)
- Recollections of the revolution and the empire.
- La Tour du Pin de Gouvenet, H. L. (Mr '22)
- Reconstruction (European war)
- Fahs, C.: H. America's stake in Europe. (Mr '22)
- Guest, L. H. Struggle for power in Europe, 1917-1921. (Ap '22)
- Repington, C.: A. C. After the war. (Ap '22)
- Vanderlip, F. A. What next in Europe? (Mr '22)
- Zimmern, A. E. Europe in convalescence. (Jl '22)
- France
- MacDonald, W.: Reconstruction in France. (S '22)

Wister, O. Neighbors henceforth. (Ja '23)

Germany

- Manthey-Zorn, O. Germany in travail. (N '22)
- Reconstruction in France. MacDonald, W.: (S '22)
- Reconstruction of religion. Ellwood, C.: A. (Jl '22)
- Recreation
- Rainwater, C. E. Play movement in the United States. (Mr '22)
- Red Bud women. O'Dea, M. (D '22)
- Red cavalier. Lock, G. E. (F '23)
- Red cross
- Barton, W.: E. Life of Clara Barton. (Mr, Je '22)
- Van Schaick, J., jr. Little corner never conquered. (S '22)
- Red dusk and the morrow. Dukes, P. (Ap, Je '22)
- Red garden. Kehler, H. (Ja '23)
- Red House mystery. Milne, A. A. (My '22)
- Red knight. Young, F. B. (O '22)
- Red lock. Anderson, D.: (Ja '23)
- Red Redmaynes. Philipotts, E. (Ja '23)
- Reflections of a T. B. M. (My '22)
- Reform of education. Gentile, G. (O '22)
- Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery
- MacIntire, H. J. Principles of mechanical refrigeration. (Ag '22)
- Refugees, Political
- Roberts, K. L.: Why Europe leaves home. (Jl '22)
- Reign of rubber. Geer, W.: A. (N '22)
- Reign of the evil one. Ramuz, C.: F. (F '23)
- Relativity and the universe. Schmidt, H. (S '22)
- Relativity for all. Dingle, H. (D '22)
- Relativity (physics). See Einstein theory
- Religion
- Bell, B. I. Good news. (S '22)
- Coffin, H.: S. What is there in religion? (F '23)
- Ellwood, C.: A. Reconstruction of religion. (Jl '22)
- Jones, H.: Faith that enquires. (My '22)
- Wright, W.: K. Student's philosophy of religion. (My '22)
- History
- Glover, T. R. Progress in religion to the Christian era. (Ja '23)
- Religion and science
- Bryan, W.: J. In His image. (My '22)
- Hutchinson, H. G. Fortnightly club. (Ag '22)
- Religion in literature
- Shuster, G.: N. Catholic spirit in modern English literature. (S '22)
- Religion of the Psalms. Smith, J.: M. P. (F '23)
- Religious education
- Weigle, L. A. Training of children in the Christian family. (O '22)
- Reminiscences of Anton Chekhov. Gorki, M., pseud., and others. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Renfrew of the Royal Mounted. Erskine, L. Y. (Je '22)
- Reporters and reporting
- Vanderbilt, C. Personal experiences of a cub reporter. (D '22)
- Representative one-act plays by British and Irish authors. Clark, B. H., comp. (F '23)
- Representative one-act plays by continental authors. Moses, M. J., ed. (Ja '23)
- Research in industry the basis of economic progress. Fleming, A. P. M., and Pearce, J. G.: (Je '22)
- Rest Hollow mystery. Porter, R. N. (N '22)
- Retail charge account. Walter, F.: W., ed. (Jl '22)
- Retail trade
- Charters, W. W. How to sell at retail. (Ag '22)
- Walter, F.: W., ed. Retail charge account. (Jl '22)
- Whitehead, H. How to run a store. (Ap '22)
- Return, and other poems. Woods, M. L. (Ap '22)

Return of Alfred. (S '22)
 Return of the middle class. Corbin, J. (F '23)
 Revelation. Deamer, D. (Je '22)
 Revision of the treaty. Keynes, J. M. (Mr '22)
 Revolt against civilization. Stoddard, T. L. (Ag, N '22)
 Revolt of the oyster. Marquis, D. (F '23)

Revolutions
 Stoddard, T. L. Revolt against civilization. (Ag, N '22)

Rhine river
 Proprie, F. R. Spell of the Rhine. (Jl '22)
 Rich little poor boy. Gates, E. (Ap '22)
 Richard. Bryant, M. (D '22)
 Rider of Golden Bar. White, W. P. (Mr '22)
 Riders up! Beaumont, G. (D '22)
 Right end Emerson. Barbour, R. H. (O '22)
 Rising temper of the East. Hunt, F. (Ag '22)
 Rita Coventry. Street, J. L. (N '22)

Rivers
 Verrill, A. H. Rivers and their mysteries. (Ag '22)
 Rivers and their mysteries. Verrill, A. H. (Ag '22)

The Road. Tohenkin, E. (Mr '22)
 Road to the world. Waldron, W. (Ag '22)
 Roads of adventure. Paine, R. D. (F '23)
 Robin. Burnett, F. H. (S '22)

Rocky mountains
 Eaton, W. P. Skyline camps. (Ja '23)
 Graham, S. Tramping with a poet in the Rockies. (Jl '22)
 Jeffers, L. Call of the mountains. (N '22)

Rodney, George Brydges Rodney, 1st baron
 Hart, F. R. Admirals of the Caribbean. (O '22)

Rogues' haven. Bridges, R. (F '23)

Roland de la Platière, Mme Manon Jeanne Philpon
 Blashfield, E. Manon Philpon Roland. (Ap '22)

Roland Whately. Waugh, A. (Ja '23)
 Rollo in society. Chappell, G. S. (O '22)

Roman Catholic church
 Ryan, J. A., and Millar, M. F. X. State and the church. (O '22)

History

Bell, M. I. M. Short history of the papacy. (Mr '22)
 Romance of a great store. Hungerford, E. (Ap '22)
 Romance of a million dollars. Dejeans, E. (N '22)
 Romance of coal. Gibson, C. R. (F '23)
 Romance of Fiddler's Green. Sears, C. E. (My '22)
 Romantic world of music. Armstrong, W. (Ja '23)

Romanticism
 Finch, M. B., and Peers, E. A. Origins of French romanticism. (Mr '22)

Rome

Economic conditions

Simkhovitch, V. G. Toward the understanding of Jesus. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

History

Empire, B.C. 39-A.D. 476

Hadley, H. S. Rome and the world today. (F '23)
 Rome and the world today. Hadley, H. S. (F '23)

Roosevelt, Theodore
 Gilman, B. Roosevelt, the happy warrior. (Jl '22)
 Rhodes, J. F. McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, 1897-1909. (Ja '23)

Fiction

Andrews, M. R. S. His soul goes marching on. (Jl '22)
 Roosevelt, the happy warrior. Gilman, B. (Jl '22)
 Rootabaga stories. Sandburg, C. (Ja '23)
 Rope. Porter, H. E. (Ja '23)

Rosenberger, Jesse Leonard

Rosenberger, J. L. Through three centuries. (My '22)
 Rosinante to the road again. Dos Passos, J. R., jr. (Ap '22)
 Rough-hewn. Fisher, D. C. (N '22)

Rubber industry

Geer, W. C. Reign of rubber. (N '22)

Ruck, Berta. See Onions, E. (D '22)

Rumania

Clark, C. U. Greater Rumania. (Mr '22)
 Parkinson, M. R. Twenty years in Roumania. (D '22)

Rural child welfare. National child labor committee. (Ag, N '22)

Rural community. MacGarr, L. (D '22)

Rural mind and social welfare. Groves, E. R. (D '22)

Rural schools

Pittman, M. S. Successful teaching in rural schools. (F '23)

Russia

Court and courtiers

Gilliard, P. Thirteen years at the Russian court. (My '22)

Description and travel

Dukes, P. Red dusk and the morrow. (Ap, Je '22)
 Kehler, H. Red garden. (Ja '23)

Economic conditions

Brasol, B. L. Balance sheet of sovietism. (Ja '23)
 Heller, A. A. Industrial revival in soviet Russia. (F '23)

Foreign relations

Korff, S. A. Russia's foreign relations during the last half century. (Ap '22)
 Pasvolsky, L. Russia in the Far East. (Mr '22)

History

Revolution, 1917-

Dehn, L. Real tsaritsa. (O '22)
 Denikin, A. I. Russian turmoil. (O '22)
 Dukes, P. Red dusk and the morrow. (Ap, Je '22)
 Heller, A. A. Industrial revival in soviet Russia. (F '23)
 Landau-Aldanov, M. A. Lenin. (Mr '22)
 McCullagh, F. Prisoner of the Reds. (Je '22)
 Miliukov, P. N. Russia today and tomorrow. (S '22)
 Ossendowski, F. Beasts, men and gods. (N '22)

Politics and government

Miliukov, P. N. Russia today and tomorrow. (S '22)
 Russia today and tomorrow. Miliukov, P. N. (S '22)
 Russia in the Far East. Pasvolsky, L. (Mr '22)
 Russian immigrant. Davis, J. D. (N '22)
 Russian theatre. Saylor, O. M. (F '23)
 Russian turmoil. Denikin, A. I. (O '22)
 Russians and Ruthenians in America. Davis, J. (Jl '22)

Russians in the United States

Davis, J. Russian immigrant. (N '22)
 Davis, J. Russians and Ruthenians in America. (Jl '22)
 Russia's foreign relations during the last half century. Korff, S. A. (Ap '22)
 Rustle of silk. Hamilton, C. (Jl '22)

Ruthenians in the United States

Davis, J. D. Russians and Ruthenians in America. (Jl '22)

Sabsovich, Hirsch Loeb

Sabsovich, K. Adventures in idealism. (Jl '22)
 Sacrifice. Whitman, S. F. (Jl '22)
 Sackville-West, Victoria Mary. See Nicolson, V. M. (Mr '22)
 Sahara. Loti, P., pseud. (O '22)

Sailing

- Loomis, A. F. Cruise of the Hippocampus. (O '22)
 Saint Jeanne d'Arc. Smith, M. C. (Ja '23)
 St Luke of the nineteenth century. Barrington, E. I. (F '23)
 Saint-Saëns, Camille
 Hervey, A. Saint-Saëns. (My '22)
 Saint Teresa. Harrison, H: S. (Ap '22)
 Salem, Massachusetts

History

- Putnam, G: G. Salem vessels and their voyages. (O '22)
 Salem vessels and their voyages. Putnam, G: G. (O '22)
Salesmanship
 Charters, W. W. How to sell at retail. (Ag '22)
 Shrubsall, F. W. Efficient salesmanship. (Ag '22)
 Salt Lake. Benoit, P. (Je '22)
 Sam Blick's diary. Noland, S. C. (Ja '23)
 Sand, George, pseud. (Mme Amantine Lucile Aurore [Dupin] Dudevant)
 Sand, G: pseud., and Flaubert, G. George Sand-Gustave Flaubert letters. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Sareel. Dart, E. (Ag '22)
Savages
 Tinker, C. B. Nature's simple plan. (O '22)
 Scarhaven Keep. Fletcher, J. S. (Mr '22)
 Scarlet tanager. Tyson, J: A. (Je '22)
 Scarlet X. Wickham, H. (Ja '23)
School administration and organization
 Dewey, E. Dalton laboratory plan. (Mr '22)
School children

Food

- Bureau of educational experiments. New York. Health education and the nutrition class. (Jl '22)
School hygiene
 Bureau of educational experiments. New York. Health education and the nutrition class. (Jl '22)
School plays
 Barnum, M. D. School plays for all occasions. (Je '22)
 Lord, K. Plays for school and camp. (S '22)
 School plays for all occasions. Barnum, M. D. (Je '22)
 School shop installation and maintenance. Greene, L. S. (Ja '23)
Science
 Shafer, R. Progress and science. (Ja '22)
 Thomson, J: A., ed. Outline of science. (O '22)

History

- Curtis, W. C. Science and human affairs. (Ag '22)

Study and teaching

- Elkenberry, W: L. Teaching of general science. (S '22)
 Elhuff, L: New laboratory manual. (Ja '23)
 Science and human affairs. Curtis, W. C. (Ag '22)
 Science of purchasing. Hysell, H. (Jl '22)
 Scott Burton and the timber thieves. Cheyney, E: G. (Je '22)
 Scott, Robert Falcon
 Ponting, H: G. Great white south. (Ag '22)
 Scrap book. Saintsbury, G: E: B. (F '23)

Sculpture

- Post, C. R. History of European and American sculpture. (Jl '22)
 Sea gypsies of Malaya. White, W. G. (Ja '23)
 Sea wrack. Hutchinson, V. (O '22)
 Search. Larmine, M. R. (Je '22)
 Sears, Baldwin, pseud. Young, E. G. (Jl '22)
 Second empire. Guedalla, P. (D '22)
 Second person singular. Meynell, A. C. (My '22)
 Second plays. Milne, A. A. (F '23)
 Secret adversary. Christie, A. (S '22)
 Secret diplomacy. Reinsch, P. S. (Mr '22)

- Secret history of the English occupation. Blunt, W. S. (Ja '23)
 Secret partner. Frazer, E. (S '22)
 Secret places of the heart. Wells, H. G. (Jl '22)
 Secret telephone. Le Queux, W: T. (O '22)
 Secret toll. Thorne, P. and M. (S '22)
 Secret victory. McKenna, S. (Ap '22)
 Secret way. Gale, Z. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Secretaries, Private

- Church, A. L. Training of a secretary. (Ap '22)
 Secrets of the stars. McFee, I. N. (O '22)
 Seeds of time. Drinkwater, J: (Ap '22)
 Seeing the Eastern states. Faris, J: T. (Ja '23)
 Seizer of eagles. Schultz, J. W. (S '22)
 Selected articles on current problems in taxation. Beman, L. T., comp. (Mr '22)
 Selected articles on social insurance. Johnsen, J. E., comp. (O '22)
 Selected letters. Nietzsche, F. W. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Selected poems. Binyon, L. (S '22)
 Selected poems and ballads. Fort, P. (Mr '22)
 Selected readings in international trade and tariff problems. Taussig, F. W: comp. (Je '22)

Selective service act, 1917

- Dickinson, J: M. Building of an army. (S '22)

Self-culture

- Riddell, G: A. Some things that matter. (O '22)

Seneca, Lucius Annaeus

- Gummere, R: M. Seneca the philosopher. (O '22)
 Seneca the philosopher. Gummere, R: M. (O '22)

Senescence, Hall, G. S. (Ag '22)

- Sentinels along our coast. Collins, F. A. (O '22)
 Sergeant York and his people. Cowan, S: K. (S '22)

Sermon on the mount

- Brewster, H. S. Simple gospel. (My '22)

Servian literature

- Stanoyevich, M. S. Early Yugoslav literature (1000-1800). (Jl '22)
 Settlement horizon. Woods, R. A., and Kennedy, A. J. (D '22)
 Settlement idea. Holden, A. C. (Mr, Je '22)
 Settlement of wage disputes. Feis, H. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual) Settling of the sage. Evarts, H. G. (My '22)

Sex

- Ellis, H. Little essays of love and virtue. (My '22)
 Lawrence, D: H. Fantasia of the unconscious. (F '23)
 Royden, A. M. Sex and common sense. (Je '22)

Sex and common sense. Royden, A. M. (Je '22)Sex instruction

- Saywell, E. Growing girl. (N '22)

Sexual ethics

- Royden, A. M. Sex and common sense. (Je '22)
 Shadow witch. Crownfield, G. (O '22)
 Shakespeare. Alden, R. M. (N '22)
 Shakespeare, William
 Alden, R. M. Shakespeare. (N '22)
 Chapman, J: J. Glance toward Shakespeare. (Je '22)
 Slaughter, G. E. Shakespeare and the heart of a child. (Ja '23)

Authorship

- Robertson, J: M. Shakespeare canon. (S '22)

Bibliography

- Bartlett, H. C. Mr William Shakespeare. (O '22)

Characters

- Schücking, L. L. Character problems in Shakespeare's plays. (D '22)

Criticism and Interpretation

- Clutton-Brock, A. Shakespeare's Hamlet. (O '22)

Drama

Dane, C., pseud. Will Shakespeare. (Mr '22)

Natural history

Singleton, E. Shakespeare garden. (D '22)
 Shakespeare and the heart of a child. Slaughter, G. E. (Ja '23)
 Shakespeare canon. Robertson, J. M. (S '22)
 Shakespeare garden. Singleton, E. (D '22)
 Shakespeare's Hamlet. Clutton-Brock, A. (O '22)
 Shakespere to Sheridan. Thaler, A. (S '22)
 Shall it be again? Turner, J. K. (D '22)

Shantung, China

Willoughby, W. W. China at the conference. (O '22)

Wood, G.-Z. Shantung question. (O '22)

Shantung question. Wood, G.-Z. (O '22)

Sharing profits with employees. Bowie, J. A. (My '22)

She blows! and sparm at that! Hopkins, W. J. (My '22)

Sheet-metal pattern drafting and shop problems. Daugherty, J. S. (Ja '23)

Sheet metal work

Daugherty, J. S. Sheet-metal pattern drafting and shop problems. (Ja '23)

Sheila of Big Wreck Cove. Cooper, J. A. (Jl '22)

The shepherd. Blunden, E. (S '22)

Shepherds of the wild. Marshall, E. (My '22)

The Ship. Ervine, St J: G. (Jl '22)

Shipping

MacElwee, R. S., and Taylor, T: R. Wharf management, stevedoring and storage. (My '22)

Shoddy

Beaumont, R. Wool substitutes. (S '22)

Shoe-Bar Stratton. Ames, J. B. (Ag '22)

Shoes of the wind. Conkling, H. (D '22)

Short history of American literature. Cambridge history of American literature. (S '22)

Short history of the Irish people. Hayden, M. T., and Moonan, G. A. (Mr '22)

Short history of the Near East. Davis, W: S. (F '23)

Short history of the papacy. Bell, M. I. M. (Mr '22)

Short history of the world. Wells, H. G. (Ja '23)

Short storiesCollections

O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories of 1921. (My '22)
 O'Brien, E: J. H., ed. Best short stories of 1921. (Mr '22)

Short stories, French

Macklin, A. E., comp. and tr. Twenty-nine tales from the French. (Ap '22)

Short story

Clark, G. Manual of the short story art. (Jl '22)

Shouts and murmurs. Woolcott, A. (D '22)

Siberia

Pasvol'sky, L. Russia in the Far East. (Mr '22)

Side-lights on American literature. Pattee, F. L. (Ja '23)

Signs of sanity and the principles of mental hygiene. Paton, S. (O '22)

Silent and oral reading. Stone, C. R. (Jl '22)

Silent highways of the jungle. Dyott, G. M. (D '22)

Silver cross. Johnston, M. (Ap '22)

Simple gospel. Brewster, H. S. (My '22)

Simpson, Bertram Lenox. See Weale, B. L. P., pseud. (F '23)

Sin

Moxon, R. S. Doctrine of sin. (N '22)

Sin of Monsieur Pettipon. Connell, R: (S '22)

Since Cézanne. Bell, C. (Ag '22)

Sinclair, Bertha Muzzy. See Bower, B. M., pseud. (N '22)

Singers

Armstrong, W. Romantic world of music. (Ja '23)

Parker, H: T. Eighth notes. (Ja '23)

Tetrazzini, L. My life of song. (Jl '22)

Singing and voice culture

Fucito, S., and Beyer, B. J. Caruso and the art of singing. (Ap '22)

Marafioti, P. M. Caruso's method of voice production. (Ag '22)

Singing captives. Jones, E. B. C. (O '22)

Single blessedness, and other observations. Ade, G. (Ja '23)

Sir Edward Cook. Mills, J: S. (D '22)

Six years in Bolivia. Guise, A. V. L. (D '22)

Skepticism

Unamuno, M. de. Tragic sense of life. (Jl '22)

Skippy Bedelle. Johnson, O. M. (Ja '23)

Skis and ski-running

Lunn, A. Alpine ski-ing at all heights and seasons. (Ap '22)

Sky line of spruce. Marshall, E. (O '22)

Sky movies. Johnson, G. (O '22)

Skyline camps. Eaton, W. P. (Ja '23)

Slabs of the sunburnt West. Sandburg, C. (Jl '22)

Slavery in the United States

Woodson, C. G. Negro in our history. (O '22)

Sleeping fires. Atherton, G. F. (Mr '22)

Slings and arrows. Edgett, E. F. (Ja '23)

Snowdrift. Hendryx, J. B. (Ap '22)

So-called human race. Taylor, B. L. (Je '22)

Social administration including the poor laws. Clarke, J: J. (Ja '23)

Social chance with respect to culture and original nature. Ogburn, W: F. (F '23)

Social education

Hartman, G. Child and his school. (Ap, Je '22)

Snedden, D: S. Civic education. (F '23)

Social ethics

Heermance, E. L. Chaos or cosmos? (O '22)

Hobhouse, L. T. Elements of social justice. (O '22)

Rodó, J. E. Ariel. (D '22)

Social history of the American negro. Brawley, B: G. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Social problems

Burch, H: R., and Patterson, S: H. Problems of American democracy. (Ja '23)

Corbin, J. Return of the middle class. (F '23)

Cram, R. A. Towards the great peace. (My '22)

Ogburn, W: F. Social change with respect to culture and original nature. (F '23)

Ross, E: A. Social trend. (D '22)

Social psychology

Dewey, J. Human nature and conduct. (Ap '22)

Ginsberg, M. Psychology of society. (N '22)

Groves, E. R. Rural mind and social welfare. (D '22)

Kolnai, A. Psychoanalysis and sociology. (Mr '22)

Lippmann, W. Public opinion. (My '22)

Platt, C. Psychology of social life. (Jl '22)

Williams, J. M. Principles of social psychology. (N '22)

Social sciences

Hill, H. C. Community life and civic problems. (My '22)

Williams, J. M. Principles of social psychology. (N '22)

Social settlements

Holden, A. C. Settlement idea. (Mr, Je '22)

Jacobs, L. Three types of practical ethical movements of the past half century. (Jl '22)

Woods, R. A., and Kennedy, A. J. Settlement horizon. (D '22)

Social trend. Ross, E: A. (D '22)

Social work

Clarke, J: J. Social administration including the poor laws. (Ja '23)

Devine, E: T. Social work. (Mr, Je '22)

Holden, A. C. Settlement idea. (Mr, Je '22)

Social work—Continued

- Richmond, M. E. What is social case work. (Je '22)
 Southard, E. E., and Jarrett, M. C. Kingdom of evils. (F '23)

Socialism

- Benedict, B. Larger socialism. (N '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Clow, W. M. Quest of industrial peace. (O '22)
 Doughty, W. H., jr. Socialism and the average man. (Jl '22)
 Eucken, R. C. Socialism. (My '22)
 Landau-Aldanov, M. A. Lenin. (Mr '22)
 Sturt, H. C. Socialism and character. (O '22)

Socialism, Christian

- Jacobs, L. Three types of practical ethical movements of the past half century. (Jl '22)

- Socialism and character. Sturt, H. C. (O '22)
 Socialism and the average man. Doughty, W. H., jr. (Jl '22)

Society, Primitive

- Goldenweiser, A. A. Early civilization. (D '22)

Society verse

- Fuess, C. M., and Stearns, H. C., comps. Little book of society verse. (S '22)

Sociology

- Giddings, F. H. Studies in the theory of human society. (Ap, Je '22)
 Heermance, E. L. Chaos or cosmos? (O '22)
 Hobhouse, L. T. Elements of social justice. (O '22)
 Ogburn, W. F. Social change with respect to culture and original nature. (F '23)
 Snedden, D. S. Educational sociology. (F '23)

History

- Bogardus, E. S. History of social thought. (My '22)

Sociology, Christian

- Hutchins, G., and Rochester, A. Jesus Christ and the world today. (S '22)
 Solario the tailor. Bowen, W. A. (N '22)
 Soliloquies in England. Santayana, G. (Ag '22)

- Some birds of the countryside. Massingham, H. J. (S '22)

- Some distinguished Americans. O'Higgins, H. J. (D '22)

- Some impressions of my elders. Ervine, St J. G. (F '23)

- Some physico-chemical themes. Stewart, A. W. (Ja '23)

- Some political ideas and persons. Bailey, J. (Ag '22)

- Some revolutions and other diplomatic experiences. Elliot, H. G. (Ag '22)

- Some things that matter. Riddell, G. A. (O '22)

- Song of songs. Jastrow, M., jr. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- Songs for fishermen. Morris, J., and Adams, St C., comps. (F '23)

- Songs for parents. Farrar, J. C. (Jl '22)

- Songs of challenge. Frothingham, R., ed. (O '22)

- Songs of the glens of Antrim, and More songs of the glens of Antrim. O'Neill, M., pseud. (My '22)

- Songs of youth. Thayer, M. D. (D '22)

- Sonnets of a portrait-painter. Ficke, A. D. (F '23)

- Sonnets to a red-haired lady. Marquis, D. (Jl '22)

- Soul and body of an army. Hamilton, I. S. M. (Mr '22)

- Soul of a child. Björkman, E. A. (Ap '22)

- Soul of Dorset. Darton, F. J. H. (D '22)

South AmericaDescription and travel

- Foster, H. L. Adventures of a tropical tramp. (Ap '22)
 Martin, F. H. South America from a surgeon's point of view. (D '22)
 Peck, A. S. Industrial and commercial South America. (Jl '22)

History

- Robertson, W. S. History of the Latin-American nations. (N '22)

Industries and resources

- Peck, A. S. Industrial and commercial South America. (Jl '22)

- South America from a surgeon's point of view. Martin, F. H. (D '22)

South CarolinaPoetry

- Heywood, Du B., and Allen, H. Carolina chansons. (F '23)

Social life and customs

- Pringle, E. W. Chronicles of Chicora Wood. (Jl '22)

- South of the line. Stock, R. (F '23)

South Pole

- Ponting, H. G. Great white south. (Ag '22)

South Sea Islands

- Greenbie, S. Pacific triangle. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- O'Brien, F. Atolls of the sun. (N '22)

Southern Pacific railroad

- Daggett, S. Chapters on the history of the Southern Pacific railroad. (Ap '22)

Soviet government

- Brasol, B. L. Balance sheet of sovietism. (Ja '23)

- Space—time—matter. Weyl, H. (F '23)

Spain

- Dos Passos, J. R., jr. Rosinante to the road again. (Ap '22)

Description and travel

- Brown, I. Nights and days on the gypsy trail. (Ja '23)

- Garstin, C. Coasts of romance. (D '22)

- Peixotto, E. C. Through Spain and Portugal. (Ja '23)

- Spanish royal tapestries. Calvert, A. F. (My '22)

- Speaking of the Turks. Zia, Mufty-Zade K. (Ja '23)

Speculation

- Hamilton, W. P. Stock market barometer. (S '22)

- Smith, J. G. Organized produce markets. (Jl '22)

- Spell of the Rhine. Fraprie, F. R. (Jl '22)

- Spellbinders. Banning, M. C. (N '22)

- Spinster of this parish. Maxwell, W. B. (O '22)

- Spirit of the common law. Pound, R. (Mr '22)

Spiritual life

- Bacon, A. Consolation. (Je '22)

- Underhill, E. Life of the spirit. (D '22)

Spiritualism

- Cornillier, P.-E. Survival of the soul. (S '22)

- Doyle, A. C. Wanderings of a spiritualist. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

- Randall, E. C. Frontiers of the after life. (F '23)

- Stead, E. W., ed. Communication with the next world. (F '23)

Sponges

- Cresswell, E. J. J. Sponges. (D '22)

- Sporting life. Lynd, R. (D '22)

Sports

- Lynd, R. Sporting life. (D '22)

- Spotted Deer. Gregor, E. R. (Je '22)

- Staël-Holstein, Anne Louise Germaine (Necker) baronne de

- Hagard, A. C. P. Madame de Staël. (Ag '22)

- Stag cook book. MacSheridan, C., comp. (F '23)

- Stage life of Mrs Stirling. Allen, P. (Ag '22)

- Standard handbook for electrical engineers. (Ja '23)

- Standard seamanship for the merchant service. Riesenherg, F. (N '22)

Stanton, Elizabeth Cady

- Stanton, E. C. Elizabeth Cady Stanton. (Ap, Je '22)

Stars

- McFee, I. N. Secrets of the stars. (O '22)

State. The

- Krahbe, H. Modern idea of the state. (D '22)

- Ryan, J. A., and Millar, M. F. X. State and the church. (O '22)
- State and municipal government in the United States. Kimball, E. (O '22)
- State and the church. Ryan, J. A., and Millar, M. F. X. (O '22)
- State government. Dodd, W. F. (F '23)
- State governments
Dodd, W. F. State government. (F '23)
- Kimball, E. State and municipal government in the United States. (O '22)
- State rights
Pierson, C. W. Our changing Constitution. (D '22)
- Statesmen
Bagger, E. S. Eminent Europeans. (Ja '23)
- Sherrill, C. H. Prime ministers and presidents. (Ap '22)
- Statesmen, American
Gilbert, C. W. Behind the mirrors. (S '22)
- Statesmen, British
Bigham, C. Prime ministers of Britain. (O '22)
- Lucy, H. Lords and commons. (S '22)
- Mackintosh, A. From Gladstone to Lloyd George. (S '22)
- Stead, William Thomas
Stead, E. W., ed. Communication with the next world. (F '23)
- Steam boilers
Croft, T. W., ed. Steam power plant auxiliaries and accessories. (Ja '23)
- Royds, R. Heat transmission in boilers, condensers and evaporators. (Ja '23)
- Steam engineering
Gornston, M. H. Operating engineer's catechism of steam engineering. (Ag '22)
- Graham, F. D. Audel's engineers and mechanics guide. (N '22)
- Steam power plant auxiliaries and accessories. Croft, T. W., ed. (Ja '23)
- Steel
Aitchison, L. Engineering steels. (N '22)
- Electrometallurgy
Gow, C. C. Electro-metallurgy of steel. (Ja '23)
- Steel. Walker, C. R. (Ja '23)
- Steel workers
Walker, C. R. Steel. (Ja '23)
- Stiff lip. Eng title of Her unwelcome husband. George, W. L. (O '22)
- Still life. Murry, J. M. (D '22)
- Stinnes, Hugo
Brinckmeyer, H. Hugo Stinnes. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
- Stirling, Arthur, pseud. See Sinclair, U. B. (D '22)
- Stirling, Mrs Mary Ann (afterwards Lady Gregory)
Allen, P. Stage life of Mrs Stirling. (Ag '22)
- Stock exchange
Hamilton, W. P. Stock market barometer. (S '22)
- Huebner, S. S. Stock market. (Mr '22)
- Meeker, J. E. Work of the stock exchange. (My '22)
- Stock market. Huebner, S. S. (Mr '22)
- Stock market barometer. Hamilton, W. P. (S '22)
- Stokers, Mechanical
Worker, J. G., and Peebles, T. A. Mechanical stokers. (N '22)
- Stone age
Quennell, M., and C. H. B. Everyday life in the old stone age. (Jl '22)
- Stone in the path. Chapin, M. L. (F '23)
- Stores systems
Farquhar, H. H. Factory storeskeeping. (Ja '23)
- Stories from the Russian operas. Davidson, G. (F '23)
- Story-lives of master musicians. Brower, H. M. (F '23)
- Story of a varied life. Rainford, W. S. (D '22)
- Story of drugs. Fuller, H. C. (Jl '22)
- Story of the Irish nation. Hackett, F. (Jl '22)
- Story of utopias. Mumford, L. (F '23)
- Stowage
MacElwee, R. S., and Taylor, T. R. Wharf management, stavedoring and storage. (My '22)
- Stowe, A. Peter, pseud. See Stoll, A. (O '22)
- Strange attraction. Mander, J. (Ja '23)
- Streaks of life. Smyth, E. M. (My '22)
- Stretton street affair. Le Queux, W. T. (Je '22)
- Strikes
Great Britain
Askwith, G. R. A. Industrial problems and disputes. (Ap '22)
- Stronger influence. Young, F. E. M. (O '22)
- Structures, Theory of
Ellis, C. A. Essentials in the theory of framed structures. (Ag '22)
- Struggle for power in Europe, 1917-1921. Guest, L. H. (Ap '22)
- Stubble. Looms, G. (N '22)
- Student's philosophy of religion. Wright, W. K. (My '22)
- Studies in literature; second series. Quiller-Couch, A. T. (Ja '23)
- Studies in psychoanalysis. Baudouin, C. (Ja '23)
- Studies in the palaeopathology of Egypt. Ruffer, M. A. (Mr '22)
- Studies in the theory of human society. Giddings, F. H. (Ap, Je '22)
- Study in moral problems. Laing, B. M. (F '23)
- Study of American history. Bryce, J. B. (Mr '22)
- Style, Literary
Murry, J. M. Problem of style. (S '22)
- Subconscious courtship. Onions, B. (D '22)
- Subconsciousness
Long, C. E. Collected papers on the psychology of phantasy. (Mr '22)
- Pierce, F. Our unconscious mind and how to use it. (My '22)
- Subject races
Hunt, F. Rising temper of the East. (Ag '22)
- Success
Beaverbrook, W. M. A. Success. (Jl '22)
- Riddell, G. A. Some things that matter. (O '22)
- Wells, G. R. M. Youth and the open door. (N '22)
- Success through vocational guidance. McKinney, J. and Simons, A. M. (F '23)
- Successful teaching in rural schools. Pittman, M. S. (F '23)
- Sumatra
Putnam, G. G. Salem vessels and their voyages. (O '22)
- Sun chaser. Marks, J. A. (F '23)
- Sundry accounts. Cobb, I. S. (Jl '22)
- Sunny-San. Watanna, O., pseud. (Ag '22)
- Sunny side. Milne, A. A. (F '23)
- Supply and demand
Henderson, H. D. Supply and demand. (S '22)
- Support. Ashmun, M. E. (F '23)
- Supreme court in United States history. Warren, C. (Ag '22)
- Surety bonds. Lunt, E. C. (F '23)
- Suretyship and guaranty
Lunt, E. C. Surety bonds. (F '23)
- Survey. Beerbohm, M. (Ap '22)
- Survival of the soul. Cornillier, P.-E. (S '22)
- Sussex, England
Vince, C. Wayfarers in Arcady. (Mr '22)
- Suzanna. Drago, H. S. (F '23)
- Swann's way. Proust, M. (Ja '23)
- Sweet waters. Nicolson, H. G. (Mr '22)
- Swinburne, Algernon Charles
Watts-Dunton, C. Home life of Swinburne. (O '22)
- Switzerland
History
Oechsli, W. History of Switzerland. (D '22)
- Symbolism in literature
Gourmont, R. de. Book of masks. (My '22)

Syria

Description and travel

Carpenter, F. G.: Holy Land and Syria. (Ja '23)

Tahiti

Calderon, G.: Tahiti. (Mr '22)
Tale of Triona. Locke, W. J.: (N '22)
Tales of Chinatown. Rohmer, S., pseud. (N '22)
Tales of lonely trails. Grey, Z. (D '22)
Tales of the jazz age. Fitzgerald, F. S. K. (D '22)

Tanning

Rogers, A. Practical tanning. (Ag '22)

Tapestry

Calvert, A. F.: Spanish royal tapestries. (My '22)

Tariff

Taussig, F. W.: comp. Selected readings in international trade and tariff problems. (Je '22)

Tarrant of Tin Spout. Oyen, H.: (Jl '22)
Tattooed arm. Ostrander, I. E. (N '22)

Taxation

Beman, L. T., comp. Selected articles on current problems in taxation. (Mr '22)
Taytay's tales. De Huff, E. W. (O '22)

Teaching

Adams, J.: Modern developments in educational practice. (Ja '23)
Davis, S. E. Technique of teaching. (F '23)
Dewey, E. Dalton laboratory plan. (Mr '22)
Parkhurst, H. H. Education on the Dalton plan. (Ja '23)
Pittman, M. S. Successful teaching in rural schools. (F '23)
Teaching of general science. Eikenberry, W. L.: (S '22)
Teaching to think. Boraas, J. (F '23)
Technique of psychoanalysis. Forsyth, D.: (O '22)
Technique of teaching. Davis, S. E. (F '23)
Technique of Thomas Hardy. Beach, J. W. (Ja '23)
Ted and the telephone. Bassett, S. W. (S '22)
Teixeira de Mattos, Alexander Louis McKenna, S. Tex. (Ja '23)

Telescope

Bell, L.: Telescope. (N '22)
Tell England. Raymond, E. (S '22)
Ten essays on Zionism and Judaism. Ginzenberg, A. (Jl '22)
Ten years at the court of St James'. Eckardstein, H. (Je '22)

Tennis

Myers, A. W. Twenty years of lawn tennis. (Jl '22)

Fiction

Tilden, W. T. It's all in the game. (My '22)
Terrestrial and celestial globes. Stevenson, E. L. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual) Terribly intimate portraits. Coward, N. (S '22)

Terriers

Matheson, D. Terriers. (N '22)
Tertium organum. Ouspensky, P. D. (D '22)

Testing

Batson, R. G. C., and Hyde, J. H.: Mechanical testing. (Ja '23)

Tetrazzini, Luisa

Tetrazzini, L. My life of song. (Jl '22)
Tex. McKenna, S. (Ja '23)
Text-book of the history of architecture. Hamlin, A. D. F. (Je '22)
Text-book of zoology. Parker, T. J., and Haswell, W. A. (Ja '23)

Textile industry and fabrics

Beaumont, R. Wool substitutes. (S '22)
The room. Stern, G. B. (N '22)
The ship. Irvine, St J.: G. (Ag, N '22)

Theater

Barker, H. G. Exemplary theatre. (Jl '22)
Darlington, W. A. Through the fourth wall. (N '22)

Lewisohn, L. Drama and the stage. (My '22)

MacGowan, K. Theatre of tomorrow. (Mr '22)
MacGowan K., and Jones, R. E. Continental stagecraft. (F '23)
Nathan, G. J. Critic and the drama. (Mr '22)
Woolcott, A. Mr Dickens goes to the play. (D '22)

Little theater movement

Arnold, A. G. Little country theater. (F '23)

England

Allen, P. Stage life of Mrs Stirling. (Ag '22)
Thaler, A. Shakespere to Sheridan. (S '22)

Russia

Sayler, O. M. Russian theatre. (F '23)

United States

Drew, J.: My years on the stage. (Ja '23)
Thomas, A.: Print of my remembrance. (D '22)
Woolcott, A. Shouts and murmurs. (D '22)
Theatre of tomorrow. MacGowan, K. (Mr '22)
Then came Molly. Ogden, H. V. C. (S '22)
Theology
Faulkner, J.: A. Modernism and the Christian faith. (Mr '22)
Harris, C.: Creeds or no creeds? (O '22)
Quick, O. C. Liberalism, modernism and tradition. (F '23)
Theory of marginal value. Birck, L. V. (N '22)
There goes the groom. Smith, G. A. (Ag '22)
They call me carpenter. Sinclair, U. B. (D '22)
Things mother used to make. Gurney, L. M. (Ap '22)
Things we are. Murry, J.: M. (N '22)
Thirteen years at the Russian court. Gilliard, P. (My '22)
This freedom. Hutchinson, A. S. M. (O '22)
Thomas Hardy, poet and novelist. Chew, S.: C. (Ag '22)
Thomas Hardy's Dorset. Hopkins, R. T. (Ag '22)

Thoreau, Henry David

Burroughs, J.: Last harvest. (O '22)
Thought and thinking
Boraas, J. Teaching to think. (F '23)
Thoughts of youth. Drury, S.: S. (F '23)
Thousand and one afternoons in Chicago. Hecht, B. (F '23)
Three asses in Bolivia. Portman, L. (N '22)
Three black bags. Angellotti, M. P. (N '22)
Three crosses. Tozzi, F. (Mr '22)
Three fires. Burr, A. J. (N '22)
Three lovers. Swinnerton, F. A. (N '22)
Three men and a maid. Wodehouse, P. G. (Ag '22)
Three plays. Milne, A. A. (O '22)
Three plays. Pirandello, L. (Ja '23)
Three travellers in North Africa. Ward, E. (F '23)
Three types of practical ethical movements of the past half century. Jacobs, L. (Jl '22)
Through Spain and Portugal. Peixotto, E. C. (Ja '23)
Through the fourth wall. Darlington, W.: A. (N '22)
Through the shadows. Alington, G. A. (Jl '22)
Through the Torii. Noguchi, Y. (Ag '22)
Through three centuries. Rosenberger, J. L. (My '22)

Tibet

Description and travel

Howard-Bury, C. K., and others. Mount Everest. (Ag '22)
Tide rips. Connolly, J. B. (Je '22)
Tilhoti, pseud. See Calderon, G.: (Mr '22)
Timber pirate. Jenkins, C.: C. (F '23)
To tell you the truth. Merrick, L. (Ja '23)
To the last man. Grey, Z. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Tocsin of revolt. Matthews, B. (N '22)
Tolstoi, Leo Nikolalevich, count
Tolstoi, S. A. Autobiography of Countess Tolstoy. (D '22)
Tomorrow we diet. Putnam, N. (Ag '22)

Tool engineering. Dowd, A. A., and Curtis, F. W. (Ag '22)
Torch bearers. Eng title of Watchers of the sky. Noyes, A. (Je '22)
Torquill's success. Coxon, M. (Ap '22)
Toward the understanding of Jesus. Simkhovitch, F. G. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Towards the great peace. Cram, R. A. (My '22)
Tower of oblivion. Onions, O. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Track of the "Typhoon." Nutting, W. A. (Ag '22)
Trade unions

Great Britain

Appleton, W. A. What we want and where we are. (Ap '22)

United States

Perlman, S. History of trade unionism in the United States. (F '23)
 Savage, M. D. Industrial unionism in America. (D '22)
Tradition and progress. Murray, G. (Mr '22)
Tragedy at the Beach club. Johnston, W. (My '22)
Tragic sense of life. Unamuno, M. de. (Jl '22)
Trail craft. Fordyce, C. P. (D '22)
Trail of the ragged robin. Klickmann, F. (O '22)
Trail of the Spanish horse. Schultz, J. W. (O '22)
Trail of the white mule. Bower, B. M., pseud. (N '22)
Training of a secretary. Church, A. L. (Ap '22)
Training of children in the Christian family. Weigle, L. A. (O '22)
Tramping Methodist. Kaye-Smith, S. (D '22)
Tramping on life. Kemp, H. H. (N '22)
Tramping with a poet in the Rockies. Graham, S. (Jl '22)
Translations from the Chinese. Morley, C. D. (S '22)
Trans-Mississippi West. Goodwin, C. L. (O '22) Transportation

China

Sun Yat-sen. International development of China. (F '23)

Traprock. Walter E., pseud. See Chappell, G. S. (O '22)
Travel in the two last centuries of three generations. Roget, S. R., ed. (Mr '22)

Travels

Roget, S. R., ed. Travel in the two last centuries of three generations. (Mr '22)
Treasure of Golden Cap. Kitchin, F. H. (Ja '23)
Treasure of Eskimo tales. Bayliss, C. (O '22)
Treasure of plays for women. Shay, F., ed. (D '22)

Treaties

Hill, C. E. Leading American treaties. (Mr, Je '22)
Tree with a bird in it. Widdemer, M. (Ja '23)

Trees

North America

Sargent, C. S. Manual of trees of North America. (Ja '23)
Tremendous adventures. Calthrop, D. C. (D '22)
Trend of the races. Haynes, G. G. (Ja '23)
Tribal god. Tremaine, H. (Mr '22)

Tricks

Houdini, H. Houdini's paper magic. (Ag '22)
Trilby May crashes in. Ford, S. (N '22)

Trobriand Islands

Malinowski, B. Argonauts of the western Pacific. (N '22)

Trout fishing

Clapham, R. Trout-fishing for the beginner. (Ag '22)
Trout-fishing for the beginner. Clapham, R. (Ag '22)
Truisms of statecraft. Smith, B. (D '22)
Truly rural. Wright, R. L. (My '22)
Truth about Henry Ford. Bushnell, S. T. (Ag '22)

Truth about the Jews. Hurt, W. (D '22)
Truth about Vignolles. Kinross, A. (Jl '22)

Tunis

Ward, E. Three travellers in North Africa. (F '23)

Tunnelling

Brunton, D. W., and Davis, J. A. Modern tunnelling. (Ag '22)

Turkey

Zia, Mufti-Zade K. Speaking of the Turks. (Ja '23)

History

Davis, W. S. Short history of the Near East. (F '23)
 Elliot, H. G. Some revolutions and other diplomatic experiences. (Ag '22)

Politics and government

Djemal, A. Memories of a Turkish statesman, 1913-1919. (F '23)
Turned-about girls. Dix, B. M. (N '22)
Turner twins. Barbour, R. H. (O '22)
Tutors' lane. Lewis, W. (N '22)
Twenty-first burr. Lauriston, V. (Ja '23)
Twenty-five years in East Africa. Roscoe, J. (Ap '22)
Twenty-nine tales from the French. Macklin, A. E., comp. and tr. (Ap '22)
Twenty years in Roumania. Parkinson, M. R. (D '22)
Twenty years of lawn tennis. Myers, A. W. (Jl '22)
Two dead men. Hansen, R. (S '22)
Two-gun Sue. Ostrander, I. E. (S '22)
Two shall be born. Oemler, M. (N '22)
Types of the essay. Heydrick, B. A., ed. (O '22)

Typhoon (yacht)

Nutting, W. W. Track of the "Typhoon." (Ag '22)

Uganda

Roscoe, J. Twenty-five years in East Africa. (Ap '22)

Ulster, Ireland

McNeill, R. Ulster's stand for union. (O '22)
 Ulster's stand for union. McNeill, R. (O '22)
Uncle Bijah's ghost. Lee, J. B. (Je '22)
Under four administrations. Straus, O. S. (F '23)
Under sail. Eng title of Instrument of the gods. Colcord, L. R. (D '22)
Undertakers' garland. Bishop, J. P., and Wilson, E., jr. (D '22)

United States

Army

Dickinson, J. M. Building of an army. (S '22)

Biography

Beard, A. E. S. Our foreign-born citizens. (O '22)
Bradford, G. American portraits. (Ap '22)
Depew, C. M. My memories of eighty years. (Ap, Je '22)
Goodspeed, T. W. University of Chicago biographical sketches. (O '22)
Sherman, S. P. Americans. (F '23)
Wade, M. H. Real Americans. (N '22)

Church history

Brown, W. A. Church in America. (Ja '23)

Civilization

Drake, D. America faces the future. (My '22)
Stearns, H. E., ed. Civilization in the United States. (Mr '22)

Commerce

Cooper, C. S. Foreign trade markets and methods. (Ap '22)
Putnam, G. G. Salem vessels and their voyages. (O '22)

Congress

Gilbert, C. W. Behind the mirrors. (S '22)

United States—Continued

Constitution

- Norton, T. J. Constitution of the United States. (N '22)
 Pierson, C. W. Our changing Constitution. (D '22)
 Warren, C. Supreme court in United States history. (Ag '22)

Eighteenth amendment

- Franklin, F. What prohibition has done to America. (D '22)

Constitutional history

- Norton, T. J. Constitution of the United States. (N '22)

Constitutional law

- Wright, Q. Control of American foreign relations. (Ja '23)

Description and travel

- Asquith, M. My impressions of America. (D '22)
 Chesterton, G. K. What I saw in America. (N '22)
 Jeffers, L. Call of the mountains. (N '22)
 Mesick, J. L. English traveller in America, 1785-1835. (F '23)
 Shepherd, C. K. Across America by motor cycle. (Ja '23)
 Sheridan, C. C. My American diary. (My '22)

Economic conditions

- Burch, H. R., and Patterson, S. H. Problems of American democracy. (Ja '23)
 Ingalls, W. R. Wealth and income of the American people. (D '22)
 Lapp, J. A. Economics and the community. (N '22)
 Wells, L. R. Industrial history of the United States. (Ja '23)

Foreign population

- Gavit, J. P. Americans by choice. (O '22)
 Miller, K. D. Czecho-Slovaks in America. (Je '22)
 Stauffer, R. E., ed. American spirit in the writings of Americans of foreign birth. (J '22)

Foreign relations

- Cresson, W. P. Holy alliance. (F '23)
 Dennett, T. Americans in eastern Asia. (F '23)
 Fahs, C. H. America's stake in Europe. (Mr '22)
 Hill, C. E. Leading American treaties. (Mr, Je '22)
 Hyde, C. C. International law chiefly as interpreted and applied by the United States. (N '22)
 Inman, S. G. Problems in Pan Americanism. (Ap '22)
 Mathews, J. M. Conduct of American foreign relations. (N '22)
 Tokutomi, I. Japanese-American relations. (Je '22)
 Wright, Q. Control of American foreign relations. (Ja '23)

Great Britain

- Hendrick, B. J. Life and letters of Walter H. Page. (N '22)
 Newton, J. F. Preaching in London. (N '22)

History

- Bryce, J. B. Study of American history. (Mr '22)
 Forman, S. E. Our republic. (Ja '23)
 Hill, C. E. Leading American treaties. (Mr, Je '22)
 Schlesinger, A. M. New viewpoints in American history. (N '22)

Colonial period

- Greene, E. B. Foundations of American nationality. (O '22)

Revolution—Causes

- Adams, R. G. Political ideas of the American revolution. (Ja '23)

- Van Tyne, C. H. Causes of the war of independence. (N '22)

1815-1861

- Bowers, C. G. Party battles of the Jackson period. (Ja '23)
 McCormac, E. I. James K. Polk. (Je '22)

Civil war

Hospitals, charities, etc.

- Barton, W. E. Life of Clara Barton. (Mr, Je '22)

Civil war—Personal narratives

- Lyman, T. Meade's headquarters, 1863-1865. (Ja '23)

1865-

- Oberholtzer, E. P. History of the United States since the Civil war. (S '22)
 Rhodes, J. F. McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, 1897-1909. (Ja '23)

War of 1898

- Paine, R. D. Roads of adventure. (F '23)

Industries

- Wells, L. R. Industrial history of the United States. (Ja '23)

Navy

- Daniels, J. Our navy at war. (Ag '22)
 Schroeder, S. Half century of naval service. (Jl '22)

Officials and employees

- Mayers, L. Federal service. (Je '22)

Politics and government

- Bowers, C. G. Party battles of the Jackson period. (Ja '23)
 Burch, H. R., and Patterson, S. H. Problems of American democracy. (Ja '23)
 Colegrove, K. W. American citizens and their government. (My '22)
 Depew, C. M. My memories of eighty years. (Ap, Je '22)
 Dunn, A. W. From Harrison to Harding. (N '22)
 Gilbert, C. W. Behind the mirrors. (S '22)
 Hill, H. C. Community life and civic problems. (My '22)
 Jenks, J. W., and Smith, R. D. We and our government. (N '22)
 Merriam, C. E. American party system. (N '22)
 Ogg, F. A., and Ray, P. O. Introduction to American government. (N '22)
 Reed, T. H. Loyal citizenship. (Ag '22)
 Schlesinger, A. M. New viewpoints in American history. (N '22)

Race question

- Brawley, B. G. Social history of the American negro. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Haynes, G. G. Trend of the races. (Ja '23)

Social conditions

- Brewer, D. C. Peril of the republic. (N '22)
 Burch, H. R., and Patterson, S. H. Problems of American democracy. (Ja '23)
 Finney, R. L. Causes and cures for the social unrest. (O '22)
 MacGarr, L. Rural community. (D '22)
 Woods, R. A., and Kennedy, A. J. Settlement horizon. (D '22)

Social life and customs

- Mesick, J. L. English traveller in America, 1785-1835. (F '23)

Supreme court

- Warren, C. Supreme court in United States history. (Ag '22)

Territorial expansion

- Goodwin, C. L. Trans-Mississippi West. (O '22)

- Universities and scientific life in the United States. Caullery, M. J. G. (O '22)
 University debaters' annual. Phelps, E. M., ed. (N '22)
 University of Chicago biographical sketches. Goodspeed, T. W. (O '22)

- Unknown Kent. Maxwell, D. (Jl '22)
 Unlit lamp. Holding, E. S. (D '22)
 Unnoticed London. Montizambert, E. (Je '22)
 Unseen side of child life. Harrison, E. (Mr '22)
 Unspeaking gentleman. Marquand, J. P. (Ag '22)
 Up against it in Nigeria. Langa-Langa, pseud. (O '22)
 Up stream. Lewisohn, L. (Ap, Je '22)
 Up-to-date waitress. Hill, J. M. (D '22)
Utah
 James, G. W. Utah. (Jl '22)
Utopias
 Mumford, L. Story of utopias. (F '23)
- Vagrant tune. Holland, B. T. (S '22)
Valentine, Douglas, pseud. See Williams, V. (Jl '22)
 Valiant dust. Gerould, K. F. (Ja '23)
 Valley waters. Stewart, C. D. (F '23)
Value
 Birck, L. V. Theory of marginal value. (N '22)
 Value of good manners. Bailey, M. E. (Jl '22)
 Vandemark's folly. Quick, H. (Mr '22)
 Vanderdecken. Stacpoole, H. De V. S. (Ja '23)
 Van Eycks and their followers. Conway, M. (Jl '22)
 Vanishing of Betty Varian. Wells, C. (S '22)
 Vanishing point. Dawson, C. W. (Je '22)
 The veil. De La Mare, W. J. (Ap '22)
 Van Zanten's happy days. Bruun, L. V. (Ap, Je '22)
Vase painting
 Buschor, E. Greek vase-painting. (Mr '22)
Vegetable gardening
 Stout, A. B. Gardening. (Je '22)
 Vehement flame. Deland, M. W. (Jl '22)
 The veil. De La Mare, W. J. (Ap '22)
 Veneerings. Johnston, H. H. (My '22)
Venice
Description
 Hutton, E. Pageant of Venice. (Jl '22)
Vermeer, Jan
 Lucas, E. V. Vermeer of Delft. (Ag '22)
 Vermeer of Delft. Lucas, E. V. (Ag '22)
Vernon, Edward
 Hart, F. R. Admirals of the Caribbean. (O '22)
Versailles, Treaty of, 1919
 Lyon, L. Pomp of power. (N '22)
 Vertical city. Hurst, F. (Ap '22)
Vlaud, Louis Marie Julien. See Loti, P., pseud. (O '22)
Victoria, queen of Great Britain
 Bailey, J. Some political ideas and persons. (Ag '22)
 Victorian age. Inge, W. R. (O '22)
 Viewpoints in essays. Horton, M. L. (N '22)
 Village street. Faust, F. (N '22)
 Viola Gwyn. McCutcheon, G. B. (N '22)
Virgil, Publius Virgilius Maro
 Frank, T. Vergil. (My '22)
 Virgin of the sun. Haggard, H. R. (Jl '22)
Virginia
Description and travel
 Vallandigham, E. N. Delaware and the Eastern shore. (Ja '23)
 Virginia scout. Pendexter, H. (N '22)
Vitamines
 Plimmer, V. G., and R. H. A. Vitamins and the choice of food. (Ag '22)
 Sherman, H. C., and Smith, S. L. Vitamins. (Ag '22)
 Vitamins. Sherman, H. C., and Smith, S. L. (Ag '22)
 Vitamins and the choice of food. Plimmer, V. G., and R. H. A. (Ag '22)
Vocational guidance
 McKinney, J., and Simons, A. M. Success through vocational guidance. (F '23)
 Vocations. O'Donovan, G. (My '22)
 Voice in the wilderness. Blaker, R. (N '22)
- Voltaire, François Marie Arouet de
 Strachey, G. L. Books and characters. (Ag '22)
Voyages and travels
 Keyser, A. L. People and places. (D '22)
 Loomis, A. F. Cruise of the Hippocampus. (O '22)
 Spears, J. R. Captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer. (S '22)
 Voyages of Doctor Dolittle. Lofting, H. (N '22)
- Wages
 Bowley, A. L. Prices and wages in the United Kingdom. (Ag '22)
 Feis, H. Settlement of wage disputes. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Wagner, Richard
 Nietzsche, F. W., and Wagner, R. Nietzsche-Wagner correspondence. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
Waiters
 Hill, J. M. Up-to date waitress. (D '22)
 Waiting for daylight. Tomlinson, H. M. (Ag '22)
 Wall shadows. Tannenbaum, F. (Jl '22)
 Waltz of the dogs. Andreieff, L. N. (D '22)
 Wanderer of the wasteland. Grey, Z. (F '23)
 Wanderers. Hamsun, K. (Ap '22)
 Wandering years. Hinkson, K. (F '23)
 Wanderings of a spiritualist. Doyle, A. C. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)
 Wanted—a wife. Panzini, A. (D '22)
War
 Bryce, J. B. International relations. (Ap '22)
 Grant, J. E. Problem of war and its solution. (O '22)
 Niblack, A. P. Why wars come. (F '23)
 War in the air. Raleigh, W. A. (D '22)
Ward, Arthur Sarsfield. See Rohmer S., pseud. (Mr '22)
Warwick, George, pseud. See Deeping, W. (S '22)
Washington, George
 Thayer, W. R. George Washington. (D '22)
Washington, D.C.
Description
 Shackleton, R. Book of Washington. (F '23)
Washington and Lee university
 Riley, F. L., ed. General Robert E. Lee after Appomattox. (Je '22)
 Washington and the riddle of peace. Wells, H. G. (Mr '22)
 Washington conference. Buell, R. L. (Ag, N '22)
 Watched by wild animals. Mills, F. A. (Ag '22)
 Watchers of the sky. Noyes, A. (Je '22)
Water supply
 Garnett, W. Little book on water supply. (D '22)
Watts-Dunton, Theodore
 Watts-Dunton, C. Home life of Swirburne. (O '22)
 Way of poetry. Drinkwater, J., comp. (D '22)
 Way of revelation. Ewart, W. (Mr '22)
 Way to will-power. Hazlitt, H. (Je '22)
 Wayfarers in Arcady. Vince, C. (Mr '22)
 Ways of laughter. Begbie, H. (Ap '22)
 We and our government. Jenks, J. W., and Smith, R. D. (N '22)
Wealth
 Ingalls, W. R. Wealth and income of the American people. (D '22)
Wealth, Distribution of
 National bureau of economic research. Income in the United States. (Mr '22)
 Wealth and income of the American people. Ingalls, W. R. (D '22)
Weevils
 Fabre, J. H. C. Life of the weevil. (Mr '22)
Wells, Herbert George
 Dark, S. Outline of Wells. (Je '22)

Wentworth, John

Mayo, L. S. John Wentworth, governor of New Hampshire, 1767-1775. (Mr '22)

West

Rollins, P. A. The cowboy. (Je '22)

Description and travel

Grey, Z. Tales of lonely trails. (D '22)

History

Becholdt, F. R. When the West was young. (N '22)

Chambers, H. E. Mississippi valley beginnings. (F '23)

Goodwin, C. L. Trans-Mississippi West. (O '22)

West IndiesDescription and travel

Schaw, J. Journal of a lady of quality. (My '22)

History

Hart, F. R. Admirals of the Caribbean. (O '22)

West VirginiaSocial conditions

National child labor committee. Rural child welfare. (Ag, N '22)

Western birds. Myers, H. W. (F '23)

Westinghouse, George

Prout, H. G. Life of George Westinghouse. (Mr '22)

Whaling

Verrill, A. H. Radio detectives. (O '22)

Wharf management, stevedoring and storage. MacElwee, R. S., and Taylor, T. R. (My '22)

Wharves

MacElwee, R. S., and Taylor, T. R. Wharf management, stevedoring and storage. (My '22)

What became of Mr Desmond. Boyle, C. N. (O '22)

What Christianity means to me. Abbott, L. (Jl '22)

What I saw in America. Chesterton, G. K. (N '22)

What is social case work? Richmond, M. E. (Je '22)

What is there in religion? Coffin, H. S. (F '23)

What Japan thinks. Kawakami, K. K., ed. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

What next in Europe? Vanderlip, F. A. (Mr '22)

What prohibition has done to America. Franklin, F. (D '22)

What Timmy did. Lowndes, M. A. (My '22)

What we want and where we are. Appleton, W. A. (Ap '22)

What's best worth saying. Roberts, R. (F '23)

Whelps of the wolf. Marsh, G. (Ja '23)

When Kansas was young. McNeal, T. A. (D '22)

When the West was young. Becholdt, F. R. (N '22)

When winter comes to Main street. Overton, G. M. (Ja '23)

Where the blue begins. Morley, C. D. (N '22)

Where the sun swings north. Willoughby, B. (D '22)

Where your treasure is—. Turner, J. H. (Jl '22)

Whispering sage. Drago, H. S., and Noel, J. (F '23)

Whistler, James Abbott McNeill Pennell, E., and J. Whistler journal. (Ag '22 and 1921 Annual)

Whistling Jimps. Turpin, E. H. L. (O '22)

White and black. Shands, H. A. (Je '22)

White April. Vinal, H. (S '22)

White desert. Cooper, C. R. (Ap '22)

White heart of Motave. Perkins, E. (F '23)

White Kani. Jewell, E. A. (Je '22)

Why Europe leaves home. Roberts, K. L. (Jl '22)

Why Lincoln laughed. Conwell, R. H. (S '22)

Why wars come. Niblack, A. P. (F '23)

Widow's cruse. Fyfe, H. H. (My '22)

Wild bush tribes of tropical Africa. Claridge, G. C. (Je '22)

Wild folk. Scoville, S. (Je '22)

Wild heart. Squier, E.-L. (Jl '22)

Wild life in the tree tops. Knight, C. W. R. (S '22)

Will

Hazlitt, H. Way to will-power. (Je '22)

Will Shakespeare. Dane, C., pseud. (Mr '22)

William De Morgan and his wife. Stirling, A. M. W. (S '22)

William Dean Howells. Cooke, D. G. (Ja '23)

William II, emperor of Germany. (abdicated 1918)

Frederick William, formerly crown prince of Prussia. Memoirs. (Ag '22)

Wilson, Charlotte, pseud. See Baker, K. (Ja '23)

Wilson, Woodrow

Baker, R. S. Woodrow Wilson and the world settlement. (D '22)

Wiltshire essays. Hewlett, M. H. (O '22)

Wind bloweth. Byrne, D. (N '22)

Winnie O'Wynn and the wolves. Atkey, B. (Mr '22)

Winter bell. Rideout, H. M. (Ag '22)

Wintergreen. Laing, J. (N '22)

Snodgrass, R. T., and Camp, V. F. Radio receiving for beginners. (Jl '22)

Wireless. See Radio

Wisdom of the beasts. Strong, C. A. (Ag '22)

Wise men from the east and from the west. Rihbany, A. M. (F '23)

Wisp. Adams, K. (D '22)

Witch doctors. Beadle, C. (O '22)

Witchcraft

Murray, M. A. Witch-cult in Western Europe. (Ag '22)

Witch-cult in western Europe. Murray, M. A. (Ag '22)

With gun and rod in Canada. Moore, P. H. (O '22)

With La Salle, the explorer. Watson, V. C. (N '22)

With the Russian army, 1914-1917. Knox, A. W. F. (Mr '22)

Within the atom. Mills, J. (Mr '22)

Without compromise. Thompson, L. B., and Hubbard, G. (Ap '22)

WomanEmployment

Parker, C. S. Working with the working woman. (Mr '22)

Social and moral questions

Mencken, H. L. In defense of women. (My '22)

France

Stephens, W. Women of the French revolution. (D '22)

Woman suffrage

Stanton, E. C. Elizabeth Cady Stanton. (Ap, Je '22)

Woman's peace party

Addams, J. Peace and bread in time of war. (Ap '22)

Women as chemists

Bureau of vocational information. Women in chemistry. (Ja '23)

Women in chemistry. Bureau of vocational information. (Ja '23)

Women of the French revolution. Stephens, W. (D '22)

Wonder book of chemistry. Fabre, J. H. C. (O '22)

Wonderland of the Eastern Congo. Barns, T. A. (Ja '23)

Wood notes. Stillman, M. W. (N '22)

Woodbine colony, New Jersey

Sahovich, K. Adventures in idealism. (Jl '22)

Woodrow Wilson and the world settlement. Baker, R. S. (D '22)

Woods rider. Pollock, F. L. (O '22)

Wool substitutes. Beaumont, R. (S '22)

Woolen and worsted manufactures

Beaumont, R. Wool substitutes. (S '22)

Work of the stock exchange. Meeker, J. E. (My '22)

Working with the working woman. Parker, C. S. (Mr '22)

- Works of Li Po. Li Po. (F '23)
 World history, 1814-1920. Fueter, E. (Ja '23)
 World metric standardization. World metric standardization council. (F '23)
- World politics
 Gibbons, H. A. Introduction to world politics. (O '22)
 Marriott, J: A. R. Europe and beyond. (N '22)
 Weale, B. L. P., pseud. Indiscreet chronicle from the Pacific. (F '23)
- World worth while. Rogers, W: A. (D '22)
 Wreck-hunters. Rolt-Wheeler, F. W: (S '22)
 Wreck of Europe. Nitti, F. S. (D '22)
 Wrong Mr Right. Onions, B. (My '22)
- Ximenes de Quesada, Gonzalo
 Cunninghame Graham, R. G. B. Conquest of New Granada. (O '22)
- Yachts and yachting
 Nutting, W: W. Track of the "Typhoon."
 (Ag '22)
- Yale record book of verse. (D '22)
 Yellow poppy. Broster, D. K. (Jl '22)
 Yellow streak. Williams, V. (Jl '22)
- Yellowstone national park
 Freeman, L: R. Down the Yellowstone. (Ja '23)
- Yellowstone river
 Freeman, L: R. Down the Yellowstone. (Ja '23)
- Yollop. McCutcheon, G: B. (Ap '22)
- York, Alvin C.
 Cowan, S: K. Sergeant York and his people.
 (S '22)
- Yosemite and its high Sierra. Williams, J: H. (Ap '22)
- Yosemite national park
 Williams, J: H. Yosemite and its high Sierra.
 (Ap '22)
- Young Boswell. Tinker, C. B. (My '22)
 Young man and civil engineering. Swain, G: F.
 (Jl '22)
- Young man and journalism. Lord, C. S. (Ja '22)
- Young men's Christian association
 Tweedy, H: H., and others. Christian work as a vocation. (Jl '22)
- Young people
 Drury, S: S. Thoughts of youth. (F '23)
 Young people's pride. Benét, S. V. (O '22)
 Your inner self. Bisch, L: E. (F '23)
- Youth
 Holmes, E. G. A. Give me the young. (Jl '22)
 Youth and the open door. Wells, G: R. M.
 (N '22)
- Youth grows old. Nathan, R. (Je '22)
- Zeebrugge-Ostend raids, 1918
 Carpenter, A. F. B. Blocking of Zeebrugge.
 (Jl '22)
- Zionism
 Ginzberg, A. Ten essays on Zionism and Judaism. (Jl '22)
- Zoology
 Parker, T: J., and Haswell, W: A. Textbook of zoology. (Ja '23)

Directory of Publishers

- A. L. A. American Library Association, 75 E Washington St, Chicago
 Abingdon Press, 150 5th Av, N.Y.
 Imprint adopted by the Methodist Book Concern for books of general interest
 Am. Bk. American Book Company, 100 Washington Square, E, N.Y.
 Am. Gas Assn. American Gas Association, 342 Madison Av, N.Y.
 Am. Geographical Soc. of N.Y. American Geographical Society of New York, Broadway & 156th St, N.Y.
 Am. School of Home Economics. American School of Home Economics, Drexel Av & 58th St, Chicago
 Am. Technical Soc. American Technical Society, Drexel & 58th St, Chicago
 Anchor-Lee. Anchor-Lee Publishing Company, 401 7th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
 Appleton. Daniel Appleton & Company, 29-35 W 32d St, N.Y.; 533 S Wabash Av, Chicago
 American Agents for Crosby, Lockwood & Son, London
 Selling agents for the university of Pennsylvania publications
 Assn. Press. Association Press, 347 Madison Av, N.Y.
 Atlantic Monthly. Atlantic Monthly Press, Inc., 8 Arlington St, Boston
 Audel. Theo Audel & Company, 72 5th Av, N.Y.
- Dodd. Dodd, Mead & Company, 4th Av & 30th St, N.Y.
 Have acquired the publications of John Lane Company
 Doran. George H. Doran Company, 244 Madison Av, N.Y.
 Purchased the business of A. C. Armstrong & Son
 Dorrance. Dorrance & Company, Inc., 308-310 Walnut St, Philadelphia
 Doubleday. Doubleday, Page & Company, Garden City, N.Y.
 Acquired the book department of the McClure Co. and the Baker & Taylor Co.
 Duffield. Duffield & Company, 211 E 19th St, N.Y.
 Formerly Fox, Duffield & Co.
 Dunster House Bookshop, 26 Holyoke St, Cambridge, Mass.
 Dutton. E. P. Dutton & Company, 681 5th Av, N.Y.
- Encyclopedia Press, 119 E 57th St, N.Y.
 Essex Inst. Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.
- Four Seas. Four Seas Company, 168 Dartmouth St, Boston
 Funk. Funk & Wagnalls Company, 354-360 4th Av, N.Y.
 Acquired the publications of Cassell & Co.
- Ginn. Ginn & Company (Educational text-bks), 15 Ashburton Place, Boston; 2301-2311 Prairie Av, Chicago
 Goodchild. F. D. Goodchild, 266-68 King St, W Toronto, Canada
- Harcourt. Harcourt, Brace & Company, 1 W 47th St, N.Y.
 Harper. Harper & Brothers, 333 Pearl St, N.Y.
 Harvard Univ. Press. Harvard University Press, Randall Hall, Cambridge, Mass.; 522 5th Av, N.Y.
 Heath. D. C. Heath & Company, 50 Beacon St, Boston; 239 W 39th St, N.Y.
 Henley. Norman W. Henley Publishing Company, 2 W 45th St, N.Y.
 Holt. Henry Holt & Company, 19 W 44th St, N.Y.
 Horton. Horton & Company, 441 S Dearborn St, Chicago
 Houghton. Houghton, Mifflin Company, 4 Park St, Boston; 16 E 40th St, N.Y.
 Huebsch. B. W. Huebsch, 116 W 13th St, N.Y.
- Century. Century Company, 353 4th Av, N.Y.
 Chemical Catalog Co. Chemical Catalog Company, Inc, 19 E 24th St, N.Y.
 Christopher Pub. House. Christopher Publishing House, 1140 Columbus Av, Boston
 Cleveland Foundation. Cleveland Foundation, Survey Committee, 2025 E 9th St, Cleveland, O.
 Clode. E. J. Clode, 156 5th St, Cleveland, O.
 Columbia Univ. Press. Columbia University Press, Lemcke & Buechner, agents, 30-32 E 20th St, N.Y.
 Cornhill. Cornhill Publishing Company, 2A Park St, Boston
 Cosmopolitan Bk. Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, 119 W 40th St, N.Y. (formerly Hearst's International Lib.)
 Covici-McGee, 158 W Washington St, Chicago
 Crowell. T. Y. Crowell Company, 426-428 W Broadway, N.Y.
- Industrial press, 140 Lafayette St, N.Y.

Jacobs. G. W. Jacobs & Company, 1628 Chestnut St, Philadelphia
 Johns Hopkins. Johns Hopkins Press, Baltimore, Md.
 Jones, Marshall. Marshall Jones Company, 212 Summer St, Boston

Open et. Open Court Publishing Company, 122 S Michigan Av, Chicago
 Orientalia, Inc., 22 E 60th St, N.Y.
 Oxford. Oxford University Press (American Branch), 35 W 32d St, N.Y.
 Agents for the publications of Henry Frowde

Kenedy. P. J. Kenedy & Sons, 44 Barclay St, N.Y.
 Kennerley. Mitchell Kennerley, 489 Park Av, N.Y.
 Knopf. Alfred A. Knopf, 220 W 42d St, N.Y.

Page. Page Company, 53 Beacon St, Boston
 Penn. Penn. Publishing Company, 925 Filbert St, Philadelphia

Penton Pub. Penton Publishing Company, 12th St, cor. Chestnut, Cleveland, O.
 Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St, Boston

Pitman. Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, 2-6 W 45th St, N.Y.

Princeton Univ. Press. Princeton University Press, Princeton, N.J.

Putnam. G. P. Putnam's Sons, Putnam Bldg, 2-6 W 45th St, N.Y.

Sole American agents for University Press, Cambridge

Lane. John Lane Company, 786 6th Av, N.Y.
 American business has been taken over by Dodd, Mead & Company

Lawyers' Co-op. Lawyers' Co-operative Publishing Company, Rochester, N.Y.; 106 N La Salle St, Chicago

Purchased the business of Frank P. Dufresne

Lippincott. J. B. Lippincott Company, 227 S 6th St, Philadelphia

Little. Little, Brown & Company, 34 Beacon St, Boston

Longmans. Longmans, Green & Company, 55 5th Av, Cor 12th St, N.Y.

Publish the Columbia university studies in history, economics and public law, formerly published by Macmillan

Sole Am. agents for Edward Arnold, London

Lothrop. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company, 93 Federal St, Boston

A consolidation of The Lee & Shepard Co. and the Lothrop Co.

Luce, J. W. John W. Luce & Company, 212 Summer St, Boston

Regan Pub. Regan Publishing Corporation, 26 E Van Buren St, Chicago

Reilly & Lee. Reilly & Lee Company, 1006-12 S Michigan Av, Chicago

Formerly Reilly & Britton Co.

Revell. Fleming H. Revell & Company, 158 5th Av, N.Y.; 17 N Wabash Av, Chicago

Ronald. Ronald Press Company, 20 Vesey St, N.Y.

Russell Sage Foundation, 130 E 22d St, Cor. Lexington Av, N.Y.

Macaulay. Macaulay Company, 15 W 38th St, N.Y.

McBride. Robert M. McBride & Company, 7 W 16th St, N.Y.

Formerly McBride, Nast & Co.

McCann, James A. McCann, 188 W 4th St, N.Y.

McClurg. A. C. McClurg & Company, 330-352 E Ohio St, Chicago

Purchased the book business of Library Shelf

McDevitt-Wilson, 30 Church St, N.Y.

McGraw. McGraw-Hill Book Company, 370 7th Av, N.Y.

Consolidation of the McGraw Pub. Co. and the Hill Pub. Co.

Purchased the business of the Clark book Co., and the book department of Engineering News Pub. Co.

Macmillan. The Macmillan Company, 66 5th Av, N.Y.

Acquired the business of the Outing Co., and Sturgis & Walton

Manual Arts Press, 237 N Monroe St, Peoria, Ill.

Meth. Bk. Methodist Book Concern, 150 5th Av, N.Y.

See also Abingdon Press

Missionary Educ. Movement. Missionary Education Movement, 156 5th Av, N.Y.

Moffat. Moffat, Yard & Company, 31 Union Square, N.Y.

Morehouse. Morehouse Publishing Company, 1801 Fond du Lac Av, Milwaukee, Wis.

Museum of the Am. Indian. Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, Broadway & 155th St, N.Y.

Saunders. W. B. Saunders Company, West Washington Square, Philadelphia

Scientific American pub. Scientific American Publishing Company, 233 Broadway, N.Y.

Scribner. Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 5th Av, N.Y.; 299 Madison Av, N.Y.

Seltzer. Thomas Seltzer, Inc., 5 W 50th St, N.Y.

Formerly Scott & Seltzer

Seymour. R. F. R. F. Seymour, 1025 Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago

Shaw. A. W. A. W. Shaw Company, 660 Cass St, Chicago

Shay. Frank Shay, 4 Christopher St, N.Y.

Sherman. F. F. F. F. Sherman, 8 W 47th St, N.Y.

Small. Small, Maynard & Company, 41 Mt Vernon St, Boston

Stewart. K. L. Stewart Kidd Company, 121 E 5th St, Cincinnati, O.

Stokes. F. A. Stokes Company, 443-449 4th Av, N.Y.

Stratford. Stratford Company, 289 Congress St, Boston

Sully. George Sully & Company, 114 E 25th St, N.Y.

Formerly Sully & Kleinteich

U. P. C. Bk. U. P. C. Book Company, Inc., 243 W 39th St, N.Y.

A consolidation of the Book department of David Williams Co., Class Journal Co., Iron Age, Hardware Age, Motor World, Motor Age, Building Age, American Architect, Metal Worker, Plumber & Steam Fitter, Dry Goods Reporter, Commercial Vehicle, Automobile, Motor Boat, Dry Goods Economist, Boot & Shoe Recorder

Nichols. C. A. C. A. Nichols Publishing Company, Springfield, Mass.

- Univ. of Cal. University of California, Berkeley,
Cal.
Address University Press, California Hall,
Berkeley
Univ. of Chicago Press, 58th St & Ellis Av
Chicago
- Whitcomb & B. Whitcomb & Barrows, 30
Huntington Av, Boston
American business has been taken over by Dodd, Mead & Company
Wilde. W. A. Wilde Company, 120 Boylston
St, Boston
Wiley. John Wiley & Sons, 432 4th Av, N.Y.
Wilson, H. W. H. W. Wilson & Company,
958-964 University (Lind) Av, N.Y.
Winston. John C. Winston Company, 1006-1016
Arch St, Philadelphia
World Bk. World Book Company, Park Hill,
Yonkers-on-Hudson, N.Y.; 2126 Prairie Av,
Chicago
- Van Nostrand. D. Van Nostrand Company, 8
Warren St, N.Y.
- Ware Bros. Ware Brothers, 1010 Arch St, Philadelphia
Watt. W. J. Watt & Company, 31 W 43d St,
N.Y.
- Yale Univ. Press. Yale University Press, 143
Elm St, New Haven, Conn.; 522 5th Av, N.Y.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

3 9999 04834 755 1

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.

BATES HALL.

NOT TO BE TAKEN AWAY.